

UNIVERSITY OF ST. MICHAEL'S COLLEGE

3 1761 06692551 2

John M. Kelly Library

Donated by William Klassen
and Dona Harvey

The University of St. Michael's College
Toronto, Ontario

Rev. Alexander D. Martin

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM KLASSEN
353 W. Cleveland Ave.
Elkhart, Indiana

A birthday greeting to our beloved Counselor and Co-Worker.

The St. Andrew's of Rhode Island.
William Meiklejohn
President.

February 27-1930

---

THE EXPOSITOR'S
GREEK TESTAMENT

EDITED BY THE REV.

W. ROBERTSON NICOLL, M.A., LL.D.

EDITOR OF "THE EXPOSITOR," "THE EXPOSITOR'S BIBLE," ETC.

VOLUME I.

NEW YORK
GEORGE H. DORAN COMPANY

THE EXHIBITS
GRIEK TREATMENT

BY
DR. ROBERTSON

1912

NEW YORK
GARDNER

THE EXPOSITOR'S GREEK TESTAMENT

I

THE SYNOPTIC GOSPELS

BY THE REV.

ALEXANDER BALMAIN BRUCE, D.D.

PROFESSOR OF APOLOGETICS, FREE CHURCH COLLEGE, GLASGOW

II

THE GOSPEL OF ST. JOHN

BY THE REV.

MARCUS DODS, D.D.

PROFESSOR OF EXEGETICAL THEOLOGY, NEW COLLEGE, EDINBURGH

NEW YORK
GEORGE H. DORAN COMPANY

THE ALPHABET
GREEK TESTAMENT

THE STYLER HOUSE
100 N. 10th St.
P.O. Box 100
St. Paul, Minn.

THE BOARD OF ST. PAUL
100 N. 10th St.
St. Paul, Minn.

THE BOARD OF ST. PAUL
100 N. 10th St.
St. Paul, Minn.

GENERAL EDITOR'S PREFACE

THE Expositor's Greek Testament is intended to do for the present generation the work accomplished by Dean Alford's in the past. Of the influence of Dean Alford's book there is no need to speak. It is almost impossible to exaggerate the success and usefulness of Dean Alford's commentary in putting English-speaking students into possession of the accumulated results of the labours of scholars up to the time it was published. He made the best critical and exegetical helps, previously accessible only to a few readers, the common privilege of all educated Englishmen. Dean Alford himself would have been the first to say that he undertook a task too great for one man. Though he laboured with indefatigable diligence, twenty years together, from 1841 to 1861, were occupied in his undertaking. Since his time the wealth of material on the New Testament has been steadily accumulating, and no one has as yet attempted to make it accessible in a full and comprehensive way.

In the present commentary the works have been committed to various scholars, and it is hoped that the completion will be reached within five years from the present date, if not sooner. As the plan of Alford's book has been tested by time and experience, it has been adopted here with certain modifications, and it is hoped that as the result English-speaking students will have a work at once up to date and practically useful in all its parts.

It remains to add that the commentators have been selected from various churches, and that they have in every case been left full liberty to express their own views. The part of the editor has been to choose them, and to assign the limits of space allowed to each book. In this assignment the judgment of Dean Alford has appeared to be sound in the main, and it has been generally followed.

W. ROBERTSON NICOLL.

PREFACE

IN this Commentary on the Synoptical Gospels I give to the public the fruit of studies carried on for many years. These Gospels have taken a more powerful and abiding hold of me than any other part of the Scriptures. I have learnt much from them concerning Christ in the course of these years; not a little since I began to prepare this work for the press. I have done my best to communicate what I have learned to others. I have also laid under contribution previous commentators, ancient and modern, while avoiding the pedantic habit of crowding the page with long lists of learned names. I have not hesitated to introduce quotations, in Latin and Greek, which seemed fitted to throw light on the meaning. These, while possessing interest for scholars, may be passed over by English readers without much loss, as their sense is usually indicated.

In the critical notes beneath the Greek Text I have aimed at making easily accessible to the reader the results of the labours of scholars who have made the text the subject of special study; especially those contained in the monumental works of Tischendorf and Westcott and Hort. Readers are requested to peruse what has been stated on that subject in the Introduction, and, in using the commentary, to keep in mind that I have always made what I regard as the most probable reading the basis of comment, whether I have expressly indicated my opinion in the critical notes or not.

In these days one who aims at a competent treatment of the Evangelic narratives must keep in view critical methods of handling the story. I have tried to unite some measure of critical freedom and candour with the reverence of faith. If, in spite of honest endeavour, I have not succeeded always in realising this ideal, let it be imputed to the lack of skill rather than of good intention.

I rise from this task with a deepened sense of the wisdom and grace of the Lord Jesus Christ. If what I have written help others to a better understanding of His mind and heart, I shall feel that my labour has not been in vain.

I enjoyed the benefit of Mr. MacFadyen's (of the Free Church College, Glasgow) assistance in reading the proofs of the second half of the work, and owe him earnest thanks, not only for increased accuracy in the printed text, but for many valuable suggestions.

The works of Dr. Gould on Mark and Dr. Plummer on Luke, in the International Critical Commentary, appeared too late to be taken advantage of in this commentary.

A. B. BRUCE.

GLASGOW.

THE GOSPELS

ACCORDING TO

MATTHEW, MARK AND LUKE

INTRODUCTION.

CHAPTER I.

CONCERNING THE THREE GOSPELS.

SECTION I. THE CONNECTION.

1. The three first Gospels, bearing the names of Matthew, Mark and Luke, have, during the present century, been distinguished by critics from the fourth by the epithet synoptical. The term implies that these Gospels are so like one another in contents that they can be, and for profitable study ought to be, viewed together. That such is the fact is obvious to every reader. A single perusal suffices to shew that they have much in common in contents, arrangement and phraseology; and a comparison with the fourth Gospel only deepens the impression. There everything appears different—the incidents related, the thoughts ascribed to Jesus, the terms in which they are expressed, the localities in which the Great Personage who is the common subject of all the four narratives exercised His remarkable teaching and healing ministries.

2. Yet while these three Gospels present obtrusive resemblances, they also exhibit hardly less obtrusive differences. The differences are marked just because the books are on the whole so like one another. One cannot help asking: Seeing they are so like, why are they not more like? Why do they differ at all? Or the question may be put the other way: Seeing there are so many idiosyncrasies in each Gospel, how does it come about that notwithstanding these they all bear an easily recognisable family likeness? The idiosyncrasies, though not always so obvious as the resemblances, are unmistakable, and some of them stare one in the face. Each Gospel, e.g., has some matter peculiar to itself; the first and the third a great deal. Then, while in certain parts of their narratives they follow the same order, in other places they diverge widely. Again, one cannot but be struck with the difference between the three records in regard to reporting the words of Jesus. Mark gives comparatively few: Matthew and Luke very many, and these for the most part very weighty and remarkable, insomuch that one wonders how any one undertaking to write a history of Christ's life could overlook them. Matthew and Luke again, while both giving much prominence to the words of Jesus, differ very widely in their manner of reporting them. The one collects the sayings into masses, apparently out of regard to affinity of thought; the other disperses them over his pages, and assigns to them distinct historical occasions.

3. These resemblances and differences, with many others not referred to, inevitably raise a question as to their cause. This is the synoptical problem, towards the solution of which a countless number of contributions have been made within the last hundred years. Many of these have now only a historical or antiquarian interest, and it would serve no useful purpose to attempt here an exhaustive account of the literature connected with this inquiry. While not insensible to the fascination of the subject, even on its curious side, as an interesting problem in literary criticism, yet I must respect the fact that we in this work are directly concerned with the matter only in so far as it affects exegesis. The statement therefore now to be made must be broad and brief.

4. All attempts at solution admit of being classified under four heads. First may be mentioned the hypothesis of oral tradition. This hypothesis implies that before our Gospels there were no written records of the ministry of Jesus, or at least none of which they made use. Their only source was the unwritten tradition of the memorabilia of that ministry, having its ultimate origin in the public preaching and teaching of the Apostles, the men who had been with Jesus. The statements made by the Apostles from time to time, repeated and added to as occasion required, caught up by willing ears, and treasured up in faithful memories: behold all that is necessary, according to the patrons of this hypothesis, to account for all the evangelic phenomena of resemblance and difference. The resemblances are explained by the tendency of oral tradition, especially in non-literary epochs and peoples, to become stereotyped in contents and even in phraseology, a tendency much helped by the practice of catechetical instruction, in which the teacher dictates sentences which his pupils are expected to commit to memory.<sup>1</sup> The differences are accounted for by the original diversity in the memorabilia communicated by different Apostles, by the measure of fluidity inseparable from oral tradition due to defective memory, and of course in part also by the peculiar tastes, aims and individualities of the respective evangelists. This hypothesis has been chiefly in favour among English scholars, though it can likewise boast of influential supporters among continental critics, such as Gieseler and Godet. It points to a vera causa, and cannot be wholly left out of account in an endeavour to explain how written records of the evangelic tradition arose. There was a time doubtless when what was known of Jesus was on the lip only. How long that primitive phase lasted is matter of conjecture; some say from 30 to 60 A.D. It seems probable that the process of transferring from the lip to the page began considerably sooner than the later of these dates. When Luke wrote, many attempts had been made to embody the tradition in a written form (Luke i. 1). This points to a literary habit which would naturally exert its power without delay in reference to any matter in which men took an absorbing interest. And when this habit prevails writers are not usually content to remain in ignorance of what others have done in the same line. They want to see each other's notes. The presumption therefore is that while oral tradition in all probability was a source for our evangelists, it was not the only source, probably not even the chief source. There were other writings about the acts, and words, and sufferings of Jesus in existence before they wrote; they were likely to know these, and if they knew them they would not despise them, but rather use them so far as serviceable. In Luke's case the existence of such earlier writings, and his acquaintance with them, are not mere presumptions but facts; the only point on which there is room for difference of opinion is how far he took advantage of the labours of his predecessors. That he deemed them unsatisfactory, at least defective, may be inferred from his making a new contribution; that he drew nothing from them is extremely improbable. Much can be said for the view that among these earlier writings known to Luke was our Gospel of Mark, or a book substantially identical with it in contents, and that he used it very freely.

<sup>1</sup> On the function of catechists as helping to stereotype the evangelic tradition vide Wright, The Composition of the Four Gospels, 1890. Mr. Wright is a thorough believer in the oral tradition.

5. The last observation naturally leads up to the second hypothesis, which is that the authors of the synoptical Gospels used each other's writings, each successive writer taking advantage of earlier contributions, so that the second Gospel (in time) borrowed from the first, and the third from both first and second. Which borrowed from which depends of course on the order of time in which the three Gospels appeared. Six permutations are possible, and every one of them has had its advocates. One of the most interesting, in virtue of the course it ran, is: Matthew, Luke, Mark. This arrangement was contended for by Griesbach, and utilised by Dr. Ferdinand Christian Baur in connection with his famous Tendency-criticism. Griesbach founded on the frequent duality in Mark's style, that is to say, the combination of phrases used separately in the same connection in the other synoptical Gospels: e.g., "at even when the sun did set" (i. 32). In this phenomenon, somewhat frequently recurring, he saw conclusive proof that Mark had Matthew and Luke before him, and servilely copied from both in descriptive passages. Baur's interest in the question was theological rather than literary. Accepting Griesbach's results, he charged Mark not only with literary dependence on his brother evangelists, whence is explained his graphic style, but also with studied theological neutrality, eschewing on the one hand the Judaistic bias of the first Gospel, and on the other the Pauline or universalistic bias of the third; both characteristics, the literary dependence and the studied neutrality, implying a later date. Since then a great change of view has taken place. For some time the prevailing opinion has been that Mark's Gospel is the earliest not the latest of the three, and this opinion is likely to hold its ground. Holtzmann observes that the Mark hypothesis is a hypothesis no longer,<sup>1</sup> meaning that it is an established fact. And he and many others recognise in Mark, either as we have it or in an earlier form, a source for both the other synoptists, thereby acknowledging that the hypothesis of mutual use likewise has a measure of truth.

6. The third hypothesis is that of one primitive Gospel from which all three synoptists drew their material. The supporters of this view do not believe that the evangelists used each other's writings. Their contention is that all were dependent on one original document, an Urevangelium as German scholars call it. This primitive Gospel was, ex hypothesi, comprehensive enough to cover the whole ground. From it all the three evangelists took much in common, hence their agreement in matter and language in so many places. But how about their divergencies? How came it to pass that with the same document before them they made such diverse use of it? The answer is: it was due to the fact that they used, not identical copies of one document, but different recensions of the same document. By this flight into the dark region of conjectural recensions, whereof no trace remains, the Urevangelium hypothesis was self-condemned to oblivion. With it are associated the honourable names of Lessing and Eichhorn.

<sup>1</sup> Hand-Commentar, p. 3.

7. The fourth and last hypothesis was propounded by Schleiermacher. He took for his starting-point the word διήγησις in the introduction of Luke's Gospel, and found in it the hint that not in one primitive Gospel of comprehensive character was the source exploited by our Gospels to be found, but rather in many Gospels containing a record of some words or deeds of Jesus with which the writer had become acquainted, and which he specially desired to preserve. Each of our evangelists is to be conceived as having so many of these diegeses or Gospels in his possession, and constructing out of them a larger connected story. In so far as they made use of copies of the same diegesis, there would be agreement in contents and style; in so far as they used Gospels peculiar to their respective collections, there would be divergence; and of course diversity in the order of narration was to be expected in writings compiled from a handful of unconnected leaflets of evangelic tradition. In spite of the great name of its author, this hypothesis has found little support as an attempt to account for the whole phenomena of the Gospels. As a subordinate suggestion to explain the presence in any of the synoptists of elements peculiar to himself, it is worthy of consideration. Some of the particulars, e.g., peculiar to Luke may have been found by him not in any large collection, but in a leaflet, as others may have been derived not from written sources large or small, but from a purely oral source in answer to local inquiries.

8. None of the foregoing hypotheses is accepted by itself as a satisfactory solution of the synoptical problem by any large number of competent critics at the present time. The majority look for a solution in the direction of a combination of the second and third hypotheses under modified forms. To a certain extent they recognise use of one Gospel in another, and there is an extensive agreement in the opinion that for the explanation of the phenomena not one but at least two primitive documents must be postulated. In these matters certainty is unattainable, but it is worth while making ourselves acquainted with what may be called the most probable working hypothesis. With this view I offer here a brief statement as to the present trend of critical opinion on the subject in question.

9. It is a familiar observation that, leaving out of account the reports of the teaching of Jesus contained in the first and third Gospels, the matter that remains, consisting of narratives of actions and events, is very much the same in all the three synoptists. Not only so, the remainder practically consists of the contents of the second Gospel. It seems as if Matthew and Luke had made Mark the framework of their story, and added to it new material. This accordingly is now believed by many to have been the actual fact. The prevailing idea is that our Mark, or a book very like it in contents, was under the eye of the compilers of the first and third Gospels when they wrote, and was used by both as a source, not merely in the sense that they took from it this and that, but in the sense of adopting it substantially as it was, and making it the basis of their longer and more elaborate narratives. This crude statement of course requires qualification. What took place was not that the compilers of the first and third Gospels simply transcribed the second, page by page, as they found it in their manuscript, reproducing its contents in the original order, and each section verbatim. If that had been the case the synoptical problem would have been greatly simplified, and there would hardly have been room for difference of opinion. As the case stands the order of narration is more or less disturbed, and there are many variations in expression. The question is thus raised: On the hypothesis that Mark was a source for Matthew and Luke, in respect of the matter common to all the three, how came it to pass that the writers of the first and third Gospels deviated so much, and in different ways, from their common source in the order of events and in style? The general answer to the question, so far as order is concerned, is that the additional matter acted as a disturbing influence. The explanation implies that, when the disturbing influence did not come into play, the original order would be maintained. Advocates of the hypothesis try to show that the facts answer to this view; that is to say, that Mark's order is followed in Matthew and Luke, except when disturbance is explicable by the influence of the new material. One illustration may here be given from Matthew. Obviously the "Sermon on the Mount" exercised a powerful fascination on the mind of the evangelist. From the first he has it in view, and he desires to bring it in as soon as possible. Therefore, of the incidents connected with the commencement of the Galilean ministry reported in Mark, he relates simply the call of the four fisher Apostles, as if to furnish the Great Teacher with disciples who might form an audience for the great Discourse. To that call he appends a general description of the Galilean ministry, specifying as its salient features preaching or teaching and healing. Then he proceeds to illustrate each department of the ministry, the teaching by the Sermon on the Mount in chapters v.-vii., the healing by a group of miracles contained in chapters viii. and ix., including the cure of Peter's mother-in-law, the wholesale cures on the Sabbath evening, and the healing of the leper, all reported in the first chapter of Mark. Of course, in regard neither to the sermon nor to the group of miracles can the first Gospel lay claim to chronological accuracy. In the corresponding part of his narrative, Luke follows Mark closely, reporting the cure of the demoniac in the synagogue of Capernaum, of Peter's mother-in-law, of many sick people on the Sabbath evening, and of the leper in the same order. There is only one deviation. The call of Peter, which in Luke replaces that of the four, Peter and Andrew, James and John, comes between the Sabbath evening cures and the cure of the leper.

The variations in style raise a much subtler question, which can only be dealt with adequately by a detailed comparative exegesis, such as that so admirably exemplified in the great work of Dr. Bernhard Weiss on the Gospel of Mark and its synoptical parallels.<sup>1</sup> Suffice it to say here that it is not difficult to suggest a variety of causes which might lead to literary alteration in the use of a source. Thus, if the style of the source was peculiar, markedly individualistic, colloquial, faulty in grammar, one can understand a tendency to replace these characteristics by smoothness and elegance. The style of Mark is of the character described, and instances of literary correction in the parallel accounts can easily be pointed out. Another cause in operation might be misunderstanding of the meaning of the source, or disinclination to adopt the meaning obviously suggested. Two illustrative instances may be mentioned. In reporting the sudden flight of Jesus from Capernaum in the early morning, Mark makes Him say to the disciples in connection with the reason for departure, "to this end came I forth," i.e., from the town. In Luke this is turned into, "therefore was I sent," i.e., into the world.<sup>2</sup> In the incident of the triumphal entry into Jerusalem, Mark makes Jesus bid the two disciples say to the owner of the colt, "straightway He (Jesus) will send it back," i.e., return it to its owner when He has had His use of it. In Matthew this is turned into, "straightway he (the owner) will send them (the ass and her colt)."<sup>3</sup> Yet another source of verbal alteration might be literary taste acting instinctively, leading to the substitution of one word or phrase for another, without conscious reason.

10. Thus far of the matter common to the three Gospels, or what may be called the triple tradition. But Matthew and Luke contain much more than this, the additional matter in both consisting mainly of words and discourses of Jesus. Each Gospel has not a little peculiar to itself, but there is a large amount of teaching material common to the two, and though this common element is very differently reproduced as to historic connection and grouping, yet there is such a pervading similarity in thought and expression as to suggest forcibly the hypothesis of a second source as its most natural explanation. Assuming that the first and third evangelists borrowed their narrative of events from Mark, and that what needs accounting for is mainly the didactic element, it would follow that this hypothetical second source consisted chiefly, if not exclusively, of sayings spoken by the Lord Jesus. Whether both evangelists possessed this source in the same form, and had each his own way of using it, as dictated by his plan, or whether it came into their hands in different recensions, formed under diverse influences, and meant to serve distinct purposes, are questions of subordinate moment. The main question is: Did there exist antecedent to the composition of our first and third Gospels a collection of the words of Christ, which both evangelists knew and used in compiling their memoirs of Christ's public ministry? Modern critics, such as Weiss, Wendt, Holtzmann, Jülicher, concur in answering this question in the affirmative. The general result is that for the explanation of the phenomena presented by the synoptical Gospels, modern criticism postulates two main written sources: a book like our canonical Mark, if not identical with it, as the source of the narratives common to the three Gospels, and another book containing sayings of Jesus, as the source of the didactic matter common to Matthew and Luke.

<sup>1</sup> Das Marcusevangelium und seine synoptischen Parallelen, 1872.

<sup>2</sup> Mark i. 38, Luke iv. 43.

<sup>3</sup> Mark xi. 3, Matthew xxi. 3.

11. These conclusions, which might be reached purely by internal inspection, are confirmed by the well-known statements of Papias, who flourished in the first quarter of the second century, concerning books about Christ written by Mark and Matthew. They are to this effect: "Mark, being the interpreter of Peter, wrote carefully, though not in order, as he remembered them, the things spoken or done by Christ". "Matthew wrote the Logia in the Hebrew language, and each one interpreted these as he could."<sup>1</sup> The statements point to two books as the fountains of evangelic written tradition, containing matter guaranteed as reliable as resting on the authority of two apostles, Peter and Matthew. The first of the two books is presumably identical with our canonical Mark. It is not against this that Papias represents Mark's work as including things spoken as well as done by Christ. For this is true of canonical Mark. Though, by comparison with Matthew and Luke, Mark is extremely meagre in the didactic element, yet he does report many very remarkable sayings of Jesus. But what of the other book? Is it to be identified with our Matthew? Primâ facie one would say no, because the Matthew of Papias is a book of Logia, which we naturally take to mean a book of oracles, or weighty words spoken by the Lord Jesus. But, on the other hand, it might be argued that Logia is simply a designation from the more prominent or characteristic part, and by no means excludes such narratives of events as we find in canonical Matthew. Indeed, it might be said that it would be difficult to compile a collection of sayings that should be interesting or even intelligible without the introduction of more or less narrative, if it were only by way of preface or historical setting. Granting that the leading aim was to report words, a minimum amount of narrative would still be necessary to make the report effective. And it might be added that it is, in many instances, only a minimum of narrative that we find in canonical Matthew, his historic statements being generally meagre in comparison with those in Mark and Luke. Hence, not a few critics and apologists still hold by the old tradition which practically identified the Logia of Papias with the Matthew of the New Testament. But the Logia, according to Papias, was written in Hebrew, and our canonical Matthew is in Greek which does not wear the aspect of a translation. This difficulty defenders of the old  $\nu\tau\omega$  do not find insurmountable. Yet the impression left on one's mind by such apologetic attempts is that of special pleading, or perhaps, one ought to say, of an honourable bias in favour of a venerable tradition, and of a theory which gives us, in canonical Matthew, a work proceeding directly from the hand of an apostle. If that theory could be established, the result would be highly satisfactory to many who at present stand in doubt. Meantime we must be content to acquiesce, provisionally, in a hypothesis, according to which we have access to the apostle Matthew's contribution only at second hand, in a Gospel from another unknown author which has absorbed a large portion, if not the whole, of the apostolic document. Even on this view we have the satisfaction of feeling that the three synoptists bring us very near to the original eye and ear witnesses. The essential identity, amid much diversity in form, of the words ascribed to our Lord in the two Gospels which draw upon the Logia, inspires confidence that the evangelic reports of these words, though secondary, are altogether reliable.

<sup>1</sup> Eusebii, Historia Ecclesiastica, lib. iii., c. 39.

12. We cannot but wonder that a work so precious as the Logia of Matthew was allowed to perish, and earnestly wish that, if possible, it might even yet be restored. Attempts at gratifying this natural feeling have recently been made, and conjectural reconstructions of the lost treasure lie before us in such works as that of Wendt on the Teaching of Jesus,<sup>1</sup> and of Blair on the Apostolic Gospel.<sup>2</sup> A critical estimate of these essays cannot here be given. Of course they are tentative; nevertheless they are interesting, and even fascinating to all who desire to get behind the existing records, and as near to the actual words of our Lord as possible. And, though an approach to a consensus of opinion may never be reached, the discussion is sure to bear fruit in a more intimate acquaintance with the most authentic forms of many of our Lord's sayings. As another aid to so desirable a result, one must give a cordial welcome to such works as that of Resch on Extracanonische Parallel Texts to the Gospels.<sup>3</sup> Resch believes it possible, through the use of Codex Bezae, the old Latin and Syriac versions, and quotations from the Gospels in the early fathers, to get behind the text of our canonical Gospels, and to reach a truer reflection in Greek of the Hebrew original in the case of many sayings recorded in the Logia of Matthew. There will be various estimates of the intrinsic value of his adventurous attempt. Personally, I am not sanguine that much will come out of it. But one cannot be sorry that it has been made, and by one who thoroughly believes that he is engaged in a fruitful line of inquiry. It is well to learn by exhaustive experiment how much or how little may be expected from that quarter.

13. Among those who accept the hypothesis of the two sources a difference of opinion obtains on two subordinate points, viz., first, the relation between the two sources used in Matthew and Luke, and, second, the relation between these two Gospels. Did Mark know and use the Logia, and did Matthew know Luke, or Luke Matthew? Dr. Bernhard Weiss answers the former question in the affirmative and the latter in the negative. From certain phenomena brought to light by a comparative study of the synoptists, he thinks it demonstrable that in many parts of his narrative Mark leans on an older written source, whose accounts of evangelic incidents are reproduced in a more faithful manner in the companion Gospels, and especially in Matthew. This source he takes to be the Logia of the apostle Matthew. It follows from this, of course, that the Logia was not a mere collection of sayings, but a book containing histories as well, such narratives, e.g., as those relating to the palsied man, the feeding of the 5000, and the blind man at Jericho. The phenomena on which Weiss rests his case are of two kinds. One group consists of minute agreements between Matthew and Luke against Mark in narratives common to the three, as, e.g., in the use of the words ἰδοὺ and ἐπὶ κλίβῳ in the opening sentence of the story of the palsied man. The inference is that these phrases are taken from the Logia, implying of course that the story was there for those who chose to use it. The other group consists of sayings of Jesus found in Mark's Gospel, and reproduced also in Matthew and Luke in nearly identical form, yet not taken, it is held, from Mark, but from the Logia. The contention is that the close similarity can be accounted for only by the assumption that Mark, as well as his brother evangelists, took the words from the Logia. An instance in point may be found in the respective accounts of the reply of Jesus to the charge of being in league with Beelzebub. Wendt dissents from the inference of Weiss in both classes of cases. The one group of facts he explains by assuming that Luke had access to the first canonical gospel; in the second group he sees simply accidental correspondences between independent traditions preserved respectively in the Logia and in Mark.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Wendt, Die Lehre Jesu, Erster Theil. This part of Wendt's work has not been translated. His exposition of Christ's words has been translated by Messrs. T. & T. Clark, Edinburgh.

<sup>2</sup> The Apostolic Gospel, with a Critical Reconstruction of the Text, by J. Fulton Blair, 1896. Mr. Blair's critical position differs widely from Wendt's, and his Apostolic Gospel contains much more besides sayings.

<sup>3</sup> Aussercanonische Paralleltexte zu den Evangelien.

SECTION II. HISTORICITY.

1. The Gospels primâ facie wear the aspect of books aiming at giving a true if not a full account of the life, and more especially of the public career, of Jesus Christ, the Author of the Christian faith. For Christians, writings having such an aim must possess unique interest. There is nothing an earnest believer in Christ more desires to know than the actual truth about Him: what He said, did, and experienced. How far do the books, the study of which is to engage our attention, satisfy this desire? To what extent are they historically reliable?

2. The question has been recently propounded and discussed:

<sup>1</sup> Die Lehre Jesu, Erster Theil, pp. 191-3. On the question whether the third evangelist used canonical Matthew, vide the Abhandlung of Edward Simons, Bonn, 1880.

What interest did the apostolic age take in the evangelic history? and the conclusion arrived at that the earthly life of Jesus interested it very little.<sup>1</sup> Now, there can be no doubt that, comparing that age with the present time, the statement is true. We live in an age when the historical spirit is in the ascendant, creating an insatiable desire to know the origins of every movement which has affected, to any extent, the fortunes of humanity. Moreover, Christianity has undergone an evolution resulting in types of this religion which are, on various grounds, unsatisfactory to many thoughtful persons. Hence has arisen a powerful reaction of which the watchword is—“Back to Christ,” and to which additional intensity has been given by the conviction that modern types of Christianity, whether ecclesiastical, philosophical, or pietistic, all more or less foster, if they do not avow, indifference to the historic foundations of the faith. We have thus a religious as well as a scientific reason for our desire to know the actual Jesus of history. In the primitive era, faith was free to follow its native tendency to be content with its immediate object, the Risen Lord, and to rely on the inward illumination of the Holy Spirit as the source of all knowledge necessary for a godly life. This indifference might conceivably pass into hostility. Faith might busy itself in transforming unwelcome facts so as to make the history serve its purpose. For the historic interest and the religious are not identical. Science wants to know the actual facts; religion wants facts to be such as will serve its ends. It sometimes idealises, transforms, even invents history to accomplish this object. We are not entitled to assume, à priori, that apostolic Christianity entirely escaped this temptation. The suggestion that the faith of the primitive Church took hold of the story of Jesus and so transfigured it that the true image of Him is no longer recoverable, however sceptical, is not without plausibility. The more moderate statement that the apostolic Church, while knowing and accepting many facts about Jesus, was not interested in them as facts, but only as aids to faith, has a greater show of reason. It might well be that the teaching of Jesus was regarded not so much as a necessary source of the knowledge of truth, but rather as a confirmation of knowledge already possessed, and that the acts and experiences of Jesus were viewed chiefly in the light of verifications of His claim to be the Messiah. It does not greatly matter to us what the source of interest in the evangelic facts was so long as they are facts; if the primitive Church in its traditions concerning Jesus was simply utilising and not manufacturing history. There is good reason to believe that in the main this is the true state of the case. Not only so, there are grounds for the opinion that the historic spirit—interest in facts as facts—was not wanting even amid the fervour of the apostolic age. It may be worth while to mention some of these, seeing they make for the historicity of the main body of the evangelic tradition concerning the words, deeds, and sufferings of Jesus as these are recorded, e.g., in the Gospel of Mark.

<sup>1</sup> Vide Von Soden's essay in the Theologische Abhandlungen, Carl von Weisäcker Gewidmet, 1892.

3. In this connection it deserves a passing notice that there existed in the primitive Church a party interested in the fact-knowledge of Jesus, the knowledge of Christ "after the flesh" in Pauline phrase, a Christ party. From the statement made by St. Paul in the text from which the phrase just quoted is taken, it has been inferred that the apostle was entirely indifferent to the historical element.<sup>1</sup> The inference seems to me hasty; but, be this as it may, what I am now concerned to point out is that, if St. Paul undervalued the facts of the personal ministry, there were those who did not. There was a party who made acquaintance with these facts a necessary qualification for the apostleship, and on this ground denied that St. Paul was an apostle. The assumption underlying the Tübingen tendency-criticism is that there were two parties in the apostolic Church interested in misrepresenting Jesus in different directions, one virtually making Him a narrow Judaist, the other making Him a Pauline universalist, neither party being worthy of implicit trust. This hypothesis presents a somewhat distorted view of the situation. It would be nearer the truth to say that there was a party interested in facts and another interested chiefly in ideas. The one valued facts without seeing their significance; the other valued ideas without taking much trouble to indicate the fact-basis. To the bias of the former party we might be indebted for knowledge of many facts in the life of Jesus, the significance of which was not understood by the transmitters of the tradition.

4. Even within the Pauline party there were those who were interested in facts and in some measure animated by the historical spirit. So far from regarding Paulinists in general as idealists, we ought probably to regard St. Paul, in his passion for ideas and apparent indifference to biographic detail, as an exception; and to think of the majority of his followers as men who, while sympathising with his universalism, shared in no small measure the common Jewish realism. Of this type was Luke. The absence from his

<sup>1</sup> 2 Corinthians v. 16.

Gospel of even the rudiments of a doctrine of atonement, so conspicuous a topic in the Pauline epistles, will be remarked on hereafter; meantime I direct attention simply to its opening sentence. That prefatory statement is full of words and phrases breathing the fact-loving spirit: Πεπληροφορημένων πραγμάτων, ἀπ' ἀρχῆς αὐτόπται καὶ ὑπηρέται, ἀκριβῶς, ἀσφάλεια. The author wants to deal with facts believed; he wishes, as far as possible, to be guided by the testimony of eye-witnesses; he means to take pains in the ascertainment of the truth, that the friend for whose benefit he writes may attain unto certainty. The question here is not how far he succeeded in his aim; the point insisted on is the aim itself, the historical spirit evinced. Luke may have been unconsciously influenced to a considerable extent by religious bias, preconceived opinion, accepted Christian belief, and therefore not sufficiently critical, and too easily satisfied with evidence; but he honestly wanted to know the historic truth. And in this desire he doubtless represented a class, and wrote to meet a demand on the part of Christians who felt a keen interest in the memorabilia of the Founder, and were not satisfied with the sources at command on account of their fragmentariness, or occasional want of agreement with each other.<sup>1</sup>

5. The peculiar character of the apostle who stood at the head of the primitive Jewish Church has an important bearing on the question of historicity. For our knowledge of Peter we are not wholly dependent on the documents whose historicity is in question. We have a rapid pencil-sketch of him in the epistles of St. Paul, easily recognisable as that of the same man of whom we have a more finished picture in the Gospels. A genial, frank, impulsive, outspoken, generous, wide-hearted man; not preoccupied with theories, illogical, inconsistent, now on one side, now on the other; brave yet cowardly, capable of honest sympathy with Christian universalism, yet under pressure apt to side with Jewish bigots. A most unsatisfactory, provoking person to deal with for such a man as St. Paul, with his sharply defined position, thorough-going adherence to principle, and firm resolute will. Yes, but also a very satisfactory source of first-hand traditions concerning Jesus; an excellent witness, if a weak apostle. A source, a copious fountain of information he was bound to be. We do not need Papias to tell us this. This disciple, open-hearted and open-mouthed, must speak concerning his beloved Master. It will not be long before everybody knows what he has to tell concerning the ministry of the Lord.

<sup>1</sup> Von Soden, in the essay above referred to, takes no notice of Luke's preface.

Papias reports that in Mark's Gospel we have the literary record of Peter's testimony. The statement is entirely credible. Peter would say more than others about Jesus; he would say all in a vivid way, and Mark's narrative reflects the style of an impressionable eye-witness. If it be a faithful report of Peter's utterances the general truth of its picture of Jesus may be implicitly relied on. For Peter was not a man likely to be biased by theological tendency. What we expect from him is rather a candid recital of things as they happened, without regard to, possibly without perception of, their bearing on present controversies; a rough, racy, unvarnished story, unmanipulated in the interest of ideas or theories, which are not in this man's line. How far the narratives of the second Gospel bear out this character will appear hereafter.

6. The other fact mentioned by Papias, viz., that the apostle Matthew was the source of the evangelic tradition relating to the words of Jesus, has an important bearing on historicity. Outside the Gospels we have no information concerning this disciple such as we have of Peter in the Pauline letters. But we may safely assume the truth of the Gospel accounts which represent him as having been a tax-gatherer before he was called to discipleship. The story of his call, under the name of Matthew or Levi, is told in all the three synoptists, as is also the significant incident of the feast following at which Jesus met with a large company of publicans. There is reason to believe that in calling this disciple our Lord had in view not merely ultimate service as an apostle, but immediate service in connection with the meeting with the publicans; that, in short, Jesus associated Matthew with Himself that He might use him as an instrument for initiating a mission to the class to which he had belonged. But if the Master might call a fit man to discipleship for one form of immediate service, He might call him for more than one. Another service the ex-publican might be able to render was that of secretary. In his old occupation he would be accustomed to writing, and it might be Christ's desire to utilise that talent for noting down things worthy of record. The gift would be most in demand in connection with the teaching of the Master. The preservation of that element could not be safely trusted to memories quite equal to the retention of remarkable healing acts, accompanied by not less remarkable sayings. The use of the pen at the moment might be necessary. And of all the members of the disciple-circle the ex-publican was the likeliest man for that service. We are not surprised, therefore, that the function assigned to Matthew in connection with the evangelic tradition is the preservation of the Logia.

That is just the part he was fitted to perform. As little are we surprised that Mark's Gospel, based on Peter's recollections, contains so little of the teaching. Peter was not the kind of man to take notes, nor were discourses full of deep thought the kind of material he was likely to remember. What would make an indelible impression on him would be, not thought, but extraordinary deeds, accompanied by striking gestures, original brief replies to embarrassing questions and the like; just such things as we find reported in the second Gospel.

From Matthew the publican might be expected not only a record of Christ's teaching as distinct from His actions, but an impartial record. We should not suspect him any more than Peter of theological bias; least of all in the direction of Judaism. As a Galilean he belonged to a half-Gentile community, and as a publican he was an outcast for orthodox Jews. It was probably the humane spirit and wide sympathies of Jesus that drew him from the receipt of custom. If, therefore, we find in the Logia any sayings ascribed to Jesus of a universalistic character we do not feel in the least tempted to doubt their authenticity. If, on the other hand, we meet with words of an apparently opposite character we are not greatly startled and ready to exclaim, Behold the hand of an interpolator! We rather incline to see in the combination of seemingly incongruous elements the evidence of candid chronicling. It is the case of an honest reporter taking down this and that without asking himself whether this can be reconciled with that. That a deep, many-sided mind like that of Jesus might give birth to startling paradoxes is no wise incredible. Therefore, without undertaking responsibility for every expression, one may without hesitation endorse the sentiment of Jülicher, "that Jewish and anti-Jewish, revolutionary and conservative, new and old, freedom and narrowness in judgment, sensuous hopes and a spiritualism blending together present and future, meet together, by no means weakens our impression that Jesus really here speaks"<sup>1</sup>

7. The mere fact of the preservation of Mark's Gospel is not without a bearing on the question of historicity. In its own way it testifies to the influence of the historic as distinct from the religious spirit in the early period of the Christian era. It would not have been at all surprising if that Gospel had fallen out of existence, seeing that its contents have been absorbed into the more comprehensive Gospels of Matthew and Luke. Assuming the correctness of modern critical views, the Logia of the Apostle Matthew has disappeared; how did it come about that the second Gospel did not disappear also, especially in view of its defects, as they would be regarded, comparing it with the longer narratives of the same type? Whether the authors of the first and third Gospels aimed at superseding the Logia and Mark is a question that need not be discussed. From Luke's preface it might plausibly be inferred that he did aspire at giving so full and satisfactory an account of the life of Jesus as should render earlier attempts superfluous. If he did, he was not successful. The Gospel without the story of the infancy, and the Sermon on the Mount, and the detailed appearances after the resurrection, survived. It might be undervalued. There is evidence of preference and partiality for one Gospel as against another in Patristic literature. Clement of Alexandria, true to his philosophy, undervalued all the synoptists as compared with the fourth Gospel, because they showed merely the body of Jesus, while the fourth Gospel showed His spirit. Augustine regarded Mark as a mere pedissequus to Matthew, en laquais, as D'Eichthal irreverently but not incorrectly renders the word.<sup>1</sup> Still Mark held his place, mere lackey to Matthew though some supposed him to be. The reason might be in part that he had got too strong a hold before the companion Gospels appeared, to be easily dislodged, and had to be accepted in spite of defects and apparent superfluousness. But I think there was also a worthier reason, a certain diffused thankfulness for every scrap of information concerning the Lord Jesus, especially such as was believed to rest on apostolic testimony. Mark's Gospel passed for a report of St. Peter's reminiscences of the Master; therefore by all means let it be preserved, though it contained no account of the childhood of Jesus, and very imperfect reports of His teaching and of the resurrection. It was apostolic, therefore to be respected; as apostolic it was trustworthy, therefore to be valued. In short, the presence of the second Gospel in the New Testament, side by side with Matthew and Luke, is a witness to the prevalence in the Church of the first century of the historical spirit acting as a check on the religious spirit, whose instinctive impulse would be to obliterate traces of discrepancy, and to suppress all writings relating to the Christian origins which in their presentation of Jesus even seemed to sink below the level of the Catholic faith.

<sup>1</sup> Einleitung in das Neue Testament, p. 231.

8. The foregoing five considerations all tend to make a favour able impression as to the historicity of the evangelic tradition in general. More special considerations are needful when the tradition is broken up into distinct divisions. The tradition consists of three layers. Faith would make three demands for information concerning its object: what did He teach? what did He do? how did He suffer? Some think that the first and most urgent demand would be for information concerning the teaching, and that only in the second place would there grow up a desire for narratives of facts and experiences. According to Holtzmann the order was: first the Logia, then the passion-drama, then the anecdotes of memorable acts.<sup>1</sup> I should be inclined to invert the order of the first two items, and to say: the Passion, the Logia, the memorable incidents. But the more important question is: how far can the evangelic records concerning these three departments of the tradition be trusted? Only a few hints can be given by way of answer here.

<sup>1</sup> Vide his work Les Évangiles, p. 66.

9. The narratives of the Passion, given in all the four Gospels with disproportionate fulness, have lately been subjected to a searching analysis in a sceptical spirit rivalling that of Strauss. Dr. Brandt,<sup>2</sup> after doing his utmost to shake our faith in the trustworthiness of these pathetic records, still leaves to us eight particulars, which even he is constrained to recognise as historical. These are: betrayal by one of the twelve; desertion by all of them; denial by Peter; death sentence under the joint responsibility of Jewish rulers and Roman procurator; assistance in carrying the cross rendered by Simon of Cyrene; crucifixion on a hill called Golgotha; the crime charged indicated by the inscription, "King of the Jews"; death, if not preceded by a prayer for the murderers, or by the despairing cry, "My God, my God," at least heralded by a loud voice. In these particulars we have the skeleton of the story, all that is needful to give the Passion tragic significance, and even to form a basis for theological constructions. The items omitted, the process before the Sanhedrim, the interviews with Pilate and Herod, the mockery of the soldiers, the preferential release of Barabbas, the sneers of passers-by, the two thieves, the parting of the raiment, the words from the cross, the preternatural accompaniments of death, are all more or less of the nature of accessories, enhancing greatly the impressiveness of the picture, suggesting additional lessons, but not altering the character of the event as a whole.

But even accessories are important, and not to be lightly given over to the tender mercies of sceptical critics. The reasons assigned for treating them as unhistoric are not convincing. They come mostly under three heads: The influence of Old Testament prophecy, the absence of witnesses, and the bias manifest in the accounts of the trial against the Jews and in favour of the Gentiles. By reference to the first a whole group of incidents, including the cry, "Eli, Eli," are summarily disposed of. Texts taken from Psalm xxii. and Isaiah liii. created corresponding facts. This is a gratuitous assumption. The facts suggested the prophecies, the prophecies did not create the facts. The facts were there, and the primitive disciples looked out for Messianic oracles to suit them, by way of furnishing themselves with an apologetic for the thesis, Jesus is the Christ. In some cases the links of proof are weak; no one could have thought of the texts unless the facts had been there to suggest them. The plea of lack of witnesses applies to what took place between Jesus and the various authorities before whom He appeared: the High Priests, Pilate, Herod. Who, it is asked, were there to see or hear? Who likely to be available as witnesses for the evangelic tradition? We cannot tell; yet it is possible there was quite sufficient evidence, though also possible, doubtless, that the evangelists were not in all cases able to give exact verifiable information, but were obliged to give simply the best information obtainable. This, at least, we may claim for them, that they did their best to ascertain the facts. As to the alleged prejudice leading to unfair distribution of blame for our Lord's death between the Jewish authorities and the Roman governor, we may admit that there were temptations to such partiality, arising out of natural dislike of the Jews and unequally natural desire to win the favour of those who held the reins of empire. Yet on the whole it may be affirmed that the representation of the evangelists is intrinsically credible as in harmony with all we know about the principal actors in the great tragedy.

<sup>1</sup> Vide Hand-Commentar, pp. 13-17.

<sup>2</sup> Die Evangelische Geschichte und der Ursprung des Christenthums, 1893.

10. With regard to the teaching, it is of course obvious that all recorded sayings of Jesus do not possess the same attestation. Some words are found in all three synoptists, some in two, and not a few in only one. Yet in many instances we can feel as sure of the authenticity of sayings found in a single Gospel as of that of sayings occurring in all the three. Who can doubt, e.g., that the word, "the Sabbath was made for man, not man for the Sabbath," emanated from the great Master? It is well in this connection to have before our minds the rules by which judgment should be guided. The following canons may legitimately be relied on:—

(a) Sayings supported by full synoptical attestation may be regarded as in substance authentic.

(b) Sayings unsupported by full synoptical attestation may be regarded as authentic when their absence from a particular Gospel can be explained by its plan, or by the idiosyncrasy of its author. This covers not a few omissions by Luke.

(c) Sayings found only in a single Gospel may be accepted as authentic when they sympathise with and form a natural complement to other well-attested sayings. This remark applies to the sayings in Luke vii. 47, xv. 7, concerning the connection between little forgiveness and little love, and about the joy of finding things lost, which are complementary to the saying in all three synoptists: "the whole need not a physician;" the three sayings together constituting a full apology for the relations between Jesus and the sinful.

(d) All sayings possess intrinsic credibility which suit the general historical situation. This applies to Christ's antipharisaic utterances, an element very prominent in Matthew, and very much restricted in Luke.

(e) All sayings may be accepted as self-attested and needing no other attestation which bear the unmistakable stamp of a unique religious genius, rise above the capacity of the reporters, and are reported by them simply as unforgettable memories of the great Teacher handed down by a faithful tradition.

The chief impulse to collecting the sayings of Jesus was not a purely historical interest, but a desire to find in the words of the Master what might serve as a rule to believers for the guidance of their life. Hence may be explained the topical grouping of sayings in Matthew and Luke, especially in the former, e.g., in the tenth chapter, whose rubric might be: a directory for the mission work of the church; and in the eighteenth, which might be headed: how the members of the Christian brotherhood are to behave towards each other. The question suggests itself, Would the influence of the practical aim be confined to grouping? Would it not extend to modifications, expansions, additions, even inventions, that the words of the Master might cover all present requirements and correspond fully to present circumstances and convictions? On this topic Weizsäcker makes the following statement: "From the beginning the tradition consisted not in mere repetition, but in repetition combined with creative activity. And from the nature of the case this activity increased as time went on. Elucidations grew into text. The single saying was multiplied with the multiplication of its uses, or the words were referred to a definite case and correspondingly modified. Finally, words were inserted into the text of Jesus' sayings, especially in the form of instances of narrative, which were only meant to make His utterances more distinct."<sup>1</sup> This may seem to open a door to licence, but second thoughts tend to allay our fears. The aim itself supplied a check to undue freedom. Just because disciples desired to follow the Master and make His words their law, they would wish to be sure that the reported sayings gave them the thoughts of Jesus at least, if not His ipsissima verba. Then there is reason to believe that the process of fixing the tradition was substantially completed when the memory of Jesus was recent, and the men who had been with Him were at hand to guide and control the process. Weizsäcker remarks that very little of the nature of accretion originated elsewhere than in the primitive church, and that the great mass of the evangelic tradition was formed under the influence of the living tradition.<sup>2</sup> That is to say, the freedom of the apostolic age was controlled by knowledge and reverence. It was known what the Master had taught, and great respect was cherished for His authority. If there was no superstitious concern as to literal accuracy, there was a loyal solicitude that the meaning conveyed by words should be true to the mind of Christ.

11. The incidents of the Healing Ministry, which form the bulk of the narrative of events, are complicated with the question of miracle. Those for whom it is an axiom that a miracle is impossible are tempted to pronounce on that ministry the summary and sweeping verdict, unhistorical. This is not a scientific procedure. The question of fact should be dealt with separately on its own grounds, and the question of explicability taken up only in the second place. There are good reasons for believing that the healing ministry, miraculous or not miraculous, was a great fact in the public career of Jesus. Healing is associated with teaching in all general notices of our Lord's work. Nine acts of healing, some of them very remarkable, are reported in all the synoptical Gospels. The healing element in the ministry is so interwoven with the didactic that the former cannot be eliminated without destroying the whole story. This is frankly acknowledged by Harnack, who, if he does not doubt the reality of miracles, attaches very little apologetic value to them.<sup>3</sup> The occasional notices in the Gospels of contemporary opinions, impressions, and theories regarding Christ's actions speak to something extraordinary over and above the preaching and teaching.

<sup>1</sup> The Apostolic Age, vol. ii., p. 62.

<sup>2</sup> Ibid.

<sup>3</sup> History of Dogma, vol. i., p. 65, note 3.

Mark's graphic report of the impression produced by Christ's first appearance in the synagogue of Capernaum may be cited as an instance. "What is this? A new teaching!—with authority He commandeth even the unclean spirits, and they obey Him."<sup>1</sup> This is a veritable reminiscence, and it points to a double surprise created by an original style of preaching, and by an unprecedented power. Still more significant are the theories invented to explain away the power. The Pharisees accounted for it, as displayed in the cure of demoniacs, by the suggestion of an alliance with Beelzebub. Herod said: "It is John whom I beheaded risen from the dead and exercising the power of the spirit world". The one theory was malevolent, the other absurd, but the point to be noticed is the existence of the theories. Men do not theorise about nothing. There were remarkable facts urgently demanding explanation of some sort.

The healing acts of Jesus then, speaking broadly, were to begin with facts. How they are to be explained, and what they imply as to the Person of the Healer, are questions for science and theology. It is not scientific to neglect the phenomena as unworthy of notice. As little is it scientific to make the solution easy by under-statement of the facts to be explained, as, e.g., by viewing demoniacal possession as an imaginary disease. Demoniacal possession might be an imaginary explanation of certain classes of diseases, but the diseases themselves were serious enough, as serious as madness and epilepsy, which appear to have formed the physical basis of the malady.

Finally, it is not to be supposed that these healing acts, though indubitable facts, have no permanent religious value. Their use in the evidences of Christianity may belong to an antiquated type of apologetic, but in other respects their significance is perennial. Whether miraculous or not, they equally reveal the wide-hearted benevolence of Jesus. They throw a side light on His doctrine of God and of man, and especially on His conception of the ideal of life. The healing ministry was a tacit but effective protest against asceticism and the dualism on which it rests, and a proof that Jesus had no sympathy with the hard antithesis between spirit and flesh.

12. Before leaving the topic of historicity, it may be well here to refer to a line of evidence which, though not worked out, has been suggestively sketched by Professor Sanday in his Bampton Lectures on Inspiration. The thesis to be proved is "that the great mass of the narrative in the first three Gospels took its shape before the destruction of Jerusalem, i.e., within less than forty years of the events".<sup>1</sup> "Was there ever," asks Dr. Sanday, "an easier problem for a critic to decide whether the sayings and narratives which lie before him came from the one side of this chasm or the other?" Among the instances he cites are such as these: "If, therefore, thou art offering thy gift at the altar, and then rememberest that thy brother hath aught against thee," etc. "Woe unto you, ye blind guides, which say, whosoever shall swear by the temple, it is nothing," etc. "See thou tell no man, but go thy way, show thyself to the priest," etc. That is to say, the altar, the temple, the priesthood are still in existence. This is not decisive as to the date of our Gospels, but it is decisive as to much of the material contained in them having assumed fixed shape, either in oral or in written form, before the great crisis of Israel.

<sup>1</sup> Mark i. 27.

13. Historicity, be it finally noted, is not to be confounded with absolute accuracy, or perfect agreement between parallel accounts. Harmonistic is a thing of the past. It was a well-meant discipline, but it took in hand an insoluble problem, and it unduly magnified the importance of a solution, even if it had been possible. Questions as to occasions on which reported words and acts of Jesus were spoken or done, as to the connections between sayings grouped together in one Gospel, dispersed in the pages of another, as to the diverse forms of sayings in parallel reports, are for us now secondary. The broad question we ask as to the words of Jesus is: have we here, in the main, words actually spoken by Jesus, once or twice, now or then, in this connection or in that, in separate aphorisms or in connected discourse, in the form reported by this or that evangelist, or in a form not exactly reproduced by any of them, yet conveying a sense sufficiently reflected in all the versions? Is the Lord's prayer the Lord's at whatever time given to His disciples? Is the "Sermon on the Mount" made up of real utterances of Jesus, whether all spoken at one time, as Matthew's report seems to imply, or on various occasions, as we should infer from Luke's narrative? Did Jesus actually say: "I came not to call the righteous, but sinners," whether with the addition, "to repentance," as it stands in Luke, or without, as in the genuine text of the same Logion in Matthew and Mark? Did He speak the parable of the lost sheep—whether in Matthew's form or in Luke's, or in a form differing verbally from both—to disciples, to Pharisees, or perhaps to neither, but to publicans, yet conveying in some form and to some audience the great thought that there was a passion in His heart and in the heart of God for saving lost men? It is greatly to be desired that devout readers of the Gospels should be emancipated from legal bondage to the theological figment of inerrancy. Till this is done, it is impossible to enjoy in full the Gospel story, or feel its essential truth and reality.

<sup>1</sup> Page 283.

CHAPTER II.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO MARK.

SECTION I. CONTENTS.

1. The second Gospel has no account of the birth and infancy of Jesus. The narrative opens with the prelude to the public ministry, the preaching and baptism of the prophet John; and the sequel consists of a rapid sketch of that ministry in a series of graphic tableaux from its commencement in Galilee to its tragic close in Jerusalem. This fact alone raises a presumption in favour of Mark's claim to be the earliest of the three synoptical Gospels. Other considerations pointing in the same direction are its comparative brevity and the meagreness of its account of Christ's teaching. This Gospel wears the aspect of a first sketch of the memorable career of one who had become an object of religious faith and love to the circle of readers for whose benefit it was written. As such it is entitled to precedence in an introduction to the three synoptists, though, in our detailed comments, we follow the order in which they are arranged in the New Testament. It is convenient to take Mark first for this further reason, that from its pages we can form the clearest idea of the general course of our Lord's history after He entered on His Messianic calling. In none of the three Gospels can we find a definite chronological plan, but it is possible from any one of them to form a general idea of the leading stages of the ministry, and most easily and clearly from the second.

2. The first stage was the synagogue ministry. After His baptism in the Jordan and His temptation in the wilderness, Jesus returned to Galilee and began to preach the "Gospel of the Kingdom of God".<sup>1</sup> The synagogue was the scene of this preaching. The first appearance of Jesus in a synagogue was in Capernaum, where He at once made a great impression both by His discourse and by the cure of a demoniac.<sup>2</sup> This was simply the commencement of a preaching tour in the synagogues of Galilee. Jesus made no stay in Capernaum. He left the town the day after He preached in its synagogue, very early in the morning.<sup>1</sup> He left so early in the day because He feared detention by the people. He left in such haste because He knew that He could preach in the synagogues only by the consent of the authorities, which might soon be withheld through sinister influence. This synagogue preaching naturally formed the first phase in Christ's work. The synagogue presented a ready opportunity of coming into contact with the people. Any man might speak there with the permission of the ruler. But he could speak only so long as he was a persona grata, and Jesus, conscious of the wide cleavage in thought and feeling between Himself and the scribes, could not but fear that He would not remain such long. It was now or never, at the outset or not at all, so far as the synagogue was concerned.

<sup>1</sup> Mark i. 14.

<sup>2</sup> Mark i. 27.

3. How long this synagogue ministry lasted is not expressly indicated. A considerable period is implied in the statement: "He preached in their synagogues throughout all Galilee".<sup>2</sup> It is not necessary to take this strictly, especially in view of the populousness of Galilee and the multitude of its towns large and small, as indicated by Josephus.<sup>3</sup> But the statement must be taken in earnest so far as to recognise that Jesus had a deliberate plan for a synagogue ministry in Galilee, and that He carried it out to a considerable extent. It is not improbable that it was interrupted by the influence of the scribes, whom we find lying in wait for Him on His return from the preaching tour to Capernaum.<sup>4</sup>

4. With the anecdote in which the scribes figure as captious critics of Jesus a new phase in the story begins. The keynote of the first chapter is popularity; that of the next is opposition. In this juxtaposition the evangelist is not merely aiming at dramatic effect, but reflecting in his narrative a real historical sequence. The popularity and the opposition were related to each other as cause and effect. It is true that having once entered on this second topic, he groups together a series of incidents illustrating the hostile attitude of the scribes, which have a topical rather than a temporal connection, in this probably following the example of his voucher, Peter. These extend from chap. ii. 1 to chap. iii. 6, constituting the

<sup>1</sup> Mark i. 35.

<sup>2</sup> Mark i. 39.

<sup>3</sup> Josephus gives the number of towns at 204, the smallest having 15,000 inhabitants. Vide his Vita, chap. xlv., and Bell. Jud., iii., 2, 3.

<sup>4</sup> Chap. ii. 1.

second division of the story, chap. i. 14-45 being the first. The two together set before us the two forces whose action and interaction can be traced throughout the drama, and whose resultant will be the cross: the favour of the people, the ill-will of their religious leaders.

5. Within the second group of anecdotes illustrating the hostility of the scribes, a place is assigned to an incident which ought not to be regarded as a mere subordinate detail under that general category, but rather as pointing to another phase of our Lord's activity co-ordinate in importance with the preaching in the synagogues. I refer to the meeting with the publicans, and in connection with that the call of Levi or Matthew.<sup>1</sup> That action of Jesus had a decisive effect in alienating the scribes, but meantime this is not the thing to be emphasised. We have to recognise in this new movement a second stage in the ministry of Jesus. First, preaching in the synagogues to the Jews of respectable character and good religious habit; next, a mission to the practically excommunicated, non-synagogue-going, socially outcast part of the community. Mark, more than his brother evangelists, shows his sense of the importance and significance of this new departure, especially by the observation: "there were many (publicans and sinners), and they followed Him".<sup>2</sup> That is to say, the class was large enough to demand special attention, and they were inviting attention and awakening interest in them by the interest they on their side were beginning to take in Jesus and His work. Without doubt this mission to the publicans bulked much larger in fact than it does in the pages of the evangelists or in the thoughts of average readers of the Gospels, and it must be one of the cares of the interpreter to make it appear in its true dimensions.<sup>3</sup> There is nothing in the Gospels more characteristic of Jesus, or of deeper, more lasting significance as to the nature and tendency of the Christian faith.

6. The third stage in the ministry of Jesus was the formation of a disciple-circle. Of the beginnings of this movement Mark gives us a glimpse in chap. i. 16-20, where he reports the call of the four fishermen, Peter and Andrew, James and John; and in the words Jesus is reported to have spoken to the first pair of brothers there is a clear indication of a purpose to gather about Him a band of men not merely for personal service but in order to training for a high calling. Levi's call, reported in chap. ii., is another indication of the same kind. But it is in the section of the Gospel beginning at chap. iii. 7, and extending to chap. vi. 13, that the disciples properly come to the front. An intention on the part of the evangelist to give them prominence is betrayed in the pointed way in which he refers to them in iii. 7: "And Jesus with the disciples withdrew towards the sea".<sup>1</sup> A little further on in the same chapter we read of the retirement of Jesus to the mountain with a band of disciples, out of which He selects an inner circle of twelve.<sup>2</sup> And at various points in this division of the Gospel the disciple-band is referred to in a way to indicate that they are assuming a new importance to the mind of Jesus.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Chap. ii. 13-17.

<sup>2</sup> Chap. ii. 15.

<sup>3</sup> Vide notes on this section in Matthew and in Mark.

7. This importance was due in part to dissatisfaction with the result of the general ministry among the people. Jesus had preached often, and healed many, in synagogue and highway, and had become in consequence the idol of the masses who gathered in increasing numbers from all quarters, and crowded around Him wherever He went, as we read in chap. iii. 7-12. But this popularity did not gratify Him; it rather bored Him. He did not weary in well-doing, but He was disappointed with the outcome. This disappointment found expression in the parable of the sower, which was really a critical estimate of the synagogue ministry to this sad effect: much seed sown; little fruit. From this comparatively fruitless ministry among the many, Jesus turned with yearning to the susceptible few in hope to find in them a good soil that should bring forth ripe fruit, thirty, sixty, or even an hundred fold. After a long enough time had elapsed to make it possible to form an estimate of the spiritual situation, He judged that in a disciple-circle lay His only chance of deep permanent influence. Hence He naturally sought to extricate Himself from the crowd, and to get away from collisions with unsympathetic scribes, that He might have leisure to indoctrinate the chosen band in the mysteries of the Kingdom of Heaven. Leisure, quiet, retirement—that more and more was His aim.

8. This desire for opportunity to perform the functions of a master is made more apparent by Mark than by the two other synoptists. He comes far short of them in his report of Christ's teaching, but he brings out much more clearly than they Christ's desire for undisturbed intercourse with the twelve, the reasons for it, and the persistent efforts of the Master to accomplish His object. It is from his pages we learn of the escapes of Jesus from the crowds and from the scribes. These escapes, as reported by Mark, take place in all directions possible for one whose work lay on the western shore of the Sea of Galilee: towards the hill behind, towards the eastern shore, towards the northern borderland. Five in all are mentioned: one to the hill;<sup>1</sup> two to the eastern shore, first in an eastward,<sup>2</sup> then in a northerly direction;<sup>3</sup> two to the north, first to the borders of Tyre and Sidon,<sup>4</sup> next to the neighbourhood of Caesarea Philippi.<sup>5</sup> All had the same end in view: the instruction of the disciples. It was in connection with the first that the "Sermon on the Mount," or the Teaching on the Hill, though not mentioned by Mark, was doubtless communicated. The second and third attempts, the flights across the lake, were unsuccessful, being frustrated in the first case by an accidental meeting with a demoniac, and in the second by the determination of the multitude not to let Jesus get away from them. Therefore, to make sure, the Master had to retire with His disciples to the northern limits of the land, and even beyond them, into Gentile territory, that there He might, undisturbed, talk to His disciples about the crisis that He now clearly perceived to be approaching.

<sup>1</sup> μετὰ τῶν μαθητῶν stands before ἀνεχώρησεν in the best texts.

<sup>2</sup> Chap. iii. 13.

<sup>3</sup> Vide iii. 31-35; iv. 10-25; vi. 7-13.

9. These last flights of Jesus take us on to a point in the story considerably in advance of the end of the third section, chap. vi. 13. The material lying between this place and chap. viii. 27 shows us the progress of the drama under the ever-intensifying influence of the two great forces, popularity and hostility. The multitude grows ever larger till it reaches the dimensions of 5000,<sup>6</sup> and the enmity of the scribes becomes ever more acute as the divergence of the ways of Jesus from theirs becomes increasingly manifest, and His abhorrence of their doctrines and spirit receives more unreserved expression.<sup>7</sup> After the encounter with the scribes occasioned by the neglect of the disciple-circle to comply with Rabbinical customs in the matter of ceremonial ablutions, Jesus felt that it was a mere question of time when the enmity of His foes would culminate in an effort to compass His death. What He had now to do therefore was to prepare Himself and His disciples for the end. Accordingly, Mark reports that after that incident Jesus went thence into the borders of Tyre and Sidon, desiring that no one should know.<sup>8</sup> He could not be hid even there, and so to make sure of privacy He seems to have made a wide excursion into heathen territory, through Tyre and Sidon, possibly across the mountains towards Damascus, and so through Decapolis back to Galilee.<sup>1</sup> Then followed, after an interval, the excursion to Caesarea Philippi, for ever memorable as the occasion on which Peter confessed his belief that his Master was the Christ, and the Master began to tell His disciples that He was destined ere long to suffer death at the hands of the scribes.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Chap. iii. 13.<sup>2</sup> Chap. iv. 35.<sup>3</sup> Chap. vi. 30.<sup>4</sup> Chap. vii. 24.<sup>5</sup> Chap. viii. 27.<sup>6</sup> Chap. vi. 44.<sup>7</sup> Chap. vii. 1-23.<sup>8</sup> Chap. vii. 24.

10. From that point onwards Mark relates the last scenes in Galilee, the departure to the south, with the incidents on the way, the entry into Jerusalem, with the stirring incidents of the Passion Week, and, finally, the tragic story of the crucifixion. Throughout this later part of his narrative it is evident that the one great theme of conversation between Jesus and His disciples was the cross: His cross and theirs, the necessity of self-sacrifice for all the faithful, the rewards of those who loyally bear their cross, and the penalties appointed for those whose ruling spirit is ambition.<sup>3</sup>

SECTION II. CHARACTERISTICS.

1. The outstanding characteristic of Mark is realism. I have in view here, not the graphic, descriptive, literary style which is generally ascribed to Mark, but the unreserved manner in which he presents the person and character of Jesus and of the disciples. He states facts as they were, when one might be tempted not to state them at all, or to exhibit them in a subdued light. He describes from the life, avoiding toning down, reticence, generalised expression, or euphemistic circumlocution. In this respect there is a great contrast between the second Gospel and the third, and it is only when we have made ourselves acquainted with the peculiarities of the two Gospels that we are able fully to appreciate those of either. The difference is this. Luke's whole style of presentation is manifestly influenced by the present position of Jesus and the disciples: Jesus the risen and exalted Lord, the disciples Apostles. For Mark Jesus is the Jesus of history, and the disciples are simply disciples. Luke writes from the view-point of reverential faith, Mark from that of loving vivid recollection. It is impossible by rapid citation of instances to give an adequate idea of these distinguishing features; all that can be done is to refer to a few examples in explanation of what I mean. In Mark's pages, Jesus before He begins His public career is a carpenter.<sup>4</sup> At the temptation He is driven by the Spirit

<sup>1</sup> Chap. vii. 31.

<sup>2</sup> Chap. viii. 27-33.

<sup>3</sup> Vide chap. ix. 33-50 ; x. 23-45.

<sup>4</sup> Chap. vi. 3.

into the wilderness.<sup>1</sup> His first appearance in the synagogue of Capernaum is so remarkable that people say to each other: "What is this? A new teaching! With authority commandeth He even unclean spirits, and they obey Him."<sup>2</sup> Early the following morning He makes what has the aspect of an unaccountable and undignified flight from Capernaum.<sup>3</sup> By-and-by, when He is fully engrossed in His teaching and healing ministries, His relatives come to rescue Him from His enthusiasm, deeming Him beside Himself.<sup>4</sup> On the day of the parable-discourse from the boat He makes another flight, He saying to the disciples: Let us go over to the other side; they promptly obeying orders suddenly given and carrying Him off from the crowd, even as He was.<sup>5</sup> Towards the end, on the ascent to Jerusalem, Jesus goes before the disciples, and His manner is such that those who follow are amazed.<sup>6</sup> When He sends for the colt on which He rides into the Holy City, He bids the two disciples promise to the owner that the colt will be returned when He has had His use of it.<sup>7</sup>

2. The realism of Mark makes for its historicity. It is a guarantee of first-hand reports, such as one might expect from Peter. Peter reverences his risen Lord as much as Luke or any other man. But he is one of the men who have been with Jesus, and he speaks from indelible impressions made on his eye and ear, while Luke reports at second-hand from written accounts for the most part. The same realism is a strong argument in favour of Mark's priority. It speaks to an early date before the feeling of decorum had become controlling as it is seen to be in Luke's Gospel. Mark is the archaic Gospel, written under the inspiration not of prophecy like Matthew, or of present reverence like Luke, but of fondly cherished past memories. In it we get nearest to the true human personality of Jesus in all its originality and power, and as coloured by the time and the place.<sup>8</sup> And the character of Jesus loses nothing by the realistic presentation. Nothing is told that needed to be hid. The homeliest facts reported by the evangelist only increase our interest and our admiration. One who desires to see the Jesus of history truly should con with the pages of Mark first, then pass on to Matthew and Luke.

3. By comparison with the companion Gospels Mark lacks a conspicuous didactic aim. The purpose of the writer seems to be mainly just to tell what he knows about Jesus. Some have tried to show that this Gospel is an endeavour to read into the evangelic history the ideas of Paulinism.<sup>1</sup> Others have maintained that the purpose of the writer is to observe a studied, calculated neutrality between Paulinism and Judaism.<sup>2</sup> These opposite views may be left to destroy each other. Others, again, have found in the book a contribution towards establishing Christians in the faith that Jesus was the Messiah, when that faith was tried by a delayed second coming.<sup>3</sup> A didactic programme has been supposed to be hinted at in the opening words: "The beginning of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God," and attempts have been made to show that in the sequel this programme is steadily kept in view. I am by no means anxious to negative these last suggestions; all I say is that the didactic purpose is not prominent. The writer seems to say, not: "These are written that ye may believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God," but more simply: "These are written that ye may know Jesus". This also makes for the historicity and early date of the archaic Gospel.

<sup>1</sup> Chap. i. 12.<sup>2</sup> Chap. i. 27.<sup>3</sup> Chap. i. 35-38.<sup>4</sup> Chap. iii. 21.<sup>5</sup> Chap. iv. 35.<sup>6</sup> Chap. x. 32.<sup>7</sup> Chap. xi. 3.<sup>8</sup> Vide Holtzmann, Hand-Commentar, p. 7.

4. Among the more obvious characteristics of Mark's literary style are the use of dual phrases in descriptive passages, a liking for diminutives, occasional Latinisms, the frequent employment of εὐθὺς in narrative and of the historical present, both tending to vividness and giving the impression of an eye-witness. The rough vigour and crude grammar frequently noticeable in Mark's reports strengthen this impression. The style is colloquial rather than literary. To this in part is due the unsatisfactory state of the text. Mark's roughness and originality were too much for the scribes. They could not rest till they had smoothed down everything to commonplace. Harmonising propensities also are responsible for the multiplicity of variants, the less important Gospel being forced into conformity with the more important.

SECTION III. AUTHOR, DESTINATION, DATE.

1. The Gospel itself contains no indication as to who wrote it. That the writer was one bearing the name of Mark rests solely on an ecclesiastical tradition whose reliableness there has been no disposition to question. The Mark referred to has been from the earliest times till now identified with the Mark named in Acts xii. 12, as the son of a Mary; in xiii. 5, 13, as the attendant of Paul and Barnabas on their mission journey; and in xv. 39, as the travelling companion of Barnabas alone after he had separated from Paul; also, in Colossians iv. 10, as the cousin (ἀνεψιός) of Barnabas; and, finally, in 2 Timothy iv. 11, and Philemon 24, as rendering useful services to Paul.

<sup>1</sup> So Pfeiderer in his Urchristenthum.

<sup>2</sup> So Baur and other members of the Tübingen school.

<sup>3</sup> So Bernhard Weiss, vide Das Marcusevangelium, Einleitung, p. 23.

2. The explanations of Jewish customs, e.g., ceremonial washings (chap. vii. 3-4), and words such as Talitha cumi and Ephphatha, and the technical term "common" or "unclean" (v. 41, vii. 34, vii. 2), point to non-Jewish readers; and the use of Latinisms is most naturally accounted for by the supposition that the book was written among and for Roman Christians.

3. The dates of the Gospels generally have been a subject of much controversy, and the endless diversity of opinion means that the whole matter belongs largely to the region of conjecture. The very late dates assigned to these writings by the Tübingen school are now generally abandoned. By many competent critics the Synoptical Gospels are placed well within the first century, say, between the years 60 and 80. To condescend upon a precise year is impossible. One cannot even determine with absolute confidence whether the earliest of them, i.e., Mark, was written before or after the destruction of Jerusalem. The point of practical importance is not the date at which a Gospel was composed, but the historical value of its materials. In this respect the claims of Mark, as we have seen, stand high.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> On the Appendix of Mark, chap. xvi. 9-20, vide Notes ad loc.

CHAPTER III.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO MATTHEW.

SECTION I. CONTENTS.

I. As has been stated in chap. i., the bulk of Mark's narrative is substantially taken up into Matthew's longer story. But to that narrative of the archaic Gospel is added much new material, consisting mainly of the teaching of our Lord. This teaching as reproduced in the first Gospel consists not of short pregnant sentences such as Mark has preserved, but of connected discourses of considerable length—the longest and the most important being that familiarly known as the "Sermon on the Mount". Whether this connected character is due to the Teacher or to the evangelist has been disputed, the bias of critical opinion being strongly in favour of the latter alternative. Extreme views on either side are to be avoided. That Jesus uttered only short pithy sayings is a gratuitous assumption. In connection with deliberate efforts to instruct the disciples, the presumption is in favour of continuous discourse. On the other hand, in some of the discourses reported in Matthew, e.g., that in chap. x. on apostolic duties and tribulations, agglomeration is apparent. To what Jesus said to the twelve in sending them forth on their Galilean mission the evangelist, naturally and not inappropriately, adds weighty words which bear on the more momentous mission of the apostles as the propagandists in the wide world of the Christian faith. A similar instance of editorial combination of kindred matter only topically connected may be found in the parabolic discourse (chap. xiii.). Matthew's seven parables were doubtless all spoken by Jesus, but not that day. The parables spoken from the boat were probably all of one type, presenting together a critical review of Christ's past ministry among the people. On the other hand, I am inclined to think that the contents of chaps. xviii. and xxiii. for the most part belong to the respective occasions with which they are connected in the Gospel. The call for careful admonition to the twelve at Capernaum was urgent, and the Master would have much to say to His offending disciples. Then nothing could be more fitting than that Jesus should at the close of His life deliver a final and full testimony against the spurious sanctity which He had often criticised in a fragmentary way, and which was now at last to cause His death.

2. The main interest of the question now under consideration revolves around the "Sermon on the Mount". That a discourse of some length was delivered on the mountain Luke's report proves. Luke, even in this case, breaks up much of Matthew's connected matter into short separate utterances, but yet he agrees with Matthew in ascribing to Jesus something like an oration. Though much abbreviated, his report of the discourse is still a discourse. The only question is which of the two comes nearer the original in length and contents. Now, the feeling is a very natural one that Jesus could hardly have spoken so long a discourse as Matthew puts into His mouth at one time, and to a popular audience. But two questions have to be asked here. Did Jesus address a popular audience? Did He speak all at one time in the sense of a continuous discourse of one hour or two hours' length? I am strongly inclined to answer both questions in the negative. Jesus addressed Himself to disciples; His discourse was teaching, not popular preaching—Didache, not Kerygma. And the time occupied in communicating that teaching was probably a week rather than an hour. Matthew's report, in chaps. v.-vii., in that case will have to be viewed as a summary of what the Great Teacher said to His disciples in a leisurely way on sundry topics relating to the Kingdom of Heaven, during a season of retreat on the summit of the hills to the west of the Galilean Lake. Instead of calling it the Sermon on the Mount, we should more properly designate it the Teaching on the Hill.<sup>1</sup>

3. The insertion of great masses of didactic matter into the framework of Mark's narrative weakens our sense of the progress of the history in reading Matthew. The didactic interest overshadowed the historical in the evangelist's own mind, with the result that his story does not present the aspect of a life-drama steadily moving on, but rather that of a collection of discourses furnished with slight historical introductions. The "Sermon on the Mount" comes upon us before we are prepared for it. To appreciate it fully we must realise that before it was spoken Jesus had preached in many synagogues and to many street crowds, and that a long enough time had elapsed for the Preacher to feel that His ministry had been to a large extent fruitless, and that to establish and perpetuate His influence He must now devote Himself to the careful instruction of a disciple-circle. The miscellaneousness of the parable-collection in chap. xiii. hides from us the fact that that day Jesus was sitting in judgment on His own past ministry and pronouncing on it the verdict: Much seed, little fruit; so justifying Himself for attending henceforth less to the many and more to the few.

<sup>1</sup> For further remarks on this point vide Notes on the Sermon at the beginning and throughout.

4. While the connections of Matthew's discourses are topical rather than temporal, and the sense of progress in his narrative is comparatively weak, there is a manifest correspondence between the discourses he imputes to Jesus and the whole circumstances of the times in which Jesus lived. This remark applies especially to the criticism of Pharisaism, which occupies so prominent a place in the first Gospel, as compared, e.g., with the third, in which that element retires comparatively into the background. Keen conflict between our Lord and the Scribes and Pharisees was inevitable, and the amount of controversial material in the first Gospel speaks strongly in favour of its fidelity to fact in this part of its record, even as the unique quality of the anti-Pharisaic sayings ascribed to Jesus bears witness to their originality. In the Teaching on the Hill the references to Scribism and Pharisaism are, as was fitting, the criticised parties not being present, didactic rather than controversial, but there can be little doubt that Jesus would take occasion there to indicate the difference between His religious ideas and those in vogue at the time. Here it is not Matthew that adds, but Luke that omits.

5. It has been maintained that Matthew's account of our Lord's teaching is not uniform in character—is, indeed, so discrepant as to suggest different hands writing in diverse interests and with conflicting theological attitudes. D'Eichthal, e.g., is of opinion that the primitive Matthew was the earliest written Gospel, and that its contents were much the same as those found in canonical Mark; but that, through being the earliest, it had exceptional authority, and was therefore liable to be added to with a view to furnishing it with support in the teaching of Christ for developing Christianity.<sup>1</sup> D'Eichthal counts as many as forty-five "Annexes" gradually introduced in this way, including the history of the infancy, many parables, numerous passages bearing on the Person of Christ, the Church, the Resurrection, the Second Advent, etc. From this questionable honour of becoming "a place of deposit" for new material, as Dr. Estlin Carpenter calls it,<sup>1</sup> Mark, according to D'Eichthal, was protected by its greater obscurity and inferior authority; hence its modest dimensions and superior reliableness in point of fidelity to actual historic truth.

<sup>1</sup> Les Évangiles.

This theory is plausible, and we are not entitled to say à priori that it has no foundation in fact. Additions to the Gospels might creep in before they became canonical, as they crept in afterwards through the agency of copyists. The sayings about the indestructibility of the law (v. 17-19) and the founding of the Church (xvi. 18, 19) might possibly be examples in point. But possibility is one thing, probability another. To prove diversity of hand or successive deposits of evangelic tradition by men living at different times, and acting in the interest of distinct or even opposing tendencies, it is not enough to point to apparently conflicting elements and exclaim: "Behold a Gospel of contradictions".<sup>2</sup> On this topic I may refer readers to what has been already stated in discussing the subject of the historicity of the Gospels. And I may here add that it would not be difficult to conceive a situation for which the Gospel might have been written by one man, as it now stands. Dr. Weiss, indeed, has successfully done this in his work on the Gospel of Matthew and its parallels in Luke. He conceives the Gospel, substantially as we have it, to have been written shortly after the destruction of Jerusalem and the Jewish State, when the faith of Jewish Christians in the Messiahship of Jesus would be sorely shaken by the events: the promised Messianic Kingdom passing away irretrievably from Israel and taking up its abode among Gentiles. The Gospel that was to meet this situation would have to show that Jesus was indeed the Messianic King, in whose history many prophetic oracles found their fulfilment; that He did His utmost to found the kingdom in Israel, but was frustrated by the unbelief of the people, and especially of its rulers; that, therefore, the kingdom was driven forth from Jewish soil, and was now to be found mainly in the Gentile Church, and there had been left to Israel only an inheritance of woe; that though Jesus had predicted this doom He nevertheless loved His people, had loyally and lovingly sought her good, had spoken with reverence of her God-given law (while treating with disrespect Rabbinical traditions), and honoured it by personal observance. This hypothesis fairly meets the requirements of the case. It covers the phenomena of the Gospel, and it is compatible with unity of plan and authorship.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> The First Three Gospels, p. 370.

<sup>2</sup> Dr. Estlin Carpenter, in the above work, p. 363, remarks: "Truly has the first Gospel been called a 'Gospel of contradictions'".

SECTION II. CHARACTERISTICS.

1. The most outstanding characteristic of the first Gospel is that it paints the life-image of Jesus in prophetic colours. While in Mark Jesus is presented realistically as a man, in Matthew He is presented as the Christ, verified as such by the applicability of many prophetic oracles to the details of His childhood, His public ministry, and His last sufferings.

2. If the realism of Mark makes for the historicity of this Gospel, the prophetic colouring so conspicuous in Matthew need not detract from the historicity of its accounts. This feature may be due in part to the personal idiosyncrasy of the writer and in part to his didactic aim. He may have set himself to verify the thesis, Jesus the Christ, for his own satisfaction, or it may have been necessary that he should do so in order to strengthen the faith of his first readers. In either case the presumption is that the operation he was engaged in consisted in discovering prophetic texts to answer facts ready to his hand, not in first making a collection of texts and then inventing facts corresponding to them. The facts suggested the texts, the texts did not create the facts, though in some instances they might influence the mode of stating facts. In this connection it is important to note that the evangelist applies his prophetic method to the whole of his material, including that which is common to him with Mark. He has his prophetic oracles ready to be attached as labels to events which Mark reports simply as matters of fact. Thus Mark's dry statement, "they went into Capernaum,"<sup>2</sup> referring to Jesus and His followers proceeding northwards from the scene of the baptism, in Matthew's hands assumes the character of a solemn announcement of an epoch-making event, whereby an ancient oracle concerning the appearing of a great light in Galilee of the Gentiles received its fulfilment.<sup>3</sup> Again, Mark's matter-of-fact report of the extensive healing function in Capernaum on the Sabbath evening is in Matthew adorned with a beautiful citation from Isaiah's famous oracle concerning the suffering servant of Jehovah.<sup>1</sup> Once more, to Mark's simple statement that Jesus withdrew Himself to the sea after the collision with the Pharisees occasioned by the healing on a Sabbath of the man with a withered hand, the first evangelist attaches a fine prophetic picture, as if to show readers the true Jesus as opposed to the Jesus of Pharisaic imagination.<sup>2</sup> From these instances we see his method. He is not inventing history, but enriching history with prophetic emblazonments for apologetic purposes, or for increase of edification. Such is the fact, we observe, when we have it in our power to control his statements by comparison with Mark's; such we may assume to be the fact when we have not that in our power, as, e.g., in the narrative relating to the birth and infancy of Jesus, in which prophetic citations are unusually abundant. The question as to the historicity of that narrative has its own peculiar difficulties, into which I do not here enter. The point I wish to make is that the numerous prophetic references cast no additional shadow of doubt on its historicity. Here too the evangelist is simply attaching prophetic oracles to what he regards as historic data. If invention has been at work it has not been in his imagination. This is manifest even from the very weakness of some of the citations, such as "Out of Egypt have I called my Son," "Rachel weeping for her children," and "He shall be called a Nazarene". Who could ever have thought of these unless there had been traditional data accepted by the Christian community (and by the writer of the Gospel) as facts? The last citation is especially far-fetched. It is impossible to say whence it is taken; it could never have entered into the mind of any one unless the fact of the settlement in Nazareth had been there to begin with, creating a desire to find for it also, if at all possible, some prophetic anticipation.

<sup>1</sup> Vide Weiss, Das Matthäus-Evangelium und seine Lucas-parallelēn, p. 39.

<sup>2</sup> Mark i. 21.

<sup>3</sup> Matt. iv. 12-17.

These prophetic passages served their purpose in the apologetic of the apostolic age. For us now their value is not apologetic, except indeed in a way not contemplated by the evangelist. Their occasional weakness as proofs of the Messiahship of Jesus can be utilised in the manner above hinted at in support of the historicity of the evangelic tradition. But the chief permanent value of these citations lies in the light they throw on the evangelist's own conception of Jesus. We see from them that he thought of Jesus as the Light of Galilee, the sympathetic Bearer of humanity's heavy burden, the Beloved of God, the Peacemaker, the Friend of weakness, the Man who had it in Him by gifts and graces to perform a Christ's part for all the world. Truly a noble conception, which lends perennial interest to the texts in which it is embodied.

<sup>1</sup> Matt. viii. 17.

<sup>2</sup> Matt. xii. 15-21. Cf. Mark iii. 7.

3. In the foregoing remarks I have anticipated to a certain extent what relates to the question of didactic aim. That the first Gospel has such an aim is obvious from the careful manner in which the prophetic argument is elaborated. The purpose is to confirm Jewish Christians in the faith that Jesus is the Christ. The purpose is revealed in the very first sentence and in the genealogy to which it forms a preface. "The book of the generation of Jesus Christ, the Son of David, the Son of Abraham." The Son of David first, because on that hangs the Messianic claim; the Son of Abraham likewise, because that makes Him a Jew, a fellow-countryman of those for whose benefit the Gospel is written. The genealogy is the first contribution to the apologetic argument. The logic of it is this: "The Psalms and Prophets predict the coming of a great Messianic King who shall be a descendant of the house of David; this genealogy shows that Jesus possessed that qualification for Messiahship. He is the rod out of the stem of Jesse." Whoever compiled the genealogy did it under the impression that physical descent from David was indispensable to Jesus being the Christ. But it does not follow that the genealogy was manufactured to serve that purpose. The descent from David might be a well-known fact utilised for an apologetic aim. For us, though a fact, it is of no vital consequence. Our faith that Jesus is the Christ does not rest on any such external ground, but on spiritual fitness to be the world's Saviour. We reverse the logic of the Jewish Church. They reasoned: because David's Son, therefore the Christ. We reason: because the Christ, therefore David's Son, at least in spirit.<sup>1</sup>

4. In speaking of the literary characteristics of Matthew it is necessary to keep in mind that some of these may come from the Logia of the apostle Matthew, and that others may be due to the evangelist. Critics ascribe to the apostolic source certain phrases of frequent recurrence, such as καὶ ἰδοὺ, ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὁ πατὴρ ὁ ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς. Among the features of the evangelist's own style they recognise the frequent use of such words as τότε, λέγων, προσελθών, ὄχλοι, ἀποκριθεῖς, ἀναχωρεῖν, λεγόμενος, and such phrases as τί σοι δοκεῖ, συμβούλιον λαμβάνειν, κατ' ὄναρ, ἐν ἐκείνῳ τῷ καιρῷ.<sup>2</sup> By comparison with Mark, the style of this Gospel is smooth and correct.

<sup>1</sup> Vide notes on Matt. i.

<sup>2</sup> Vide Weiss, Matthäus-Evangelium, pp. 23-4.

SECTION III. AUTHOR, DESTINATION, DATE.

1. If the views of modern critics as to the relation of the first Canonical Gospel to the Logia, compiled by the apostle Matthew, be well founded, then that apostle was not its author. Who the evangelist was is unknown. That he was a Jew is highly probable, that he was a Palestinian Jew has been generally assumed; but Weiss calls this in question. That he wrote in Greek is held to be proved by the use which he makes of the Septuagint in his citations of Old Testament prophecy, and by traces of dependence on the Greek Gospel of Mark. But the view that our Greek Gospel of Matthew is a translation by some unknown hand from a book with the same contents in the Hebrew tongue still has its advocates, among whom may be mentioned Schanz, of Tübingen.<sup>1</sup>

2. The destination of the Gospel was in all probability to a community of Jewish Christians, whose faith it was designed to strengthen. How it was fitted to serve this end has been indicated in Section I. § 5.

3. The probable date is shortly after the destruction of the Jewish State. Some things have been supposed to imply a much later date, e.g., the commission to the disciples in chapter xxviii. 18, with its explicit Trinity, its pronounced universalism, and its doctrine of a spiritual presence. On these points the reader is referred to the commentary.

<sup>1</sup> Vide his Commentar über das Evangelium des heiligen Matthäus: Einleitung

CHAPTER IV.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO LUKE.

SECTION I. CONTENTS.

1. Luke's Gospel includes much of the narrative of Mark and large portions of the didactic matter contained in Matthew. There are numerous omissions in both departments, but on the other hand also considerable additions, especially in the didactic element. The third evangelist has greatly enriched the treasure of the parables, for it is in this important division of our Lord's teaching that his peculiar contribution chiefly lies. The amount of new matter suffices to raise the question as to its source. It can hardly be thought that the author of the first Gospel would have omitted so much valuable material, had it lain before his eye in the Logia. The hypothesis of a third source, therefore, readily suggests itself—a collection of reminiscences distinct from Mark and the book of Logia, whence Luke drew such beautiful parables as the Good Samaritan, the Selfish Neighbour and the Unjust Judge, the Prodigal Son, the Unjust Steward, Lazarus and Dives, and the Pharisee and Publican. The chapters on the infancy and on the resurrection, so entirely different from the corresponding chapters in Matthew, might suggest a fourth source, unless we suppose that the third included these.

2. The distribution of the material in this Gospel arrests attention. In the early part of the history, from chapters iv. 31 to vi. 16, the author follows pretty closely in the footsteps of Mark. Then comes in a digression, extending from vi. 17 to viii. 3, containing a version of the Sermon on the Mount, the stories of the Centurion and the Widow of Nain, the Message of the Baptist with relative discourse, and the woman in Simon's house. Thereafter Luke's narrative again flows in Mark's channel from the parable of the Sower onwards to the end of the Galilean ministry, as reported in the second Gospel (Mark iv. 1 to ix. 50. Luke viii. 4 to ix. 50), only that the whole group of incidents contained in Mark vi. 45 to viii. 26 is omitted in Luke. Then at ix. 51 begins another longer digression, extending from that point to xviii. 14, consisting mainly of didactic matter, and containing the larger number of Luke's peculiar contributions to the evangelic tradition. Thereafter our author joins the company of Mark once more, and keeps beside him to the end of the Passion history.<sup>1</sup>

3. This lengthy insertion destroys the sense of progress in the story. The stream widens out into a lake, within which any movement perceptible is rather circular than rectilinear. It is a dogmatic section, and any indications of time and place it contains are of little value for determining sequence or pointing out the successive stages of the journey towards Jerusalem mentioned in ix. 51. It may be affirmed, indeed, that throughout this Gospel the interest in historic sequence or in the causal connection of events is weak. Sometimes, as in the incident of Christ's appearance in the synagogue of Nazareth, the author, consciously and apparently with deliberate intention, departs from the chronological order.<sup>2</sup> Whatever, therefore, he meant by καθῆξῃς in his preface, he cannot have intended to say that he had made it a leading aim to arrange his material as far as possible in the true order of events. Still less can it have been his purpose so to set forth his story that it should appear a historic drama in which all events prepare for and steadily lead up to the final catastrophe. When at ix. 22 we find Jesus announcing for the first time that "the Son of Man must suffer many things," it takes us by surprise. No reason has appeared in the previous narrative why it should come to that. It has indeed been made clear by sundry indications—at chapter v. 21; v. 30, 33; vi. 7-11; vii. 34, 50—that there was not a good understanding between Jesus and the Scribes and Pharisees; but from Luke's narrative by itself we could not have gathered that matters were so serious. Two important omissions and one transposition are largely responsible for this. Luke leaves out the collision between Jesus and the Pharisees in reference to the washing of hands (Mark vii. 1-23. Matt. xv. 1-20), and the demand for a sign (Mark viii. 11. Matt. xvi. 1); and he throws the blasphemous insinuation of a league with Beelzebub into chapter xi., beyond the point at which he introduces the first announcement of the Passion. Therefore, the necessity (δεῖ) of that tragic issue is not apparent in the sense that it is the inevitable result of causes which have been shown to be in operation. For Luke the δεῖ refers exclusively to the prophetic oracles which predicted Messiah's sufferings. Jesus must die if these oracles are to be fulfilled. And for him it is a matter of course, and so he treats it in his narrative. The announcement of the Passion is not brought in as a new departure in Christ's communication with His disciples, as in the companion narratives, with indication of the place and solemn introductory phrase: "He began to teach them". It is reported in a quite casual way, as if it possessed no particular importance. In connection with this it may be noted that Luke gives a very defective report of those words of our Lord concerning His death which may be said to contain the germs of a theory as to its significance. For particulars readers are referred to the notes.

<sup>1</sup> In the main, that is to say; for Luke's Passion history contains a number of peculiar elements.

<sup>2</sup> Chap. iv. 16-30; vide v. 23.

SECTION II. CHARACTERISTICS.

1. One very marked feature of this Gospel is what, for want of a better word, may be called the idealisation of the characters of Jesus and the disciples. These are contemplated not in the light of memory, as in Mark, but through the brightly coloured medium of faith. The evangelist does not forget that the Personages of whom he writes are now the Risen Lord, and the Apostles of the Church. Jesus appears with an aureole round His head, and the faults of the disciples are very tenderly handled. The truth of this statement can be verified only by a detailed study of the Gospel, and readers will find indications of proof at appropriate places in the notes. It applies equally to the Master and to His disciples, though Von Soden, in the article already referred to, states that the tendency in question appears mainly in the presentation of the conduct of the disciples; drawing from the supposed fact the precarious inference that the Apostolic Church cared little or nothing for the earthly history of Jesus.<sup>1</sup> The delicate treatment of the disciples is certainly very apparent. Luke, as Schanz remarks, ever spares the twelve; especially Peter. The stern word, "Get thee behind me," is not in this Gospel. The narrative of the denial is an interesting subject of study in this connection. But the whole body of the disciples are treated with equal consideration. Their faults—ignorance, weak faith, mutual rivalries—are acknowledged, yet touched with sparing hand. Some narratives in which these faults appear very obtrusively, e.g., the conversation about the leaven of the Pharisees, the ambitious request of James and John, and the anointing in Bethany, are omitted, as is also the flight of all the disciples at the apprehension of their Master. The weak faith of the disciples is very mildly characterised. "Where is your faith?" asks Jesus in the storm on the lake, in Luke's version of the story, instead of uttering the reproachful word: "Why are ye cowardly? Have ye not yet faith?" Their failure to watch in the garden of Gethsemane is apologetically described as sleeping for sorrow. In his portraiture of the Lord Jesus the evangelist gives prominence to the attributes of power, benevolence, and saintliness. The pictorial effect is brought out by omission, emphasis, and understatement. Among the omissions are the realistic word about that which defileth, about "dogs" in the story of the woman of Canaan which is wholly wanting, and the awful cry on the Cross: "My God, my God!" Among the things emphasised are those features in acts of healing which show the greatness of Christ's might and of the benefit conferred. Peter's mother-in-law suffers from a great fever; and the leper is full of leprosy. The hand restored on the Sabbath is the right hand, the centurion's servant is one dear to him, the son of the widow of Nain is an only son, the daughter of Jairus an only daughter, the epileptic boy at the hill of Transfiguration an only child. The holiness of Jesus is made conspicuous by the prominence given to prayer in connection with critical occasions, and by understatement where the incidents related might to ill-instructed minds seem to compromise that essential characteristic. Luke's narratives of the cleansing of the temple and the agony in Gethsemane may be referred to as striking illustrative instances of the latter. To the same category may be referred the treatment by Luke of the anti-Pharisaic element in Christ's teaching. Much is omitted, and what is retained is softened by being given, much of it, not as spoken about, but as spoken to, Pharisees by Jesus as a guest in their houses.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Vide Theologische Abhandlungen, p. 138.

2. The influence of the Christian consciousness of the time in which he wrote is traceable not only in Luke's presentation of the characters of Jesus and His disciples, but in his account of Christ's teaching. He seems to have in view throughout the use of the Lord's words for present guidance. Weizsäcker has endeavoured to analyse the didactic element in the third Gospel into doctrinal pieces bearing on definite religious questions and interests of the primitive Church.<sup>1</sup> This may be carried too far, but the idea is not altogether baseless. In this Gospel the so-called "Sermon on the Mount" is really a Sermon (Kerygma not Didache) delivered to a Christian congregation with all the local and temporary matter eliminated and only the universal and perennial retained. The same adaptation to present and general use is apparent in the words, καθ' ἡμέραν, added to the law of cross-bearing (ix. 23).

<sup>1</sup> Luke vii. 36-50; xi. 37-52; xiv. 1-24.

3. The question may be asked whether this adaptation of the matter of the evangelic tradition to present conceptions and needs is to be set down to the account of Luke as editor, or is to be regarded as already existing in the documents he used. On this point there may be room for difference of opinion. J. Weiss in his commentary on Luke (Meyer, eighth edition) inclines to the latter alternative. Thus, in reference to Luke's mild version of Peter's denial, he remarks: "A monstrous minimising of the offence if Luke had Mark's account before him"; and he accordingly thinks he had not, but used instead a Jewish Christian source, giving a mitigated account of Peter's sin. Of such a source he finds traces throughout Luke's Gospel, following in the footsteps of Dr. Paul Feine, who had previously endeavoured to establish the existence of a precanonical Luke, i.e., a first attempt to work up into a single volume the evangelic traditions in Mark, the Logia, and other sources, after the manner of the third Gospel.<sup>2</sup> This may be a perfectly legitimate hypothesis for solving certain literary problems connected with this Gospel, and the argument by which Feine seeks to establish it is entitled on its merits to serious consideration. But I hardly think it suffices to account for all the traces of editorial discretion in Luke's Gospel. It does not matter what documents Luke used; he exercised his own judgment in using them. If he did not, his relation to the work of redacting the memoirs of Jesus becomes so colourless that one fails to see what occasion there was for that imposing prefatory announcement in the opening sentence. A primitive Luke was ready to his hand, and he did not even contribute to it the colour of his own religious personality. Intention, bias, purpose to utilise the material for edification of believers were all there before he began. He did what? Added, perhaps, a few anecdotes and sayings gleaned from other sources, oral or written!

<sup>1</sup> Vide his Untersuchungen über die Evangelische Geschichte, and his Apostolic Age, vol. ii.

<sup>2</sup> Eine vorkanonische Überlieferung des Lukas in Evangelium und Apostelgeschichte, 1891.

4. Notwithstanding this pervading regard to what may be comprehensively called edification, the author of the third Gospel cannot justly be charged with indifference to historic truth. He professes in his preface to have in view acribēia, and the profession is to be taken in earnest. But he is writing not as a mere chronicler, but as one seeking to promote the religious welfare of those for whom he writes, and so must strive to combine accuracy, fidelity to fact, with practical utility. The task is a delicate one, and execution without error of judgment not easy. Even where mistakes are made, they are not to be confounded with bad faith. Nor should it be forgotten that Luke's peculiarities can be utilised for the apologetic purpose of establishing the general credibility of the evangelic tradition. Luke omits much. But it does not follow that he did not know. He may omit intentionally what he knows but does not care to report. Luke often understates. What a writer tones down he is tempted to omit. By simply understating, instead of omitting, he becomes a reluctant and therefore reliable witness to the historicity of the matter so dealt with. Luke often states strongly. Either he adds particulars from fuller information or he exaggerates for a purpose. Even in the latter case he witnesses to the truth of the basal narrative. A writer who has ideas to embody is tempted to invent when he cannot find what will suit his purpose. Luke did not invent but at most touched up stories given to his hand in trustworthy traditions.

5. The author of the third Gospel avowedly had a didactic aim. He wrote, so it appears from the preface, to confirm in the faith a friend called "most excellent (κράτιστε) Theophilus," expecting probably that the book would ultimately be useful for a wider circle. But there is no trace of a dominant theological or controversial aim. The writer, e.g., is not a Paulinist in the controversial sense of the word. He is doubtless in sympathy with Christian universalism, as appears from his finishing the quotation from Isaiah beginning with, "The voice of one crying in the wilderness," and ending with, "All flesh shall see the salvation of God" (iii. 6). Yet, in other places, e.g., in the history of the infancy, the salvation brought by Jesus is conceived of as belonging to Israel, the chosen people (τῷ λαῷ αὐτοῦ, i. 68; cf. ii. 10; vii. 16; xiii. 16; xix. 9). The author is not even Paulinist in a theological sense, as the absence from his pages of most of the words of Jesus bearing on a theory of atonement, already remarked on, sufficiently proves. He appears to be an eclectic, rather than a man whose mind is dominated by a great ruling idea. Distinct, if not conflicting, tendencies or religious types find house-room in his pages: Pauline universalism, Jewish particularism, Ebionitic social ideals, the blessedness of poverty, the praise of almsgiving. Geniality, kindness of temper, is the personal characteristic of the evangelist. And if there is one thing more than another he desires to inculcate on his readers it is the graciousness of Christ. "Words of grace" (iv. 22) is his comprehensive title for the utterances of Jesus, and his aim from first to last is to show the Saviour as the friend of the sinful and the social outcast, and even of those who suffer justly for their crimes (vii. 36-50; xix. 1-10; xxiii. 39-43).

6. The literary aspect of this Gospel is a complex phenomenon. At times, especially in the preface, one gets the impression of a writer having at his command a knowledge of Greek possible only for one to whom it was his native tongue: an expert at once in the vocabulary and the grammatical structure of that language. But far oftener the impression is that of a Jew thinking in Hebrew and reflecting Hebrew idiom in phrase and construction. Hebraisms abound, especially in the first two chapters. Two explanations are possible: That the author was really a Jew, that his natural style was Hebrew-Greek, in which case it would have to be shown that the preface was no such marvellous piece of classicism after all; or that he was a Gentile well versed in Greek, but somewhat slavish in his copious use of Jewish-Christian sources, such as the primitive Luke for which Feine contends.

SECTION III. AUTHOR, DESTINATION, DATE.

1. The author of the third Gospel was also the author of the Acts of the Apostles, as appears in chap. i. 1 of the latter work, where the name of Theophilus recurs. Neither book bears the name of the writer, but uniform ancient tradition ascribes it to Luke, the companion of Paul, and by occupation a physician (Col. iv. 11). From the preface to the Gospel we gather that he had no personal knowledge of Jesus, but was entirely dependent on oral and written tradition.

2. From the prefaces of the Gospel and the book of Acts we learn that the author wrote for the immediate benefit of a single individual, apparently a man of rank, say a Roman knight. It is not necessary to infer that a larger circle of readers was not contemplated either by the writer or by the first recipient of his work.

3. The date cannot be definitely fixed. Opinion ranges from A.D. 63 to the early years of the second century. As late a date as say A.D. 90 is compatible with the writer being, in his younger years, a companion of St. Paul in his later missionary movements. The still later date of A.D. 100 or 105 would be required if it were certain, which it is not, that the writer used the Antiquities of Josephus, which were published about the year 93-94. Dr. Sanday, in his work entitled Inspiration, expresses the view that Acts was written about A.D. 80, and the Gospel some time in the five years preceding.

CHAPTER V.

THE TEXT, CRITICAL LANDMARKS, CRITICAL TESTS OF READINGS.

SECTION I. THE TEXT.

The Greek text given in this work is that known as the Textus Receptus, on which the Authorised Version of the New Testament is based. Representing the Greek text as known to Erasmus in the sixteenth century, and associated with the names of two famous printers, Stephen and Elzevir, whose editions (Stephen's 3rd, 1550, Elzevir's 2nd, 1633) were published when the apparatus at command for fixing the true text was scanty, and when the science of textual criticism was unborn, it may seem to be entirely out of date. But it is an important historical monument, and it is the Greek original answering to the English Testament still largely in use in public worship and in private reading. Moreover, while the experts in modern criticism have done much to provide a purer text, their judgments in many cases do not accord, and their results cannot be regarded as final. It is certain, however, that the texts prepared by such scholars as Tischendorf, Tregelles, Westcott and Hort, and the company of experts to whom we are indebted for the Revised Version, are incomparably superior to that of Stephen or of Elzevir, and that they must be taken into account by every competent commentator. That means that to the text must be annexed critical notes showing all important various readings, with some indication of the documentary authority in their favour, and of the value attached thereto by celebrated editors. This accordingly has been done, very imperfectly of course, still it is hoped sufficiently for practical purposes. Variations not affecting the sense, but merely the spelling or grammatical forms of words, have been for the most part disregarded. There are many variations in the spelling of proper names, of which the following are samples:—

Ναζαρέτ	Ναζαρέθ	Γεθσημανή	Γεθσημανεί
Ματθαῖος	Μαθθαῖος	Ἰωάννης	Ἰωάνης
Δαβίδ	Δαυείδ	Ἰεριχώ	Ἰερευχῶ
Ἡλίας	Ἡλείας	Μωσῆς	Μουσσῆς
Καπερναοῦμ	Καφαρναοῦμ	Πιλάτος	Πειλάτος

Among other insignificant variations may be mentioned the presence or absence of ν final in verbs (ἔλεγε, ἔλεγεν); the omission or insertion of μ (λήψομαι, λήμφομαι); the assimilation or non-assimilation of έν and σόν in compound verbs (συζητεῖν, συνζητεῖν; ἐκκακεῖν, ἐνκακεῖν); the doubling of μ, ν, ρ or the reverse (μαμμωνᾶς, μαμωνᾶς; γέννημα, γένημα; ἐπιρράπτει, ἐπιράπτει); the conjunction or disjunction of syllables (οὐκ ἔτι, οὐκέτι); οὔτως for οὔτω; the aorist forms εἶπον, ἦλθον, etc., replaced by forms in α (εἶπαν, ἦλθαν); single or double augment in certain verbs (ἐδυνάμην, ἠδυνάμην; ἔμελλον, ἤμελλον).

SECTION II. CRITICAL LANDMARKS.

1. Up till 1831 editors of the New Testament in Greek had been content to follow in the wake of the Textus Receptus, timidly adding notes indicating good readings which they had discovered in the documents accessible to them in their time. Lachmann in that year inaugurated a new critical era by printing a text constructed directly from ancient documents without the intervention of any printed edition. It is not given to pioneers to finish the work they begin, and Lachmann's effort judged by present-day tests was far from perfect. "This great advance was marred by too narrow a selection of documents to be taken into account, and too artificially rigid an employment of them, and also by too little care in obtaining precise knowledge of some of their texts" (Westcott and Hort's New Testament, Introduction, p. 13). Tischendorf in Germany and Tregelles in England worthily followed up Lachmann's efforts, and made important contributions towards the ascertainment of the true text by adopting as their main guides the most ancient MSS., in place of the later documents which had formed the basis of the early printed editions. The critical editions of the Greek New Testament by these scholars appeared about the same time; Tischendorf's eighth edition (the important one which supersedes the earlier) bearing the date 1869, and the work of Tregelles being published in 1870. The characteristic feature of Tischendorf's edition is the predominant importance attached to the great Codex Sinaiticus (S), with the discovery of which his name is connected.

The defect common to it with the edition of Tregelles is failure to deal on any clear principle with the numerous instances in which the ancient texts on which they placed their reliance do not agree. All goes smoothly when Codex Sinaiticus and Codex Vaticanus (B) and Codex Bezae (D) and the most ancient versions bear the same testimony; but what is to be done when the trusted guides follow divergent paths?

2. It is by the answer which they have given to this question that Westcott and Hort have made an epoch-making contribution to the science of Biblical Criticism in the first volume of their monumental work, The New Testament in the Original Greek, published in 1881. Following up hints thrown out by earlier investigators, like Bengel and Griesbach, they discriminated three types of text prevalent in ancient times, before the period of eclectic revision which fixed to a great extent the character of the text in actual use throughout the Middle Ages and on to the dawn of modern criticism. To these types they gave the names Western, Alexandrian, and Neutral. The last epithet is to be understood only when viewed in relation to the other two. The Western and Alexandrian types of text had very well-marked characteristics. The Western was paraphrastic, the Alexandrian literary. The tendency of the one was to alter the primitive text by explanatory additions with a view to edification, made by men who combined to a certain extent the functions of copyist and commentator. The tendency of the other was to improve the text from a literary point of view by scholarly refinements. The neutral text is neutral in the sense of avoiding both these tendencies and aiming steadily at the faithful reproduction of the exemplar assumed to approach in its text as near as possible to the autographs. A text adhering honestly to this programme ought to be the most reliable guide to the original Greek Testament as it proceeded from the hands of the writers, making due allowance for errors in the exemplar and for mistakes in transcription. The result of investigation has been to justify this expectation.

3. The main representative of the Western text is Codex Bezae (D), containing the Gospels and the Acts. Of the Alexandrian text there is no pure example. This divergent stream broke up into rills, and lost itself as a mere element in mixed texts, like those of Codex Sinaiticus and Codex Ephraemi (C). It is important to note by the way that these names do not denote local prevalence. The Western text was not merely Western. This divergent stream overflowed its banks and spread itself widely over the Church, reaching even the East. Hence traces of its influence are to be found not merely in the old Latin versions, but also in the Syriac versions, e.g., in what is called the Curetonian Syriac, and in the recently discovered Syriac version of the Four Gospels, which may be distinguished as the Sinaitic Syriac. Of the neutral text, the great, conspicuous, honourable monument is Codex Vaticanus (B), containing the Gospels, Acts, and Catholic epistles, and the epistles of St. Paul, as far as Heb. ix. 14; and being, especially in the Gospels, a nearly pure reproduction of a text uninfluenced by the tendencies of the Western and Alexandrian texts respectively. To this MS., belonging like Codex Sinaiticus to the fourth century, Westcott and Hort, after applying to it all available tests, assign the honour of being on the whole the nearest approach to the original verity in existence, always worthy of respect and often deserving to be followed when it stands alone against all comers. A very important conclusion if it can be sustained.

4. In recent years a certain reaction against the critical results of Westcott and Hort has been manifesting itself to the effect of imputing to them an overweening estimate of Codex B, analogous to that of Tischendorf for Codex  $\aleph$ . Some scholars, such as Resch in Germany and Ramsay in this country, are disposed to insist that more value should be set on Codex D; the former finding in it the principal witness for the text of the Gospels in their precanonical stage, the assumption being that when the four-Gospel canon was constructed the text underwent a certain amount of revision. The real worth of this Codex is one of the unsettled questions of New Testament textual criticism. Interesting contributions have been made to the discussion of the question, such as those of J. Rendel Harris, and more may be expected.

SECTION III. CRITICAL TESTS OF READINGS.

1. The fixation of the true text is not a simple matter like that of following a single document, however trustworthy, like Codex B. Every editor may have his bias in favour of this or that MS., but all editors recognise the obligation to take into account all available sources of evidence—not merely the great uncial MSS. of ancient dates, but the cursives of later centuries, and, besides Greek MSS. of both kinds containing the whole or a part of the New Testament, ancient versions, Latin, Syriac, Egyptian, etc., and quotations in the early Fathers. The evidence when fully adduced is a formidable affair, demanding much space for its exhibition

(witness Tischendorf's eighth edition in two large octavos), and the knowledge of an expert for its appreciation. In such a work as the present the space cannot be afforded nor can the knowledge be expected even in the author, not to say in his readers. Full knowledge of the critical data through first-hand studies belongs to specialists only, who have made the matter the subject of lifelong labour. All one can do is to utilise intelligently their results. But because all cannot be specialists it is not profitless to have a jurymen's acquaintance with the relative facts. It is the aim of the critical notes placed beneath the Greek text to aid readers to the attainment of such an acquaintance, and to help them to form an intelligent opinion as to the claims of rival readings to represent the true text. Fortunately, this can be done without adducing a very long array of witnesses.

2. For it turns out that there are certain groups of witnesses which often go together, and whose joint testimony is very weighty. Westcott and Hort have carefully specified these. They may here be indicated:—

For the Gospels the most important and authoritative group is ḤBCDL 33.

In this group L and 33 have hitherto not been referred to. L (Codex Regius), though belonging to the eighth century, represents an ancient text, and is often in agreement with Ḥ and B. 33 belongs to the cursive class (which are indicated by figures), but is a highly valuable Codex, though, like all cursives, of late date. In his Prolegomena to Tischendorf's New Testament, Dr. Caspar René Gregory quotes (p. 469) with approval the opinion of Eichhorn that this is the "queen of the cursives". In the above group, it will be noticed, representatives of the different ancient types—Western, Alexandrian, Neutral (D, Ḥ, C, B)—are united. When they agree the presumption that we have the true text is very strong.

When D falls out we have still a highly valuable group in ḤBCL 33.

When DC and 33 drop out there remains a very trustworthy combination in ḤBL.

There are, besides these, several binary combinations of great importance. The following is the list given by Westcott and Hort for the Gospels:—

BL, BC, BT, BΞ, BD, AB, BZ, B 33, and for St. Mark BA.

In these combinations some new documents make their appearance.

T stands for the Greek text of the Græco-Thebaic fragments of St. Luke and St. John (century v., ancient and non-Western).

Ξ = fragments of St. Luke (cent. viii., comparatively pure, though showing mixture).

A is the well-known Codex Alexandrinus of the fifth century, a chief representative of the "Syrian" text, that is, the revised text formed by judicious eclectic use of all existing texts, and meant to be the authoritative New Testament. This Codex contains nearly the whole New Testament except Matthew as far as chapter xxv. 5. For the Gospels it is of no independent value as a witness to the true text, but its agreements with B are important.

Δ = Codex Sangallensis, a Graeco-Latin MS. of the tenth century, and having many ancient readings, especially in Mark.

To these authorities has to be added, as containing ancient readings, and often agreeing with the best MSS., Codex Purpureus Rossanensis (Σ), published in 1883, edited by Oscar Von Gebhardt; of the sixth century, containing Matthew and Mark in full. Due note has been taken of the readings of this MS.

The foregoing represent the chief authorities referred to in the critical notes. In these notes I have not uniformly indicated my personal opinion. But in the commentary I have always adopted as the subject of remark the most probable reading. Reference to modern editors has been chiefly restricted to Tischendorf, and Westcott and Hort, meaning thereby no depreciation of the work done by others, but simply recognising these as the most important.

MSS. were corrected from time to time. Corrected copies are referred to by critics by letters or figures: thus, M<sup>a</sup> (4th cent.), M<sup>b</sup> (6th cent.), M<sup>c</sup> (7th cent.), B<sup>2</sup> (4th cent.), B<sup>3</sup> (10th cent.).

Besides the above-named documents the following uncials are occasionally referred to in the critical notes:—

- E cod. Basiliensis. 8th century (Gospels nearly entire).
- G cod. Seidelii. 9th or 10th century (Gospels defective).
- I cod. palimps. Petropolitanus. 5th and 6th centuries (fragments of Gospels).
- K cod. Cyprius. 9th century (Gospels complete).
- M cod. De Camps, Paris. 9th century (Gospels complete).
- N cod. Purpureus. 6th century (fragments of all the Gospels).
- P cod. Guelpherbytanus I. 6th century (fragments of all the Gospels).
- Q cod. Guelpherbytanus II. 5th century (fragments from Luke and John).
- R cod. Nitriensis, London. 6th century (fragments of Luke).
- S cod. Vaticanus 354. 10th century (four Gospels complete).
- U cod. Nanianus Venetus. 9th or 10th century (Gospels entire).
- V cod. Mosquensis. 9th century (contains Matt. and Mk., and Lk. nearly complete).
- X cod. Monacensis. 9th or 10th century (fragments of all the Gospels).
- Z cod. Dublinensis. 6th century (fragments of Matthew).
- Γ cod. Oxoniensis et Petropolitanus. 10th century (four Gospels, Matthew and Mark defective).
- Λ cod. Oxoniensis Tisch. 9th century (Luke and John entire).
- Π cod. Petropolitanus Tisch. 9th century (Gospels nearly complete).
- Φ cod. Eeratinus. 5th century (Matthew and Mark with lacunae).

CHAPTER VI.

LITERATURE.

The following list of works includes only those chiefly consulted. Many others are occasionally referred to in the notes.

1. To the pre-Reformation period belong—

- ORIGEN'S Commentary on Matthew. Books x.-xvii. in Greek (Matt. xiii. 36—xxii. 33), the remainder in a Latin translation (allegorical method of interpretation).
- CHRYSOSTOM'S Homilies on Matthew. The Greek text separately edited in three vols. by Dr. Field (well worth perusal).
- JEROME'S Commentarius in Matthaeum (a hasty performance, but worth consulting).
- AUGUSTINE. De Sermone Domini in monte.
- THEOPHYLACTUS (12th century, Archbishop in Bulgaria). Commentarii in quatuor Evangelistas, Graece.
- EUTHYMIUS ZIGABENUS (Greek monk, 12th century). Commentarius in quatuor Evangelia, Graece et Latine. Ed. C. F. Matthaei, 1792 (a choice work).

2. From the sixteenth century downwards—

- CALVIN. Commentarii in Harmoniam ex Evangelistis tribus . . . compositam.
- BEZA. Annotationes in Novum Testamentum. 1556.
- MALDONATUS. Commentarii in quatuor Evangelistas (Catholic). 1596.
- PRICEI (Price). Commentarii in varios N. T. libros (including Matthew and Luke; philological, with classical examples, good). 1660.
- GROTIUS. Annotationes in N. T. (erudite and still worth consulting). 1644.
- LIGHTFOOT. Horae Hebraicae et Talmudicae. 1644.
- HEINSIUS. Sacrarum exercitationum ad N. T. libri xx. 1665.
- RAPHEL. Annotationes Philologicae in N. T., ex Xenophonte, Polybio, Arriano et Herodoto. 1747.
- OLEARIUS. Observationes sacrae ad Evangelium Matthaei. 1713.
- WOLF. Curae philologicae et criticae in N. T. Five vols. 1741.
- SCHÖTTGEN. Horae Hebraicae et Talmudicae in N. T. 1733.
- WETSTEIN. Novum Testamentum Graecum (full of classic citations). 1751.
- BENGEL. Gnomon Novi Testamenti (unique). 1734.
- PALAIRET (French pastor at London, † 1765). Observationes philologico-criticae in sacros N. T. libros. 1752.

- KYPKE. Observationes sacrae in N. T. libros. 1755.
- ELSNER. Observationes sacrae in N. T. libros (the three last named, like Pricaeus, abound in classic examples). 1767.
- LOESNER. Observationes ad N. T. e Philone Alexandrino (of the same class as Raphael). 1777.
- KUINOEL. Commentarius in libros N. T. historicos. 1807.
- FRITZSCHE. Evangelium Matthaei recensuit. 1826.
- FRITZSCHE. Evangelium Marci recensuit (both philological). 1830.
- DE WETTE. Kurzgefasstes exegetisches Handbuch zum N. T. 1836-48.
- BORNEMANN. Scholiae in Lucae Evangelium. 1830.
- ALFORD. The Greek Testament. Four vols. 1849-61.
- FIELD. Otium Norvicense. 1864.
- BLEEK. Synoptische Erklärung der drei ersten Evangelien. 1862.
- MEYER. Commentary on the New Testament. Sixth edition (T. & T. Clark).
- MEYER. Eighth edition by Dr. Bernhard Weiss (Matthew and Mark, largely Weiss). 1890-92.
- MEYER. Eighth edition by J. Weiss (son of Bernhard Weiss; Luke, also largely the editor's work). 1892.
- WEISS. Das Marcusevangelium und seine synoptischen Parallelen (a contribution to comparative exegesis in the interest of his critical views on the synoptical problem). 1872.
- WEISS. Das Matthäusevangelium und seine Lucas-parallelen (a work of similar character). 1876.
- LUTTEROTH. Essai d'Interprétation de quelques parties de l'Évangile selon Saint Matthieu. 1864-76.
- SCHANZ. Commentar über das Evangelium des heiligen Matthäus. 1879.
- SCHANZ. Commentar über das Evangelium des heiligen Marcus. 1881.
- SCHANZ. Commentar über das Evangelium des heiligen Lucas (these three commentaries by Schanz, a Catholic theologian, are good in all respects, specially valuable for patristic references). 1883.
- GODET. Commentaire sur l'Évangile de Saint Luc. 3<sup>me</sup> edition. 1888-89.
- HAHN. Das Evangelium des Lucas. Two vols. 1892-94.
- HOLTZMANN. Die Synoptiker in Hand-Commentar zum Neuen Testament (advanced but valuable). 1892.
- The Cambridge Greek Testament for Schools and Colleges; Matthew, Mark, and Luke.* 1891-93.

The well-known lexical and grammatical helps, including Grimm, Cremer, Winer, and Buttman, have been consulted. Frequent reference has been made to Burton's Syntax of the Moods and Tenses in New Testament (T. & T. Clark, 1894), both because of its excellence and its accessibility to students.

A new edition of Winer's Grammatik (the eighth) by Schmiedel is in course of publication; also of Kühner by Blass.

In the notes, the matter common to the three Gospels is most fully treated in Matthew, the notes in the other two Gospels being at these points supplementary and comparative.

The marginal references to passages of Scripture are simply supplementary to those in the notes.

It is hoped that most abbreviations used will need no special explanation, but the following table may be helpful:—

- Mt. = Matthew.
 Mk. = Mark.
 Lk. = Luke.
 O. T. = Old Testament
 N. T. = New Testament.
 Sept. = Septuagint.
 A. V. = Authorised Version.
 R. V. = Revised Version.
 C. N. T. = Cambridge New Testament.
 Tisch. = Tischendorf.
 Treg. = Tregelles.
 W. H. = Westcott and Hort.
 Ws. = Weiss (Dr. Bernhard).
 Egypt. = Egyptian versions (viz., the two following).
 Cop. = Coptic (called Memphitic by W. H.).
 Sah. = Sahidic (called Thebaic by W. H.).
 Syrr. = Syriac versions.
 Pesh. = Peshito (= Syrian Vulgate).
 Syr. Cur. = Curetonian Syriac. (For Greek equivalent vide Baethgen's Evangelienfragmente.)
 Syr. Sin. = Sinaitic Syriac (recently discovered).
 Latt. = Latin versions.
 Vulg. = Vulgate (Jerome's revision of old Latin version).
 Vet. Lat. = Vetus Latina (Old Latin, referred to also as It. = Itala).
 The codices of the old Latin are distinguished by the letters a, b, c, etc.
 Minusc. = Minusculi (Codices), another name for cursives.

ΤΟ ΚΑΤΑ ΜΑΤΘΑΙΟΝ

ΑΙΟΝ ΕΥΑΓΓΕΛΙΟΝ.<sup>1</sup>

I. I. *ΒΙΒΛΟΣ ὁ γενέσεως ἸΗΣΟΥ Χριστοῦ, *υἱοῦ Δαβίδ,<sup>2</sup> υἱοῦ<sup>a</sup> Gen. ii. 4.
 Ἀβραάμ. 2. Ἀβραάμ ἐγέννησε τὸν Ἰσαάκ· Ἰσαάκ δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Mk. xii. 26.
 Lk. iii. 4;
 xx. 42.
 b ver. 18.
 Gen. xxxi. 13; xxxii. 9. Lk. i. 14. Jas. i. 23; iii. 6. c xii. 23; xxi. 9; xxii. 42.

<sup>1</sup> The title in T.R. (as above) is late. NB have simply Κατὰ Ματθαῖον. Other expanded forms occur.

<sup>2</sup> Δαβίδ is found only in minusc. NB have Δαυειδ. This is one of several variations in spelling occurring in the genealogy, among which may be named βοοῦζ (ver. 5) = βοες in W.H.; Ωβηδ (ver. 5) = Ιωβηδ, W.H.; Ματθαν (ver. 15) = Μαθθαν, W.H. For a list of such variations in the spelling of names in the three first Gospels vide p. 53.

THE TITLE. The use of the word εὐ-αγγέλιον in the sense of a book may be as old as the Teaching of the twelve Apostles (Didache, 8, 11, 15. Vide Sanday, Bampton Lectures, 1893, p. 317, n. 1). The word passed through three stages in the history of its use. First, in the older Greek authors (Hom., Od. ξ, 152, 166), a reward for bringing good tidings; also a thank-offering for good tidings brought (Arist., Eg. 656). Next, in later Greek, the good tidings itself (2 Sam. xviii. 20, 22, 25, in Sept. In 2 Sam. iv. 10, εὐ-αγγέλια occurs in the earliest sense). This sense pervades the N. T. in reference to the good news of God, 'the message of salvation. Finally, it came very naturally to denote the books in which the Gospel of Jesus was presented in historic form, as in the Didache and in Justin M., Apol. i. 66, Dial. con. Tryph. 100. In the titles of the Gospels the word retains its second sense, while suggesting the third. εὐαγγ. κατὰ M. means the good news as reduced to writing by M. κατὰ is not = of, nor κατὰ Ματθαίου = Ματθαίου, as if the sense were: The book called a "Gospel" written by Matthew. (Vide Fritzsche against this the older view, supported by Kuinoel.)

CHAPTER I. THE GENEALOGY AND BIRTH OF JESUS.—The genealogy may readily appear to us a most ungenial beginning of the Gospel. A dry list of names! It is the tribute which the Gospel pays to the spirit of Judaism. The Jews set much store by genealogies, and to Jewish Christians the Messiahship of Jesus depended on its being proved that He was a descendant of David. But the matter can hardly be so vital as that. We may distinguish between the question of fact and the question of faith. It may be that Jesus was really descended from David—many things point that way; but even if He were not He might still be the Christ, the fulfiller of O. T. ideals, the bringer-in of the highest good, if He possessed the proper spiritual qualifications. What although the Christ were not David's son in the physical sense? He was a priest after the order of Melchisedec, though ἀγενεαλόγητος; why not Messiah under the same conditions? He might still be a son of David in the sense in which John the Baptist was Elijah—in spirit and power, realising the ideal of the hero king. The kingdom of prophecy came only in a spiritual sense, why not also the king? The two hang together. Paul was not an apostle in the legitimist sense, not one of the men who had been with Jesus; yet he was a very real apostle.

Ἰακώβ. Ἰακώβ δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Ἰούδαν καὶ τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς αὐτοῦ.
 d similar 3. Ἰουδίας δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Φαρέσ καὶ τὸν Ζαρά ἄκ τῆς Θάμαρ.
 Gal. iv. 4. Φαρέσ δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Ἑσρώμ· Ἑσρώμ δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Ἀράμ.
 22, 23.

So might Jesus be a Christ, though not descended from David. St. Paul writes (Gal. iii. 29): "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed". So might we say: If Jesus was fit to be the Christ in point of spiritual equipment, then was He of the seed of David. There is no clear evidence in the Gospels that Jesus Himself set value on Davidic descent; there are some things that seem to point the other way: e.g., the question, "Who is my mother?" (Matt. xii. 48; Mk. iii. 33), and the other, "What think ye of the Christ, whose son is He?" (Matt. xxii. 42, et par.). There is reason to believe that, like St. Paul, He would argue from the spiritual to the genealogical, not vice versa: not Christ because from David, but from David, at least ideally, because Christ on other higher grounds.

Ver. 1. βίβλος γενέσεως κ.τ.λ. How much does this heading cover: the whole Gospel, the two first chapters, the whole of the first chapter, or only i. 1-17? All these views have been held. The first by Euthy. Zigab., who argued: the birth of the God-man was the important point, and involved all the rest; therefore the title covers the whole history named from the most important part (ἀπὸ τοῦ κυριωτέρου μέρους). Some moderns (Ebrard, Keil, etc.) have defended the view on the ground that the corresponding title in O. T. (Gen. vi. 9; xi. 27, etc.) denotes not merely a genealogical list, but a history of the persons whose genealogy is given. Thus the expression is taken to mean a book on the life of Christ (liber de vita Christi, Maldon.). Against the second view and the third Weiss-Meyer remarks that at i. 18 a new beginning is made, while ii. 1 runs on as if continuing the same story. The most probable and most generally accepted opinion is that of Calvin, Beza, and Grotius that the expression applies only to i. 1-17. (Non est haec inscriptio totius libri, sed particulae primae quae velut extra corpus historiae prominet. Grotius.)

Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ. Christ here is not an appellative but a proper name, in accordance with the usage of the Apostolic age. In the body of the evangelistic history the word is not thus used; only in the introductory parts. (Vide Mk. i. 1; John i. 17.)

Ἰουδ Δ., Ἰουδ A. Of David first, because with his name was associated the more specific promise of a Messianic king; of Abraham also, because he was the patriarch of the race and first recipient of the promise. The genealogy goes no further back, because the Gospel is written for the Jews. Euthy. Zig. suggests that David is placed first because he was the better known, as the less remote, as a great prophet and a renowned king. (ἀπὸ τοῦ γνωριμωτέρου μᾶλλον ἀρξάμενος, ἐπὶ τὸν παλαιότερον ἀνήλθεν.) The word Ἰουδ in both cases applies to Christ. It can refer grammatically to David, as many take it, but the other reference is demanded by the fact that ver. 1 forms the superscription of the following genealogy. So Weiss-Meyer.

Vv. 2-16. The genealogy divides into three parts: from Abraham to David (vv. 2-6a); from David to the captivity (vv. 6b-11); from the captivity to Christ. On closer inspection it turns out to be not so dry as it at first appeared. There are touches here and there which import into it an ethical significance, suggesting the idea that it is the work not of a dry-as-dust Jewish genealogist, but of the evangelist; or at least worked over by him in a Christian spirit, if the skeleton was given to his hand. To note these is the chief interest of non-Rabbinical exegesis.

Vv. 2-6a. καὶ τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς αὐτοῦ. This is not necessary to the genealogical line, but added to say by the way that He who belonged to the tribe of Judah belonged also to all the tribes of Israel. (Weiss, Matthäusevang.) . . . Ver. 3. τὸν Φαρέσ καὶ τὸν Ζαρά: Zerah added to Perez the continuator of the line, to suggest that it was by a special providence that the latter was first born (Gen. xxxviii. 27-30). The evangelist is on the outlook for the unusual or preternatural in history as prelude to the crowning marvel of the virgin birth (Gradus futurus ad credendum partum e virgine. Grot.).—ἐκ τῆς Θάμαρ. Mention of the mother wholly unnecessary and unusual from a genealogical point of view, and in this case one would say, prima facie, impolitic, reminding of a hardly readable story (Gen. xxxviii. 13-26). It is the first of four references to mothers

4. Ἀράμ δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Ἀμιναδάβ· Ἀμιναδάβ δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Ναασσών· Ναασσών δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Σαλμών. 5. Σαλμών δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Βοὺζ ἐκ τῆς Ῥαχάβ· Βοὺζ δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Ὠβήδ ἐκ τῆς Ῥούθ· Ὠβήδ δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Ἰεσσαί· 6. Ἰεσσαί δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Δαβίδ τὸν βασιλέα. Δαβίδ δὲ ὁ βασιλεὺς<sup>1</sup> ἐγέννησε τὸν Σολομῶνα<sup>2</sup> ἐκ τῆς τοῦ Οὐρίου· 7. Σολομῶν δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Ῥοβοάμ· Ῥοβοάμ δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Ἀβιά· Ἀβιά δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Ἀσά· 8. Ἀσά δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Ἰωσαφάτ· Ἰωσαφάτ δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Ἰωράμ· Ἰωράμ δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Ὀζιάν· 9. Ὀζίας δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Ἰωάθαμ· Ἰωάθαμ δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Ἀχαζ· Ἀχαζ δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Ἐζεκίαν· 10. Ἐζεκίας

<sup>1</sup> ο βασιλεὺς omitted in  $\aleph$ B, found in C<sup>5</sup>. Most modern editors omit.

<sup>2</sup> So in  $\Delta$ . Σολομῶνα in BCL and most uncials.

in the ancestry of Jesus, concerning whom one might have expected the genealogy to observe discreet silence: Tamar, Rahab, Ruth, Bathsheba; three of them sinful women, and one, Ruth, a foreigner. Why were they mentioned? By way of defence against sinister misconstruction of the birth of Jesus? So Wetstein: Ut tacite judaeorum objectioni occurreretur. Doubtless there is a mental reference to that birth under some aspect, but it is not likely that the evangelist would condescend to apologise before the bar of unbelief, even though he might find means of doing so in the Jewish habit of glorying over the misdeeds of ancestors (Wetstein). Much more probable is the opinion of the Fathers, who found in these names a foreshadowing of the gracious character of the Gospel of Jesus, as it were the Gospel in the genealogy. Schanz follows the Fathers, except that he thinks they have over-emphasised the sinful element. He finds in the mention of the four women a hint of God's grace in Christ to the sinful and miserable: Rahab and Bathsheba representing the one, Tamar and Ruth the other. This view commends itself to many interpreters both Catholic and Protestant. Others prefer to bring the four cases under the category of the extraordinary exemplified by the case of Perez and Zerah. These women all became mothers in the line of Christ's ancestry by special providence (Weiss-Meyer). Doubtless this is at least part of the moral. Nicholson (New Comm.) thinks that the introduction of Tamar and Ruth is sufficiently explained by Ruth iv. 11, 12, viewed as Messianic; of Rahab by her connection with the earlier Jesus (Joshua), and of Bathsheba because she was the mother of a second line culminating in Christ, as Ruth of a first culminating in David.—Ver. 6a. τὸν Δαβίδ τὸν βασιλέα, David the King, the title being added to distinguish him from the rest. It serves the same purpose as if David had been written in large letters. At length we arrive at the great royal name! The materials for the first part of the genealogy are taken from Ruth iv. 18-22, and 1 Chron. ii. 5-15.

Vν. 6b-10, ἐκ τῆς τοῦ Οὐρίου, vide above. The chief feature in this second division of the genealogical table is the omission of three kings between Joram and Uzziah (ver. 8), viz., Ahaziah, Joash, Amaziah. How is the omission to be explained? By inadvertence, or by intention, and if the latter, in what view? Jerome favoured the second alternative, and suggested two reasons for the intentional omission—a wish to bring out the number fourteen (ver. 17) in the second part of the genealogy, and a desire to brand the kings passed over with the stamp of theocratic illegality. In effect, manipulation with a presentable excuse. But the excuse would justify other omissions, e.g., Ahaz and Manasseh, who, were as great offenders as any. One can, indeed, imagine the evangelist desiring to exemplify the severity of the Gospel as well as its grace in the construction of the list—to say in effect: God resisteth the proud, but He giveth grace to the lowly, and even the low. The hypothesis of manipulation in the interest of symbolic numbers can stand on its own basis without any pretext. It is not to be supposed that the evangelist was at all concerned to make sure that no link in the line was omitted. His one concern ἔγιννε δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Μανασσῆ· Μανασσῆς δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Ἀμιών· Ἀμιών δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Ἰωσίαν· ΙΙ. Ἰωσίας δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Ἰεχονίαν καὶ τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς αὐτοῦ, ἐπὶ τῆς *μετοικεσίας Βαβυλῶνος. 12. Μετὰ δὲ τὴν μετοικεσίαν Βαβυλῶνος, Ἰεχονίας ἐγέννησε τὸν Σαλαθιήλ· Σαλαθιήλ δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Ζοροβάβελ· Ι3. Ζοροβάβελ δὲ ἐγέννησε would be to make sure that no name appeared that did not belong to the line. He can hardly have imagined that his list was complete from beginning to end. Thus Nahshon (ver. 4) was the head of the tribe of Judah at the Exodus (Num. i. 7), yet between Hezron and him only two names occur—four names for 400 years. Each name or generation represents a century, in accordance with Genesis xv. 13-16. The genealogist may have had this passage in view, but he must have known that the actual succession embraced more links than four (vide Schanz on ver. 4). The hypothesis of inadvertence or error in consulting the text of the O. T., favoured by some modern commentators, is not to be summarily negated on the ground of an a priori theory of inerrancy. It is possible that in reading 1 Chron. iii. 11 in the Sept. the eye leapt from Ὀχοζίας to Ὀζίας, and so led to omission of it and the two following names. (Ἀζαρίας, not Ὀζίας, is the reading in Sept., but Weiss assumes that the latter, Azariah's original name, must have stood in the copy used by the constructor of the genealogy.) The explanation, however, is conjectural. No certainty, indeed, is attainable on the matter. As a curiosity in the history of exegesis may be mentioned Chrysostom's mode of dealing with this point. Having propounded several problems regarding the genealogy, the omission of the three kings included, he leaves this one unsolved on the plea that he must not explain everything to his hearers lest they become listless (ἵνα μὴ ἀναπέσητε, Hom. iv.). Schanz praises the prudence of the sly Greek orator.

Ver. 11. Ἰωσίας ἐγεν. τὸν Ἰεχονίαν. There is an omission here also: Eliakim, son of Josiah and father of Jeconiah. It was noted and made a ground of reproach to Christians by Porphyry. Maldonatus, pressed by the difficulty, proposed to substitute for Jeconiah, Jehoiakim, the second of four sons ascribed to Josiah in the genealogist's source (1 Chron. iii. 14), whereby the expression τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς αὐτοῦ would retain its natural sense. But, while the two names are perhaps similar enough to be mistaken for each other, it is against the hypothesis as a solution of the difficulty that Jehoiakim did not share in the captivity (2 Kings xxiv. 6), while the words of ver. 11 seem to imply that the descendant of Josiah referred to was associated with his brethren in exile. The words ἐπὶ τῆς μετοικεσίας Βαβυλῶνος probably supply the key to the solution. Josiah brings us to the brink of the period of exile. With his name that doleful time comes into the mind of the genealogist. Who is to represent it in the line of succession? Not Jehoiakim, for though the deportation began in his reign he was not himself a captive. It must be Jeconiah (Jehoiakim), his son at the second remove, who was among the captives (2 Kings xxiv. 15). His "brethren" are his uncles, sons of Josiah, his grandfather; brethren in blood, and brethren also as representatives of a calamitous time—(vide Weiss-Meyer). There is a pathos in this second allusion to brotherhood. "Judah and his brethren," partakers in the promise (also in the sojourn in Egypt); "Jeconiah and his brethren," the generation of the promise eclipsed. Royalty in the dust, but not without hope. The omission of Eliakim (or Jehoiakim) serves the subordinate purpose of keeping the second division of the genealogy within the number fourteen.—Μετοικεσίας: literally change of abode, deportation, "carrying away," late Greek for μετοικία or μετοικησις.—Βαβυλῶνος: genitive, expressing the terminus ad quem (vide Winer, § 30, 2 a, and cf. Matt. iv. 15, ὄδον θαλάσσης, x. 5, ὄδον ἔθνων).—ἐπὶ τ. μ., "at the time of, during," the time being of some length; the process of deportation went on for years. Cf. Mk. ii. 26, ἐπὶ Ἀβιάθαρ, under the high priesthood of Abiathar, and Mk. xii. 26 for a similar use of ἐπὶ in reference to place: ἐπὶ τοῦ βάλτου—at the place where the story of the bush occurs. Μετὰ τ. μ. in ver. 12 means after not during, as some have supposed, misled by taking μετοικεσία as denoting the state of exile. Vide on this Fritzsche.

Vv. 12-15. In the last division the τὸν Ἀβιούδ· Ἀβιούδ δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Ἐλιακείμ· Ἐλιακείμ δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Ἀζώρ· 14. Ἀζώρ δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Σαδώκ· Σαδώκ δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Ἀχείμ· Ἀχείμ δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Ἐλιοῦδ· 15. Ἐλιοῦδ δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Ἐλεάζαρ· Ἐλεάζαρ δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Ματθάν· Ματθάν δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Ἰακώβ· 16. Ἰακώβ δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Ἰωσήφ, τὸν ἄνδρα Μαρίας, ἐξ ἧς ἐγεννήθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς ὁ λεγόμενος Χριστός.

17. Πᾶσαι οὖν αἱ γενεαὶ ἀπὸ Ἀβραάμ ἕως Δαβίδ, γενεαὶ δεκατέσσαρες· καὶ ἀπὸ Δαβίδ ἕως τῆς μετοικεσίας Βαβυλῶνος, γενεαὶ same expression in xxvii. 17, 22 ("Jesus called the Christ").

genealogical table escapes our control. After Zerubbabel no name occurs in the O. T. We might have expected to find Abiud in 1 Chron. iii. 19, where the children of Zerubbabel are given, but Abiud is not among them. The royal family sank into obscurity. It does not follow that no pains were taken to preserve their genealogy. The priests may have been diligent in the matter, and records may have been preserved in the temple (Schanz). The Messianic hope would be a motive to carefulness. In any case we must suppose the author of the genealogy before us to give here what he found. He did not construct an imaginary list. And the list, if not guaranteed as infallibly accurate by its insertion, was such as might reasonably be expected to satisfy Hebrew readers. Amid the gloom of the night of legalism which broods over all things belonging to the period, this genealogy included, it is a comfort to think that the Messiahship of Jesus does not depend on the absolute accuracy of the genealogical tree.

Ver. 16. Ἰακώβ . . . τὸν Ἰωσήφ: the genealogy ends with Joseph. It is then presumably his, not Mary's. But for apologetic or dogmatic considerations, no one would ever have thought of doubting this. What creates perplexity is that Joseph, while called the husband (τὸν ἄνδρα) of Mary, is not represented as the father of Jesus. There is no ἐγέννησε in this case, though some suppose that there was originally, as the genealogy came from the hand of some Jewish Christian, who regarded Jesus as the Son of Joseph (Holtzmann in H. C.). The Sinaitic Syriac Codex has "Joseph, to whom was betrothed Mary the Virgin, begat Jesus," but it does not alter the story otherwise to correspond with Joseph's paternity. Therefore Joseph can only have been the legal father of Jesus. But, it is argued, that is not enough to satisfy the presupposition of the whole N. T., viz., that Jesus was the actual son of David (κατὰ σάρκα, Rom. i. 3); therefore the genealogy must be that of Mary (Nösgen). This conclusion can be reconciled with the other alternative by the assumption that Mary was of the same tribe and family as Joseph, so that the genealogy was common to both. This was the patristic view. The fact may have been so, but it is not indicated by the evangelist. His aim, undoubtedly, is to set forth Jesus as the legitimate son of Joseph, Mary's husband, at His birth, and therefore the proper heir of David's throne.—ἐξ ἧς ἐγεννήθη<sup>1</sup>. The peculiar manner of expression is a hint that something out of the usual course had happened, and prepares for the following explanation: ὁ λεγόμενος Χριστός; not implying doubt, but suggesting that the claim of Jesus to the title Christ was valid if He were a legitimate descendant of David, as the genealogy showed Him to be.

Ver. 17. The evangelist pauses to point out the structure of his genealogy: three parts with fourteen members each; symmetrical, memorable; πᾶσαι does not imply, as Meyer and Weiss think, that in the opinion of the evangelist no links are omitted. He speaks simply of what lies under the eye. There they are, fourteen in each, count and satisfy yourself. But the counting turns out not to be so easy, and has given rise to great divergence of opinion. The division naturally suggested by the words of the text is: from Abraham to David, terminating first series, 14; from David, heading second series, to the captivity as limit, i.e., to Josiah, 14; from the captivity represented by Jeconiah to Christ, included as final term, 14. So Bengel and De Wette. If objection be taken to counting David twice, the brethren of Jeconiah, that is, his uncles, may be taken as representing the concluding term of series 2, and Jeconiah himself as the first member of series 3 (Weiss-Meyer). The identical number

g Lk. i. 27: δεκατέσσαρες· καὶ ἀπὸ τῆς μετοικεσίας Βαβυλῶνος ἕως τοῦ
 ii. 5.
 h Lk. xvii. Χριστοῦ, γενεαὶ δεκατέσσαρες.
 iS. 1 Cor.
 iv. 2. 18. ΤΟΥ ΔΕ Ἰησοῦ<sup>1</sup> Χριστοῦ ἡ γέννησις<sup>2</sup> οὕτως ἦν. Ἐμνηστευ-i again in xxiv. 19. θείσης γὰρ<sup>3</sup> τῆς μητρὸς αὐτοῦ Μαρίας τῷ Ἰωσήφ, πρὶν ἢ συναλθεῖν
 i. Lk. xxi. 23.
 j Mt. xx. 4. αὐτοῦς. ἠεὶ ἔβλεθον<sup>1</sup> ἐν γαστρὶ ἔχουσα ἐκ Πνεύματος Ἁγίου. 19
 Mk. vi. 20.
 i. Lk. xx. 20. Ἰωσήφ δὲ ὁ ἀνὴρ αὐτῆς, δίκαιος ὢν, καὶ μὴ θέλων αὐτὴν παρα-
 Rom. v. 7.

<sup>1</sup> B inverts the order of the names (X. I.). I. X. in  $\aleph$ CL, etc. Weiss (Meyer, StH ed.) remarks that B has a preference for "Christ Jesus".

<sup>2</sup> The best old MSS. read γενεσις . . . γέννησις is doubtless a correction of the scribe to bring the text into conformity with εγεννησε in the genealogy.

<sup>3</sup> γαρ omitted in  $\aleph$ BC<sup>1</sup>, etc. The sense is clearer without it.

in the three parts is of no importance in itself. It is a numerical symbol uniting three periods, and suggesting comparison in other respects, e.g., as to different forms of government—judges, kings, priests (Euthy. Zig.), theocracy, monarchy, hierarchy (Schanz), all summed up in Christ; or as to Israel's fortunes: growth, decline, ruin—redemption urgently needed.

Vv. 18-25. THE BIRTH OF JESUS. This section gives the explanation which ἔξ ἧς ἐγεννήθη (ver. 16) leads us to expect. It may be called the justification of the genealogy (Schanz), showing that while the birth was exceptional in nature it yet took place in such circumstances, that Jesus might justly be regarded as the legitimate son of Joseph, and therefore heir of David's throne. The position of the name Τοῦ δὲ I. X. at the head of the sentence, and the recurrence of the word γέννησις, point back to ver. 1; γένεσις, not γέννησις, is the true reading, the purpose being to express the general idea of origin, ortus, not the specific idea of generation (ὁ εὐαγγελιστὴς ἑκαινοτόμησε τὸ κατὰ φύσιν ὄνομα τῆς γεννήσεως, γένεσιν αὐτὴν καλέσας. Euthy. Zig. on ver. 1).

Ver. 18. μνηστευθεὶς . . . αὐτοῦς indicates the position of Mary in relation to Joseph when her pregnancy was discovered. Briefly it was—betrothed, not married. πρὶν ἢ συναλθεῖν means before they came together in one home as man and wife, it being implied that that would not take place before marriage. συναλθεῖν might refer to sexual intercourse, so far as the meaning of the word is concerned (Joseph. Antiq. vii. 9, 5), but the evangelist would not think it necessary to state that no such intercourse had taken place between the betrothed. That he would regard as a matter of course. Yet most of the fathers so understood the word; and rome, Chrysostom, e.g., conceived Joseph and Mary to be living together before marriage, but since concubitu, believing this to have been the usual practice. Of this, however, there is no satisfactory evidence. The sense above assigned to συναλ. corresponds to the verb παραλαβεῖν, ver. 20, παρέλαβε, ver. 24, which means to take home, domum ducere. The supposed reason for the practice alleged to have existed by Chrysostom and others was the protection of the betrothed (δὲ ἀσφάλειαν, Euthy.). Grammarians (vide Fritzsche) say that πρὶν ἢ is not found in ancient Attic, though often in middle Attic. For other instances of it, with infinitive, vide Mk. xiv. 30, Acts vii. 2; without ἢ, Mt. xxvi. 34, 75. On the construction of πρὶν with the various moods, vide Hermann ed. Viger, Klotz ed. Devarius, and Goodwin's Syntax.—εὐρέθη . . . ἔχουσα: εὐρέθη, not ἦν. (So Olearius, Observ. ad Ev. Mat., and other older interpreters.) There was a discovery and a surprise. It was apparent (de Wette); διὰ τὸ ἀπροσδόκητον (Euthy.). To whom apparent not indicated. Jerome says: "Non ab alio inventa est nisi a Joseph, qui pene licentia maritali futurae uxoris omnia noverat".—ἐκ πν. ἁγ. This was not apparent; it belonged to the region of faith. The evangelist hastens to add this explanation of a painful fact to remove, as quickly as possible, all occasion for sinister conjecture. The expression points at once to immediate divine causality, and to the holy character of the effect; a solemn protest against profane thoughts.

Ver. 19. I. ὁ ἀνὴρ: proleptic, implying possession of a husband's rights and responsibilities. The betrothed man had a duty in the matter—δίκαιος . . . δειγμα-

δειγματίσαι,<sup>1</sup> ἐβουλήθη λάθρα<sup>2</sup> ἀπολύσαι αὐτήν. 20. ταῦτα δὲ<sup>k</sup> αὐτοῦ ἐνθυμηθέντος, ἰδοῦ, ἄγγελος Κυρίου κατ' ὄναρ ἐφάνη αὐτῷ, λέγων, "Ἰωσήφ, υἱὸς Δαβίδ, μὴ φοβηθῆς παραλαβεῖν Μαριάμ<sup>3</sup> τὴν γυναῖκά σου· τὸ γὰρ ἐν αὐτῇ γεννηθὲν ἐκ Πνεύματός ἐστιν Ἁγίου. 21. τέξεται δὲ υἱόν, καὶ ὀκαλέσεις τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ Ἰησοῦν· αὐτὸς γὰρ σώσει τὸν λαὸν αὐτοῦ ἀπὸ τῶν ἁμαρτιῶν αὐτῶν." 22. Τοῦτο δὲ ὅλον γέγονεν, ἵνα πληρωθῆ τὸ ῥηθὲν ὑπὸ τοῦ Κυρίου διὰ

<sup>l</sup> vv. 31, 32; xix. 3. <sup>m</sup> Mk. x. 12 (in ref. to a husband). <sup>1</sup> chap. ix. 4. <sup>m</sup> chap. ii. 12, 13, 19, 22; xxvii. 19. <sup>n</sup> again ver. 24. <sup>o</sup> Lk. i. 13; ii. 21. <sup>p</sup> chap. ii. 15; iii. 3; xvii. 31

<sup>1</sup> B and  $\aleph^2$  have the simple verb (δειγματίζω).

<sup>2</sup> λαθρα in W.H.

<sup>3</sup> Μαριαν in BL (W.H. text). The Μαριαμ of the T. R. probably comes from the history of Christ's birth in Luke i., ii.

<sup>4</sup> The article του before κυρίου is omitted in the best MSS.

τίσαι. He was in a strait betwixt two. Being δίκαιος, just, righteous, a respecter of the law, he could not overlook the apparent fault; on the other hand, loving the woman, he desired to deal with her as tenderly as possible: not wishing to expose her (αὐτήν in an emphatic position before δειγματίσαι—the loved one. Weiss-Meyer). Some (Grotius, Fritzsche, etc.) take δίκαιος in the sense of bonitas or benignitas, as if it had been ἀγαθός, so eliminating the element of conflict.—ἐβουλήθη . . . αὐτήν. He finally resolved on the expedient of putting her away privately. The alternatives were exposure by public repudiation, or quiet cancelling of the bond of betrothal. Affection chose the latter. δειγματίσαι does not point, as some have thought, to judicial procedure with its penalty, death by stoning. λάθρα before ἀπολύσαι is emphatic, and suggests a contrast between two ways of performing the act pointed at by ἀπολύσαι. Note the synonyms θέλω and ἐβουλήθη. The former denotes inclination in general, the latter a deliberate decision between different courses—maluit (vide on chapter xi. 27).

Vv. 20-21. Joseph delivered from his perplexity by angelic interposition. How much painful, distressing, distracting thought he had about the matter day and night can be imagined. Relief came at last in a dream, of which Mary was the subject.—ταῦτα . . . ἐνθυμηθέντος: the genitive absolute indicates the time of the vision, and the verb the state of mind: revolving the matter in thought without clear perception of outlet. ταῦτα, the accusative, not the genitive with περὶ: ἐνθ, περὶ τινος = Cogitare de re, ἐνθ. τι = aliquid secum reputare.

Kühner, § 417, 9.—ἰδοῦ: often in Mt after genitive absolute; vivid introduction of the angelic appearance (Weiss Meyer).—κατ' ὄναρ (late Greek conde-mne<sup>4</sup> by Phrynichus. Vide Lobeck Phryn., p. 423. ὄναρ, without preposition, the classic equivalent), during a dream reflecting present distractions.—υἱὸς Δαβίδ: the angel addresses Joseph as son of David to awaken the heroic mood. The title confirms the view that the genealogy is that of Joseph.—μὴ φοβηθῆς: he is summoned to a supreme act of faith similar to those performed by the moral heroes of the Bible, who by faith made their lives sublime.—τὴν γυναῖκά σου: to take Mary, as thy wife, so in ver. 24.—τὸ . . . ἅγιον: negating the other alternative by which he was tormented. The choice lies between two extremes: most unholy, or the holiest possible. What a crisis!—ver. 21. τέξεται.—Ἰησοῦν: Mary is about to bear a son, and He is to bear the significant name of Jesus. The style is an echo of O. T. story, Gen. xvii. 19, Sept., the birth of Isaac and that of Jesus being thereby placed side by side as similar in their preternatural character.—καλέσεις: a command in form of a prediction. But there is encouragement as well as command in this future. It is meant to help Joseph out of his doubts into a mood of heroic, resolute action. Cease from brooding anxious thought, think of the child about to be born as destined to a great career, to be signalised by His name Jesus—Jehovah the helper.—αὐτὸς γὰρ . . . ἁμαρτιῶν αὐτῶν: interpretation of the name, still part of the angelic speech. αὐτὸς emphatic, he and no other. ἁμαρτίαι, sins, implying a spiritual conception of Israel's need.

q Is. vii. 14. τοῦ προφήτου, λέγοντος, 23. <sup>4</sup> “Ἰδοῦ, ἡ παρθένος ἐν γαστρὶ ἔξει καὶ τέξεται υἱόν, καὶ καλέσουσι <sup>1</sup> τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ Ἐμμανουήλ,” ὅ ἐστι
 r Mk. v. 41; <sup>r</sup> μεθερμηνεύμενον, Μεθ’ ἡμῶν ὁ Θεός. 24. Διεγερθεῖς <sup>2</sup> δὲ ὁ <sup>3</sup>
<sup>xv. 22, 34.</sup> <sup>John i. 42.</sup> Ἰωσήφ ἀπὸ τοῦ ὕπνου ἐποίησεν ὡς προσέταξεν αὐτῷ ὁ ἄγγελος
 s Lk. i. 34. Κυρίου· καὶ παρέλαβε τὴν γυναῖκα αὐτοῦ, 25. καὶ οὐκ <sup>4</sup> ἐγίνωσκεν
 αὐτήν, ἕως οὗ <sup>4</sup> ἔτεκε τὸν <sup>5</sup> υἱὸν αὐτῆς τὸν πρωτότοκον. <sup>5</sup> καὶ ἐκάλεσε
 τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ ἸΗΣΟΥΝ.

<sup>1</sup> D has καλεσεῖς as in Sept. ver. of Is. vii. 14.

<sup>2</sup> Here again, as in ver. 19, the simple verb ἐγερθεῖς is used instead of the compound of T. R. in the best texts (ΣBCZ).

<sup>3</sup> ο omitted in ΣΖΔ al., bracketed in W.H.

<sup>4</sup> ου is omitted in B and bracketed in W.H.

<sup>5</sup> Instead of the words τὸν υἱὸν αὐτῆς τὸν πρωτότοκον, ΣΒΖ I, 33, some old Latin MSS., the Egyptian versions and Syr. Cur., have simply υἱόν. The expanded phrase of T. R., found in many copies, is doubtless imported from Lk. ii. 7.

Vv. 22-23. The prophetic reference. As it is the evangelist's habit to cite O. T. prophecies in connection with leading incidents in the life of Jesus, it is natural, with most recent interpreters, to regard these words, not as uttered by the angel, but as a comment of the narrator. The ancients, Chry., Theophy., Euthy., etc., adopt the former view, and Weiss-Meyer concurs, while admitting that in expression they reveal the evangelist's style. In support of this, it might be urged that the suggestion of the prophetic oracle to the mind of Joseph would be an aid to faith. It speaks of a son to be born of a virgin. Why should not Mary be that virgin, and her child that son? In favour of it also is the consideration that on the opposite view the prophetic reference comes in too soon. Why should not the evangelist go on to the end of his story, and then quote the prophetic oracle? Finally, if we assume that in the case of all objective preternatural manifestations, there is an answering subjective psychological state, we must conclude that among the thoughts that were passing through Joseph's mind at this crisis, one was that in his family experience as a "son of David," something of great importance for the royal race and for Israel was about to happen. The oracle in question might readily suggest itself as explaining the nature of the coming event. On all these grounds, it seems reasonable to conclude that the evangelist, in this case, means the prophecy to form part of the angelic utterance.

Ver. 22. τοῦτο δὲ . . . ἵνα πληρωθῇ. ἵνα is to be taken here, and indeed always in such connections, in its strict telic sense. The interest of the evangelist, as of all N. T. writers, in prophecy, was purely religious. For him O. T. oracles had exclusive reference to the events in the life of Jesus by which they were fulfilled. The virgin, ἡ παρθένος, supposed to be present to the eye of the prophet, is the young woman of Nazareth betrothed to Joseph the carpenter, now found to be with child.—Ἰδοῦ . . . Ἐμμανουήλ: in the oracle as here quoted, ἔξει (cf. ἔχουσα, ver. 18), is substituted for λήψεται, and καλέσεις changed into the impersonal καλέσουσι. Emmanuel = "with us God," implying that God's help will come through the child Jesus. It does not necessarily imply the idea of incarnation.

Vv. 24-25. Joseph hesitates no more: immediate energetic action takes the place of painful doubt. Euthymius asks: Why did he so easily trust the dream in so great a matter? and answers: because the angel revealed to him the thought of his own heart, for he understood that the messenger must have come from God, for God alone knows the thoughts of the heart.—ἐγερθεῖς . . . Κυρίου: rising up from the sleep (τοῦ ὕπνου), in which he had that remarkable dream, on that memorable night, he proceeded forthwith to execute the Divine command, the first, chief, perhaps sole business of that day.—καὶ παρέλαβεν . . . αὐτοῦ. He took Mary home as his wife, that her offspring might be his legitimate son and heir of David's throne.—Ver. 25. καὶ οὐκ ἐγίνωσκεν . . . υἱόν: absolute habitual (note the imperfect) abstinence from

II. 1. Τοῦ δὲ Ἰησοῦ γεννηθέντος ἐν Βηθλεὲμ τῆς Ἰουδαίας, ἐν αὐτῇ ἡμέραις Ἡρώδου τοῦ βασιλέως, ἰδοὺ, μάγοι ἀπὸ ἀνατολῶν again in vv. 7, 16 (bis). Acts xiii. 6, 8.

b chap. viii. 11 · xxiv. 27. Lk. xiii. 29

marital intercourse, the sole purpose of the hastened marriage being to legitimise the child.—ἕως: not till then, and afterwards? Here comes in a quæstio vexata of theology. Patristic and catholic authors say: not till then and never at all, guarding the sacredness of the virgin's womb. ἕως does not settle the question. It is easy to cite instances of its use as fixing a limit up to which a specified event did not occur, when as a matter of fact it did not occur at all. E.g., Gen. viii. 7; the raven returned not till the waters were dried up; in fact, never returned (Schanz). But the presumption is all the other way in the case before us. Subsequent intercourse was the natural, if not the necessary, course of things. If the evangelist had felt as the Catholics do, he would have taken pains to prevent misunderstanding.—υἰόν: the extended reading (T. R.) is imported not till the Luke ii. 7, where there are no variants. πρωτότοκον is not a stumbling-block to the champions of the perpetual virginity, because the first may be the only. Euthymius quotes in proof Isaiah xlv. 6: "I am the first, and I am the last, and beside Me there is no God."—καὶ ἐκάλεσεν, he (not she) called the child Jesus, the statement referring back to the command of the angel to Joseph. Wünsche says that before the Exile the mother, after the Exile the father, gave the name to the child at circumcision (Neue Beiträge zur Erläuterung der Evangelien, p. 11).

CHAPTER II. HISTORY OF THE INFANCY CONTINUED. The leading aim of the evangelist in this chapter is not to give biographic details as to the time and place of Christ's birth. These are disposed of in an introductory subordinate clause with a genitive absolute construction: "Jesus being born in Bethlehem of Judæa in the days of Herod the King": that is all. The main purpose is to show the reception given by the world to the new-born Messianic King. Homage from afar, hostility at home; foreshadowing the fortunes of the new faith: acceptance by the Gentiles, rejection by the Jews; such is the lesson of this new section. It is history, but not of the prosaic sort: history with a religious bias, and wearing a halo of poetry. The story forms a natural sequel to the preceding account. The δὲ in ver. 1, as in i. 18, is adversative only to the extent of taking the attention off one topic and fixing it on another connected and kindred. This, according to Klotz, who regards δὲ as a weak form of δὴ, is the original force of the particle. He says (in Devarius, p. 355): "Illa particula eam vim habet, ut abducat nos ab ea re, quæ proposita est, transferatque ad id quod, missa illa priore re, jam pro vero ponendum esse videatur".

Vv. 1-12. Visit of the Magi. Ver. 1. ἐν Βηθλεὲμ: The first hint of the birthplace, and no hint that Bethlehem is not the home of the family.—τῆς Ἰουδαίας: to distinguish it from another Bethlehem in Galilee (Zebulun), named in Joshua xix. 15. Our Bethlehem is called Bethlehem-Judah in 1 Sam. xvii. 12, and Jerome thought it should be so written here—Bethlehem of Judah, not of Judæa, taking the latter for the name of the whole nation. The name means "house of bread," and points to the fertility of the neighbourhood; about six miles south of Jerusalem.—ἐν ἡμέραις, "in the days," a very vague indication of time. Luke aims at more exactness in these matters. It is enough for our evangelist to indicate that the birth of Jesus fell within the evil time represented by Herod. A name of evil omen; called the Great; great in energy, in magnificence, in wickedness; a considerable personage in many ways in the history of Israel, and of the world. Not a Jew, his father Antipater an Edomite, his mother an Arabian—the sceptre has departed from Judah—through the influence of Antony appointed King of Judæa by the Roman senate about forty years before the birth of Christ. The event here recorded therefore took place towards the close of his long reign; fit ending for a career blackened with many dark deeds.—ἰδοὺ μάγοι: "Behold!" introducing in a lively manner the new theme, and a very different class of men from the reigning King of Judæa. Herod, Magi; the one representing the ungodly element in Israel, the other the best element in the Gentile world; Magi, not kings as the legend makes them, but having influence with kings, and intermeddling much by astrological lore with the fortunes of individuals and peoples. The homage of the Gentiles could not be offered by worthier representatives, in whom power, wisdom, and also error, superstition meet.—μάγοι ἀπὸ ἀναρ. παρεγ., Magi from the east came—so the words must be connected: not "came from the east"; from the east, the land of the sunrise; vague indication of locality. It is vain to inquire what precise country is meant, though commentators have inquired, and are divided into hostile camps on the point: Arabia, Persia, Media, Babylon, Parthia are some of the rival suggestions. The evangelist does not know or care. The east generally is the suitable part of the world for Magi to come from on this errand.—εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα: they arrived at Jerusalem, the capital, the natural place for strangers to come to, the precise spot connected with their errand to be determined by further inquiry. Note the Greek form of the name, usual with Matthew, Mark and John. In Luke, the Hebrew form Ἱερουσαλήμ is used. Beforehand, one would have expected the first evangelist writing for Jews to have used the Hebrew form, and the Pauline evangelist the Greek.

c Acts xiii. 14 (in same const.). * παρεγένοντο εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα, 2. λέγοντες, "Ποῦ ἐστὶν ὁ τεχθεὶς βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων; εἶδομεν γὰρ αὐτοῦ τὸν ἄστέρα ἐν τῇ
d vv. 7, 9, 10; xxiv. 29. 1 Cor. xv. 41.

Ver. 2, ποῦ . . . Ἰουδαίων: the inquiry of the Magi. It is very laconic, combining an assertion with a question. The assertion is contained in τεχθεὶς. That a king of the Jews had been born was their inference from the star they had seen, and what they said was in effect thus: that a king has been born somewhere in this land we know from a star we have seen arising, and we desire to know where he can be found: "insigne hoc concisae orationis exemplum," Fritzsche. The Messianic hope of the Jews, and the aspiration after world-wide dominion connected with it, were known to the outside world, according to the testimony of non-Christian writers such as Josephus and Tacitus. The visit of the Magi in quest of the new-born king is not incredible.—εἶδομεν . . . ἐν τῇ ἀνατολῇ, we saw His star in its rising, not in the east, as in A. V., the plural being used for that in ver. 1. Always on the outlook, no heavenly phenomenon escaped them; it was visible as soon as it appeared above the horizon.—ἄστέρα, what was this celestial portent? Was it phenomenal only? an appearance in the heavens miraculously produced to guide the wise men to Judaea and Bethlehem; or a real astronomical object, a rare conjunction of planets, or a new star appearing, and invested by men addicted to astrology with a certain significance; or mythical, neither a miraculous nor a natural phenomenon, but a creation of the religious imagination working on slender data, such as the Star of Jacob in Balaam's prophecies? All these views have been held. Some of the fathers, especially Chrysostom, advocated the first, viz., that it was a star, not φύσει, but ὄψει μόνον. His reasons were such as these: it moved from north to south; it appeared in the daytime while the sun shone; it appeared and disappeared; it descended down to the house where the child lay, and so indicated the spot, which could not be done by a star in the sky (Hom. vi.). Some modern commentators have laid under contribution the investigations of astronomers, and supposed the ἄστὴρ to have been one of several rare conjunctions of planets occurring about the beginning of our era or a comet observed in China. Vide the elaborate note in Alford's Greek Testament. The third view is in favour with students of comparative religion and of criticism, who lay stress on the fact that in ancient times the appearance of a star was expected at the birth of all great men (De Wette), and who expect mythological elements in the N. T. as well as in the Old. (Vide Fritzsche, Strauss, L. γ., and Holtzmann in H. C.) These diverse theories will probably always find their abettors; the first among the devout to whom the miraculous is no stumbling-block, the second among those who while accepting the miraculous desire to reduce it to a minimum, or at least to avoid its unnecessary extension, the third among men of naturalistic proclivities. I do not profess to be able to settle the question. I content myself with expressing general acquiescence in the idea thrown out by Spinoza in his discussion on prophecy in the Tractatus theologico-politicus, that in the case of the Magi we have an instance of a sign given, accommodated to the false opinions of men, to guide them to the truth. The whole system

ἡ ἀνατολῇ, καὶ ἤλθομεν προσκυνῆσαι αὐτῷ." 3. Ἀκούσας δὲ ἡ Ἡρώδης ὁ βασιλεὺς ἔταράχθη, καὶ πᾶσα Ἰερουσόλυμα μετ' αὐτοῦ. 4. καὶ συναγαγὼν πάντας τοὺς ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ γραμματεῖς τοῦ λαοῦ, ἐπειθάνετο παρ' αὐτῶν, ποῦ ὁ Χριστὸς γεννᾶται. 5. οἱ δὲ εἶπον

e again ver. 9. and in Lk. i. 28 (in the sense of rising). f chap. xiv. 26. Lk. i. 12. i Pet.

iii. 14. g chap. xxii. 10. John xi. 47. Acts xiv. 27. h Cf. Acts xxiii. 20 (τὶ περὶ τινος).

<sup>1</sup> ο βασιλεὺς Ἡρώδης in ΣBDZ. In the T. R. the order of the words is conformed to that in ver. 1.

<sup>2</sup> εἶπαν in ΣB. All such forms have been corrected in the text which the T. R. represents and need not be further noticed.

of astrology was a delusion, yet it might be used by Providence to guide seekers after God. The expectation of an epoch-making birth was current in the east, spread by Babylonian Jews. That it might interest Magians there is no wise incredible; that their astrological lore might lead them to connect some unknown celestial phenomenon with the prevalent expectation is likewise credible. On the other hand, that legendary elements might get mixed up in the Christian tradition of the star-guided visit must be admitted to be possible. It remains to add that the use of the word ἄστῆρ, not ἄστρόν, has been supposed to have an important bearing on the question as to the nature of the phenomenon. ἄστῆρ means an individual star, ἄστρόν a constellation. But in the N. T. this distinction is not observed. (Vide Luke xxi. 25; Acts xxvii. 20; Heb. xi. 12; and Grimm's Lexicon on the two words.)

Ver. 3. ὁ βασιλεὺς Ἡρώδης ἔταράχθη: βασιλεὺς before the name, not after, as in ver. 1, the emphatic position suggesting that it was as king and because king that Herod was troubled. The foreigner and usurper feared a rival, and the tyrant feared the rival would be welcome. It takes little to put evil-doers in fear. He had reigned long, men were weary, and the Pharisees, according to Joseph (A. J. xvii. 2-4), had predicted that his family would ere long lose its place of power. His fear therefore, though the occasion may seem insignificant, is every way credible.—καὶ πᾶσα L, doubtless an exaggeration, yet substantially true. The spirit of the city was servile and selfish. They bowed to godless power, and cared for their own interest rather than for Herod's. Few in that so-called holy city had healthy sympathies with truth and right. Whether the king's fears were groundless or not they knew not nor cared. It was enough that the fears existed. The world is ruled not by truth but by opinion.—πᾶσα: ἡ Ἰερουσόλυμα feminine here, or is ἡ πόλις understood? or is it a construction, ad sensum, of the inhabitants? (Schanz).

Ver. 4. Herod's measures.—καὶ συναγαγὼν . . . τοῦ λαοῦ. Was this a meeting of the Sanhedrim? Not likely, as the elders are not mentioned, who are elsewhere named as the representatives of the people, vide xxvi. 3, "the chief priests, scribes and elders of the people". Here we read only of the chief priests and scribes of the people. The article is not repeated before γραμματεῖς, the two classes being joined together as the theological experts of the people. Herod called together the leading men among the priests and scribes to consult them as to the birth-place of Messiah. Holtzmann (H. C.), assuming that a meeting of the Sanhedrim is meant, uses the fact as an argument against the historicity of the narrative. The Herod of history slew the Sanhedrists wholesale, and did his best to lull to sleep Messianic hopes. It is only the Herod of Christian legend that convenes the Sanhedrim, and makes anxious inquiries about Messiah's birth-place. But the past policy of the king and his present action, as reported by the evangelist, hang together. He discouraged Messianic hopes, and now that they have revived in spite of him, he must deal with them, and his first step is to consult the experts in as quiet a way as possible, to ascertain the whereabouts of the new-born child—ἐπειθάνετο, etc.: it is not a historical question he submits to the experts as to where the Christ has been born, or shall be, but a theological one: where, according to the accepted tradition, is His birth-place? Hence γεννᾶται, present tense.

Vv. 5-6. The answer of the experts.—οἱ δὲ εἶπον, etc. This is not a Christian opinion put into the mouth of the scribes. It was the answer to be ex-

i here only. αὐτῷ, “Ἐν Βηθλεὲμ τῆς Ἰουδαίας. οὕτω γὰρ γέγραπται διὰ τοῦ j in Heb. vii. 5 in same sense. προφήτου, β. ‘Καὶ σύ, Βηθλεὲμ, γῆ Ἰούδα, ἰουδαίως ἐλαχίστη εἶ k Acts vii. ἐν τοῖς ἡγεμοσίν Ἰούδα· ἐκ σοῦ γὰρ ἐξελεύσεται ἡγούμενος, 100 c. Lk. xxii. 20. ὅστις ἰποιμανεῖ τὸν λαόν μου τὸν Ἰσραήλ.’” 7. Τότε Ἡρώδης,
 1 John xxi. 16. Acts xx. 28. 1 λαθρα<sup>1</sup> καλέσας τοὺς μάγους, ἠκρίβωσε παρ’ αὐτῶν τὸν χρόνον
 Pet. v. 2. τοῦ φαινομένου ἀστέρος, 8. καὶ πέμψας αὐτοὺς εἰς Βηθλεὲμ εἶπε, m here and in ver. 16. “Πορευθέντες ἠκριβῶς ἑξετάσατε<sup>2</sup> περὶ τοῦ παιδίου· ἢ ἐπὶ δὲ n Lk. i. 3. εὗρητε, ἀπαγγεῖλατέ μοι, ὅπως κἀγὼ ἐλθὼν προσκυνήσω αὐτῷ.”
 Acts viii. 25. 1
 Thess. v. 2 o chap. x. 11. John xxi. 12. p Lk. xi. 22, 34 (with aor. sub.).

<sup>1</sup> λαθρα as in i. 19 in W.H.

<sup>2</sup> εξετασατε ακριβως in ΞBCD, which accords with Mt.'s usual order.

pected from them as reflecting the current opinion of the time. The Targum put upon the oracle in Micah a Messianic interpretation (Wetstein, and Wünsche, Beiträge). Yet with the Talmudists the Messiah was the one who should come forth from a strange, unknown place (Weber, Die Lehren des Talmud, p. 342). Vide on this point Schanz, who quotes Schegg as denying the statement of Wetstein, and refers to Celsus as objecting that this view about Messiah's birth-place was not current among the Jews. (Origen, c. Celsum, i. 51. Cf. John vii. 27, and 42.)—οὕτω γὰρ γεγραπται, etc.: The Scripture proof that Messiah's birth-place was Bethlehem is taken from Micah v. 2. The oracle put into the mouth of the experts consulted by Herod receives its shape from the hand of the evangelist. It varies very considerably both from the original Hebrew and from the Sept. The “least” becomes “by no means the least,” “among the thousands” becomes “among the princes,” and the closing clause, “who shall rule my people Israel,” departs from the prophetic oracle altogether, and borrows from 2 Sam. v. 2, God's promise to David; the connecting link apparently being the poetic word descriptive of the kingly function common to the two places—ποιμανεῖ in Micah v. 3, ποιμανεῖς in 2 Sam. v. 2. The second variation arises from a different pointing of the same Hebrew word בְּאַלְפֵי. בְּאַלְפֵי = among the thousands, בְּאַלְפֵי = among the heads of thousands. Such facts are to be taken as they stand. They do not correspond to modern ideas of Scripture proof.

Vv. 7, 8. Herod's next step.—τότε Ἡρώδης . . . ἀστέρος: τότε, frequent formula of transition with our evangelist, cf. vv. 16, 17; iv. 1, 5, 11, etc. Herod wished to ascertain precisely when the child the Magi had come to worship was born. He assumed that the event would synchronise with the ascent of the star which the Magi had seen in its rising, and which still continued to be seen (φαινομένου). Therefore he made particular inquiries (ἠκρίβωσε) as to the time of the star, i.e., the time of its first appearing. This was a blind, an affectation of great interest in all that related to the child, in whose destinies even the stars were involved.—Ver. 8. καὶ πέμψας . . . αὐτῷ: his hypocrisy went further. He bade the strangers go to Bethlehem, find out the whereabouts of the child, come back and tell him, that he also might go and worship Him. Worship, i.e., murder! “Incredible motive!” (H.C.). Yes, as a real motive for a man like Herod, but not as a pretended one, and quite likely to be believed by these simple, guileless souls from the east.—πέμψας εἶπε: the sending was synchronous with the directions according to De Wette, prior according to Meyer. It is a question of no importance here, but it is sometimes an important question in what relation the action expressed by the aorist participle stands to that expressed by the following finite verb. The rule certainly is that the participle expresses an action going before: one thing having happened, another thereafter took place. But there is an important class of exceptions. The aorist participle “may express time coincident with that of the verb, when the actions of the verb and the participle are practically one”. Goodwin, Syntax, p. 52, and vide article there referred to by

9. Οἱ δὲ ἀκούσαντες τοῦ βασιλέως ἐπορεύθησαν· καὶ ἰδοῦ, ὁ ἀστὴρ,<sup>9</sup> ὃν εἶδον ἐν τῇ ἀνατολῇ,<sup>9</sup> προῆγεν αὐτούς, ἕως ἐλθῶν ἔστη<sup>1</sup> ἔπάνω οὗ ἦν τὸ παιδίον. 10. ἰδόντες δὲ τὸν ἀστέρα, ἐχάρησαν χαρὰν<sup>1</sup> μεγάλην ἰσφόδρα· 11. καὶ ἐλθόντες εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν, εὗρον<sup>2</sup> τὸ

Mk. x. 32.
Mt. xxi. 9 (with αὐτὸν W.H.)
Ch. v. 14:
xxi. 7;
xxiii. 18.
s Ch. xvii. 6, 23; xviii. 31; xix. 25; xxvi. 22; xxvii. 54.

<sup>1</sup> εσταθη in ΞBCD.

<sup>2</sup> ειδον in all uncials, ευρον only in minuscu. Came in probably from ver. 8 (ευρητε).

Prof. Ballantine in Bibl. Sacra., 1884, on the application of this rule to the N. T., in which many instances of the kind occur. Most frequent in the Gospels is the expression ἀποκριθεὶς εἶπε, which does not mean "having first answered he then proceeded to say," but "in answering he said". The case before us may be one of this kind. He sent them by saying "Go and search," etc.

Vv. 9, 10. The Magi go on their errand to Bethlehem. They do not know the way, but the star guides them. ἰδοῦ ὁ ἀστὴρ: looking up to heaven as they set out on their journey, they once more behold their heavenly guide.—ὃν εἶδον ἐ. τ. ἀνατολῇ: is the meaning that they had seen the star only at its rising, finding their way to Jesus without its guidance, and that again it appeared leading them to Bethlehem? So Bengel, and after him Meyer. Against this is φαινόμενον, ver. 7, which implies continuous visibility. The clause ὃν εἶδον, etc., is introduced for the purpose of identification. It was their celestial guide appearing again.—προῆγεν: it kept going before them (imperfect) all the way till, arriving at Bethlehem, it took up its position (ἑστάθη) right over the spot where the child was. The star seemed to go before them by an optical illusion (Weiss-Meyer); it really, in the view of the evangelist, went before and stopped over the house (De Wette, who, of course, regards this as impossible in fact). Ver. 10, ἰδόντες δὲ . . . χαρὰν μεγάλην σφόδρα: seeing the star standing over the sacred spot, they were overjoyed. Their quest was at an end; they had at last reached the goal of their long journey. σφόδρα, a favourite word of our evangelist, and here very appropriate after μεγάλην to express exuberant gladness, ecstatic delight. On the convoy of the star, Fritzsche remarks: "Fuit certe stellae pompa tam gravi tempore digna". Some connect the seeing of the star in ver. 10 with the beginning of the journey from Jerusalem to Bethlehem. They rejoiced, says Euthy. Zig. ὡς εὐρόντες τὸν ἀψευδέστατον ὄσηγόν

Ver. 11. The Magi enter and do homage.

—καὶ ε. ε. τ. οἰκίαν: the house. In Luke the shepherds find the holy family in a stable, and the holy child lying in a manger; reconcilable by assuming that the Magi arrived after they had found refuge in a friend's house (Epiphani. Theophy.). —εἶδον τ. π. . . αὐτοῦ: εἶδον better than εὗρον, which seems to have been introduced by the copyists as not only in itself suitable to the situation, but relieving the monotony caused by too frequent use of εἶδον (vv. 9, 10). The child with His mother, Joseph not mentioned, not intentionally, that no wrong suspicions might occur to the Gentiles (Rabanus in Aquin. Cat. Aur.).—καὶ προσόντες . . . σμόρναν. They come, eastern fashion, with full hands, as befits those who enter into the presence of a king. They open the boxes or sacks (θησαυροῦς, some ancient copies seem to have read πήρας = sacculus, which Grotius, with probability, regards as an interpretative gloss that had found its way into the text, vide Epiphanius Adv. Haer. Alogi., c. 8), and bring forth gold, frankincense and myrrh, the two latter being aromatic gums distilled from trees.—λίβανον: in classic Greek, the tree, in later Greek and N. T., the gum, τὸ θυμώμενον = λιβανωτός, vide Phryn. ed. Lobeck, p. 187. The gifts were of three kinds, hence the inference that the Magi were three in number. That they were kings was deduced from texts in Psalms and Prophecies (e.g., Psalm lxxii. 10, Isaiah lx. 3), predicting that kings would come doing homage and bringing gifts to Messiah. The legend of the three kings dates as far back as Origen, and is beautiful but baseless. It grew with time; by-and-by the kings were furnished with names. The legendary spirit loves definiteness. The gifts would be products of the givers' country, or in high esteem and costly there. Hence the inference drawn by some that the Magi were from Arabia. Thus Grotius: "Myrrha nonnisi in Arabia nascitur, nec thus nisi apud Jabaeos Arabum portionem: sed et aurifera est felix Arabia". Gold and incense παιδίον μετὰ Μαρίας τῆς μητρὸς αὐτοῦ, καὶ πευόντες προσεκύνησαν

 i Cf. vi. 10-αὐτῶ, καὶ ἀνοίξαντες τοὺς ἑθσαυροὺς αὐτῶν προσήνεγκαν αὐτῶ 21. Lk.
 xii. 53. δῶρα, χρυσὸν καὶ ἴβανον καὶ ἰσμύρναν. 12. καὶ χρηματισθέντες
 Heb. xi.
 20 (=οὐκ) κατ' ὄναρ μὴ ἄνακάμψαι πρὸς Ἡρώδη, δι' ἄλλης ὁδοῦ ἄνεχώρησαν tentum).
 u Rev. xviii. εἰς τὴν χώραν αὐτῶν.
 13.
 v John xix. 13. Ἀναχωρησάντων δὲ αὐτῶν, ἰδοῦ, ἄγγελος Κυρίου φαίνεται 39.
 w Lk. x. 6. κατ' ὄναρ ἰτῶ Ἰωσήφ, λέγων, Ἐγερθεὶς παράλαβε τὸ παιδίον καὶ Acts xviii.
 21. Heb. τὴν μητέρα αὐτοῦ, καὶ φεύγε εἰς Αἴγυπτον, καὶ ἴσθι ἐκεῖ ἕως ἂν
 xi. 15.
 x vv. 14, 22; εἶπω σοί· μέλλει γὰρ Ἡρώδης ζητεῖν τὸ παιδίον, τοῦ ἀπολέσαι
 iv. 12; ix.
 24; xii. 15.
 21.
 αὐτό." 14. Ὁ δὲ ἐγερθεὶς παρέλαβε τὸ παιδίον καὶ τὴν μητέρα
 αὐτοῦ νυκτός, καὶ ἀνεχώρησεν εἰς Αἴγυπτον, 15. καὶ ἦν ἐκεῖ ἕως

<sup>1</sup> B has κατ' ὄναρ εφηνῆ as in i. 20 (W.H. margin).

(λίβανος) are mentioned in Isaiah lx. 6 among the gifts to be brought to Israel in the good time coming. The fathers delighted in assigning to these gifts of the Magi mystic meanings: gold as to a king, incense as to God, myrrh as to one destined to die (ὡς μέλλοντι γεύσασθαι θανάτου). Grotius struck into a new line: gold = works of mercy; incense = prayer; myrrh = purity—to the disgust of Fritzsche, who thought such mystic interpretations beneath so great a scholar.

Ver. 12. Their pious errand fulfilled, the Magi, warned to keep out of Herod's way, return home by another road.—χρηματισθέντες points to divine guidance given in a dream (κατ' ὄναρ); responso accepto, Vulg. The passive, in the sense of a divine oracle given, is found chiefly in N. T. (Fritzsche after Casaubon). Was the oracle given in answer to a prayer for guidance? Opinions differ. It may be assumed here, as in the case of Joseph (i. 20), that the Magi had anxious thoughts corresponding to the divine communication. Doubts had arisen in their minds about Herod's intentions. They had, doubtless, heard something of his history and character, and his manner on reflection may have appeared suspicious. A skilful dissembler, yet not quite successful in concealing his hidden purpose even from these guileless men. Hence a sense of need of guidance, if not a formal petition for it, may be taken for granted. Divine guidance comes only to prepared hearts. The dream reflects the antecedent state of mind.—μὴ ἀνακάμψαι, not to turn back on their steps towards Jerus. and Herod. Fritzsche praises the felicity of this word as implying that to go by Jerusalem was a roundabout for travellers from Bethlehem to the east. Apart from the question of fact, such a thought does not seem to be in the mind of the evangelist. He is thinking, not of the shortest road, but of avoiding Herod—ἀνεχώρησαν, they withdrew not only homewards, but away from Herod's neighbourhood. A word of frequent occurrence in our Gospel, four times in this chapter (vv. 13, 14, 22).

Vv. 13-23. Flight to Egypt, massacre in Bethlehem, return to Nazareth. These three stories have one aim. They indicate the omens which appear in beginnings—omina principis inesse solent (Ovid). The fortunes of Christianity foreshadowed in the experiences of the holy child: welcomed by Gentiles, evil entreated by Jews. "The real contents of these sections embody an ideal aim" (Schanz).

Vv. 13-15. Flight to Egypt. Ver. 13. φαίνεται: assuming that this is the correct reading, the flight to Egypt is represented as following close on the departure of the Magi; the historic present, vividly introducing one scene after another. A subjective state of anxiety is here also to be presumed. Whence arising we can only conjecture. Did the Magi give a hint, mentioning Herod's name in a significant manner? Be that as it may, Joseph also gets the necessary direction.—Ἐγερθεὶς . . . εἰς Αἴγυπτον: Egypt—near, friendly, and the refuge of Israel's ancestors in days of old, if also their house of bondage.—παράλαβε, take with a view to taking care of (cf. John i. 11, "His own received Him not," παρέλαβον); benigne, Fritzsche—ἕως . . . σοί: either generally, till I give thee further orders (Fritzsche); or till I tell thee to return

τῆς ὁ τελευτῆς Ἡρώδου· ἵνα πληρωθῇ τὸ ῥηθὲν ὑπὸ τοῦ<sup>1</sup> Κυρίου here only in N. T.
 διὰ τοῦ προφήτου, λέγοντος, “Ἐξ Αἰγύπτου ἐκάλεσα τὸν υἱόν μου.” Sept. (Gen. xxvii. 2) 16. Τότε Ἡρώδης, ἰδὼν ὅτι ἐνεπαίχθη ὑπὸ τῶν μάγων, ἐθυμώθη for יללך Ch. xx. 19; xxvii. 42, parall. here only in N. T.
 λίαν, καὶ ἀποστείλας ἄνεϊλε πάντας τοὺς παῖδας τοὺς ἐν Βηθλεεμ Ch. xx. 19; xxvii. 42, parall. here only in N. T.
 καὶ ἐν πᾶσι τοῖς ὄροις αὐτῆς, ἀπὸ<sup>d</sup> διετοῦς καὶ κατωτέρω, κατὰ here only in N. T.
 τὸν χρόνον ὃν ἠκρίβωσε παρὰ τῶν μάγων. 17. Τότε ἐπληρώθη τὸ d here only in N. T.
 Gen. xxx. 2. b Lk. xxii. 2; xxiii. 32 (Acts often). c Ch. iv. 13; viii. 34; xv. 22; xix. 1. d here only. Cf. Acts xxiv. 27.

<sup>1</sup> ἸBCD, etc., omit του.

(Meyer, Schanz); sense the same; the time of such new direction is left vague (ἄν with sub.).—μέλλει γάρ: gives reason of the command.—τοῦ ἀπολέσαι αὐτό: Herod's first purpose was to kill Mary's child alone. He afterwards killed many to make sure of the one. The genitive of the infinitive to express purpose belongs to comparatively late Greek. It occurs constantly in the Sept. and in N. T.—Ver. 14. ὁ δὲ ἐγερθεὶς: Joseph promptly executes the command, νυκτός, before the day, indicating alarm as well as obedience. The words of the command in ver. 13 are repeated by the evangelist in ver. 14 to emphasize the obedient spirit of Joseph.—Ver. 15. καὶ ἦν ἐκεῖ, etc.: the stay in Egypt cannot have been long, only a few months, probably, before the death of Herod (Nösgen).—ἵνα πληρωθῇ: another prophetic reference, this time proceeding directly from the evangelist; Hosea xi. 1, given after the Hebrew, not the Sept., which יור יללך has τέκνα αὐτοῦ. The oracle

states a historical fact, and can therefore only be a typical prophecy. The event in the life of the infant Jesus may seem an insignificant fulfilment. Not so did it appear to the evangelist. For him all events in the life of the Christ possessed transcendent significance. Was it an event at all? criticism asks. Did the fact suggest the prophetic reference, or did the prophecy create the fact? In reply, be it said that the narratives in this chapter of the Infancy all hang together. If any one of them occurred, all might occur. The main question is, is Herod's solicitude credible? If so, then the caution of the Magi, the flight to Egypt, the massacre at Bethlehem, the return at the tyrant's death to Nazareth, are all equally credible.

Vv. 16-18. The massacre. Τότε: ominous then. When he was certain that the Magi were not going to come back to report what they had found at

Bethlehem, Herod was enraged as one who had been befooled (ἐνεπαίχθη). Mad-dened with anger, he resolves on more truculent measures than he at first intended: kill all of a certain age to make sure of the one—such is his savage order to his obsequious hirelings. Incredible? Anything is credible of the man who murdered his own wife and sons. This deed shocks Christians; but it was a small affair in Herod's career, and in contemporary history.—ἐν Βηθ. καὶ ἐν πᾶσι τοῖς ὄροις αὐτῆς, in Bethlehem, and around in the neighbourhood, to make quite sure.—ἀπὸ διετοῦς καὶ κατωτέρω: the meaning is clear—all children from an hour to two years old. But διετοῦς may be taken either as masculine, agreeing with παιδός understood=from a two-year-old child, or as a neuter adjective used as a noun=from the age of two years, a bimatu as in Vulg. There are good authorities on both sides. For a similar phrase, vide 1 Chron. xxvii. 23, ἀπὸ ἑικοσαετοῦς. Herod made his net wide enough; two years ensured an ample margin.—κατὰ τ. χ. . . μάγων. Euthy. Zig. insists that these words must be connected, not with διετοῦς, but with κατωτέρω, putting a comma after the former word, and not after the latter. If, he argues, Herod had definitely ascertained from the Magi that the child must be two years old, he would not have killed those younger. They made Mary's child younger; Herod kept their time and added a margin: πλάτος ἕτερον αὐτὸς προσέθηκε. It does not seem to matter very much. Herod would not be very scrupulous. He was likely to add a margin in either case; below if they made the age two years, above if they made it less.—Ver. 18: still another prophetic reference, Jerem. xxxi. 15, freely reproduced from the Sept.; pathetic and poetic certainly, if the relevance be not conspicuously apparent. The evangelist introduces the prophetic passage in this case, not with ἵνα, but with τότε (ver. 17), ῥήθεν ὑπὸ<sup>1</sup> Ἱερεμίου τοῦ προφήτου. λέγοντος, 18. “Φωνὴ ἐν Ῥαμᾶ

 e Ch. xiii. ἠκούσθη, θρήνος καὶ<sup>2</sup> ὀκλαυθμὸς καὶ ὄδυρμὸς πολὺς, Ῥαχὴλ 47, 50, al. f 2 Cor. vii. κλαίουσα τὰ τέκνα αὐτῆς· καὶ οὐκ ἤθελε<sup>3</sup> παρακληθῆναι, ὅτι οὐκ g 7 with acc. εἰσί.” 19. Τελευτήσαντος δὲ τοῦ Ἡρώδου, ἰδοῦ, ἄγγελος Κυρίου here only. κατ’ ὄναρ φαίνεται<sup>4</sup> τῷ Ἰωσήφ ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ, 20. λέγων, “Ἐγερθεὶς παράλαβε τὸ παιδίον καὶ τὴν μητέρα αὐτοῦ, καὶ πορεύου εἰς γῆν h Rom. xi. 3. Ἰσραὴλ· τεθήνηκασι γὰρ οἱ<sup>5</sup> ζητοῦντες τὴν ψυχὴν τοῦ παιδίου.”
 i Rev. v. 10 21. Ὁ δὲ ἐγερθεὶς παρέλαβε τὸ παιδίον καὶ τὴν μητέρα αὐτοῦ, καὶ
 (with ἐπί and gen.) ἦλθεν<sup>5</sup> εἰς γῆν Ἰσραὴλ. 22. ἀκούσας δὲ ὅτι Ἀρχελαὸς βασιλεύει

<sup>1</sup> δια in ΞBCD ; υπο not acc. to style of Evang. (Weiss in Meyer).

<sup>2</sup> θρηνος καὶ om. ΞBZ ; probably introduced to correspond with Sept.

<sup>3</sup> ἠθέλησε in DZ.

<sup>4</sup> φαίνεται κατ ὄναρ, ΞBDZ.

<sup>5</sup> εισηλθεν in ΞBC.

suggesting a fulfilment not regarded as exclusive. The words, even in their original place, are highly imaginative. The scene of Rachel weeping for her children is one of several tableaux, which passed before the prophet's eye in a vision, in a dream which, on awaking, he felt to be sweet. It was poetry to begin with, and it is poetry here. Rachel again weeps over her children; hers, because she was buried there, the prophet's Ramah, near Gibeah, north of Jerusalem, standing for Bethlehem as far to the south. The prophetic passage did not create the massacre; the tradition of the massacre recalled to mind the prophecy, and led to its being quoted, though of doubtful appositeness in a strict sense. Jacob's beloved wife seems to have occupied an imaginative place also in Rabbinical literature. Wünsche quotes this from the Midrasch: "Why did Jacob bury Rachel on the way to Ephratah or Bethlehem? (Gen. xxxv. 16). Because he foresaw that the exiles would at some future time pass that way, and he buried her there that she might pray for them" (Beiträge, p. 11). Rachel was to the Hebrew fancy a mother for Israel in all time, sympathetic in all her children's misfortunes.

Vv. 19-21. Joseph's return. Τελευτήσαντος δὲ τ. Ἡρ: Herod died in 750 u.c. in his 70th year, at Jericho, of a horrible loathsome disease, (rotten in body as in soul, altogether an unwholesome man (vide Joseph, Bell, i. 33, 1-5; Antiq., xvii. 6, 5; Euseb., H. E., i. 6, 8). The news of his death would fly swiftly, and would not take long to reach Egypt. There would be no need of an angel to inform Joseph of the fact. But his anxieties would not therefore be at an end. Who was to succeed Herod? Might he not be another of the same type? Might disorder and confusion not arise? Would it be safe or wise to return to Palestine? Guidance was again needed, desired, and obtained.—ἰδοῦ ἄγγελος . . . λέγων: the guidance is given once more in a dream (κατ' ὄναρ). The anxious thoughts of the daytime are reflected in the dream by night, and the angelic message comes to put an end to uncertainty.—ver. 20. Ἐγερθεὶς . . . Ἰσραὴλ: it is expressed in the same terms as those of the message directing flight to Egypt, except of course that the land is different, and the order not flee but return. "Arise, take the child and His mother." The words were as a refrain in the life of Joseph in those critical months.—τεθήνηκασι γὰρ: in this general manner is the death of Herod referred to, as if in studious avoidance of the dreaded name. They are dead. The plural here (οἱ ζητοῦντες), as often, expresses a general idea, a class, though only a single person is meant (vide Winer, § 27, 2, and Exodus iv. 19). But the manner of expression may indicate a desire to dissipate completely Joseph's apprehensions. There is nothing, no person to fear: go! Ver. 21. ὁ δὲ ἐγερθεὶς . . . Ἰσραὴλ: prompt obedience follows, but νυκτός (ver. 14) is omitted this time. Joseph may wait till day; the matter is not so urgent. Then the word was φεῦγε. It was a flight for life, every hour or minute important.

Vv. 22-23. Settlement in Nazareth in

ἐπι<sup>1</sup> τῆς Ἰουδαίας ἀντὶ Ἡρώδου τοῦ πατρὸς αὐτοῦ,<sup>2</sup> ἐφοβήθη <sup>1</sup> ἐκεῖ j for ἐκεῖσε. Ch. xvii. 20.
ἀπελθεῖν· χρηματισθεὶς δὲ κατ' ὄναρ, ἀνεχώρησεν εἰς τὰ <sup>k</sup> μέρη τῆς John xi. 8;
xviii. 3.
k Ch. xv. 21; xvi. 13. Mk. viii. 10.

<sup>1</sup> Omit ἐπι. SB and several cursives. With ἐπι the usual construction; therefore its omission here probably correct.

<sup>2</sup> SBC place Ἡρώδου after τ. πατ. αὐτου.

Galilee. Joseph returns with mother and child to Israel, but not to Judaea and Bethlehem.—ἀκουσας . . . Ἡρώδου: Archelaos reigns in his father's stead. A man of kindred nature, suspicious, truculent (Joseph., Ant., 17, 11, 2), to be feared and avoided by such as had cause to fear his father.—βασιλεύει, reigns, not in the strict sense of the word. He exercised the authority of an ethnarch, with promise of a royal title if he conducted himself so as to deserve it. In fact he earned banishment. At Herod's death the Roman emperor divided his kingdom into four parts, of which he gave two to Archelaus, embracing Judaea, Idumaea and Samaria; the other two parts were assigned to Antipas and Philip, also sons of Herod: to Antipas, Galilee and Peraea; to Philip, Batanea, Trachonitis and Auranitis. They bore the title of Tetrarch, ruler of a fourth part (Joseph., Ant., 17, 11, 4).—ἐφοβήθη ἐκεῖ ἀπελθεῖν. It is implied that to settle in Judaea was the natural course to follow, and that it would have been followed but for a special reason. Schanz, taking a hint from Augustine, suggests that Joseph wished to settle in Jerusalem, deeming that city the most suitable home for the Messiah, but that God judged the despised Galilee a better training school for the future Saviour of publicans, sinners and Pagans. This hypothesis goes on the assumption that the original seat of the family was Nazareth.—ἐκεῖ: late Greek for ἐκεῖσε. In later Greek authors the distinction between ποῖ ποῦ, οἷ οὔ, ὅποι ὅπου, ἐκεῖ and ἐκεῖσε practically disappeared. Rutherford's New Phrynichus, p. 114. Vide for another instance, Luke xxi. 2. Others explain the substitution as a case of attraction common in adverbs of place. The idea of remaining is in the mind = He feared to go thither to abide there. Vide Lobbeck's Phryn., p. 44, and Fritzsche.—χρηματισθεὶς τῆς Γαλιλαίας: again oracular counsel given in a dream, implying again mental perplexity and need of guidance. Going to Galilee, Judaea being out of the question, was not a matter of course, as we should have expected. The narrative of the first Gospel appears to be constructed on the assumption that Nazareth was not the original home of the holy family, and to represent a tradition for which Nazareth was the adopted home, Bethlehem being the original. "The evangelist did not know that Nazareth was the original seat of the family." Weiss, Matt. evang. p. 98.

Ver. 23. κατοικῆσεν. κατοικεῖν in Sept. is used regularly for בָּשַׁב in the sense of to dwell, and with ἐν in Luke and Acts (Luke xiii. 4; Acts i. 20, etc.) in the same sense. Here with εἰς it seems to mean going to settle in, adopting as a home, the district of Galilee, the particular town called Nazareth.—εἰς πόλιν is to be taken along with κατῶ. not with ἐλθῶν. Arrived in Galilee he transferred his family to Nazareth, as afterwards Jesus migrated to Capernaum to carry on there His ministry (iv. 13, where the same form of expression recurs).—Ναζαρέτ, a town in lower Galilee, in the tribe of Zebulun, nowhere mentioned in O. T. or Josephus.—ὄπως πληρωθῆ, etc.: a final prophetic reference winding up the history of the infancy. ὄπως not ὅτι, as usual, but with much the same meaning. It does not necessarily imply that a prophetic oracle consciously influenced Joseph in making his choice, but only that the evangelist saw in that choice a fulfilment of prophecy. But what prophecy? The reference is vague, not to any particular prophet, but to the prophets in general. In no one place can any such statement be found. Some have suggested that it occurred in some prophetic book or oracle no longer extant. "Don't ask," says Euthy. Zig., "in what prophets; you will not find: many prophetic books were lost" (after Chrys.). Olearius, in an elaborate note, while not adopting, states with evident sympathy this view as held by others. Jerome, following the Jewish scholars (eruditi Hebraeorum) of his time, believed the reference to be mainly to Isaiah xi., where mention is made of a branch (רֹאשׁוֹ) that shall

<sup>1</sup> with v.c. Γαλιλαίας, 23. καὶ ἔλθων <sup>1</sup>κατάρκησεν εἰς πόλιν λεγομένην Ναζαρέτ<sup>1</sup>
 Ch. iv. 13.
 Acts vii. 4 ὅπως πληρωθῆ τὸ ῥηθὲν διὰ τῶν προφητῶν, Ὅτι Ναζωραῖος κληθή-(είν).
 σεται.

<sup>1</sup> This spelling is found in  $\aleph$ BDL and adopted by W.H. Ναζαρεθ in C $\Sigma$ . Other forms occur.

spring out of Jesse's root. This view is accepted by most modern scholars, Catholic and Protestant, the name of the town being viewed as a derivative from the Hebrew word (a feminine form). The epithet Ναζωραῖος will thus mean: "the man of Nazareth, the town of the offshoot". De Wette says: "In the spirit of the exegetical mysticism of the time, and applying what the Jews called Midrasch, deeper investigation, the word is used in a double sense in allusion at once to  $\text{נָצַר}$ , Isaiah xi. 1, sprout, and to the name of Nazareth". There may be something in the suggestion that the reference is to Judges xiii. 7: ὅτι Ναζωραῖον θεοῦ ἔσται, and the idea: one living apart in a secluded town. (So Furrer in Die Bedeutung der bibl. Geographie für d. bib. Exegese, p. 15.)

This final prophetic reference in the history of the infancy is the weakest link in the chain. It is wasted effort to try to show its value in the prophetic argument. Instead of doing this, apologists would act more wisely by frankly recognising the weakness, and drawing from it an argument in favour of historicity. This may very legitimately be done. Of all the incidents mentioned in this chapter, the settlement in Nazareth is the only one we have other means of verifying. Whether it was the original or the adopted home of Jesus may be doubtful, but from many references in the Gospels we know that it was His home from childhood till manhood. In this case, therefore, we certainly know that the historic fact suggested the prophetic reference, instead of the prophecy creating the history. And the very weakness of the prophetic reference in this instance raises a presumption that that was the nature of the connection between prophecy and history throughout. It is a caveat against the critical theory that in the second chapter of Matthew we have an imaginary history of the infancy of Jesus, compiled to meet a craving for knowledge on the subject, and adapted to the requirements of faith, the rudiments of the story consisting of a collection of Messianic prophecies—the star of Jacob, princes bringing gifts, Rachel weeping for her children, etc. The last of the prophetic references would never have occurred to any one, whether the evangelist or any other unknown source of the tradition, unless there had been a fact going before, the settlement in Nazareth. But given the fact, there was a strong desire to find some allusion to it in the O. T. Faith was easily satisfied; the faintest allusion or hint would do. That was in this case, and presumably in most cases of the kind, the problem with which the Christian mind in the Apostolic age was occupied: not creating history, but discovering in evangelic facts even the most minute, prophetic fulfilments. The evangelist's idea of fulfilment may provoke a smile, but it might also awaken a feeling of thankfulness in view of what has been stated. It is with the prophetic references in the Gospels as with songs without words. The composer has a certain scene or state of mind in his view, and writes under its inspiration. But you are not in his secret, and cannot tell when you hear the music what it means. But let the key be given, and immediately you find new meaning in the music. The prophecies are the music; the key is the history. Given the prophecies alone and you could with difficulty imagine the history; given the history you can easily understand how religious fancy might discover corresponding prophecies. That the prophecies, once suggested, might react on the facts and lead to legendary modifications is of course not to be denied.

CHAPTER III. THE MINISTRY OF THE BAPTIST, AND THE BAPTISM OF JESUS. This chapter and part of the next, containing the narrative of the temptation (iv. 1-11), form the prelude to the public ministry of Jesus. John, of whom we have not heard before, appears as consecrating Jesus to His Messianic calling by baptism, and from the baptism Jesus passes to the scene of moral trial. In what year of Christ's life these events happened is not indicated. The new narrative begins with the vague phrase,

III. 1. <sup>a</sup>Ἐν δὲ ταῖς ἡμέραις <sup>b</sup> ἑκείναις <sup>c</sup> παραγίνεται Ἰωάννης ὁ βαπτιστής, <sup>d</sup> κηρύσσων ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ τῆς Ἰουδαίας, 2. καὶ <sup>e</sup> λέγων, <sup>f</sup> “Μετανοεῖτε” ἣγγικε γὰρ ἡ βασιλεία τῶν οὐρανῶν.” 3. Οὗτος ὁλυτεύσει. <sup>g</sup> c passim in Mt. Mk. & Lk. in ref. to the kingdom of God. Cf. Ex. xxxii. 5. d Cf. εγγίζομεν, Heb. vii. 19, and ἔγγυος, ver. 22 (= one who keeps us near to God).

<sup>1</sup> καὶ omitted in NB and Egypt. verss.

“in those days”. But it is obvious from the contents that Jesus has now reached manhood; His thoughts and experiences are those of mature years. From childhood to manhood is an absolute blank in our Gospel. The evangelist gives a genesis of Christ's body, but no genesis of His mind. As we see it in the sequel, it is a miracle of wisdom. It too, doubtless, had its genesis and history, but they are not given or even hinted at. Christ is ushered on the scene an unexplained prodigy. One would like to know how He reached this unprecedented height of wisdom and grace (Luke ii. 52). The only possible source of knowledge is reasoning back from the outcome in the full-grown man. Jesus grew, and the final result may reveal in part the means and process of growth. The anti-Pharisaic spirit and clean-cut descriptions of Pharisaic ways imply antecedent study, perhaps in Rabbinical schools. The parables may not have been so extempore as they seem, but may be the ripe fruit of long brooding thought, things new and yet old.

Vv. 1-6. John the Baptist appears (Mark i. 1-6, Luke iii. 1-6). Ver. 1. ἐν δὲ ταῖς ἡμέραις ἑκείναις: the time when most vaguely indicated. Luke's narrative here (iii. 1) presents a great contrast, as if with conscious intent to supply a want. John's ministry is there dated with reference to the general history of the world, and Christ's age at His baptism is given. Luke's method is more satisfactory in a historical point of view, but Matthew's manner of narration is dramatically effective. He passes abruptly to the new theme, and leaves you to guess the length of the interval. A similarly indefinite phrase occurs in the story of Moses (Ex. ii. 11). There has been much discussion as to what period of time the evangelist had in view. Some say none, except that of the events to be related. “In those days,” means simply, “in the days when the following events happened” (so Euthy. Zig.). Others suggest explanations based on the relation of our Gospel to its sources, e.g., use of a source in which more was told about John, or anticipation of Mark i. 9, where the phrase is used in reference to Christ's coming to be baptised. Probably the best course is to take it as referring back from the apostolic age to the great creative epoch of the evangelic history—“In those memorable years to which we look back with wistful reverent gaze”.—παραγίνεται ὁ 1.: John appears on the stage of history—historical present, used “to give a more animated statement of past events” (Goodwin's Syntax, p. 11). John ὁ βαπτιστής, well known by this epithet, and referred to under that designation by Josephus (Antiq., xviii. 5, 2, on which vide Schürer; Jewish History, div. i., vol. ii., p. 23). Its currency naturally suggests that John's baptism was partly or wholly an originality, not to be confounded with proselyte baptism, which perhaps did not even exist at that time.—κηρύσσων, preaching, as well as baptising, heralding the approach of the Kingdom of Heaven, standing especially in N. T. for proclamation of the good news of God, distinct from διδάσκων (iv. 23); a solemn word for a momentous matter.—ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ τ. Ἰουδαίας: scene of the ministry, the pasture lands lying between the central range of hills and the Jordan and the Dead Sea, not all belonging to Judaea, but of the same character; suitable scene for such a ministry.

Ver. 2. λέγων introduces the burden of his preaching.—μετανοεῖτε, Repent. That was John's great word. Jesus used it also when He began to preach, but His distinctive watchword was Believe. The two watchwords point to different conceptions of the kingdom. John's kingdom was an object of awful dread, Jesus' of glad welcome. The message of the one was legal, of the other evangelic. Change of mind John deemed very necessary as a preparation for Messiah's advent.—ἡ βασιλεία τῶν οὐρανῶν, the Kingdom of Heaven. This title is peculiar to Matthew. In the other Gospels it is called the Kingdom of God. Not used either by John or by ε Is. xl. 3. γὰρ ἔστιν ὁ ῥηθεὶς ὑπὸ<sup>1</sup> Ἡσαΐου τοῦ προφήτου, λέγοντος, “*Φωνὴ

 f here and in par. all. in sense of a worn path (τριβω). αὐτοῦ ἀπὸ τριχῶν καμήλου, καὶ ζώην δερματίνην περὶ τὴν ὀσφύν ε Ch. xxii. 11, xxviii. 3; clothing generally in Mt. vi. 25, 28. h Mk. i. 6. Rev. ix. 3, 7. i Mk. i. 6. Jude 13 (fierce).

<sup>1</sup> ὑπο here as in ii. 17, instead of δια in  $\aleph$ BCD.

<sup>2</sup> αὐτου after ην in  $\aleph$ BCD. The T. R. is suspiciously smooth.

Jesus, says Weiss, but to be ascribed to the evangelist. There does not seem to be any urgent reason for this judgment. In Daniel ii. 44 the kingdom is spoken of as to be set up by “the God of heaven,” and in the Judaistic period previous to the Christian era, when a transcendent conception of God began to prevail, the use of heaven as a synonym for God came in. Custom might cause it to be employed, even by those who did not sympathise with the conception of God as transcendent, outside and far off from the world (vide note in H. C., p. 55).

Ver. 3. οὗτος γὰρ ἔστιν, etc.: the evangelist here speaks. He finds in John the man of prophecy who proclaims in the desert the near advent of Jehovah coming to deliver His people. He quotes Isaiah only. Mark (i. 2) quotes Malachi also, identifying John, not only with the voice in the desert, but with Elijah. Isaiah's herald is not merely a type of John in the view of the evangelist; the two are identical. The quotation follows the Sept., except that for τοῦ θεοῦ ἡμῶν is substituted αὐτοῦ. Note where Matthew stops. Luke, the universalist, goes on to the end of the oracle. The mode of introducing the prophetic citation is peculiar. “This is he,” not “that it might be fulfilled”. Weiss (Meyer) thinks this an indication that the passage is taken from “the apostolic source”.

Ver. 4. αὐτὸς δὲ ὁ ἴ. The story returns to the historical person, John, and identifies him with the herald of prophecy. “This same John.” Then follows a description of his way of life—his clothing and his food, the details conveying a life-like picture of the manner of the man: his habits congruous to his vocation.—τὸ ἔνδυμα ἀπὸ τριχῶν καμήλου: his characteristic (αὐτοῦ) piece of clothing was a rough rude garment woven out of camel's hair, not as some have thought, a camel's skin. We read in Heb. xi. 37, of sheep skins and goat skins worn by some of God's saints, but not of camel skins. Fritzsche takes the opposite view, and Grotius. Euthy., following Chrysostom, says: “Do not ask who wove his garment, or whence he got his girdle; for more wonderful is it that he should live from childhood to manhood in so inhospitable a climate”. John took his fashion in dress from Elijah, described (2 Kings i. 8) as “an hairy man, and girt with a girdle of leather about his loins”. It need not be doubted that the investment is historical, not a legendary creation, due to the opinion that John was Elijah redivivus. The imitation in dress does not imply a desire to pass for Elijah, but expresses similarity of mood.—ἡ δὲ τροφή: his diet as poor as his clothing was mean.—ἀκρίδες: the last of four kinds of edible locusts named in Lev. xi. 22 (Sept.), still it seems used by the poor in the east; legs and wings stripped off, and the remainder boiled or roasted. “The Beduins of Arabia and of East Jordan land eat many locusts, roasted, boiled or baked in cakes. In Arabia they are sold in the market. They taste not badly” (Benzinger, Hebraische Archäologie). Euthy. reports to the same effect as to his own time: many eat it in those parts τεταριχενμένον (pickled). Not pleasant food, palatable only to keen hunger. If we may trust Epiphanius, the Ebionites, in their aversion to animal food, grudging the Baptist even that poor diet, and restricted him to cakes made with honey (ἐγκρίδας ἐν μέλιτι), or to honey alone. Vide Nicholson's Gospel according to the Hebrews, p. 34, and the notes there; also Suicer's Thesaurus, sub. v. ἀκρίς.—μέλι ἄγριον: opinion is divided between bee honey and tree honey, i.e., honey made by wild bees in trees or holes in the rocks, or a liquid exuding from palms and fig trees. (On this also consult Nicholson, Gospel of Hebrews, p. 35.) Both were used as food, but our decision should incline to

5. Τότε ἐξεπορεύετο πρὸς αὐτὸν Ἱεροσόλυμα καὶ πᾶσα ἡ Ἰουδαία j Gen. xiii.
καὶ πᾶσα ἡ <sup>1</sup> περίχωρος τοῦ Ἰορδάνου · β. καὶ ἐβαπτίζοντο <sup>1</sup> ἐν τῷ <sup>10</sup> (same
Ἰορδάνῳ <sup>2</sup> ὑπ' αὐτοῦ, <sup>k</sup> ἐξομολογούμενοι τὰς ἁμαρτίας αὐτῶν. 7. Mt. xiv.
Ἰδῶν δὲ πολλοὺς τῶν Φαρισαίων καὶ Σαδδουκαίων ἐρχομένους ἐπὶ τὸ κ <sup>35</sup> Mk.
βάπτισμα αὐτοῦ, <sup>3</sup> εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, <sup>1</sup> Γεννήματα ἐχιδνῶν, τίς <sup>m</sup> ὑπέδειξεν <sup>i. 28 al.</sup>
here and in Mk. i. 5 = to confess sin.

Similar sense in Acts xix. 18. James v. 16. I Ch. xii. 34; xxiii. 33. Lk. iii. 7. m Lk. iii. 7 (same const. and sense).

<sup>1</sup> Some copies (C<sup>2</sup> 33) have παντες after βαπτ.

<sup>2</sup>  $\aleph$ BC $\Delta$  al. have ποταμῷ after Ἰορ. which the scribes may have omitted as superfluous.

<sup>3</sup> αὐτου omitted in  $\aleph$ B and by Origen.

vegetable honey, on the simple ground that it was the poorer food. Bee honey was a delicacy, and is associated with milk in Scripture in descriptions of a fertile land. The vegetable product would suit best John's taste and state. "Habitatori solitudinis congruum est, non delicias ciborum, sed necessitatem humanae carnis explere." Jerome.

Vv. 5-6. Effects of John's preaching. Remarkable by his appearance, his message, and his moral intensity, John made a great impression. They took him for a prophet, and a prophet was a novelty in those days. His message appealed to the common Messianic hope, and proclaimed fulfilment to be at hand.—Τότε, then, general note of time, frequent in this Gospel. ἐξεπορεύετο imperfect, denoting continued action. The movement of course was gradual. It began on a small scale and steadily grew till it reached colossal dimensions. Each evangelist, in his own way, bears witness to this. Luke speaks of crowds (iii. 7), Mark and Matthew give graphic particulars, similar, but in diverse order. "All Judaea and all the Jerusalemites," says Mark. "Jerusalem, Judaea and the Jordan country," Matthew. The historical order was probably the reverse of that in Matthew's narrative. First came those from the surrounding country—people living near the Jordan, on either side, in what is now called El-Ghor. Then the movement extended in widening circles into Judaea. Finally it affected conservative, disdainful Jerusalem, slow to be touched by new popular influences.—Ἱεροσόλυμα: the Greek form here as in ii. 3, and generally in this Gospel. It is not said all Jerusalem, as in Mark. The remarkable thing is that any came from that quarter. Standing first, and without the "all," the reference means even Jerusalem. The πᾶσα in the other two clauses is of course an exaggeration. It implies, not that every human being went to the Jordan, but that the movement was general. The evangelist expresses himself just as we should do in a similar case. Πᾶς with the article means "the whole," without, "every".—Ver. 6. καὶ ἐβαπτίζοντο: the imperfect again. They were baptised as they came.—ἐν τῷ Ἰορ. ποταμῷ. The word ποταμῷ, omitted in T. R., by all means to be retained. Dull prosaic scribes might deem it superfluous, as all men knew the Jordan was a river, but there is a touch of nature in it which helps us to call up the scene.—ὑπ' αὐτοῦ, by him, the one man. John would not want occupation, baptising such a crowd, one by one.—ἐξομολογούμενοι: confession was involved in the act of submitting to baptism at the hands of one whose preaching had for its burden, Repent. But there was explicit confession, frank, full (ἐκ intensifies), on the part of guilt-burdened men and women glad to get relief so. General or special confession? Probably both: now one, now the other, according to idiosyncrasy and mood. Confession was not exacted as a conditio sine qua non of baptism, but voluntary. The participle means, while confessing; not, provided they confessed. This confession of sins by individuals was a new thing in Israel. There was a collective confession on the great day of atonement, and individual confession in certain specified cases (Numb. v. 7), but no great spontaneous self-unburdenment of penitent souls—every man apart. It must have been a stirring sight.

Vv. 7-10. Words of rebuke and warning to unwelcome visitors (Luke iii. 7-9). Ver. 7. Ἰδῶν δὲ, etc.: among those who visited the Jordan were some, not a few, many indeed (πολλοὺς) of the n Cf. Is. xlviii. 20. Mk. xvi. 8. ὁμίον<sup>1</sup> φυγεῖν ἀπὸ ° τῆς μελλούσης ὀργῆς; δ. ποιήσατε οὖν καρποὺς ο for the idea of "the coming wrath," vide Rom. ii. 5. 1 Thess. i. 10. p Ch. vi. 7; xxvi. 53. q Ch. ix. 27.

 Lk. iii. 8. Cf. Ps. iv. 5; x. 6; xiv. 1.

<sup>1</sup> καρπον αξιον in ΞBCD and many other uncials. The reading in T. R. (found in L) may have come in from Lk. iii. 8, where it is undisputed.

PHARISEES and SADDUCEES. The first mention of classes of whom the Gospels have much to say, the former being the legal precisians, virtuosi in religion, the latter the men of affairs and of the world, largely belonging to the sacerdotal class (consult Wellhausen, Die Pharisäer und die Sadducäer). Their presence at the scene of John's ministry is credible. Drawn doubtless by mixed motives, as persons of their type generally are, moral simplicity not being in their line; partly curious, partly fascinated, partly come to spy; in an ambiguous state of mind, neither decidedly in sympathy nor pronouncedly hostile. In any case they cannot remain indifferent to a movement so deep and widespread. So here they are; coming to (ἐπι) John's baptism, not to be baptised, nor coming against, as some (Olearius, e.g.) have thought, as if to put the movement down, but coming to witness the strange, novel phenomenon, and form their impressions. John did not make them welcome. His spirit was troubled by their presence. Simple, sensitive, moral natures instinctively shrink from the presence of insincerity, duplicity and craftiness.—ιδῶν: how did they come under his observation? By their position in the crowd or on the outskirts of it, and by their aspect? How did he identify them as Pharisees and Sadducees? How did the hermit of the desert know there were such people? It was John's business to know all the moral characteristics of his time. These were the matters in which he took supreme interest, and he doubtless had means of informing himself, and took pains to do so. It may be assumed that he knew well about the Essenes living in his neighbourhood, by the shores of the Dead Sea, somewhat after his own fashion, and about the other two classes, whose haunts were the great centres of population. There might be Essenes too in the crowd, though not singled out, the history otherwise having no occasion to mention them.—γεννήματα ἐχιδῶν: sudden, irrepressible outburst of intense moral aversion. Why vipers? The ancient and mediæval interpreters (Chrysos., Aug., Theophy., Euthy.) had recourse in explanation to the fable of the young viper eating its mother's womb. The term ought rather to be connected with the following words about fleeing from the coming wrath. The serpents of all sorts lurking in the fields fresh when the stubble is set on fire in harvest in preparation for the winter sowing. The Baptist likens the Pharisees and Sadducees to these serpents fleeing for their lives (Furrer in Zeitschrift für Missionskunde und Religionswissenschaft, 1890). Professor G. A. Smith, Historical Geography of the Holy Land, p. 495, suggests the fires among the dry scrub, in the higher stretches of the Jordan valley, chasing before them the scorpions and vipers, as the basis of the metaphor. There is grim humour as well as wrath in the similitude. The emphasis is not on vipers but on fleeing. But the felicity of the comparison lies in the fact that the epithet suits very well. It implies that the Pharisees and Sadducees are fleeing. They have caught slightly the infection of repentance; yet John does not believe in its depth or permanence.—τίς ὑπέδειξεν: there is surprise in the question. Can it be possible that even you have learned to fear the approaching crisis? Most unlikely scholars.—φυγεῖν ἀπὸ: pregnant for "flee and escape from" (De Wette). The aorist points to possibility, going with verbs of hoping and promising in this sense (Winer, § xlv. 7 c.). The implied thought is that it is not possible = who encouraged you to expect deliverance? The aorist further signifies a momentary act: now or never.—τῆς μελ. ὀργῆς, the day of wrath impending, precluding the advent of the Kingdom. The idea of wrath was prominent in John's mind: the coming of the Kingdom an awful affair; Messiah's work largely a work of judgment. But he rose above ordinary Jewish ideas in this: they conceived of the judgment as concerning the heathen peoples; he thought of it as concerning the goddess in Israel—Ver. 8. ποιήσατε

Πατέρα ἔχομεν τὸν Ἀβραάμ· λέγω γὰρ ὑμῖν, ὅτι δύναται ὁ Θεὸς <sup>r vide ver. 8</sup>
 ἐκ τῶν λίθων τούτων ἐγεῖραι τέκνα τῷ Ἀβραάμ. 10. ἤδη δὲ <sup>and vii. 17-19; xiii. 26</sup> καὶ ἡ ἀξίνη πρὸς τὴν ρίζαν τῶν δένδρων κείται· πᾶν οὖν δένδρον <sup>al. Cf. Gen. i. 11.</sup>
 μὴ <sup>s Ch. vii. 19;</sup> ποιοῦν καρπὸν καλὸν <sup>aneye, etc., v. 30; 4κ</sup> ἐκκόπτεται καὶ εἰς πῦρ βάλλεται. 11. <sup>τινος, Rom. xi. 24.</sup> Ἐγὼ μὲν βαπτίζω ὑμᾶς <sup>t Mk. i. 7.</sup> ἐν ὕδατι εἰς μετάνοιαν· ὁ δὲ ὀπίσω μου <sup>(πρὸς τῷ</sup>
 ἐρχόμενος ἰσχυρότερός μου ἐστίν, οὗ οὐκ εἰμὶ ἴκανός τὰ ὑποδήματα

Lk. iii. 16. 1 Cor. xv. 9. 2 Cor. iii. 5 (=fit with inf.). 2 Cor. ii. 16

<sup>1</sup> καὶ omitted in  $\aleph$ BCDA and by most modern editors.

<sup>2</sup> βαπτίζω ὑμᾶς inverted in  $\aleph$ B 1, 33.

οὖν, etc. "If, then, ye are in earnest about escape, produce fruit worthy of repentance; repentance means more than confession and being baptised." That remark might be applied to all that came, but it contained an innuendo in reference to the Pharisees and Sadducees that they were insincere even now. Honest repentance carries amendment along with it. Amendment is not expected in this case because the repentance is disbelieved in.—καρπὸν, collective, as in Gal. v. 22, fruit; the reading in T. R. is probably borrowed from Luke iii. 8. The singular is intrinsically the better word in addressing Pharisees who did good actions, but were not good. Yet John seems to have inculcated reformation in detail (Luke iii. 10-14). It was Jesus who proclaimed the inwardness of true morality. Fruit: the figure suggests that conduct is the outcome of essential character. Any one can do (ποιήσατε, vide Gen. i. 11) acts externally good, but only a good man can grow a crop of right acts and habits.

Vv. 9-10. Protest and warning. καὶ μὴ δόξητε . . . τ. Ἀβραάμ: the meaning is plain = do not imagine that having Abraham for father will do instead of repentance—that all children of Abraham are safe whatever betide. But the expression is peculiar: do not think to say within yourselves. One would have expected either: do not think within yourselves, or, do not say, etc. Wetstein renders: "ne animum inducite sic apud vosmet cogitare," with whom Fritzsche substantially agrees = do not presume to say, cf. Phil. iii. 4.—πατέρα, father, in the emphatic position = we have as father, Abraham; it is enough to be his children: the secret thought of all unspiritual Jews, Abraham's children only in the flesh. It is probable that these words (vv. 9, 10) were spoken at a different time, and to a different audience, not merely to Pharisees and Sadducees, but to the people generally. Vv. 7-12 are a very condensed summary of a preaching ministry in which many weighty words were spoken (Luke iii. 18), these being selected as most representative and most relevant to the purpose of the evangelist. Vv. 7-8 contain a word for the leaders of the people; vv. 9-10 for the people at large; vv. 11-12 a word to inquirers about the Baptist's own relation to the Messiah.—Ver. 10. ἤδη δὲ ἡ ἀξίνη . . . κείται: judgment is at hand. The axe has been placed (κείμεαι = perfect passive of τίθημι) at the root of the tree to lay it low as hopelessly barren. This is the doom of every non-productive fruit tree.—ἐκκόπτεται: the present tense, expressive not so much of the usual practice (Fritzsche) as of the near inevitable event.—μὴ ποιοῦν καρπὸν καλόν, in case it produce not (μὴ conditional) good fruit, not merely fruit of some kind, degenerate, unpalatable.—εἰς πῦρ βάλλεται: useless for any other purpose except to be firewood, as the wood of many fruit trees is.

Vv. 11, 12. John defines his relation to the Messiah (Mark i. 7-8; Luke iii. 15-17). This prophetic word would come late in the day when the Baptist's fame was at its height, and men began to think it possible he might be the Christ (Luke iii. 15). His answer to inquiries plainly expressed or hinted was unhesitating. No, not the Christ, there is a Coming One. He will be here soon. I have my place, important in its own way, but quite secondary and subordinate. John frankly accepts the position of herald and forerunner, assigned to him in ver. 3 by the citation of the prophetic oracle as descriptive of his ministry.—ἐγὼ μὲν, etc. ἐγὼ emphatic, but with the emphasis of subordination. My function is to baptise with water, symbolic of repentance.—ὁ δὲ ὁ. μ. ἐρχόμενος. He who is just coming (present participle). How did John know

- u Lk. iii. 17. βασιτάσαι· αὐτὸς ὑμᾶς βαπτίσει ἐν Πνεύματι Ἁγίῳ καὶ πυρὶ. 12.
 v Lk. iii. 17.
 w Ch. vi. 26; οὐ τὸ πτόον ἐν τῇ χειρὶ αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἡ διακαθαριεὶ τὴν ἄλωνα αὐτοῦ, xiii. 30.
 Lk. xii. 18. καὶ συναίξει τὸν σίτον αὐτοῦ εἰς τὴν ἀποθήκην,<sup>1</sup> τὸ δὲ ἄχυρον x Mk. ix. 43. κατακαύσει πυρὶ ἄσβέστω."
 Lk. iii. 17.

<sup>1</sup> BL have αὐτου after αποθηκην (W.H. marg.). L omits αὐτου after σιτον.

the Messiah was just coming? It was an inference from his judgment on the moral condition of the time. Messiah was needed; His work was ready for Him; the nation was ripe for judgment. Judgment observe, for that was the function uppermost in his mind in connection with the Messianic advent. These two verses give us John's idea of the Christ, based not on personal knowledge, but on religious preconceptions. It differs widely from the reality. John can have known little of Jesus on the outer side, but he knew less of His spirit. We cannot understand his words unless we grasp this fact. Note the attributes he ascribes to the Coming One. The main one is strength—ισχυρότερος fully unfolded in the sequel. Along with strength goes dignity—οὐ οὐκ εἰμι, etc. He is so great, august a personage, I am not fit to be His slave, carrying to and from Him, for and after use, His sandals (a slave's office in Judaea, Greece and Rome). An Oriental magnificent exaggeration.—αὐτὸς ὑμᾶς βαπτίσει: returns to the Power of Messiah, as revealed in His work, which is described as a baptism, the better to bring out the contrast between Him and His humble forerunner.—ἐν πνεύματι ἁγίῳ καὶ πυρὶ. Notable here are the words, ἐν πνεύματι ἁγίῳ. They must be interpreted in harmony with John's standpoint, not from what Jesus proved to be, or in the light of St. Paul's teaching on the Holy Spirit as the immanent source of sanctification. The whole baptism of the Messiah, as John conceives it, is a baptism of judgment. It has been generally supposed that the Holy Spirit here represents the grace of Christ, and the fire His judicial function; not a few holding that even the fire is gracious as purifying. I think that the grace of the Christ is not here at all. The πνεῦμα ἁγίον is a stormy wind of judgment; holy, as sweeping away all that is light and worthless in the nation (which, after the O. T. manner, is conceived of as the subject of Messiah's action, rather than the individual). The fire destroys what the wind leaves. John, with his wild prophetic imagination, thinks of three elements as representing the functions of himself and of Messiah: water, wind, fire. He baptises with water, in the running stream of Jordan, to emblem the only way of escape, amendment. Messiah will baptise with wind and fire, sweeping away and consuming the impenitent, leaving behind only the righteous. Possibly John had in mind the prophetic word, "our iniquities, like the wind, have taken us away," Is. lxiv. 6; or, as Furrer, who I find also takes πνεῦμα in the sense of "wind," suggests, the "wind of God," spoken of in Is. xl. 7: the strong east wind which blights the grass (Zeitschrift für Missionskunde und Religionswissenschaft, 1890). Carr, Cambridge G. T., inclines to the same view, and refers to Is. xli. 16: "Thou shalt fan them, and the wind shall carry them away." Vide also Is. iv. 4.

Ver. 12. This ver. follows up ver. 11, and explains the judicial action emblemed by wind and fire.—οὐ τὸ πτόον ἐ. τ. χ. αὐτοῦ. The construction is variously understood. Grotius takes it as a Hebraism for ἐν οὐ χειρὶ τὸ πτόον. Fritzsche takes ἐν τ. χειρὶ αὐτοῦ as epexegetical, and renders: "whose will be the fan, viz., in His hand". Meyer and Weiss take οὐ as assigning a reason: "He (αὐτὸς of ver. 11) whose fan is in hand and who is therefore able to perform the part assigned to Him". Then follows an explanation of the modus operandi.—διακαθαριεὶ from διακαθαρίζω, late for classic διακαθαίρω. The idea is: He with His fan will throw up the wheat, mixed with the chaff, that the wind may blow the chaff away; He will then collect the straw, ἄχυρον (in Greek writers usually plural τὰ ἄχυρα, vide Grimm), and burn it with fire, and collect the wheat lying on the threshing floor and store it in His granary. So shall He thoroughly (δια intensifying) cleanse His floor. And the sweeping wind and the consuming fire are the emblems and measure of His power; stronger than mine, as the tempest and the devastating flames are mightier than the stream which I use as my element.—ἄλωνα, a place

13. Τότε παραγίνεται ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἀπὸ τῆς Γαλιλαίας ἐπὶ τὸν Ἰορδάνην πρὸς τὸν Ἰωάννην, τοῦ βαπτισθῆναι ὑπ' αὐτοῦ. 14. ὁ δὲ Ἰωάννης<sup>1</sup> διεκώλυεν αὐτόν, λέγων, "Ἐγὼ<sup>a</sup> χρεῖαν ἔχω ὑπὸ σοῦ βαπτισθῆναι, καὶ σὺ ἔρχῃ πρὸς με;" 15. Ἀποκριθεὶς δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπε πρὸς αὐτόν,<sup>2</sup> "Ἄφες ἄρτι· οὕτω γὰρ<sup>b</sup> πρέπον ἐστὶν ἡμῖν
 here only. for force of tense. cf. Lk. i. 59. Acts vii. 26. Ch. xiv. 16. John xiii. 10 (same const.). a John xiii. 37. 1 Cor. xiii. 12 (now, opp. to fut. time). b Heb. ii. 10. With acc. and inf., 1 Cor. xi. 13.

<sup>1</sup> Ἰωαννης omitted in  $\delta\delta$ B sah. vers. (W.H. omit.)

<sup>2</sup> For προς αυτον B and it. vg. cop. versions have αυτω. Though weakly attested this reading accords best with the usage of the Evangelist. W.H. adopt it.

in a field made firm by a roller, or on a rocky hill top exposed to the breeze.—ἀποθήκη means generally any kind of store, and specially a grain store, often underground. Bleek takes the epithet ἀσβέστω applied to the fire as signifying: inextinguishable till all the refuse be consumed. It is usually understood absolutely.

Vv. 13-17. Jesus appears, His baptism and its accompaniments (Mark i. 9-11; Luke iii. 21-22). Ver. 13. Τότε παρα. ὁ Ἰ. . . Γαλιλαίας: then, after John had described the Messiah, appears on the scene (παραγίνεται, the historical present again, as in ver. 1, with dramatic effect) from Galilee, where He has lived since childhood, Jesus, the real Christ; how widely different from the Christ conceived by the Baptist we know from the whole evangelic history. But shutting off knowledge gathered from other sources, we may obtain significant hints concerning the stranger from Galilee from the present narrative. He comes ἐπὶ τὸν Ἰ. πρὸς τὸν Ἰωαν, τοῦ βαπτισθῆναι ὑπ' αὐτοῦ. These words at once suggest a contrast between Jesus and the Pharisees and Sadducees. They came to the baptism as a phenomenon to be critically observed. Jesus comes to the Jordan (ἐπὶ), towards the Baptist (πρὸς) to enter into personal friendly relations with him (vide John i. 1, πρὸς τὸν θεόν), in order to be baptised by him (genitive of the infinitive expressing purpose). Jesus comes thoroughly in sympathy with John's movement, sharing his passion for righteousness, fully appreciating the symbolic significance of his baptism, and not only willing, but eager to be baptised; the Jordan in His mind from the day He leaves home. A very different person this from the leaders of Israel, Pharisaic or Sadducaic. But the sequel suggests a contrast also between Him and John himself.

Vv. 14-15. John refuses. It is instructive to compare the three synoptical evangelists in their respective narratives of the baptism of Jesus. Mark (i. 9) simply states the fact. Matthew reports perplexities created in the mind of John by the desire of Jesus to be baptised, and presumably in the minds of Christians for whom he wrote. Luke (iii. 21) passes lightly over the event in a participial clause, as if conscious that he was on delicate ground. The three narratives exhibit successive phases of opinion on the subject, a fact not without bearing on the dates and relations of the three Gospels. Matthew represents the intermediate phase. His account is intrinsically credible.—Ver. 14. διεκώλυεν: imperfect, pointing to a persistent (note the διὰ) but unsuccessful attempt to prevent. His reason was a feeling that if either was to be baptised the relation ought to be inverted. To understand this feeling it is not necessary to import a fully developed Messianic theology into it, imputing to the Baptist all that we believe concerning Jesus as the Christ and the sinless one. It is enough to suppose that the visitor from Galilee had made a profound moral impression on him by His aspect and conversation, and awakened thoughts, hopes, incipient convictions as to who He might be. Nor ought we to take too seriously the Baptist's statement: "I have need to be baptised of Thee". Hitherto he had had no thought of being baptised himself. He was the baptiser, not one feeling need to be baptised; the censor of sinners, not the sympathetic fellow-sinner. And just here lies the contrast between John and Jesus, and between the Christ of John's imagination and the Christ of reality. John was severe; Jesus was sympathetic. John was the baptiser of sinners; Jesus wished to be baptised, as if a sinner

ε 1. k. iii. 21. πληρῶσαι πᾶσαν δικαιοσύνην." Τότε ἀφίησιν αὐτόν. 16. Καὶ
John 1:52.
Acts x. 11 βαπτισθεὶς<sup>1</sup> ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἀνέβη εὐθὺς<sup>2</sup> ἀπὸ τοῦ ὕδατος· καὶ ἰδοῦ, (with δὲ,
Acts vii.
56). ἀνεώχθησαν<sup>3</sup> αὐτῷ<sup>4</sup> οἱ οὐρανοί, καὶ εἶδε τὸ Πνεῦμα τοῦ Θεοῦ κατα-

<sup>1</sup> βαπτισθεὶς δε in  $\aleph$ BC vg. sah. cop.

<sup>2</sup> For ἀνέβη εὐθὺς  $\aleph$ B have εὐθὺς ἀνέβη.

<sup>3</sup> B has ηνεωχθησαν.

<sup>4</sup>  $\aleph$ B omit αὐτῷ.

Himself, a brother of the sinful. In the light of this contrast we are to understand the baptism of Jesus. Many explanations of it have been given (for these, vide Meyer), mostly theological. One of the most feasible is that of Weiss (Matt.-Evan.), that in accordance with the symbolic significance of the rite as denoting death to an old life and rising to a new, Jesus came to be baptised in the sense of dying to the old natural relations to parents, neighbours, and earthly calling, and devoting Himself henceforth to His public Messianic vocation. The true solution is to be found in the ethical sphere, in the sympathetic spirit of Jesus which made Him maintain an attitude of solidarity with the sinful rather than assume the position of critic and judge. It was impossible for such an one, on the ground of being the Messiah, or even on the ground of sinlessness, to treat John's baptism as a thing with which He had no concern. Love, not a sense of dignity or of moral faultlessness, must guide His action. Can we conceive sinlessness being so conscious of itself, and adopting as its policy aloofness from sinners? Christ's baptism might create misunderstanding, just as His associating with publicans and sinners did. He was content to be misunderstood.

Ver. 15. The reasoning with which Jesus replies to John's scruples is characteristic. His answer is gentle, respectful, dignified, simple, yet deep.—"Ἄφες ἄρτι—deferential, half-yielding, yet strong in its very gentleness. Does ἄρτι imply a tacit acceptance of the high position assigned to Him by John (Weiss-Meyer)? We may read that into it, but I doubt if the suggestion does justice to the feeling of Jesus.—οὕτω γὰρ πρέπον: a mild word when a stronger might have been used, because it refers to John as well as Jesus: fitting, becoming, congruous; vide Heb. ii. 10, where the same word is used in reference to the relation of God to Christ's sufferings. "It became Him."—πᾶσαν δικαιοσύνην: this means more than meets the ear, more than could be explained to a man like John. The Baptist had a passion for righteousness, yet his conception of righteousness was narrow, severe, legal. Their ideas of righteousness separated the two men by a wide gulf which is covered over by this general, almost evasive, phrase: all righteousness or every form of it. The special form meant is not the mere compliance with the ordinance of baptism as administered by an accredited servant of God, but something far deeper, which the new era will unfold. John did not understand that love is the fulfilling of the law. But he saw that under the mild words of Jesus a very earnest purpose was hid. So at length he yielded—τότε ἀφίησιν αὐτόν.

Vv. 16, 17. The preternatural accompaniments. These have been variously viewed as meant for the people, for the Baptist, and for Jesus. In my judgment they concern Jesus principally and in the first place, and are so viewed by the evangelist. And as we are now making the acquaintance of Jesus for the first time, and desiring to know the spirit, manner, and vocation of Him whose mysterious birth has occupied our attention, we may confine our comments to this aspect. Applying the principle that to all objective supernatural experiences there are subjective psychological experiences corresponding, we can learn from the dove-like vision and the voice from heaven the thoughts which had been passing through the mind of Jesus at this critical period. These thoughts it most concerns us to know; yet it is just these thoughts that both believers and naturalistic unbelievers are in danger of overlooking; the one through regarding the objective occurrences as alone important, the other because, denying the objective element in the experience, they rush to the conclusion that there was no experience at all. Whereas the truth is that, whatever is to be said as to the objective element, the subjective at βαίνον ὡσεὶ <sup>d</sup> περιστερῶν, καὶ <sup>1</sup> ἐρχόμενον ἐπ' αὐτόν. 17. καὶ ἰδοὺ, <sup>d</sup> Ch. x. 16; <sup>xxi. 12.</sup>

 φωνῆ ἐκ τῶν οὐρανῶν λέγουσα, “Οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ υἱὸς μου ὁ ἀγαπητός, <sup>Lk. ii. 24.</sup>
 ἐν ᾧ <sup>c</sup> εὐδόκησα.” <sup>Ch. xii. 18;</sup>
<sup>xvii. 5. 1</sup>
<sup>Cor. x. 5.</sup>

Heb. x. 38 (all with en and dat.).

<sup>1</sup> SB omit καί.

<sup>2</sup> NCL have ηυδοκ., which Tischendorf follows. W.H. as in T. R.

all events is real: the thoughts reflected and symbolised in the vision and the voice.

Ver. 16. εὐθὺς may be connected with βαπτισθεὶς, with ἀνέβη, or with ἠνεψύχθησαν in the following clause by a hyperbaton (Grotius). It is commonly and correctly taken along with ἀνέβη. But why say straightway ascended? Euthy. gives an answer which may be quoted for its quaintness: “They say that John had the people under water up to the neck till they had confessed their sins, and that Jesus having none to confess carried not in the river”. Fritzsche laughs at the good monk, but Schanz substantially adopts his view. There might be worse explanations.—καὶ ἰδοὺ ἠνεψύχθησαν, etc. When Jesus ascended out of the water the heavens opened and He (Jesus) saw the spirit of God descending as a dove coming upon Him. According to many interpreters, including many of the Fathers, the occurrence was of the nature of a vision, the appearance of a dove coming out of the heavens. ὁ εὐαγγελιστὴς οὐκ εἶπεν ὅτι ἐν φύσει περιστερῶς, ἀλλ' ἐν εἰδεί περιστερῶς—Chrys. Dove-like: what was the point of comparison? Swift movement, according to some; soft gentle movement as it sinks down on its place of rest, according to others. The Fathers insisted on the qualities of the dove. Euthy. sums up these thus: φιλόανθρωπον γὰρ ἐστὶ καὶ ἀνεξίκακον· ἀποστερούμενον γὰρ τῶν νεοσσῶν ὑπομένει, καὶ οὐδὲν ἤττον τοῦς ἀποστερούντας προσίεται. Καὶ καθαρῶτάτῳ ἐστὶ, καὶ τῇ εὐωδίᾳ χαίρει. Whether the dove possesses all these qualities—philanthropy, patient endurance of wrong, letting approach it those who have robbed it of its young, purity, delight in sweet smells—I know not; but I appreciate the insight into the spirit of Christ which specifying such particulars in the emblematic significance of the dove implies. What is the O. T. basis of the symbol? Probably Gen. viii. 9, 10. Grotius hints at this without altogether adopting the view. Thus we obtain a contrast between John's conception of the spirit and that of Jesus as reflected in the vision. For John the emblem of the spirit was the stormy wind of judgment; for Jesus the dove with the olive leaf after the judgment by water was past.

Ver. 17. οὗτός ἐστιν: “this is,” as if addressed to the Baptist; in Mk. i. 9, σὺ εἶ, as if addressed to Jesus.—ἐν ᾧ εὐδόκ.: a Hebraism, ;  $\aleph$   $\psi$   $\eta$   $\tau$ .—εὐδοκῆσα, aorist, either to express habitual satisfaction, after the manner of the Gnostic Aorist (vide Hermann's Viger, p. 169), or to denote the inner event= my good pleasure decided itself once for all for Him. So Schanz; cf. Winer, § 40, 5, on the use of the aorist. εὐδοκεῖν, according to Sturz, De Dialecto Macedonica et Alexandrina, is not Attic but Hellenistic. The voice recalls and in some measure echoes Is. xlii. 1, “Behold My servant, I uphold Him; My chosen one, My soul delights in Him. I have put My spirit upon Him.” The title “Son” recalls Ps. ii. 7. Taking the vision, the voice, and the baptism together as interpreting the consciousness of Jesus before and at this time, the following inferences are suggested. (1) The mind of Jesus had been exercised in thought upon the Messianic vocation in relation to His own future. (2) The chief Messianic charism appeared to Him to be sympathy, love. (3) His religious attitude towards God was that of a Son towards a Father. (4) It was through the sense of sonship and the intense love to men that was in His heart that He discovered His Messianic vocation. (5) Prophetic texts gave direction to and supplied means of expression for His religious meditations. His mind, like that of John, was full of prophetic utterances, but a different class of oracles had attractions for Him. The spirit of John revelled in images of awe and terror. The gentler spirit of Jesus delighted in words depicting the ideal servant of God as clothed with meekness, patience, wisdom, and love.

CHAPTER IV. THE TEMPTATION, AND THE BEGINNING OF THE GALILEAN MINISTRY. It is in every way credible that the baptism of Jesus with its connected incidents should be followed by a season of moral trial, or, to express it more generally, by a period of retirement for earnest thought on the future career so solemnly inaugurated. Retirement for prayer and meditation was a habit with Jesus, and it was never more likely to be put in practice than now. He had left home under a powerful impulse with the Jordan and baptism in view. The baptism was a decisive act. Whatever more it might mean, it meant farewell to the past life of obscurity and consecration to a new, high, unique vocation. It remained now to realise by reflection what this calling, to which He had been set apart by John and by heavenly omens, involved in idea, execution, and experience. It was a large, deep, difficult subject of study. Under powerful spiritual constraints Jesus had taken a great leap in the dark, if one may dare to say so. What wonder if, in the season of reflection, temptations arose to doubt, shrinking, regret, strong inclination to look back and return to Nazareth?

a Lk. ii. 22; iv. 5. Acts ix. 39. Cf. Rom. x. 7. IV. I. Τότε ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἀνήχθη εἰς τὴν ἔρημον ὑπὸ τοῦ Πνεύματος, πειρασθῆναι ὑπὸ τοῦ διαβόλου. 2. καὶ ἠηστεύσας ἡμέρας τεσσαράκοντα (to lead up from the dead). b besides parall. 1 Cor. vii. 5. 1 Thess. iii. 5 (same sense). c Ch. vi. 16-18; ix. 14. Acts xiii. 2.

<sup>1</sup> B omits ο; bracketed in W.H.

In this experience Jesus was alone inwardly as well as outwardly. No clear, adequate account could be given of it. It could only be faintly shadowed forth in symbol or in parable. One can understand how in one Gospel (Mk.) no attempt is made to describe the Temptation, but the fact is simply stated. And it is much more important to grasp the fact as a great reality in Christ's inner experience than to maintain anxiously the literal truth of the representation in Matt. and Luke. In the fight of faith and unbelief over the supernatural element in the story all sense of the inward psychological reality may be lost, and nothing remain but an external, miraculous, theatrical transaction which utterly fails to impress the lesson that Jesus was veritably tempted as we are, severely and for a length of time, before the opening of His public career, in a representative manner anticipating the experiences of later date. All attempts to dispose summarily of the whole matter by reference to similar temptation legends in the case of other religious initiators like Buddha are to be deprecated. Nor should one readily take up with the theory that the detailed account of the Temptation in Matt. and Luke is simply a composition suggested by O. T. parallels or by reflection on the critical points in Christ's subsequent history. (So Holtzmann in H. C.) We should rather regard it as having its ultimate source in an attempt by Jesus to convey to His disciples some faint idea of what He had gone through.

Vv. 1-11. The Temptation (Mk. i. 12, 13; Luke iv. 1-13). Ver. 1. Τότε, then, implying close connection with the events recorded in last chapter, especially the descent of the Spirit.—ἀνήχθη, was led up, into the higher, more solitary region of the wilderness, the haunt of wild beasts (Mk. i. 13) rather than of men.—ὑπὸ τοῦ πνεύματος. (The divine Spirit has to do with our darker experiences as well as with our bright, joyous ones. He is with the sons of God in their conflicts with doubt not less than in their moments of noble impulse and heroic resolve. The same Spirit who brought Jesus from Nazareth to the Jordan afterward led Him to the scene of trial. The theory of desertion hinted at by Calvin and adopted by Olshausen is based on a superficial view of religious experience. God's Spirit is never more with a man than in his spiritual struggles. Jesus was mightily impelled by the Spirit at this time (cf. Mk.'s ἐκβάλλει). And as the power exerted was not physical but moral, the fact points to intense mental preoccupation.—πειρασθῆναι, to be tempted, not necessarily covering the whole experience of those days, but noting a specially important phase: to be tempted inter alia.—πειράζω: a later form for πειράω, in classic Greek, primary meaning to attempt, to try to do a thing (vide for this use Acts ix. 26, xvi. 7, xxiv. 6); then in an ethical sense common in O. T. and N. T., to try or tempt either with good or with bad intent, associated in some texts (e.g., 2 Cor. xiii. 5) with δοκιμάζω, kindred in meaning. Note the omission of τοῦ before infinitive.—ὑπὸ τ. διαβόλου: in later Jewish theology the devil is the agent in all temptation with evil design. In the earlier period

κοντα<sup>1</sup> καὶ νύκτας τεσσάρων, <sup>2</sup> ὕστερον ἐπέινασε. 3. καὶ προσελθὼν αὐτῷ<sup>3</sup> ὁ πειράζων εἶπεν,<sup>3</sup> “Εἰ υἱὸς εἶ τοῦ Θεοῦ, εἰπέ ἵνα οἱ λίθοι οὗτοι ἄρτοι γένωνται.” 4. Ὁ δὲ ἀποκριθεὶς εἶπε, “Γέγραπται, <sup>c</sup> ‘Οὐκ ἐπ’ ἄρτων μόνων ζήσεται<sup>4</sup> ἄνθρωπος, ἀλλ’ ἐπὶ<sup>5</sup> παντὶ ῥήματι ἑκπορευομένου διὰ στόματος Θεοῦ.’” 5. Τότε<sup>6</sup> παραλαμβάνει αὐτὸν ὁ διάβολος εἰς τὴν ἁγίαν πόλιν, καὶ ἵστησιν<sup>6</sup> αὐτὸν ἐπὶ τὸ

ὁ πειρ. as a subst. in 1 Thess.
iii. 5.
Cf. Mk. ix.
32.
Ch. xvii. 1.
g. ἁ. π. again
Ch. xxvii.
53.
Rev.
xii. 2.

<sup>1</sup> τεσσαρ. both places in  $\aleph$ BCL.

<sup>2</sup> τεσσαρ. before νυκτας in  $\aleph$ D (Tisch.).

<sup>3</sup>  $\aleph$ B omit this αὐτῷ and  $\aleph$ BD insert one after εἶπεν (D with καὶ before εἶπεν).

<sup>4</sup>  $\aleph$ BCD, etc., insert ο before ἄνθρωπος.

<sup>5</sup> CD have εν; επι in Sept. and retained by Tisch. and W.H.

<sup>6</sup> ἐστησεν in  $\aleph$ BCDZ 1, 33, 209 (Tisch., W.H.). The reading in T. R. conforms to παραλαμβάνει.

the line of separation between the divine and the diabolic was not so carefully defined. In 2 Sam. xxiv. 11 God tempts David to number the people; in 1 Chron. xxi. 1 it is Satan.—ver. 2. καὶ νηστεύσας. The fasting was spontaneous, not ascetic, due to mental preoccupation. In such a place there was no food to be had, but Jesus did not desire it. The aorist implies that a period of fasting preceded the sense of hunger. The period of forty days and nights may be a round number.—ἐπέινασεν, He at last felt hunger. This verb like διψάω contracts in α rather than η in later Greek. Both take an accusative in Matt. v. 6.

Vv. 3-4. First temptation, through hunger. Ver. 3. προσελθὼν, another of the evangelist's favourite words, implies that the tempter is conceived by the narrator as approaching outwardly in visible form.—εἰπέ ἵνα: literally “speak in order that”. Some grammarians see in this use of ἵνα with the subjunctive a progress in the later Macedonian Greek onwards towards modern Greek, in which νά with subjunctive entirely supersedes the infinitive. Buttmann (Gram. of the N. T.) says that the chief deviation in the N. T. from classic usage is that ἵνα appears not only after complete predicates, as a statement of design, but after incomplete predicates, supplying their necessary complements (cf. Mk. vi. 25, ix. 30). εἰπέ here may be classed among verbs of commanding which take ἵνα after them.—οἱ λίθοι οὗτοι, these stones lying about, hinting at the desert character of the scene.—ἄρτοι γέν., that the rude pieces of stone may be turned miraculously into loaves. Weiss (Meyer) disputes the usual view that the temptation of Jesus lay in the suggestion to use His miraculous power in His own behoof. He had no such power, and if He had, why should He not use it for His own benefit as well as other men's? He could only call into play by faith the power of God, and the temptation lay in the suggestion that His Messianic vocation was doubtful if God did not come to His help at this time. This seems a refinement. Hunger represents human wants, and the question was: whether Sonship was to mean exemption from these, or loyal acceptance of them as part of Messiah's experience. At bottom the issue raised was selfishness or self-sacrifice. Selfishness would have been shown either in the use of personal power or in the wish that God would use it.—Ver. 4. ὁ δὲ ἀποκ. εἶπεν: Christ's reply in this case as in the others is taken from Deuteronomy (viii. 3, Sept.), which seems to have been one of His favourite books. Its humane spirit, with laws even for protecting the animals, would commend it to His mind. The word quoted means, man is to live a life of faith in and dependence on God. Bread is a mere detail in that life, not necessary though usually given, and sure to be supplied somehow, as long as it is desirable. Ζῆν ἐπὶ is unusual, but good Greek (De Wette).

Vv. 5-7. Second temptation. τὸτε παραλαμ. . . τοῦ ἱεροῦ: τότε has the force of “next,” and implies a closer order of sequence than Luke's καὶ (iv. 5). παραλαμβάνει, historical present with dramatic effect; seizes hold of Him and carries Him to.—τὴν ἁγίαν πόλιν: Jerusalem so named as if with affection (vide v. 35 and especially xxvii. 53, where the designation recurs).—τὸ

<sup>a</sup> here and <sup>b</sup> πτερύγιον τοῦ ἱεροῦ, ὁ, καὶ λέγει <sup>1</sup> αὐτῶ, "Εἰ υἱὸς εἶ τοῦ Θεοῦ, βάλε σεαυτὸν κάτω· γέγραπται γάρ, "Ὅτι τοῖς ἀγγέλοις αὐτοῦ in Lk. iv. 9.
 i Ch. xvii. 9. <sup>1</sup> ἐντελεῖται περὶ σοῦ, καὶ ἐπὶ χειρῶν ἀρουσί σε, μήποτε προσκόψῃς Acts i. 2. πρὸς λίθον τὸν πόδα σου.'" 7. Ἔφη αὐτῶ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Πάλιν
 Heb. xi. 22.
 j Lk. x. 25. γέγραπται, 'Οὐκ ἔκπειράσεις Κύριον τὸν Θεόν σου.'" 8. Πάλιν
 i Cor. x. 9. παραλαμβάνει αὐτὸν ὁ διάβολος εἰς ὄρος ὑψηλὸν λίαν, καὶ δείκνυσιν k Ch. vi. 29. αὐτῶ πάσας τὰς βασιλείας τοῦ κόσμου καὶ τὴν <sup>k</sup> δόξαν αὐτῶν, 9. καὶ Lk. xii. 27.

<sup>1</sup> For λέγει Z has εἶπεν.

πτερύγιον τοῦ ἱεροῦ: some part of the temple bearing the name of "the winglet," and overhanging a precipice. Commentators busy themselves discussing what precisely and where it was.—Ver. 6. βάλε σεαυτὸν κάτω: This suggestion strongly makes for the symbolic or parabolic nature of the whole representation. The mad proposal could hardly be a temptation to such an one as Jesus, or indeed to any man in his senses. The transit through the air from the desert to the winglet, like that of Ezekiel, carried by a lock of his hair from Babylon to Jerusalem, must have been "in the visions of God" (Ezek. viii. 3), and the suggestion to cast Himself down a parabolic hint at a class of temptations, as the excuses in the parable of the Supper (Lk. xiv. 16) simply represent the category of pre-occupation. What is the class represented? Not temptations through vanity or presumption, but rather to reckless escape from desperate situations. The second temptation, like the first, belongs to the category of need. The Satanic suggestion is that there can be no sonship where there are such inextricable situations, in proof of which the Psalter is quoted (Ps. xci. 11, 12).—γέγραπται, it stands written, not precisely as Satan quotes it, the clause τοῦ διαφυλάξαι σε ἐν πάσαις ταῖς ὁδοῖς σου being omitted. On this account many commentators charge Satan with mutilating and falsifying Scripture.—Ver 7. Jesus replies by another quotation from Deut. (vi. 16).—πάλιν, on the other hand, not contradicting but qualifying: "Scriptura per scripturam interpretanda et concilianda," Bengel. The reference is to the incident at Rephidim (Ex. xvii. 1-7), where the people virtually charged God with bringing them out of Egypt to perish with thirst, the scene of this petulant outburst receiving the commemorative name of Massah and Meribah because they tempted Jehovah, saying: "Is Jehovah among us or not?" An analogous situation in the life of Jesus may be found in Gethsemane, where He did not complain or tempt, but uttered the submissive, "If it be possible". The leap down at that crisis would have consisted in seeking escape from the cross at the cost of duty. The physical fall from the pinnacle is an emblem of a moral fall. Before passing from this temptation I note that the hypothesis that it was an appeal to vanity presupposes a crowd at the foot to witness the performance, of which there is no mention.

Vv. 8-10. Third temptation. εἰς ὄρος ὑψηλὸν λίαν: a mountain high enough for the purpose. There is no such mountain in the world, not even in the highest ranges, "not to be sought for in terrestrial geography," says De Wette. The vision of all the kingdoms and their glory was not physical.—τοῦ κόσμου. What world? Palestine merely, or all the world, Palestine excepted? or all the world, Palestine included? All these alternatives have been supported. The last is the most likely. The second harmonises with the ideas of contemporary Jews, who regarded the heathen world as distinct from the Holy Land, as belonging to the devil. The tempter points in the direction of a universal Messianic empire, and claims power to give effect to the dazzling prospect.—Ver. 9. εἰς πειρῶν προσκυνήσης μοι. This is the condition, homage to Satan as the superior. A naïve suggestion, but pointing to a subtle form of temptation, to which all ambitious, self-seeking men succumb, that of gaining power by compromise with evil. The danger is greatest when the end is good. "The end sanctifies the means." Nowhere is homage to Satan more common than in connection with sacred causes, the interests of truth, righteousness, and God. Nothing tests purity of motive so thoroughly as tempta-

λέγει<sup>1</sup> αὐτῷ, “Ταῦτα πάντα σοι<sup>2</sup> δώσω, ἐὰν πεσὼν προσκυνήσῃς<sup>1</sup> μοι.” 10. Τότε λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Ἦπαγε,<sup>3</sup> Σατανᾶ· γέγραπται γάρ, ‘Κύριον τὸν Θεὸν σου<sup>4</sup> προσκυνήσεις, καὶ αὐτῷ μόνῳ<sup>5</sup> λατρεύσεις.’” 11. Τότε ἀφίησιν αὐτὸν ὁ διάβολος· καὶ ἰδοὺ, ἄγγελοι προσῆλθον καὶ ὀδηκόνουν αὐτῷ.

12. ΑΚΟΥΣΑΣ δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς<sup>4</sup> ὅτι Ἰωάννης<sup>5</sup> παρέδόθη, ἀνεχώρησεν εἰς τὴν Γαλιλαίαν· 13. καὶ<sup>6</sup> καταλιπὼν τὴν Ναζαρέτ, ἐλθὼν κατώκησεν εἰς Καπερναοὺμ<sup>5</sup> τὴν<sup>7</sup> παραθαλασσίαν, ἐν ὁρίοις<sup>8</sup>

<sup>1</sup> here only in N. T., in Sept. (e.g., 2 Chron. viii. 17).

<sup>1</sup> ΞBCDZ have ειπεν (most mod. edd.).

<sup>2</sup> παντα σοι tr. ΞBCZ with several cursives.

<sup>3</sup> Some MSS. (DLZ) insert οπισω μου, obviously imported from xvi. 23.

<sup>4</sup> o l. omit ΞBCDZ; probably the insertion is due to ver. 12 commencing a lesson in Lectionaries.

<sup>5</sup> This name is spelt καφαρ, in the older MSS. (ΞBDZ), which is adopted throughout by W.H.

tions of this class. Christ was proof against them. The prince of the world found nothing of this sort in Him (John xiv. 30). In practice this homage, if Jesus had been willing to render it, would have taken the form of conciliating the Pharisees and Sadducees, and pandering to the prejudices of the people. He took His own path, and became a Christ, neither after the type imagined by the Baptist, nor according to the liking of the Jews and their leaders. So He gained universal empire, but at a great cost.—Ver. 10. ἦπαγε σατανᾶ. Jesus passionately repels the Satanic suggestion. The ἦπαγε σ. is true to His character. The suggestions of worldly wisdom always roused in Him passionate aversion. The ὀπίσω μου of some MSS. does not suit this place; it is imported from Matt. xvi. 23, where it does suit, the agent of Satan in a temptation of the same sort being a disciple. Christ's final word to the tempter is an absolute, peremptory Begone. Yet He condescends to support His authoritative negative by a Scripture text, again from Deut. (vi. 13), slightly adapted, προσκυνήσεις being substituted for φοβηθήσῃ (the μόνῳ in second clause is omitted in Swete's Sept.). It takes the accusative here instead of dative, as in ver. 9, because it denotes worship proper (Weiss-Meyer). The quotation states a principle in theory acknowledged by all, but how hard to work it out faithfully in life!

Ver. 11. τότε ἀφίησιν: then, when the peremptory ἦπαγε had been spoken.

Nothing was to be made of one who would not do evil that good might come.—καὶ ἰδοὺ ἄγγελοι. The angels were ministering to Him, with food, presumably, in the view of the evangelist. It might be taken in a wider sense, as signifying that angels ministered constantly to one who had decidedly chosen the path of obedience in preference to that of self-pleasing.

Vv. 12-25. Beginnings of the Galilean ministry (Mk. i. 14, 15; Lk. iv. 14, 15). In a few rapid strokes the evangelist describes the opening of the Messianic work of Jesus in Galilee. He has in view the great Sermon on the Mount, and the group of wonderful deeds he means thereafter to report, and he gives first a summary description of Christ's varied activities by way of introduction.

Vv. 12, 13. ἀκούσας δὲ . . . Γαλιλαίαν: note of time. Jesus returned to Galilee on hearing that John was delivered up, i.e., in the providence of God, into the hands of his enemies. Further particulars as to this are given in chapter xiv. Christ's ministry in Galilee began when the Baptist's came to an end; how long after the baptism and temptation not indicated. Weiss (Meyer) thinks that in the view of the evangelist it was immediately after, and that the reference to John's imprisonment is meant simply to explain the choice of Galilee as the sphere of labour.—Ver. 13. Ναζαρέτ. Jesus naturally went to Nazareth first, but He did not tarry there.—κατώκησεν εἰς Καπερναοὺμ, He went to settle (as in ii. 23) in Capernaum. This migration to

- § Ch. x. 5. Ζαβουλὸν καὶ Νεφθαλεὶμ, 14. ἵνα πληρωθῆ τὸ ῥηθὲν διὰ Ἡσαίου
 t Lk. i. 29. τοῦ προφήτου, λέγοντος, 15. "Γῆ Ζαβουλὸν καὶ γῆ Νεφθαλεὶμ, u Ch. xii. 6. Mk. xvi. 2. James i. 11 (all in-trans.). ἰδὸν θαλάσσης πέραν τοῦ Ἰορδάνου, Γαλιλαία τῶν ἐθνῶν, 16. ὁ
 λαὸς ὁ καθήμενος ἐν σκοτίᾳ<sup>1</sup> εἶδε φῶς<sup>2</sup> μέγα, καὶ τοῖς καθημένοις
 v Ch. xi. 7, 20; xii. 1. ἐν χώρᾳ καὶ ἰσκιᾷ θανάτου, φῶς ἠνέτειλεν αὐτοῖς."
 Mk. iv. 1. Lk. iii. 8 et al. (on force of this word vide Grimm's Lex.).
 w ap. xiii. 1. Mk. v. 21. Cf. Acts x. 6.
17. Ἀπὸ τότε ἤρξατο ὁ Ἰησοῦς κηρῦσσειν καὶ λέγειν, "Μετανοεῖτε· ἤγγικε γὰρ<sup>3</sup> ἡ βασιλεία τῶν οὐρανῶν." 18. Περιπατῶν δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς<sup>4</sup> παρὰ τὴν θάλασσαν τῆς Γαλιλαίας εἶδε δύο ἀδελφούς, Σίμωνα τὸν λεγόμενον Πέτρον, καὶ Ἀνδρέαν τὸν ἀδελφὸν αὐτοῦ, βάλλοντας

<sup>1</sup> σκοτια, BD.

<sup>2</sup> φως before εἶδεν in ΞBCΣ (W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> The Syr. Sin. and Cur. omit μετανοεῖτε before ἤγγικε.

<sup>4</sup> ο I. found in ELΔ; omit ΞBCD (beginning of a new lesson).

Capernaum is not formally noted in the other Gospels, but Capernaum appears in all the synoptists as the main centre of Christ's Galilean ministry. — τὴν παραθαλασσίαν, etc.: sufficiently defined by these words, "on the sea (of Galilee), on the confines of Zebulun and Naphthali". Well known then, now of doubtful situation, being no longer in existence. Tel Hâm and Khan Mînyeh compete for the honour of the site. The evangelist describes the position not to satisfy the curiosity of geographers, but to pave the way for another prophetic reference.

Vv. 14-16. Jesus chose Capernaum as best suited for His work. There He was in the heart of the world, in a busy town, and near others, on the shore of a sea that was full of fish, and on a great international highway. But the evangelist finds in the choice a fulfilment of prophecy—ἵνα πληρωθῆ. The oracle is reproduced from Is. viii. 22, ix. 1, freely following the original with glances at the Sept. The style is very laconic: land of Zebulun and land of Naphthali, way of the sea (ἰδὸν absolute accusative for  $\text{רָאָה} = \text{versus, vide}$  Winer, § 23), Galilee of the Gentiles, a place where races mix, a border population. The clause preceding, "beyond Jordan," is not omitted, because it is viewed as a reference to Peræa, also a scene of Christ's ministry.—Ver. 16. ἐν σκοτίᾳ: the darkness referred to, in the view of the evangelist, is possibly that caused by the imprisonment of the Baptist (Fritzsche). The consolation comes in the form of a greater light, φῶς μέγα, great, even the greatest. The thought is emphasised by repetition and by enhanced description of the benighted situation of those on whom the light arises: "in the very home and shadow of death"; highly graphic and poetic, not applicable, however, to the land of Galilee more than to other parts of the land; descriptive of misery rather than of sin.

Ver. 17. ἀπὸ τότε . . . κηρῦσσειν. After settling in Capernaum Jesus began to preach. The phrase ἀπὸ τότε offends in two ways, first as redundant, being implied in ἤρξατο (De Wette); next as not classic, being one of the degeneracies of the κοινή. Phrynichus forbids ἐκ τότε, and instructs to say rather ἐξ ἐκείνου (Lobeck's ed., p. 45).—κηρῦσσειν, the same word as in describing the ministry of the Baptist (iii. 1). And the message is the same—Μετανοεῖτε, etc. "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." The same in word but not in thought, as will appear soon. It may seem as if the evangelist meant to represent Jesus as simply taking up and continuing the arrested ministry of the Baptist. So He was in form and to outward appearance, but not in spirit. From the very first, as has been seen even in connection with the baptism, there was a deep-seated difference between the two preachers. Even Euthy. Zig. understood this, monk though he was. Repent, he says, with John meant "in so far as ye have erred" = amendment; with Jesus, "from the old to the new" (ἀπὸ τῆς παλαιᾶς ἐπὶ τὴν καινὴν) = a change from within. For the evangelist this was the absolute beginning of Christ's

<sup>x</sup> ἀμφίβληστρον εἰς τὴν θάλασσαν· ἦσαν γὰρ ὁ ἄλιεῖς.<sup>1</sup> 19. καὶ <sup>x</sup> here only
λέγει αὐτοῖς, “<sup>2</sup> Δεῦτε ὀπίσω μου, καὶ ποιήσω ὑμᾶς ἄλιεῖς ἀνθρώπων.”
20. Οἱ δὲ εὐθέως ἀφέντες τὰ δίκτυα ἠκολούθησαν αὐτῷ. 21. Καὶ προβὰς ἐκεῖθεν, εἶδεν ἄλλους δύο ἀδελφούς, Ἰάκωβον τὸν τοῦ Ζεβεδαίου καὶ Ἰωάννην τὸν ἀδελφὸν αὐτοῦ, ἐν τῷ πλοίῳ μετὰ Ζεβεδαιοῦ πατρὸς αὐτῶν, καταρτίζοντας τὰ δίκτυα αὐτῶν· καὶ ἐκάλεσεν αὐτούς. 22. οἱ δὲ εὐθέως ἀφέντες τὸ πλοῖον καὶ τὸν πατέρα αὐτῶν ἠκολούθησαν αὐτῷ.
23. Καὶ <sup>a</sup> περιῆγεν ὄλην τὴν Γαλιλαίαν ὁ Ἰησοῦς,<sup>2</sup> διδάσκων ἐν ταῖς συναγωγαῖς αὐτῶν, καὶ κηρύσσων τὸ εὐαγγέλιον τῆς βασιλείας, καὶ

in N. T. verb in Mk. i. 16.
in Sept.
Mk. i. 16
17. Lk. v. 2
Ch. xi. 28;
xxv. 34.
<sup>a</sup> with ἐν
here only (true text);
with acc.
of place
ix. 35;
xxiii. 15.
Mk. vi. 6.

<sup>1</sup>  $\Sigma$ C have αλιεῖς, B αλιεῖς.

<sup>2</sup>  $\Sigma$ BC have ἐν ὄλη τη Γαλιλαία. The acc. (T. R. as in D, etc.) is the more usual construction, hence preferred by ancient revisers. B omits ο Ἰησοῦς.

ministry. He knows nothing of an earlier activity.

Vv. 18-22. Call of four disciples. The preceding very general statement is followed by a more specific narrative relating to a very important department of Christ's work, the gathering of disciples. Disciples are referred to in the Sermon on the Mount (v. 1), therefore it is meet that it be shown how Jesus came by them. Here we have simply a sample, a hint at a process always going on, and which had probably advanced a considerable way before the sermon was delivered.—περιπατῶν δὲ: δὲ simply introduces a new topic, the time is indefinite. One day when Jesus was walking along the seashore He saw two men, brothers, names given, by occupation fishers, the main industry of the locality, that tropical sea (800 feet below level of Mediterranean) abounding in fish. He saw them, may have seen them before, and they Him, and thought them likely men, and He said to them, ver. 19: Δεῦτε . . . ἀνθρώπων. From the most critical point of view a genuine saying of Jesus; the first distinctively individual word of the Galilean ministry as recorded by Matthew and Mark. Full οἱ significance as a self-revelation of the speaker. Authoritative yet genial, indicating a poetic idealistic temperament and a tendency to figurative speech; betraying the rudiments of a plan for winning men by select men. Δεῦτε plural form of δεῦρο = δεῦρ' ἔτε, δεῦρο, being an adverb of place with the force of command, a verb of commanding being understood: here! after me; imperial yet kindly, used again in Matt. xi. 28 with reference to the labouring and heavy-laden. δεῦτε and ἄλιεῖς (= sea-

people) are samples of old poetic words revived and introduced into prose by later Greek writers.—Ver. 20. The effect was immediate: εὐθέως ἀφέντες. This seems surprising, and we naturally postulate previous knowledge in explanation. But all indications point to the uniquely impressive personality of Jesus. John felt it; the audience in the synagogue of Capernaum felt it on the first appearance of Jesus there (Mk. i. 27); the four fishermen felt it.—δίκτυα: ἀμφίβληστρον in ver. 18. In xiii. 47 occurs a third word for a net, σαγήνη; δίκτυον (from δικεῖν, to throw) is the general name; ἀμφίβληστρον (ἀμφιβάλλω, anything cast around, e.g., a garment, more specifically a net thrown with the hand; σαγήνη, a sweep-net carried out in a boat, then drawn in from the land (vide Trench, Synonyms of N. T., § 64).—Ver. 21. ἄλλους δύο, another pair of brothers, James and John, sons of Zebedee, the four together an important instalment of the twelve. The first pair were casting their nets, the second were mending them, (καταρτίζοντες), with their father.—Ver. 22. οἱ δὲ εὐθέως ἀφέντες. They too followed immediately, leaving nets, ship, and father (vide Mk. i. 20) behind.

Vv. 23-25. Summary account of the Galilean ministry. A colourless general statement serving as a mere prelude to chapters v.-ix. It points to a ministry in Galilee, varied, extensive, and far-famed, conceived by the evangelist as antecedent to the Sermon on the Mount; not necessarily covering a long period of time, though if the expression “teaching in their synagogues” be pressed it must imply a good many weeks (vide on Mk.).

b Ch. ix. 35: θεραπεύων πᾶσαν νόσον καὶ πᾶσαν <sup>b</sup> μαλακίαν ἐν τῷ λαῷ. 24. καὶ
 c Ch. xiv. 1; ἀπῆλθεν <sup>1</sup> ἢ <sup>a</sup> ἀκοή αὐτοῦ εἰς ὅλην τὴν Συρίαν· καὶ προσήνεγκαν
 xxiv. 6.
 d Ch. viii. αὐτῷ πάντας τοὺς <sup>d</sup> κακῶς ἔχοντας, ποικίλαις νόσοις καὶ <sup>e</sup> βασάνοις
 16; ix. 12
 αἰ. συνεχομένους, καὶ <sup>2</sup> δαιμονιζομένους, καὶ <sup>f</sup> σεληνιαζομένους, καὶ
 c Lk. xvi. 23, παραλυτικούς· καὶ ἐθεράπευσεν αὐτούς. 25. καὶ ἠκολούθησαι 28.
 f Ch. xvii. 15. αὐτῷ ὄχλοι πολλοὶ ἀπὸ τῆς Γαλιλαίας καὶ Δεκαπόλεως καὶ Ἱερο-σολύμων καὶ Ἰουδαίας, καὶ πέραν τοῦ Ἰορδάνου.

<sup>1</sup> So in BD (W.H.), ἐξηλθεν in  $\Sigma$ C.

<sup>2</sup> BC omit καί, which is in C<sup>2</sup>D. The force of καί = and especially.

The ministry embraced three functions: διδάσκων, κηρύσσων, θεραπεύων (ver. 23), teaching, preaching, healing. Jesus was an evangelist, a master, and a healer of disease. Matt. puts the teaching function first in accordance with the character of his gospel. The first gospel is weak in the evangelistic element compared with the third: διδασχὴ is more prominent than κήρυγμα. The healing function is represented as exercised on a large scale: πᾶσαν νόσον καὶ πᾶσαν μαλακίαν, every form of disease and ailment. Euthy. Zig. defines νόσος as the chronic subversion of health (ἡ χρονία παρατροπή τῆς τοῦ σώματος ἕξεως), μαλακία as the weakness in which it begins (ἀρχὴ χαυνώσεως σώματος, προάγγελος νόσου). The subjects of healing are divided into two classes, ver. 14. They brought to Him πάντας τ. κ. ἔχ. ποικίλαις νόσοις, all who were afflicted with various diseases (such as fever, leprosy, blindness); also those βασάνοις συνεχομένους, seized with diseases of a tormenting nature, of which three classes are named—the καὶ in T. R. before δαίμων. is misleading; the following words are epeexegetical: δαιμονιζομένους, σεληνιαζομένους, παραλυτικούς = demoniacs, epileptics (their seizures following the phases of the moon), paralytics. These forms of disease are graphically called torments. (βασάνος, first a touch-stone, lapis Lydius, as in Pindar, Pythia, x. 105: Πειρῶντι δὲ καὶ χρυσὸς ἐν βασάνῳ πρέπει καὶ νόος ὀρθός; then an instrument of torture to extract truth; then, as here, tormenting forms of disease.) The fame, ἡ ἀκοή, of such a marvellous ministry naturally spread widely, εἰς ὅλην τὴν Συρίαν, throughout the whole province to which Palestine belonged, among Gentiles as well as Jews. Crowds gathered around the wonderful Man from all quarters: west, east, north, south; Galilee, Decapolis on the eastern side of the lake, Jerusalem and Judaea, Perea. With every allowance for the exaggeration of a popular account, this speaks to an extraordinary impression.

CHAPTERS V.-VII. THE SERMON ON THE MOUNT. This extended utterance of Jesus comes upon us as a surprise. Nothing goes before to prepare us to expect anything so transcendently great. The impressions made on the Baptist, the people in Capernaum Synagogue (Mk. i. 27), and the four fishermen, speak to wisdom, power, and personal charm, but not so as to make us take the sermon as a thing of course. Our surprise is all the greater that there is so little antecedent narrative. By an effort of imagination we have to realise that much went before—preaching, teaching, interviews with disciples, conflicts with Pharisees, only once mentioned hitherto (iii. 7), yet here the leading theme of discourse.

The sermon belongs to the didache, not to the kerigma. Jesus is here the Master, not the Evangelist. He ascends the hill to get away from the crowds below, and the disciples, now become a considerable band, gather about Him. Others may not be excluded, but the μαθηταὶ are the audience proper. The discourse may represent the teaching, not of a single hour or day, but of a period of retirement from an exciting, exhausting ministry below, and all over Galilee; rest being sought in variation of work, evangelist and teacher alternately. A better name for these chapters than the Sermon on the Mount, which suggests a concio ad populum, might be The Teaching on the Hill. It may be a combination of several lessons. One very outstanding topic is Pharisaic righteousness. Christ evidently made it His business in one of the hill lessons to define controversially His position in reference to the prevailing type of piety, which we may assume to have been to

V. 1. ἸΔΩΝ δὲ τοὺς ὄχλους <sup>a</sup> ἀνέβη εἰς τὸ ὄρος· καὶ <sup>b</sup> καθίσαντος <sup>a</sup> αὐτοῦ, προσήλθον αὐτῷ <sup>1</sup> οἱ ὀμαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ· 2. καὶ <sup>d</sup> ἀνοίξας τὸ <sup>b</sup> στόμα αὐτοῦ, ἐδίδασκεν αὐτούς, λέγων, 3. “Μακάριοι οἱ <sup>c</sup> πτωχοὶ <sup>b</sup> here and in xiii. 48. Mk. ix. 35. Lk. iv. 20 al., intrans., also Heb. i. 3; trans. 1 Cor. vi. 4. Eph. ii. 6 (σωτες).
 c frequent in Gosp. and Acts, nowhere else in N. T. d again in xiii. 35. e Ch. xi. 6; xiii. 16.
 Lk. i. 45; x. 23. f Ch. xi. 5. Lk. iv. 18.

<sup>1</sup> B omits αὐτῷ; bracketed as doubtful in W.H.

Him a subject of long and careful study before the opening of His public career. The portions of the discourse which bear on that subject can be picked out, and others not relating thereto eliminated, and we may say if we choose that the resulting body of teaching is the Sermon on the Mount (so Weiss). Perhaps the truth is that these portions formed one of the lessons given to disciples on the hill in their holiday summer school. The Beatitudes might form another, instructions on prayer (vi. 7-15) a third, admonitions against covetousness and care (vi. 19-34) a fourth, and so on. As these chapters stand, the various parts cohere and sympathise wonderfully so as to present the appearance of a unity; but that need not hinder us from regarding the whole as a skilful combination of originally distinct lessons, possessing the generic unity of the Teaching on the Hill. This view I prefer to that which regards the sermon as a compendium of Christ's whole doctrine (De Wette), or the magna charta of the kingdom (Tholuck), though there is a truth in that title, or as an ordination discourse in connection with the setting apart of the Twelve (Ewald), or in its original parts an anti-Pharisaic manifesto (Weiss-Meyer). For comparison of Matthew's version of the discourse with Luke's see notes on Lk. vi. 20-49.

Chap. v. 1-2. Introductory statement by evangelist. Ἰδὼν δὲ . . . εἰς τὸ ὄρος. Christ ascended the hill, according to some, because there was more room there for the crowd than below. I prefer the view well put by Euthy. Zig.: “He ascended the near hill, to avoid the din of the crowd (θορυβῶν) and to give instruction without distraction; for He passed from the healing of the body to the cure of souls. This was His habit, passing from that to this and from this to that, providing varied benefit.” But we must be on our guard against a double misunderstanding that might be suggested by the statement in ver. 1, that Jesus went up to the mountain, as if in ascetic retirement from the world, and addressed Himself henceforth to His disciples, as if they alone were the objects of His care, or to teach them an esoteric doctrine with which the multitude had no concern. Jesus was not monastic in spirit, and He had not two doctrines, one for the many, another for the few, like Buddha. His highest teaching, even the Beatitudes and the beautiful discourse against care, was meant for the million. He taught disciples that they might teach the world and so be its light. For this purpose His disciples came to Him when He sat down (καθίσαντος αὐτοῦ) taking the teacher's position (cf. Mk. iv. 1, ix. 35, xiii. 3). Lutteroth (Essai d'Interpretation, p. 65) takes καθίσαντος as meaning to camp out (camper), to remain for a time, as in Lk. xxiv. 49, Acts xviii. 11. He, I find, adopts the view I have indicated of the sermon as a summary of all the discourses of Jesus on the hill during a sojourn of some duration. The hill, τὸ ὄρος, may be most naturally taken to mean the elevated plateau rising above the seashore. It is idle to inquire what particular hill is intended.—Ver. 2. ἀνοίξας τὸ στόμα: solemn description of the beginning of a weighty discourse.—ἐδίδασκεν, imperfect, implying continued discourse.

Vv. 3-12. The Beatitudes. Some general observations may helpfully introduce the detailed exegesis of these golden words.

1. They breathe the spirit of the scene. On the mountain tops away from the bustle and the sultry heat of the region below, the air cool, the blue sky overhead, quiet all around, and divine tranquillity within. We are near heaven here.

2. The originality of these sayings has been disputed, especially by modern Jews desirous to credit their Rabbis with such good things. Some of them, e.g., the third, may be found in substance in the Psalter, and possibly many, or all of them, even in the Talmud. But what then? They are in the Talmud as a few grains of wheat lost in a vast heap

g the name τῷ πνεύματι · ὅτι αὐτῶν ἐστὶν ἡ βασιλεία τῶν οὐρανῶν. 4.
 for the k.
 of G. in μακάριοι<sup>1</sup> οἱ β<sup>2</sup> πενθῦντες · ὅτι αὐτοὶ παρακληθῶσονται. 5. μακάριοι Mt., put into the Baptist's mouth, in iii. 2. His, not Christ's, acc. to Weiss et al. h Ch. ix. 15.

<sup>1</sup> The 2nd and 3rd Beatitudes (vv. 4, 5) are transposed in D, most old Latin texts, and in Syr. Cur. Tisch. adopts this order.

of chaff. The originality of Jesus lies in putting the due value on these thoughts, collecting them, and making them as prominent as the Ten Commandments. No greater service can be rendered to mankind than to rescue from obscurity neglected moral commonplaces.

3. The existence of another version of the discourse (in Lk.), with varying forms of the sayings, has raised a question as to the original form. Did Christ, e.g., say "Blessed the poor" (Lk.) or "Blessed the poor in spirit" (Matt.)? This raises a larger question as to the manner of Christ's teaching on the hill. Suppose one day in a week of instruction was devoted to the subject of happiness, its conditions, and heirs, many things might be said on each leading proposition. The theme would be announced, then accompanied with expansions. A modern biographer would have prefaced a discourse like this with an introductory account of the Teacher's method. There is no such account in the Gospels, but there are incidental notices from which we can learn somewhat. The disciples asked questions and the Master answered them. Jesus explained some of His parables to the twelve. From certain parts of His teaching, as reported, it appears that He not only uttered great thoughts in aphoristic form, but occasionally enlarged. The Sermon on the Mount contains at least two instances of such enlargement. The thesis, "I am not come to destroy but to fulfil" (ver. 17), is copiously illustrated (vv. 21-48). The counsel against care, which as a thesis might be stated thus: "Blessed are the care-free," is amply expanded (vv. 25-34). Even in one of the Beatitudes we find traces of explanatory enlargement; in the last, "Blessed are the persecuted". It is perhaps the most startling of all the paradoxes, and would need enlargement greatly, and some parts of the expansion have been preserved (vv. 10-12). On this view both forms of the first Beatitude might be authentic, the one as theme, the other as comment. The theme would always be put in the fewest possible words; the first Beatitude therefore, as Luke puts it, Μακάριοι ὁ πτωχοί, Matthew preserving one of the expansions, not necessarily the only one. Of course, another view of the expansion is possible, that it proceeded not from Christ, but from the transmitters of His sayings. But this hypothesis is not a whit more legitimate or likely than the other. I make this observation, not in the spirit of an antiquated Harmonistic, but simply as a contribution to historical criticism.

4. Each Beatitude has a reason annexed, that of the first being "for theirs is the kingdom of heaven". They vary in the different Beatitudes as reported. It is conceivable that in the original themes the reason annexed to the first was common to them all. It was understood to be repeated like the refrain of a song, or like the words, "him do I call a Brahmana," annexed to many of the moral sentences in the Footsteps of the Law in the Buddhist Canon. "He who, when assailed, does not resist, but speaks mildly to his tormentors—him do I call a Brahmana." So "Blessed the poor, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven"; "blessed they who mourn, for," etc.; "blessed the meek, the hungry, for," etc. The actual reasons annexed, when they vary from the refrain, are to be viewed as explanatory comments.

5. It has been maintained that only certain of the Beatitudes belong to the authentic discourse on the mount, the rest, possibly based on true logia of Jesus spoken at another time, being added by the evangelist, true to his habit of massing the teaching of Jesus in topical groups. This is the view of Weiss (in Matt. Evan., and in Meyer). He thinks only three are authentic—the first, third, and fourth—all pointing to the righteousness of the kingdom as the summum bonum: the first to righteousness as not yet possessed; the second to the want as a cause of sorrow; the third to righteousness as an object of desire. This view goes with the theory that Christ's discourse on the hill had reference exclusively to the nature of true and false righteousness.

6. A final much less important quesοἱ ἡραεῖς· ὅτι αὐτοὶ κληρονομήσουσι τὴν γῆν. 6. μακάριοι οἱ ἰ Ch. xi. 29; πεινῶντες καὶ διψῶντες τὴν δικαιοσύνην· ὅτι αὐτοὶ χορτασθήσονται. xxi. 5. i Pet. iii. 4.

 j Ch. xxv.
 34. Heb. vi. 12. k Ch. xiv. 20.

tion in reference to the Beatitudes is that which relates to their number. One would say at a first glance eight, counting ver. 10 as one, vv. 11, 12 being an enlargement. The traditional number, however, is seven—vv. 10-12 being regarded as a transition to a new topic. This seems arbitrary. Delitsch, anxious to establish an analogy with the Decalogue, makes out ten—seven from ver. 3 to ver. 9, ver. 10 one, ver. 11 one, and ver. 12, though lacking the μακάριοι, the tenth; its claim resting on the exulting words, χαίrete καὶ ἀγαλλιᾶσθε. This savours of Rabbinical pedantry.

Ver. 3. μακάριοι. This is one of the words which have been transformed and ennobled by N. T. use; by association, as in the Beatitudes, with unusual conditions, accounted by the world miserable, or with rare and difficult conduct, e.g., in John xiii. 17, "if ye know these things, happy (μακάριοι) are ye if ye do them". Notable in this connection is the expression in 1 Tim. i. 11, "The Gospel of the glory of the happy God". The implied truth is that the happiness of the Christian God consists in being a Redeemer, bearing the burden of the world's sin and misery. How different from the Epicurean idea of God! Our word "blessed" represents the new conception of felicity.—οἱ πτωχοὶ: πτωχός in Sept. stands for אַבְיּוֹן Ps. cix. 16, or wise—such is the first and fundamental lesson.—τῷ πνεύματι. Possibilities are not certainties; to turn the one into the other the soul or will of the individual must come in, for as Euthy. Zig. quaintly says, nothing involuntary can bless (οὐδὲν τῶν ἀπροαιρέτων μακαριστόν). "In spirit" is, therefore, added to develop and define the idea of poverty. The comment on the theme passes from the lower to the higher sphere. Christ's thought includes the physical and social, but it does not end there. Luke seems to have the social aspect in view, in accordance with one of his tendencies and the impoverished condition of most members of the apostolic Church. To limit the meaning to that were a mistake, but to include that or even to emphasise it in given circumstances was no error. Note that the physical and spiritual lay close together in Christ's mind. He passed easily from one to the other (John iv. 7-10; Lk. x. 42, see notes there). τῷ πν. is, of course, to be connected with πτωχοί, not with μακάριοι. Poor in spirit is not to be taken objectively, as if spirit indicated the element in which the poverty is manifest—poor intellect: "homines ingenio et eruditione parum florentes" (Fritzsche) = the νηπίοι in Matt. xi. 25; but subjectively, poor in their own esteem. Self-estimate is the essence of the matter, and is compatible with real wealth. Only the noble think meanly of themselves. The soul of goodness is in the man who is really humble. Poverty laid to heart passes into riches. A high ideal of life lies beneath all. And that ideal is the link between the social and the spiritual. The poor man passes to the blessedness of the kingdom as soon as he realises what a man is or ought to be. Poor in purse or even in character, no man is beggared who has a vision of man's chief end and chief good.—αὐτῶν, emphatic position: theirs, note it well. So in the following verses αὐτοὶ and αὐτῶν.—ἐστίν, not merely in prospect, but in present possession. The kingdom of heaven is often presented in the Gospels apocalyptically as a thing in the future to be given to the worthy by way of external recompense. But this view pertains rather to the form of thought than to the essence of the matter. Christ speaks of the kingdom here not as a known quan-

עָנִי Ps. xl. 18: the poor, taken even in the most abject sense, mendicci, Tertull. adv. Mar. iv. 14. πτωχός and πένης originally differed, the latter meaning poor as opposed to rich, the former destitute. But in Biblical Greek πτωχοί, πένητες, πρᾶεῖς, ταπεινοί are used indiscriminately for the same class, the poor of an oppressed country. Vide Hatch, Essays in Biblical Greek, p. 76. The term is used here in a pregnant sense, absolute and unqualified at least to begin with; qualifications come after. From πτώσω, to cower in dispiritment and fear, always used in an evil sense till Christ taught the poor man to lift up his head in hope and self-respect; the very lowest social class not to be despaired of, a future possible even for the mendicant. Blessedness possible for the poor in every sense; they, in comparison with others, under no disabilities, rather contrari-

1 Heb. ii. 17. 7. μακάριοι οἱ ἠλεήμονες ὅτι αὐτοὶ ἐλεηθήσονται. 8. μακάριοι
 m Rom. xi.
 30, 31. 1 οἱ "καθαροὶ τῇ καρδίᾳ ὅτι αὐτοὶ τὸν Θεὸν ὁψονται. 9. μακάριοι
 Tim. i. 13.
 16. a 1 Tim. i. 5; 2 Tim. ii. 22. o Heb. xii. 14 (seeing God).

tity, but as a thing whose nature He is in the act of defining by the aphorisms He utters. If so, then it consists essentially in states of mind. It is within. It is ourselves, the true ideal human.

Ver. 4. οἱ πενθοῦντες. Who are they? All who on any account grieve? Then this Beatitude would give utterance to a thoroughgoing optimism. Pessimists say that there are many griefs for which there is no remedy, so many that life is not worth living. Did Jesus mean to meet this position with a direct negative, and to affirm that there is no sorrow without remedy? If not, then He propounds a puzzle provoking thoughtful scholars to ask: What grief is that which will without fail find comfort? There can be no comfort where there is no grief, for the two ideas are correlative. But in most cases there is no apparent necessary connection. Necessary connection is asserted in this aphorism, which gives us a clue to the class described as οἱ πενθοῦντες. Their peculiar sorrow must be one which comforts itself, a grief that has the thing it grieves for in the very grief. The comfort is then no outward good. It lies in a right state of soul, and that is given in the sorrow which laments the lack of it. The sorrow reveals love of the good, and that love is possession. In so far as all kinds of sorrow tend to awaken reflection on the real good and ill of human life, and so to issue in the higher sorrow of the soul, the second Beatitude may be taken absolutely as expressing the tendency of all grief to end in consolation.—παρακληθήσονται, future. The comfort is latent in the very grief, but for the present there is no conscious joy, but only poignant sorrow. The joy, however, will inevitably come to birth. No noble nature abides permanently in the house of mourning. The greater the sorrow, the greater the ultimate gladness, the "joy in the Holy Ghost" mentioned by St. Paul among the essentials of the Kingdom of God (Rom. xiv. 17).

Ver. 5. οἱ πρᾶεις: in Sept. for עֲנַיִן in Ps. xxxvii. 11, of which this Beatitude is an echo. The men who suffer wrong without bitterness or desire for revenge, a class who in this world are apt to go to the wall. In this case we should have expected the Teacher to end with the common refrain: theirs is the kingdom of heaven, that being the only thing they are likely to get. Jean Paul Richter humorously said: "The French have the empire of the land, the English the empire of the sea; to the Germans belongs the empire of the air". But Jesus promises to the meek the empire of the solid earth—κληρονομήσουσι τὴν γῆν. Surely a startling paradox! That the meek should find a foremost place in the kingdom of heaven is very intelligible, but "inherit the earth"—the land of Canaan or any other part of this planet—is it not a delusive promise? Not altogether. It is at least true as a doctrine of moral tendency. Meekness after all is a power even in this world, a "world-conquering principle" (Tholuck). The meek of England, driven from their native land by religious intolerance, have inherited the continent of America. Weiss (Meyer) is quite sure, however, that this thought was far (ganz fern) from Christ's mind. I venture to think he is mistaken.

The inverse order of the second and third Beatitudes found in Codex D, and favoured by some of the Fathers, e.g., Jerome, might be plausibly justified by the affinity between poverty of spirit and meekness, and the natural sequence of the two promises: possession of the kingdom of heaven and inheritance of the earth. But the connection beneath the surface is in favour of the order as it stands in T. R.

Ver. 6. If the object of the hunger and thirst had not been mentioned this fourth Beatitude would have been parallel in form to the second: Blessed the hungry, for they shall be filled. We should then have another absolute affirmation requiring qualification, and raising the question: What sort of hunger is it which is sure to be satisfied? That might be the original form of the aphorism as given in Luke. The answer to the question it suggests is similar to that given under Beatitude 1. The hunger whose satisfaction is sure is that which contains its own satisfaction. It is the hunger for moral good. The passion for righteousness is righteousness in the deepest sense of the word.—πεινῶντες καὶ διψῶντες. These verbs, like all verbs of desire, ordinarily take the genitive of the object. Here and in οἱ εἰρηνοποιοί· ὅτι αὐτοὶ<sup>1</sup> υἱοὶ Θεοῦ κληθήσονται. 10. μακάριοι<sup>p</sup> here only.

 οἱ δεδιωγμένοι ἕνεκεν δικαιοσύνης· ὅτι αὐτῶν ἐστὶν ἡ βασιλεία τῶν <sup>The verb</sup>
<sup>Col. i. 20.</sup>
<sup>q υἱοὶ Θ. in</sup>
 Lk. xx. 36. Rom. viii. 14, 19. Gal. iii. 26.

<sup>1</sup> αὐτοὶ omitted in  $\aleph$ CD it. vul. syr., bracketed in W.H. It may have been omitted by homœoteleuton and it seems needed for emphasis.

other places in N. T. they take the accusative, the object being of a spiritual nature, which one not merely desires to participate in, but to possess in whole. Winer, § xxx. 10, thus distinguishes the two constructions: διψᾶν φιλοσοφίας = to thirst after philosophy; διψ. φιλοσοφίαν = to thirst for possession of philosophy as a whole. Some have thought that διὰ is to be understood before δικ., and that the meaning is: "Blessed they who suffer natural hunger and thirst on account of righteousness". Grotius understands by δικ. the way or doctrine of righteousness.

Ver. 7. This Beatitude states a self-acting law of the moral world. The exercise of mercy (ἔλεος, active pity) tends to elicit mercy from others—God and men. The chief reference may be to the mercy of God in the final awards of the kingdom, but the application need not be restricted to this. The doctrine of Christ abounds in great ethical principles of universal validity: "he that humbleth himself shall be exalted," "to him that hath shall be given," etc. This Beatitude suitably follows the preceding. Mercy is an element in true righteousness (Mic. vi. 8). It was lacking in Pharisaic righteousness (Matt. xxiii. 23). It needed much to be inculcated in Christ's time, when sympathy was killed by the theory that all suffering was penalty of special sin, a theory which fostered a pitiless type of righteousness (Schanz). Mercy may be practised by many means; "not by money alone," says Euthy. Zig., "but by word, and if you have nothing, by tears" (διὰ δακρῶν).

Ver. 8. οἱ καθαροὶ τῆ καρδίας: τ. καρδ. may be an explanatory addition to indicate the region in which purity shows itself. That purity is in the heart, the seat of thought, desire, motive, not in the outward act, goes without saying from Christ's point of view. Blessed the pure. Here there is a wide range of suggestion. The pure may be the spotless or faultless in general; the continent with special reference to sexual indulgence—those whose very thoughts are clean; or the pure in motive, the single-minded, the men who seek the kingdom as the summum bonum with undivided heart. The last is the most relevant to the general connection and the most deserving to be insisted on. In the words of Augustine, the mundum cor is above all the simplex cor. Moral simplicity is the cardinal demand in Christ's ethics. The man who has attained to it is in His view perfect (Matt. xix. 21). Without it a large numerical list of virtues and good habits goes for nothing. With it character, however faulty in temper or otherwise, is ennobled and redeemed.—τὸν θεὸν ὄψονται: their reward is the beatific vision. Some think the reference is not to the faculty of clear vision but to the rare privilege of seeing the face of the Great King (so Fritzsche and Schanz). "The expression has its origin in the ways of eastern monarchs, who rarely show themselves in public, so that only the most intimate circle behold the royal countenance" (Schanz) = the pure have access to the all but inaccessible. This idea does not seem to harmonise with Christ's general way of conceiving God. On the other hand, it was His habit to insist on the connection between clear vision and moral simplicity; to teach that it is the single eye that is full of light (Matt. vi. 22). It is true that the pure shall have access to God's presence, but the truth to be insisted on in connection with this Beatitude is that through purity, singleness of mind, they are qualified for seeing, knowing, truly conceiving God and all that relates to the moral universe. It is the pure in heart who are able to see and say that "truly God is good" (Ps. lxxiii. 1) and rightly to interpret the whole phenomena of life in relation to Providence. They shall see, says Jesus casting His thought into eschatological form, but He means the pure are the men who see; the double-minded, the two-souled (δίψυχος, James i. 8) man is blind. Theophylact illustrates the connection between purity and vision thus: ὡσπερ γὰρ τὸ κάτοπτρον, ἐὰν ἡ καθαρὸν τότε δέχεται τὰς ἐμφάσεις, οὕτω καὶ ἡ καθαρὰ ψυχὴ δέχεται ὄψιν θεοῦ.

Ver. 9. οἱ εἰρηνοποιοί: not merely those who have peace in their own souls

† Rom. ix. 1. οὐρανῶν. 11. μακάριοί ἐστε, ὅταν ὀνειδίσωσιν ὑμᾶς καὶ διώξωσι, Heb. vi. 18. καὶ εἴπωσι πᾶν πονηρὸν ῥῆμα<sup>1</sup> καθ' ὑμῶν<sup>2</sup> ἵ ψευδόμενοι,<sup>3</sup> ἔνεκεν<sup>1</sup> Lk. x. 21. ἔμοῦ. 12. χαίrete καὶ ἁγαλλιᾶσθε, ὅτι ὁ ἴμισθος ὑμῶν πολλὸς ἐν<sup>1</sup> ver. 46. Ch. vi. 1, 2, 5, etc. τοῖς οὐρανοῖς· οὕτω γὰρ ἐδίωξαν τοὺς προφῆτας τοὺς πρὸ ὑμῶν.

<sup>1</sup> This word (in CΔΣ) is omitted in NBD. It may have been added to make the sense clear.

<sup>2</sup> καθ ὑμων before παν in D.

<sup>3</sup> Omitted in D; found in NBC al.

through purity (Augustine), or the peace-loving (Grotius, Wetstein), but the active heroic promoters of peace in a world full of alienation, party passion, and strife. Their efforts largely consist in keeping aloof from sectional strifes and the passions which beget them, and living tranquilly for and in the whole. Such men have few friends. Christ, the ideal peace-maker, was alone in a time given up to sectarian division. But they have their compensation—οἱ οὖν κληθήσονται. God owns the disowned and distrusted as His sons. They shall be called because they are. They shall be called at the great consummation; nay, even before that, in after generations, when party strifes and passions have ceased, and men have come to see who were the true friends of the Divine interest in an evil time.

Vv. 10-12. οἱ δεδιωγμένοι ε. δικ. The original form of the Beatitude was probably: Blessed the persecuted. The added words only state what is a matter of course. No one deserves to be called a persecuted one unless he suffers for righteousness. οἱ δεδιωγ. (perf. part.): the persecuted are not merely men who have passed through a certain experience, but men who bear abiding traces of it in their character. They are marked men, and bear the stamp of trial on their faces. It arrests the notice of the passer-by: commands his respect, and prompts the question, Who and whence? They are veteran soldiers of righteousness with an unmistakable air of dignity, serenity, and buoyancy about them.—αὐτῶν ἐστὶν ἡ β. τ. οὐρ. The common refrain of all the Beatitudes is expressly repeated here to hint that theirs emphatically is the Kingdom of Heaven. It is the proper gear of the soldier of righteousness. It is his now, within him in the disciplined spirit and the heroic temper developed by trial.—Ver. 11. μακάριοί ἐστε. The Teacher ex-patiates as if it were a favourite theme, giving a personal turn to His further relections—"Blessed are ye." Is it likely that Jesus would speak so early of this topic to disciples? Would He not wait till it came more nearly within the range of their experience? Nay, is the whole discourse about persecution not a reflection back into the teaching of the Master of the later experiences of the apostolic age, that suffering disciples might be inspired by the thought that their Lord had so spoken? It is possible to be too incredulous here. If it was not too soon to speak of Pharisaic righteousness it was not too soon to speak of suffering for true righteousness. The one was sure to give rise to the other. The disciples may already have had experience of Pharisaic disfavour (Mk. ii., iii.). In any case Jesus saw clearly what was coming. He had had an apocalypse of the dark future in the season of temptation, and He deemed it fitting to lift the veil a little that His disciples might get a glimpse of it.—ὅταν ὀνειδίσωσιν . . . ἔνεκεν ἔμοῦ: illustrative details pointing to persistent relentless persecution by word and deed, culminating in wilful, malicious, lying imputations of the grossest sort—πᾶν πονηρὸν, every conceivable calumny—ψευδόμενοι, lying: not merely in the sense that the statements are false, but in the sense of deliberately inventing the most improbable lies; their only excuse being that violent prejudice leads the calumniators to think nothing too evil to be believed against the objects of their malice.—ἔνεκεν ἔμοῦ: for Him who has undertaken to make you fishers of men. Do you repent following Him? No reason why.—Ver. 12. χαίrete καὶ ἁγ. In spite of all, joy, exultation is possible—nay, inevitable. I not only exhort you to it, but I tell you, you cannot help being in this mood, if once you throw yourselves enthusiastically into the warfare of God. ἁγαλλιᾶ is a strong word of Hellenistic coinage, from ἄγαν and ἄλλομαι, to leap much, signifying irrepressible demonstrative gladness. This joy is inseparable from the heroic

13. "Υμεῖς ἐστε τὸ ἅλας τῆς γῆς· ἐὰν δὲ τὸ ἅλας ὠμωρῶθῃ, ἢ ἐν τίνι ὠλισθήσεται; εἰς οὐδὲν ἰσχύει ἔτι, εἰ μὴ βληθῆναι ἔξω, ἢ
Lk. xiv. 34. Rom. i. 22. 1 Cor. i. 20. w here and in Mk. ix. 49.

<sup>1</sup> βληθῆναι in  $\aleph$ BC 1, 33, Origen, which carries along with it the omission of καὶ after ἔξω.

temper. It is the joy of the Alpine climber standing on the top of a snow-clad mountain. But the Teacher gives two reasons to help inexperienced disciples to rise to that moral elevation.—ὅτι ὁ μισθὸς . . . οὐρανοῖς. For evil treatment on earth there is a compensating reward in heaven. This hope, weak now, was strong in primitive Christianity, and greatly helped martyrs and confessors.—οὕτως γὰρ ἐ. τοὺς προφήτας. If we take the γὰρ as giving a reason for the previous statement the sense will be: you cannot doubt that the prophets who suffered likewise have received an eternal reward (so Bengel, Fritzsche, Schanz, Meyer, Weiss). But we may take it as giving a co-ordinate reason for joy = ye are in good company. There is inspiration in the "goodly fellowship of the prophets," quite as much as in thought of their posthumous reward. It is to be noted that the prophets themselves did not get much comfort from such thoughts, and more generally that they did not rise to the joyous mood commended to His disciples by Jesus; but were desponding and querulous. On that side, therefore, there was no inspiration to be got from thinking of them. But they were thoroughly loyal to righteousness at all hazards, and reflection on their noble career was fitted to infect disciples with their spirit.—τοὺς πρὸ ἡμῶν: words skillfully chosen to raise the spirit. Before you not only in time but in vocation and destiny. Your predecessors in function and suffering; take up the prophetic succession and along with it, cheerfully, its tribulations.

Vv. 13-16. Disciple functions. It is quite credible that these sentences formed part of the Teaching on the Hill. Jesus might say these things at a comparatively early period to the men to whom He had already said: I will make you fishers of men. The functions assigned to disciples here are not more ambitious than that alluded to at the time of their call. The new section rests on what goes before, and postulates possession of the attributes named in the Beatitudes. With these the disciples will be indeed the salt of the earth and the light of the world. Vitally important functions are indicated by the two figures. Nil sole et sale utilius was a Roman proverb (Pliny, H. N., 31, 9). Both harmonise with, the latter points expressly to, a universal destination of the new religion. The sun lightens all lands. Both also show how alien it was from the aims of Christ to be the teacher of an esoteric faith.

Ver. 13. ἅλας, a late form for ἅλς, ἅλος, masculine. The properties of salt are assumed to be known. Commentators have enumerated four. Salt is pure, preserves against corruption, gives flavour to food, and as a manuring element helps to fertilise the land. The last mentioned property is specially insisted on by Schanz, who finds a reference to it in Lk. xiv. 35, and thinks it is also pointed to here by the expression τῆς γῆς. The first, purity, is a quality of salt per se, rather than a condition on which its function in nature depends. The second and third are doubtless the main points to be insisted on, and the second more than the third and above all. Salt arrests or prevents the process of putrefaction in food, and the citizens of the kingdom perform the same function for the earth, that is, for the people who dwell on it. In Schanz's view there is a confusion of the metaphor with its moral interpretation. Fritzsche limits the point of comparison to indispensableness = ye are as necessary an element in the world as salt is; a needlessly bald interpretation. Necessary certainly, but why and for what?—τῆς γῆς might mean the land of Israel (Achelis, Bergpredigt), but it is more natural to take it in its widest significance in harmony with κόσμον. Holtzmann (H. C.) sets κόσμον down to the account of the evangelist, and thinks γῆς in the narrow sense more suited to the views of Jesus.—Ver. 14. ὠμωρῶθῃ. The Vulgate renders the verb evanuerit. Better Beza and Erasmus, infatuatus fuerit. If the salt become insipid, so as to lack its proper preserving virtue—can this happen? Weiss and others reply: It does not matter for the point

x Ch. vii. 6. καὶ<sup>1</sup> * καταπατεῖσθαι ὑπὸ τῶν ἀνθρώπων. 14. Ὑμεῖς ἐστε τὸ φῶς
 Lk. viii. 5. τοῦ κόσμου· οὐ δύναται πόλις κρυβῆναι ἐπάνω ὄρους κειμένη· 15.
 Heb. x. 27. οὐδὲ * καίουσιν λύχνον καὶ τιθέασιν αὐτὸν ὑπὸ τὸν μύδιον, ἀλλ' ἐπιy part. pass. in I. k. xii. 35. Heb. xii. 18 et.

<sup>1</sup> Omitted in MSS. named in preceding note.

of the comparison. Perhaps not, but it does matter for the felicity of the metaphor, which is much more strikingly apt if degeneracy can happen in the natural as well as in the spiritual sphere. Long ago Maundrell maintained that it could, and modern travellers confirm his statement. Furrer says: "As it was observed by Maundrell 200 years ago; so it has often been observed in our time that salt loses somewhat of its sharpness in the storehouses of Syria and Palestine. Gathered in a state of impurity, it undergoes with other substances a chemical process, by which it becomes really another sort of stuff, while retaining its old appearance" (Ztscht. für M. und R., 1890). A similar statement is made by Thomson (Land and Book, p. 381). There is no room for doubt as to whether the case supposed can happen in the spiritual sphere. The "salt of the earth" can become not only partially but wholly, hopelessly insipid, losing the qualities which constitute its conservative power as set forth in the Beatitudes and in other parts of Christ's teaching (e.g., Mat. xviii.). Erasmus gives a realistic description of the causes of degeneracy in these words: "Si vestri mores fuerint amore laudis, cupiditate pecuniarum, studio voluptatum, libidine vindicandi, metu infamiae damnorum aut mortis infatuati," etc. (Paraph. in Evan. Matt.).—ἐν τίνι ἄλις: not, with what shall the so necessary salting process be done? but, with what shall the insipid salt be salted? The meaning is that the lost property is irrecoverable. A stern statement, reminding us of Heb. vi. 6, but true to the fact in the spiritual sphere. Nothing so hopeless as apostate discipleship with a bright past behind it to which it has become dead—began in the spirit, ending in the flesh.—εἰς οὐδὲν, useless for salting, good for nothing else any more (ἐτι).—εἰ μὴ βληθὲν, etc. This is a kind of humorous afterthought: except indeed, cast out as refuse, to be trodden under foot of man, i.e., to make foot-paths of. The reading βληθὲν is much to be preferred to βληθῆναι, as giving prominence to καταπατεῖσθαι as the main verb, pointing to a kind of use to which insipid salt can after all be put.

But what a downcome: from being saviours of society to supplying materials for footpaths!

Ver. 14. τὸ φῶς τ. κ., the light, the sun of the moral world conceived of as full of the darkness of ignorance and sin. The disciple function is now viewed as illuminating. And as under the figure of salt the danger warned against was that of becoming insipid, so here the danger to be avoided is that of obscuring the light. The light will shine, that is its nature, if pains be not taken to hide it.—οὐ δύναται πόλις, etc. As a city situate on the top of a hill cannot be hid, neither can a light fail to be seen unless it be expressly prevented from shining. No pains need to be taken to secure that the light shall shine. For that it is enough to be a light. But Christ knew that there would be strong temptation for the men that had it in them to be lights to hide their light. It would draw the world's attention to them, and so expose them to the ill will of such as hate the light. Therefore He goes on to caution disciples against the policy of obscurity.

Ver. 15. A parabolic word pointing out that such a policy in the natural sphere is unheard of and absurd.—καίουσιν, to kindle, accendere, ordinarily neuter = urere; not as Beza thought, a Hebraism; examples occur in late Greek authors (vide Kypke, Obser. Sac.). The figure is taken from lowly cottage life. There was a projecting stone in the wall on which the lamp was set. The house consisted of a single room, so that the tiny light sufficed for all. It might now and then be placed under the modius, an earthenware grain measure, or under the bed (Mk. iv. 21), high to keep clear of serpents, therefore without danger of setting it on fire (Koetsveld, De Gelijkenissen, p. 305). But that would be the exception, not the rule—done occasionally for special reasons, perhaps during the hours of sleep. Schanz says the lamp burned all night, and that when they wanted darkness they put it on the floor and covered it with the "bushel". Tholuck also thinks people might cover the light when they wished to keep it burning, when they had occasion to leave

τὴν λυχνίαν καὶ ἡ λάμπει πᾶσι τοῖς ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ. 16. οὕτω λαμψάτω z Lk. xvii τὸ φῶς ὑμῶν ἔμπροσθεν τῶν ἀνθρώπων, ὅπως ἴδωσιν ὑμῶν τὰ ἁ καλὰ Acts xii. 7.
 ἔργα, καὶ δοξάσωσι τὸν πατέρα ὑμῶν τὸν ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς. 2 Cor. iv.
 6.

a Cf. Mt.
 xxvi. 10. Mk. xiv. 6, for an example of a "good work".

the room for a time. Weiss, on the other hand, thinks it would be put under a cover only when they wished to put it out (Matt.-Evan., p. 144). But was it ever put out? Not so, according to Benzinger (Heb. Arch., p. 124).

Ver. 16. οὕτω. Do ye as they do in cottage life: apply the parable.—λαμψάτω, let your light shine. Don't use means to prevent it, turning the rare exception of household practice into the rule, so extinguishing your light, or at least rendering it useless. Cowards can always find plausible excuses for the policy of obscurity—reasons of prudence and wisdom: gradual accustoming of men to new ideas; deference to the prejudices of good men; avoidance of rupture by premature outspokenness; but generally the true reason is fear of unpleasant consequences to oneself. Their conduct Jesus represents as disloyalty to God—ἄπιστος, etc. The shining of light from the good works of disciples glorifies God the Father in heaven. The hiding of the light means withholding glory. The temptation arises from the fact—a stern law of the moral world it is—that just when most glory is likely to accrue to God, least glory comes to the light-bearer; not glory but dishonour and evil treatment his share. Many are ready enough to let their light shine when honour comes to themselves. But their "light" is not true heaven-kindled light; their works are not καλὰ, noble, heroic, but πονηρὰ (vii. 17), ignoble, worthless, at best of the conventional type in fashion among religious people, and wrought often in a spirit of vanity and ostentation. This is theatrical goodness, which is emphatically not what Jesus wanted. Euthy. Zig. says: οὐ κεύθει θεατρῶζειν τὴν ἀρετὴν.

Note that here, for the first time in the Gospel, Christ's distinctive name for God, "Father," occurs. It comes in as a thing of course. Does it presuppose previous instruction? (So Meyer.) One might have expected so important a topic as the nature and name of God to have formed the subject of a distinct lesson. But Christ's method of teaching was not scholastic or formal. He defined terms by discriminating use; Father, e.g., as a name for God, by using it as a motive to noble conduct. The motive suggested throws light on the name. God, we learn, as Father delights in noble conduct; as human fathers find joy in sons who acquit themselves bravely. Jesus may have given formal instruction on the point, but not necessarily. This first use of the title is very significant. It is full, solemn, impressive: your Father, He who is in the heavens; so again in ver. 45. It is suggestive of reasons for faithfulness, reasons of love and reverence. It hints at a reflected glory, the reward of heroism. The noble works which glorify the Father reveal the workers to be sons. The double-sided doctrine of this logion of Jesus is that the divine is revealed by the heroic in human conduct, and that the moral hero is the true son of God. Jesus Himself is the highest illustration of the twofold truth.

Vv. 17-20. Jesus defines His position. At the period of the Teaching on the Hill Jesus felt constrained to define His ethical and religious position all round, with reference to the O. T. as the recognised authority, and also to contemporary presentations of righteousness. The disciples had already heard Him teach in the synagogues (Matt. iv. 23) in a manner that at once arrested attention and led hearers to recognise in Him a new type of teacher (Mk. i. 27), entirely different from the scribes (Mk. i. 22). The sentences before us contain just such a statement of the Teacher's attitude as the previously awakened surprise of His audiences would lead us to expect. There is no reason to doubt their substantial authenticity though they may not reproduce the precise words of the speaker; no ground for the suggestion of Holtzmann (H. C.) that so decided a position either for or against the law was not likely to be taken up in Christ's time, and that we must find in these vv. an anti-Pauline programme of the Judaists. At a first glance the various statements may appear inconsistent with each other. And assuming their genuineness, they might easily be misunderstood, and give rise to disputes in the apostolic age, or be taken hold of in rival interests. The words of great epoch-making men generally have this fate. Though apparently contradictory they might all proceed

b with <sup>ὅτι</sup> here and in x. 34 (ὅτι ἡλ-θόν), oftener
with inf.
or an accus. with inf. c in same sense Acts v. 38, 39. Rom. xiv. 20. d Ch. xxiv. 34. Lk. xvi. 17. 2 Cor. v. 17. James i. 10. e here only. f Lk. xvi. 17 (κεραία in both pl. W.H.).

from the many-sided mind of Jesus, and be so reported by the genial Galilean publican in his Logia. The best guide to the meaning of the momentous declaration they contain is acquaintance with the general drift of Christ's teaching (vide Wendt, Die Lehre Jesu, ii., 330). Verbal exegesis will not do much for us.<sup>34</sup> We must bring to the words sympathetic insight into the whole significance of Christ's ministry. Yet the passage by itself, well weighed, is more luminous than at first it may seem.

Ver. 17. Μὴ νομίσητε: These words betray a consciousness that there was that in His teaching and bearing which might create such an impression, and are a protest against taking a surface impression for the truth.—καταλύσαι, to abrogate, to set aside in the exercise of legislative authority. What freedom of mind is implied in the bare suggestion of this as a possibility! To the ordinary religious Jew the mere conception would appear a profanity. A greater than the O. T., than Moses and the prophets, is here. But the Greater is full of reverence for the institutions and sacred books of His people. He is not come to disannul either the law or the prophets. ἡ before τ. προφ. is not = καί. "Law" and "Prophets" are not taken here as one idea = the O. T. Scriptures, as law, prophets and psalms seem to be in Lk. xxiv. 44, but as distinct parts, with reference to which different attitudes might conceivably be taken up. ἡ implies that the attitude actually taken up is the same towards both. The prophets are not to be conceived of as coming under the category of law (Weiss), but as retaining their distinctive character as revealers of God's nature and providence. Christ's attitude towards them in that capacity is the same as that towards the law, though the Sermon contains no illustrations under that head. "The idea of God and of salvation which Jesus taught bore the same relations to the O. T. revelation as His doctrine of righteousness to the O. T. law" (Wendt, Die L. J., ii., 344). —πληρῶσαι: the common relation is expressed by this weighty word. Christ protests that He came not as an abrogator, but as a fulfiller. What rôle does He thereby claim? Such as belongs to one whose attitude is at once free and reverential. He fulfils by realising in theory and practice an ideal to which O. T. institutions and revelations point, but which they do not adequately express. Therefore, in fulfilling He necessarily abrogates in effect, while repudiating the spirit of a destroyer. He brings in a law of the spirit which cancels the law of the letter, a kingdom which realises prophetic ideals, while setting aside the crude details of their conception of the Messianic time.

Vv. 18-19. These verses wear on first view a Judaistic look, and have been regarded as an interpolation, or set down to the credit of an over-conservative evangelist. But they may be reconciled with ver. 17, as above interpreted. Jesus expresses here in the strongest manner His conviction that the whole O. T. is a Divine revelation, and that therefore every minutest precept has religious significance which must be recognised in the ideal fulfilment.—Ἀμήν, formula of solemn asseveration, often used by Jesus, never by apostles, found doubled only in fourth Gospel.—ἕως ἄν παρέλθῃ, etc.: not intended to fix a period after which the law will pass away, but a strong way of saying never (so Tholuck and Weiss).—ἰῶτα, the smallest letter in the Hebrew alphabet.—κεραία, the little projecting point in some of the letters, e.g., of the base line in Beth; both representing the minutiae in the Mosaic legislation. Christ, though totally opposed to the spirit of the scribes, would not allow them to have a monopoly of zeal for the commandments great and small. It was important in a polemical interest to make this clear.—οὐ μὴ π., elliptical = do not fear lest. Vide Kühner, Gram., § 516, 9; also Goodwin's Syntax, Appendix ii.—ἕως ἄν π. γέν., a second protasis introduced with ἕως explanatory of the first ἕως ἄν παρέλθῃ; vide Goodwin, § 510; not saying the same thing, but a kindred: eternal, lasting, till adequately fulfilled; the latter the more exact statement of Christ's thought.

19. ὃς ἐὰν οὖν <sup>κ</sup>λύσῃ μίαν τῶν <sup>β</sup>ἐντολῶν τούτων τῶν ἐλαχίστων, καὶ εἰς <sup>John v. 18;</sup>
 διδάξῃ οὕτω τοὺς ἀνθρώπους, ἐλάχιστος κληθήσεται ἐν τῇ βασιλείᾳ <sup>vii. 23; x.</sup> τῶν οὐρανῶν· ὃς δ' ἂν ποιήσῃ καὶ διδάξῃ, οὗτος μέγας κληθήσεται <sup>35.</sup> ἐν τῇ βασιλείᾳ τῶν οὐρανῶν. 20. λέγω γὰρ ὑμῖν, ὅτι ἐὰν μὴ <sup>h Ch. xv. 3;</sup> <sup>ix. 17;</sup>
<sup>xxii. 40.</sup>
<sup>Lk. i. 6.</sup>
<sup>John xiii.</sup> <sup>34.</sup>
 ἰ περισεύσῃ ἢ δικαιοσύνη ὑμῶν <sup>1</sup> πλεῖον τῶν ἰ γραμματέων καὶ <sup>i with para</sup>
 Φαρισαίων, οὐ μὴ εἰσέλθῃτε εἰς τὴν βασιλείαν τῶν οὐρανῶν. <sup>in Eccles.</sup>
<sup>iii. 19. Cf.</sup>

Rom. v. 15. j sim. ellipt. const. i <sup>John ii. 2.</sup>

<sup>1</sup> ὑμων before η δικ. (= your righteousness) in  $\aleph$ BL $\Delta$  al. T. R. as in SU $\Sigma$ .

Ver. 19. ὃς ἐὰν οὖν λύσῃ, etc.: οὖν pointing to a natural inference from what goes before. Christ's view being such as indicated, He must so judge of the setter aside of any laws however small. When a religious system has lasted long, and is wearing towards its decline and fall, there are always such men. The Baptist was in some respects such a man. He seems to have totally neglected the temple worship and sacred festivals. He shared the prophetic disgust at formalism. Note now what Christ's judgment about such really is. A scribe or Pharisee would regard a breaker of even the least commandments as a miscreant. Jesus simply calls him the least in the Kingdom of Heaven. He takes for granted that he is an earnest man, with a passion for righteousness, which is the key to his iconoclastic conduct. He recognises him therefore as possessing real moral worth, but, in virtue of his impatient radical-reformer temper, not great, only little in the scale of true moral values, in spite of his earnestness in action and sincerity in teaching. John the Baptist was possibly in His mind, or some others not known to us from the Gospels.—ὃς δ' ἂν ποιήσῃ καὶ διδάξῃ, etc. We know now who is least: who is great? The man who does and teaches to do all the commands great and small; great not named but understood—οὗτος μέγας. Jesus has in view O. T. saints, the piety reflected in the Psalter, where the great ethical laws and the precepts respecting ritual are both alike respected, and men in His own time living in their spirit. In such was a sweetness and graciousness, akin to the Kingdom as He conceived it, lacking in the character of the hot-headed law-breaker. The geniality of Jesus made Him value these sweet saintly souls.

Ver. 20. Here is another type still, that of the scribes and Pharisees. We have had two degrees of worth, the little and the great. This new type gives us the moral zero.—λέγω γὰρ. The γὰρ is somewhat puzzling. We expect δὲ, taking our attention off two types described in the previous sentence and fixing it on a distinct one. Yet there is a hidden logic latent in the γὰρ. It explains the ἐλάχιστος of the previous verse. The earnest reformer is a small character compared with the sweet wholesome performer, but he is not a moral nullity. That place is reserved for another class. I call him least, not nothing, for the scribe is the zero.—πλεῖον τῶν γρ. κ. φ., a compendious comparison, τῆς δικαιοσύνης being understood after πλεῖον. Christ's statements concerning these classes of the Jewish community, elsewhere recorded, enable us to understand the verdict He pronounces here. They differed from the two classes named in ver. 18, thus: Class 1 set aside the least commandments for the sake of the great; class 2 conscientiously did all, great and small; class 3 set aside the great for the sake of the little, the ethical for the sake of the ritual, the divine for the sake of the traditional. That threw them outside the Kingdom, where only the moral has value. And the second is greater, higher, than the first, because, while zeal for the ethical is good, spirit, temper, disposition has supreme value in the Kingdom. These valuations of Jesus are of great importance as a contribution towards defining the nature of the Kingdom as He conceived it.

Nothing, little, great: there is a higher grade still, the highest. It belongs to Christ Himself, the Fulfiller, who is neither a sophisticated scribe, nor an impatient reformer, nor a strict performer of all laws great and small, walking humbly with God in the old ways, without thought, dream or purpose of change, but one who lives above the past and the present in the ideal, knows that a change is impending, but wishes it to come gently, and so as to do full justice to all

κ Rom. ix. 21. Ἠκούσατε ὅτι κ ἔρρηθη<sup>1</sup> τοῖς ἄρχαίσις, οὐ φονεύσεις· ὅς δ' αἰ 12.
 129310 ver. φονεύσει, ἢ ἔνοχος ἔσται τῇ κ κρίσει· 22. ἐγὼ δὲ λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι πᾶς
 33. Lk. ix.
 8, 19. Acts ὁ ὀργιζόμενος τῷ ἀδελφῷ αὐτοῦ εἰκῆ<sup>2</sup> ἔνοχος ἔσται τῇ κρίσει· ὅς δ'
 xv. 7.
 7. Act. ii. 5. αὐ εἶπη τῷ ἀδελφῷ αὐτοῦ, ῥακά,<sup>3</sup> ἔνοχος ἔσται τῷ συνεδρίῳ· ὅς (ethical)
 2 Cor. v. 17. m with dat. here four times; with gen. of punisht. Ch. xxvi. 66. Mk. xiv. 64.
 n of the tribunal, here only. o Ch. xxvi. 59. Mk. xiv. 55. Lk. xxii. 66 Often in Acts.

<sup>1</sup> ἔρρηθη in BD; text in  $\Sigma$ LMD al.  $\phi$ l. (W.H.). ἔρρηθη was more usual in later Greek.

<sup>2</sup> εἰκη is an ancient gloss found in many late MSS. but omitted in  $\Sigma$ B, Origen, Vulgate, and in the best modern editions.

<sup>3</sup> ρακα in  $\Sigma^*D$  abc (Tisch.); text in  $\Sigma^b$ BE (W.H.).

that is divine, venerable, and of good tendency in the past. His is the unique greatness of the reverently conservative yet free, bold inaugurator of a new time.

Vv. 21-26. First illustration of Christ's ethical attitude, taken from the Sixth Commandment. In connection with this and the following exemplifications of Christ's ethical method, the interpreter is embarrassed by the long-continued strifes of the theological schools, which have brought back the spirit of legalism, from which the great Teacher sought to deliver His disciples. It will be best to ignore these strifes and go steadily on our way.—Ver. 21. Ἠκούσατε. The common people knew the law by hearing it read in the synagogue, not by reading it themselves. The aorist expresses what they were accustomed to hear, an instance of the "gnomic" use. Tholuck thinks there may be an allusion to the tradition of the scribes, called Shema.—τοῖς ἀρχαίσις might mean: in ancient times, to the ancients, or by the ancients. The second is in accord with N. T. usage, and is adopted by Meyer, Weiss and Holtzmann (H. C.). How far back does Christ go in thought? To Moses or to Ezra? The expression is vague, and might cover the whole past, and perhaps is intended to do so. There is no reason a priori why the criticism should be restricted to the interpretation of the law by the scribes. Christ's position as fulfiller entitled Him to point out the defects of the law itself, and we must be prepared to find Him doing so, and there is reason to believe that in the sequel He actually does (so Wendt, L. 7., ii., 332).—Οὐ φονεύσεις . . . κρίσει. This is a correct statement, not only of the Pharisaic interpretation of the law, but of the law itself. As a law for the life of a nation, it could forbid and punish only the outward act. But just here lay its defect as a summary of human duty.

It restrained the end not the beginning of transgression (Euthy. Zig.).—ἔνοχος = ἐνεχόμενος, with dative of the tribunal here.—Ver. 22. ἐγὼ δὲ λέγω ὑμῖν. Christ supplies the defect, as a painter fills in a rude outline of a picture (σκιαγραφίαν), says Theophy. He goes back on the roots of crime in the feelings: anger, contempt, etc.—πᾶς . . . αὐτοῦ. Every one; universal interdict of angry passion.—ἀδελφῷ: not in blood (the classical meaning) or in faith, but by common humanity. The implied doctrine is that every man is my brother; companion doctrine to the universal Fatherhood of God (ver. 45).—εἰκη is of course a gloss; qualification of the interdict against anger may be required, but it was not Christ's habit to supply qualifications. His aim was to impress the main idea, anger a deadly sin.—κρίσει, here as in ver. 21. The reference is to the provincial court of seven (Deut. xvi. 18, 2 Chron. xix. 5, Joseph. Ant. iv. 8, 14) possessing power to punish capital offences by the sword. Christ's words are of course not to be taken literally as if He were enacting that the angry man be tried as a criminal. So understood He would be simply introducing an extension of legalism. He deserves to go before the seven, He says, meaning he is as great an offender as the homicide who is actually tried by them.

ῥακά: left untranslated in A. V. and R. V.; a word of little meaning, rendered by Jerome "inanis aut vacuus absque cerebro". Augustine says a Jew told him it was not properly a word at all, but an interjection like Hem. Theophy. gives as an equivalent σὺ spoken by a Greek to a man whom he despised. And the man who commits this trivial offence (as it seems) must go before, not the provincial seven, but the supreme seventy, the Sanhedrim that tried the most heinous offences and sentenced to the severest δ' ἂν εἶπη, Μωρέ, ἔνοχος ἔσται εἰς τὴν γέενναν τοῦ πυρός. 23. <sup>p</sup> ἔχειν τι κ. <sup>τ</sup> τικος here. <sup>Μκ</sup> Μκ. xi. 25. <sup>Rev</sup> Rev. ii. 4. <sup>Cf</sup> Cf. Acts <sup>xlii</sup> xlii. 19 <sup>(προς τινα)</sup> (προς τινα). <sup>q</sup> here only <sup>in N. T.</sup> in N. T. <sup>r</sup> ἴσθι with <sup>part. Lk.</sup> part. Lk. <sup>xix</sup> xix. 17. <sup>s</sup> here only <sup>in N. T.</sup> in N. T. <sup>t</sup> Lk. xlii. 58; xviii. 3. <sup>1</sup> 1 Peter v. 8. <sup>u</sup> ἕως οὗτος = while, here only. <sup>v</sup> τινά τινα here and Ch. xviii 34; xx. 18; xvii. 2, etc.

<sup>1</sup> μετ αὐτου before εν τ. οδῶ, NBDL.

penalties, e.g., death by stoning! Trivial in appearance, the offence is deadly in Christ's eyes. It means contempt for a fellow-man, more inhuman than anger—a violent passion, prompting to words and acts often bitterly regretted when the hot temper cools down. Μωρέ, if a Greek word, the equivalent for מָוֶרֶ = fool, good for nothing, morally worthless. It may, as Paulus, and after him Nösgein, suggests, be a Hebrew word, מָוֶרֶ (Num. xx. 24, Deut. xxi. 18), a rebel against God or against parents, the most worthless of characters. Against this Field (Otium Norwicense) remarks that it would be the only instance of a pure Hebrew word in the N. T. In either case the word expresses a more serious form of contempt than Raca. Raca expresses contempt for a man's head = you stupid! More expresses contempt for his heart and character = you scoundrel. The reckless use of such opprobrious epithets Jesus regarded as the supreme offence against the law of humanity.—ἔνοχος . . . πυρός. He deserves to go, not to the seven or the seventy, but to hell, his sin altogether damnable. Kuinoel thinks the meaning is: He deserves to be burned alive in the valley of Hinnom: is dignus est qui in valle Hinnomi vivus comburatur. This interpretation finds little approval, but it is not so improbable when we remember what Christ said about the offender of the little ones (Matt. xviii. 6). Neither burning alive nor drowning was actually practised. In these words of Jesus against anger and contempt there is an aspect of exaggeration. They are the strong utterance of one in whom all forms of inhumanity roused feelings of passionate abhorrence. They are of the utmost value as a revelation of character.

Vv. 23, 24. Holtzmann (H. C.) regards

these verses, as well as the two following, as an addition by the evangelist. But the passage is at least in thorough harmony with what goes before, as well as with the whole discourse.—Ἐάν οὖν προσφέρῃς, if thou art in the very act of presenting thine offering (present tense) at the altar.—κάκει μνησθῆς . . . κατά σοῦ, and it suddenly flashes through thy mind there that thou hast done something to a brother man fitted to provoke angry feeling in him. What then? Get through with thy worship as fast as possible and go directly after and make peace with the offended? No, interrupt the religious action and go on that errand first.—ἄφες ἐκεῖ. Lay it down on the spur of the moment before the altar without handing it to the priest to be offered by him in thy stead.—καί ὑπάγε πρῶτον. The πρῶτον is to be joined to ὑπάγε, not to the following verb as in A. V. and R. V. (πρῶτον stands after the verb also in chaps. vi. 33, vii. 5). First go: remove thyself from the temple, break off thy worship, though it may seem profane to do so.—διαλλάγηθι . . . καί τότε . . . πρόσφερε: no contempt for religious service expressed or implied. Holtzmann (H. C.) asks, did Jesus offer sacrifice? and answers, hardly. In any case He respected the practice. But, reconciliation before sacrifice: morality before religion. Significant utterance, first announcement of a great principle often repeated, systematically neglected by the religion of the time. Placability before sacrifice, mercy before sacrifice, filial affection and duty before sacrifice; so always in Christ's teaching (Matt. ix. 13, xv. 5). πρόσφερε: present; set about offering: plenty of time now for the sacred action.

Vv. 25, 26. There is much more reason for regarding this passage as an interpolation. It is connected only externally (by the references to courts of

¶ ver. 13. παραδῶ<sup>1</sup> τῷ ὑπηρέτῃ, καὶ εἰς φυλακὴν βληθήσῃ. 26. ἀμὴν λέγω
 Ch. 25. 25. xvi. σοι, οὐ μὴ ἐξέλθῃς ἐκεῖθεν, ἕως ἂν * ἀπαδῶς τὸν ἔσχατον * κοδράντην.
 21. kom. 27. Ἐκούσατε ὅτι ἐρρήθη τοῖς ἀρχαίοις,<sup>2</sup> Οὐ μοιχεύσεις· 28. ἐγὼ xiii. 7. x Mk. xii. δὲ λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι πᾶς ὁ βλέπων γυναῖκα πρὸς τὸ ἐπιθυμῆσαι αὐτῆς<sup>3</sup>

<sup>1</sup> This second σε παρ. is omitted in SB. Luke's text may have suggested the addition.

<sup>2</sup> τοῖς ἀρχαίοις is wanting in MSS. except LMA.

<sup>3</sup> ἐπιθυμῆσαι without pronoun, *SB** (Tisch.); with αὐτην, BDL al. (W.H. brackets). MΣ have αὐτης. αὐτην is probably the true reading.

law) with what goes before, and<sup>4</sup> it is out of keeping with the general drift of the teaching on the hill. It occurs in a different connection in Luke xii. 58, there as a solemn warning to the Jewish people, on its way to judgment, to repent. Meyer pleads that the logion might be repeated. It might, but only on suitable occasions, and the teaching on the hill does not seem to offer such an occasion. Kuinoel, Bleek, Holtzmann, Weiss and others regard the words as foreign to the connection. Referring to the exposition in Luke, I offer here only a few verbal notes mainly on points in which Matthew differs from Luke.—ἴσθι εὐνοῶν, be in a conciliatory mood, ready to come to terms with your opponent in a legal process (ἀντίδικος). It is a case of debt, and the two, creditor and debtor, are on the way to the court where they must appear together (Deut. xxi. 18, xxv. 1). Matthew's expression implies willingness to come to terms amicably on the creditor's part, and the debtor is exhorted to meet him half way. Luke's δὸς ἐργασίαν throws the willingness on the other side, or at least implies that the debtor will need to make an effort to bring the creditor to terms.—παραδῶ, a much milder word than Luke's κατασύρη, which points to rough, rude handling, dragging an unwilling debtor along whither he would rather not go.—ὑπηρέτη, the officer of the court whose business it was to collect the debt and generally to carry out the decision of the judge; in Luke πράκτωρ.—κοδράντην = quadrans, less than a farthing. Luke has λεπτόν, half the value of a κοδ., thereby strengthening the statement that the imprisoned debtor will not escape till he has paid all he owes.

Vv. 27-30. Second illustration, taken from the seventh commandment. A grand moral law, in brief lapidary style guarding the married relation and the sanctity of home. Of course the Hebrew legislator condemned lust after another man's wife; it is expressly prohibited in the tenth commandment. But in practical working as a public law the statute laid main stress on the outward act, and it was the tendency of the scribes to give exclusive prominence to this. Therefore Christ brings to the front what both Moses and the scribes left in the background, the inward desire of which adultery is the fruit—Ver. 28.—ὁ βλέπων: the looker is supposed to be a husband who by his look wrongs his own wife.—γυναῖκα; married or unmarried.—πρὸς τὸ ἐπιθυμῆσαι. The look is supposed to be not casual but persistent, the desire not involuntary or momentary, but cherished with longing. Augustine, a severe judge in such matters, defines the offence thus: "Qui hoc fine et hoc animo attenderit ut eam concupiscat; quod jam non est titillari delectatione carnis sed plene consentire libidini" (De ser. Domini). Chrysostom, the merciless scourge of the vices of Antioch, says: ὁ ἑαυτῷ τὴν ἐπιθυμίαν συλλέγων, ὁ μηδενὸς ἀναγκάζοντος τὸ θηρίον ἐπεισάγων ἡρεμοῦντι τῷ λογισμῷ. Hom. xvii. The Rabbis also condemned unchaste looks, but in how coarse a style compared with Jesus let this quotation given by Fritzsche show: "Intuens vel in minimum digitum feminae est ac si intueretur in locum pudendum". In better taste are these sayings quoted by Wünsche (Beiträge): "The eye and the heart are the two brokers of sin"; "Passions lodge only in him who sees".—αὐτὴν (bracketed as doubtful by W. H.): the accusative after ἐπιθ. is rare and late.—We cannot but think of the personal relations to woman of One who understood so well the subtle sources of sexual sin. Shall we say that He was tempted in all points as we are, but desire was expelled by the mighty power of a pure love to which every woman was as a daughter, a sister, or a betrothed: a sacred object of tender respect?

ἤδη ἐμοίχευσεν αὐτὴν ἐν τῇ καρδίᾳ αὐτοῦ.<sup>1</sup> 29. εἰ δὲ ὁ ὀφθαλμὸς σου ὁ δεξιὸς <sup>1</sup>σκανδαλίζει σε, <sup>2</sup>ἔξελε αὐτὸν καὶ βάλε ἀπὸ σοῦ· <sup>3</sup>συμφέρει γάρ σοι ἵνα ἀπόληται ἐν τῶν μελῶν σου, καὶ μὴ ὄλον τὸ σῶμά σου βληθῆ εἰς γέενναν. 30. καὶ εἰ ἡ δεξιὰ σου χεὶρ σκανδαλίζει σε, ἔκκοψον αὐτὴν καὶ βάλε ἀπὸ σοῦ· συμφέρει γάρ σοι ἵνα ἀπόληται ἐν τῶν μελῶν σου, καὶ μὴ ὄλον τὸ σῶμά σου βληθῆ εἰς γέενναν.<sup>3</sup>

31. “Ἐρρέθη δέ, ὅτι<sup>3</sup> οὗς ἂν ἀπολύσῃ τὴν γυναῖκα αὐτοῦ, δότω

<sup>1</sup> B has εαντου.

<sup>2</sup> For the reading in text  $\aleph$ B have εἰς γεενναν ἀπελθῆ. The T. R. has doubtless been conformed to the reading in ver. 29. Had it stood here in the copies used by the scribes they would not have substituted the reading in  $\aleph$ B.

<sup>3</sup>  $\aleph$ BDL omit οτι.

Vv. 29, 30. Counsel to the tempted, expressing keen perception of the danger and strong recoil from a sin to be shunned at all hazards, even by excision, as it were, of offending members; two named, eye and hand, eye first as mentioned before.—ὁ ὀφ. ὁ δεξιὸς: the right eye deemed the more precious (1 Sam. xi. 2, Zech. xi. 17). Similarly ver. 30 the right hand, the most indispensable for work. Even these right members οὗς τῆς βῆμης body must go. But as the remaining left eye and hand can still offend, it is obvious that these counsels are not meant to be taken literally, but symbolically, as expressing strenuous effort to master sexual passion (vide Grotius). Mutilation will not serve the purpose; it may prevent the outward act, but it will not extinguish desire.—σκανδαλίζει, cause to stumble; not found in Greek authors but in Sept. Sirach, and in N. T. in a tropical moral sense. The noun σκάνδαλον is also of frequent occurrence, a late form for σκανδάληθρον, a trap-stick with bait on it which by being touched the trap springs. Hesychius gives as its equivalent ἐμποδισμός. It is used in a literal sense in Lev. xix. 14 (Sept.).—συμφέρει . . . ἵνα ἀπολ.: ἵνα with subjunctive instead of infinitive (vide on ch. iv. 3). Meyer insists on ἵνα having here as always its telic sense and praises Fritzsche as alone interpreting the passage correctly. But, as Weiss observes, the mere destruction of the member is not the purpose of its excision. Note the impressive solemn repetition in ver. 30 of the thought in ver. 29, in identical terms save that for βληθῆ is substituted, in the true reading, ἀπέλθῆ. This logion occurs again in Matthew (xviii. 8, 9). Weiss (Marc.-Evang., 326) thinks it is taken here from the Apostolic document, i.e., Matthew's book of Logia, and there from Mark ix. 43-47.

Vv. 31-32. Third illustration, subordinate to the previous one, connected with the same general topic, sex relations, therefore introduced less formally with a simple ἐρρέθη δέ. This instance is certainly directed against the scribes rather than Moses. The law (Deut. xxiv. 1) was meant to mitigate an existing usage, regarded as evil, in woman's interest. The scribes busied themselves solely about getting the bill of separation into due legal form. They did nothing to restrain the unjust caprice of husbands; they rather opened a wider door to licence. The law contemplated as the ground of separation a strong loathing, probably of sexual origin. The Rabbis (the school of Shammai excepted) recognised whimsical dislikes, even a fancy for another fairer woman, as sufficient reasons. But they were zealous to have the bill in due form that the woman might be able to show she was free to marry again, and they probably flattered themselves they were defending the rights of women. Brave men! Jesus raised the previous question, and asserted a more radical right of woman—not to be put away, except when she put herself away by unfaithfulness. He raised anew the prophetic cry (Mal. ii. 16), I hate putting away. It was an act of humanity of immense significance for civilisation, and of rare courage; for He was fighting single-handed against widely prevalent, long-established opinion and custom.—ἀπολύσῃ:

Ch. xviii.
6, 8, parall.
1 Cor. viii.
13 (= tempt).
Ch. xv. 12;
xvii. 27 (to give offence).
z Ch. xviii.
9.
a Ch. xviii.
6 with ἵνα.
Ch. xix. 10 with inf.

b here and αὐτῇ <sup>b</sup> ἀποστάσιον · 32. ἐγὼ δὲ λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι ὅς ἂν ἀπολύσῃ <sup>1</sup> τὴν
in Ch.
 xix. 7. γυναῖκα αὐτοῦ, ὁ παρεκτός λόγου πορνείας, ποιῇ αὐτὴν μοιχᾶσθαι <sup>2</sup> · ε Acts xxvi.
 29. 2 Cor.
 xi. 28. καὶ ὅς ἂν ἀπολελυμένην γαμήσῃ, μοιχᾶται. <sup>3</sup> 33. Πάλιν ἠκούσατε d here only
 in N. T.,
 twice in Sept. ὅτι ἐρρέθη τοῖς ἀρχαίοις, οὐκ <sup>4</sup> ἐπιορκήσεις, ἀποδώσεις δὲ τῷ Κυρίῳ e Ch. xliiii.
 16-22 (with Heb.) τῷ οὐρανῷ ὅτι θρόνος ἐστὶ τοῦ Θεοῦ · 35. μήτε ἐν τῇ γῇ, ὅτι
vi. 13
 (with κατὰ), ver.
 35 (with eis). ἐστὶ τοῦ μεγάλου βασιλέως · 36. μήτε ἐν τῇ κεφαλῇ σου ὁμόσῃς, ὅτι

<sup>1</sup> πας ο ἀπολυων in  $\aleph$ BLA al. Text in D al.

<sup>2</sup>  $\aleph$ BD have μοιχευθῆναι.

<sup>3</sup> The clause και ος εαν . . . μοιχεται is wanting in D and bracketed in W.H. In B it runs ο ἀπολελυμένην γαμήσας.

the corresponding word in Greek authors is ἀποπέμπειν.—ἀποστάσιον = βιβλίον ἀποστασίου in Deut. xxiv. The husband is to give her her dismissal, with a bill stating that she is no longer his wife. The singular form in ων is to be noted. The tendency in later Greek was to substitute ων for ια, the plural ending. Vide Lobeck, Phryn., p. 517.—παρ. λ. πορνείας: a most important exception which has given rise to much controversy that will probably last till the world's end. The first question is: Did Christ really say this, or is it not rather an explanatory gloss due to the evangelist, or to the tradition he followed? De Wette, Weiss, Holtzmann (H. C.) take the latter view. It would certainly be in accordance with Christ's manner of teaching, using strong, brief, unqualified assertions to drive home unfamiliar or unwelcome truths, if the word as He spoke it took the form given in Lk. xvi. 18: "Every one putting away his wife and marrying another committeth adultery". This was the fitting word to be spoken by one who hated putting away, in a time when it was common and sanctioned by the authorities. A second question is: What does πορνεία mean? Schanz, a master, as becomes a Catholic, in this class of questions, enumerates five senses, but decides that it means adultery committed by a married woman. Some, including Döllinger (Christenthum und Kirche: The First Age of Christianity and the Church, vol. ii., app. iii.), think it means fornication committed before marriage. The predominant opinion, both ancient and modern, is that adopted by Schanz. A third question is: Does Christ, assuming the words to have been spoken by Him, recognise adultery as a ground of absolute divorce, or only, as Catholics teach, of separation a toro et mensa? Is it possible to be quite sure as to this point? One thing is certain. Christ did not come to be a new legislator making laws for social life. He came to set up a high ethical ideal, and leave that to work on men's minds. The tendency of His teaching is to create deep aversion to rupture of married relations. That aversion might even go the length of shrinking from severance of the tie even in the case of one who had forfeited all claims. The last clause is bracketed by W. H. as of doubtful genuineness. It states unqualifiedly that to marry a dismissed wife is adultery. Meyer thinks that the qualification "unjustly dismissed," i. e., not for adultery, is understood. Weiss (Meyer) denies this.

Vv. 33-37. Fourth illustration: concerning oaths. A new theme, therefore formally introduced as in ver. 21. Πάλιν points to a new series of illustrations (Weiss, Mt.-Evan., p. 165). The first series is based on the Decalogue. Thou shalt not swear falsely (Lev. xix. 12), and thou shalt perform unto the Lord thy vows (Num. xxx. 3; Deut. xxiii. 22)—what is wrong in these dicta? Nothing save what is left unsaid. The scribes misplaced the emphasis. They had a great deal to say, in sophistical style, of the oaths that were binding and not binding, nothing about the fundamental requirement of truth in the inward parts. Again, therefore, Jesus goes back on the previous question: Should there be any need for oaths?—Ver. 34. ὅλως: emphatic = παντελῶς, don't swear at all. Again an unqualified statement, to be taken not in the letter as a new law, οὐ δύνασαι μίαν τρίχα λευκὴν ἢ μέλαιναν ποιῆσαι.<sup>1</sup> 37. ἔστω<sup>2</sup> δὲ h 2 Cor. i. 17-19. James v. οὐ λόγος ὑμῶν, <sup>h</sup> ναὶ ναί, οὐ οὐ· τὸ δὲ περισσὸν τούτων ἐκ τοῦ James v. 12. 38. Ἠκούσατε ὅτι ἐρρέθη, <sup>1</sup> Ὁφθαλμὸν ἀντὶ ὀφθαλ- i Ex. xxi. 24. Lev. xxiv. 40. Deut. xix. 21.

<sup>1</sup> SBL place ποιῆσαι before ἢ μέλαιναν. The T. R. represents an effort by the scribes to give a smoother reading.

<sup>2</sup> For ἔστω (SBL al.) BΣ have εἶσται, which expresses the injunction in the strongest way and is to be preferred (W.H. on margin).

but in the spirit as inculcating such a love of truth that so far as we are concerned there shall be no need of oaths. In civil life the most truthful man has to take an oath because of the untruth and consequent distrust prevailing in the world, and in doing so he does not sin against Christ's teaching. Christ Himself took an oath before the High Priest (Mt. xxvi. 63). What follows (vv. 34-6) is directed against the casuistry which laid stress on the words τῷ κυρίῳ, and evaded obligation by taking oaths in which the divine name was not mentioned: by heaven, earth, Jerusalem, or by one's own head. Jesus points out that all such oaths involved a reference to God. This is sufficiently obvious in the case of the first three, not so clear in case of the fourth.—λευκὴν ἢ μέλαιναν: white is the colour of old age, black of youth. We cannot alter the colour of our hair so as to make our head look young or old. A fortiori we cannot bring on our head any curse by perjury, of which hair suddenly whitened might be the symbol. Providence alone can blast our life. The oath by the head is a direct appeal to God. All these oaths are binding, therefore, says Jesus; but what I most wish to impress on you is: do not swear at all. Observe the use of μήτε (not μηδέ) to connect these different evasive oaths as forming a homogeneous group. Winer, sect. lv. 6, endorses the view of Herrmann in Viger that οὔτε and μήτε are adjunctival, οὐδέ and μηδέ disjunctival, and says that the latter add negation to negation, while the former divide a single negation into parts. Jesus first thinks of these evasive oaths as a bad class, then specifies them one after the other. Away with them one and all, and let your word be ναὶ ναί, οὐ οὐ. That is, if you want to give assurance, let it not be by an oath, but by simple repetition of your yes and no. Grotius interprets: let your yea or nay in deed, be as good as your word even unsupported by an oath. This brings the version of Christ's saying in Mt. into closer correspondence with Jas. v. 12—ἤτω τὸ Ναὶ ναί, καὶ τὸ Οὐ οὐ. Beza, with whom Achelis (Beypredigt) agrees, renders, "Let your affirmative discourse be a simple yea, and your negative, nay".—τὸ δὲ περισσὸν, the surplus, what goes beyond these simple words.—ἐκ τοῦ πονηροῦ, hardly "from the evil one," though many ancient and modern interpreters, including Meyer, have so understood it. Meyer says the neuter "of evil" gives a very insipid meaning. I think, however, that Christ expresses Himself mildly out of respect for the necessity of oaths in a world full of falsehood. I know, He means to say, that in certain circumstances something beyond yea and nay will be required of you. But it comes of evil, the evil of untruthfulness. See that the evil be not in you. Chrysostom (Hom. xvii.) asks: How evil, if it be God's law? and answers: Because the law was good in its season. God acted like a nurse who gives the breast to an infant and afterwards laughs at it when it wants it after weaning.

Vv. 38-42. Fifth illustration, from the law of compensation. Ver. 38 contains the theme, the following vv. Christ's comment.—Ὁφθαλμὸν . . . ὀδόντος. An exact quotation from Ex. xxi. 24, Christ's criticism here concerns a precept from the oldest code of Hebrew law. Fritzsche explains the accusatives, ὀφθαλμὸν, ὀδόντος, by supposing εἶναι to be understood: "Ye have heard that Moses wrote that an eye shall be for an eye". The simplest explanation is that the two nouns in the original passage are under the government of δώσει, Ex. xxi. 23. (So Weiss and Meyer after Grotius.) Tersely expressed, a sound principle of civil law for the guidance of the judge, acted on by almost all peoples: Christ does not condemn it: if parties come before the judge, let him by all means give fair compensation for injuries received. He simply leaves it on one side.

1 Ch. xxvi. μου, καὶ ὀδόντα ἀντὶ ὀδόντος· 39. ἐγὼ δὲ λέγω ὑμῖν μὴ ἀντιστῆναι τῷ
 67. Sept.
 Hosea xi. πονηρῷ· ἀλλ' ὅστις σε ἴραπίσει ἐπὶ<sup>1</sup> τὴν δεξιάν σου<sup>κ</sup> σιαγόνα,<sup>2</sup> 4.
 k 1k. vi. 29. στρέψον αὐτῷ καὶ τὴν ἄλλην· 40. καὶ τῷ θελοντὶ σοι κριθῆναι καὶ (Hosea xi.
 4). τὸν χιτῶνά σου λαβεῖν, ἄφες αὐτῷ καὶ τὸ ἱμάτιον· 41. καὶ ὅστις σε

<sup>1</sup> For ραπίσει ἐπὶ ΞΒΞ have ραπίσει (pres.) eis. The ἐπὶ of the T. R. conforms to the parall. in Luke.

<sup>2</sup> For σου σιαγόνα BD have σιαγόνα σου. Tisch. (with Ξ) omits σου. W.H. bracket it.

"Though the judge must give redress when demanded, you are not bound to ask it, and if you take My advice you will not." In taking up this position Jesus was in harmony with the law itself, which contains dissuatives against vindictiveness, e.g., Lev. xix. 18: "Thou shalt not avenge nor bear any grudge against the children of thy people". The fault of the scribes did not lie in gainsaying this and introducing the jus talionis into private life, but in giving greater prominence to the legal than to the ethical element in the O. T. teaching, and in occupying themselves mainly with discussing the casuistry of compensation, e.g., the items to be compensated for in a case of wounding—the pain, the cure, the loss of time, the shame, etc., and the money value of the whole. Jesus turned the minds of His disciples away from these trivialities to the great neglected ethical commonplace.

Ver. 39. μὴ ἀντιστῆναι: resist not, either by endeavouring to prevent injury or by seeking redress for it.—τῷ πονηρῷ, not the devil, as Chrys. and Theophy. thought; either the evil doer or the evil doing or done. Opinion is much divided between the last two meanings. The sense is the same in either case. The A. V. takes πονηρῷ as neuter, the R. V. as masculine. The former is on the whole to be preferred. Instances of injury in various forms are next specified to illustrate the general precept. These injuries have been variously distinguished—to body, and property, and freedom, Tholuck; exemplum citatur injuriarum, privatae, forensis, curialis, Bengel; injuries connected with honour, material good, waste of time, Achelis, who points out that the relation of the three, Ex. in vv. 39-41, is that of an anti-climax, injuries to honour being felt most, and those involving waste of time least.—ὅστις . . . ἄλλην. In the following instances there is a climax: injury proceeds from bad to worse. It is natural to expect the same in this one. But when the right cheek has been struck, is it an aggravation to strike the left? Tholuck, Bleek, and Meyer suggest that the right cheek is only named first according to common custom, not supposed to be struck first. Achelis conceives the right cheek to be struck first with the back of the hand, then the left with a return stroke with the palm, harder than the first, and expressing in a higher measure intention to insult.—ραπίσει in class. Greek = to beat with rods; later, and in N. T., to smite with the palm of the hand; vide Lobeck, Phryn., p. 175.—Ver. 40, κριθῆναι = κρίνεσθαι in 1 Cor. vi. 1, to sue at law as in A. V. Grotius takes it as meaning extra-judicial strife, while admitting that the word is used in the judicial sense in the Sept., e.g., Job ix. 3, Eccles. vi. 10. Beza had previously taken the same view.—χιτῶνα, ἱμάτιον. The contention is supposed to be about the under garment or the tunic, and the advice is, rather than go to law, let him have not only it but also, καὶ, the more costly upper robe, mantle, toga. The poor man might have several tunics or shirts for change, but only one upper garment, used for clothing by day, for bed-cover by night, therefore humanely forbidden to be retained over night as a pledge, Ex. xxii. 26.

Ver. 41. ἀγγαρεύσει: compel thee to go one mile in A. V. and R. V. Hatch (Essays in Biblical Greek, p. 37) thinks it means compel thee to carry his baggage, a very probable rendering in view of the history of the word as he gives it. A Persian word, originally, introduced into the Greek, Latin, and Rabbinic languages, it denoted first to requisition men, beasts, or conveyances for the courier system described in Herod. viii. 98, Xen. Cyr. viii. 6, 17; next in post-classical use under the successors of the Persians in the East, and under the Roman Empire, it was applied to the forced transport of military baggage by the inhabitants of a country through which troops were passing. Hatch remarks: "The

<sup>1</sup> ἀγαρεύσει <sup>m</sup> μίλιον ἓν, <sup>n</sup> ὕπαγε μετ' αὐτοῦ δύο. 42. τῷ ° αἰτοῦντί | Ch. xvii.
σε δίδου <sup>1</sup>. καὶ τὸν θέλοντα ἀπὸ σοῦ δανείσασθαι <sup>2</sup> μὴ ἀποστραφῆς. <sup>m</sup> here only.
43. Ἐκούσατε ὅτι ἐρρέθη, Ἀγαπήσεις τὸν <sup>p</sup> πλησίον σου, καὶ μισήσεις <sup>n</sup> followed τὸν ἐχθρόν σου. 44. ἐγὼ δὲ λέγω ὑμῖν, ἀγαπάτε τοὺς ἐχθροὺς ὑμῶν, and gen.
εὐλογεῖτε τοὺς καταραμένους ὑμᾶς, καλῶς ποιεῖτε τοὺς μισοῦντας here and ὑμᾶς, <sup>3</sup> καὶ προσεύχεσθε ὑπὲρ τῶν ἐπηρεάζοντων ὑμᾶς, καὶ <sup>4</sup> διωκόντων <sup>5</sup> (ἐπί <sup>τίνα</sup>
o with acc. of person asked here, Ch. vi. 8. Lk. vi. 30. p Ch. xix. 19. Lk. x. 27

<sup>1</sup> δος in  $\aleph$ BD. διδου (T. R.) conforms to Luke (vi. 30).

<sup>2</sup> W.H. give δανείσασθαι after  $\aleph$ B\* $\Delta$ Δ.

<sup>3</sup> One of the more important various readings occurs here. From εὐλογεῖτε to  $\mu\alpha\varsigma$  is omitted in  $\aleph$ B, some ancient versions (including Syr. Sin.), and some cursives. The omitted part may be regarded as an importation in a harmonistic spirit from Lk. vi. 27. It is left out by most modern editors.

<sup>4</sup> τῶν ἐπηρεάζοντων ὑμᾶς καὶ also wanting in  $\aleph$ B, and also imported from Lk. (vi. 28).

extent to which this system prevailed is seen in the elaborate provisions of the later Roman law: angariae came to be one of those modes of taxing property which, under the vicious system of the empire, ruined both individuals and communities". An instance in N. T. of the use of the word in this later sense occurs in Mt. xvii. 32, Mk. xv. 21, in reference to Simon compelled to carry Christ's cross. We may conceive the compulsion in the present case to proceed from a military man.—μίλιον, a Roman mile, about 1600 yards, a late word.—δύο, in point of time, the additional mile = two, there and back, with proportional fatigue, a decided climax of hardship. But it is not merely a question of time, as Achelis thinks. The sense of oppression is involved, subjection to arbitrary military power. Christ's counsel is: do not submit to the inevitable in a slavish, sullen spirit, harbouring thoughts of revolt. Do the service cheerfully, and more than you are asked. The counsel is far-reaching, covering the case of the Jewish people subject to the Roman yoke, and of slaves serving hard masters. The three cases of non-resistance are not meant to foster an abject spirit. They point out the higher way to victory. He that magnanimously bears overcomes.

Ver. 42. This counsel does not seem to belong to the same category as the preceding three. One does not think of begging or borrowing as an injury, but at most as a nuisance. Some have doubted the genuineness of the logion as a part of the Sermon. But it occurs in Luke's redaction (vi. 30), transformed indeed so as to make it a case of the sturdy beggar who helps himself to what he does not get for the asking. Were there idle, lawless tramps in Palestine in our Lord's time, and would He counsel such treatment of them? If so, it is the extreme instance of not resisting evil.—μὴ ἀποστραφῆς with τὸν θέλοντα in accusative. One would expect the genitive with the middle, the active taking an accusative with genitive, e.g., 2 Tim. iv. 4, τῆν ἀκοὴν ἀπὸ τῆς ἀληθείας. But the transitive sense is intelligible. In turning myself away from another, I turn him away from me. Vide Heb. xii. 25, 2 Tim. i. 15.

Vv. 43-48. Sixth and final illustration: from the Law of Love. To an old partial form of the law Jesus opposes a new universal one.—Ver. 43. ἠκούσατε ὅτι ἐρρέθη: said where, by whom, and about whom? The sentiment Jesus supposes His hearers to have heard is not found in so many words in the O. T. The first part, "Thou shalt love thy neighbour," occurs in Lev. xix. 18. The contrary of the second part is found in Ex. xxiii. 4, where humanity towards the straying or overburdened beast of an enemy is enjoined. It is to be hoped that even the scribes did not in cold blood sin against the spirit of this precept by teaching men to love their private friends and hate their private enemies. Does πλησίον then mean an Israelite, and ἐχθρόν a Gentile, and was the fault of the traditional law of love that it confined obligation within national limits? The context in Lev. xix. 18 gives πλ. that sense: "Thou shalt not bear any grudge against the children of thy people". On the other hand, the tendency of Israel's q transitive—ὁμᾶς· 45. ὅπως γένησθε υἱοὶ τοῦ πατρὸς ὑμῶν τοῦ ἐν οὐρανοῖς, ὅτι ly here

 only in N. τὸν ἥλιον αὐτοῦ ἠνατέλλει ἐπὶ πονηροὺς καὶ ἀγαθοὺς, καὶ ἔβρέχει T.; vide
 T.; vide
 Gen. iii. ἐπὶ δικαίους καὶ ἀδίκους. 46. ἐὰν γὰρ ἀγαπήσητε τοὺς ἀγαπῶντας 18.
 1 Lk. vii. 38, ὁμᾶς, τίνα μισθὸν ἔχετε; οὐχὶ καὶ οἱ τελῶναι τὸ αὐτὸ<sup>1</sup> ποιοῦσι;
 44; xvii.
 29. Jas. v. 17.

<sup>1</sup> Some editors, following DZ, prefer οὕτως to το αὐτο. W.H., while retaining το αὐτο, which has the support of HBL, put οὕτως (DZ) in the margin.

election, and of certain texts (vide Ex. xxiii., Deut. vii.), was to foster aversion to the outside nations, and from Ezra onwards the spirit of Judaism was one of increasing hostility towards the goyim—vide Esther. The saying quoted by Jesus, if not an exact report of Rabbinical teaching, did no injustice to its general attitude. And the average Jew in this respect followed the guidance of his teachers, loving his own countrymen, regarding with racial and religious aversion those beyond the pale.—Ver. 44. ἐχθροὺς may be taken in all senses: national, private, religious. Jesus absolutely negatives hatred as inhuman. But the sequel shows that He has in view the enemies whom it is most difficult to love—διωκόντων: those who persecute on account of religion. The clauses imported into the T. R. from Luke have a more general reference to enmities arising from any cause, although they also receive a very emphatic meaning when the cause of alienation is religious differences. There are no hatreds so bitter and ruthless as those originating therein. How hard to love the persecutor who thinks he does God service by heaping upon you all manner of indignities. But the man who can rejoice in persecution (ver. 12) can love and pray for the persecutor. The cleavage between Christians and unbelievers took the place of that between the chosen race and the Gentiles, and tempted to the same sin.

Vv. 45-47. Characteristically lofty inducements to obey the new law; likeness to God (ver. 45); moral distinction among men (vv. 46, 47).—υἱοὶ τοῦ πατρὸς ὑμῶν: in order that ye may be indeed sons of God: noblesse oblige; God's sons must be Godlike. "Father" again. The new name for God occurs sixteen times in the Sermon on the Mount; to familiarise by repetition, and define by discriminating use.—ὅτι, not = ὅς, but meaning "because": for so your Father acts, and not otherwise can ye be His sons.—ἀν. ἔλλει, sometimes intransitive, as in Mt. iv. 16, Lk. xii. 54, here transitive, also in Sept., Gen. iii. 18, etc., and in some Greek authors (Pindar. Isth. vi., 110, e.g.) to cause to rise. The use of καίειν (ver. 15) and ἀνατέλλειν in an active sense is a revival of an old poetic use in later Greek (exx. of the former in Elsner).—βρέχει = pluit (Vulg.), said of God, as in the expression ὑντος τοῦ Διὸς (Kypke, Observ. Sac.). The use of this word also in this sense is a revival of old poetic usage.—πονηροὺς, ἀγαθοὺς; δικαίους, ἀδίκους, not mere repetition. There is a difference between ἀγαθός and δίκαιος similar to that between generous and just. πονηροὺς may be rendered niggardly—vide on vi. 23. The sentiment thus becomes: "God makes His sun rise on niggardly and generous alike, and His rain fall on just and unjust". A similar thought in Seneca, De benef. iv. 26: "Si deos imitatis, da et ingratis beneficia, nam et sceleratis sol oritur, et piratis patent maria". The power of the fact stated to influence as a motive is wholly destroyed by a pantheistic conception of God as indifferent to moral distinctions, or a deistic idea of Him as transcendent, too far above the world, in heaven, as it were, to be able to take note of such differences. The divine impartiality is due to magnanimity, not to indifference or ignorance. Another important reflection is that in this word of Jesus we find distinct recognition of the fact that in human life there is a large sphere (sun and rain, how much these cover!) in which men are treated by Providence irrespectively of character; by no means a matter of course in a Jewish teacher, the tendency being to insist on exact correspondence between lot and character under a purely retributive conception of God's relation to man.—Ver. 46. μισθόν: here, and three times in next chapter; one of several words used in this connection of thought—περισσὸν (ver. 47), τέλειοι (ver. 48)—having a legal sound, and capable of being misunderstood. The scribes and Rabbis had much to say about merit

47. καὶ ἐὰν ἠσπάσησθε τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς<sup>1</sup> ὑμῶν μόνον, τί περισσὸν ποιεῖτε; οὐχὶ καὶ οἱ τελῶναι οὕτω<sup>2</sup> ποιοῦσιν; 48. ἔσεσθε οὖν ὑμεῖς<sup>3</sup> τέλειοι, ὡσπερ<sup>3</sup> ὁ πατὴρ ὑμῶν ὁ ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς<sup>4</sup> τέλειός ἐστι.

Ch. x. 12.
Lk. x. 4.
Cf. Heb.
xi. 13 (saluting the promises).

t Ch. xix. 21. James i. 4; iii. 2. Heb. v. 14.

<sup>1</sup> Many copies have φίλους, but ἀδελφοὺς is the reading of  $\aleph$ BDZ.

<sup>2</sup>  $\aleph$ BDZ have ἔθνηκοι instead of τελῶναι and το αὐτο for οὕτω. See below.

<sup>3</sup> ὡς in  $\aleph$ BLZ $\Sigma$ . ὡσπερ possibly a literary refinement of the scribes.

<sup>4</sup> ο οὐρανίος instead of ο εν τ. ουρανοῖς in  $\aleph$ BD<sup>b</sup>LZ $\Sigma$ .

and reward—vide Weber, Die Lehren des Talmud, c. xix. § 59, on the idea of Sechûth (merit). Totally opposed to Rabbinism, Jesus did not lose His balance, or allow Himself to be driven into extremes, after the usual manner of controversialists (Protestants and Catholics, e.g.). He speaks of μισθός without scruple (cf. on Lk. vi. 32).—τελῶναι (τέλος, tax, ὠνεῖσθαι), first mention of a class often referred to in the Gospels, unpopular beyond their deserts; therefore, like women unjustly treated by husbands, befriended by Jesus; the humble agents of the great farmers of taxes, disliked as representing a foreign yoke, and on account of too frequent acts of injustice, yet human and kindly within their own class, loving those that loved them. Jesus took advantage of this characteristic to win their love by friendly acts.—Ver. 47. ἀσπάσησθε, "Salute," a very slight display of love from our Western point of view, a mere civility; more significant in the East; symbolic here of friendly relations, hence Tholuck, Bleek and others interpret, "to act in a friendly manner," which, as Meyer remarks, is, if not the significatio, at least the adsignificatio.—περισσόν, used adverbially, literally "that which is over and above"; A. V., "more"; here, tropically=distinguished, unusually good = "quid magnum, eximium, insigne" (Pricaeus), so in Rom. iii. 1. In Plutarch, Romulus, xi., of one who excelled in casting horoscopes. Christ would awaken in disciples the ambition to excel. He does not wish them to be moral mediocrities, men of average morality, but to be morally superior, uncommon. This seems to come perilously near to the spirit of Pharisaism (cf. Gal. i. 14, προέκοπτον), but only seems. Christ commends being superior, not thinking oneself superior, the Pharisaic characteristic. Justin, Apol. i. 15, mixes vv. 46 and 47, and for περισσόν puts καινόν, and for τελῶναι, or ἔθνηκοι, πόρνοι: "If ye love those who love you what new thing do ye? for even fornicators do this."—ἔθνηκοί, here as elsewhere in the Gospels associated with τελῶναι (Mt. xviii. 17). A good many of the publicans would be Gentiles. For a Jew it was a virtue to despise and shun both classes. Surely disciples will not be content to be on a moral level with them! Note that Jesus sees some good even in despised classes, social outcasts.

Ver. 48. Concluding exhortation. οὖν, from an ancient form of the participle of the verb εἶναι (Klotz, Devar.) = "things being so;" either a collective inference from all that goes before (vv. 21-47) or as a reflection on the immediately preceding argument. Both come to the same thing. Godlike love is commended in vv. 44-47, but the gist of all the six illustrations of Christ's way of thinking is: Love the fulfilling of the law; obviously, except in the case of oaths, where it is truth that is enjoined. But truth has its source in love; Eph. iv. 15: ἀληθεύοντες ἐν ἀγάπῃ; "trusting it in love".—ἔσεσθε, future, "ye shall be" = BE.—ὑμεῖς, ye, emphatic, in contrast with τελ. and ἔθν., who are content with moral commonplace and conventional standards.—Τέλειοι; in general, men who have reached the end, touched the ideal, that at least their purpose, not satisfied with anything short of it. The τέλειοι are not men with a conceit of perfection, but aspirants—men who seek to attain, like Paul: διώκω εἰ καὶ καταλάβω, Phil. iii. 12, and like him, single-minded, their motto: ἐν δέ. Single-mindedness is a marked characteristic of all genuine citizens of the kingdom (Mt. vi. 33), and what the Bible means by perfection. All men who attain have one great ruling aim. That aim for the disciple, as here set forth, is Godlikeness—ὡς ὁ πατὴρ . . . τέλειός ἐστιν. God is what His sons aspire to be; He never sinks below the ideal: impartial, benignant, gracious love, even to the unworthy; for a followed by *with inf here, by *with sub. Lk xxi. 14. Ch xviii s. Mk xvi. 11. c same phrase in Sir. vii. 10. Tobit iv. 7. Acts x. 2; xxiv. 17. d 1 Cor. xv. 32 and several times in Revel. e Lk xiv. 21. Acts ix. 11; xii. 10.

<sup>1</sup> δε after προσεχετε in N.L.Z., inserted by Tisch. and by W.H. within brackets. BD have no δε. It might have fallen out by similar ending (τε); on the other hand, it would stand here appropriately as a connecting particle of transition.

<sup>2</sup> NBD have δικαιοσύνην; doubtless the true reading, as a general caution against counterfeit righteousness was to be looked for first; then particular examples: alms, prayer, fasting.

<sup>3</sup> Tisch., on the authority of ND 1, 33, omits τοις.

that, not all conceivable attributes, is what is in view. ὡς, not in degree, that were a discouraging demand, but in kind. The kind very necessary to be emphasised in view of current ideas and practice, in which holiness was dissociated from love. The law "Be holy for I am holy" (Lev. xi. 44) was taken negatively and worked out in separation from the reputedly sinful. Jesus gave it positive contents, and worked it out in gracious love.

CHAPTER VI. THE SERMON CONTINUED. From Scribe law, the main theme of vv. 21-48, the Teacher passes to speak of Pharisaic practice. Ver. 1 describes the general character of Pharisaic righteousness. Then follow three special examples: alms, vv. 2-4; prayer, vv. 5-6; fasting, vv. 16-18. The transition from the one theme to the other was almost inevitable, and we may be sure that what follows formed part of the instruction on the hill.

Ver. 1. προσεχετε (τὸν νοῦν understood), to attend to; here, with μὴ following, take heed, be on your guard against.—δικαιοσύνην, not ἐλεημοσύνην (I. R.), is the reading demanded in a general introductory statement. Alms formed a very prominent part of Pharisaic righteousness, and was in Rabbinical dialect called righteousness, ΠΙΠΤΥΣ (vide Weber, p. 273), but it was not the whole, and it is a name for the whole category that is wanted in ver. 1. If Jesus spoke in Aramaic He might, as Lightfoot (Hor. Hebr.) suggests, use the word tsedakah both in the first and in the following three verses; in the first in the general sense, in the other places in the special sense of alms.—ἐμπροσθεν τ. ἀνθρώπων. In chap. v. 16 Christ commands disciples to let their light shine before men. Here He seems to enjoin the contrary. The contradiction is only apparent. The two places may be combined in a general rule thus: Show when tempted to hide, hide when tempted to show. The Pharisees were exposed, and yielded, to the latter temptation. They did their righteousness, πρὸς τὸ θεαθῆναι, to be seen. Their virtue was theatrical, and that meant doing only things which in matter and mode were commonly admired or believed by the doers to be. This spirit of ostentation Christ here and elsewhere represents as the leading feature of Pharisaism.—εἰ δὲ μήγε, a combination of four particles frequently occurring in the Gospels, meaning: if at least ye do not attend to this rule, then, etc. γέ is a very expressive particle, derived by Klotz, Devar. ii. 272, from ΓΕΩ, i.e., ΕΑΩ, or from ἄγε, and explained as meant to render the hearer attentive. Bäumlein, dissenting from Klotz's derivation, agrees substantially with his view of its meaning as isolating a thought from all else and placing it alone in the light (Untersuchungen über Griechische Partikeln, p. 54) = "Mark my words, for if you do not as I advise then," etc.—μισθὸν οὐκ ἔχετε: on μισθὸν, vide v. 46. The meaning is that theatrical virtue does not count in the Kingdom of God. Right motive is essential there. There may be a reward, there must be, else theatrical religion would not be so common; but it is not παρὰ τῷ πατρὶ.

μισθὸν αὐτῶν. 3. σοῦ δὲ ποιούντος ἐλεημοσύνην, μὴ γνώτω ἡ ἀριστερά σου τί ποιεῖ ἡ δεξιὰ σου, 4. ὅπως ἢ σου ἢ ἐλεημοσύνη<sup>1</sup> ἐν τῷ κρυπτῷ· καὶ ὁ πατήρ σου ὁ βλέπων ἐν τῷ κρυπτῷ, αὐτὸς<sup>2</sup> f Rom. ii. 29 (phrase).

<sup>1</sup> Tisch. has ἡ σου ἐλεημοσύνη η, following B<sup>3</sup>D (η σ. ελε. η). Most modern editors as in text.

<sup>2</sup> B<sup>3</sup>BL omit αὐτος, which is found in D.

Vv. 2-4. Almsgiving. Ver 2. ἐλεημοσύνην, mercy in general, but specifically alms, as a common mode of showing mercy. Compare our word charity.—σαλατίσῃς: to be understood metaphorically, as there is no evidence of the literal practice. Furrer gives this from Consul Wetstein to illustrate the word. When a man (in Damascus) wants to do a good act which may bring a blessing by way of divine recompense on his own family, e.g., healing to a sick child, he goes to a water-carrier with a good voice, gives him a piece of money, and says "Sebil," i.e., give the thirsty a fresh drink of water. The water-carrier fills his skin, takes his stand in the market, and sings in varied tones: "O thirsty, come to the drink-offering," the giver standing by, to whom the carrier says, as the thirsty drink, "God forgive thy sins, O giver of the drink" (Zschit. für M. und R., 1890. Vide also his Wanderungen d. d. H. L., p. 437).—ὑποκριταί, stage-players in classics, used in N. T. in a moral and sinister sense, and for the Christian mind heavily burdened with evil connotation—hypocrites! What a deepening of the moral sense is implied in the new meaning! The abhorrence of acting for effect in religion is due to Christ's teaching. It has not yet quite banished the thing. There are religious actors still, and they draw good houses.—συναγωγαῖς: where alms were collected, and apparently also distributed.—ῥύμαις, streets, in eastern cities narrow lanes, a late meaning; in earlier Greek = impetus—onset. Vide Rutherford's New Phryn., 488. Cf. πλατειῶν, ver. 5. πλατεῖα, supp. ὁδός = a broad street.—δοξασθῶσιν: in chap. v. 16 God is conceived as recipient of the glory; here the almsgiver, giving for that purpose.—ἀμην: introducing a solemn statement, and a very serious one for the parties concerned.—ἅτεχουσι, they have in full; they will get no more, nothing from God: so in Lk. vi. 24, Phil. iv. 18 (vide on Mk. xiv. 41). The hypocrite partly does not believe this, partly does not care, so long as he gets the applause of his public.—Ver. 3. μὴ γνώτω: in proverbial form a counsel to give with simplicity. Let not even thy left hand, if possible even thyself, know, still less other men; give without self-consciousness or self-complacency, the root of ostentation.—ἐν τῷ κρυπτῷ: known to the recipient, of course, but to no other, so far as you are concerned, hardly even to yourself. "Pii lucent, et tamen latent," Beng.—ὁ βλέπων ἐ. τ. κ., who seeth in the dark. "Acquainted with all my ways." Ps. cxxxix., a comfort to the sincerely good, not to the counterfeiters.—ἀποδώσει σοι: a certainty, and not merely of the future. The reward is present; not in the form of self-complacency, but in the form of spiritual health, like natural buoyancy, when all physical functions work well. A right-minded man is happy without reflecting why; it is the joy of living in summer sunshine and bracing mountain air. The ἐν τῷ φανερῷ here and in vv. 6 and 18, a gloss by some superficial copyist, ignores the inward present reward, and appeals in a new form to the spirit of ostentation.

Vv. 5-6. Prayer. ὡς οἱ ὑποκριταί, as the actors. We shrink from the harshness of the term "hypocrite". Jesus is in the act of creating the new meaning by the use of an old word in a new connection.—φιλοῦσι stands in place of an adverb. They love to, are wont, do it with pleasure. This construction is common in classics, even in reference to inanimate objects, but here only and in Mt. xxiii. 6-7 in N. T.—ἱστῶτες, ordinary attitude in prayer. στήναι and καθῆσθαι seem to be used sometimes without emphasis to denote simply presence in a place (so Pricaeus).—συναγωγαῖς, γωνίαις τ. πλατ.: usual places of prayer, especially for the "actors," where men do congregate, in the synagogue for worship, at the corners of the broad streets for talk or business; plenty of observers in both cases. Prayer had been reduced to system among the Jews. Methodising, with stated hours and forms, began after

ε Ch. xvi. 27. Ἐποδώσει σοι ἐν τῷ φανερῷ.<sup>1</sup> 5. Καὶ ὅταν προσεύχη, οὐκ ἔση<sup>2</sup>
 Ch. xiii. ὡσπερ<sup>3</sup> οἱ ὑποκριταί, ὅτι<sup>4</sup> φιλοῦσιν ἐν ταῖς συναγωγαῖς καὶ ἐν ταῖς
 6. Lk. xx. γωνίαις τῶν πλατειῶν ἐστῶτες προσεύχεσθαι, ὅπως ἂν<sup>5</sup> φανῶσι τοῖς
 46. ἀνθρώποις· ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι<sup>6</sup> ἀπέχουσι τὸν μισθὸν αὐτῶν. 6.
 1 Ch. xxiv. σὺ δέ, ὅταν προσεύχη, εἰσελθε εἰς τὸ<sup>7</sup> ταμειῶν<sup>8</sup> σου, καὶ κλείσας
 26. Lk. τὴν θύραν σου, πρόσευξαι τῷ πατρὶ σου τῷ ἐν τῷ κρυπτῷ· καὶ ὁ
 xii. 3, 24. Sir. xxix. 12 al. in Sept. πατὴρ σου ὁ βλέπων ἐν τῷ κρυπτῷ ἀποδώσει σοι ἐν τῷ φανερῷ.<sup>7</sup>

<sup>1</sup> NBD omit. This time L goes with the MSS. which have this reading. Doubtless a gloss, vide below.

<sup>2</sup> For προσευχη οὐκ ἔση NB have προσευχησθε οὐκ εἰσθε, adopted by W.H. and other editors.

<sup>3</sup> ως in NBDZ.

<sup>4</sup> αν omitted in NBDL.

<sup>5</sup> οτι omitted in NBDZ.

<sup>6</sup> ταμειον in W.H. So in NBDL (ταμιον, ND).

<sup>7</sup> NBDZ omit εν τω φανερω, followed by most modern editors.

Ezra, and grew in the Judaistic period; traces of it even in the later books of O. T., e.g., Dan. vi. 10, 11 (vide Schultz, Alt. Theol.). The hour of prayer might overtake a man anywhere. The "actors" might, as De Wette suggests, be glad to be overtaken, or even arrange for it, in some well-frequented place.—ὅπως φανῶσιν τ. α. in order that they may appear to men, and have it remarked: how devout! Ver. 6: true prayer in contrast to the theatrical type.—σὺ δέ, thou, my disciple, in opposition to the "actors".—ὅταν, when the spirit moves, not when the customary hour comes, freedom from rule in prayer, as in fasting (Mt. ix. 14), is taken for granted.—τὸ ταμειῶν, late form for ταμειῶν (Lobeck, Phryn., 493), first a store-chamber, then any place of privacy, a closet (Mt. xxiv. 26). Note the σου after ταμ. and θύραν and πατρί, all emphasising isolation, thy closet, thy door, thy Father.—κλείσας, carefully shutting thy door, the door of thine own retreat, to exclude all but thy Father, with as much secrecy as if you were about a guilty act. What delicacy of feeling, as well as sincerity, is implied in all this; greatly to be respected, often sinned against.—τῷ ἐν τῷ κρυπτῷ, He who is in the secret place; perhaps with allusion to God's presence in the dark holy of holies (Achelis). He is there in the place from which all fellow-men are excluded. Is social prayer negatived by this directory? No, but it is implied that social prayer will be a reality only in proportion as it proceeds from a gathering of men accustomed to private prayer.

Vv. 7-15. Further instruction in prayer. Weiss (Mt.-Evan.) regards this passage as an interpolation, having no proper place in an anti-Pharisaic discourse. Both the opinion and its ground are doubtful. As regards the latter, it is true that it is Gentile practice in prayer that is formally criticised, but it does not follow that the Pharisees were not open to the same censure. They might make long prayers, not in ignorance, but in ostentation (Luttheroth), as a display of devotional talent or zeal. But apart from the question of reference to the Pharisees, it is likely that prayer under various aspects formed one of the subjects of instruction in the course of teaching on the hill whereof these chapters are a digest.

Ver. 7. βατταλογήηται: α ὑπαξ λεγ. in N. T., rarely used anywhere, and of doubtful derivation. Some (Erasmus, e.g.) have thought it was formed from Battus, the stammerer mentioned by Herod. (iv. 155), or from a feeble poet of the name who made long hymns full of repetitions (Suidas, Lexicon), but most now incline to the view that it is onomatopoeic. Hesychius (Lex.) takes this view of the kindred word βατταρίζειν (ἐμοὶ μὲν δοκεῖ κατὰ μίμησιν τῆς φωνῆς πεποιησθαι). It points to the repetition without end of the same forms of words as a stammerer involuntarily repeats the same syllable, like the Baal worshippers

7. Προσευχόμενοι δὲ μὴ βαττολογήσητε,<sup>1</sup> ὡσπερ οἱ Ἰθνικοί.<sup>2</sup> Ch. v. 47
 δοκοῦσι γὰρ ὅτι ἐν τῇ πολυλογίᾳ αὐτῶν <sup>k</sup> εἰσακουσθήσονται. 8. μὴ (in critical οὖν <sup>l</sup> ὁμοιωθήτε αὐτοῖς· οἶδε γὰρ ὁ πατήρ <sup>3</sup> ὑμῶν ὧν <sup>m</sup> χρεῖαν ἔχετε, k xviii. 17.
 πρὸ τοῦ ὑμᾶς αἰτῆσαι αὐτόν. 9. οὕτως οὖν προσεύχεσθε ὑμεῖς. Lk. i. 13.
 Acts x. 37.
 1 Cor. xiv.
 21. Heb.
 v. 7. l Ch. vii. 24, 26; xiii. 24. m Ch. ix. 12; xxi. 3.

<sup>1</sup> ΞB have βαττα., which Tisch. and W.H. follow. L as in text. D has βλαττολ.

<sup>2</sup> B and Syr. Cur. have υποκριται.

<sup>3</sup> ΞB Sah. version have ο θεος before ο πατηρ (W.H. within brackets).

shouting from morning till noon, "O Baal, hear us" (1 Kings xviii. 26, cf. Acts xix. 34, "Great is Diana of the Ephesians"). This repetition is characteristic of Pagan prayer, and when it recurs in the Church, as in saying many Aves and Paternosters, it is Paganism redivivus.—ἰθνικοί, the second of three references to Pagans (v. 47, vi. 32) in the Sermon on the Mount, not to be wondered at. The Pagan world was near at hand for a Jew belonging to Galilee with its mixed population. Pagan customs would be familiar to Galileans, and it was natural that Jesus should use them as well as the theory and practice of scribes and Pharisees, to define by contrast true piety.—πολυλογία, exexegetical of βατταλογ. The Pagans thought that by endless repetitions and many words they would inform their gods as to their needs and weary them ("fatigare deos") into granting their requests. Ver. 8, οὖν, infers that disciples must not imitate the practice described, because it is Pagan, and because it is absurd. Repetition is, moreover, wholly uncalled for.—οἶδεν γὰρ: the God whom Jesus proclaims—"your Father"—knows beforehand your needs. Why, then, pray at all? Because we cannot receive unless we desire, and if we desire, we will pray; also because things worth getting are worth asking. Only pray always as to a Being well informed and willing, in few words and in faith. With such thoughts in mind, Jesus proceeds to give a sample of suitable prayer.

Vv. 9-13. The Lord's Prayer. Again, in Lk. xi. 1-4—vide notes there. Here I remark only that Luke's form, true reading, is shorter than Matthew's. On this ground Kamphausen (Das Gebet des Herrn) argues for its originality. But surely Matthew's form is short and elementary enough to satisfy all reasonable requirements! The question as to the original form cannot be settled on such grounds. The prayer, as here given, is, indeed, a model of simplicity. Besides the question as to the original form, there is another as to the originality of the matter. Wetstein says, "tota haec oratio ex formulis Hebraeorum concinnata est". De Wette, after quoting these words, asserts that, after all the Rabbinical scholars have done their utmost to adduce parallels from Jewish sources, the Lord's Prayer is by no means shown to be a Cento, and that it contains echoes only of well-known O. T. and Messianic ideas and expressions, and this only in the first two petitions. This may be the actual fact, but there is no need for any zeal in defence of the position. I should be very sorry to think that the model prayer was absolutely original. It would be a melancholy account of the chosen people if, after thousands of years of special training, they did not yet know what to pray for. Jesus made a new departure by inaugurating (1) freedom in prayer; (2) trustfulness of spirit; (3) simplicity in manner. The mere making of a new prayer, if only by apt conjunction of a few choice phrases gathered from Scripture or from Jewish forms, was an assertion of liberty. And, of course, the liberty obtains in reference to the new form as well as to the old. We may use the Paternoster, but we are not bound to use it. It is not in turn to become a fetish. Reformers do not arise to break old fetters only in order to forge new ones.

Ver. 9. οὕτως, thus, not after the ethnic manner.—προσεύχεσθε: present, pray so habitually.—ὑμεῖς: as opposed to the Pagans, as men (i.e.) who believe in an intelligent, willing God, your Father. The prayer which follows consists of six petitions which have often been elaborately explained, with learned discussions on disputed points, leaving the reader with the feeling that the new form is anything but simple, and wondering how it ever came into universal use. Gospel has been turned into law, spirit into n 1 Pet. iii Πάτερ ἡμῶν ὁ ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς, ἁγιασθήτω τὸ ὄνομά σου. 10.

 15. (1s.
 xxix. 23.) ἐλθέτω ἡ βασιλεία σου. ὁ γεννηθῆτω τὸ θέλημά σου, ὡς ἐν οὐρανῷ, ο Ch. xxvi.
 42. Acts xxi. 14 (same phrase). p Acts vii. 51 (ὡς καὶ).

letter, poetry into prose. We had better let this prayer alone if we cannot catch its lyric tone.—Πάτερ. In Luke's form this name stands impressively alone, but the words associated with it in Matthew's version of the address are every way suitable. Name and epithet together—Father, in heaven—express reverential trust.—ἁγιασθήτω τ. ο. σου: first petition—sanctified, hallowed be Thy name. Fritzsche holds that σου in this and the next two petitions is emphatic, σοῦ not σου enclitic. The suggestion gives a good direction for the expositor—may God the Father-God of Jesus become the one object of worship all the world over. A very natural turn of thought in view of the previous reference to the Pagans. Pagan prayer corresponded to the nature of Pagan deities—indifferent, capricious, unrighteous, unloving; much speaking, iteration, dunning was needed to gain their ear. How blessed if the whole pantheon could be swept away or fall into contempt, and the one worshipful Divinity be, in fact, worshipped, ὡς ἐν οὐρανῷ καὶ ἐπὶ γῆς; for this clause appended to the third petition may be conceived as common to all the first three. The One Name in heaven the One Name on earth, and revered on earth as in heaven. Universalism is latent in this opening petition. We cannot imagine Jesus as meaning merely that the national God of Israel may be duly honoured within the bounds of His own people.

Ver. 10. Ἐλθέτω ἡ βασιλεία σου: second petition. The prayer of all Jews. Even the Rabbis said, that is no prayer in which no mention of the kingdom is made. All depends on how the kingdom is conceived, on what we want to come. The kingdom is as the King. It is the kingdom of the universal, benignant Father who knows the wants of His children and cares for their interests, lower and higher, that Jesus desires to come. It will come with the spread of the worship of the One true Divine Name; the paternal God ruling in grace over believing, grateful men. Thus viewed, God's kingdom comes, is not always here, as in the reign of natural law or in the moral order of the world.—γεννηθῆτω τ. θ. σ.: third petition. Kamphausen, bent on maintaining the superior originality of Luke's form in which this petition is wanting, regards it as a mere pendant to the second, unfolding its meaning. And it is true in a sense that any one of the three first petitions implies the rest. Yet the third has its distinct place. The kingdom, as Jesus preached it, was a kingdom of grace. The second petition, therefore, is a prayer that God's gracious will may be done. The third, on the other hand, is a prayer that God's commanding will may be done; that the right as against the wrong may everywhere prevail.—ὡς ἐν οὐρ. καὶ ἐπὶ γῆς. This addendum, not without application to all three petitions, is specially applicable to this one. Translated into modern dialect, it means that the divine will may be perfectly, ideally done on this earth: as in heaven, so also, etc. The reference is probably to the angels, described in Ps. ciii., as doing God's commandments. In the O. T. the angels are the agents of God's will in nature as well as in Providence. The defining clause might, therefore, be taken as meaning: may God's will be done in the moral sphere as in the natural; exactly, always, everywhere.

The foregoing petitions are regarded by Grotius, and after him Achelis, as ria desideria, εὐχαί, rather than petitions proper—αἰτήματα, like the following three. The distinction is not gratuitous, but it is an exegetical refinement which may be disregarded. More important is it to note that the first group refers to the great public interests of God and His kingdom, placed first here as in vi. 33, the second to personal needs. There is a corresponding difference in the mode of expression, the verbs being in the third person in Group I., objective, impersonal; in the second in Group II., subjective, personal.

Ver. 11. Fourth petition. τὸν ἄρτον ἡμῶν: whatever the adjective qualifying ἄρτον may mean, it may be taken for granted that it is ordinary bread, food for the body, that is intended. All spiritualising mystical meanings of ἐπιούσιον are to be discarded. This is the one puzzling word in the prayer. It is a ἄπαξ λεγ., not only in O. and N. T., but in Greek literature, as known not only to us, but even to Origen, who (De Oratione, cap. xxvii.) states that it

καὶ ἐπὶ τῆς<sup>1</sup> γῆς· 11. τὸν ἄρτον ἡμῶν τὸν ἑπιούσιον δὸς ἡμῖν<sup>2</sup> ἡμερῶν<sup>3</sup> here and σήμερον· 12. καὶ ἄφες ἡμῖν τὰ ὀφειλήματα ἡμῶν, ὡς καὶ ἡμεῖς<sup>4</sup> (not found in Greek literature). r Rom. iv. 4.

<sup>1</sup> ἌΒΖΔ and some cursives omit τῆς. So most modern editors.

is not found in any of the Greeks, or used by private individuals, and that it seems to be a coinage (ἔοικε πεπλάσθαι) of the evangelists. It is certainly not likely to have proceeded from our Lord. This one word suffices to prove that, if not always, at least in uttering this prayer, Jesus spoke in Aramaean. He would not in such a connection use an obscure word, unfamiliar, and of doubtful meaning. The problem is to account for the incoming of such a word into the Greek version of His doubtless simple, artless, and well-understood saying. The learned are divided as to the derivation of the word, having of course nothing but conjecture to go on. Some derive it from ἐπὶ and οὐσία, or the participle of εἶναι; others from ἐπιέναι, or ἡ ἐπιούσα = the approaching day (ἡμέρα understood). In the one case we get a qualitative sense—bread for subsistence, bread needed and sufficient (τὰ δέοντα καὶ αὐτάρκη. Prov. xxx. 8, Sept.); in the other, a temporal—bread of the coming day, panem quotidianum (Vulg., Lk., xi. 3), "daily bread". Either party argues against the other on grammatical grounds, e.g., that derived from οὐσία the word should be ἐπουσίος, and that derived from ἐπιούσα it should be ἐπιουσαῖος. In either case the disputants are ready with their answer. Another source of argument is suitability of the sense. Opponents of the temporal sense say that to pray for to-morrow's bread sins against the counsel, "Take no thought for the morrow," and that to pray, "Give us to-day our bread of to-morrow," is absurd (ineptius, Suicer, Thesaurus, s.v. ἐπιούσιος). On the other side it is said: Granting that the sense "sufficient" can be got from ἐπὶ, οὐσία, and granting its appropriateness, how comes it that a simpler, better-known word was not chosen to represent so plain a meaning? Early tradition should have an important bearing on the question. Lightfoot, in the appendix on the words ἐπιούσιος and περιούσιος, in his work "On a fresh Revision of the N. T.," summarises the evidence to this effect: Most of the Greeks follow Origen, who favoured derivation from οὐσία. But Aramaic

Christians put for ἐπιούσιος Mahar = crastinum. (Jerome comm. in Mt.) The Curetonian Syriac has words meaning, "our bread continual of the day give us". The Egyptian versions have similar readings. The old Latin version has quotidianum, retained by Jerome in revision of L. V. in Lk. xi. 2, while supersubstantialem is given in Mt. vi. 11. The testimony of these early versions is important in reference to the primitive sense attached to the word. Still the question remains: How account for the coinage of such a word in Greek-speaking circles, and for the tautology: give us to-day (σήμερον, Mt.) or daily (τὸ καθ' ἡμέραν, Luke), the bread of to-morrow? In his valuable study on "The Lord's Prayer in the early Church" (Texts and Studies, 1891), Principal Chase has made an important contribution to the solution of this difficulty by the suggestion that the coinage was due to liturgical exigencies in connection with the use of the prayer in the evening. Assuming that the original petition was to the effect: "to us give, of the day, our bread," and that the Greek equivalent for the day was ἡ ἐπιούσα, the adjective ἐπιούσιος was coined to make the prayer suitable at all hours. In the morning it would mean the bread of the day now begun, in the evening the bread of to-morrow. But devotional conservatism, while adopting the new word as convenient, would cling to the original "of the day"; hence σήμερον in Matt. and τὸ καθ' ἡμέραν in Luke, along with ἐπιούσιος. On the whole the temporal meaning seems to have the weight of the argument on its side. For a full statement of the case on that side vide Lightfoot as above, and on the other the article on ἐπιούσιος in Cremer's Bib. Theol., W. B., 7te Aufl., 1893.

Ver. 12. Fifth petition. ὀφειλήματα, in classics literal debts, here moral debts, sins (ἁμαρτίας in Lk. xi. 4). The more men desire God's will to be done the more conscious they are of shortcoming. The more conscious of personal shortcoming, the more indulgent towards the faults of others even when committed against themselves. Hence the added

- <sup>3</sup> Ch. xviii. 24 (literal). <sup>4</sup> πειρασμόν, ἀλλὰ ῥῦσαι ἡμᾶς ἀπὸ τοῦ πονηροῦ. ὅτι σοῦ ἐστιν ἡ βασιλεία καὶ ἡ δύναμις καὶ ἡ δόξα εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας. ἀμήν.<sup>2</sup> 14. Ἐὰν γὰρ ἀφήτε τοῖς ἀνθρώποις τὰ παραπτώματα αὐτῶν, ἀφήσει
<sup>1</sup> Lk. xi. 4. καὶ ὑμῖν ὁ πατὴρ ὑμῶν ὁ οὐράνιος. 15. εἰ δὲ μὴ ἀφήτε τοῖς ἀνθρώποις
<sup>u</sup> Mk. xi. 25. ποῖς τὰ παραπτώματα αὐτῶν,<sup>3</sup> οὐδὲ ὁ πατὴρ ὑμῶν ἀφήσει τὰ παρα-15-18.
 Gal. vi. i. πτώματα ὑμῶν. 16. Ὃταν δὲ νηστεύητε, μὴ γίνεσθε ὡς περ<sup>4</sup> οἱ
<sup>v</sup> Lk. xxiv. ὑποκριταὶ ἢ σκυθρωποὶ. Ἐφάνιζουσι γὰρ τὰ πρόσωπα αὐτῶν,<sup>6</sup>
 17.
<sup>w</sup> vv. 19, 20. ὅπως φανῶσι τοῖς ἀνθρώποις νηστεύοντες. ἀμήν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι ὁ
 Acts xiii.
 41. James iv. 14.

<sup>1</sup>  $\aleph$ BZ have ἀφεκαμεν, adopted by modern editors. αφιμεν (T. R.) has probably come in from Luke (xi. 4).

<sup>2</sup> The Doxology οτι σου . . . αμην is wanting in  $\aleph$ BZ and is regarded by most modern critics as an ancient liturgical insertion. It is found in L $\Delta$  $\Sigma$  al.

<sup>3</sup> τα παραπτωματα αυτων wanting in  $\aleph$ D, omitted by Tisch., bracketed by W.H., though found in BL.

<sup>4</sup> ως in  $\aleph$ B $\Delta$ A.

<sup>5</sup> For αυτων B has εαυτων.

<sup>6</sup> T. R. has οτι with L al.  $\aleph$ BD omit.

words: ὡς καὶ ἡ ἀφεκαμεν, etc. It is natural and comforting to the sincere soul to put the two things together. ὡς must be taken very generally. The prayer proceeds from child-like hearts, not from men trained in the distinctions of theology. The comment appended in vv. 14, 15 introduces an element of reflection difficult to reconcile with the spontaneity of the prayer. It is probably imported from another connection, e.g., Mt. xviii. 35 (so Weiss-Meyer).

Ver. 13. Sixth petition: consists of two members, one qualifying or limiting the other.—μὴ . . . πειρασμόν, expose us not to moral trial. All trial is of doubtful issue, and may therefore naturally and innocently be shrunk from, even by those who know that the result may be good, confirmation in faith and virtue. The prayer is certainly in a different key from the Beatitude in V. 10. There Jesus sets before the disciple a heroic temper as the ideal. But here He does not assume the disciple to have attained. The Lord's Prayer is not merely for heroes, but for the timid, the inexperienced. The teacher is considerate, and allows time for reaching the heights of heroism on which St. James stood when he wrote (i. 2) πᾶσαν χαρὰν ἠγήσασθε, ἀδελφοί μου, ὅταν πειρασμοῖς περιπέσητε ποικίλοις.—ἀλλὰ, not purely adverbial, cancelling previous clause, but confirming it and going further (Schanz, in accordance with original meaning of ἀλλὰ, derived from ἄλλο or ἄλλα, and signifying that what is going to be said is another thing, aliud, in relation to what has been said, Klotz, Devar. ii., p. 2) = Lead us not into temptation, or so lead us that we may be safe from evil: may the issue ever be beneficent.—ῥῦσαι ἀπὸ, not ἐκ; the latter would imply actual implication in, the former implies danger merely. Both occur in N. T. (on the difference cf. Kamphausen, Das G. des H.).—τοῦ πονηροῦ, either masculine or neuter, which? Here again there is an elaborate debate on a comparatively unimportant question. The probability is in favour of the masculine, the evil one. The Eastern naturally thought of evil in the concrete. But we as naturally think of it in the abstract; therefore the change from A. V. in R. V. is unfortunate. It mars the reality of the Lord's Prayer on Western lips to say, deliver us from the evil one. Observe it is moral evil, not physical, that is deprecated.—ὅτι σοῦ ἐστιν . . . Ἀμήν: a liturgical ending, no part of the original prayer, and tending to turn a religious reality into a devotional form.

On vv. 14-15 vide under ver. 12.

Vv. 16-18. Fasting. Ver. 16. ὅταν δὲ: transition to a new related topic.—σκυθρωποὶ, of sad visage, overdone of course by the "actors". Fasting, like

ἀπέχουσι τὸν μισθὸν αὐτῶν. 17. σὺ δὲ νηστεύων <sup>x</sup> ἄλειψαί σου τὴν κεφαλὴν, καὶ τὸ πρόσωπόν σου νίψαι. 18. ὅπως μὴ φανῆς τοῖς ἀνθρώποις νηστεύων,<sup>1</sup> ἀλλὰ τῷ πατρὶ σου τῷ ἐν τῷ κρυπτῷ<sup>2</sup> καὶ ὁ πατήρ σου ὁ βλέπων ἐν τῷ κρυπτῷ<sup>2</sup> ἀποδώσει σοι ἐν τῷ φανερωῷ.<sup>3</sup>

19. “Μὴ <sup>γ</sup> θησαυρίζετε ὑμῖν θησαυροὺς ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, ὅπου σὴς καὶ ὁ βρῶσις ἀφανίζει, καὶ ὅπου κλέπται <sup>z</sup> διορύσσουσι καὶ κλέπτουσι. 20. θησαυρίζετε δὲ ὑμῖν θησαυροὺς ἐν οὐρανῷ, ὅπου οὔτε σὴς οὔτε ὁ βρῶσις ἀφανίζει, καὶ ὅπου κλέπται οὐ διορύσσουσιν οὐδὲ κλέπτουσιν. 21. ὅπου γὰρ ἐστὶν ὁ θησαυρὸς ὑμῶν,<sup>4</sup> ἐκεῖ ἔσται καὶ <sup>δ</sup> ἡ καρδία ὑμῶν.<sup>4</sup> 22. Ὁ λύχνος τοῦ σώματός ἐστιν ὁ ὀφθαλμὸς<sup>δ</sup>. ἐὰν οὖν ὁ

<sup>1</sup> B places νηστευων before τοις ἀνθρώποις.

<sup>2</sup> κρυφαίω in  $\mathfrak{N}$ BD.

<sup>3</sup>  $\mathfrak{N}$ BDL omit ἐν τῷ φανερωῷ.

<sup>4</sup>  $\mathfrak{N}$ B have σου, which makes the reflection more pointed.

<sup>δ</sup> B omits καί.

<sup>δ</sup> B adds σου.

prayer, was reduced to a system; twice a week in ordinary Pharisaic practice: Thursday and Monday (ascent and descent of Moses on Sinai), artificial gloom inevitable in such circumstances. In occasional fasting, in circumstances of genuine affliction, the gloom will be real (Lk. xxiv. 17).—ἀφανίζουσιν—ὅπως φανῶσιν, a play upon words, may be rendered in English “they disfigure that they may figure”. In German: Unsichtbar machen, sichtbar werden (Schanz and Weiss).—Ver. 17. ἀλειψαί, νίψαι: not necessarily as if preparing for a feast (Meyer and Weiss), but performing the usual daily ablutions for comfort and cleanliness, so avoiding parade of fasting by neglect of them (Bleek, Achelis).

The foregoing inculcations of sincerity and reality in religion contribute indirectly to the illustration of the divine name Father, which is here again defined by discriminating use. God as Father desires these qualities in worshippers. All close relations (father, son: husband, wife) demand real affection as distinct from parade.

Vv. 19-34. Counsels against covetousness and care (reproduced in Lk. xii. 22-34, with exception of vv. 22-23, which reappear in Lk. xi. 34-36). An interpretation, according to Weiss. Doubtless, if the Sermon on the Mount was exclusively an anti-Pharisaic discourse. But this homily might very well have formed one of the lessons on the hill, in connection with the general theme of the kingdom, which needs to be defined in contrast to worldliness not less than to spurious types of piety.

Vv. 19-21. Against hoarding. θησαυροὺς ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, treasures upon earth, and therefore earthly, material, perishable, of whatever kind.—σὴς, moth, destructive of costly garments, one prominent sort of treasure in the East.—βρῶσις, not merely “rust,” but a generic term embracing the whole class of agents which eat or consume valuables (so Beza, Fritzsche, Bleek, Meyer, etc.). Erosionem seu corrosionem quamlibet denotat, quum vel vestes a tineis vel vetustate et putredine eroduntur, vel lignum a cossibus et carie, frumentum a curculionibus, quales τρώγας Graeci vocant, vel metalli ab aerugine, ferrugine, eroduntur et corroduntur (Kypke, Obs. Sac.).—διορύσσουσιν, dig through (clay walls), easier to get in so than through carefully barred doors (again in Matt. xxiv. 43). The thief would not find much in such a house.—Ver. 20. θησ. ἐν οὐρανῷ: not = heavenly treasures, says Fritzsche, as that would require τοὺς before ἐν. Grammatically this is correct, yet practically heavenly treasure is meant.—Ver. 21. ὅπου θησ. . . . ἐκεῖ καρδία. The reflection goes back on the negative counsel in ver. 19. Do not accumulate earthly treasures, for then your heart will be there, whereas it ought to be in heaven with God and the Kingdom of God.

Vv. 22-24. Parable of the eye. A difficult passage; connection obscure,

- a Lk. xi. 34. ὀφθαλμός σου ἄπλοῦς ἢ<sup>1</sup> ὄλον τὸ σῶμά σου<sup>b</sup> φωτεινὸν ἔσται. 23.
 b Ch. xvii. 5.
 1. k. xi. 34. εἰ δὲ ὁ ὀφθαλμός σου πονηρὸς ἢ, ὄλον τὸ σῶμά σου ἄσκοτεινὸν 36.
 c Lk. xi. 34. ἔσται. εἰ οὖν τὸ φῶς τὸ ἐν σοὶ σκότος ἐστί, τὸ σκότος πόσον; 36.
 d Lk. xvi. 13. 24. Οὐδεὶς δύναται δυοῖς κυρίοις δουλεῦν· ἢ γὰρ τὸν ἓνα μισήσει, 1 Thess.
 v. 14. καὶ τὸν ἕτερον ἀγαπήσει· ἢ ἐνὸς ἄνθξεται, καὶ τοῦ ἑτέρου ὁ κατα-Tit. i. 9.
 e Ch. xviii. φρονησει. οὐ δύνασθε Θεῷ δουλεῦν καὶ ἑμῶν<sup>2</sup>. 25. διὰ
 10. Lk.
 xvi. 13. Rom. ii. 4 al. f Lk. xvi. 13.

<sup>1</sup> ἢ before ο ὀφθαλμος σου απλους in  $\aleph B$ .

<sup>2</sup> μαμωνα in all uncials.

and the evangelic report apparently imperfect. The parallel passage in Luke (xi. 33-36) gives little help. The figure and its ethical meaning seem to be mixed up, moral attributes ascribed to the physical eye, which with these still gives light to the body. This confusion may be due to the fact that the eye, besides being the organ of vision, is the seat of expression, revealing inward dispositions. Physically the qualities on which vision depends are health and disease. The healthy eye gives light for all bodily functions, walking, working, etc.; the diseased eye more or less fails in this service. If the moral is to be found only in last clause of ver. 23, all going before being parable, then ἄπλοῦς must mean sound and πονηρὸς diseased, meanings which, if not inadmissible, one yet does not expect to find expressed by these words. They seem to be chosen because of their applicability to the moral sphere, in which they might suitably to the connection mean "liberal" and "niggardly". ἀπλότης occurs in this sense in Rom. xii. 8, and Hatch (Essays in B. G., p. 80) has shown that πονηρὸς occurs several times in Sept. (Sirach) in the sense of niggardly, grudging. He accordingly renders: "The lamp of the body is the eye. If therefore thine eye be liberal thy whole body shall be full of light; but if thine eye be grudging, thy whole body shall be full of darkness." Of course this leaves the difficulty of the mixing of natural and moral untouched. The passage is elliptical, and might be paraphrased thus: The eye is the lamp of the body: when it is healthy we see to do our daily work, when diseased we are in darkness. So with the eye of the soul, the heart, seat of desire: when it is free from covetousness, not anxious to hoard, all goes well with our spiritual functions—we choose and act wisely. When sordid passions possess it there is darkness within deeper than that which afflicts the blind man. We mistake the relative value of things, choose the worse, neglect the better, or flatter ourselves that we can have both.

Ver. 24. Parable of the two masters. Οὐδεὶς: In the natural sphere it is impossible for a slave to serve two masters, for each claims him as his property, and the slave must respond to one or other of the claims with entire devotion, either from love or from interest.—ἢ γὰρ . . . μισήσει . . . ἀγαπήσει: We may take this clause as referring to the case of honest preference. A slave has his likes and dislikes like other men. And he will not do things by halves. His preference will take the form of love, and his aversion that of hate.—ἢ ἐνὸς ἀνθξεται, etc.: this clause may be taken as referring to the case of interest. The slave may not in his heart care for either of the rival masters. But he must seem to care, and the relative power or temper of one as compared to the other, may be the ground of his decision. And having decided, he attaches himself, ἀνθξεται, to the one, and ostentatiously disregards the other. In ordinary circumstances there would be no room for such a competition of masters. But a case might occur in time of war when the conquered were sold into slavery.—οὐ δύνασθε, etc. Application of the parable to God and earthly possessions.—μαμωνᾶ, wealth personified = Plutus, a Chaldee, Syriac, and Punic word ("lucrum punice mammon dicitur," Aug. de S. D.) derived from מַמּוֹן = to conceal or מַמְנָן to trust (vide Buxtorf, Lex. Talm., p. 1217). The meaning is not, "ye cannot serve God and have riches," but "ye cannot be faithful to God and make an idol of wealth". "Non dixit, qui habet divitias, sed qui servit divitiis," Jerome.

Vv. 25-34. Counsels against care. More suitable to the circumstances of the

τοῦτο λέγω ὑμῖν, μὴ <sup>β</sup>μεριμνᾶτε τῇ ψυχῇ ὑμῶν, τί φάγητε καὶ <sup>1</sup> τίς Ch. x. 19.
 πίνετε· μηδὲ τῷ σώματι ὑμῶν, τί <sup>β</sup>ἐνδύσθηθε. οὐχὶ ἡ ψυχὴ πλεῖον Lk. x. 41;
 ἐστὶ τῆς τροφῆς, καὶ τὸ σῶμα τοῦ ἐνδύματος; 26. <sup>1</sup>ἐμβλέψατε εἰς xii. 25.
 τὰ <sup>1</sup>πετεινὰ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, ὅτι οὐ <sup>β</sup>σπεύρουσιν, οὐδὲ <sup>β</sup>θερίζουσιν, οὐδὲ b Phil. iv. 6 συνάγουσιν εἰς ἀποθήκας, καὶ ὁ πατὴρ ὑμῶν ὁ οὐράνιος τρέφει αὐτά· (various οὐχ ὑμεῖς μᾶλλον <sup>1</sup>διαφέρετε αὐτῶν; 27. τίς δὲ ἐξ ὑμῶν μεριμνῶν δύνα- const.) 11. Mk. i.
 6. Rom.
 xiii. 12.
 Eph. vi. 11.
 1 Thess. v.

<sup>β</sup> (last three exx. metaphorical). i Acts i. 11 (with εἰς). j Ch. viii. 20; xiii. 4. Lk. viii. 5. Acts
 x. 12. k John iv. 36, 37. l Ch. x. 31; xii. 12. Lk. xii. 24 (with μᾶλλον).

<sup>1</sup> τῆ τι πηχῶς in B. This clause is wanting in B, omitted by Tisch., and bracketed by W.H.

disciples than those against amassing treasures. "Why speak of treasures to us who are not even sure of the necessities of life? It is for bread and clothing we are in torment" (Lutteroth).—Ver. 25, διὰ τοῦτο: because ye can be unfaithful to God through care as well as through covetousness.—μη μεριμνᾶτε: μέριμνα from μερίς, μερίζω, because care divides and distracts the mind. The verb is used in N. T. in various constructions and senses; sometimes in a good sense, as in 1 Cor. vii. 32: "The unmarried care for the things of the Lord," and xii. 25 in reference to the members of the body having the same care for each other. But the evil sense predominates. What is here deprecated is not work for bread and raiment, but worry, "Labor exercendus est, sollicitudo tollenda," Jerome.—οὐχὶ ἡ ψυχὴ . . . ἐνδύματος: the life not the soul; the natural life is more than meat, and the body more than the clothing which protects it, yet these greater things are given to you already. Can you not trust Him who gave the greater to give the less? But a saying like this, life is more than meat, in the mouth of Jesus is very pregnant. It tends to lift our thoughts above materialism to a lofty conception of man's chief end. It is more than an argument against care, it is a far-reaching principle to be associated with that other logion—a man is better than a sheep (Matt. xii. 12).—Ver. 26. ἐμβλέψατε εἰς, fix your eyes on, so as to take a good look at (Mk. x. 21, xiv. 67).—τὰ πετεινὰ τ. ου., the birds whose element is the air; look, not to admire their free, careless movements on the wing, but to note a very relevant fact—ὄτι, that without toil they get their food and live.—σπεύρουσιν, θερίζουσιν, συνάγουσι ε. ἀ.: the usual operations of the husbandman in producing the staff of life. In these the birds have no part, yet your Father feedeth them. The careworn might reply to this: yes; they feed themselves at the farmer's expense, an additional source of anxiety to him. And the cynic unbeliever in Providence: yes, in summer; but how many perish in winter through want and cold! Jesus, greatest of all optimists, though no shallow or ignorant one, quietly adds: οὐχ ὑμεῖς μᾶλλον διαφέρετε αὐτῶν: do not ye differ considerably from them? They fare, on the whole, well, God's humble creatures. Why should you fear, men, God's children?

Ver. 27. τίς δὲ, etc. The question means: care is as bootless as it is needless. But there is much difference of opinion as to the precise point of the question. Does it mean, who by care can add a cubit to his height, or who can add a short space of time, represented by a cubit, to the length of his life? ἡλικία admits of either sense. It means stature in Lk. xix. 3; age in John ix. 21, Heb. xi. 11. Most recent commentators favour the latter interpretation, chiefly influenced by the monstrosity of the supposition as referring to stature. Who could call adding a cubit, 1½ feet, to his height a very small matter, the expression of Lk. (ἐλάχιστον, xii. 26)? The application of a measure of length to length of days is justified by Ps. xxxix. 5: "Thou hast made my days as handbreadths". But Dr. Field strongly protests against the new rendering. Admitting, of course, that ἡλικία is ambiguous, and that in classic authors it oftener means age than stature, he insists that πῆχυς is decisive. "πῆχυς," he remarks (Ot. Nor.), "is not only a measure of length, but that by which a man's stature was properly measured." Euthy. on this place remarks: "καὶ μὴν οὐδὲ σπιθαμῆν (half a cubit) οὐδὲ δάκτυλον (a 24th part): λοιπὸν οὖν πῆχυν εἶπε, διότι κυρίως μέτρον τῶν ἡλικιῶν ὁ πῆχυς ἐστὶ. Thus a short man is τρίπηχυς, a tall man τετράπηχυς." But how are we to get over the monstrosity of the supposition?

m Lk. xii. 25. John xxi. 8. Rev. xxi. 17. n Lk. xii. 27. o ver. 31 (with 70). Lk. xii. 27. p Ch. xiv. 19. Lk. xii. 28. Jas. i. 10 (of grass). Ch. xiii. 26. Mk. iv. 28 (of grain). 1 Cor. iii. 12 (of hay). q here and Lk. xii. 28. r Ch. xi. 8. s Ch. viii. 26; xiv. 31; xvi. 8. Lk. xii. 28.

ραι προσθεῖναι ἐπὶ τὴν ἡλικίαν αὐτοῦ ἢ πῆχυν ἕνα; 28. καὶ περὶ ἐνδύματος τί μεριμᾶτε; καταμάθετε τὰ κρίνα τοῦ ἀγροῦ, πῶς αὐξάνει<sup>1</sup>. οὐ κοπιᾷ,<sup>1</sup> οὐδὲ νήθει<sup>1</sup>. 29. λέγω δὲ ὑμῖν, ὅτι οὐδὲ Σολομὼν ἐν πάσῃ τῇ δόξῃ αὐτοῦ περιεβάλετο ὡς ἐν τούτων. 30. εἰ δὲ τὸν ἄχρονον τοῦ ἀγροῦ, σήμερον ὄντα, καὶ αὔριον εἰς κλίβανον βαλλόμενον, ὁ Θεὸς οὕτως ἀμφιένυσσιν, οὐ πολλῶ μᾶλλον ὑμᾶς, ὀλιγόπιστοι; 31. μὴ οὖν μεριμνήσητε, λέγοντες, τί φάγωμεν, ἢ

<sup>1</sup> NB have plurals (W.H.). The singulars are a grammatical correction (κρίνα neut. pl. nom.) wholly unnecessary. The lilies are viewed singly.

Lutteroth helps us here by finding in the question of Jesus a reference to the growth of the human body from infancy to maturity. By that insensible process, accomplished through the aid of food, Gods adds to every human body more than one cubit. "How impossible for you to do what God has done without your thinking of it! And if He fed you during the period of growth, can you not trust Him now when you have ceased to grow?" Such is the thought of Jesus.

Vv. 28-30. Lesson from the flowers. καταμάθετε, observe well that ye may learn thoroughly the lesson they teach. Here only in N.T., often in classics. Also in Sept., e.g., Gen. xxiv. 21: The man observed her (Rebekah), learning her disposition from her actions.—τὰ κρίνα, the lilium Persicum, Emperor's crown, according to Rosenmüller and Kuinoel; the red anemone, according to Furrer (Zsch. für M. und R.) growing luxuriantly under thorn bushes. All flowers represented by the lily, said Euthy. Zig. long ago, and probably he is right. No need to discover a flower of rare beauty as the subject of remark. Jesus would have said the same thing of the snowdrop, the primrose, the bluebell or the daisy. After ἀγροῦ should come a pause. Consider these flowers! Then, after a few moments' reflection: πῶς, not interrogative (Fritzsche), but expressive of admiration; vague, doubtful whether the growth is admired as to height (Bengel), rapidity, or rate of multiplication. Why refer to growth at all? Probably with tacit reference to question in ver. 27. Note the verbs in the plural (vide critical note) with a neuter nominative. The lilies are viewed individually as living beings, almost as friends, and spoken of with affection (Winer, § 58, 3). The verb αὐξάνω in active voice is transitive in class., intransitive only in later writers.—κοπιῶσιν, νήθουσιν: "il-lud virorum est, qui agrum colunt, hoc mulierum domisedarum" (Rosenmüller). The former verb seems to point to the toil whereby bread is earned, with backward glance at the conditions of human growth; the latter to the lighter work, whereby clothing, the new subject of remark, is prepared.—Ver. 29. λέγω δὲ: the speaker is conscious He makes a strong statement, but He means it.—οὐδὲ, not even Solomon the magnificent, most glorious of the kings of Israel, and on state occasions most gorgeously attired.—ἐν τούτων: the lilies are in view, and one of them is singled out to vie with Solomon.—Ver. 30. εἰ δὲ τὸν ἄχρονον. Application. The beautiful flowers now lose their individuality, and are merged in the generic grass: mere weeds to be cut down and used as fuel. The natural sentiment of love for flowers is sacrificed for the ethical sentiment of love for man, aiming at convincing him of God's care.—κλίβανον (Attic κρίβανος, vide Lobeck, Phryn., 179), a round pot of earthenware, narrow at top, heated by a fire within, dough spread on the sides; beautiful flowers of yesterday thus used to prepare bread for men! ὀλιγόπιστοι: several times in Gospels, not in classics; not reproachful but encouraging, as if bantering the careworn into faith. The difficulty is to get the careworn to consider these things. They have no eye for wild flowers, no ear for the song of birds. Not so Jesus. He had an intense delight in nature. Witness the sentiment, "Solomon in all his glory," applied to a wild flower! These golden words are valuable as revealing His genial poetic nature. They reflect also in an interesting way the holiday mood of the hour, up on the hill away from heat, and crowds, and human misery.

Vv. 31-33. Renewed exhortation

τί πίνωμεν, ἢ τί περιβαλώμεθα; 32. πάντα γὰρ ταῦτα τὰ ἔθνη εἰς ἑπιζητεῖ<sup>1</sup>. οἶδε γὰρ ὁ πατήρ ὑμῶν ὁ οὐράνιος ὅτι ἡ χρῆζετε τούτων ἀπάντων· 33. ζητεῖτε δὲ πρῶτον τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ καὶ τὴν δικαιοσύνην<sup>2</sup> αὐτοῦ, καὶ ταῦτα πάντα προστεθήσεται ὑμῖν· 34. μὴ οὖν μεριμνήσητε εἰς τὴν αὔριον· ἡ γὰρ αὔριον μεριμνήσει τὰ ἑαυτῆς.<sup>3</sup> ἄρκετὸν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ ἡ κακία αὐτῆς.

19. w Ch. x. 25. 1 Pet. iv. 3 x here only in N. T. in sense of trouble. Sept. Eccl. vii. 15; xii. 1. Amos iii. 6. Sir. xix. 6.

<sup>1</sup> Another grammatical correction (neut. pl. nom. ἔθνη).  $\aleph$ B have ἐπιζητοῦσι.

<sup>2</sup>  $\aleph$ B omit του θεου, and B transposes the nouns and has την δικ. και την βασ. αυτου. Tisch. and W.H. retain the order as in T. R., omitting του θεου.

<sup>3</sup> τα εαυτης in E $\Sigma$  ( $\Delta$  τα περι αυτης). B\*L have simply αυτης.

against care. Ver. 31. οὖν, goes back on ver. 25, repeating the counsel, reinforced by intervening argument.—Ver. 32. τὰ ἔθνη, again a reference to heathen practice; in vi. 7 to their “batology” in prayer, here to the kind of blessings they eagerly ask (ἐπιζητοῦσιν): material only or chiefly; bread, raiment, wealth, etc. I never realised how true the statement of Jesus is till I read the Vedic Hymns, the prayer book and song book of the Indian Aryans. With the exception of a few hymns to Varuna, in which sin is confessed and pardon begged, most hymns, especially those to Indra, contain prayers only for material goods: cows, horses, green pastures, good harvests.

To wifeless men thou givest wives,
And joyful mak'st their joyless lives;
Thou givest sons, courageous, strong,
To guard their aged sires from wrong,
Lands, jewels, horses, herds of kine,
All kinds of wealth are gifts of thine.
Thy friend is never slain; his might Is never worsted in the fight.

—Dr. Muir, Sanskrit Texts, vol. v., p. 137.

—οἶδεν γὰρ ὁ πατήρ ὑ.: Disciples must rise above the pagan level, especially as they worship not Indra, but a Father in heaven, believed in even by the Indian Aryans, in a rude way, under the name of Dyaus-Pitar, Heaven-Father. γὰρ explains the difference between pagans and disciples. The disciple has a Father who knows, and never forgets, His children's needs, and who is so regarded by all who truly believe in Him. Such faith kills care. But such faith is possible only to those who comply with the following injunction.—Ver. 33. ζητεῖτε πρῶτον. There is considerable variation in the text of this counsel. Perhaps the nearest to the original is the reading of B, which omits τοῦ θεοῦ with  $\aleph$ , and inverts the order of βασ. and δικαι. Seek ye His (the Father's) righteousness and kingdom, though it may be against this that in Luke (xii. 31) the kingdom only is mentioned, πρῶτον also being omitted: Seek ye His kingdom. This may have been the original form of the logion, all beyond being interpretation, true though unnecessary. Seeking the kingdom means seeking righteousness as the summum bonum, and the πρῶτον is implied in such a quest. Some (Meyer, Sevin, Achelis) think there is no second, not even a subordinate seeking after earthly goods, all that to be left in God's hands, our sole concern the kingdom. That is indeed the ideal heroic attitude. Yet practically it comes to be a question of first and second, supreme and subordinate, and if the kingdom be indeed first it will keep all else in its proper place. The πρῶτον, like the prayer against temptation, indicates consideration for weakness in the sincere.—προστεθήσεται, shall be added, implying that the main object of quest will certainly be secured.

Ver. 34. Final exhortation against care. Not in Luke's parallel section, therefore regarded by Weiss as a reflection appended by the evangelist, not drawn from apostolic doctrine. But it very fitly winds up the discourse. Instead of saying, Care not about food and raiment, the Teacher now says finally, Care not with reference to to-morrow, εἰς τὴν αὔριον (ἡμέραν understood). It comes to the same thing. To restrict care to to-day is to master it absolutely. It is the future that breeds anxiety and leads to hoarding.—μεριμνήσει: future, with force of an imperative = let it, with genitive (αὐτῆς, W.H.) like other verbs of care; in ver. 25, with accus.—ἄρκετὸν: 2

1 Lk. vi. 37. Rom. ii. VII. 1. "ΜΗ κρίνετε, ἵνα μὴ κριθῆτε· 2. ἐν ᾧ γὰρ κρίματι κρίνετε, κριθήσεσθε· καὶ ἐν ᾧ μέτρῳ μετρεῖτε, ἀντιμετρηθήσεται ἡ ὑμῖν. 3. Τί δὲ βλέπεις τὸ κάρφος τὸ ἐν τῷ ὀφθαλμῷ τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ σου,

1 Most uncials have the simple μετρηθήσεται. The compound (T. R.) is in minusc. and Σ. Doubtless it came in originally from Lk. (vi. 38), being there the most probable reading.

neuter adjective, used as a noun; a sufficiency.—τῇ ἡμέρᾳ, for each successive day, the article distributive.—ἡ κακία, not the moral evil but the physical, the misery or affliction of life (not classical in this sense). In the words of Chrys. H. xxii., κακίαν φησι, οὐ τὴν πονηρίαν, μὴ γένοιτο, ἀλλὰ τὴν ταλαιπωρίαν, καὶ τὸν πόνον, καὶ τὰς συμφοράς. Every day has some such troubles: "suas afflictiones, quas nihil est necesse metu conduplicare". Erasmus, Paraph. Fritzsche proposes a peculiar arrangement of the words in the second and third clauses. Putting a full stop after μεριμνήσει, and retaining the τὰ of T. R. before ἑαυτῆς, he brings out this sense: The things of itself are a sufficiency for each day, viz., the evil thereof.

CHAPTER VII. THE SERMON CONTINUED AND CLOSED. The contents of this chapter are less closely connected and more miscellaneous than in the two preceding. In vv. 1-12 the polemic against Pharisaism seems to be continued and concluded. Vv. 6-11 Weiss regards as an interpolation foreign to the connection. It seems best not to be too anxious about discovering connections, but to take the weighty moral sentences of the chapter as they stand, as embodying thoughts of Christ at whatever time uttered, on the hill or elsewhere, or in whatever connection. Section 1-5 certainly deals with a Pharisaic vice, that of exalting oneself by disparaging others, a very cheap way of attaining moral superiority. Jesus would have His disciples rise above Pagans, publicans, Sadducees, Pharisees, but not by the method of detraction.

Vv. 1-5. Against judging. Ver. 1. μὴ κρίνετε, judge not, an absolute prohibition of a common habit, especially in religious circles of the Pharisaic type, in which much of the evil in human nature reveals itself. "What levity, haste, prejudice, malevolence, ignorance; what vanity and egotism in most of the judgments pronounced in the world" (Lutherth). Judge not, said Christ. Judge, it is your duty, said the Dutch pietists of last century through a literary spokesman, citing in proof Matt. xxiii. 33, where the Pharisees are blamed for neglecting "judgment". Vide Ritschl, Geschichte des Pietismus, i., p. 328. How far apart the two types!—ἵνα μὴ κριθῆτε: an important, if not the highest motive; not merely a reference to the final judgment, but stating a law of the moral order of the world: the judge shall be judged; to which answers the other: who judges himself shall not be judged (1 Cor. xi. 31). In Rom. ii. 1 St. Paul tacitly refers to the Jew as ὁ κρίνων. The reference there and here defines the meaning of κρίνειν. It points to the habit of judging, and the spirit as evinced by the habit, censoriousness leading inevitably to sinister judging, so that κρίνειν is practically equivalent to κατακρίνειν or καταδικάζειν (Lk. vi. 37).—Ver. 2. ἐν ᾧ γὰρ, etc.: Vulgatissimum hoc apud Judæos adagium, says Lightfoot (Hor. Heb.). Of course; one would expect such maxims, based on experience, to be current among all peoples (vide Grotius for examples). It is the lex talionis in a new form: character for character. Jesus may have learned some of these moral adages at school in Nazareth, as we have all when boys learned many good things out of our lesson books with their collections of extracts. The point to notice is what the mind of Jesus assimilated—the best in the wisdom of His people—and the emphasis with which He inculcated the best, so as to ensure for it permanent lodgment in the minds of His disciples and in their records of His teaching.

Vv. 3-5. Proverb of the mote and beam. Also current among Jews and Arabs (vide Tholuck).—κάρφος, a minute dry particle of chaff, wood, etc.—δοκός, a wooden beam (let in, from δέχομαι) or joist, a monstrous symbol of a great fault. A beam in the eye is a natural impossibility; cf. the camel and the needle eye. The Eastern imagination was prone to exaggeration. This is a case of tu quoque (Rom. ii. 2), or rather of "thou much more". The faults may τὴν δὲ ἐν τῷ σῶ ὀφθαλμῷ ὁδοκὸν οὐ ἄ κατανοεῖς ; 4. ἢ πῶς ἔρεις τῷ ε I k. vi. 41, ἀδελφῷ σου, "Ἄφες ἐκβάλω τὸ κάρφος ἀπὸ<sup>1</sup> τοῦ ὀφθαλμοῦ σου· καὶ δ I k. vi. 41; ἰδοῦ, ἢ δοκὸς ἐν τῷ ὀφθαλμῷ σου ; 5. ὑποκριτά, ἔκβαλε πρῶτον τὴν Acts xxvii. δοκὸν ἐκ τοῦ ὀφθαλμοῦ σου,<sup>2</sup> καὶ τότε ὁ διαβλέψεις ἐκβαλεῖν τὸ κάρφος 30. Cf. ἐκ τοῦ ὀφθαλμοῦ τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ σου. 6. Μὴ δῶτε τὸ ἅγιον τοῖς κυσί· Lk. xii. 24, 27. Rom. μηδὲ βάλητε τοὺς μαργαρίτας ὑμῶν ἔμπροσθεν τῶν χοίρων, μήποτε Mk. viii. 25. Lk. 25. Lk. 42. 25. Lk. 42.

f Ch. xiii. 45. 1 Tim. II. 9. Rev. xvii. 4; xviii. 16; xxi. 21.

<sup>1</sup> ΞΒΣ have εκ, which is preferred by most modern edd. Weiss suspects conformity to the εκ in εκβαλω.

<sup>2</sup> ΞBC place εκ του οφθ. σου before την δοκον, so giving to the censor's own eye due emphasis.

be of the same kind: κάρφος, a petty theft, δοκός, commercial dishonesty on a large scale—"thou that judgest doest the same things" (Rom. ii. 2); or of a different sort: moral laxity in the publican, pride and inhumanity in the Pharisee who despised him (Lk. xviii. 9-14).—βλέψεις, οὐ κατανοεῖς: the contrast is not between seeing and failing to see, but between seeing and not choosing to see; ignoring, consciously overlooking. The censorious man is not necessarily ignorant of his own faults, but he does not let his mind rest on them. It is more pleasant to think of other people's faults. —Ver. 4. ἐκβάλω, hortatory conjunctive, first person, supplies place of imperative which is wanting in first person; takes such words as ἄγε, φέρε, or as here ἄφες, before it. Vide Goodwin, section 255. For ἄφες modern Greek has ἄς, a contraction, used with the subjunctive in the first and third persons (vide Vincent and Dickson, Modern Greek, p. 322). —Ver. 5. ὑποκριτά: because he acts as no one should but he who has first reformed himself. "What hast thou to do to declare my statutes?" Ps. I. 16.—διαβλέψεις, thou will see clearly, vide Mk. viii. 24, 25, where three compounds of the verb occur, with ἀνά, διά, and ἐν. Fritzsche takes the future as an imperative and renders: se componere ad aliquid, curare; i. e., set thyself then to the task of, etc.

Ver. 6. A complementary counsel. No connecting word introduces this sentence. Indeed the absence of connecting particles is noticeable throughout the chapter: vv. 1, 6, 7, 13, 15. It is a collection of ethical pearls strung loosely together. Yet it is not difficult to suggest a connecting link, thus: I have said, "Judge not," yet you must know people, else you will make great mistakes, such as, etc. Moral criticism is inevitable. Jesus Himself practised it. He judged the Pharisees, but in the interest of humanity, guided by the law of love. He judged the proud, pretentious, and cruel, in behalf of the weak and despised. All depends on what we judge and why. The Pharisaic motive was egotism; the right motive is defence of the downtrodden or, in certain cases, self-defence. So here.—καταπατήσουσι: future well attested, vide critical note, with subjunctive, ῥήξωσι, in last clause; unusual combination, but not impossible. On the use of the future after μήποτε and other final particles, vide Burton, Syntax of the Moods and Tenses in N. T. Greek, § 199.—τὸ ἅγιον, τοὺς μαργαρίτας: what is the holy thing, and what are the pearls? In a moral aphorism special indications are not to be expected, and we are left to our own conjectures. The "holy" and the "pearls" must define themselves for each individual in his own experience. They are the things which are sacred and precious for a man or woman, and which natural feeling teaches us to be careful not to waste or expose to desecration. For this purpose knowledge of the world, discrimination, is necessary. We must not treat all people alike, and show our valuables, religious experiences, best thoughts, tenderest sentiments, to the first comer. Shyness, reserve, goes along with sincerity, depth, refinement. In all shyness there is implicit judgment of the legitimate kind. A modest woman shrinks from a man whom her instinct discerns to be impure; a child from all hard-natured people. Who blames woman or child? It is but the instinct of self-preservation.—κυσί, χοίρων. The people to be feared and shunned are those represented by dogs and swine, regarded by Jews as shameless and

- ε Ch. ix. 17. καταπατήσωσιν<sup>1</sup> αὐτοὺς ἐν τοῖς ποσὶν αὐτῶν, καὶ στραφέντες
 Mk. ix. 18.
 Lk. ix. 42. ῥήξωσιν ὑμᾶς. 7. Αἰτεῖτε, καὶ δοθήσεται ὑμῖν· ζητεῖτε, καὶ
 Gal. iv. 27
 (to break out into joy). εὐρήσετε· ἡ κρούετε, καὶ ἀνοιγήσεται ὑμῖν. 8. πᾶς γὰρ ὁ αἰτῶν λαμβάνει, καὶ ὁ ζητῶν εὐρίσκει, καὶ τῷ κρούοντι ἀνοιγήσεται.<sup>2</sup>
 h Lk. xi. 9.
 10; xii. 36. 9. ἢ τίς ἐστίν<sup>3</sup> ἐξ ὑμῶν ἄνθρωπος, ὃν ἐὰν<sup>4</sup> αἰτήσῃ ὁ υἱὸς αὐτοῦ Acts xii.
 16. Rev. ἄρτον, μὴ λίθον ἑπιδώσει αὐτῷ; 10. καὶ ἐὰν ἰχθὺν αἰτήσῃ,<sup>5</sup> μὴ
 iii. 20.
 i Lk. xi. 11; xxiv. 30, 42. Acts xv. 30; xxvii. 15.

<sup>1</sup> καταπατήσουσιν in BCLXΣ. Weiss against most critics thinks this combination of the fut. ind. with the subj. (ρηξῶσιν) impossible. He ascribes the reading ou to a confusion of ou with ω. Vide below.

<sup>2</sup> ἀνοίγεται in B Cop. Syr. Cur. W.H. in margin. Weiss decides for this reading.

<sup>3</sup> BL omit ἐστίν, and among modern editors Treg. and W.H.

<sup>4</sup> For εἰαν αἰτήσῃ NBCLΔ have αἰτήσῃ. Tisch. and W.H. adopt this.

<sup>5</sup> For καὶ εἰαν αἰτήσῃ NBC have ἡ καὶ αἰτήσῃ, which modern critics generally adopt.

unclean animals. There are such people, unhappily, even in the judgment of charity, and the shrewd know them and fight shy of them; for no good can come of comradeship with them. Discussions as to whether the dogs and the swine represent two classes of men, or only one, are pedantic. If not the same they are at least similar; one in this, that they are to be avoided. And it is gratuitous to limit the scope of the gnome to the apostles and their work in preaching the gospel. It applies to all citizens of the kingdom, to all who have a treasure to guard, a holy of holies to protect from profane intrusion.—μήποτε, lest perchance. What is to be feared?—καταπατήσουσιν, ῥήξωσιν: treading under foot (ἐν τ. π., instrumental, with, de Wette; among, Weiss) your pearls (αὐτοὺς), rending yourselves. Here again there is trouble for the commentators as to the distribution of the trampling and rending between dogs and swine. Do both do both, or the swine both, or the swine the trampling and the dogs the rending? The latter is the view of Theophylact, and it has been followed by some moderns, including Achelis. On this view the structure of the sentence presents an example of ἐπάνοδος or ὑπέρησις, the first verb referring to the second subject and the second verb to the first subject. The dogs—street dogs, without master, living on offal—rend, because what you have thrown to them, perhaps to propitiate them, being of uncertain temper at the best, is not to their liking; the swine trample under foot what looked like peas or acorns, but turns out to be uneatable.

Before passing from these verses (1-6) two curious opinions may be noted. (1) That ἄγιον represents an Aramaic word meaning ear-ornaments, answering to pearls. This view, once favoured by Michaelis, Boltzen, Kuinoel, etc., and thereafter discredited, has been revived by Holtzmann (H. C.). (2) That ὄφθαλμός (vv. 3, 5) means, not the eye, but a village well. So Furrer. Strange, he says, that a man should need to be told by a neighbour that he has a mote in his eye, or that it should be a fault to propose to take it out! And what sense in the idea of a beam in the eye? But translate the Aramaic word used by Jesus, well, and all is clear and natural. A neighbour given to fault-finding sees a small impurity in a villager's well and tauntingly offers to remove it. Meantime his own boys, in his absence, throw a beam into his own well (Zeitsch. für M. und R. Vide also Wanderungen, p. 222).

Vv. 7-11. Admonition to prayer: presupposes deferred answer to prayer, tempting to doubt as to its utility, and consequent discontinuance of the practice. A lesson more natural at a later stage, when the disciples had a more developed religious experience. The whole subject more adequately handled in Luke xi. 1-13.—Ver. 7. Αἰτεῖτε, ζητεῖτε, κρούετε, threefold exhortation with a view to impressiveness; first literally, then twice in figurative language: seek as for an object lost, knock as at a barred door, appropriate after the parable of the neighbour in bed (Lk. xi. 5-8). The promise of answer is stated in corresponding terms.—δοθήσεται, εὐρήσετε, ἀνοιγήσεται.—Ver. 8, iteration in form ὄφιν ἐπιδώσει αὐτῷ; 11. εἰ οὖν ὑμεῖς, πονηροὶ ὄντες, ἴδιδατε; Lk. xii. 56.

 ἴδιδατε; 2 Pet. ii. 9.
 ἴδιδατε; Lk. xi. 13.
 ἴδιδατε; Eph. iv. 8.
 ἴδιδατε; Phil. v.
 ἴδιδατε; 17.

1 Ch. xviii. 35; xx. 32; xxi. 40; xxv. 40, 45. Mk. v. 19, 20. Lk. l. 49 al. (with dat. of person in all cases cited. Not usual in classics).

1 For αν NC have εαν, which has been adopted by Tisch. and W.H.

of a general proposition: πᾶς γὰρ, for every one, etc.—Ver. 9. ἡ answers to a state of mind which doubts whether God gives in answer to prayer at all, or at least gives what we desire.—τίς ἐξ ὑμῶν ἄν.: argument from analogy, from the human to the divine. The construction is broken. Instead of going on to say what the man of the parable will do, the sentence changes into a statement of what he will not do. Well indicated in W.H.'s text by a — after ἄρτον. The anacolouthon could be avoided by omitting the ἔστι of T. R. after τίς and μὴ before λίθον, when the sentence would stand: τίς ἐξ ὑμῶν ἄν., ὃν αἰτήσῃ ὁ υἱὸς αὐτοῦ ἄρτον, λίθον ἐπιδώσει αὐτῷ. But the broken sentence, if worse grammar, is better rhetoric.—μὴ λ. ἐπιδώσει, he will not give him a stone, will he? Bread, stone; fish, serpent. Resemblance is implied, and the idea is that a father may refuse his child's request but certainly will not mock him. Grotius quotes from Plautus: "Altera manu fert lapidem, panem ostentat altera". Furrer suggests that by ὄφιν is meant not a literal serpent, but a scaleless fish, therefore prohibited to be eaten (Lev. xi. 12); serpent-like, found in the Sea of Galilee, three feet long, often caught in the nets, and of course thrown away like the dogfish of our waters.—Ver. 11, πονηροί, morally evil, a strong word, the worst fathers being taken to represent the class, the point being that hardly the worst will treat their children as described. There is no intention to teach a doctrine of depravity, or, as Chrysostom says, to calumniate human nature (οὐ διαβάλλον τὴν ἀνθρωπίνην φύσιν). The evil specially in view, as required by the connection, is selfishness, a grudging spirit: "If ye then, whose own nature is rather to keep what you have than to bestow it on others, etc." (Hatch, Essays in B. Gr., p. 81).—οἴδατε διδόναι soletis dare, Maldon. Wetstein; rather, have the sense to give; with the infinitive as in Phil. v.

12, 1 Tim. iii. 5. Perhaps we should take the phrase as an elegant expression for the simple δίδοτε. So Palairet.—δόματα, four times in N. T. for the attic δῶρον, δώρημα; δομ. ἀγαθὰ, gifts good not only in quality (bread not stone, etc.) but even in measure, generous, giving the children more than they ask.—πόσῳ μᾶλλον, a fortiori argument.—ὁ πατήρ, etc., the Father whose benignant nature has already been declared, v. 45.—ἀγαθὰ, good things emphatically, insignia dona, Rosenm., and only good (Jas. i. 17, an echo of this utterance). This text is classic for Christ's doctrine of the Fatherhood of God.

Ver. 12. The golden rule. οὖν here probably because in the source, cf. καὶ in quotation in Heb. i. 6. The connection must be a matter of conjecture—with ver. 11, a, "Extend your goodness from children to all," Fritzsche; with ver. 11, b, "Imitate the divine goodness," Bengel; with vii. 1-5, vv. 6-11 being an interpolation, Weiss and Holtz. (H.C.). Lk. vi. 31 places it after the precept contained in Matt. v. 42, and Wendt, in his reconstruction of the logia (L. J., i. 61), follows that clue. The thought is certainly in sympathy with the teaching of Matt. v. 38-48, and might very well be expounded in that connection. But the meaning is not dependent on connection. The sentence is a worthy close to the discourse beginning at v. 17. "Respondent ultima primis," Beng. Here as there "law and prophets".—ἵνα with subjunctive after θέλητε, instead of infinitive.—πάντα οὖν . . . ποιεῖτε αὐτοῖς. The law of nature, says Rosenmüller. Not quite. Wetstein, indeed, gives copious instances of something similar in Greek and Roman writers and Rabbinical sources, and the modern science of comparative religion enables us to multiply them. But recent commentators (including Holtz., H.C.) have remarked that, in these instances, the rule is stated in negative terms. So, e.g., in Tobit, m (with δ.α and gen. of way). 13. "m Εἰσελθετε διὰ τῆς στενῆς πύλης· ὅτι πλατεῖα ἡ πύλη," Lk. xiii. 24. John εἰσιν οἱ εἰσερχόμενοι δι' αὐτῆς· 14. ὅτι στενὴ ἡ πύλη,<sup>2</sup> καὶ <sup>3</sup> τεθλιμ-

 n Lk. xiii. μένη ἡ ὁδὸς ἢ ἀπάγουσα εἰς τὴν ζωὴν, καὶ ὀλίγοι εἰσιν οἱ εὐρίσκοντες o here only in N. T., several times in Sept. p here only in N. T., Sept. Ps. ciii. (iv.) 25. q here only in the sense of contracted.

<sup>1</sup> η πύλη is wanting in N and many Fathers (Clem. Orig.), and omitted by W.H. and bracketed by Tisch. Weiss thinks it very suspicious.

<sup>2</sup> Some copies have τι for στι and omit η πύλη, but the text as it stands is approved by W.H. Tisch. brackets η πύλη.

iv. 15, ὁ μισεῖς, μηδενὶ ποιήσης, quoted by Hillel in reply to one who asked him to teach the whole law while he stood on one leg. So also in the saying of Confucius: "Do not to others what you would not wish done to yourself," Legge, Chinese Classics, i. 191 f. The negative confines us to the region of justice; the positive takes us into the region of generosity or grace, and so embraces both law and prophets. We wish much more than we can claim—to be helped in need, encouraged in struggles, defended when misrepresented, and befriended when our back is at the wall. Christ would have us do all that in a magnanimous, benignant way; to be not merely δίκαιος but ἀγαθός.—νόμος καὶ προφήται; perhaps to a certain extent a current phrase = all that is necessary, but, no doubt, seriously meant; therefore, may help us to understand the statement in v. 17, "I came not to destroy, but to fulfil". The golden rule was Law and Prophets only in an ideal sense, and in the same sense only was Christ a fulfiller.—Vide Wendt, L. J., ii. 341.

Vv. 13, 14. The two ways (Lk. xiii. 23-25). From this point onwards we have what commentators call the Epilogue of the sermon, introduced without connecting particle, possibly no part of the teaching on the hill, placed here because that teaching was regarded as the best guide to the right way. The passage itself contains no clue to the right way except that it is the way of the few. The allegory also is obscure from its brevity. Is the gate at the beginning or end of the way, or are gate and way practically one, the way narrow because it passes through a narrow doorway? Possibly Christ's precept was simply, "enter through the narrow gate" or "door" (θύρα, Luke's word), all the rest being gloss.—πύλης, the large entrance to an edifice or city, as distinct from θύρα, a common door; perhaps chosen by Lk. because in keeping with the epithet στενῆς.—ὅτι, etc.: explanatory enlargement to unfold and enforce the precept.—ἡ ὁδός: two ways are contrasted, either described by its qualities and end. The "way" in the figure is a common road, but the term readily suggests a manner of life. The Christian religion is frequently called "the way" in Acts (ix. 2, xix. 9, etc.). The wrong road is characterised as πλατεῖα and εὐρύχωρος, broad and roomy, and as leading to destruction (ἀπώλειαν). The right way (and gate, ἡ πύλη, is to be retained in ver. 14, though omitted in ver. 13) is described as στενὴ καὶ τεθλιμμένη, narrow and contracted, and as leading to life.—ζωὴν, a pregnant word, true life, worth living, in which men realise the end of their being—the antithesis of ἀπώλεια. The one is the way of the many, πολλοὶ εἰσιν οἱ εἰσερ.; the other of the few, ὀλίγοι . . . οἱ εὐρίσκοντες. Note the word "finding". The way is so narrow or so untrodden that it may easily be missed. It has to be sought for. Luke suggests the idea of difficulty in squeezing in through the very narrow door. Both points of view have their analogue in life. The practical application of this counsel requires spiritual discernment. No verbal directory will help us. Narrow? Was not Pharisaism a narrow way, and the monastic life and pietism with its severe rules for separation from the "world" in amusement, dress, etc.?

Vv. 15-20. Warning against pseudo-prophets. Again, without connecting particle and possibly not a part of the Sermon on the Mount. But the more important question here is: Does this section belong to Christ's teaching at all, or has it been introduced by the Evangelist that false teachers of after days appearing in the Church might be condemned under the authority of the Master? (Holtz., H.C.). What occasion had αὐτήν. 15. Ὑποσέχετε δὲ<sup>1</sup> ἀπὸ τῶν ἠψευδοπροφητῶν, οἵτινες ἔρχονται πρὸς ὑμᾶς ἐν ἐνδύμασι προβάτων, ἔσωθεν δὲ εἰσι ἰλύκοι ἄρπαγες. 16. ἀπὸ τῶν καρπῶν αὐτῶν ἐπιγνώσεσθε αὐτοὺς· μήτι ὑλλέγουσιν ἀπὸ ἀκαθῶν σταφυλήν,<sup>2</sup> ἢ ἀπὸ τριβόλων σῦκα; 17. οὕτω πᾶν δένδρον ἀγαθὸν καρποὺς καλοὺς ποιεῖ<sup>3</sup>. τὸ δὲ σαπρὸν δένδρον καρποὺς πονηροὺς ποιεῖ. 18. οὐ δύναται δένδρον ἀγαθὸν καρποὺς πονηροὺς ποιεῖν,<sup>4</sup> οὐδὲ δένδρον σαπρὸν καρποὺς καλοὺς ποιεῖν.<sup>4</sup> 19. πᾶν δένδρον μὴ ποιοῦν καρπὸν καλὸν ἐκκόπεται καὶ

Ch. x. 17; xvi. 6, 11. Lk. xx. 46 (all with ἠπόστινος). Ch. xxiv. 11, 24 al. Acts xx. 29 trop., so in Sept. Jer. v. 6 al. Ch. xi. 27. Ch. xiii. 28, 41 (with ἐκ). Ch. xii. 33; Eph. iv. 29.

<sup>1</sup> ἡ B omit δε (so W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> ἡ BC have σταφυλας. The sing. comes from Lk. (vi. 44).

<sup>3</sup> B has ποιεῖ καλοὺς (W.H. margin).

<sup>4</sup> For ποιεῖν ἡ has ενεγκειν (Tisch. both places, W.H. 1st place).

Christ to speak of false prophets? The reference can hardly be to the Pharisees or the Rabbis. They were men of tradition, not prophetic, either in the true or in the false sense. But, apart from them, there might be another class of men in evidence in our Lord's day, who might be so characterised. It was a time of religious excitement; the force of custom broken, the deep fountains of the soul bursting forth; witness the crowds who followed John and Jesus, and the significant saying about the kingdom of heaven suffering violence (Matt. xi. 12). Such times call forth true prophets and also spurious ones, so far in religious sympathy with prevalent enthusiasms, but bent on utilising them for their own advantage in gain or influence, men of the Judas type. If such men, as is likely, existed, Jesus would have something to say about them, as about all contemporary religious phenomena.

Ver. 15. Προσέχετε ἀπὸ, take heed to and beware of.—οἵτινες, I mean, such as.—ἐν ἐνδύμασι προβάτων. Grotius, Rosenm. and Holtz. (H.C.) take this as referring to the dress worn (ἐν μηλωταῖς, Heb. xi. 37) as the usual badge of a prophet, but not without reference to the plausible manner of the wearer; deceptive and meant to deceive (Zechar. xiii. 4); gentle, innocent as sheep; speaking with "unction," and all but deceiving "the very elect". The manner more than the dress is doubtless intended. ἔσωθεν δὲ: manner and nature utterly different; within, ἰλύκοι ἄρπαγες; greedy, sometimes for power, ambitious to be first; often for gain, money. The Didache speaks of a type of prophet whom it pithily names a χριστέμπορος (chap. xii.), a Christ-merchant. There have always been prophets of this type, "each one to his gain" (Is. lvi. 11), Evangel-merchants, traders in religious revival.—Ver. 16. ἀπὸ τ. καρπῶν. By the nature of the case difficult to detect, but discernible from their fruit.—ἐπιγνώσεσθε. Ye shall know them through and through (ἐπί) if ye study carefully the outcome of their whole way of life.

Vv. 16-20. An enlargement in parabolic fashion on the principle of testing by fruit. Ver. 16. μήτι, do they perhaps, τι suggesting doubt where there is none = men never do collect, or think of collecting, grapes from thorns or figs from thistles. And yet the idea is not absurd. There were thorns with grape-like fruit, and thistles with heads like figs (Holtz., H.C.). But in the natural sphere these resemblances never deceived; men saw at a glance how the matter stood.—Ver. 17. Another illustration from good and bad trees of the same kind. ἀγαθόν, sound, healthy; σαπρὸν, degenerate, through age or bad soil. According to Phryn., σαπρός was popularly used instead of αἰσχρός in a moral sense (σαπρᾶν οἱ πολλοὶ ἀντὶ τοῦ αἰσχράν, p. 377). Each tree brings forth fruit answering to its condition.—Ver. 18. οὐ δύναται, etc. Nothing else is possible or looked for in nature.—Ver. 19. Men look on this as so certain that they do not hesitate to cut down and burn a degenerate tree, as if it were possible it might bring forth good fruit next year.—μὴ ποιοῦν, if it do not, that once ascertained. Weiss thinks this verse is imported from iii. 10, and foreign to the connection.—Ver. 20. ἄραγε; final inference, a very lively and forcible composite particle; again with similar effect

- εἰς πῦρ βάλλεται. 20. ἄραγε ἀπὸ τῶν καρπῶν αὐτῶν ἐπιγιώσεσθε αὐτούς.
- x Ch. xii. 50;
xxi. 31 al.
y Ch. xxiv.
36. Lk. x.
12. 2
Thess. i.
10 al.
21. “Οὐ πᾶς ὁ λέγων μοι, Κύριε, Κύριε, εἰσελεύσεται εἰς τὴν βασιλείαν τῶν οὐρανῶν· ἀλλ’ ὁ ποιῶν τὸ θέλημα τοῦ πατρὸς μου τοῦ ἐν οὐρανοῖς. 22. πολλοὶ ἐροῦσί μοι ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ, Κύριε, Κύριε, οὐ τῷ σῶ ὀνόματι προεφητεύσαμεν,<sup>2</sup> καὶ τῷ σῶ ὀνόματι δαιμόνια ἐξεβάλομεν, καὶ τῷ σῶ ὀνόματι δυνάμεις πολλὰς ἐποιήσαμεν; 23. καὶ τότε ὁμολογήσω αὐτοῖς, ὅτι οὐδέποτε ἔργων ὑμᾶς
- z Mk. ix. 38.
Jas. v. 10.
John i. 20.
Heb. xi.
15 (1700. 71)
στι, Acts
xxiv. 14).

<sup>1</sup> NBC have τοῖς before οὐρανοῖς, which T. R., following many MSS., omits.

<sup>2</sup> NBCLZ have the augment at the beginning (επροφ.); adopted by modern editors.

in Matt. xvii. 26. The γε should have its full force as singling out for special attention; “at least from their fruits, if by no other means”. It implies that to know the false prophet is hard. Ver. 22 explains why. He has so much to say, and show, for himself: devils cast out, souls saved, spiritual if not physical miracles done. What other or better “fruit” would you have? What in short is the test? Doctrine, good moral life? Is the false prophet necessarily a false teacher or an immoral man? Not necessarily though not unfrequently. But he is always a self-seeking man. The true prophet is Christ-like, i.e., cares supremely for truth, righteousness, humanity; not at all for himself, his pocket, his position, his life. None but such can effectively preach Christ. This repetition of the thought in ver. 16 is not for mere poetical effect, as Carr (Camb. G. T.), following Jebb (Sacred Literature, p. 195), seems to think.

Vv. 21-23. False discipleship. From false teachers the discourse naturally passes to spurious disciples. Luke’s version contains the kernel of this passage (Luke vi. 46). Something of the kind was to be expected in the teaching on the hill. What more likely than that the Master, who had spoken such weighty truths, should say to His hearers: “In vain ye call me Master, unless ye do the things which I say”? As it stands here the logion has probably, as Weiss suggests (Matt. Evang., p. 219), undergone expansion and modification, so as to give to the title “Lord,” originally = רב, Teacher, the full sense it bore when applied to Christ by the Apostolic Church, and to make the warning refer to false prophets of the Apostolic age using Christ’s name and authority in support of anti-Christian tendencies, such as anti-nomianism (ἀνομίαν, ver. 23).—Ver. 21. ὁ λέγων, ὁ ποιῶν: Of all, whether disciples or teachers, the principle holds good without exception that not saying “Lord” but doing God’s will is the condition of approval and admittance into the kingdom. Saying “Lord” includes taking Jesus for Master, and listening to His teaching with appreciation and admiration; everything short of carrying out His teaching in life. In connection with such lofty thoughts as the Beatitudes, the precept to love enemies and the admonition against care, there is a great temptation to substitute sentimental or æsthetic admiration for heroic conduct.—τὸ θέλημα τοῦ πατρὸς μου. Christ’s sense of His position as Master or Lord was free from egotism. He was simply the Son and Servant of the Father, whose will He and all who follow Him must obey; my Father here for the first time.—Ver. 22. ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ, the great dread judgment day of Jehovah expected by all Jews, with more or less solemn awe; a very grave reference.—τῷ σῶ ὀνόματι: thrice repeated, the main ground of hope. Past achievements, prophesyings, exorcisms, miracles are recited; but the chief point insisted on is: all was done in Thy name, honouring Thee, as the source of wisdom and power.—Ver 23. τότε. When they make this protestation, the Judge will make a counter-protestation—ὁμολογήσω αὐτοῖς, I will own to them. Bengel’s comment is: aperte. Magna potestas hujus dicti. But there is a certain apologetic tone in the expression, “I will confess” (“profess,” A.V. and R.V.), as if to say: I ought to know men who can say so much for themselves, but I do not.—στι, recita-

<sup>b</sup> ἀποχωρεῖτε ἀπ' ἐμοῦ οἱ * ἐργαζόμενοι τὴν <sup>d</sup> ἀνομίαν. 24. Πᾶς οὖν <sup>b</sup> Lk. ix. 39.
 ὅστις ἀκούει μου τοὺς λόγους τούτους,<sup>1</sup> καὶ ποιεῖ αὐτούς, ὁμοιωσῶ <sup>c</sup> Acts xiii.
 αὐτὸν <sup>2</sup> ἀνδρὶ * φρονίμῳ, ὅστις ᾠκοδόμησε τὴν οἰκίαν αὐτοῦ <sup>3</sup> ἐπὶ τὴν <sup>c</sup> Ch. xxvi.
 πέτραν. 25. καὶ κατέβη ἡ βροχὴ καὶ ἦλθον οἱ ποταμοὶ καὶ <sup>d</sup> Ch. xiii.
 ἔπνευσαν οἱ ἄνεμοι, καὶ <sup>2</sup> προσέπεσον τῇ οἰκίᾳ ἐκείνῃ, καὶ οὐκ ἔπεσε. <sup>e</sup> 47. i John τεθεμελίωτο γὰρ ἐπὶ τὴν πέτραν. 26. καὶ πᾶς ὁ ἀκούων μου τοὺς <sup>c</sup> iii. 4.
 λόγους τούτους καὶ μὴ ποιῶν αὐτούς, ὁμοιωθήσεται ἀνδρὶ * μωρῷ, <sup>e</sup> Ch. x. 16;
<sup>f</sup> Lk. xii. 42.
 in sense of beat against. <sup>g</sup> Ch. xxiii. 17, 19; xxv. 2, 8.

<sup>1</sup> B omits τούτους, which is bracketed by W.H. It seems needed, and may have fallen out by homœot.

<sup>2</sup> NBZ have ομοιωθήσεται for ομοιωσῶ αὐτόν. So W.H.

<sup>3</sup> αυτου before την οικιαν in NBCZ, so giving the pronoun due emphasis—his house.

tive, the exact words directly reported.—οὐδέποτε, never: at no point in that remarkable career when so many wonderful things were done in my name.—ἀποχωρεῖτε, etc.: an echo of Ps. vi. 9, and sentence of doom, like Matt. xxv. 41.

Vv. 24-27. Epilogue (Lk. vi. 47-49, which see for comparative exegesis). οὖν, ver. 24, may be taken as referring to the whole discourse, not merely to vv. 21-23 (Tholuck and Achelis). Such a sublime utterance could only be the grand finale of a considerable discourse, or series of discourses. It is a fit ending of a body of teaching of unparalleled weight, dignity, and beauty. The τούτους after λόγους (ver. 24), though omitted in B, therefore bracketed in W. H., is thoroughly appropriate. It may have fallen out through similar ending of three successive words, or have been omitted intentionally to make the statement following applicable to the whole of Christ's teaching. Its omission weakens the oratorical power of the passage. It occurs in ver. 26.

Ver. 24. Πᾶς ὅστις. Were the reading ὁμοιωσῶ adopted, this would be a case either of attraction πᾶς for πάντα to agree with ὅστις (Fritzsche), or of a broken construction: nominative, without a verb corresponding, for rhetorical effect. (Meyer, vide Winer, § lxiii., 2, d.)—ἀκούει, ποιεῖ: hearing and doing, both must go together; vide James i. 22-25, for a commentary on this logion. "Doing" points generally to reality, and what it means specifically depends on the nature of the saying. "Blessed are the poor in spirit"; doing in that case means being poor in spirit. To evangelic ears the word has a legal sound, but the doing Christ had in view meant the opposite of legalism and Pharisaism.—ομοιωθήσεται: not at the judgment day (Meyer), but, either shall be assimilated by his own action (Weiss), or the future passive to be taken as a Gerund = comparandus est (Achelis).—φρονίμῳ: perhaps the best rendering is "thoughtful". The type of man meant considers well what he is about, and carefully adopts measures suited to his purpose. The undertaking on hand is building a house—a serious business—a house not being meant for show, or for the moment, but for a lasting home. A well-selected emblem of religion.—τὴν πέτραν: the article used to denote not an individual rock, but a category—a rocky foundation.

Ver. 25. What follows shows his wisdom, justified by events which he had anticipated and provided for; not abstract possibilities, but likely to happen every year—certain to happen now and then. Therefore the prudence displayed is not exceptional, but just ordinary common sense.—καὶ: observe the five καὶ in succession—an eloquent polysyndeton, as grammarians call it; note also the rhythm of the sentence in which the war of the elements is described: down came the rain, down rushed the rivers, blew the winds—sudden, fell, terrible.—προσέπεσον, they fell upon that house; rain on roof, river on foundation, wind on walls. And what happened? καὶ οὐκ ἔπεσεν. The elements fell on it, but it did not fall.—τεθεμελίωτο γὰρ: for a good reason, it was founded on the rock. The builder had seen to that.

Vv. 26-27. μωρῷ, Jesus seems here to offend against His own teaching, v. 22, but He speaks not in passion or contempt, but in deep sadness, and with humane intent to prevent such folly.

E Lk. ii. 34. ὅστις ᾠκοδόμησε τὴν οἰκίαν αὐτοῦ<sup>1</sup> ἐπὶ τὴν ἄμμον· 27. καὶ κατέβη
 C/. Rom. xi. 11. ἢ βροχὴ καὶ ἦλθον οἱ ποταμοὶ καὶ ἔπνευσαν οἱ ἄνεμοι, καὶ προσέi Ch. xxii. 33. Mk. i. κοψαν<sup>2</sup> τῇ οἰκίᾳ ἐκείνῃ, καὶ ἔπεσε· καὶ ἦν ἡ <sup>3</sup>πτῶσις αὐτῆς μεγάλη.”
 28. Καὶ ἐγένετο ὅτε συνετέλεσεν<sup>3</sup> ὁ Ἰησοῦς τοὺς λόγους τούτους, (all in ref. to Christ's doctrine). ἐξεπλήσσαντο οἱ ὄχλοι ἐπὶ τῇ διδασχῇ αὐτοῦ· 29. ἦν γὰρ διδάσκων
 j Mk. i. 22. αὐτοὺς ὡς ἰεξουσίαν ἔχων, καὶ οὐχ ὡς οἱ γραμματεῖς.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>1</sup> αὐτου before τὴν οἰκίαν in  $\aleph$ BZ $\Sigma$  as in ver. 24.

<sup>2</sup> Some copies have προσερρηξαν.

<sup>3</sup> ετελεσεν in  $\aleph$ BCZ $\Sigma$ .

<sup>4</sup> After γραμματεῖς  $\aleph$ BD $\Sigma$  have αυτων (W.H. and other editors). Some copies add καὶ οἱ φαρισαῖοι (W.H. margin).

Wherein lay the second builder's folly? Not in deliberately selecting a bad foundation, but in taking no thought of foundation; in beginning to build at haphazard and anywhere; on loose sand (ἄμμος) near the bed of a mountain torrent. His fault was not an error in judgment, but inconsiderateness. It is not, as is commonly supposed, a question of two foundations, but of looking to, and neglecting to look to, the foundation. In the natural sphere no man in his senses commits such a mistake. But utterly improbable cases have to be supposed in parables to illustrate human folly in religion.—Ver. 27. καὶ . . . ἄνεμοι: exactly the same phrases as in ver. 25, to describe the oncome of the storm.—προσέκοψαν: a different word for the assault on the house—struck upon it with immediate fatal effect. It was not built to stand such rough handling. The builder had not thought of such an eventuality.—ἔπεσεν, καὶ ἦν ἡ πτώσις αὐτῆς μεγάλη: not necessarily implying that it was a large building, or that the disaster was of large dimensions, like the collapse of a great castle, but that the ruin was complete. The fool's house went down like a house of cards, not one stone or brick left on another.

Allegorising interpretation of the rain, rivers and winds, and of the foundations, is to be avoided, but it is pertinent to ask, what defects of character in the sphere of religion are pointed at in this impressive parabolic logion? What kind of religion is it that deserves to be so characterised? The foolish type is a religion of imitation and without forethought. Children play at building houses, because they have seen their seniors doing it. There are people who play at religion, not realising what religion is for, but following fashion, doing as others do, and to be seen of others (Matt. vi. 1). Children build houses on the sea sand below high-tide mark, not thinking of the tide which will in a few hours roll in and sweep away their houselet. There are men who have religion for to-day, and think not of the trial to-morrow may bring.

Ver. 28. Concluding statement as to the impression made by the discourse. A similar statement occurs in Mk. i. 22, 27, whence it may have been transferred by Matthew. It may be assumed that so unique a teacher as Jesus made a profound impression the very first time He spoke in public, and that the people would express their feelings of surprise and admiration at once. The words Mark puts into the mouth of the audience in the synagogue of Capernaum are to the life (vide comments there). They saw, and said that Christ's way of speaking was new, not like that of the scribes to which they had been accustomed. Both evangelists make the point of difference consist in "authority".

Ver. 29. ὡς ἰεξουσίαν ἔχων: Fritzsche supplies, after ἔχων, τοῦ διδάσκειν, and renders, He taught as one having a right to teach, because He could do it well, "scite et perite," a master of the art. The thought lies deeper. It is an ethical, not an artistic or æsthetic contrast that is intended. The scribes spake by authority, resting all they said on traditions of what had been said before. Jesus spake with authority, out of His own soul, with direct intuition of truth; and, therefore, to the answering soul of His hearers. The people could not quite explain the difference, but that was what they obscurely felt.

CHAPTERS VIII., IX. THE HEALING MINISTRY OF JESUS. These two chapters consist mainly of miracle narratives,

VIII. 1. ΚΑΤΑΒΑΝΤΙ ΔΕ ΑΥΤῶ<sup>1</sup> ΑΠὸ τοῦ ὄρους, ἠκολούθησαν αὐτῶ<sup>a</sup> Ch. x. 8;
 ὄχλοι πολλοί· 2. καὶ ἰδοῦ, <sup>a</sup>λεπρὸς ἐλθὼν<sup>2</sup> προσεκύνει αὐτῶ, λέγων, <sup>b</sup>Κύριε, ἐὰν θέλῃς, δύνασαι με <sup>b</sup>καθαρίσαι. 3. Καὶ <sup>c</sup>ἐκτείνας τὴν <sup>b</sup>χειρά, ἤψατο αὐτοῦ ὁ Ἰησοῦς,<sup>3</sup> λέγων, "Θέλω, καθαρίσθητι." Καὶ <sup>b</sup>Ch. x. 8
 xvii. 14, 17. c with τὴν χεῖρα often in Sept. and frequently in the Gospels (Ch. xii. 13, 49, etc.).

<sup>1</sup> For καταβαντι δε αυτω (the reading of  $\aleph$  al. adopted by Tisch.)  $\aleph^b$ BC have καταβατος δε αυτου. Z has the gen. also (και κατ. αυ). The dative is a grammatical "improvement".

<sup>2</sup> For ελθων (in CKL, etc.)  $\aleph$ BΔΣ have προσελθων. The προς has probably fallen out through homœot. (λεπρος).

<sup>3</sup>  $\aleph$ BCZ omit ο Ιησους, which T. R. often introduces.

the greater number being reports of healing acts performed by Jesus, nine in all, being the second part of the programme sketched in chap. iv. 23-25. These wonderful works are not to be regarded, after the manner of the older apologists, as evidential signs appended to the teaching on the hill to invest it with authority. That teaching needed no external credentials; it spoke for itself then as now. These histories are an integral part of the self-revelation of Jesus by word and deed; they are demonstrations not merely of His power, but above all, of His spirit. Therein lies their chief permanent interest, which is entirely independent of all disputes as to the strictly miraculous character of the events. This collection is not arranged in chronological order. The connection is topical, not temporal.

CHAPTER VIII. 1-4. The leper (Mk. i. 40-45; Lk. v. 12-16). This is the first individual act of healing reported in this Gospel, chap. iv. 23-24 containing only a general notice. It is a very remarkable one. No theory of moral therapeutics will avail here to eliminate the miraculous element. Leprosy is not a disease of the nerves, amenable to emotional treatment, but of the skin and the flesh, covering the body with unsightly sores. The story occurs in all three Synoptics, and, as belonging to the triple tradition, is one of the best attested. Matthew's version is the shortest and simplest here as often, his concern being rather to report the main fact and what Christ said, than to give pictorial details. Possibly he gives it as he found it in the Apostolic Document both in form and in position, immediately after Sermon on Mount, so placed, conceivably, to illustrate Christ's respectful attitude towards the law as stated in v. 17 (cf. viii. 4 and vide Weiss, Matt. Evan., p. 227).

Ver. 1. καταβάντος αὐτοῦ (for the reading vide above). Jesus descended from the hill towards Capernaum (ver. 5), but we must beware of supposing that the immediately following events all happened there, or at any one place or time. Mark seems to connect the cure of the leper with the preaching tour in Galilee (i. 40), and that of the palsied man with Christ's return therefrom (ii. 1). Jesus had ascended the hill to escape the pressure of human need. He descends, in Matt.'s narrative, to encounter it again—ἠκολούθησαν, large crowds gather about and follow Him.—ἰδοῦ, the sign mark of the Apostolic Document according to Weiss; its lively formula for introducing a narrative.—προσεκύνει, prostrated himself to the ground, in the abject manner of salutation suitable from an inferior to one deemed much superior, and also to one who had a great favour to ask.—Κύριε: not implying in the leper a higher idea than that of Master or Rabbi.—ἐὰν θέλῃς: the leper's doubt is not about the power, for he probably knows what marvellous things have been happening of late in and around Capernaum, but about the will, a doubt natural in one suffering from a loathsome disease. Besides, men more easily believe in miraculous power than in miraculous love. θέλῃς, present subjunctive, not aorist, which would express something that might happen at a future time (vide Winer, § xlii., 2, b).—καθαρίσαι—of course the man means to cleanse by healing, not merely to pronounce clean. This has an important bearing on the meaning of the word in next ver.—ἤψατο, touched him, not to show that He was not under the law, and that to the pure nothing is unclean (Chrys., Hom. xxv.), but to evince His willingness and sympathy. The stretching out of the hand does not mean that, in touching, He might be as far off as d here and in parall.

 e Ch. xviii. 10. Heb. viii. 5.
 f Ch. x. 18; xxiv. 14. Heb. iii. 5.
 g ver. 14; ix. 2. Mk. vii. 30.
 h Lk. xi. 53.

δ here and εὐθέως ἐκαθαρίσθη<sup>1</sup> αὐτοῦ ἢ<sup>2</sup> λέπρα. 4. καὶ λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Ὅρα μηδενὶ εἴπης· ἀλλ’ ὕπαγε, σεαυτὸν δεῖξον τῷ ἱερεῖ, καὶ προσένεγκε<sup>3</sup> τὸ δῶρον ὃ προσέταξε Μωσῆς, εἰς μαρτύριον αὐτοῖς.”

5. Εἰσελθόντι δὲ τῷ Ἰησοῦ<sup>3</sup> εἰς Καπερναοῦμ, προσῆλθεν αὐτῷ ἑκατόνταρχος παρακαλῶν αὐτόν, 6. καὶ λέγων, “Κύριε, ὁ παῖς μου βέβληται ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ παραλυτικός, <sup>δ</sup>δενῶς βασιανίζομενος.”

<sup>1</sup> BLXS have the less correct, but none the less likely, εκαθερισθη.

<sup>2</sup> BC have προσενεγκον. Ν as in T. R.

<sup>3</sup> The dative is here also a correction. ΝBCZ have the gen. as in ver. 1.

possible to avoid defilement and infection (Weiss-Meyer). It was action suited to the word.—θέλω, “I will,” pronounced in firm, cordial tone, carefully recorded by all the evangelists. καθαρίσθητι, naturally in the sense of the man’s request. But that would imply a real miracle, therefore naturalistic interpreters, like Paulus and Keim, are forced to take the word in the sense of pronouncing clean, the mere opinion of a shrewd observer. The narrative of Matthew barely leaves room for this hypothesis. The other evangelists so express themselves as to exclude it.—ἐκαθαρίσθη: forthwith the leprosy disappeared as if by magic. The man was and looked perfectly well.

Ver. 4. ὄρα, see to it! Look you!—imperative in mood and tone (vide Mark’s graphic account). Christ feared the man would be content with being well without being officially pronounced clean—physically healed, though not socially restored. Hence μηδενὶ εἴπης, ἀλλ’ ὕπαγε, etc.: speak of it to nobody, but go at once and show thyself (δείξον), τῷ ἱερεῖ, to the priest who has charge of such matters. What was the purpose of this order? Many good commentators, including Grot., Beng. and Wetstein, say it was to prevent the priests hearing of the cure before the man came (lingering on the road to tell his tale), and, in spite, declaring that he was not clean. The truth is, Jesus desired the benefit to be complete, socially, which depended on the priest, as well as physically. If the man did not go at once, he would not go at all.—τὸ δῶρον: vide Lev. xiv. 10, 21; all things to be done according to the law; no laxity encouraged, though the official religion was little worthy of respect (cf. Matt. v. 19).—εἰς μαρτύριον, as a certificate to the public (αὐτοῖς) from the constituted authority that the leper was clean. The direction shows Christ’s confidence in the reality of the cure. The whole story is a picture of character. The touch reveals sympathy; the accompanying word, “I will, be clean,” prompt, cordial, laconic, immense energy and vitality; the final order, reverence for existing institutions, fearlessness, humane solicitude for the sufferer’s future well-being in every sense (vide on Mk.).

Vv. 5-13. The centurion’s son or servant (Lk. vii. 1-10). Placed by both Matthew and Luke after Sermon on Mount, by the latter immediately after.—Ver. 5. εἰσελθόντος, aorist participle with another finite verb, pointing to a completed action. He had entered Capernaum when the following event happened. Observe the genitive absolute again with a dative of the same subject, αὐτῷ, following προσῆλθεν. ἑκατόνταρχος: a Gentile (ver. 10), probably an officer in the army of Herod Antipas.—Ver. 6. Κύριε again, not necessarily expressing any advanced idea of Christ’s person.—παῖς may mean either son or servant. Luke has δοῦλος, and from the harmonistic point of view this settles the matter. But many, including Bleek and Weiss (Meyer), insist that παῖς here means son.—βέβληται, perf. pointing to a chronic condition; bed-ridden in the house, therefore not with the centurion.—παραλυτικός: a disease of the nerves, therefore emotional treatment might be thought of, had the son only been present. But he could not even be brought on a stretcher as in another case (Matt. ix. 1) because not only παραλ., but δενῶς βασιανίζομενος, not an ordinary feature of paralysis.—Ver. 7. This is generally taken as an offer on Christ’s part to go to the house. Fritzsche finds in it a question, arranging the words (T. R.) thus: καὶ, λέγει α. ὁ ἰ., Ἐγὼ ἔλθων θεραπεύσω αὐτόν; and rendering: “And,” saith Jesus to him, “shall I go and heal him?” = is that

7. Καὶ<sup>1</sup> λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς,<sup>2</sup> “Ἐγὼ ἔλθων θεραπεύσω αὐτόν.”

8. Καὶ ἀποκριθεὶς<sup>3</sup> ὁ ἑκατόνταρχος ἔφη, “Κύριε, οὐκ εἰμι ἱκανὸς ἵνα ἰ with ἵνα here and in Lk. vii 6; vide at Mt. iii. 11. Lk. vii. 8.
μου ὑπὸ τὴν στέγην εἰσελθῆς· ἀλλὰ μόνον εἰπέ λόγον,<sup>4</sup> καὶ ἰαθήσεται ὁ παῖς μου. 9. καὶ γὰρ ἐγὼ ἄνθρωπός εἰμι ὑπὸ ἐξουσίαν,<sup>5</sup> ἔχων ὑπ’ ἑμαυτὸν στρατιώτας· καὶ λέγω τούτῳ, Πορεύθητι, καὶ πορεύεται· καὶ ἄλλῳ, Ἔρχου, καὶ ἔρχεται· καὶ τῷ δούλῳ μου, Ποίησον τοῦτο, καὶ ποιεῖ.” 10. Ἀκούσας δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐθαύμασε, καὶ εἶπε τοῖς ἀκολουθοῦσιν, “Ἀμήν λέγω ὑμῖν, οὐδὲ ἐν τῷ Ἰσραὴλ

<sup>1</sup> B and many vers. (including Syr. Sin. and Cur.) omit the καὶ, so giving an expressive asyndeton.

<sup>2</sup>  $\aleph$ B, Syr. Sin. omit ο Ἰησοῦς.

<sup>3</sup> ἀποκριθεὶς δὲ in  $\aleph$ B 33.

<sup>4</sup>  $\aleph$ BC have λογον, adopted by both Tisch. and W.H., and to be preferred.

<sup>5</sup>  $\aleph$ B al. add τασσομενος, adopted within brackets by W.H. “Manifestly out of Lk.,” Weiss in Meyer.

what you wish? The following verse then contains the centurion's reply. This is, to say the least, ingenious.—Ver. 8, ἱκανός: the Baptist's word, chap. iii. 11, but the construction different in the two places, there with infinitive, here with ἵνα: I am not fit in order that. This is an instance illustrating the extension of the use of ἵνα in later Greek, which culminated in its superseding the infinitive altogether in modern Greek. On the N. T. use of ἵνα, vide Burton, M. and T., §§ 191-222. Was it because he was a Gentile by birth, and also perhaps a heathen in religion, that he had this feeling of unworthiness, or was it a purely personal trait? If he was not only a Gentile but a Pagan, Christ's readiness to go to the house would stand in remarkable contrast to His conduct in the case of the Syro-Phœnician woman. But vide Lk. vii. 5.—εἰπέ λόγον, speak (and heal) with a word. A bare word just where they stand, he thinks, will suffice.—Ver. 9, καὶ γὰρ ἐγὼ: he argues from his own experience not with an air of self-importance, on the contrary making light of his position as a commander—ὑπὸ ἐξουσίαν, spoken in modesty. He means: I also, though a very humble person in the army, under the authority of more important officers, still have a command over a body of men who do implicitly as I bid them. Fritzsche rightly suggests that ἄνθρωπος ὑπὸ ἐξουσίαν does not express a single idea = “a man under authority”. He represents himself as a man with authority, though in a modest way. A comma might with advantage be placed after εἰμι. The centurion thinks Jesus can order about disease as he orders his soldiers—say to fever, palsy, leprosy, go, and it will go. His soldiers go, his slaves do (Carr, C. G. T.).

Ver. 10. In ver. 13 we are told that Jesus did not disappoint the centurion's expectation. But the interest of the cure is eclipsed for the evangelist by the interest of the Healer's admiration, certainly a remarkable instance of a noteworthy characteristic of Jesus: His delight in signal manifestations of faith. Faith, His great watchword, as it was St. Paul's. This value set on faith was not a mere idiosyncrasy, but the result of insight into its nobleness and spiritual virtue.—καὶ εἶπε: Christ did not conceal His admiration; or His sadness when He reflected that such faith as this Gentile had shown was a rare thing in Israel.—Ἀμήν: He speaks solemnly, not without emotion.—παρ' οὐδενὶ: this is more significant than the reading of T. R., assimilated to Lk. vii. 9. The οὐδὲ implies that Israel was the home of faith, and conveys the meaning not even there. But παρ' οὐδενὶ means not even in a single instance, and implies that faith in notable degree is at a discount among the elect people. Such a sentiment at so early a period is noteworthy as showing how far Jesus was from cherishing extravagant hopes of setting up a theocratic kingdom of righteousness and godliness in Israel.

Vv. 11-12. This logion is given by Luke (xiii. 28-29) in a different connection, and it may not be in its historical κ Ch. xiv. τοσαύτην πίστιν<sup>1</sup> εὔρον. 11. λέγω δὲ ὑμῖν, ὅτι πολλοὶ ἀπὸ ἀνα-19, parall. τολῶν καὶ δυσμῶν ἤξουσιν, καὶ ἀνακλιθήσονται μετὰ Ἀβραάμ καὶ Lk. xiii. 29 (parall. Ἰσαὰκ καὶ Ἰακώβ ἐν τῇ βασιλείᾳ τῶν οὐρανῶν· 12. οἱ δὲ υἱοὶ τῆς to this text). βασιλείας ἐκβληθήσονται εἰς τὸ σκότος τὸ ἐξώτερον· ἐκεῖ ἔσται 1 Ch. xxii. 13; xxv. 30 (same phrase). ἡ ὁ κλαυθμὸς καὶ ὁ βρυγμὸς τῶν ὀδόντων." 13. Καὶ εἶπεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς τῷ ἑκατοντάρχῳ, "Ὑπαγε, καὶ ὡς ἐπίστευσας γενηθήτω σοι."

 m Ch. xiii. 42, 50; xxv. 30 (same phrase). Καὶ ἰάθη ὁ παῖς αὐτοῦ<sup>2</sup> ἐν τῇ ὥρᾳ ἐκείνῃ.<sup>3</sup>
 n parall. 14. Καὶ ἐλθὼν ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν Πέτρου, εἶδε τὴν πενθερὰν John iv. 52. Acts xxviii. 8. αὐτοῦ βεβλημένην καὶ πυρέσσουσαν, 15. καὶ ἤψατο τῆς χειρὸς αὐτῆς, καὶ ἀφῆκεν αὐτὴν ὁ πυρετός· καὶ ἠγέρθη, καὶ διηκόνει

<sup>1</sup> Authorities are much divided between the reading οὐδε ἐν τῷ Ι. . . εὔρον (T. R.), which is found in ΝCΙΔΣ al. (Tisch.), and παρ οὐδενι τοσαυτην πιστιν ἐν τῷ Ι. εὔρον, found in B, old Latin verss., Syr. Cur., Egypt. verss., and several cursives (W.H.). The former has probably come in from Lk. vii. 9.

<sup>2</sup> NB omit καὶ. Vide below:

<sup>3</sup> NB omit αὐτοῦ, also superfluous.

<sup>4</sup> ἀπο τῆς ὥρας ἐκείνης in CΔΣ 33.

place here. But its import is in thorough harmony with the preceding reflection on the spiritual state of Israel. One who said the one thing was prepared to say the other. At whatever time said it would give offence. It is one of the heavy burdens of the prophet that he cannot be a mere patriot, or say complimentary things about his nation or his Church. ἀνακλιθήσονται: Jesus expresses Himself here and throughout this logion in the language of His time and people. The feast with the patriarchs, the outer darkness, the weeping and the gnashing of teeth (observe the article before σκότος, κλαυθμὸς, βρυγμὸς, implying that all are familiar ideas) are stock phrases. The imagery is Jewish, but the thought is anti-Jewish, universalistic, of perennial truth and value.

Ver. 13. ὕπαγε, etc.: compressed impassioned utterance, spoken under emotion = Go, as thou hast believed be it to thee; cure as thorough as thy faith. The καὶ before ὡς in T. R. is the addition of prosaic scribes. Men speaking under emotion discard expletives.)

Weizsäcker (Untersuchungen über die Evang. Gesch., p. 50) remarks on the felicitous juxtaposition of these two narratives relatively to one another and to the Sermon on Mount. "In the first Jesus has to do with a Jew, and demands of him observance of the law. In this respect the second serves as a companion piece, the subject of healing being a heathen; giving occasion for a word as to the position of heathens. The two combined are happily appended to a discourse in which Jesus states His attitude to the law, forming as complements of each other a commentary on the statement."

Vv. 14-15. Cure of a fever: Peter's mother-in-law (Mark i. 29-31; Luke iv. 38, 39). This happened much earlier, at the beginning of the Galilean ministry, the second miracle-history in Mark and Luke. Mark at this point becomes Matthew's guide, though he does not follow implicitly. Each evangelist has characteristic features, the story of the second being the original.—Ver. 14. ἐλθὼν, coming from the synagogue on a Sabbath day (Mark i. 29) with fellow-worshippers not here named. The story here loses its flesh and blood, and is cut down to the essential fact.—εἰς τ. ο. Πέτρου: Peter has a house and is married, and already he receives his disciple name (Simon in Mark).—πενθερὰν. It is Peter's mother-in-law that is ill.—βεβλημένην καὶ πυρέσσουσαν, lying in bed, fevered. Had she taken ill since they left to attend worship, with the suddenness of feverish attacks in a tropical climate? βεβλημένην is against this, as it naturally suggests an illness of some duration; but on the other hand, if she had been ill for some time, why should they need to tell Jesus after coming back from the synagogue? (Mark i. 30). πυρέσσ. does not necessarily αὐτοῖς.<sup>1</sup> 16. ὉΨίας δὲ γενομένης προσήνεγκαν αὐτῷ δαμονιζο-<sup>o same phrase.</sup>

 μένους πολλοὺς· καὶ ἐξέβαλε τὰ πνεύματα λόγῳ, καὶ πάντας τοὺς κακῶς ἔχοντας ἐθεράπευσεν· 17. ὅπως πληρωθῆ τὸ ῥηθὲν διὰ Ἡσαίου τοῦ προφήτου, λέγοντος, Ἀὐτὸς τὰς ἄσθενείας ἡμῶν ἔλαβε, καὶ τὰς νόσους ἐβάστασεν.<sup>Ch. xiv. 15, 23; xxvii. 57, and in Mk. and John. Lk. v. 15; viii. 2. Acts xviii. 9. 1 Tim. v. 23. q phr. freq. Mk. iv. 35 al.)</sup>

18. Ἴδὼν δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς πολλοὺς ὄχλους<sup>2</sup> περὶ αὐτόν, ἐκέλευσεν ἀπελθεῖν εἰς τὸ πέραν. 19. καὶ προσελθὼν εἰς γραμματεῦς εἶπεν in Mt. and Mk. (ver. 28, Ch. xiv. 22. Mk. iv. 35 al.)

<sup>1</sup> αὐτω in ΞBCS al. αυτοις (in LA) has come in from parall.

<sup>2</sup> B has οχλον; Ξ οχλους, which once introduced was enlarged into πολλους οχλους (Σ<sup>c</sup>CLΔΣ al.), not a usual expression in Mt.

imply a serious attack, but vide Luke iv. 38.—Ver. 15. ἤψατο. He touched her hand; here to cure, in Mark to raise her up.—ἠγέρθη, διηκόνει: she rose up at once and continued to serve at the meal; all present but Jesus only referred to here (αὐτῷ, plural in Mark, but inappropriate here). Not only the fever but the weakness it causes left her. "Ordinarily a long time is required for recovery, but then all things happened at once" (Chryst., Hom. xxvii.). Not a great miracle or interesting for anything said; but it happened at an early time and in the disciple circle; Peter the informant; and it showed Christ's sympathy (ver. 17), the main point for Mt.

Vv. 16-17. Events of that Sabbath evening (Mark i. 32-34; Luke iv. 40, 41). A general statement, which, after iv. 23 f., might have been dispensed with; but it is in the source (Mark) in the same context, and it gives our evangelist a welcome opportunity of quoting a prophetic text in reference to Christ's healing work. Ver. 16. ὉΨίας γενομένης: vague indication of time on any day, but especially a Sabbath day. There were two evenings, an early and a late (Ex. xxx. 8). Which of them was it; before or after sunset? Mark is more exact.—δαμον. πολλοὺς: why a crowd just then, and why especially demoniacs brought to be healed? For explanation we must go to Mark. The preaching of Jesus in the synagogue that Sabbath day, and the cure of a demoniac (Mark i. 21-28), had created a great sensation, and the result is a crowd gathered at the door of Peter's house at sunset, when the Sabbath ended, with their sick, especially with demoniacs.—Ver. 17. Prophetic citation, apposite, felicitous; setting Christ's healing ministry in a true light; giving prominence not to the thaumaturgic but to the sympathetic aspect; from the Hebrew original, the Sept. making the text (Is. liii. 4) refer to sin. The Hebrew refers to sicknesses and pains. It is useless to discuss the precise meaning of ἔλαβεν and ἐβάστασεν; took and bore, or took and bore away; subjective or objective? The evangelist would note, not merely that Jesus actually did remove diseases, but that He was minded to do so: such was His bent.

Vv. 18-34. Excursion to the eastern shore with its incidents (Mark iv. 35—v. 20; Luke viii. 22-39). These narratives make a large leap forward in the history. As our evangelist is giving a collection of healing incidents, the introduction of vv. 18-22, disciple interviews, and even of vv. 23-27, a nature miracle, needs an explanation. The readiest is that he found these associated with the Gadara incident, his main concern, in his source or sources, the whole group in the Apostolic Document (so Weiss). We must not assume a close connection between § 18-22 and the excursion to the eastern shore. Luke gives the meeting with the scribe, etc., a different setting. Possibly neither is right. The scribe incident may belong to the excursion to the north (xv. 21).

Ver. 18. Ἴδὼν . . . περὶ αὐτόν. The evangelist makes a desire to escape from the crowd the motive of the journey. This desire is still more apparent in Mark, but the crowd and the time are different. The multitude from which Jesus escapes, in Mark's narrative, is that gathered on the shore to hear the parable-discourse from a boat on the lake.—ἐκέλευσεν ἀπελθεῖν. Grotius thinks this elliptical for: ἐκέλευσε πάντα ἐτοιμάσαι εἰς τὸ ἀπ. Beza renders: indixit professionem = He ordered departure. τοὺς μαθητάς is understood, not men-

- † Lk. ix. 58; αὐτῷ, “Διδάσκαλε, ἀκολουθήσω σοι, ὅπου εἶν ἀπέρχη.” 20. Καὶ
xiii. 32.
 ‡ Lk. ix. 58. λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Αἱ ἄλῳπεκες ἠφωλεοὺς ἔχουσι, καὶ τὰ † Lk. ix. 58.
 † Ch. xix. 8. πετεινὰ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ κατασκηνώσεις· ὁ δὲ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου οὐκ
Lk. viii.
32 (with ἔχει, ποῦ τὴν κεφαλὴν κλίη.” 21. Ἔτερος δὲ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ<sup>1</sup> inf.).
1
 † Cor. xvi. εἶπεν αὐτῷ, “Κύριε, ἐπίτρεψόν μοι πρῶτον ἀπελθεῖν καὶ ἰθάψαι τὸν
7. Heb. vi.
3 (absol.). πατέρα μου.” 22. Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς<sup>2</sup> εἶπεν<sup>3</sup> αὐτῷ, “Ἀκολουθε μοι, † Ch. xiv.
12. Lk. ix. 59; xvi. 22.

<sup>1</sup> NB omit αὐτου, which here as often elsewhere occurs in T. R., where it is not required.

<sup>2</sup> On the authority of N, Tisch. omits ο Ἰησοῦς found in BCLΔ al.

<sup>3</sup> λέγει in NBC 33.

tioned because they alone could be meant.—Ver. 19, εἷς, either “one, a scribe” (Weiss and very decidedly Meyer, who says that εἷς never in N. T. = τις), or “a certain scribe,” indefinite reference, so Fritzsche, falling back on Suicer, I., p. 1037, and more recently Bleek and others. Vide Winer, § xviii. 9, who defends the use of εἷς for τις as a feature of later Greek.—γραμματεὺς, a scribe even one of that most unimpressionable class, in spirit and tendency utterly opposed to the ways of Jesus. A Saul among the prophets. He has actually become warmed up to something like enthusiasm. A striking tribute to the magnetic influence of Jesus.—ἀκολουθήσω: already more or less of a disciple—perhaps he had been present during the teaching on the hill or at the encounter between Jesus and the scribes in se washing (xv. 1 f.), and been filled with admiration for His wisdom, moral earnestness and courage; and this is the result. Quite honestly meant, but.—Ver. 20, λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ I. Jesus distrusted the class, and the man, who might be better than the average, still he was a scribe. Christ’s feeling was not an unreasoning or invincible prejudice, but a strong suspicion and aversion justified by insight and experience. Therefore He purposely paints the prospect in sombre colours to prevent a connection which could come to no good.—αἱ ἄλῳπεκες, etc.: a notable saying; one of the outstanding logia of Jesus, in style and spirit characteristic; not querulous, as if lamenting His lot, but highly coloured to repel an undesirable follower. Foxes have holes, and birds resting places, roosts (not nests, which are used only for breeding), but—ὁ δὲ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου: a remarkable designation occurring here for the first time. It means much for the Speaker, who has chosen it deliberately, in connection with private reflections, at whose nature we can only guess by study of the many occasions on which the name is used. Here it seems to mean the man simpliciter (son of man = man in Hebrew or Syriac), the unprivileged Man: not only no exception to the rule of ordinary human experience in the way of being better off, but rather an exception in the way of being worse off; for the rule is, that all living creatures, even beasts, and still more men, have their abodes, however humble. If it be Messianic, it is in a hidden enigmatical way. The whole speech is studiously enigmatical, and calculated to chill the scribe’s enthusiasm. Was Jesus speaking in parables here, and hinting at something beyond the literal privations of His life as a wanderer with no fixed home? The scribe had his spiritual home in Rabbinical traditions, and would not be at ease in the company of One who had broken with them. Jesus had no place where He could lay His head in the religion of His time (vide my With Open Face, chap. ix.).

Vv. 21-22. Another disciple. Ἔτερος, another, not only numerically (ἄλλος), but in type. The first was enthusiastic; this one is hesitating, and needs to be urged; a better, more reliable man, though contrasting with his neighbour unfavourably.—τῶν μαθητῶν: the expression seems to imply that the scribe was, or, in spite of the repellent word of Jesus, had become, a regular disciple. That is possible. If the scribe insisted, Jesus might suffer him to become a disciple, as He did Judas, whom doubtless He instinctively saw through from the beginning. But not likely. The inference may be avoided by rendering with Bleek: “another, one of the disciples”.—

καὶ ἄφες τοὺς νεκροὺς θάψαι τοὺς ἑαυτῶν νεκρούς." 23. Καὶ <sup>w</sup> here only
 ἐμβάντι αὐτῷ εἰς τὸ <sup>1</sup> πλοῖον, ἠκολούθησαν αὐτῷ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ. <sup>=tempest.</sup> 24. καὶ ἰδοῦ, <sup>v</sup> σεισμὸς μέγας ἐγένετο ἐν τῇ θαλάσῃ, ὥστε τὸ <sup>Ch. xxiv.</sup> πλοῖον <sup>x</sup> καλύπτεσθαι ὑπὸ τῶν κυμάτων· αὐτὸς δὲ ἐκάθευδε. 25. <sup>7; xxvii.</sup>
 καὶ προσελθόντες οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ <sup>54 al.</sup> ἤγειραν αὐτόν, λέγοντες, <sup>(earth-</sup>
<sup>x</sup> <sup>Lk. viii.</sup> <sup>16 (τί τιμι).</sup> <sup>Ch. x. 26.</sup>

<sup>2</sup> Cor. iv. 3 (hide from knowledge).

<sup>1</sup> το omitted in  $\aleph$ <sup>b</sup>BC 33.

<sup>2</sup> οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ wanting in  $\aleph$ B; added for clearness, but not needed.

ἐπίτρεψόν μοι: he wished, before setting out from home to enter on the career of discipleship, to attend to an urgent domestic duty; in fact to bury his father. In that climate burial had to take place on the day of death. Permission would have involved very little delay of the voyage, unless, with Chrysostom, we include under θάψαι all that goes along with death and burial, arranging family affairs, distribution of inheritance, etc. There would not probably be much trouble of that sort in the case of one belonging to the Jesus-circle.—Ver. 22. Ἀκολουθεῖ μοι: the reply is a stern refusal, and the reason apparently hard and unfeeling—ἄφες τοὺς νεκροὺς . . . νεκρούς: word for word the same in Luke (ix. 60), an unforgettable, mystic, hard saying. The dead must be taken in two senses = let the spiritually dead, not yet alive to the claims of the kingdom, bury the naturally dead. Fritzsche objects, and finds in the saying the paradox: "let the dead bury each other the best way they can," which, as Weiss says, is not a paradox, but nonsense. Another eccentric idea of some commentators is that the first νεκροὺς refers to the vespillones, the corpse-bearers who carried out the bodies of the poor at night, in Hebrew phrase, the men of the dead. Take it as we will, it seems a hard, heartless saying, difficult to reconcile with Christ's denunciation of the Corban casuistry, by which humanity and filial piety were sacrificed on the altar of religion (Matt. xv. 3-6). But, doubtless, Jesus knew to whom He was speaking. The saying can be understood and justified; but it can also very easily be misunderstood and abused, and woe to the man who does so. From these two examples we see that Jesus had a startling way of speaking to disciples, which would create reflection, and also give rise to remark. The disciple-logia are original, severe, fitted to impress, sift and confirm.

Vv. 23-27. Storm on the lake (Mk.

iv. 35-41, Lk. viii. 22-25). Ver. 23. ἐμβάντι αὐτῷ might be called a dative absolute; if taken as dative after ἠκολούθησαν, the αὐτῷ after this verb is superfluous. This short sentence is overcharged with pronouns (αὐτοῦ after μαθηταὶ).—τὸ πλοῖον (τὸ omitted in Lk.), the ship in readiness in accordance with previous instructions (ver. 18). Ver. 24, ἰδοῦ indicates sudden oncome.—σεισμὸς ἐν τ. θ., literally an earthquake of the sea, the waters stirred to their depths by the winds referred to in vv. 26, 27; λαίλαψ in Mark and Luke = hurricane.—ὥστε, here with infinitive, used also with finite moods (e.g., Gal. ii. 13). In the one case ὥστε indicates aim or tendency, in the other it asserts actual result (vide Goodwin, p. 221, also Baumlein, Schulgrammatik, §§ 593, 594). Klotz, Devar., ii. p. 772, gives as the equivalent of ὥστε, with infinitive, ita ut; with indicative, itaque or quare).—καλύπτεσθαι, was covered, hidden, the waves rising high above the boat, breaking on it, and gradually filling it with water (cf. Mark and Luke).—αὐτὸς δὲ ἐκάθευδε: dramatic contrast = but He was sleeping (imperfect), the storm notwithstanding. Like a general in time of war Jesus slept when He could. He had fallen asleep before the storm came on, probably shortly after they had started (Lk. viii. 23, πλεόντων αὐτῶν ἀφύπνωσεν: while they sailed He went off to sleep), soothed by the gliding motion. It was the sleep of one worn by an intense life, involving constant strain on body and mind. The mental tension is apparent in the words spoken to the two disciples (vv. 20-22). Words like these are not spoken in cold blood, or without waste of nervous power. Richard Baxter describes Cromwell as "of such vivacity, hilarity, and alacrity as another man hath when he hath drunken a cup too much" (Reliquiae Baxt.). "Drunken, but not with wine," with a great epoch-making enthusiasm. The storm did not wake the sleeper. A tempest, the sublime

- Mk. iv. 40. "Κύριε, σῶσον ἡμᾶς,<sup>1</sup> ἀπολλύμεθα." 26. Καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς, "Τί Rev. xxi. 9. ὄδειλοί ἐστε, ὀλιγόπιστοι;" Τότε ἐγερθεῖς <sup>2</sup>ἐπέτιμήσε τοῖς here and ἀνέμοις καὶ τῇ θαλάσῃ, καὶ ἐγένετο <sup>a</sup>γαλῆνῃ μεγάλῃ. 27. οἱ δὲ parall. of the wind and sea (Ps. cv. 9). ἄνθρωποι ἐθαύμασαν, λέγοντες, "<sup>b</sup>Ποταπὸς ἐστὶν οὗτος, ὅτι καὶ οἱ here and ἀνέμοι καὶ ἡ θάλασσα ὑπακούουσιν αὐτῷ;"<sup>2</sup>
 parall.
 b Mk. xiii. 1. Lk. i. 49; vii. 39. 1 John iii. 1.

<sup>1</sup> ημας, another addition for clearness, wanting in  $\aleph B$ ; more expressive without.

<sup>2</sup>  $\aleph B$  transpose ὑπακ, αὐτω (so Tisch., W.H.).

in nature, is a lullaby to a great spirit.

The Fathers viewed the sleep and the storm theologically, both arranged for beforehand, to give time for cowardice to show itself (Chrys., Hom. xxviii.), to let the disciples know their weakness and to accustom them to trials (Theophyl.). A docetic Christ, an unreal man, a theatrical affair!—Ver. 25. προσελθόντες: one of our evangelist's favourite words.—ἤγειραν: they would not have waked Him if they could have helped it. They were genuinely terrified, though experienced sailors accustomed to rough weather.—Κύριε, σῶσον . . . ἀπολλύμεθα: laconic speech, verbs unconnected, utterance of fear-stricken men. Luke's ἐπιστάτα, ἐπιστάτα is equally descriptive. Who could tell exactly what they said? All three evangelists report differently.—Ver. 26, δειλοί, ὀλιγόπιστοι, He chides them first, then the winds, the chiding meant to calm fear. Cowards, men of little faith! harsh in tone but kindly meant; expressive really of personal fearlessness, to gain ascendancy over panic-stricken spirits (cf. Luke).—τότε ἐγερθεῖς: He had uttered the previous words as He lay, then with a sudden impulse He rose and spoke imperial words to the elements: animos discipulorum prius, deinde mare composuit (Bengel).—ἀνέμοις, θαλάσῃ: He rebuked both. It would have been enough to rebuke the winds which caused the commotion in the water. But the speech was impassioned and poetic, not scientific.—γαλῆνῃ μεγάλῃ: antithetic to σεισμός μέγας, ver. 24.—Ver. 27, οἱ ἄνθρωποι: who? Naturally one would say the disciples with Jesus in the boat, called men to suit the tragic situation. But many think others are referred to, men unacquainted with Jesus: "quibus nondum innotuerat Christus" (Calvin); either with the disciples in the boat, and referred to alone (Jerome, Meyer) or jointly (De Wette, Bleek), or who afterwards heard the story (Hilar y, Euthy., Fritzsche: "homines, quoties hujus portenti nuntium acceperant," and Weiss). Holtzmann (H. C.) says they might be the men in the other ships mentioned in Mk. iv. 36, but in reality the expression may simply point to the contrast between the disciples as men and the divine power displayed.—ποταπὸς . . . οὗτος, what manner of person? The more classic form is ποδαπὸς = from what land? where born? possibly from ποῦ and ἄπο, with a euphonic  $\delta$  (Passow). ποταπὸς, in later use, = of what sort? vide Lobeck, Phryn., p. 56.—This story of the triple tradition is a genuine reminiscence of disciple life. There was a storm, Jesus slept, the disciples awoke Him in terror. He rebuked the winds and waves, and they forthwith subsided. The only escape of naturalism from a miracle of power or Providence (Weiss, Leben Jesu) is to deny the causal sequence between Christ's word and the ensuing calm and suggest coincidence. The storm sudden in its rise, equally sudden in its lull.

Vv. 28-34. The demoniacs of Gadara (Mk. v. 1-20, Lk. viii. 26-39). This narrative raises puzzling questions of all sorts, among them a geographical or topological one, as to the scene of the occurrence. The variations in the readings in the three synoptical gospels reflect the perplexities of the scribes. The place in these readings bears three distinct names. It is called the territory of the Gadarenes, the Gerasenes, and the Gergesenes. The reading in Mk. v. 1 in B, and adopted by W.H., is Γερασινῶν, and, since the discovery by Thomson (Land and Book, ii. 374) of a place called Gersa or Kersa, near the eastern shore of the lake, there has been a growing consensus of opinion in favour of Gerasa (not to be confounded with Gerasa in Gilead, twenty miles east of the Jordan) as the true name of the scene of the story. A place near the sea seems to be demanded by the circumstances, and Gadara on the Hieromax

28. Καὶ ἐλθόντι αὐτῶ<sup>1</sup> εἰς τὸ πέραν εἰς τὴν χώραν τῶν Γεργεσηῶν,<sup>2</sup> c Ch. xxviii
 ὅπληθησαν αὐτῶ δύο δαιμονιζόμενοι ἐκ τῶν μνημείων ἐξερχόμενοι 9. Lk. viii ἄχαλεποὶ λίαν, ὥστε μὴ ἰσχύειν τινὰ παρελθεῖν διὰ τῆς ὁδοῦ ἐκεῖνης · 27; xiv.
 29. καὶ ἰδοῦ, ἔκραξαν, λέγοντες, “Τί ἡμῖν καὶ σοί, Ἰησοῦ,<sup>3</sup> υἱὲ τοῦ · 31 (in a hostile sense).
 here and 2
 Tim. iii. 1
 Lk. iv. 34.

(Isa. xviii. 2). e Mk. i. 24.

<sup>1</sup> Dat. again by way of grammatical correction for the gen. abs. found in  $\aleph^b$ BC and adopted by Tisch., W.H., etc.

<sup>2</sup> So in  $\aleph^c$ C<sup>3</sup>L al., Memph. vers., Origen. Γαδαρηῶν in BC<sup>3</sup>ΜΔΣ al., adopted by Tisch., Treg., W.H., Weiss. Vide below.

<sup>3</sup> Ἰησοῦ is wanting in  $\aleph$ BCL. Comes in from Mk. Modern editors omit.

was too far distant. The true reading in Matthew (ver. 28) nevertheless is Γαδαρηῶν. He probably follows Mark as his guide, but the village Gerasa being obscure and Gadara well known, he prefers to define the locality by a general reference to the latter. The name Gergesa was a suggestion of Origen's made incidentally in his Commentary on John, in connection with the place named in chap. i. 28, Bethabara or Bethany, to illustrate the confusion in the gospel in connection with names. His words are: Γέργεςα, ἀφ' ἧς οἱ Γεργεσαῖοι, πόλις ἀρχαία περὶ τὴν νῦν καλουμένην Τιβεριάδα λίμνην, περὶ ἣν κρημνὸς παρακείμενος τῇ λίμνῃ, ἀφ' οὗ δέικνυται τοὺς χοίρους ὑπὸ τῶν δαιμόνων καταβελῆσθαι (in Ev. Ioan., T. vi. c. 24). Prof. G. A. Smith, Historical Geography, p. 459, note, pronounces Gerasa "impossible". But he means Gerasa in Decapolis, thirty-six miles away. He accepts Khersa, which he identifies with Gergesa, as the scene of the incident, stating that it is the only place on the east coast where the steep hills come down to the shore.

Ver. 28. Δύο, two, in Mark and Luke one. According to some, e.g., Holtzmann (H. C.), the two includes the case reported in Mk. i. 23-27, Lk. iv. 31-37, omitted by Matthew. Weiss's hypothesis is that the two is an inference from the plurality of demons spoken of in his source (vide Matt. Evan., p. 239). The harmonists disposed of the difficulty by the remark that there might be two, though only one is spoken of in the other accounts, perhaps because he was the more violent of the two (so Augustine and Calvin).—ἐκ τῶν μνημείων: the precipitous hills on the eastern shore are a limestone formation full of caves, which were doubtless used for burying the dead. There the demoniacs made their congenial home.—χαλεποὶ λίαν, fierce exceedingly; λίαν, one of our evangelist's favourite words. These demoniacs were what one would call dangerous madmen; that, whatever more; no light matter to cure them, say by "moral therapeutics".—ὥστε μὴ ἰσχύειν: again ὥστε with infinitive (with μὴ for negative). The point is not that nobody passed that way, but that the presence of the madmen tended to make it a place to be shunned as dangerous. Nobody cared to go near them. Christ came near their lair by accident, but He would not have been scared though He had known of their presence.

Ver. 29. ἰδοῦ ἔκραξαν: sudden, startling, unearthly cry, fitted to shock weak nerves. But not the cry of men about to make an assault. The madmen, whom all feared and shunned, were subdued by the aspect of the stranger who had arrived in the neighbourhood. To be taken as a fact, however strange and mysterious, partly explained by the fact that Jesus was not afraid of them any more than He had been of the storm. They felt His power in the very look of His eye. τί ἡμῖν καὶ σοί: an appropriate speech even in the mouth of one demoniac, for he speaks in the name of the legion of devils (Mk. v. 9) by which he conceives himself possessed. Identifying himself with the demons, he shrinks from the new comer with an instinctive feeling that He is a foe.—υἱὲ τοῦ θεοῦ: ὁ ἅγιος τ. θ. in the Capernaum synagogue case; strange, almost incredible divination. Yet "insanity is much nearer the kingdom of God than worldly-mindedness." There was, doubtless, something in the whole aspect and manner of Jesus which was fitted to produce almost instantaneously a deep, spiritual impression to which child-like, simple, ingenuous souls like the Galilean fishermen, sinful, yet honest-hearted men like those who met at Matthew's feast, (same phr. 1 Cor. iv. 5 (Sir. xxx. 24). z here and parall. h Mk. v. 14. Lk. viii. 32; xv. 15. John xxi. 15, 17. i parall. and Acts xix. 29 (Acts vii. 57, ἐπί τινα). j parall.

Θεοῦ; ἤλθες ὧδε ἐπὶ τὸ ἐκαίρου βασιλείαι ἡμᾶς;” 30. Ἦν δὲ μακρὰν ἀπ’ αὐτῶν ἡ ἀγγελία χοίρων πολλῶν ἡ βοσκομένη. 31. οἱ δὲ δαίμονες παρεκάλουν αὐτόν, λέγοντες, “Εἰ ἐκβάλλεις ἡμᾶς, ἐπίτρεψον ἡμῖν ἀπελθεῖν<sup>1</sup> εἰς τὴν ἀγέλην τῶν χοίρων.” 32. Καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Ὑπάγετε.” Οἱ δὲ ἐξελθόντες ἀπῆλθον εἰς τὴν ἀγέλην τῶν χοίρων<sup>2</sup>. καὶ ἰδοῦ, ὤρμησε πᾶσα ἡ ἀγέλη τῶν χοίρων<sup>3</sup> κατὰ τοῦ κρημνοῦ εἰς τὴν θάλασσαν, καὶ ἀπέθανον ἐν τοῖς ὕδασι.

<sup>1</sup> For the reading ἐπίτρεψον ἡμῖν ἀπελθεῖν in T. R.  $\aleph$ B have ἀποστειλον; adopted by modern editors. The T. R. conforms to Lk. (viii. 32).

<sup>2</sup> For εἰς τὴν ἀγέλην τῶν χοίρων  $\aleph$ BC have τοὺς χοίρους (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup>  $\aleph$ BC $\Delta$  $\Sigma$  omit τῶν χοίρων.

readily surrendered themselves. Men with shattered reason also felt the spell, while the wise and the strong-minded too often used their intellect, under the bias of passion or prejudice, to resist the force of truth. In this way we may account for the prompt recognition of Jesus by the Gadarene demoniac. All that is necessary to explain it is the Messianic hope prevalent in Gadara as elsewhere, and the sight of Jesus acting on an impressionable spirit" (Bruce, The Miraculous Element in the Gospels p. 187).—πρὸ καιροῦ: before the appointed time of judgment. The article wanting here before κ. as in other phrases in N. T., e.g., ἐν καιρῷ, Matt. xxiv. 45.—βασιλείαι, to torment with pain in Hades, described as a place of torment in Lk. xvi. 28, cf. ver. 23.

Ver. 30. μακρὰν: the Vulgate renders non longe, as if οὐ had stood in the Greek before μακ. But there are no variants here. Mark and Luke have ἐκεῖ, which gives rise to an apparent discrepancy. Only apparent, many contend, because both expressions are relative and elastic: at a distance, yet within view; there, in that neighbourhood, but not quite at hand. Elsner refers to Lk. xv. 20: μακρὰν, "et tamen in conspectu, ut, Luc. xv. 20: "Ἐτι δὲ αὐτοῦ μακρὰν ἔχοντος, εἶδεν αὐτὸν ὁ πατήρ". On κεῖ he remarks: "docet in ea regione et vicinia fuisse, nec distantiam describit". Weiss against Meyer denies the relativity of μακρὰν, and takes it as meaning "a long way off," while visible.—βοσκομένη: far removed from ἦν, and not to be joined with it as if the feeding were the main point, and not rather the existence of the herd there. The ill attested reading βοσκομένων brings out the meaning better: a herd of swine which were feeding in the hill pastures. The swine, doubtless, belonged to Gentiles, who abounded in Peræa.—Ver. 31. οἱ δαίμονες: unusual designation, commonly δαιμόνια.—παρεκάλουν: the request was made by the possessed in the name of the demons.—ἀπόστειλον: the reading of the T. R. (ἐπίτρεψον ἀπελθεῖν) taken from Luke expresses, in a milder form, Christ's share of responsibility in a transaction of supposed doubtful character. The demoniac would have no scruple on that score. His request was: if you are to cast us out, send us not to hell, but into the swine.—Ver. 32. ὑπάγετε: Christ's laconic reply, usually taken to mean: go into the swine, but not necessarily meaning more than "be-gone". So Weiss, who holds that Jesus had no intention of expressing acquiescence in the demoniac's request. (Matt. Evan. and Weiss-Meyer, "Hinweg mit euch").—οἱ δὲ . . . χοίρους: the entrance of the demons into the swine could not, of course, be a matter of observation, but only of inference from what followed.—ἰδοῦ, introducing a sudden, startling event—ὤρμησεν πᾶσα ἡ ἀγέλη—the mad downrush of the herd over the precipice into the lake. Assuming the full responsibility of Jesus for the catastrophe, expositors have busied themselves in inventing apologies. Euthy. gives four reasons for the transaction, the fourth being that only thereby could it be conclusively shown that the devils had left the demoniacs. Rosenmüller suggests that two men are worth more than ever so many swine. The lowest depth of bathos in this line was touched by Wetstein when he suggested that, by cutting up the drowned swine, salting the meat or making smoke-dried hams (fumosas pernas), and selling them to Gen-

33. οἱ δὲ βόσκοντες ἔφυγον, καὶ ἀπελθόντες εἰς τὴν πόλιν ἀπήγγειλαν πάντα, καὶ τὰ τῶν δαιμονιζομένων. 34. καὶ ἰδοὺ, πᾶσα ἡ πόλις ἐξῆλθεν εἰς συνάντησιν<sup>1</sup> τῷ<sup>2</sup> Ἰησοῦ· καὶ ἰδόντες αὐτόν, παρεκάλεσαν<sup>k</sup> ὅπως<sup>3</sup> μεταβῆ ἀπὸ τῶν ὀρίων αὐτῶν.

<sup>k</sup> Ch. xi. 1, xii. 9; xv. 29 (with ἐκεῖθεν).

<sup>1</sup> For συνάντησιν (CLΔΣ) ἸB 1, 33, have ὑπάντησιν (Tisch., W.H.), a preferable word. Vide below.

<sup>2</sup> For τῷ (B) ἸC have του, adopted by Tisch. and put in margin by W.C.

<sup>3</sup> For ὅπως B has ἰνα.

tiles who did not object to eat suffocated animals, the owners would escape loss. But the learned commentator might be jesting, for he throws out the suggestion for the benefit of men whom he describes as neither Jews, Gentiles, nor Christians.

Vv. 33-34. The sequel. ἔφυγον: the swineherds fled. No wonder, in view of such a disaster. If the demoniacs, in the final paroxysm before return to sanity, had anything to do with bringing it about, the superstitious terror with which they were regarded would add to the panic.—ἀπήγγειλαν: they reported what had happened to their masters and to everybody they met in the town.—πάντα, what had befallen the swine.—καὶ τὰ τ. δαιμονιζομένων: they could not know the whole truth about the demoniacs. The reference must be to some visible connection between the behaviour of the madmen and the destruction of the herd. They told the story from their own point of view, not after interviewing Jesus and His company.—Ver. 34. πᾶσα ἡ πόλις: an exaggeration of course, cf. accounts in Mark and Luke.—εἰς ὑπάντησιν . . . ἰ., to a meeting with Jesus. The noun occurs again in Matt. xxv. 1, and John xii. 13; in Matt. xxv. 6 ὑπάντησιν is used instead of it. εἰς ἅπαν. occurs in Sept. for תַּרְחֻלָּה. The two nouns are little used in Greek authors. The change from one to the other in Matt. xxv. 1, 6 implies a slight difference in meaning; ὑπάντησις = accidental chance, or stealthy meeting; ἀπάντησις = an open designed meeting. The stealthy character of the meeting implied in ὑπό is well illustrated in ὑπήντησαν, ver. 28, of this narrative. The statement that the whole city went out to meet Jesus implies a report laying the blame of the occurrence on Him. But Matthew's account is very summary, and must be supplemented by the statements in Mark and Luke, from which it appears that some came from the town to inquire into the matter, "to see what had happened," and that in the course of their inquiries they met Jesus and learned what they had not known before, the change that had come over the demoniac. It was on their giving in their report to their fellow-townsmen, connecting the cure with the catastrophe, that the action reported in ver. 34 took place.—Ver. 34. παρεκάλεσαν: same word as in ver. 31 in reference to the demoniacs. They did not order or drive Him out. They besought in terms respectful and even subdued. They were afraid of this strange man, who could do such wonderful things; and, with all due respect, they would rather He would withdraw from their neighbourhood.

This would be an oft-told tale, in which different versions were sure to arise, wherein fact and explanation of fact would get mixed up together. The very variations in the synoptical accounts witness to its substantial historicity. The apologist's task is easy here, as distinct from that of the harmonist, which is difficult. The essential outline of the story is this. A demoniac, alias a madman, comes from the tombs in the limestone caves to meet Jesus, exhibiting in behaviour and conversation a double consciousness. Asked his name, he calls himself Legion. In the name of the "Legion" he begs that the demons may enter the swine. Jesus orders the demons to leave their victim. Shortly after a herd of swine feeding on the hills rushed down the steep into the sea and were drowned. Tradition connected the rush of the swine with the demons leaving their former victim and entering into them. But, as already remarked, the causal connection could not be a matter of observation but only of inference. The rush might, as Weiss suggests, be caused by the man, in his final paroxysm, chasing them. But that also is matter of conjecture. The

▲ Ch. xiv. IX. 1. ΚΑΙ ἐμβὰς εἰς τὸ<sup>1</sup> πλοῖον *διεπέρασε καὶ ἦλθεν εἰς τὴν
 34. Mk. ἴδιαν πόλιν. 2. καὶ ἰδοῦ, προσέφερον αὐτῷ παραλυτικὸν ἐπὶ κλίνης
 v. 21; vi. βεβλημένον· καὶ ἰδὼν ὁ Ἰησοῦς τὴν πίστιν αὐτῶν εἶπε τῷ παρα-53. Lk. κνί. 26. λυτικῷ, “Θάρσει, τέκνον, ἀφέωνται<sup>2</sup> σοι αἱ ἁμαρτίαι σου.”<sup>3</sup>
 b Lk. ii. (in various MSS.)
 c again ver. 22. Ch. xiv. 27 (plur., to the 12). Mk. x. 49.

<sup>1</sup> το omitted by  $\aleph$ BLX.

<sup>2</sup>  $\aleph$ B have the form ἀφιενται (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> The reading ἀφείωνται σοι αἱ ἁμ. σου in T. R. is from Lk. (v. 20).  $\aleph$ B have σου αἱ ἁμαρ. D has σοι αἱ ἁμ.

real cause of the catastrophe is a mystery. Rosenmüller suggests that at a hot season of the year one in a herd of swine might undergo a morbid seizure, begin to run wildly about, and be followed sequaciously by the whole flock. He mentions an occurrence of the kind at Erfurt, recent when he wrote. Lutteroth, no rationalist, suggests “vertigo,” permitted by Jesus to befall the swine, that the demoniac might have in their behaviour a sensible sign of deliverance, and so be rid of his fixed idea (vide his Essai D’Interp., 3<sup>me</sup> Partie, p. 27, note). On the nature of demoniacal possession, vide my Miraculous Element in the Gospels, pp. 172-190; vide also notes on Mark.

CHAPTER IX. THE HEALING MINISTRY CONTINUED. Vv. 1-8. The palsied man (Mark ii. 1-12; Luke v. 17-26). Ver. 1. ἐμβὰς: Jesus complied with the request of the men of Gerasa, who had intimated so plainly that they did not want any more of His company. Whatever His purpose in crossing over to the eastern shore may have been, it was frustrated by an event which in some respects was an unexpected disaster. Was it rest only or a new sphere of work He was seeking there? Vide notes on Mark.—εἰς τ. ἴδιαν π.: entering the boat which had been moored to the shore, Jesus returned with His disciples to His own city, to distinguish it from Gerasa, the city that shut its gates against Him; so named here only. When precisely the following incident happened cannot be ascertained. Luke’s indication of time is the vaguest possible; “on one of the days”. Matthew and Mark give it in different sequence, but their narratives have this in common, that they make the incident occur on arrival in Capernaum after an excursion; in either case the first mentioned, though not the same in both. Vide notes on Mark.

Ver. 2. καὶ ἰδοῦ: usual formula for introducing an important incident.—προσέφερον, the imperfect, implying a process, the details of which, extremely interesting, the evangelist does not give. By comparison with Mark and Luke the narrative is meagre, and defective even for the purpose of bringing out the features to which the evangelist attaches importance, e.g., the value set by Jesus on the faith evinced. His eye is fixed on the one outstanding novel feature, the word of Jesus in ver. 6. In view of it he is careful, while omitting much, to mention that the invalid in this instance was brought to Jesus, ἐπὶ κλίνης βεβλημένον, lying on a couch. To the same cause also it is due that a second case of paralysis cured finds a place in this collection, though the two cases have different features: in the one physical torments, in the other mental depression.—πίστιν αὐτῶν, the faith of the men who had brought the sick man to Him. The common assumption that the sick man is included in the αὐτῶν is based on dogmatic grounds.—θάρσει, τέκνον: with swift sure diagnosis Jesus sees in the man not faith but deep depression, associated probably with sad memories of misconduct, and uttering first a kindly hope-inspiring word, such as a physician might address to a patient: cheer up, child! He deals first with the disease of the soul.—ἀφείωνται: Jesus declares the forgiveness of his sins, not with the authority of an exceptional person, but with sympathy and insight, as the interpreter of God’s will and the law of the universe. That law is that past error need not be a doom; that we may take pardon for granted; forgive ourselves, and start anew. The law holds, Jesus believed, both in the physical and in the moral sphere. In combining pardon with healing of bodily disease in this case, He was virtually announcing a general law. “Who forgiveth all thine iniquities, who healeth all thy diseases,” Ps. ciii. 3.

3. Καὶ ἰδοῦ, τινὲς τῶν γραμματέων εἶπον ἐν ἑαυτοῖς, "Οὗτος ἄ βλασ-<sup>d</sup> φημει." 4. Καὶ ἰδὼν<sup>1</sup> ὁ Ἰησοῦς τὰς ἔνθυμήσεις αὐτῶν εἶπεν, "Ἰνατὶ ὑμεῖς<sup>2</sup> ἐνθυμεῖσθε πονηρὰ ἐν ταῖς καρδίαις ὑμῶν; 5. τί γάρ ἐστιν εὐκοπώτερον, εἰπεῖν, Ἀφένωνταί<sup>3</sup> σοι<sup>4</sup> αἱ ἀμαρτίαι· ἢ εἰπεῖν, Ἐγειραι<sup>5</sup> καὶ περιπάτει; 6. ἵνα δὲ εἰδῆτε, ὅτι ἐξουσίαν ἔχει ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς ἀφιέναι ἀμαρτίας," (τότε λέγει τῷ παραλυτικῷ,) "Ἐγερθεῖς<sup>6</sup> ἄρον σου τὴν κλίνην, καὶ ὕπαγε εἰς τὸν οἶκόν σου." 7. Καὶ ἐγερθεὶς ἀπήλθεν εἰς τὸν οἶκον αὐτοῦ.

<sup>d</sup> Ch. xxvi. 65. Mk. ii. 7 (W. H.) used absolutely. Ch. xii. 25. Heb. iv. 12. Ch. xxviii. 46. Lk. xiii. 7. I Cor. x. 29. Mk. ii. 9. Lk. v. 23 (with inf.). Mt. xix. 24. Lk. xvi. 17 (with acc. and inf.).

<sup>1</sup> For ἰδων (NCD, Tisch.) BM have εἰδως. The tendency of the scribes would be to use the same word as in ver. 2. W.H. has εἰδως in text but bracketed, ἰδων in margin.

<sup>2</sup> NBCD omit ὑμεῖς.

<sup>3</sup> ἀφιένται N<sup>c</sup>B.

<sup>4</sup> σου in NBCDL.

<sup>5</sup> εγειρε NBCDLX.

<sup>6</sup> εγειρε in B and D with καί; the more forcible word.

Ver. 3. τινὲς τ. γραμματέων: some scribes present on this occasion. Ominous fact duly introduced by ἰδοῦ; its significance still more distinctly recognised by Luke, who gives it prominent mention at the beginning of his narrative (ver. 17). Sure sign of the extent, depth, and quality of Christ's influence.—βλασφημει: of course; the prophet always is a scandalous, irreverent blasphemer from the conventional point of view. The scribes regarded forgiveness purely under the aspect of prerogative, and in self-defence Jesus must meet them on their own ground. His answer covers the whole case. There is more than prerogative in the matter; there is the right, duty, privilege, and power of every man to promote faith in pardon by hearty proclamation of the law of the moral world. This is dealt with first.—Ver. 4. ἐνθυμήσεις: Jesus intuitively read their thoughts as He read the mental state of the sick man.—ἵνα τί: elliptical for ἵνα τί γένηται understood = in order that what may happen, do you, etc. (vide Bäumlein, Schul. Gram., § 696, and Goodwin's Syn., § 331).—Ver. 5. εὐκοπώτερον (from εὖ and κόπος, whence εὐκοπος; in N.T. (Gospels) only the comparative neuter is found, as here). The question as to ability, δύναμις, is first disposed of; which is easier—εἰπεῖν: they are both alike easy to say; the vital matter is saying with effect. Saying here stands for doing. And to do the one thing was to do the other. To heal was to forgive. It is implied that it is easier to forgive than to make a palsied man strong. Christ means that the one is ordinary, the other extraordinary; the one is within the power of any man, the other belongs only to the exceptional man; there is no assumption in declaring pardon, there is pretension in saying "arise and walk".—Ver. 6. ἵνα δὲ εἰδῆτε: transition to the other aspect, that of ἐξουσία, the point raised by the scribes when they looked a charge of blasphemy.—ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀν., ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς: these two phrases point at supposed disabilities for forgiving. "Forgiveness takes place in heaven, and is the exclusive prerogative of God," was the thesis of the scribes. "It may be exercised even on earth, and by the Son of Man," is the counter thesis of Christ. Therefore "Son of Man" must be a title not of dignity but of humiliation. Here = one whom ye think lightly of; even He can forgive.—τότε λέγει. Jesus stops short in His speech to the scribes and turns to the sick man, saying: εγειρε, etc., also in ver. 6, intransitive. The reading εγειραι in T.R., ver. 6, is a correction of style, the use of the active intransitively being condemned by grammarians. Hence this various reading always occurs. (Vide Suidas, s.v., and Buttman, Gramm., p. 56).—τὴν κλίνην, a light piece of furniture, easily portable.—ὕπαγε: all three actions, arising, lifting, walking, conclusive evidence of restored power.—Ver.

h ver. 27 8. ἰδόντες δὲ οἱ ὄχλοι ἐθαύμασαν,<sup>1</sup> καὶ ἐδόξασαν τὸν Θεόν, τὸν δόντα (with ἐκεῖθεν). ἐξουσίαν τοιαύτην τοῖς ἀνθρώποις.
 i Cor. vii. 9. Καὶ <sup>h</sup> παράγων ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐκεῖθεν εἶδεν ἄνθρωπον καθήμενον ἐπι 31 (= πασῶν away). τὸ <sup>1</sup> τελώνιον, Ματθαῖον λεγόμενον, καὶ λέγει αὐτῷ, “Ἀκολουθεῖ
 i here and in parall. μοι.” Καὶ <sup>1</sup> ἀναστὰς ἠκολούθησεν <sup>2</sup> αὐτῷ. 10. Καὶ ἐγένετο αὐτοῦ
 j Mk. ii. 14. Lk. v. 28. <sup>k</sup> ἀνακειμένου <sup>3</sup> ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ, καὶ <sup>4</sup> ἰδοῦ, πολλοὶ τελώναι καὶ ἁμαρτωλοὶ (Hebrew idiom; cf. Num. xxii. 20). k Ch. xxii. 10; xxvi. 7, 20. Mk. xiv. 18. Lk. xxii. 27.

<sup>1</sup> ἐφοβήθησαν in  $\aleph$ B $\Delta$  (Tisch., W.H.) εθαύμασαν (C.I. $\Delta$  al.) gives a commonplace idea more to the taste of the scribes.

<sup>2</sup> ἠκολουθεῖ in  $\aleph$ D (Tisch.).

<sup>3</sup> ἀνακειμένου αὐτου in  $\aleph$ <sup>c</sup>C, as in text in most MSS.

<sup>4</sup> καὶ omitted in  $\aleph$ D.

7. Said, done; a convincing argumentum ad hominem. Who would dispute the right to forgive to one who could do that, or persist in the charge of blasphemy against Him? At least those who do will get little sympathy from the mass of spectators.—Ver. 8. ἰδόντες οἱ ὄχλοι. The people are free from the petty jealousies and pedantic theories of the professional class; broad facts settle the matter for them. They probably had no scruples about the forgiving, but if they, had the miracle would put an end to them: the manifest authority and power a witness of the non-apparent (ποιεῖται τὴν φανεράν [ἐξουσίαν] τεκμήριον τῆς ἀφανούς. Euthy.).—ἐφοβήθησαν, they feared; may point to a change of mind on the part of some who at first were influenced by the disapproving mood of the scribes. The solemn frown of those who pass for saints and wise men is a formidable thing, making many cowards. But now a new fear takes the place of the old, perhaps not without a touch of superstition.

Vv. 9-13. The publican feast (Mk. ii. 13-17; Lk. v. 27-32). The point of interest for the evangelist in this narrative is not the call of the publican disciple, but the feast which followed, a feast of publicans and “sinners” at which Jesus was present proclaiming by action what He formerly proclaimed by word: a sinful past no doom. The story, though not a miracle-history, finds a place here because it follows the last in Mark, in whose Gospel the incident of the palsied man forms the first of a group serving one aim—to show the beginnings of the conflict between Jesus and the religious leaders. The same remark applies to the next section.

Ver. 9. παράγων ἐκεῖθεν: passing along from the scene of the last incident, Jesus arrives at the custom-house of Capernaum (τελώνιον).—εἶδεν . . . Ματθαῖον λεγ.: there He saw a man named Matthew. (On the identity of Matthew with Levi in Mark and Luke, vide Mark.) Capernaum being near the boundary and on the caravan road between Egypt and Damascus, Matthew would be a busy man, but, doubtless, Christ and he have met before.—Ἀκολουθεῖ μοι: Jesus acted on His own plans, but the recent encounter with the scribes would not be without influence on this new departure—the call of a publican. It was a kind of defiance to the party who cherished hard thoughts not only about pardon but about those who needed pardon. An impolitic step the worldly-wise would say; sure to create prejudice. But those who are too anxious to conciliate the prejudices of the present do nothing for the future.—ἀναστὰς ἠκολούθησεν: prompt compliance, probably with some astonishment at the invitation.

Ver. 10. καὶ ἐγένετο, etc. The narrative of this incident in all three Synoptists is condensed, and the situation not clear. What house is meant (ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ), and why so many (πολλοὶ)? “There were many,” Mark remarks, emphatically (ii. 15), and the ἰδοῦ here implies that something important took place. Luke infers (for we need not suppose independent information) that it is a feast (δοχῆν), and, doubtless, he is right. But given by whom? Levi, according to Luke. It may have been so, but not necessarily as the prime mover; possibly, nay, probably, as the agent of his new Master. Our thoughts have been too much biassed by the assumption that the call of Matthew in ἐλθόντες συνανέκειντο τῷ Ἰησοῦ καὶ τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ. 11. καὶ ἰδόντες οἱ Φαρισαῖοι εἶπον<sup>1</sup> τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ, “Διατί μετὰ τῶν τελωνῶν καὶ ἁμαρτωλῶν ἐσθίει ὁ διδάσκαλος ὑμῶν;” 12. Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς<sup>2</sup> ἀκούσας εἶπεν αὐτοῖς,<sup>3</sup> “Ὁὐ χρεῖαν ἔχουσιν οἱ ἰσχύοντες ἰατροῦ, ἀλλ’ οἱ κακῶς ἔχοντες. 13. πορευθέντες δὲ μάθετε τί ἔστιν, ‘<sup>4</sup>Ἔλεον<sup>4</sup> θέλω, καὶ οὐ θυσίαν.’ οὐ γὰρ ἤλθον καλέσαι δικαίους, ἀλλ’ ἁμαρτωλοὺς εἰς μετάνοιαν.”<sup>5</sup>

Mk. ix. 10.
Lk. viii. 9.
Acts x. 17
(= means).
m again in Ch. xii. 7
fr. Hosea
vi. 7.

<sup>1</sup> ελεγον ΣBCL (Tisch., W.H.). εἶπον in D al.

<sup>2</sup> ΣBD omit Ἰησοῦς (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> ΣBCD omit αὐτοῖς (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> ΣBCD have ελεος. ελεον is a gram. cor.

<sup>5</sup> εἰς μετάνοιαν is wanting in ΣBDΔΣ. It is a clear case of harmonising assimilation. Vide on Lk. v. 32 for its effect on the sense.

this section is the main thing, and the feast an accompanying incident, a farewell feast of Matthew's in which Jesus passively partook. The truth, probably, is that the call was a preliminary to the feast, the first step in the working out of a plan. Jesus aims at a mission among the reprobated classes, and His first step is the call of Matthew to discipleship, and His second the gathering together, through him, of a large number of these classes to a social entertainment; the place of meeting being, possibly, not a private house, whether Christ's or Matthew's, but a public hall. If Matthew's house or Simon's (in which Jesus probably had His home, vide Mark) was large enough to have a quadrangular court, the gathering might be there, where, according to Faber, Archäologie der Hebräer, p. 408, meetings of various sorts were held. In any case it was a great affair—scores, possibly hundreds, present, too large for a room in a house, a conventicle meeting, so to speak; a meeting with such people in the Synagogue not being possible. For further remarks vide on Mark.—τελῶναι καὶ ἁμαρτωλοὶ: publicans naturally, if Matthew was the host, but why ἁμαρ.? He was a respectable man; are the ἁμαρ. simply the τελῶναι as viewed from the outside, so named in anticipation of the Pharisaic description of the party? If Jesus was the inviter, they might be a distinct class, and worse, very real sinners, for His aim was a mission among the social Pariahs.

Ver. 11. ἰδόντες οἱ Φαρ. Here was a good chance for the critics, really a scandalous affair!—τοῖς μαθηταῖς. They spoke to the disciples, possibly, as Euthy.

Zig. suggests, to alienate them from the Master, possibly lacking courage to attack Him face to face.

Ver. 12. ὁ δὲ α. εἶπεν: to whom? Were the fault-finders present to hear? —οὐ χρεῖαν, etc.: something similar can be cited from classic authors, vide instances in Grotius, Elsner, and Wetstein. The originality lies in the application—the physician goes where he is needed, therefore, I am here among the people you contemptuously designate publicans and sinners. The first instalment, this, of Christ's noble apology for associating with the reprobates—a great word. Ver. 13. πορευθέντες μάθετε: a common expression among the Rabbis, but they never sent men to learn the particular lesson that God prefers mercy to sacrifice.—καὶ οὐ, does not imply that sacrifice is of no account.—ἐλεος (ἔλεον in T. R., a correction by the scribes), accusative neuter. Masculine nouns of 2nd declension are often neuter 3rd in N. T. and Sept.—ἤλθον: Jesus speaks as one having a mission.—ἁμαρτωλοὺς: and it is to the sinful, in pursuance of the principle embodied in the prophetic oracle—a mission of mercy. The words ἰσχύοντες, ver. 12, and δικαίους, ver. 13, naturally suggest the Pharisees as the class meant. Weiss, always nervously afraid of allegorising in connection with parabolic utterances, protests, contending that it is indifferent to the sense of the parable whether there be any “whole” or righteous. But the point is blunted if there be no allusion. καλέσαι here has the sense of calling to a feast.

Vv. 14-17. The fast-question (Mk. ii. 18-22; Lk. v. 33-39). Τότε. Our evangelist makes a temporal connection

<sup>a</sup> in parall. 14. Τότε προσέρχονται αὐτῷ οἱ μαθηταὶ Ἰωάννου, λέγοντες, Vide also
 Tobit vi. "Διατί ἡμεῖς καὶ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι νηστεύομεν πολλά,<sup>1</sup> οἱ δὲ μαθηταὶ 14, 17.
<sup>o</sup> 2 Pet. i. 13 σου οὐ νηστεύουσι;" 15. Καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Μὴ (same phrase). δύνανται οἱ υἱοὶ τοῦ ἡνυμφῶνος πενθεῖν, * ἐφ' ὅσον μετ' αὐτῶν ἐστὶν ὁ <sup>p</sup> in parall. ἡνυμφίος; ἐλεύσονται δὲ ἡμέραι ὅταν ἄπαρθῇ ἀπ' αὐτῶν ὁ ἡνυμφίος, and Ch. xxv. 1.
 John ii. 9; καὶ τότε νηστεύσουσιν. 16. οὐδεὶς δὲ ἐπιβάλλει ἐπιβλημα
 iii. 29.
 Rev. xviii. ῥάκους ἀγνάφου ἐπὶ ἱματίῳ παλαιῷ. * αἶρει γὰρ τὸ πλήρωμα 23.
<sup>q</sup> here and in parall. <sup>r</sup> here, in parall., in same sense. Cf. Mk. xi. 7. <sup>s</sup> here and in parall.
<sup>t</sup> same phr. in Mk. ii. 21. <sup>u</sup> without object here and in Mk. ii. 21.

<sup>1</sup> πολλα is in a large number of uncials, including Σ<sup>c</sup>CDLΔΣ. Yet it looks like a gloss and is wanting in Σ<sup>a</sup>B 27, 71. Tisch. and W.H. omit.

out of what in Mark is merely topical, another of the group of incidents showing Jesus in conflict with current opinion and practice. Where it happened cannot be determined, but it is brought in appositely after the feast of the publicans, serving with it to illustrate the free unconventional life of the Jesus-circle.—προσέρχονται . . . οἱ μαθ. Ἰωάννου. The interrogants here are John's disciples; in Mark, unknown persons about John's disciples with the Pharisees; in Luke, who treats this incident as a continuation of the last, the fault-finders are the same as before (οἱ δὲ). Mark probably gives the true state of the case. Some persons unknown, at some time or other, when other religious people were fasting, and the Jesus-circle were observed not to be fasting, came and remarked on the dis-sidence.—διατί: the interrogants wanted to know the reason. But the important thing for us is the fact, that Jesus and His disciples did not conform to the common custom of religious people, including the disciples of the Baptist. It is the first instance of an extensive breach with existing religious usage.—οὐ νηστεύουσι: the broad patent fact; if they did any fasting it was not apparent.

Ver. 15. καὶ εἶπεν: The question drew from Jesus three pregnant parabolic sayings: bright, genial, felicitous impromptus; the first a happy apology for His disciples, the other two the statement of a general principle.—οἱ υἱοὶ τοῦ ἡνυμφῶνος. The mere suggestion of this name for the disciples explains all. Paranympths, friends of the bridechamber, companions of the bridegroom, who act for him and in his interest, and bring the bride to him. How can they be sad (μὴ δύνανται πενθεῖν)? The point to note is that the figure was apposite. The life of Jesus and His disciples was like a wedding feast—they the principal actors. The disciples took their tone from the Master, so that the ultimate fact was the quality of the personal piety of Jesus. Therein lay the reason of the difference commented on. It was not irreligion, as in the case of the careless; it was a different type of religion, with a Father-God, a kingdom of grace open to all, hope for the worst, and spiritual spontaneity.—ἐλεύσονται ἡμέραι. While the Bridegroom is with them life will be a wedding feast; when He is taken from them it will make a great difference; then (τότε) they will grieve, and therefore fast: a hidden allusion to the tragic end foreseen by Jesus of this happy free life, the penalty of breaking with custom.

Vv. 16, 17. The substitution of νηστεύουσιν for πενθεῖν, in the close of ver. 15, implicitly suggested a principle which is now explicitly stated in parabolic form: the great law of congruity; practice must conform to mood; the spirit must determine the form. These sayings, apparently simple, are somewhat abstruse. They must have been over the head of the average Christian of the apostolic age, and Luke's version shows that they were diversely interpreted. Common to both is the idea that it is bootless to mix heterogeneous things, old and new in religion. This cuts two ways. It defends the old as well as the new; the fasting of John's disciples as well as the non-fasting of Christ's. Jesus did not concern Himself about Pharisaic practice, but He was concerned to defend His own disciples without disparagement of John, and also to prevent John's way and the respect in which he was justly held from creating a prejudice against Himself. The double application of the principle was therefore present to His mind.—Ver. 16, οὐδεὶς . . . παλαιῷ. No αὐτοῦ ἀπὸ τοῦ ἱματίου, καὶ χεῖρον σχίσμα γίνεται. 17. οὐδὲ ὕβαλ-<sup>v</sup> here, λουσιν οἶνον νέον εἰς ἀσκοὺς παλαιούς· εἰ δὲ μήγε, ῥήγγυνται οἱ<sup>parall.</sup> John xiii 5 (of ἀσκοί, καὶ ὁ οἶνος ἐκχεῖται, καὶ οἱ ἀσκοὶ ἀπολοῦνται.<sup>1</sup> ἀλλὰ βάλ-<sup>liquids.</sup> Ch. xxvi 12 (ἐπι τινος). λουσιν οἶνον νέον εἰς ἀσκοὺς καινοὺς, καὶ ἀμφότερα<sup>2</sup> ὡ<sup>3</sup> συντηροῦνται.

18. Ταῦτα αὐτοῦ λαλοῦντος αὐτοῖς, ἰδοῦ, ἄρχων ἐλθῶν<sup>3</sup> προσεκέει<sup>w</sup> Lk. v. 38 (T. R.) αὐτῷ, λέγων, “Ὅτι ἡ θυγάτηρ μου ἄρτι ἐτελεύτησεν· ἀλλὰ ἐλθῶν<sup>x</sup> Mk. xvi 18. Acts 18. 17 (same const.). ἔπιθες τὴν χεῖρά σου ἐπ’ αὐτήν, καὶ ὕζησεται.” 19. Καὶ ἐγερθεῖς ὁ Ὑἱοῦς ἠκολούθησεν<sup>4</sup> αὐτῷ καὶ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ.

yi. John v. 25. Acts ix. 41. Rom. xiv. 9.

<sup>1</sup> For the future, in most MSS.,  $\aleph$ B have ἀπολλονται (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> All uncials have ἀμφότεροι.

<sup>3</sup> The reading is in confusion here. B has after ἀρχων, οὖς προσελθων, probably the true reading out of which all variants arose (τις for εἰς; εἰς om.; ἐλθων for προσ; εἰς ἐλθων, ἐλθων.).

<sup>4</sup>  $\aleph$ CD have the imp. B as in text.

one putteth a patch of an unfulled, raw piece of cloth (ῥάκος from ῥήγγυμι) on an old garment.—τὸ πλήρωμα αὐτοῦ, the filling, the patch which fills; of it, i. e., the old garment, not of the unfulled cloth (Euthy., Grotius, De W., etc.).—αἶρει ἀπὸ, taketh from = tears itself away by contraction when wetted, taking a part of the old garment along with it.—καὶ . . . γίνεται, and so a worse rent takes place. This looks in the direction of an apology for John and his disciples (so Weiss) = they and we are in sympathy in the main, but let them not assimilate their practice to ours; better remain as they are; imitation would only spoil a good type of piety. What is to be done with the unfulled cloth is not indicated, but it goes without saying. Let it remain by itself, be fulled, and then turned into a good new garment.

Ver. 17. The new parable of the wine and wine-skins is introduced, not merely because the Speaker is full of matter, but because it enables Him aptly to show both sides of the question, the twofold application of the principle.—οὐδὲ βάλλουσιν: nobody puts new wine into old skins; νέος applied to wine, καινός to skins (ἀσκοὺς καινοὺς). νέος is new in time, καινός in quality. That which is new in time does not necessarily deteriorate with age; it may even improve. That which is new in quality always deteriorates with age, like skins or cloth, vide Trench's Synonyms, lx.—εἰ δὲ μήγε (vide ad vi. 1): two disastrous consequences ensue: skins burst, wine spilt. The reason not stated, assumed to be known. New wine ferments, old skins have lost their toughness and stretchableness. “They have become hard leather and give no more” (Koetsveld, De Gelijkenissen, p. 99). That is the one side—keep the old to the old.—ἀλλὰ βάλλουσι . . . συντηροῦνται: this is the other—the new to the new; new wine in fresh skins, and both are preserved as suiting one another. With reference to the two parables, Schanz remarks that, in the first, the point of comparison is the distinction between part and whole, in the second form and contents are opposed to each other. So after him, Holtzmann in H.C. Weiss takes both parables as explaining the practice of John's disciples, Holtzmann as giving reasons why Christ's disciples differed from all others. The truth as above indicated lies between.

Vv. 18-26. The daughter of Jairus, with interlude (Mk. v. 21-43; Lk. viii. 40-56). Given by Matthew in immediate connection with the discourse on fasting, but by Mark, and Luke following him, in connection with the return from the eastern shore, after the story of the demoniac. Ver. 18. ἰδοῦ . . . λέγων: exactly the same formula as in viii. 2.—ἄρχων, an important person, a ruler: of synagogue, according to Mark.—εἶς: peculiar here, but taken from Mark where it is intelligible, the suppliant being there described as one of the rulers of the synagogue. The word puzzled the scribes, and gave rise to many variants (vide crit. note).—ἄρτι ἐτελεύτησεν: this statement of Matthew, compared with those of Mark and Luke, which make the father say his daughter was dying, here only in N.T. 20. Καὶ ἰδοῦ, γυνή *αἰμορροῦσα δώδεκα ἔτη, προσελθοῦσα

 Lev. xv. 33. ὄπισθεν, ἤψατο τοῦ *κρασπέδου τοῦ ἱματίου αὐτοῦ. 21. ἔλεγε γὰρ Ch. xiv. 36; xxiii. 5. Mk. vi. 56. Lk. viii. 44. (Num. xv. 38). ὄπισθεν, ἤψατο τοῦ ἱματίου αὐτοῦ, σωθήσομαι." 22.
 Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς ἐπιστραφεὶς<sup>1</sup> καὶ ἰδὼν αὐτὴν εἶπε, "Θάρσει, θύγατερ· ἡ πίστις σου σέσωκέ σε." Καὶ ἐσώθη ἡ γυνὴ ἀπὸ τῆς ὥρας ἐκείνης.
 23. Καὶ ἔλθων ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν τοῦ ἀρχοντος, καὶ ἰδὼν τοὺς

<sup>1</sup> στραφεὶς  $\aleph$ BDSZ (Tisch., W.H.).

has created work for the harmonists. The patristic view (Chrys., Theophy., Euthy.), that the statement was an inference from the condition in which he left her, or a natural exaggeration, has been adopted by many. Probably it is an inaccuracy of the evangelist's due to abbreviation. The girl was dead when Jesus arrived; that was all he cared about. The ruler thought Jesus could do anything short of raising from the dead, save even in articulo mortis. But our evangelist gives him credit for more faith; that Jesus can bring back from the dead, at least when death has just taken place.—ζήσεται, not remain living, but revive, come to life again (Fritzsche).—Ver. 19. ἐγερθεὶς apparently refers back to ver. 10, implying close sequence—feasting, fasting, dying; such is life indeed.

Vv. 20-22. The story is suspended at this point by an interlude.—Ver. 20, καὶ ἰδοῦ: a new applicant for help appears on the scene, on the way to Jairus' house.—γυνή . . . ἔτη, a woman who had suffered for twelve years from some kind of bloody flux.—ὄπισθεν: realistic feature; from womanly shame or the morbid shrinking of chronic ill-health, or out of regard to the law concerning uncleanness (Lev. xv.).—κρασπέδου, Hebrew  $\text{קְרַפְּטָה}$  (Num.

xv. 38), fringes at the four corners of the outer garment, to remind of the commandments. In dress Jesus was not nonconformist. His mantle, ἱμάτιον, had its κράσπεδα like other people's.—ἤψατο, touched one of the tassels; the least possible degree of contact enough to ensure a cure, without notice; faith, superstition and cunning combined. Ver. 21. ἔλεγε γὰρ ἐν ἑαυτῇ: such was her little private scheme. Ver. 22, ὁ δὲ ἰ. στραφεὶς καὶ ἰδὼν. Matthew's narrative here is simple as compared with that of Mark and Luke, probably a transcript from Apostolic Document, concerned mainly about the words of Jesus. So far as our evangelist is concerned the turning round of Jesus might be an accident, or due to consciousness of a nervous jerk instinctively understood to mean something.—θάρσει, θύγατερ, again as in ix. 2, a terse, cordial sympathetic address; there child to a man, here daughter to a mature woman.—πίστις, no notice taken of the superstition or the cunning, only of the good side; mark the rhythm: ἡ πίστις σου σέσωκέν σε, again in Lk. vii. 50, where, with πορεύου εἰς εἰρήνην, it forms a couplet.—σέσωκεν, perfect, not future, to convey a feeling of confidence = you are a saved woman.—καὶ ἐσώθη, and so she was from that hour. A true story in the main, say Strauss and Keim, strictly a case of faith-cure.

Vv. 23-26. The narrative returns to the case of Jairus' daughter. Ver. 23, ἔλθων . . . καὶ ἰδὼν, circumstantial participles leading up to what Jesus said, the main fact.—τοὺς αὐλητὰς, etc.: the girl was only just dead, yet already a crowd had gathered about the house, brought together by various motives, sympathy, money, desire to share in the meat and drink going at such a time (so Lightfoot, Hor. Heb., ut ederent et biberent), and of course making a confused din.—θορυβούμενον, the part. = a relative with finite verb = the crowd which was making a din. The crowd, besides the αὐληταί, tibicines, flute-players, would include some hired mourning women (Jerem. ix. 17), praeficae, whose duty it was to sing naenia in praise of the dead. Mourning, like everything else, had been reduced to system, two flutes and one mourning woman at the burial of a wife incumbent on the poorest man (Lightfoot, Hor. Heb.). The practice in Greece and Rome was similar; proofs in Grotius, Elsner, Wetstein. Vide also Marquardt, Handbuch der Röm. Alterthümer, vol. vii., p. 341, where it is stated that by the twelve Tables the number of tibicines was limited to ten, and that before the Punic war, at least, praeficae were employed.—

<sup>b</sup> αὐλητὰς καὶ τὸν ὄχλον ὀθουρούμενον, 24. λέγει αὐτοῖς,<sup>1</sup> “Ἄνα- b Rev. xviii. 22.
χωρεῖτε· οὐ γὰρ ἀπέθανε τὸ κοράσιον, ἀλλὰ <sup>c</sup>καθεύδει.” Καὶ c Mk. v. 39.
κατεγέλων αὐτοῦ. 25. Ὅτε δὲ ὀξεβλήθη ὁ ὄχλος, εἰσελθὼν Acts xvii.
<sup>d</sup> ἐκράτησε τῆς χειρὸς αὐτῆς, καὶ ἠγέρθη τὸ κοράσιον. 26. καὶ d i Thess. v. 10 (= to be dead).
ἐξῆλθεν ἡ <sup>e</sup>φήμη αὐτῆ εἰς ὄλην τὴν γῆν ἐκείνην. e Ch. xxi. 12.
27. Καὶ παράγοντι ἐκείθεν τῷ Ἰησοῦ, ἠκολούθησαν αὐτῷ δύο f Mk. i. 31.
τυφλοί, κράζοντες καὶ λέγοντες, “Ἡ <sup>g</sup>Ἐλέησον ἡμᾶς, υἱὲ <sup>h</sup>2 Δαβίδ.” h Ch. xv. 22; xx. 30.
28. Ἐλθόντι δὲ εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν, προσῆλθον αὐτῷ οἱ τυφλοί, καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Πιστεῦετε ὅτι δύναμαι τοῦτο ποιῆσαι;” Λέγουσιν αὐτῷ, “Ναί, Κύριε.” 29. Τότε ἦψατο τῶν ὀφθαλμῶν αὐτῶν, λέγων, “Κατὰ τὴν πίστιν ὑμῶν γενηθήτω ὑμῖν.” 30. Καὶ ἀνεώχθησαν <sup>i</sup>3
αὐτῶν οἱ ὀφθαλμοί· καὶ <sup>i</sup>ἐνεβριμήσατο <sup>j</sup>αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, λέγων, i Mk. i. 43.
“Ὅρατε μηδεὶς γινωσκέτω.” 31. Οἱ δὲ ἐξεληθόντες <sup>k</sup>1 διεφήμισαν; j Ch. xviii. 15. Mk. i. 45.
αὐτὸν ἐν ὄλη τῇ γῆ ἐκείνῃ.

<sup>1</sup> For λέγει αὐτοῖς BD have ελεγειν.

<sup>2</sup> For υιε B has υιος.

<sup>3</sup> ηνεωχ. in BD.

<sup>4</sup> ἐνεβριμήθη in BD, a less usual form avoided by scribes.

Ver. 24. ἀναχωρεῖτε, retire! Hired mourners distasteful to Jesus, who gladly avails Himself of this opportunity of dismissing them.—οὐ γὰρ ἀπέθανε: no need of you yet, for the maid (κοράσιον, dim. for κόρη, but = puella in late Greek) is not dead. A welcome word to naturalistic commentators, giving a plausible basis for the hypothesis of an apparent death or swoon (Schleier., Keim, etc.), not to be taken prosaically as meant to deny death. Yet Carr (C. G. T.) thinks it open to question whether it ought not to be taken literally, and doubtful whether κοιμᾶσθαι is ever used in a metaphorical sense in the N. T. or elsewhere. The derisive laughter of the crowd (κατεγέλων) is good evidence to the contrary.—ὀξεβλήθη: not to be pressed as implying physical force, non vi et manibus, sed voce jussuque (Fritzsche), a tone and manner not to be resisted, the house therefore soon cleared of the noisy crowd.—Ver. 26, ἐξῆλθεν ἡ φ., against the wish of Jesus, who did not desire raising the dead to be regarded as a part of His ordinary work. Perhaps that was why He said: “she sleepeth” (Weiss, L. J., Marcus-Evang.).—τὴν γῆν ἐκείνην: Weiss thinks the expression implies that the evangelist is a stranger to Palestine (Weiss-Meyer).

Vv. 27-31. Two blind men.—This miracle-narrative and the next paratively colourless and uninteresting. They bring under notice two new types of disease, blindness and possession accompanied with dumbness. The interest in both cases, however, lies not so much in the cures as in the words spoken.—Ver. 27. τυφλοί: blindness common from limestone dust in the air and changing temperature.—υἱὸς Δ., Messianic appellation, first time addressed to Jesus, a point of interest for the evangelist; not welcome to Jesus, who feared the awakening of false expectations. Therefore He took no notice of them on the way to His house, whither He retired after the last incident.—Ver. 28. ἐλθόντι εἰς τ. ο. προσῆλθον: they follow, and Jesus at last takes notice of them, asking if they have faith in His power. His previous conduct might throw doubt on His willingness, but that is dispelled by speaking to them.—ναί: a prompt glad “yes” is their answer.—Ver. 30. ἠνεώχθησαν, a Hebraism. The Jews thought of blind eyes as shut, and of seeing eyes as open.—ἐνεβριμήθη, sternly enjoined (vide Mk. i. 43). The paraphrase of Euthy. Zig. gives a vivid idea of the meaning, “looked severely, contracting His eyebrows, and shaking His head at them, as they are wont to do who wish to make sure that secrets will be kept”.—Ver. 31. ἐν ὄλη τ. γ. ἐκ. (vide remarks on ver. 26).

κ Ch. xii. 22. 32. Αὐτῶν δὲ ἐξερχομένων, ἰδοῦ, προσήνεγκαν αὐτῷ ἄνθρωπον<sup>1</sup>
 ἢ Acts xvii. κ κωφὸν δαιμονιζόμενον. 33. καὶ ἐκβληθέντος τοῦ δαιμονίου, 31. 1 Cor. vi. 2; xiv. ἐλάλησεν ὁ κωφός· καὶ ἐθαύμασαν οἱ ὄχλοι, λέγοντες, "Ὅτι<sup>2</sup> 21 (same use of ἐν, οὐδέποτε ἐφάνη οὕτως ἐν τῷ Ἰσραὴλ." 34. Οἱ δὲ Φαρισαῖοι vide also Sir. xiii. 4, xxx. 13). ἔλεγον, "Ἐν τῷ ἄρχοντι τῶν δαιμονίων ἐκβάλλει τὰ δαιμόνια."<sup>3</sup> m Ch. iv. 23, but there intrans., here with accus. 35. ΚΑΙ περιήγεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς τὰς πόλεις πάσας καὶ τὰς κώμας, διδάσκων ἐν ταῖς συναγωγαῖς αὐτῶν, καὶ κηρύσσων τὸ εὐαγγέλιον τῆς βασιλείας, καὶ θεραπεύων πᾶσαν νόσον καὶ πᾶσαν μαλακίαν ἐν

<sup>1</sup> ἢ B omit ἄνθρωπον.

<sup>2</sup> ἢ BCD omit ὅτι.

<sup>3</sup> D, a, k, Syr. Sin. omit ver. 34; W.H. bracket.

Vv. 32-34. The dumb demoniac (Lk. xi. 14). A slight narrative, very meagre in comparison with the story of the Gerasene demoniac, the interest centring in the conflicting comments of spectators which probably secured for it a place in the Logia of Matthew. Ver. 32. Αὐτῶν ἐξερχομένων: while the two blind men are going out they bring another sufferer to the great Healer; an incessant stream of applicants for aid flowing towards His door.—κωφὸν: dumbness the apparent symptom. The word literally means blunt, and in Homer (Il., ii. 390) is applied to a weapon. In N. T. it is used with reference to the senses and faculties, here the faculty of speech (ver. 33, ἐλάλησεν), in xi. 5, that of hearing.—δαιμονιζόμενον: the inferred cause. It was known that the dumbness was not due to any physical defect. Speech seemed to be prevented by some foreign spiritual power; the mental disease, possibly, melancholy.—Ver. 33. ἐλάλησεν: that cured, speech followed.—ἐθαύμασαν: the crowd present wondered, hearing one speak whom they had so long known to be dumb.—οὐδέποτε ἐφάνη, etc.: thus they expressed their surprise; the like was never seen in Israel. ἐφάνη is impersonal, the reference being to the change in the man; the manner of expression is colloquial, and it is idle to discuss the precise meaning of οὕτως, and what nominative is to be supplied to ἐφάνη. It is more to the purpose to inquire why this seemingly minor miracle should make so great an impression. Perhaps we should not isolate it, but take it along with the other marvels that followed in quick succession as joint causes of admiration. The people were worked up into a high measure of astonishment which, at last, found vent in these words. So in effect Euthy., also Rosenmüller ("tot signa, tam admirabilia, tam celeriter, neque contactu tantum, sed et verbo, et in omni morborum genere").—Ver. 34. οἱ δὲ Φαρισαῖοι. The multitude admired, but the Pharisees said. They are watching closely the words and acts of Jesus and forming their theories. They have got one for the cures of demoniacs.—ἐν τῷ ἄρχοντι τ. δ: He casts out demons in the power of the prince of demons. Probably they did not believe it, but it was plausible. How differently men view the same phenomenon (vide on Matt. xii. 22 f.).

Vv. 35-38. These verses look both backwards and forwards, winding up the preceding narrative of words and deeds from chap. v. onwards, and introducing a new aspect of Christ's work and experience. The connection with what follows is strongest, and the verses might, with advantage, have formed the commencement of chap. x. Yet this general statement about Christ's teaching and healing ministry (ver. 35) obviously looks back to iv. 23, 24, and, therefore, fitly ends the story to which the earlier summary description of the ministry in Galilee forms the introduction. It is, at the same time, the prelude to a second act in the grand drama (chap. ix. 35—xiv. 12). In the first act Jesus has appeared as an object of general admiration; in the second He is to appear as an object of doubt, criticism, hostility.

Ver. 36. ἰδὼν δὲ τοὺς ὄχλους: in the course of His wanderings Jesus had opportunities of observing the condition of the people, and at length arrived at a clear, definite view as to the moral and religious situation. It was very sombre, such as to move His compassion (ἐσπλαγχνίσθη, post classical, in Gospels only). The state of things suggested two pictures to His mind: a neglected flock of sheep, and a harvest going to waste for lack of reapers. Both imply, not only a pitiful plight of the people, but a blameworthy neglect of duty on the

τῷ λαῷ.<sup>1</sup> 36. ἰδὼν δὲ τοὺς ὄχλους, ἠεπλαγχνίσθη περὶ αὐτῶν, ὅτι ἦσαν ἐκλελυμένοι<sup>2</sup> καὶ ἐρριμμένοι<sup>3</sup> ὡσεὶ πρόβατα μὴ ἔχοντα ποιμένα. 37. τότε λέγει τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ, "Ὁ μὲν ὁ θερισμὸς πολὺς, οἱ δὲ ἔργαται ὀλίγοι. 38. δεήθητε οὖν τοῦ κυρίου τοῦ θερισμοῦ, ὅπως ἔκβάλλῃ ἔργατας εἰς τὸν θερισμὸν αὐτοῦ."

Lk. x. 2. p Lk. x. 2. John x. 4

<sup>1</sup> εν τω λαω brought in probably from iv. 23. BCDΔΣ omit (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> ἐκλελυμένοι (T. R.) is a very weakly-supported reading, having only one important uncial, L, on its side. ΞBCDΔΣ al. have ἐσκυλμένοι—the true reading.

<sup>3</sup> The variation here is simply a matter of spelling: ἐρ. in ΞBCL (Tisch., W.H.), ἐρρ. (T. R.) ΓΔ, ρερ. D.

part of their religious guides—the shepherds by profession without the shepherd heart, the spiritual husbandmen without an eye for the whitening fields and skill to handle the sickle. The Pharisaic comments on the Capernaum mission festival (ix. 11) were sufficient to justify the adverse judgment. Their question on that occasion meant much, and would not be forgotten by Jesus.—ἐσκυλμένοι, ἐρριμμένοι, graphic words, clear as to general import, though variously understood as to their precise meaning. The former may mean "flayed" (from σκύλον, Holtz., H. C.), or "hunted" and tired out (Weiss-Meyer), the practical sense is "exhausted by long, aimless wandering, foot-sore and fleece-torn". The other points to the natural sequel—lying down, scattered about (βίπτω), here one, there another, on the hill side, just where they found themselves unable to go a step further. A flock can get into such a condition only when it has no shepherd to care for it and guide it to the pastures.

Vv. 37, 38. θερισμὸς: a new figure coming in abruptly in the narrative, but not necessarily so close together in Christ's mind. The one figure suits the mood of passive sympathy; the other, that of the harvest, suits the mood of active purpose to help. It would not be long in the case of Jesus before the one mood passed into the other. He could not be a mere pitying spectator. He must set on foot a mission of help. The Capernaum feast was the first stage; the mission of the twelve the second. The word "harvest" implies spiritual susceptibility. Weiss protests against this inference as allegorising interpretation of a parabolic saying which simply points to the want of suitable labourers

(vide L. J., ii. 119). So also Schanz maintains, against Euthy., that not susceptibility but need is pointed to. But, as against Weiss, it is pertinent to ask: what suggested the figure of a harvest if not possibilities of gain to the kingdom of God, given sympathetic workers? This hopeful judgment as to the people of the land, contrasted with Pharisaic despair and contempt, was characteristic of Jesus (vide my Kingdom of God, chap. v.).—ἐργάται ὀλίγοι: professional labourers, men busying themselves with inculcation of moral and religious observances, abundant; but powerless to win the people because without sympathy, hope, and credible acceptable Gospel. Their attempts, if any, only make bad worse—(sub legis onere ægrotam plebem, Hilary). "Few"—as yet only one expert, but He is training others, and He has faith in prayer for better men and times.—Ver. 38. δεήθητε: the first step in all reform—deep, devout desire out of a profound sense of need. The time sick and out of joint—God mend it!—ὅπως ἐκβάλλῃ, etc. The prayer, expressed in terms of the parabolic figure, really points to the ushering in of a new era of grace and humanity—Christian as opposed to Pharisaic, legal, Rabbinical. In the old time men thought it enough to care for themselves even in religion; in the new time, the impulse and fashion would be to care for others. ἐκβάλλῃ, a strong word (cf. Mk. iv. 29, ἀποστέλλει), even allowing for the weakened force in later Greek, implying Divine sympathy with the urgent need. Men must be raised up who can help the time. Christ had thorough faith in a benignant Providence. Luke gives this logion in connection with the mission of the seventy (x. 2).

α Ch. xii. 43. X. 1. Καὶ προσκαλεσάμενος τοὺς δώδεκα μαθητὰς αὐτοῦ, ἔδωκεν Mk. i. 23, 26: iii. 11. αὐτοῖς ἐξουσίαν πνευμάτων ἁκαθάρτων, ὥστε ἐκβάλλειν, αὐτά, καὶ Lk. iv. 33, 36. (in θεραπεύειν πᾶσαν νόσον καὶ πᾶσαν μαλακίαν. 2. Τῶν δὲ δώδεκα ret. to demons.)<sup>b</sup> ἀποστόλων τὰ ὀνόματά ἐστι ταῦτα· πρῶτος Σίμων ὁ λεγόμενος b once only in Mt. and Πέτρος, καὶ Ἀνδρέας ὁ ἀδελφὸς αὐτοῦ· Ἰάκωβος<sup>1</sup> ὁ τοῦ Ζεβεδαίου, Mk. (vi. 30), often καὶ Ἰωάννης ὁ ἀδελφὸς αὐτοῦ· 3. Φίλιππος, καὶ Βαρθολομαῖος· in Lk. Θωμᾶς, καὶ Ματθαῖος ὁ τελώνης· Ἰάκωβος ὁ τοῦ Ἀλφαίου, καὶ

<sup>1</sup>  $\text{NB}$  have καὶ before Ἰακωβος.

CHAPTER X. THE GALILEAN MISSION. The beginnings of the mission to the neglected "lost" sheep of Israel may be found in the Capernaum feast (ix. 10). As time went on Jesus felt increasingly the pressure of the problem and the need for extended effort. Matthew's call was connected with the first stage of the movement, and that disciple was Christ's agent in bringing together the gathering of publicans and sinners. He is now about to employ all the intimate disciples He has collected about Him and through them to spread the movement all over Galilee. They will be a poor substitute for Himself, yet not wholly useless like the scribes, for they have heard His teaching on the hill and imbibed somewhat of His spirit of love.

Vv. 1-15. The Twelve: their names, mission, and relative instructions (Mk. iii. 14-19, vi. 7-13, Lk. ix. 1-6).

Ver. 1. προσκαλεσάμενος: this does not refer to the call to become disciples, but to a call to men already disciples to enter on a special mission.—τοὺς δώδεκα, the Twelve. The article implies that a body of intimate disciples, twelve in number, already existed. The evangelist probably had Mk. iii. 14 in view. He may also reflect in his language the feeling of the apostolic age to which the Twelve were familiar and famous. Hitherto we have made the acquaintance of five of the number (iv. 18-22, ix. 9). Their calls are specially reported to illustrate how the body of twelve grew.—ἐξουσίαν, authority, not to preach, as we might have expected, but to heal. The prominence given to healing in this mission may surprise and disappoint, and even tempt to entertain the suspicion that the exalted ideas concerning the Twelve of after years have been read into the narrative. This element is certainly least prominent in Mark. Yet to some extent it must have had a place in the mission. The people in Galilee had all heard of Jesus and His work, and it was no use sending the Twelve unless they could carry with them something of His power.—πνευμάτων α., genitive objective, as in John xvii. 3, Rom. ix. 21. ὥστε ἐκ . . . καὶ θεραπεύειν, dependent also on ἐξουσίαν (cf. 1 Cor. ix. 5), ὥστε with infinitive indicating tendency of the power. πᾶσαν νόσον, etc., echo of iv. 23.

Ver. 2. τῶν δὲ δώδ. ἀποστόλων: etc., the evangelist finds here a convenient place for giving the names of the Twelve, called here for the first and last time ἀπόστολοι, with reference at once to the immediate minor mission (from ἀποστέλλειν, vide ver. 5) and to the later great one. One half of them are for us mere names, and of one or two even the names are doubtful, utterly obscure, yet, doubtless, in their time and sphere faithful witnesses. They are arranged in pairs, as if following the hint of Mark that they were sent out by two and two, each pair connected with a καὶ (so in Luke, not in Mark).—πρῶτος: at the head of the list stands Peter, first not only numerically (Meyer) but in importance, a sure matter of fact, though priestly pretensions based on it are to be disregarded. He is first in all the lists.—ὁ λεγ. Πέτρος: a fact already stated (iv. 18), here repeated probably because the evangelist had his eye on Mark's list (iii. 16) or possibly to distinguish this Simon from another in the list (No. 11). Ver. 3. Βαρθολομαῖος, the 6th, one of the doubtful names, commonly identified with Nathanael (John i. 46).—Ματθαῖος ὁ τελώνης, one of four in the list with epithets: Peter the first, Simon the zealot, Judas the traitor, Matthew the publican; surely not without reason, except as echoing ix. 9 (Meyer). Matthew stands second in his pair here, before Thomas in Mark and Luke. Position and epithet agree, indicative, Euthy. suggests, of modesty and self-abasement.—Ver. 4. Σίμων ὁ Καναναῖος: Luke gives τὸν καλ. Ζηλωτῆρ = the zealot, possibly a piece of inc agam in ref. to Judas,

Λεββαῖος ὁ ἐπικληθεὶς Θαδδαῖος<sup>1</sup> 4. Σίμων ὁ Κανανίτης,<sup>2</sup> καὶ Ἰούδας<sup>3</sup> Ἰσκαριώτης ὁ καὶ * παραδοὺς αὐτόν.

Ch. xxvi.
15; xxvii.
3, 4 al.
Ch. xv. 24.

5. Τούτους τοὺς δώδεκα ἀπέστειλεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, παραγγέλλας αὐτοῖς, λέγων, "Εἰς ὄδον ἔθνων μὴ ἀπέλθητε, καὶ εἰς πόλιν Σαμαρειτῶν μὴ εἰσελθῆτε · 6. πορευέσθε δὲ μᾶλλον πρὸς τὰ<sup>4</sup> πρόβατα τὰ ἀπολωλότα * οἴκου Ἰσραὴλ. 7. πορευόμενοι δὲ κηρύσσετε, λέγοντες, "Ὅτι ἡγγικεν ἡ βασιλεία τῶν οὐρανῶν. 8. ἀσθενοῦντας θεραπεύετε,

Ch. xv. 24.
Acts ii. 36.
vii. 42.

<sup>1</sup> D has Λεββαῖος (εος) alone.  $\aleph$ B have Θαδδαῖος alone. The reading in T. R. as above is simply a conflate reading combining the two by a connecting phrase, ο ἐπικληθεῖς.

<sup>2</sup> BCDL have Καναναιος, probably the true form.

<sup>3</sup> ο before Ἰσκαρ. in  $\aleph$ BDA.

formation based on an independent reliable source, or his interpretation of the Hebrew word  $\text{קנאני}$ . The form Καναναῖος seems to be based on the idea that the word referred to a place. Jerome took it to mean "of Cana," "de vico Chana Galilaeae". Ἰούδας ὁ Ἰσκαριώτης: last in all the lists, as Peter is first. The epithet is generally taken as denoting the place to which he belonged: the man of Issachar (Grotius); but most render: the man of Kerioth (in Judah, Joshua xv. 25, Jer. xlviii, 41); in that case the one non-Galilean disciple. The ending, -ωτης, is Greek; in Mark the Hebrew ending, -ωθ, is given.

Vv. 5-15. Instructions to the missionaries. Ver. 5. Τούτους τ. δώδ: These, the Twelve, Jesus sent forth, under the injunctions following (παραγγέλλας).—εἰς ὄδον ἔθ. μὴ ἀπέλθητε. This prohibition occurs in Matthew only, but there is no reason to doubt its authenticity except indeed that it went without saying. The very prohibition implies a consciousness that one day the Gospel would go the way of the Gentiles, just as Mt. v. 17 implies consciousness that fulfilling, in the speaker's sense, would involve annulling.—ὄδον ἔθνων, the way towards (Meyer), the genitive being a genitive of motion (Fritzsche, Kühner, § 414, 4), or a way within or of, parallel to πόλιν Σαμαρειτῶν in next clause.—εἰς π. Σαμ., not even in Samaria should they carry on their mission. The prohibition is total. πόλιν does not refer to the chief city (Erasmus, Annot., metropolis) or to the towns as distinct from the rural parts through which at least they might pass (Grotius). It means any considerable centre of population. The towns and villages are thought of as the natural sphere of work (ver. 11). The reason of the double prohibition is not given, but doubtless it lay in the grounds of policy which led Christ to confine His own work to Israel, and also in the crude religious state of the disciples.—Ver. 6. ἀπολωλότα, "the lost sheep," an expression consecrated by prophetic use (Jer. 1. 6, Swete's ed., xxvii. 6), the epithet here first introduced, often occurring in Gospels, was used by Jesus not in blame but in pity. "Lost" in His vocabulary meant "neglected" (ix. 36), in danger also of course, but not finally and hopelessly given over to perdition, salvable if much needing salvation. The term is ethical in import, and implies that the mission had moral and religious improvement mainly in view, not mere physical benefit through healing agency; teaching rather than miraculous acts.—Ver. 7. πορευόμενοι κηρύσσετε, as ye go, keep preaching; participle and finite verb, both present. Preaching first in the Master's thoughts, if not in the evangelist's (ver. 1).—ἡγγικεν ἡ βασιλεία τ. ο.: the theme is, of course, the kingdom longed for by all, constantly on the lips of Jesus. The message is: It has come nigh to you and is here. Very general, but much more, it may be taken for granted, was said. The apprentice apostles could as yet make no intelligent theoretic statement concerning the Kingdom, but they could tell not a little about the King, the Master who sent them, the chief object of interest doubtless for all receptive souls. It was a house mission (not in synagogue) on which they were sent (ver. 12). They were to live as guests in selected dwellings, two in one, and two in another, for a time, and their preaching would take the form of familiar conversation on what they had seen and

1 Rom. iii. λεπρὸς καθαρῖζετε, νεκρὸς ἐγείρετε,<sup>1</sup> δαιμόνια ἐκβάλλετε. Ἱδωρᾶν
 24.
 2 Lk. xviii. ἐλάβετε, δωρεᾶν δότε. 9. Μὴ κτήσησθε χρυσοῦν, μηδὲ ἄργυρον, 12; xxi.
 19. Act. i. μηδὲ χαλκὸν εἰς τὰς ζώνας ὑμῶν, 10. μὴ πήραν εἰς ὁδόν, μηδὲ δύο 18; viii.
 20; xiii. χιτῶνας, μηδὲ ὑποδήματα, μηδὲ βάρβδον· ἄξιός γάρ ὁ ἐργάτης τῆς
 28.

<sup>1</sup> νεκρὸς ἐγείρετε is wanting in L, but well attested by  $\aleph$ BCD $\Sigma$ . The position varies in MSS., after δαιμ. ἐκβαλλ. in P $\Delta$ , before λεπ. καθαρ. in  $\aleph$ BCD $\Sigma$ .

heard Jesus do and say. They would talk by the hour, healing acts would be very occasional, one or two in a village.

Ver. 8. νεκρὸς ἐγείρετε. This clause is wanting in several Codd., including L, so often associated with  $\aleph$ B in good readings. It is, however, too well attested to be omitted. It must either have found a place in the autograph, or it must have crept in as a gloss at a very early period. The evangelist's aim seems to be to represent Christ as empowering the disciples to do the works He is reported to have done Himself in chaps. viii., ix. That purpose demands the inclusion of raising the dead as the crowning miracle of the group (raising of daughter of Jairus). Yet it is hard to believe that Jesus would give power to the disciples to do, as an ordinary part of their mission, what He Himself did only on one or two exceptional occasions. The alternatives seem to be either an early gloss introduced into the text, or an inaccuracy on the part of the evangelist. Meyer takes the former view, Weiss apparently the latter. We cannot take the phrase in a spiritual sense, the other clauses all pointing to physical miracles. This clause is not in the accounts of Mark and Luke. The seventy on their return (Luke x. 17) make no mention of raising the dead.

Ver. 9. μὴ κτήσησθε: Vulgate: nolite possidere. But the prohibition is directed not merely against possessing, but against acquiring (κέρκτημαι, perfect = possess). The question is as to the scope of the prohibition. Does it refer merely to the way, or also to the mission? In one case it will mean: do not anxiously procure extensive provision for your journey (Meyer); in the other it will mean, more comprehensively: do not procure for the way, or during the mission, the things named. In other words, it will be an injunction to begin and carry on the mission without reward. Though the reference seems to be chiefly to the starting point, it must be in reality to their conduct during the mission. There was no need to say: do not obtain gold before starting, for that was practically impossible. There was need to say: do not take gold or silver from those whom you benefit, for it was likely to be offered, and acceptance of gifts would be morally prejudicial. That, therefore, is what Jesus prohibits, true to His habit of insisting on the supreme value of motive. So Jerome (condemnatio avaritiae), Chrys., Hilary, etc. So also Weiss. Holtz. (H.C.), while concurring in this interpretation, thinks the prohibition suits better the conduct of the Christ-merchants in the Didache than the circumstances of the disciples.—χρυσὸν, ἄργυρον, χαλκὸν: an anticlimax, not gold, not silver, not even a copper.—εἰς τὰς ζώνας, in your girdles, used for this purpose as well as for gathering up the loose mantle, or in purses suspended from the girdle. "It was usual for travellers to carry purses (φασκῶλια) suspended from their girdles, in which they carried the pence" (Euthy.).—Ver. 10. πήραν, a wallet for holding provisions, slung over the shoulder (Judith xiii. 10, πήραν τῶν βρωμάτων).—δύο χιτῶνας: not even two under-garments, shirts; one would say very necessary for comfort and cleanliness in a hot climate, and for travellers along dusty roads. In Mark the prohibition seems to be against wearing two at the same time (vi. 8); here against carrying a spare one for a change. Possibly we ought not to take these instructions too literally, but in their spirit.—ὑποδήματα: this does not mean that they were to go barefooted, but either without a spare pair, or without more substantial covering for the feet (shoes) than the light sandals they usually wore—mere soles to keep the feet off the hard road. Lightfoot (Hor. Heb.) distinguishes between the two thus: "usus delicatoris fuerunt calcei, durioris atque utilioris sandalia". He states that there were sandals, whose soles were of wood, and upper part of leather, the two joined by nails, and that they were sometimes made of rushes or the bark of palms.

τροφῆς αὐτοῦ ἔστιν.<sup>1</sup> 11. Εἰς ἣν δ' ἂν πόλιν ἢ κώμην εἰσελθῆτε, <sup>h</sup> ἔξετάσατε τίς ἐν αὐτῇ ἄξιός ἐστι· κακεῖ μείνατε, ἕως ἂν ἐξελθῆτε. <sup>h</sup> Ch. ii. 8.
 12. εἰσέρχόμενοι δὲ εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν, ἀσπάσασθε αὐτήν. 13. καὶ ἐὰν <sup>Johu xxi.</sup> μὲν ἦ ἡ οἰκία ἀξία, ἐλθέτω ἡ εἰρήνη ὑμῶν ἐπ' αὐτήν· ἐὰν δὲ μὴ ἦ <sup>12.</sup> ἀξία, ἡ εἰρήνη ὑμῶν πρὸς ὑμᾶς <sup>1</sup> ἐπιστραφήτω. 14. καὶ ὅς ἐὰν <sup>2</sup> μὴ <sup>i</sup>
 δέξηται ὑμᾶς, μηδὲ ἀκούσῃ τοὺς λόγους ὑμῶν, ἐξερχόμενοι <sup>3</sup> τῆς <sup>j</sup>
 οἰκίας ἢ τῆς πόλεως ἐκείνης, ἐκτινάξατε τὸν <sup>1</sup> κονιορτὸν <sup>4</sup> τῶν ποδῶν

<sup>1</sup> NBCL omit ἔστιν.<sup>2</sup> an in NBDL.<sup>3</sup> NBBD add εἰσω.<sup>4</sup> NC add εκ (Tisch.). BD omit (with T. R.). W.H. have it on margin.

—ῥάβδον: not even a staff! That can hardly be meant. Even from the romantic or picturesque point of view the procession of pilgrim missionaries would not be complete without a staff each in their hand. If not a necessity, at least, it was no luxury. Mark allows the staff, creating trouble for the harmonists. Grotius suggests: no second staff besides the one in hand! Glassius, quoted by Fritzsche in scorn, suggests a staff shod with iron (scipio) for defence. Ebrard, with approval of Godet, thinks of two different turns given to the Aramaic original Πῶς ὅσον = either "if you take one staff it is enough," or "if, etc., it is too much". Really the discrepancy is not worth all this trouble. Practically the two versions come to the same thing: take only a staff, take not even a staff; the latter is a little more hyperbolic than the former. Without even a staff, is the ne plus ultra of austere simplicity and self-denial. Men who carry out the spirit of these precepts will not labour in vain. Their life will preach the kingdom better than their words, which may be feeble and helpless. "Nothing," says Euthy., "creates admiration so much as a simple, contented life" (βίος ἄσκευος καὶ ὀλιγαρκείας). — ἄξιός . . . τ. τροφῆς: a maxim universally recognised. A labourer of the type described is not only worthy but sure of his meat; need have no concern about that. This is one of the few sayings of our Lord referred to by St. Paul (1 Cor. ix. 14), whose conduct as an apostle well illustrates the spirit of the instructions to the Twelve.

Vv. 11-15. ἔξετάσατε (ἐκ ἐτάζω, from ἐτέος, true; to inquire as to the truth of a matter). A host to be carefully sought out in each place: not to stay with the first who offers.—ἄξιός points to personal moral worth, the deciding consideration to be goodness, not wealth (worth so much). The host to be a man generally respected, that no prejudice be created against the mission (ne praedicationis dignitas suscipientis infamiâ deturpetur, Jerome).—μείνατε: having once secured a host, abide with him, shift not about seeking better quarters and fare, hurting the feelings of the host, and damaging your character, as self-seeking men.—Ver. 12. τὴν οἰκίαν, the house selected after due inquiry.—ἀσπάσασθε, salute it, not as a matter of formal courtesy, but with a serious mind, saying: "peace be with you," thinking the while of what peace the kingdom can bring.—Ver. 13. ἐὰν μὲν ἦ ἡ ο. ἀξία: after all pains have been taken, a mistake may be made; therefore the worthiness of the house is spoken of as uncertain (ἦ, in an emphatic position, so μὴ ἦ, in next clause).—ἐλθέτω ἡ εἰρήνη . . . ἐπιστραφήτω. The meaning is: the word of peace will not be spoken in vain; it will bless the speaker if not those addressed. It is always good to wish peace and good for others, however the wish may be received. There is a tacit warning against being provoked by choleric treatment. Ver. 14. ὅς ἐὰν μὴ δέξηται: Christ contemplates an unfavourable result of the mission in the host's house, or in the town or village generally. The construction of the sentence is anacolouthistic, beginning one way, ending another: rhetorical in effect, and suitable to emotional speech; cf. Lk. xxi. 6: "these things ye see—days will come in which not one stone will be left upon another" (vide Winer, § 63, on such constructions).—ἐξερχόμενοι: when an unreceptive attitude has once been decidedly taken up, there is nothing for it but to go away. Such a crisis severely tests the temper and spirit of promoters of good causes.—ἐκτινάξατε τὸν κονιορτὸν: a symbolic act practised by the Pharisees on passing from heathen to Jewish soil, the former being regarded as unclean

- k Ch. xi. 22, ὑμῶν. 15. ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, * ἀνεκτότερον ἔσται γῆ Σοδόμων καὶ
 24. Lk. x.
 22, 14. Γομόρρων ἐν ἡμέρᾳ κρίσεως, ἢ τῇ πόλει ἐκείνῃ.
 l Ch. xi. 10; 16. " Ἰδοῦ, ἐγὼ ἁποστελλω ὑμᾶς ὡς πρόβατα ἐν μέσῳ λύκων.
 m Rom. x. 15. γίνεσθε οὖν φρόνιμοι ὡς οἱ ὄφεις, καὶ ἄκέραιοι ὡς αἱ περισσότεραί.
 n Rom. xvi. 19. Phil. ii. 15. 17. ἢ προσέχετε δὲ ἀπὸ τῶν ἀνθρώπων· παραδώσουσι γὰρ ὑμᾶς εἰς o Ch. xx. 19; συνέδρια, καὶ ἐν ταῖς συναγωγαῖς αὐτῶν ὁ μαστιγώσουσιν ὑμᾶς.
 xxiii. 34. Mk. x. 34. Lk. xviii. 33. John xix. 1. Heb. xii. 6.

(Light., Hor. Heb.): Easy to perform, not easy to perform in a right spirit; too apt to be the outcome of irritation, disappointment, and wounded vanity = they did not appreciate me, I abandon them to their fate. Christ meant the act to symbolise the responsibility of the inhabitants for the result = leave the place, feeling that you have done your duty, not in anger but in sadness. The act, if performed, would be a last word of warning (εἰς μαρτύριον αὐτοῖς, Mark and Luke). Grotius and Bleek understand it as meaning: "we have nothing more to do with you".—Ver. 15. γῆ Σ. καὶ Γ.: ὁδομ and Gomorrah, a byword for great iniquity and awful doom (Is. i. 9), γῆ, land for people.—ἀνεκτότερον: yet the punishment of these wicked cities, tragic though it was, or the punishment still in store, more endurable than that of city or village which rejects the message of the kingdom. This may seem an exaggeration, the utterance of passion rather than of sober judgment, and a dangerous thing to say to raw disciples and apprentice missionaries. But the principle involved is plain: the greater the privilege rejected the greater the criminality. The utterance reveals the high value Jesus set on the good tidings He commissioned the Twelve to preach.

Vv. 16-39. Prophetic picture of future apostolic tribulations. An interpolation of our evangelist after his manner of grouping logia of kindred import. The greater part of the material is given in other connections in Mark, and especially in Luke. No feeling of delicacy should prevent even the preacher from taking this view, as it destroys all sense of the natural reality of the Galilean mission to suppose that this passage formed part of Christ's instructions to the Twelve in connection therewith. Reading into the early event the thoughts and experiences of a later time was inevitable, but to get a true picture of the life of Jesus and His disciples, we must keep the two as distinct as possible. There may be a doubt as to ver. 16. It stands at the beginning of the instructions to the Seventy in Luke (x. 2), which, according to Weiss (Matth. Evang., p. 263), are really the instructions to the Twelve in their most original form. But it is hard to believe that Jesus took and expressed so pessimistic a view of the Galilean villagers to whom He was sending the Twelve, as is implied in the phrase, "sheep among wolves," though He evidently did include occasional un-receptivity among the possible experiences of the mission. He may indeed have said something of the kind with an understood reference to the hostility of Pharisaic religionists, but as it stands unqualified, it seems to bear a colouring imported from a later period.

Ver. 16. Ἰδοῦ, something important is going to be said.—ἐγὼ, emphatic: Jesus is conscious that connection with Him will be a source not only of power, but of trouble to the Twelve.—ἐν μέσῳ: not to wolves (πρὸς λύκους, Chrys.). They were not sent for that purpose, which would be a mission to destruction, but on an errand of which that would be an incident. ἐν is used here as often, especially in later Greek writers, with a verb of motion to indicate a subsequent chronic state, "the result of a love of conciseness" (Winer, § 50, 4, 2).—γίνεσθε . . . περισσότεραί. The serpent, the accepted emblem of wisdom (Gen. iii. 1; Ps. lvi. 5)—wary, sharp-sighted (Grotius); the dove of simplicity (Hos. vii. 11, "silly dove," ἄνους, Sept.).—ἀκέραιοι (α, κεράννυμι), unmixed with evil, purely good. The ideal resulting from the combination is a prudent simplicity; difficult to realise. The proverb seems to have been current among the Jews. "God says: 'with me the Israelites are simple as the dove, but against the heathen cunning as the serpent'" (Wünsche, Beiträge).—Ver. 17. τῶν ἀνθρώπων: Weiss, regarding ver. 17 as the beginning of an interpolation, takes τῶν ἀνθρώπων = the whole race of men conceived of as on the whole hostile to the truth =

18. καὶ ἐπὶ ἡγεμόνας δὲ καὶ βασιλεῖς ἀχθήσεσθε ἕνεκεν ἐμοῦ, εἰς μαρτύριον αὐτοῖς καὶ τοῖς ἔθνεσιν. 19. ὅταν δὲ παραδιδῶσιν ἡμᾶς, μὴ μεριμνήσητε πῶς ἢ τί λαλήσητε. ὁδοῦσεται γὰρ ὑμῖν ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ὥρᾳ τί λαλήσετε. 20. οὐ γὰρ ὑμεῖς ἐστε οἱ λαλοῦντες, ἀλλὰ τὸ Πνεῦμα τοῦ πατρὸς ὑμῶν τὸ λαλοῦν ἐν ὑμῖν. 21. Ἐπιπρονοεῖ δὲ ἀδελφὸς ἀδελφὸν εἰς θάνατον, καὶ πατὴρ τέκνον· καὶ ἑπαναστῆσονται τέκνα ἐπὶ γονεῖς, καὶ θανατώσουσιν αὐτούς. 22. καὶ ἔσεσθε μισούμενοι ὑπὸ πάντων διὰ τὸ ὄνομά μου· ὁ δὲ ὑπομείνας εἰς τὴν ἑσπέραν σωθήσεται. Ch. xx. 27.
Mk. xiii.
12. 2 Cor.
iv. 11 (same phrase).
Mk. xiii.
12. (Deut.
xix. 11.
Micah vii.
6.)
Ch. xxvi.
59; xxvii.
1. 2 Cor.
vi. 9.
Ch. xxiv.
13. Rom.
xii. 12. a Ch. xxiv. 13. Lk. xviii. 5. John xiii. 1.

<sup>1</sup> B have παραδωσιν (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> BC have λαλήσητε = what ye ought to speak. The fut. ind. (T. R.) = what ye will speak. The former is to be preferred. DL omit the whole clause from δοθήσεται το λαλήσητε, an error of similar ending.

κόσμος in the fourth Gospel (xv. 19; xvii. 14). It seems more natural to find in it a reference to the Λύκοι of ver. 16. Beware of the class of men I have in view. So Eras., Elsner, Fritzsche.—συνέδρια, the higher tribunals, selected to represent courts of justice of all grades, to denote the serious nature of the danger.—συναγωγαῖς. The synagogue is referred to here, not merely as a place of worship, but as a juridical assembly exercising discipline and inflicting penalties (Grotius). Among these was scourging (μαστιγώσουσιν, vide Acts xxii. 19; xxvi. 11; 2 Cor. xi. 24).—Ver. 18. ἡγεμόνας, provincial governors, including the three degrees: Propraetors, Proconsuls, and Procurators. From the point of view of the evangelist, who conceives the whole discourse as connected with the Galilean mission confined to Jews, the reference can only be to Roman governors in Palestine. But in Christ's mind they doubtless had a larger scope, and pointed to judicial tribunals in the larger, Gentile world.—εἰς μαρτύριον. The compensation for the incriminated will be that, when they stand on their defence, they will have an opportunity of witnessing for the Master (ἕνεκεν ἐμοῦ) and the Cause. Observe the combination καὶ δὲ in first clause of this verse, καὶ before ἐπὶ ἡγεμόνας, δὲ after it. It introduces a further particular under a double point of view, with καὶ so far as similar, with δὲ so far as different (Bäumlein, Schulgram., § 675, also Gr. Partikeln, 188, 9). A more formidable experience.

Vv. 19-22. μὴ μεριμνήσητε, etc.: a second counsel against anxiety (Matt. vi. 25), this time not as to food and raiment, but as to speech at a critical hour. With equal emphasis: trouble not yourselves either as to manner or matter, word or thought (πῶς ἢ τί).—δοθήσεται: thought, word, tone, gesture—everything that tends to impress—all will be given at the critical hour (ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ὥρᾳ). In the former instance anxiety was restricted to the day (Matt. vi. 34). Full, absolute inspiration promised for the supreme moment.—οὐ γὰρ ὑμεῖς, etc.: not you but the divine Spirit the speaker. οὐ, ἀλλὰ, non tam quam, interprets Grotius, followed by Pricaeus, Elsner, Fritzsche, etc. = not so much you as; as if it were an affair of division of labour, so much ours, so much, and more, God's. It is, however, all God's, and yet all ours. It is a case of immanent action, τὸ λαλοῦν ἐν ὑμῖν, not of a transcendent power coming in upon us to help our infirmity, eking out our imperfect speech. Note the Spirit is called the Spirit τοῦ πατρὸς ὑμῶν, echo of vi. 32. Some of the greatest, most inspired utterances have been speeches made by men on trial for religious convictions. A good conscience, tranquillity of spirit, and a sense of the greatness of the issue involved, make human speech at such times touch the sublime. Theophy. distinguishes the human and the divine in such utterances thus: ours to confess, God's to make a wise apology (τὸ μὲν ὁμολογεῖν ἡμέτερον, τὸ δὲ σοφῶς ἀπολογεῖσθαι Θεοῦ).—Ver. 22. εἰς τέλος, to the end (of the tribulations) described (vv. 21-22); to the end, and not merely at the beginning (Theophy., Beza, Fritzsche, Weiss, etc.). No easy thing to do, when such inhumanities and barbarities are going on, all natural and family affections outraged. But it helps to know, as is here

" here only in the sense of going over. Similar phrases in Greek and Latin authors.

τέλος, οὗτος σωθήσεται. 23. ὅταν δὲ διώκωσιν ὑμᾶς ἐν τῇ πόλει ταύτῃ, φεύγετε εἰς τὴν ἄλλην.<sup>1</sup> ἄμην γὰρ λέγω ὑμῖν, οὐ μὴ ἂν τελέσητε τὰς πόλεις τοῦ<sup>2</sup> Ἰσραὴλ, ἕως ἂν<sup>3</sup> ἔλθῃ ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου. 24. Οὐκ ἔστι μαθητῆς ὑπὲρ τὸν διδάσκαλον, οὐδὲ

<sup>1</sup> ἑτέραν in  $\aleph B$  (W.H., ἄλλην in margin).

<sup>2</sup> BD omit the article.

<sup>3</sup>  $\aleph BX$  omit  $\alpha\nu$ .

indirectly intimated, that there will be an end, that religious animosities will not last for ever. Even persecutors and guillotiners get weary of their savage work. On εἰς τέλος Beza remarks: declarat neque momentaneam neque perpetuam hanc conditionem fore.—οὗτος σωθήσεται, he, emphatic, he and no other, shall be saved, in the day of final award (James i. 12, "shall receive the crown of life"); also, for the word is pregnant, shall be saved from moral shipwreck. How many characters go miserably down through cowardice and lack of moral fibre in the day of trial!

Ver. 23. ὅταν δὲ: the thought takes a new comforting turn, much needed to reconcile disciples to the grim prospect. With courage and loyalty effort for self-preservation is quite compatible. Therefore, when they persecute here flee there.—ἐν τῇ πόλει ταύτῃ, in this city, pointing to it, this standing for one.—φεύγετε, flee, very unheroic apparently, but the bravest soldier, especially an old campaigner, will avail himself of cover when he can.

εἰς τὴν ἑτέραν: the reading of  $\aleph B$  is to be preferred to ἄλλην of the T.R., the idea being: flee not merely to another city numerically distinct, but to a city presumably different in spirit (vide vi. 24 and xi. 16), where you may hope to receive better treatment. Thus the flight, from being a mere measure of self-preservation, is raised to the dignity of a policy of prudence in the interest of the cause. Why throw away life here among a hostile people when you may do good work elsewhere?—Ἀμην γὰρ: reason for the advice solemnly given; an important declaration, and a perplexing one for interpreters.—οὐ μὴ, have no fear lest, ye will certainly not have finished—τελέσητε. In what sense? "gone over" (A.V.) in their evangelising tour, or done the work of evangelising thoroughly? (ad fidei et evangelicæ virtutis perfectionem—Hilary). The former is the more natural interpretation. And yet the connection of thought seems to demand a mental reference to the quality of the work done. Why tarry at one place as if you were under obligation to convert the whole population to the kingdom? The thing cannot be done. The two views may be combined thus: ye shall not have gone through the towns of Israel evangelising them in even a superficial way, much less in a thorough-going manner. Weiss takes the word τελ. as referring not to mission work but to flight = ye shall not have used all the cities as places of refuge, i.e., there will always be some place to flee to. This is beneath the dignity of the situation, especially in view of what follows.—ἕως ἔλθῃ ὁ υἱὸς τ. δ. Here again is the peculiar title Son of Man: impersonal, but used presumably as a synonym for "I". What does it mean in this connection? And what is the coming referred to? The latter question can be best answered at a later stage. It has been suggested that the title Son of Man is here used by Christ in opposition to the title Son of David. The meaning of ver. 23 on that view is this: do not think it necessary to tarry at all hazards in one place. Your work anywhere and everywhere must be very imperfect. Even success will mean failure, for as soon as they have received the tidings of the kingdom they will attach wrong ideas to it, thinking of it as a national kingdom and of me as the "Son of David". No thorough work can be done till the Son of Man has come, i.e., till a universal Gospel for humanity has begun to be preached (Luttheroth). This is a fresh suggestion, not to be despised, on so obscure a subject. We are only feeling our way as to the meaning of some of Christ's sayings. Meantime, all that we can be sure of is that Christ points to some event not far off that will put a period to the apostolic mission.

Vv. 24, 25 point to another source of consolation—companionship with the Master in tribulation. A hard lot, but mine as well as yours; you would not expect to be better off than the Master

δούλος ὑπὲρ τῶν κύριον αὐτοῦ. 25. ἄρκετόν τῷ μαθητῇ ἵνα γένηται <sup>vide Ch. VI. 34.</sup> ὡς ὁ διδάσκαλος αὐτοῦ, καὶ ὁ θυόλος ὡς ὁ κύριος αὐτοῦ. εἰ τὸν <sup>ἵνα after ἀρκ.</sup> οἰκοδεσπότην <sup>Similar phrases in Ch. v. 29, 30; xviii. 6. Lk. xvii. 2.</sup> <sup>al.</sup> Βεελζεβοῦλ ἐκάλεσαν, <sup>Ch. xx. 1, 11.</sup> πόσω μᾶλλον τοὺς οἰκιακοὺς <sup>z Lk. xii. 3. a Lk. i. 44. Acts xi. 22.</sup> αὐτοῦ; 26. Μὴ οὖν φοβηθῆτε αὐτούς· οὐδέν γάρ ἐστι κεκαλυμμένον, ὃ οὐκ ἀποκαλυφθήσεται· καὶ κρυπτόν, ὃ οὐ γνωσθήσεται. 27. ὃ λέγω ὑμῖν ἐν τῇ σκοτίᾳ, εἶπατε ἐν τῷ φωτί· καὶ ὃ εἰς τὸ

<sup>1</sup> B has οἰκοδεσποτη (dat.). W.H. put this reading in the margin.

<sup>2</sup> ἐπεκάλεσαν in  $\aleph^c$  B C Δ Σ al., adopted by most editors.  $\aleph$  has the middle voice.

<sup>3</sup> B has the dative here also.

and Lord.—Ver. 25. ἄρκετόν, not as in vi. 34 a neuter adjective used as a noun, but a predicate qualifying the clause ἵνα γεν., etc., as noun to verb ἐστι understood. ἵνα γένηται instead of the infinitive; ὁ δούλος instead of τῷ δούλῳ dependent like τῷ μαθητῇ on ἄρκετόν, by attraction of the nearer word γένηται (vide Winer, § 66, 5).—οἰκοδεσπότην (-τη, B.) points to a more intimate relation between Jesus and the Twelve, that of a head of a house to a family, implying greater honour for the latter, and suggesting an added motive for patient endurance of the common lot.—οἰκοδεσπότης is a late form. Earlier writers said οἰκίας δεσπότης, Lob., Phryn., p. 373.—Βεελζεβοῦλ: an opprobrious epithet; exact form of the word and meaning of the name have given more trouble to commentators than it is all worth. Consult Meyer ad loc. Weiss (Meyer) remarks that the name of the Prince of the demons is not yet sufficiently explained. A question of interest is: did the enemies of Jesus call Him Beelzebul (or Beelzebub), or did they merely reproach Him with connection with Beelzebub? Weiss, taking ver. 25 b as an explanatory gloss of the evangelist, based on ix. 3, xii. 24, adopts the latter view; De Wette and Meyer the former. The reading of Codex B, οἰκοδεσπότη, favours the other alternative. The dative requires the verb ἐπεκάλεσαν to be taken in the sense of to cast up to one. Assuming that the evangelist reports words of Jesus instead of giving a comment of his own, they may quite well contain the information that, among the contemptuous epithets applied to Jesus by His enemies, was this name. It may have been a spiteful pun upon the name, master of the house.—πόσω μᾶλλον implies that still worse names will be applied to the Twelve. Dictis respondet eventus, remarks

Grotius, citing in proof the epithets γόγτας, impostores, applied to the apostles and Christians by Celsus and Ulpian, and the words of Tacitus: convictos in odio humani generis, and the general use of ἄθεοι as a synonym for Christians.—οἰκιακοὺς (again in ver. 36), those belonging to a household or family (from οἰκία, whence also the more common οἰκείος bearing a similar meaning).

Vv. 26, 27. μὴ οὖν φοβηθῆτε: "fear not," and again "fear not" in ver. 28, and yet again, 31, says Jesus, knowing well what temptation there would be to fear. οὖν connects with vv. 24, 25; fear not the inevitable for all connected with me, as you are, take it calmly. γάρ supplies a reason for fearlessness arising out of their vocation. It is involved in the apostolic calling that those who exercise it should attract public attention. Therefore, fear not what cannot be avoided if you would be of any use. Fear suits not an apostle any more than a soldier or a sailor, who both take coolly the risks of their calling.—κεκαλυμμένον, ἀποκαλυφθήσεται; κρυπτόν, γνωσθήσεται: the two pairs of words embody a contrast between Master and disciples as to relative publicity. As movements develop they come more under the public eye. Christ's teaching and conduct were not wholly covered and hidden. There was enough publicity to ensure ample criticism and hostility. But, relatively, His ministry was obscure compared to that of the apostles in after years to which the address looks forward. Therefore, more not less, tribulation to be looked for. The futures ἀποκαλ. γνωσ. with the relative virtually express intention; cf. Mk. iv. 22, where ἵνα occurs; the hidden is hidden in order to be revealed. That is the law of the case to which apostles must reconcile themselves.—Ver. 27. σκοτία, the darkness of the initial stage; the begin-

b Ch. xxiv. οὐς ἀκούετε, κηρύξατε ἐπὶ τῶν <sup>b</sup> δωματίων. 28. καὶ μὴ <sup>c</sup> φοβηθῆτε <sup>1</sup>
 17. Mk.
 xiii. 15. ἀπὸ τῶν ἀποκτείνοντων <sup>2</sup> τὸ σῶμα, τὴν δὲ ψυχὴν μὴ δυναμένω
 Lk. v. 19;
 xvii. 31. ἀποκτείνει· φοβήθητε <sup>3</sup> δὲ μᾶλλον τὸν δυνάμενον καὶ ψυχὴν καὶ c with ἀπό.
 Lk. xii. 4. σῶμα ἀπολέσαι ἐν γενένη. 29. οὐχὶ δύο <sup>d</sup> στρουθία ἀσσαρίου
 d Lk. xii. 6, πωλεῖται; καὶ ἐν ἑξ αὐτῶν οὐ πεσεῖται ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν <sup>e</sup> ἄνευ τοῦ e 1 Pet. iii.
 1; iv. 9. πατὴρ ὑμῶν· 30 ὑμῶν δὲ καὶ αἱ τρίχες τῆς κεφαλῆς πᾶσαι
 f Lk. xii. 7. <sup>f</sup> ἠριθμημένοι εἰσὶ. 31. μὴ οὖν φοβηθῆτε <sup>4</sup>. πολλῶν στρουθίων δια-
 Rev. vii. 9. <sup>f</sup> ἠριθμημένοι εἰσὶ. 31. μὴ οὖν φοβηθῆτε <sup>4</sup>. πολλῶν στρουθίων δια-

<sup>1</sup> So in DΣ, adopted by W.H. ΞBCLΔ al. have φοβεῖσθε (Tisch.).

<sup>2</sup> ΞCΔΔΣ have the Alexandrian form ἀποκτενοντων.

<sup>3</sup> φοβεῖσθε here in ΞBC against D.

<sup>4</sup> φοβεῖσθε in ΞBDL (Tisch., W.H. al.).

nings of great epoch-making movements always obscure.—φωτί, the light of publicity, when causes begin to make a noise in the wide world.—εἰς τὸ οὐς: a phrase current among Greeks for confidential communications. For such communications to disciples the Rabbis used the term

שָׁפַר, to whisper. λαληθέν may be understood = what ye hear spoken into the ear.—δοματίων, on the roofs; not a likely platform from our western point of view, but the flat-roofed houses of the East are in view. δῶμα in classics means house; in Sept. and N. T., the flat roof of a house; in modern Greek, terrace. Vide Kennedy, Sources of N. T. Greek, p. 121.—κηρύξατε, proclaim with loud voice, suitable to your commanding position, wide audience, and great theme.

Vv. 28-31. New antidote to fear drawn from a greater fear, and from the paternal providence of God. φοβήθητε ἀπὸ like the Hebrew יָרָא מִיְיָ, but also one of several ways in which the Greeks connected this verb with its object.—τὸ σῶμα: that is all the persecutor as such can injure or destroy. He not only cannot injure the soul, but the more he assails the physical side the safer the spiritual.—τὸν δυνάμενον καὶ ψ. καὶ σ. Who is that? God, say most commentators. Not so, I believe. Would Christ present God under this aspect in such close connection with the Father who cares even for the sparrows? What is to be greatly feared is not the final condemnation, but that which leads to it—temptation to forsake the cause of God out of regard to self-interest or self-preservation. Shortly the counsel is: fear not the persecutor, but the tempter, not the man who kills you for your fidelity, but the man who wants to buy you off, and the devil whose agent he is.—Ver. 29 στρουθία, dim. for στρουθός, small birds in general, sparrows in particular.—ἀσσαρίου, a brass coin, Latin as, γ of a δραχμή = about  $\frac{1}{4}$ d. The smallness of the price makes it probable that sparrows are meant (Fritzsche). We are apt to wonder that sparrows had a price at all.—ἐν . . . οὐ looks like a Hebraism, but found also in Greek writers, “cannot be called either a Graecism or a Hebraism; in every case the writer aims at greater emphasis than would be conveyed by οὐδεῖς, which properly means the same thing, but had become weakened by usage” (Winer, § 26).—ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν. Chrys. paraphrases: εἰς παγίδα (Hom. 34), whence Bengel conjectured that the primitive reading was not γῆν but πάγην, the first syllable of a little used word falling out. But Wetstein and Fritzsche have pointed out that ἐπὶ does not suit that reading. The idea is that not a single sparrow dies from any cause on wing or perch, and falls dead to the earth—ἄνευ τ. πατὸρς ὑ. Origen (c. Celsum, i. 9) remarks: “nothing useful among men comes into existence without God” (ἀθεεῖ). Christ expresses a more absolute faith in Providence: “the meanest creature passes not out of existence unobserved of your Father”.—Ver. 30. ὑμῶν, emphatic position: your hairs.—τρίχες: of little value all together, can be lost without detriment to life or health.—πᾶσαι, all, every one without exception.—ἠριθμημένοι, counted. Men count only valuable things, gold pieces, sheep, etc. Note the perfect participle. They have been counted once for all, and their number noted; one hair cannot go amissing unobserved.—Ver. 31. π. σ. διαφέρετε: once more, as in vi. 26, a comparison between men and birds as to value: ye of more worth than many φέρετε ὑμεῖς. 32. Πᾶς οὖν ὅστις ἔομολογήσει ἐν ἐμοὶ ἔμπροσθεν τῶν ἀνθρώπων, ὁμολογήσω καὶ ἐν αὐτῷ ἔμπροσθεν τοῦ πατρὸς μου τοῦ ἐν<sup>1</sup> οὐρανοῖς. 33. ὅστις δ' ἂν ἄρνησηταί με ἔμπροσθεν τῶν ἀνθρώπων, ἀρνήσομαι αὐτὸν καὶ ἐν<sup>2</sup> ἔμπροσθεν τοῦ πατρὸς μου τοῦ ἐν<sup>3</sup> οὐρανοῖς. 34. Μὴ νομίσητε ὅτι ἦλθον ἰβαλεῖν εἰρήνην ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν· οὐκ ἦλθον βαλεῖν εἰρήνην, ἀλλὰ μάχαιραν. 35. ἦλθον διχάσαι ἄνθρωπον κατὰ τοῦ πατρὸς αὐτοῦ, καὶ θυγατέρα κατὰ τῆς μητρὸς αὐτῆς, καὶ νύμφην κατὰ τῆς πενθερᾶς αὐτῆς· 36. καὶ ἐχθροὶ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου οἱ οἰκιακοὶ αὐτοῦ. 37. Ὁ φιλῶν πατέρα ἢ μητέρα ὑπὲρ ἐμέ, οὐκ ἔστι μου ἀξίος· καὶ ὁ φιλῶν υἱὸν ἢ θυγατέρα ὑπὲρ

also in Lk
xii. 8 (with εἰ and dat.).
Ch. xxvii
70, 72. Lk
xii. 9.
John xx
25. Jas. iii
3. Rev.
xiv. 16, 19.

<sup>1</sup> τοις before οὐρανοῖς in BCΣ.

<sup>2</sup> καγω αυτον in ΞBΔΔΣ.

<sup>3</sup> τοις before ουρ. in BX (W.H. adopt the art. both in ι and in 3).

sparrows; one hair of your head as much worth to God as one sparrow. "It is a litotes to say that there is a great difference between many sparrows and a human being" (Holtz., H.C.). There is really no comparison between them. It was by such simple comparisons that Jesus insinuated His doctrine of the absolute worth of man.

Vv. 32, 33. Solemn reference to the final Judgment. οὖν points back to ver. 27, containing injunction to make open proclamation of the truth.—πᾶς ὅστις: nominative absolute at the head of the sentence.—ἐν ἐμοί, ἐν αὐτῷ: observe these phrases after the verb in ver. 32, compared with the use of the accusative με, αὐτὸν in the following verse: "confess in me," "deny me," "confess in him," "deny him". Chrysostom's comment is: we confess by the grace of Christ, we deny destitute of grace. Origen (Cremer, Catena, i. p. 80) interprets the varying construction as indicating that the profit of the faithful disciple lies in fellowship with Christ and the loss of the unfaithful in the lack of such fellowship. (ὄρα δὲ, εἰ μὴ τὸ πλεονέκτημα τοῦ ἐν αὐτῷ ὁμολογοῦντος, ἦδη ὄντως ἐν χριστῷ δηλοῦται, ἐκ τοῦ, "καὶ ἐν αὐτῷ" ὁμολογεῖν· τὸ δὲ κακὸν τοῦ ἀρνούμενου, ἐκ τοῦ μὴ συνήφθαι τῇ ἀρνήσει τὸ "ἐν ἐμοί," ἢ τὸ "ἐν αὐτῷ".)

Vv. 34-39. The whole foregoing discourse, by its announcements and consolations, implies that dread experiences are in store for the apostles of the faith. To the inexperienced the question might naturally suggest itself, why? Can the new religion not propagate itself quietly and peaceably? Jesus meets the question of the surprised disciple with a declared negative.—Ver. 34. μὴ νομίσητε, do not imagine, as you are very likely to do (cf. v. 17).—ἦλθον βαλεῖν: the use of the infinitive to express aim is common in Matt., but Christ has here in view result rather than purpose, which are not carefully distinguished in Scripture. For βαλεῖν Luke has δοῦναι, possibly with a feeling that the former word does not suit εἰρήνην. It is used specially with reference to μάχαιραν. The aorist points to a sudden single action. Christ came to bring peace on earth, but not in an immediate magical way; peace at last through war (Weiss, Matt. Evang.).—μάχαιραν: Luke substitutes διαμερισμόν. The connecting link may be that the sword divides in two (Heb. iv. 12). Grotius says that by the word there should be understood: "non bellum sed dissidium".—Ver. 35. Description of the discord.—διχάσαι, to divide in two (δίχα), to separate in feeling and interest, here only in N.T.; verifies the truth of Grotius' comment as to the "sword".—ἄνθρωπον κατὰ τοῦ πατρὸς αὐτοῦ. In this and the following clauses it is the young that are set against the old. "In all great revolutions of thought the change begins from the young" (Carr, Cambridge Gr. T.).—νύμφην, a young wife, here as opposed to πενθερᾶς, a daughter-in-law.—Ver. 36. ἐχθροὶ: the predicate standing first for emphasis; enemies, not friends as one would expect, the members of one's family (οἰκιακοί, as in ver. 25). The passage reproduces freely Micah vii. 6.—Ver. 37. Such a state of matters imposes the necessity of making a very painful choice between relatives and truth.—φιλῶν: this verb denotes natural affection as distinct from ἀγαπάω, which ἐμέ, οὐκ ἔστι μου ἄξιος· 38. καὶ ὃς οὐ λαμβάνει τὸν σταυρὸν αὐτοῦ καὶ ἀκολουθεῖ ὀπίσω μου, οὐκ ἔστι μου ἄξιος. 39. ὁ εὐρὼν τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ ἀπολέσει αὐτήν· καὶ ὁ ἀπολέσας τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ ἔνεκεν ἐμοῦ εὐρήσει αὐτήν. 40. Ὁ δεχόμενος ὑμᾶς ἐμὲ δέχεται· καὶ ὁ ἐμὲ δεχόμενος δέχεται τὸν ἀποστειλαντά με. 41. ὁ δεχόμενος προφήτην <sup>1</sup> εἰς ὄνομα προφήτου μισθὸν προφήτου λήψεται· καὶ ὁ δεχόμενος δίκαιον εἰς ὄνομα δικαίου μισθὸν δικαίου λήψεται· 42. καὶ ὃς ἐάν <sup>1</sup> ποτίσῃ ἓνα τῶν μικρῶν τούτων ποτήριον <sup>1</sup> ψυχροῦ μόνον εἰς ὄνομα μαθητοῦ, ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, οὐ μὴ ἀπολέσῃ τὸν μισθὸν αὐτοῦ.”

<sup>1</sup> ὅς an in BD 33.

points to love of an ethical kind. The distinction corresponds to that between amare and diligere. Vide Trench, Synonymis, and Cremer, s. v., ἀγαπάω.—μου ἄξιος. The Master is peremptory; absolutely demands preference of His cause to all claims of earthly relations.—Ver. 38. σταυρὸν. There is here no necessary allusion to the death of Jesus Himself by crucifixion, though one possessing such insight into the course of events, as this whole discourse indicates, must have known quite well when He uttered the words what awaited Himself, the worst possible probable if not certain. The reference is to the custom of the condemned person carrying his own cross. Death by crucifixion, though not practised among the Jews, would be familiar to them through Roman custom. Vide Grotius for Greek and Roman phrases, containing figurative allusions to the cross. This sentence and the next will occur again in this Gospel (Matt. xvi. 24, 25).—Ver. 39. εὐρὼν . . . ἀπολέσει, ἀπολέσας. . . εὐρήσει: crucifixion, death ignominious, as a criminal—horrible; but horrible though it be it means salvation. This paradox is one of Christ's great, deep, yet ever true words. It turns on a double sense of the term ψυχὴ as denoting now the lower now the higher life. Every wise man understands and acts on the maxim, “dying to live”.

Vv. 40-42. The following sentences might have been spoken in connection with the early Galilean mission, and are accordingly regarded by Weiss as the conclusion of the instructions then given. Luke gives their gist (x. 16) at the close of the instructions to the seventy. After uttering many awful, stern sayings, Jesus takes care to make the last cheering. He promises great rewards to those who receive the missionaries, thereby “opening the houses of the whole world to them,” Chrysos.—Ver. 40. ἐμὲ δέχεται: first the principle is laid down that to receive the messenger is to receive the Master who sent him (Matt. xxv. 40), as to receive the Master is to receive God.—Ver. 41. Then in two distinct forms the law is stated that to befriend the representative of Christ and God ensures the reward belonging to that representative.—εἰς ὄνομα, having regard to the fact that he is a prophet or righteous man. The prophet is the principal object of thought, naturally, in connection with a mission to preach truth. But Christ knows (vii. 15) that there are false prophets as well as true; therefore from vocation He falls back on personal character. Here as everywhere we see how jealousy He made the ethical interest supreme. “See,” says Chrys., commenting on ver. 8, “how He cares for their morals, not less than for the miracles, showing that the miracles without the morals are nought” (Hom. 32). So here He says in effect: let the prophet be of no account unless he be a just, good man. The fundamental matter is character, and the next best thing is sincere respect for it. To the latter Christ promises the reward of the former.—ὁ δεχόμενος δίκαιον . . . μισθὸν δ. λήψεται: a strong, bold statement made to promote friendly feeling towards the moral heroes of the world in the hearts of ordinary people; not the utterance of a didactic theologian scientifically measuring his words. Yet there is a great principle underlying, essentially the same as that involved in St. Paul's doctrine of justification by faith. The man who has goodness enough to reverence the ideal of goodness approximately or perfectly realised in another,

XI. 1. Καὶ ἐγένετο ὅτε ἐτέλεσεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς διατάσων τοῖς δώδεκα μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ, * μετέβη ἐκεῖθεν τοῦ διδάσκειν καὶ κηρύσσειν ἐν α Ch. xii. 9; xv. 29 (with ἐκεῖθεν).

2. Ὁ ΔΕ Ἰωάννης ἀκούσας ἐν τῷ <sup>b</sup> δεσμωτηρίῳ τὰ ἔργα τοῦ <sup>b</sup> Χριστοῦ, πέμψας δύο <sup>1</sup> τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ, 3. εἶπεν αὐτῷ, “Σὺ Acts v. 21, 23; xvi. 26.

<sup>1</sup> Ἡ ΒC D Δ Σ have δια. δυο is a harmonistic assimilation to Lk.

though not in himself, shall, in the moral order of the world, be counted as a good man.—Ver. 42. The last word, and the most beautiful; spoken with deep pathos as an aside; about the disciples rather than to them, though heard by them. “Whosoever shall do the smallest service, were it but to give a drink to one of these little ones (ἐνα τῶν μικρῶν τούτων, cf. Matt. xxv. 40) in the name of a disciple, I declare solemnly even he shall without fail have his appropriate reward.”—ψυχροῦ: expressive word for water, indicating the quality valued by the thirsty; literally a cup of the cool, suggesting by contrast the heat of the sun and the fierce thirst of the weary traveller. No small boon that cup in Palestine! “In this hot and dry land, where one can wander for hours without coming on a brook or an accessible cistern, you say ‘thank you’ for a drink of fresh water with very different feelings than we do at home” (Furrer, Wanderungen durch das Heilige Land, p. 118).—Fritzsche remarks on the paucity of particles in vv. 34-42 as indicating the emotional condition of the speaker.

CHAPTER XI. JESUS JUDGED BY AND JUDGING HIS CONTEMPORARIES. We are not to suppose any close connection in time between the events related in this chapter and the Galilean mission. The reverse is implied in the vague introductory statement, that when Jesus had completed His instructions to the Twelve He went away on a teaching and preaching tour among the towns. The important thing is to realise that all that is related here must have taken place after there had been time for the methods, aims, spirit, and way of life of Jesus to manifest themselves, and so to become the subject of general remark. It was a matter of course that a man of such depth, originality, unconventionality, energy and fearless independence would sooner or later provoke criticism of all shades; from mild, honest doubt, to decided reprobation. However popular at first, He must become at last comparatively isolated. By the time the events here related occurred, the reaction had fully set in, and the narrative shows how extensive it was, embracing within its sphere of influence the best in the land represented by the Baptist; the commercial class represented by three cities named; the professional class—the “wise and understanding”; and the zealots in religion.

Ver. 1. ὅτε ἐτέλεσεν διατάσων. The participle here with a verb signifying to cease as often with verbs signifying to begin, continue, persevere, etc., vide Goodwin, § 879. ἐκεῖθεν, from that place, the place where the mission was given to the Twelve. Where that was we do not know; probably in some place of retirement (dans la retraite, Lutteroth).—πόλεσιν αὐτῶν: the pronoun does not refer to the disciples (μαθηταῖς) as Fritzsche thinks, but to the people of Galilee. While He sent out the Twelve to preach, He continued preaching Himself, only avoiding the places they visited, “giving room to them and time to do their work, for, with Him present and healing, no one would have cared to go near them,” Chrysos., Hom. 36.

Vv. 2-6. Message from the Baptist (Lk. vii. 18-23). Ver. 2. δεσμωτηρίῳ (from δεσμός, δεσμός, a bond), in prison in the fortress of Machærus by the Dead Sea (Joseph., Antiq., 18, 5, 2), a fact already alluded to in iv. 12. By this time he has been a prisoner a good while, long enough to develop a prison mood.—ἀκούσας: not so close a prisoner but that friends and followers can get access to him (cf. Matt. xxv. 36, 43).—τὰ ἔργα τοῦ χριστοῦ: this the subject in which the Baptist is chiefly interested. What is Jesus doing? But the evangelist does not say the works of Jesus, but of the Christ, i.e., of the man who was believed to be the Christ, the works which were supposed to point Him out as the Christ. In what spirit reported, whether simply as news, with sympathy, or with jealousy, not indicated.—πέμψας: the news set John on musing, and led to a message of inquiry—διὰ τ. μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ, by his ε John vi. 14. Heb. x. 37. εἰ δ' ἔρχόμενος, ἢ ἕτερον <sup>4</sup> προσδοκῶμεν; 4. Καὶ ἀποκριθεὶς δ' ἰησοῦς εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, " Πορευθέντες ἀπαγγεῖλατε Ἰωάννῃ, ἃ ἀκούετε Lk. i. 21; καὶ βλέπετε. 5. τυφλοὶ *ἀναβλέπουσι, καὶ <sup>1</sup> χωλοὶ περιπατοῦσι. Acts x. 28. λεπροὶ καθαρῖζονται, καὶ κωφοὶ ἀκούουσι· νεκροὶ ἐγείρονται, καὶ 2 Pet. iii. 12, 14 (all with accus.). c Ch. xx. 34. Mk. x. 51. Lk. xviii. 41 (= to recover sight).

<sup>1</sup> The texts show some unimportant variations in ref. to the καὶ in this and the following clauses. In the best MSS. there is a καὶ before νεκροί.

disciples, possibly the same men who brought the news. There would be constant coming and going between Galilee and Machærus. The construction is Hebraistic = sent by the hand of.—Ver. 3. εἶπεν αὐτῷ, said to Jesus, by them, of course.—Σὺ εἶ: the question a grave one and emphatically expressed: Thou, art Thou ὁ ἐρχόμενος? Art Thou He whom I spoke of as the One coming after me when I was baptising in the Jordan (iii. 11)? It is a question whether Jesus be indeed the Christ. Lutteroth, basing on the hypothesis that for popular Jewish opinion the Christ and the coming One (a prophet like Moses) were different persons, interprets the question thus: "Art Thou, Jesus, whom I know to be the Christ, also the coming Prophet, or must we expect another to fill that rôle?"—ἢ ἕτερον, not ἄλλον, which would have been more appropriate on Lutteroth's view = a numerically distinct person. εἶτ. suggests a different kind of person.—προσδοκῶμεν: may be present indicative (for future) as Beza and Fritzsche take it, or present subjunctive deliberative = ought we to look? (Meyer-Weiss, Holtz., H.C.), the latter preferable. What was the animus or psychological genesis of the question? Doubt in John's own mind, or doubt, bred of envy or jealousy, in the minds of his disciples, or not doubt on Baptist's part, but rather incipient faith? Alternative (2), universal with the fathers (except Tertullian, vide de præscrip., 8, de baptis., 10); (1) common among modern commentators; (3) favoured by Keim, Weizsäcker, and Holtz., H.C.: "beginnende Disposition zum Glauben an Jesu Messianität". The view of the fathers is based on a sense of decorum and implicit reliance on the exact historical value of the statements in fourth Gospel; No. (3), the budding faith hypothesis, is based on too sceptical a view as to the historic value of even the Synoptical accounts of John's early relations with Jesus; No. (1) has everything in its favour. The effect of confinement on John's prophetic temper, the general tenor of this chapter which obviously aims at exhibiting the moral isolation of Jesus, above all the wide difference between the two men, all make for it. Jesus, it had now become evident, was a very different sort of Messiah from what the Baptist had predicted and desiderated (vide remarks on chap. iii. 11-15). Where were the axe and fan and the holy wind and fire of judgment? Too much patience, tolerance, gentleness, sympathy, geniality, mild wisdom in this Christ for his taste.

Vv. 4-6. Answer of Jesus. Ver. 4. ἀπαγγεῖλατε l.: go back and report to John for his satisfaction.—ἃ ἀκ. καὶ βλέπετε, what you are hearing and seeing, not so much at the moment, though Luke gives it that turn (vii. 21), but habitually. They were not to tell their master anything new, but just what they had told him before. The one new element is that the facts are stated in terms fitted to recall prophetic oracles (Isaiah xxxv. 5, lxi. 1), while, in part, a historic recital of recent miracles (Matt. viii., ix.). Probably the precise words of Jesus are not exactly reproduced, but the sense is obvious. Tell John your story over again and remind him of those prophetic texts. Let him study the two together and draw his own conclusion. It was a virtual invitation to John to revise his Messianic idea, in hope he would discover that after all love was the chief Messianic charism.—Ver. 5. ἀναβλέπουσιν: used also in classics to express recovery of sight.—κωφοί, here taken to mean deaf, though in ix. 32, 33, it means dumb, showing that the prophecy, Isaiah xxxv. 5, is in the speaker's thoughts.—πτωχοί: vague word, might mean literal poor (De W.) or spiritual poor, or the whole people in its national misery (Weiss, Matt. Evan.), best defined by such a text as ix. 36, and such facts as that reported in ix. 10-13.—εὐαγγελίζονται: might be middle = the poor preach, and so taken by Euthy. Zig. (also as an alternative by Theophy.), for "what can be poorer than fishing (ἀλιευτικῆς)?" The poor in that case =

πτωχοὶ εὐαγγελίζονται · 6. καὶ μακάριός ἐστιν, ὅς ἐάν<sup>1</sup> μὴ σκανδα- f Heb. iv. 2
 λιθῆ ἔν ἐμοί." 7. Τούτων δὲ πορευομένων, ἤρξατο ὁ Ἰησοῦς g Ch. xiii.
 λέγειν τοῖς ὄχλοις περὶ Ἰωάννου, "Τί ἐξήλθετε εἰς τὴν ἔρημον 57; xxvi 31. Mk. vi.
 3. Lk. vii.
 23 (all
 with ἐν).
 3 h Ch. xii.
 20 (Is. xlii. 3).
 Lk. vii. 24.
 i Ch. xxiv.
 29, parall.
 Heb. xii.
 27.
 j John xix. 5.
 Rom. xiii. 4. 1 Cor. xv. 49. Jas. ii. 3.

<sup>1</sup> an in B<sup>D</sup> (W.H.).

<sup>2</sup>  $\Sigma$ BDZ omit ἱματίους, which has come in from Lk. (vii 25).

<sup>3</sup>  $\Sigma$ B omit εἰσιν.

<sup>4</sup>  $\Sigma$ BZ have προφήτην ἰδεῖν forming a 2nd question. So Tisch. and W.H.

<sup>5</sup>  $\Sigma$ BDZ omit γάρ, which has been introduced to clear the sense which it rather obscures.

the Twelve sent out to preach the kingdom. That, too, was characteristic of the movement, though not the characteristic intended, which is that the poor, the socially insignificant and neglected, are evangelised (passive, as in Heb. iv. 2).—Ver. 6. μακάριος (vide v. 3), possessed of rare felicity. The word implies that those who, on some ground or other, did not stumble over Jesus were very few. Even John not among them! On σκανδαλίζω vide ad. v. 29. ἐν ἐμοί, in anything relating to my public ministry, as appearing inconsistent with my Messianic vocation.

Vv. 7-15. Judgment of Jesus concerning the Baptist (Lk. vii. 24-30). Characteristically magnanimous, while letting it be seen that He is aware of John's limits and defects. Ver. 7. τούτων δὲ πορευομένων: while John's messengers were in the act of going, Jesus began at once, without any delay, to make a statement which He deemed necessary to prevent injurious inferences from the message of the Baptist, or the construction He had put on it as implying doubt regarding Himself.—τοῖς ὄχλοις: the interrogation had taken place in presence of many. Jesus was always in a crowd, except when He took special steps to escape. The spectators had watched with interest what Jesus would say about the famous man. Therefore, more must be said; a careful opinion expressed.—τί ἐξήλθετε . . . θεάσασθαι: it might be taken for granted that most of them had been there. The catechetical method of stating His opinion of John lively and impressive to such an audience. They had gone to see as well as hear and be baptised, curiosity plays a great part in popular religious movements.—κάλαμον. Plenty of reeds to be seen. "What a vast space of time lies between the days of the Baptist and us! How have the times changed! Yet the stream flows in the old bed. Still gently blows the wind among the sighing reeds."—Furrer, Wanderungen, 185. Many commentators (Grot., Wet., Fritzsche, De W.) insist on taking καλ. literally = did ye go, etc., to see a reed, or the reeds on the Jordan banks shaken by the wind? This is flat and prosaic. Manifestly the individualised reed is a figure of an inconstant, weak man; just enough in John's present attitude to suggest such a thought, though not to justify it.—Ver. 8. ἀλλὰ assumes the negative answer to the previous question and elegantly connects with it the following = "No; well, then, did you, etc.?"—ἐν μαλακοῖς, neuter, ἱματίοις not necessary: in precious garments of any material, silk, woollen, linen; the fine garments suggestive of refinement, luxury, effeminacy.—ἰδοὺ οἱ τ. μ. φοροῦντες: ἰδοὺ points to a well-known truth, serving the same purpose as δὴ here; those accustomed to wear, φορ., frequentative, as distinct from φέροντες, which would mean bearing without reference to habit.—οἴκοις τ. βασ., in palaces which courtiers frequent. Jesus knows their flexible, superfine ways well; how different from those of the k Ch. xxiv. σκευάσει τὴν ὁδὸν σου ἔμπροσθέν σου.' 11. Ἄμην λέγω ὑμῖν, οὐκ 11, 24. Lk. ἔγήγερται ἐν ἑνὶ γεννητοῖς γυναικῶν μείζων Ἰωάννου τοῦ βαπτιστοῦ.

 vii. 16. John vii. ὁ δὲ ἢ μικρότερος ἐν τῇ βασιλείᾳ τῶν οὐρανῶν μείζων αὐτοῦ ἔστιν.
 52. here and in Lk. vii. 28. m Ch. xiii. 32. Mk. iv. 31. Lk. vii. 28; ix. 48.

rudely clad and rudely mannered, uncompromising Baptist!—Ver. 9. ἀλλὰ τί ἐξ.: one more question, shorter, abrupt, needing to be supplemented by another (Weiss-Meyer)—why then, seriously, went ye out? προφήτην ἰδεῖν;—to see a prophet?—ναί, yea! right at last; a prophet, indeed, with all that one expects in a prophet—vigorous moral conviction, integrity, strength of will, fearless zeal for truth and righteousness; utterly free from the feebleness and time-serving of those who bend like reeds to every breath of wind, or bow obsequiously before greatness.—καὶ περισσότερον π., a prophet and more, something above the typical prophet (vide on v. 47). The clause introduced by ναί, as λέγω ὑμῖν shows, expresses Christ's own opinion, not the people's (Weiss).—Ver. 10. οὗτος . . . γέγραπται. The περισσότερον verified and explained by a prophetic citation. The oracle is taken from Malachi iii., altered so as to make the Messianic reference apparent—μου changed into σου. By applying the oracle to John, Jesus identifies him with the messenger whom God was to send to prepare Messiah's way. This is his distinction, περισσότερον, as compared with other prophets. But, after all, this is an external distinction, an accident, so to speak. Some prophet must be the forerunner, if Messiah is to come at all, the last in the series who foretell His coming, and John happens to be that one—a matter of good fortune rather than of merit. Something more is needed to justify the περισσότερον, and make it a proper subject for eulogy. That is forthcoming in the sequel.

Vv. 11-12. This is the further justification of the περισσ. desiderated. Ver. 11. Ἄμην λέγω ὑμῖν. First Christ expresses His personal conviction in solemn terms. What follows refers to John's intrinsic worth, not to his historic position as the forerunner. The latter rests on the prophetic citation. Christ's aim now is to say that the Baptist's character is equal to his position: that he is fit to be the forerunner. For Christ, being the forerunner is no matter of luck. God will see that the right man occupies the position; nay, none but the right man can successfully perform the part.—οὐκ ἐγήγερται, there hath not arisen; passive with middle sense, but the arising non sine numine, "surrexit divinitus, quomodo existunt veri Prophetæ," Elsner; cf. Mt. xxiv. 11, Lk. vii. 16, vide also Judges ii. 18, iii. 9.—ἐν γεννητοῖς γυναικῶν = among mankind, a solemn way of expressing the idea. The meaning, however, is not that John is the greatest man that ever lived. The comparison moves within the sphere of Hebrew prophecy, and practically means: John the greatest of all the prophets. A bold judgment not easily accepted by the populace, who always think the dead greater than the living. Christ expresses Himself strongly because He means to say something that might appear disparaging. But He is in earnest in His high estimate, only it is not to be understood as asserting John's superiority in all respects, e.g., in authorship. The point of view is capacity to render effective service to the Kingdom of God.—ὁ δὲ μικρότερος. Chrysostom took this as referring to Jesus, and, connecting ἐν τ. β. τ. οὐρ. with μείζων, brought out the sense: He who is the less in age and fame is greater than John in the Kingdom of Heaven. The opinion might be disregarded as an exegetical curiosity, had it not been adopted by so many, not only among the ancients (Hilar., Ambr., Theophy., Euthy.), but also among moderns (Eras., Luth., Fritzsche). In the abstract it is a possible interpretation, and it expresses a true idea, but not one Jesus was likely to utter then. No doubt John's inquiry had raised the question of Christ's standing, and might seem to call for comparison between questioner and questioned. But Christ's main concern was not to get the people to think highly of Himself, but to have high thoughts of the kingdom. What He says, therefore, is that any one in the kingdom, though of comparatively little account, is greater than John. Even the least is; for though μικρότερος, even with the article, does not necessarily mean μικρότατος (so Bengel), it amounts to that. The affirmative holds even in case of the highest degree of inferiority. The implication is that John was not in the kingdom as a historical movement (a

12. ἀπὸ δὲ τῶν ἡμερῶν Ἰωάννου τοῦ βαπτιστοῦ ἕως ἄρτι, ἡ βασιλεία ἡ
 τῶν οὐρανῶν ἠβιάζεται, καὶ βιασται ὁ ἀρπάζουσιν αὐτήν. 13. πάντες γὰρ οἱ προφῆται καὶ ὁ νόμος ἕως Ἰωάννου προεφήτευσαν<sup>1</sup>. 14. καὶ ὁ

here and in Lk. xvi.
 16 (middle there).
 cf. Phil. ii.
 6 (ἀρπαγ-μός).

<sup>1</sup>  $\aleph$ BCDZ have the augment at the beginning (επροφ.).  $\Delta$  has no augment.

simple matter of fact), and the point of comparison is the dominant spirit. The moral sternness of John was his greatness and also his weakness. It made him doubt Jesus, kept him aloof from the kingdom, and placed him below any one who in the least degree understood Christ's gracious spirit, e.g., one of the Twelve called in x. 42 "these little ones".

Ver. 12. The statement just commented on had to be made in the interests of truth and the Kingdom of God, but having made it Jesus reverts with pleasure to a tone of eulogy. This verse has created much diversity of opinion, which it would take long to recount. I find in it two thoughts: one expressed, the other implied. (1) There has been a powerful movement since John's time towards the Kingdom of God. (2) The movement derived its initial impetus from John. The latter thought is latent in ἀπὸ δὲ τῶν ἡμ. Ἰωάν. The movement dates from John; he has the credit of starting it. This thought is essential to the connection. It is the ultimate justification of the περισσότερον (ver. 9). The apostle Paul adduced as one argument for his apostleship, called in question by Judaists, success, which in his view was not an accident but God-given, and due to fitness for the work (2 Cor. ii. 14, iii. 1-18). So Christ here in effect proves John's fitness for the position of forerunner by the success of his ministry. He had actually made the kingdom come. That was the true basis of his title to the honourable appellation, "preparer of the way"; without that it had been an empty title, though based on any number of prophecies. That success proved fitness, adequate endowment with moral force, and power to impress and move men. This being seen to be Christ's meaning, there is no room for doubt as to the animus of the words βιάζεται, βιασται. They contain a favourable, benignant estimate of the movement going on, not an unfavourable, as, among others, Weiss thinks, taking the words to point to a premature attempt to bring in the kingdom by a false way as a political creation (Weiss-Meyer). Of course there were many defects, obvious, glaring, in the movement, as there always are. Jesus knew them well, but He was not in the mood just then to remark on them, but rather, taking a broad, generous view, to point to the movement as a whole as convincing proof of John's moral force and high prophetic endowment. The two words βιάζ., βιασ. signalise the vigour of the movement. The kingdom was being seized, captured by a storming party. The verb might be middle voice, and is so taken by Beng., "sese vi quasi obtrudit," true to fact, but the passive is demanded by the noun following. The kingdom is forcefully taken (βιαίως κρατεῖται, Hesychius) by the βιασται. There is probably a tacit reference to the kind of people who were storming the kingdom, from the point of view, not so much of Jesus, as of those who deemed themselves the rightful citizens of the kingdom. "Publicans and sinners" (ix. 9-12), the ignorant (xi. 25). What a rabble! thought Scribes and Pharisees. Cause of profound satisfaction to Jesus (ver. 25).

Vv. 13-15. Conclusion of speech about John. Ver. 13. The thought here is hinted rather than fully expressed. It has been suggested that the sense would become clearer if vv. 12 and 13 were made to change places (Maldonatus). This inversion might be justified by reference to Lk. xvi. 16, where the two thoughts are given in the inverse order. Wendt (L. J., i. 75) on this and other grounds arranges the verses 13, 14, 12. But even as they stand the words can be made to yield a fitting sense, harmonising with the general aim, the eulogy of John. The surface idea is that the whole O. T., prophets of course, and even the law in its predictive aspects (by symbolic rites and foreshadowing institutions) pointed forward to a Kingdom of God. The kingdom coming—the burden of O. T. revelation. But what then? To what end make this observation? To explain the impatience of the stormers: their determination to have at last by all means, and in some form, what had so long been foretold? (Weiss). No; but to define by contrast John's

εἰ θέλετε δεῖξασθαι, αὐτός ἐστιν Ἡλίας ὁ μέλλων ἔρχεσθαι. 15. ὁ ἔχων ὦτα ἀκούειν,<sup>1</sup> ἀκουέτω. 16. Τίνι δὲ ὁμοιώσω τὴν γενεὰν ταύτην; ὁμοία ἐστὶ παιδαρίοις<sup>2</sup> ἐν ἀγοραῖς καθημένοις,<sup>3</sup> καὶ προσφωνοῦσι τοῖς ἐταίροις αὐτῶν, 17. καὶ λέγουσιν,<sup>4</sup> Ἡλλήσαμεν ὑμῖν, καὶ οὐκ ἠρξήσασθε· ἐθρηνήσαμεν ὑμῖν,<sup>5</sup> καὶ οὐκ ἐκόψασθε.

<sup>1</sup> BD omit ἀκουειν, which has come in from Mk. and Lk. where the addition of this word to the phrase is usual.

<sup>2</sup> παιδιῶν in all uncials.

<sup>3</sup> καθημένοις before ἐν in  $\aleph$ BCDL, etc., with ταῖς before ἀγοραῖς in  $\aleph$ BZ.

<sup>4</sup>  $\aleph$ BDZ have α προσφωνοῦντα . . . λεγουσιν, and for ἐταίροις BCDL $\Delta$  $\Sigma$  al. have ἑτεροῖς. (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>5</sup>  $\aleph$ BDZ omit ὑμῖν, which may have been added to assimilate with first clause.

position. Observe ἔως I. goes not with the subject, but with the verb. Prophets (and even law) till John prophesied. The suggestion is that he is not a mere continuator of the prophetic line, one more repeating the message: the kingdom will come. His function is peculiar and exceptional. What is it? Ver. 14 explains. He is the Elijah of Malachi, herald of the Great Day, usherer in of the kingdom, the man who says not merely "the kingdom will come," but "the kingdom is here"; says it, and makes good the saying, bringing about a great movement of repentance.—εἰ θέλετε δεῖξασθαι: the identification of John with Elijah to be taken cum grano, not as a prosaic statement of fact. Here, as always, Christ idealises, seizes the essential truth. John was all the Elijah that would ever come, worthy to represent him in spirit, and performing the function assigned to Elijah redivivus in prophecy. Some of the Fathers distinguished two advents of Elijah, one in spirit in the Baptist, another literally at the second coming of Christ. Servile exegesis of the letter. δεῖξασθαι has no expressed object: the object is the statement following. Lutteroth supplies "him" = the Baptist. In the θέλετε Weiss finds a tacit allusion to the impenitence of the people: Ye are not willing because ye know that Elijah's coming means a summons to repentance.—Ver. 15. A proverbial form of speech often used by Jesus after important utterances, here for the first time in Matt. The truth demanding attentive and intelligent ears (ears worth having; taking in the words and their import) is that John is Elijah. It implies much—that the kingdom is here and the king, and that the kingdom is moral not political.

Vv. 16-19. Judgment of Jesus on His religious contemporaries (Lk. vii. 31-35). It is advisable not to assume as a matter of course that these words were spoken at the same time as those going before. The discourse certainly appears continuous, and Luke gives this utterance in the same connection as our evangelist, from which we may infer that it stood so in the common source. But even there the connection may have been topical rather than temporal; placed beside what goes before, because containing a reference to John, and because the contents are of a critical nature. Ver. 16. τίνι ὁμοιώσω: the parable is introduced by a question, as if the thought had just struck Him.—τὴν γενεὰν ταύτην. The occasion on which the words following were spoken would make it clear who were referred to. Our guide must be the words themselves. The subjects of remark are not the βιασταὶ of ver. 12, nor the ὄχλοι to whom Jesus had been speaking. Neither are they the whole generation of Jews then living, including Jesus and John (Elsner); or even the bulk of the Jewish people, contemporaries of Jesus. It was not Christ's habit to make severe animadversions on the "people of the land," who formed the large majority of the population. He always spoke of them with sympathy and pity (ix. 37, x. 6). γενεά might mean the whole body of men then living, but it might also mean a particular class of men marked out by certain definite characteristics. It is so used in xii. 39, 41, 42, 45; xvi. 4. The class or "race" there spoken of is in one case the Scribes and Pharisees, and in the other the Pharisees and Sadducees. From internal evidence the reference here also is mainly to the Pharisees. It is a class who spoke of

18. Ἦλθε γὰρ Ἰωάννης μῆτε ἐσθίων μῆτε πίνων, καὶ λέγουσι, Δαιμόνιον ἔχει. 19. ἦλθεν ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἐσθίων καὶ πίνων, καὶ λέγουσιν, Ἰδοὺ, ἄνθρωπος ῥ φάγος καὶ ῥ οἰνοπότης, τελωνῶν ῥ Lk. vii. 34. φίλος καὶ ἁμαρτωλῶν. καὶ ἐδικαιώθη ἡ σοφία ἀπὸ τῶν τέκνων<sup>1</sup> Lk. vii. 34.

<sup>1</sup> NB have εργων, which Tisch. and W.H. adopt. Though supported by a great array of MSS. (including CDL) τεκνων may be suspected of assimilation to the reading in Lk.

Jesus as reported in ver. 19. Who can they have been but the men who asked: Why does He eat with publicans and sinners (ix. 11)? These vile calumnies are what have come out of that feast, in the same sanctimonious circle. Luke evidently understood the Pharisees and lawyers (νομικοὶ) to be the class referred to, guided probably by his own impression as to the import of the passage (vide Lk. vii. 30).—παιδίοις . . . ἀγοραῖς: Jesus likens the Pharisaic γενεά to children in the market-place playing at marriages and funerals, as He had doubtless often seen them in Nazareth. The play, as is apt to happen, has ended in a quarrel.—προσφ. τοῖς ἐτέροις . . . λέγουσιν. There are two parties, the musicians and the rest who are expected to dance or mourn according to the tune, and they are at cross purposes, the moods not agreeing: ἐτέροις, the best attested reading, may point to this discrepancy in temper = a set differently inclined.—ἠψάλαμεν: the flute in this case used for merriment, not, as in ix. 23, to express grief.—ἐθρηνησαμεν: we have expressed grief by singing funeral dirges, like the mourning women hired for the purpose (vide ad ix. 23).—ἐκόψασθε: and ye have not beat your breasts in responsive sorrow. This is the parable to which Jesus adds a commentary. Without the aid of the latter the general import is plain. The γενεά animadverted on are like children, not in a good but in a bad sense: not child-like but childish. They play at religion; with all their seeming earnestness in reality triflers. They are also fickle, fastidious, given to peevish fault-finding, easily offended. These are recognisable features of the Pharisees. They were great zealots and precisians, yet not in earnest, rather haters of earnestness, as seen in different ways in John and Jesus. They were hard to please: equally dissatisfied with John and with Jesus; satisfied with nothing but their own artificial formalism. They were the only men in Israel of whom these things could be said with emphasis, and it may be taken for granted that Christ's animadversions were elicited by pronounced instances of the type.—Ver. 18. The commentary on the parable showing that it was the reception given to John and Himself that suggested it.—μῆτε ἐσθ. μῆτε πιν.: eating and drinking, the two parts of diet; not eating nor drinking = remarkably abstemious, ascetic, that his religious habit; μῆτε not οὔτε, to express not merely the fact, but the opinion about John. Vide notes on chap. v. 34.—δαιμόνιον ἔχει: is possessed, mad, with the madness of a gloomy austerity. The Pharisee could wear gloomy airs in fasting (vi. 16), but that was acting. The Baptist was in earnest with his morose, severely abstinent life. Play for them, grim reality for him; and they disliked it and shrank from it as something weird. None but Pharisees would dare to say such a thing about a man like John. They are always so sure, and so ready to judge. Ordinary people would respect the ascetic of the wilderness, though they did not imitate him.—Ver. 19. ὁ υἱὸς τ. ἀ.: obviously Jesus here refers to Himself in third person where we might have expected the first. Again the now familiar title, defining itself as we go along by varied use, pointing Jesus out as an exceptional person, while avoiding all conventional terms to define the exceptional element.—ἐσθίων καὶ πίνων: the "Son of Man" is one who eats and drinks, i.e., non-ascetic and social, one of the marks interpretative of the title = human, fraternal.—καὶ λέγουσι, and they say: what? One is curious to know. Surely this genial, friendly type of manhood will please!—ἰδοὺ, lo! scandalised sanctimoniousness points its finger at Him and utters gross, outrageous calumnies.—φάγος, οἰνοπότης, φίλος, an eater with emphasis = a glutton (a word of late Greek, Lob., Phryn., 434), a wine-bibber; and, worse than either, for φίλος is used in a sinister sense and implies that Jesus was the comrade of the worst characters, and like them in conduct. A malicious nick-name at first, it is now a name of honour: the sinner's lover. The Son of

- 1 Mk. xvi. αὐτῆς. 20. Τότε ἤρξατο ὁνειδίζειν τὰς πόλεις, ἐν αἷς ἐγένοντο 14 (with accus. of thing).
 αἱ πλείσται δυνάμεις αὐτοῦ, ὅτι οὐ μετενόησαν. 21. "Οὐαὶ σοι, 1 Lk. x. 13 Χοραζίν, οὐαὶ σοι, βηθσαϊδάν, ὅτι εἰ ἐν Τύρῳ καὶ Σιδῶνι ἐγένοντο (long ago).
2 Cor. xii. αἱ δυνάμεις αἱ γινόμεναι ἐν ὑμῖν, ἁπάλαι ἂν ἐν ἑσάκκῳ καὶ 19 ("all this time," ἴσποδῶ μετενόησαν. 22. ἢ πλὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, Τύρῳ καὶ Σιδῶνι ἀνεκτό-R.V.).
 1 Lk. x. 13 τερον ἔσται ἐν ἡμέρᾳ κρίσεως, ἢ ἡμῖν. 23. Καὶ σύ, Καπερναοὺμ, (Jonah iii. ἢ ἕως τοῦ οὐρανοῦ ὑψωθείσα,<sup>1</sup> ἕως ἄδου καταβιβασθήσῃ<sup>2</sup>. ὅτι εἰ ἐν 6).
11 Ch. xviii. Σοδόμοις ἐγένοντο<sup>3</sup> αἱ δυνάμεις αἱ γινόμεναι ἐν σοί, ἔμειναν<sup>4</sup> ἂν
7; xxvi.
39, 64
(frequent in Lk.).

<sup>1</sup> ἢ BCDL Syr. Cur. read μη εως ουρανου υψωθηση, which recent editors adopt. Weiss thinks it has no sense, as μη implies a negative answer, and gives as the true reading ἢ εως οὐρ. ὑψώθης.

<sup>2</sup> BD have καταβηση (W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> ἢ BCD have εγενηθησαν (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> εμεινεν in ἢ BC 33 (W.H.).

Man takes these calumnies as a thing of course and goes on His gracious way. It is not necessary to reflect these characteristics of Jesus and John back into the parable, and to identify them with the piping and wailing children. Yet the parable is so constructed as to exhibit them very clearly in their distinctive peculiarities by representing the children not merely employed in play and quarrelling over their games, which would have sufficed as a picture of the religious Jews, but as playing at marriages and funerals, the former symbolising the joy of the Jesus-circle, the latter the sadness of the Baptist-circle (vide my Parabolic Teaching of Christ, p. 420).—καὶ ἐδικαιώθη, etc. This sentence wears a gnomic or proverbial aspect ("verba proverbium redolere videntur," Kuinoel, similarly, Rosenmüller), and the aorist of ἐδικ. may be taken as an instance of the gnomic aorist, expressive of what is usual; a law in the moral sphere, as elsewhere the aorist is employed to express the usual course in the natural sphere, e.g., in James i. 11. Weiss-Meyer strongly denies that there are any instances of such use of the aorist in the N. T. (On this aorist vide Goodwin, Syntax, p. 53, and Bäumlein, § 523, where it is called the aorist of experience, "der Erfahrungswahrheit").—ἀπὸ, in, in view of (vide Buttman's Gram., p. 232, on ἀπὸ in N. T.).—ἐργων: the reading of ἢ B, and likely to be the true one just because τέκνων is the reading in Luke. It is an appeal to results, to fruit (vii. 20), to the future. Historical in form, the statement is in reality a prophecy. Resch, indeed (Aggrapha, p. 142), takes ἐδικ. as the (erroneous) translation of the Hebrew prophetic future used in the Aramaic original = now we are condemned, but wait a while. The καὶ at the beginning of the clause is not = "but". It states a fact as much a matter of course as is the condemnation of the unwise. Wisdom, condemned by the foolish, is always, of course, justified in the long run by her works or by her children.

Vv. 20-24. Reflections by Jesus on the reception given to Him by the towns of Galilee (Lk. x. 13-15). Ver. 20. τότε, then, cannot be pressed. Luke gives the following words in instructions to the Seventy. The real historical occasion is unknown. It may be a reminiscence from the preaching tour in the synagogues of Galilee (Mt. iv. 23). The reflections were made after Jesus had visited many towns and wrought many wonderful works (δυνάμεις).—οὐ μετενόησαν: this the general fact; no deep, permanent change of mind and heart. Christ appearing among them a nine days' wonder, then forgotten by the majority preoccupied with material interests.—Ver. 21. Χοραζίν, Βηθσαϊδάν: the former not again mentioned in Gospels, the latter seldom (vide Mk. vi. 45, viii. 22; Lk. ix. 10), yet scenes of important evangelic incidents, probably connected with the synagogue ministry in Galilee (iv. 23). The Gospels are brief records of a ministry crowded with events. These two towns may be named along with Capernaum because all three were in view where Christ stood when He

ἄχρι τῆς σήμερον. 24. πλὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι γῆ Σοδόμων ἀνεκτό-<sup>Ch. xviii.</sup>
 γερὸν ἔσται ἐν ἡμέρᾳ κρίσεως, ἢ σοί.” 25. Ἐν ἐκείνῳ τῷ καιρῷ<sup>15 (same</sup>
 ἄκριθεις ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν, “<sup>Ch. xii.</sup> Ἐξομολογοῦμαί σοι, πάτερ, κύριε<sup>30; xv. 15;</sup> τοῦ οὐρανοῦ καὶ τῆς γῆς, ὅτι ἀπέκρυψας<sup>xvii. 4 al.</sup> ταῦτα ἀπὸ σοφῶν καὶ<sup>(in sense</sup> ἀκριθῶν<sup>of begin-</sup>.”
 x Lk x. 21. Róm. xiv. 11; xv. 9. y Lk. x. 21 (Jewish). Mt. xxiii. 34 (Christian).
 r Cor. i. 26 (Pagan).

<sup>1</sup> SBD have the simple ἀκρυψας.

uttered the reproachful words, say on the top of the hill above Capernaum: Bethsaida on the eastern shore of Jordan, just above where it falls into the lake; Chorazin on the western side on the road to Tyre from Capernaum (Furrer, Wanderungen, p. 370). They may also have been prosperous business centres selected to represent the commercial side of Jewish national life. Hence the reference to Tyre and Sidon, often the subject of prophetic animadversion, yet not so blameworthy in their impotence as the cities which had seen Christ's works.—ἐν σάκκῳ καὶ σποδῷ: in black sackcloth, and with ashes on the head, or sitting in ashes like Job (ii. 8).—Ver. 22. πλὴν: contracted from πλέον = moreover, for the rest, to put the matter shortly; not adversative here, though sometimes so used.—Ver. 23. The diversity in the reading μὴ ἢ ἢ ἢ ἢ, etc., does not affect the sense. In the one case the words addressed to Capernaum contain a statement of fact by Jesus; in the other a reference to a feeling prevailing in Capernaum in regard to the facts. The fact implied in either case is distinction on some ground, probably because Capernaum more than all other places was favoured by Christ's presence and activity. But there may, as some think (Grotius, Rosen., De Wette, etc.), be a reference to trade prosperity. “Florebat C. piscatu, mercatu, et quae alia esse solent commoda ad mare sitarum urbium” (Grot.). The reference to Tyre and Sidon, trade centres, makes this not an idle suggestion. And it is not unimportant to keep this aspect in mind, as Capernaum with the other two cities then become representatives of the trading spirit, and show us by sample how that spirit received the Gospel of the kingdom. Capernaum illustrated the common characteristic most signally. Most prosperous, most privileged spiritually, and—most unsympathetic, the population being taken as a whole. Worldliness as unreceptive as counterfeit piety represented by Pharisaism, though not so offensive in temper and language. No calumny, but simply invincible indifference.—ἔως οὐρανοῦ, ἔως ἄδου: proverbial expressions for the greatest exaltation and deepest degradation. The reference in the latter phrase is not to the future world, but to the judgment day of Israel in which Capernaum would be involved. The prophetic eye of Jesus sees Capernaum in ruins as it afterwards saw the beautiful temple demolished (chap. xxiv. 2).

Vv. 25-27. Jesus worshipping (Lk. x. 21, 22). It is usual to call this golden utterance a prayer, but it is at once prayer, praise, and self-communing in a devout spirit. The occasion is unknown. Matthew gives it in close connection with the complaint against the cities (ἐν ἐκείνῳ τῷ καιρῷ), but Luke sets it in still closer connection (ἐν αὐτῇ τῇ ᾠρᾷ) with the return of the Seventy. According to some modern critics, it had no occasion at all in the life of our Lord, but is simply a composition of Luke's, and borrowed from him by the author of Matthew: a hymn in which the Pauline mission to the heathen as the victory of Christ over Satan's dominion in the world is celebrated, and given in connection with the imaginary mission of the Seventy (vide Pfeiderer, Urchristenthum, p. 445). But Luke's preface justifies the belief that he had here, as throughout, a tradition oral or written to go on, and the probability is that it was taken both by him and by Matthew from a common document. Wendt (L. J., pp. 90, 91) gives it as an extract from the book of Logia, and supposes that it followed a report of the return of the disciples (the Twelve) from their mission.

Ver. 25. ἀκριθῆεις, answering, not necessarily to anything said, but to some environment provocative of such thoughts.—ἐξομολογοῦμαί σοι (= לְהַדְרִיחַ, Ps. lxxv. 2, etc.). In iii. 6 this compound means to make full con-z Lk. x. 21. "συνετών, καὶ ἀπεκάλυψας αὐτὰ ἡγήσιοις. 26. ναὶ ὁ πατήρ, ὅτι Acts xiii. 7.

 1 Cor. i. 19. οὕτως ἐγένετο εὐδοκία<sup>1</sup> ἔμπροσθέν σου. 27. Πάντα μοι παρεδόθη a 1 Cor. ii.
 10. Phil. ὑπὸ τοῦ πατρός μου· καὶ οὐδεὶς ἐπιγινώσκει τὸν υἱόν, εἰ μὴ ὁ
 iii. 15.
 b Lk. x. 21. πατήρ· οὐδὲ τὸν πατέρα τις ἐπιγινώσκει, εἰ μὴ ὁ υἱός, καὶ ὁ πατήρ
 Rom. ii. 20.
 1 Cor. iii. 1. Heb. v. 13. c Eph. i. 5, 9. Phil. ii. 13. d 1 Cor. xiii. 12.

<sup>1</sup> εὐδοκία ἐγένετο in NB 33, making εὐδοκία more emphatic.

frank acknowledgment of a situation in a spirit partly of resignation, partly of thanksgiving.—ἡγήσιοις. The fact stated is referred to the causality of God, the religious point of view; but it happens according to laws which can be ascertained.—ταῦτα: the exact reference unknown, but the statement holds with reference to Christ's whole teaching and healing ministry, and the revelation of the kingdom they contained.—σοφῶν καὶ συνετών: the reference here doubtless is to the Rabbis and scribes, the accepted custodians of the wisdom of Israel. Cf. σοφὸς καὶ ἐπιστήμων in Deut. iv. 6 applied to Israel. The rendering "wise and prudent" in A. V. is misleading; "wise and understanding" in R. V. is better.—ἡγήσιοις (fr. ἡγ and ἔπος, non-speaking) means those who were as ignorant of scribe-lore as babes (cf. John vii. 49 and Heb. v. 13). Their ignorance was their salvation, as thereby they escaped the mental preoccupation with preconceived ideas on moral and religious subjects, which made the scribes inaccessible to Christ's influence (vide my Parabolic Teaching, pp. 333, 334). Jesus gives thanks with all His heart for the receptivity of the babes, not in the same sense or to the same extent for the non-receptive attitude of the wise (with De Wette and Bleek against Meyer and Weiss). No distinction indeed is expressed, but it goes without saying, and the next clause implies it.—Ver. 26. ναὶ reaffirms with solemn emphasis what might appear doubtful, viz., that Jesus was content with the state of matters (vide Klotz, Devar., i. 140). Cf. ver. 9.—πατήρ: nominative for vocative.—ὅτι, because, introducing the reason for this contentment.—οὕτως, as the actual facts stand, emphatic ("sic maxime non aliter," Fritzsche).—εὐδοκία, a pleasure, an occasion of pleasure; hence a purpose, a state of matters embodying the Divine Will, a Hellenistic word, as is also the verb εὐδοκέω (cf. 1 Cor. i. 21, where the whole thought is similar). Christ resigns Himself to God's will. But His tranquillity is due likewise to insight into the law by which new Divine movements find support among the ἡγήσιοι rather than among the σοφοί.—Ver. 27. πάντα, all things necessary for the realisation of the kingdom (Holtz., H.C.). The πάντα need not be restricted to the hiding and revealing functions (Weiss, Nösgen). Hiding, indeed, was no function of Christ's. He was always and only a revealer. For the present Jesus has only a few babes, but the future is His: Christianity the coming religion.—παρεδόθη, aorist, were given. We might have expected the future. It may be another instance of the aorist used for the Hebrew prophetic future (vide ad ver. 19). In Mt. xxviii. 18 ἐδόθη again to express the same thought. The reference probably is to the eternal purpose of God: on the use of the aorist in N. T., vide note on this passage in Camb. G. T.—ἐπιγινώσκει, thoroughly knows.—τὸν υἱόν . . . πατήρ, Christ's comfort amid the widespread unbelief and misunderstanding in reference to Himself is that His Father knows Him perfectly. No one else does, not even John. He is utterly alone in the world. Son here has a Godward reference, naturally arising out of the situation. The Son of Man is called an evil liver. He lifts up His heart to heaven and says: God my Father knows me, His Son. The thought in the first clause is connected with this one thus: the future is mine, and for the present my comfort is in the Father's knowledge of me.—οὐδὲ τὸν πατέρα . . . ὁ υἱός: a reflection naturally suggested by the foregoing statement. It is ignorance of the Father that creates misconception of the Son. Conventional, moral and religious ideals lead to misjudgment of one who by all He says and does is revealing God as He truly is and wills. The men who know least about God are those supposed to know most, and who have been most ready to judge Him, the "wise and understanding". Hence the additional reflection, καὶ ὁ πατήρ βούληται ὁ υἱὸς ἀποκαλύψαι. Jesus βούληται ὁ υἱὸς ἀποκαλύψαι. 28. Ἐδεῦτε πρὸς με πάντες οἱ ἐὼς <sup>absolutely</sup> <sup>here and</sup> <sup>in Ch.</sup> <sup>Rev. ii. 3 (with</sup> <sup>h 1 Cor. xvi. 18.</sup>

 ἴ κοπιῶντες καὶ πεφορτισμένοι, κἀγὼ ἠ ἀναπαύσω ὑμᾶς. 29. ἄρατε <sup>of the sense of weariness, cf. Is. xl. 31, οὐ κοπιήσουσι. Sir. li. 27, ἐκοπίασα.</sup>

he asserts His importance as the revealer of God, saying in effect: "The wise despise me, but they cannot do without me. Through me alone can they attain that knowledge of God which they profess to desire above all things." This was there and then the simple historic fact. Jesus was the one person in Israel who truly conceived God. The use of βούληται is noticeable: not to whomsoever He reveals Him, but to whomsoever He is pleased to reveal Him. The emphasis seems to lie on the inclination, whereas in Mt. i. 19 θέλων appears to express the wish, and ἐβουλήθη rather the deliberate purpose. Jesus meets the haughty contempt of the "wise" with a dignified assertion that it depends on his inclination whether they are to know God or not. On the distinction between βούλομαι and θέλω, vide Cremer, Wörterbuch, s. v. βούλομαι. According to him the former represents the direction of the will, the latter the will active (Affect, Trieb). Hence βουλ. can always stand for θελ., but not vice versa.

Vv. 28-30. The gracious invitation. Full of O. T. reminiscences, remarks Holtz., H.C., citing Isaiah xiv. 3; xxviii. 12; lv. 1-3; Jer. vi. 16; xxxi. 2, 25, and especially Sirach vi. 24, 25, 28, 29; li. 23-27. De Wette had long before referred to the last-mentioned passage, and Pfeleiderer has recently (Urch., 513) made it the basis of the assertion that this beautiful logion is a composition out of Sirach by the evangelist. The passage in Sirach is as follows: ἐγγίσσατε πρὸς μὲ ἀπαιδευτοὶ, καὶ αὐλίσθητε ἐν οἴκῳ παιδείας. διότι ὑστερεῖτε ἐν τούτοις, καὶ αἱ ψυχὰς ὑμῶν διψῶσι σφόδρα; ἦνοιξα τὸ στόμα μου, καὶ ἐλάλησα, κτήσασθε ἑαυτοῖς ἀνευ ἀργυρίου. τὸν τραχὴλον ὑμῶν ὑπόθετε ὑπὸ ζυγόν, καὶ ἐπιδεξάσθω ἡ ψυχὴ ὑμῶν παιδείαν· ἐγγύς ἐστιν εὐρεῖν αὐτήν· ἴδετε ἐν ὀφθαλμοῖς ὑμῶν ὅτι ὀλίγον ἐκοπίασα, καὶ εὖρον ἑμαυτῷ πολλὴν ἀνάπαυσιν.*

There are unquestionably kindred thoughts and corresponding phrases, as even Kypke points out ("Syracides magna similitudine dicit"), and if Sirach had been a recognised Hebrew prophet one could have imagined Matthew giving the gist of this rhetorical passage, pre-faced with an "as it is written". It is not even inconceivable that a reader of our Gospel at an early period noted on the margin phrases culled from Sirach as descriptive of the attitude of the one true σοφός towards men to show how willing he was to communicate the knowledge of the Father-God, and that his notes found their way into the text. But why doubt the genuineness of this logion? It seems the natural conclusion of Christ's soliloquy; expressing His intense yearning for receptive scholars at a time when He was painfully conscious of the prevalent unreceptivity. The words do not smell of the lamp. They come straight from a saddened yet tenderly affectionate, unembittered heart; simple, pathetic, sincere. He may have known Sirach from boyhood, and echoes may have unconsciously suggested themselves, and been used with royal freedom quite compatibly with perfect originality of thought and phrase. The reference to wisdom in ver. 19 makes the supposition not gratuitous that Jesus may even have had the passage in Sirach consciously present to His mind, and that He used it, half as a quotation, half as a personal manifesto. The passage is the end of a prayer of Jesus, the Son of Sirach, in which that earlier Jesus, personating wisdom, addresses his fellow-men, inviting them to share the benefits which σοφία has conferred on himself. Why should not Jesus of Nazareth close His prayer with a similar address in the name of wisdom to those who are most likely to become her children—those whose ear sorrow hath opened? This view might meet Martineau's objection to regarding this logion as authentic, that * Of the above the R.V. gives the following translation: "Draw near unto me, ye unlearned, and lodge in the house of instruction. Say wherefore are ye lacking in these things, and your souls are very thirsty? I opened my mouth and spake. Get her for yourselves without money. Put your neck under the yoke, and let your soul receive instruction. She is hard at hand to find. Behold with your eyes how that I laboured but a little, and found for myself much rest."

1 Act. v. 13. τὸν ἕξυόν μου ἐφ' ὑμᾶς, καὶ μάθετε ἀπ' ἐμοῦ, ὅτι πρῶτος<sup>1</sup> εἰμι καὶ
 1 Ch. xii. 11. ταπεινὸς τῇ καρδίᾳ· καὶ εὐρήσατε ἠνάπαυσιν ταῖς ψυχαῖς ὑμῶν.
 Rev. xiv.
 11. (Wis. dom. iv. 7).
 k Lk. vi. 39. Rom. ii. 4.

<sup>1</sup> πρῶτος in  $\aleph$ BCD (Tisch., W.H.).

it is not compatible with the humility of Jesus that He should so speak of Himself (Seat of Authority, p. 583). Why should He not do as another Jesus had done before Him: speak in the name of wisdom, and appropriate her attributes?

Ver. 28. Δεῦτε: vide ad iv. 19, again authoritative but kindly.—κοπιῶντες καὶ πεφορτισμένοι, the fatigued and burdened. This is to be taken metaphorically. The kind of people Jesus expects to become “disciples indeed” are men who have sought long, earnestly, but in vain, for the summum bonum, the knowledge of God. [There is no burden so heavy as that of truth sought and not found. Scholars of the Rabbis, like Saul of Tarsus, knew it well. In coming thence to Christ’s school they would find rest by passing from letter to spirit, from form to reality, from hearsay to certainty, from traditions of the past to the present voice of God.—καγώ, and I, emphatic, with side glance at the reputed “wise” who do not give rest (with Meyer against Weiss).—Ver. 29. ζυγόν: current phrase to express the relation of a disciple to a master. The Rabbis spoke of the “yoke of the law”. Jesus uses their phrases while drawing men away from their influence.—μάθετε ἀπ’ ἐμοῦ: not merely learn from my example (Buttmann, Gram., p. 324: on, that is, from the case of), but, more comprehensively, get your learning from me; take me as your Master in religion. The thing to be learned is not merely a moral lesson, humility, but the whole truth about God and righteousness. But the mood of Master and scholar must correspond, He meek as they have become by sorrowful experience. Hence ὅτι πρῶτος . . . τῇ καρδίᾳ: not that, but for I am, etc. What connection is there between this spirit and knowledge of God? This: a proud man cannot know God. God knoweth the proud afar off (Ps. cxxxviii. 6), and they know God afar off. God giveth the grace of intimate knowledge of Himself to the lowly.—ἀνάπαυσιν: rest, such as comes through finding the true God, or through satisfaction of desire, of the hunger of the soul.—Ver.

30. χρῆστος, kindly to wear. Christ’s doctrine fits and satisfies our whole spiritual nature—reason, heart, conscience, “the sweet reasonableness of Christ”.—φορτίον, the burden of obligation.—ἐλαφρόν: in one respect Christ’s burden is the heaviest of all because His moral ideal is the highest. But just on that account it is light. Lofty, noble ideals inspire and attract; vulgar ideals are oppressive. Christ’s commandment is difficult, but not like that of the Rabbis, grievous. (Vide With Open Face.)

CHAPTER XII. CONFLICTS WITH THE PHARISEES. This chapter delineates the growing alienation between Jesus and the Pharisees and scribes. The note of time (ἐν ἐκείνῳ τῷ καιρῷ, ver. 1) points back to the situation in which the prayer xi. 25-30 was uttered (vide ver. 25, where the same expression is used). All the incidents recorded reveal the captious mood of Israel’s “saints and sages”. They have now formed a thoroughly bad opinion of Jesus and His company. They regard Him as immoral in life (xi. 19); irreligious, capable even of blasphemy (assuming the divine prerogative of forgiving sin, ix. 3); an ally of Satan even in His beneficence (xii. 24). He can do nothing right. The smallest, most innocent action is an offence.

Vv. 1-8. Plucking ears of corn on the Sabbath (Mk. ii. 23-28; Lk. vi. 1-5). Sabbath observance was one of the leading causes of conflict between Jesus and the guardians of religion and morality. This is the first of several encounters reported by the evangelist. According to Weiss he follows Mark, but with sayings taken directly from the Apostolic Source.

Vv. 1, 2. σάββασιν: dative plural, as if from σάββατ-ος, other cases (genitive, singular and plural, dative, singular, accusative, plural) are formed from σάββατον (vide ver. 2).—διὰ τῶν σπορίμων might mean through fields adapted for growing grain, but the context requires fields actually sown; fields of corn.—ἐπεινασαν: for the form vide iv. 2. This word supplies the motive for the action, which Mark leaves vague.—

XII. 1. Ἐν ἐκείνῳ τῷ καιρῷ ἐπορεύθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς τοῖς σάββασιν <sup>a</sup> here and in parall. διὰ τῶν <sup>b</sup>σπορίμων· οἱ δὲ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ ἐπέινασαν, καὶ ἤρξαντο <sup>b</sup> here and in parall. <sup>c</sup>τίλλειν <sup>c</sup>στάχυας καὶ ἐσθίειν. 2. οἱ δὲ Φαρισαῖοι ἰδόντες εἶπον <sup>c</sup> here. αὐτῷ, “Ἰδοὺ, οἱ μαθηταὶ σου ποιοῦσιν, ὃ οὐκ ἐξέστι ποιεῖν ἐν <sup>d</sup>parall. and Mk. iv. 28. σαββάτῳ.” 3. Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Οὐκ <sup>d</sup>Ch. xix. 4; ἀνέγνωτε τί ἐποίησε <sup>e</sup>xxi. 16, 42; Δαβὶδ, ὅτε ἐπέινασεν αὐτὸς <sup>e</sup>xxiv. 15 al. καὶ οἱ μετ’ αὐτοῦ; 4. πῶς εἰσῆλθεν <sup>e</sup>Heb. ix. 2. εἰς τὸν οἶκον τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ τοὺς ἄρτους <sup>f</sup>Acts xxiv. 6 (often in Sept.) *τῆς προθέσεως ἔφαγεν, <sup>f</sup> here and in ver. 7. οὓς <sup>g</sup> οὐκ ἐξὸν ἦν αὐτῷ φαγεῖν, οὐδὲ τοῖς μετ’ αὐτοῦ, εἰ μὴ τοῖς <sup>g</sup> ἱερεῦσι μόνοις; 5. Ἡ οὐκ ἀνέγνωτε ἐν τῷ νόμῳ, ὅτι τοῖς σάββασιν οἱ ἱερεῖς ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ τὸ σάββατον <sup>g</sup> βεβηλοῦσι, καὶ <sup>g</sup> ἀνάιτιοί εἰσι; ἤρξαντο: perhaps emphasis should be laid on this word. No sooner had they begun to pluck ears than fault was found. Pharisees on the outlook for offences. So Carr, Camb. G. T.—Ver. 2. ὃ οὐκ ἐξέστιν π. ε. σαββάτῳ. The emphasis here lies on the last word. To help oneself, when hungry, with the hand was humanely allowed in the Deuteronomic law (Deut. xxiii. 25), only to use the sickle was forbidden as involving waste. But according to the scribes what was lawful on other days was unlawful on Sabbath, because plucking ears was reaping. “Metens Sabbato vel tantillum, reus est” (Lightfoot rendering a passage from the Talmud). Luke adds ψάχοντες, rubbing with the hands. He took the offence to be threshing. Microscopic offence in either case, proving prima facie malice in the fault-finders. But honest objection is not inconceivable to one who remembers the interdict placed by old Scottish piety on the use of the razor on Sabbath. We must be just even to Pharisees.

<sup>1</sup> The αυτος (ΛΣ) comes from Mk. (ii. 25); it is omitted in  $\aleph$ BCDΔ al.

<sup>2</sup> εφαγον in  $\aleph$ B—probably the true reading.

<sup>3</sup> ο in BD. The reading of T. R. (εφαγεν οὖς) is from Mk.

Vv. 3-8. Christ's defence. It is twofold. (1) He shields disciples by examples: David and the priests; to both the fault-finders would defer (vv. 3-5); (2) He indicates the principles involved in the examples (vv. 6-8). The case of David was apposite because (a) it was a case of eating, (b) it probably happened on Sabbath, (c) it concerned not only David but, as in the present instance, followers; therefore οἱ μετ’ αὐτοῦ, ver. 3, carefully added. (b) does not form an element in the defence, but it helps to account for the reference to David's conduct. In that view Jesus must have regarded the act of David as a Sabbatic incident, and that it was may not unnaturally be inferred from 1 Sam. xxi. 6. Vide Lightfoot, ad loc.—This was probably also the current opinion. The same remark applies to the attendants of David. From the history one might gather that David was really alone, and only pretended to have companions. But if, as is probable, it was usually assumed that he was accompanied, Jesus would be justified in proceeding on that assumption, whatever the fact was (vide Schanz, ad loc.)—Ver. 4. εἰσῆλθεν, ἔφαγον, he entered, they ate. Mark has ἔφαγεν. Weiss explains the harsh change of subject by combination of apostolic source with Mark. The two verbs point to two offences against the law: entering a holy place, eating holy bread. The sin of the disciples was against a holy time. But the principle involved was the same = ceremonial rules may be overruled by higher considerations.—ὃ οὐκ ἐξὸν ἦν. οὓς in Mark and Luke agreeing with ἄρτους, and here also in T. R., but ὃ doubtless the true reading; again presenting a problem in comparative exegesis (vide Weiss-Meyer). ὃ ought to mean “which thing it was not lawful to do,” but it may be rendered “which kind of bread,” etc.—εἰ μὴ, except; absolutely unlawful, except in case of priests.—Ver. 5. This reference to the priests naturally leads on to the second instance taken from their systematic breach of the technical Sabbath law in the discharge of sacerdotal duty.—ἦ οὐκ ἀνέγνωτε, have ye not read? not of course the statement following, but directions on which such a construction could be put, as in Numb. xxviii. 9, concerning the burnt offering of two lambs. They had

h ἔστιν = means.
 ἴδιε Lk. viii. 9, 11.
 i Lk. vi. 37.
 Jas. v. 6
 (the pass. ἀνθρώπου."
 in ver. 37).

6. λέγω δὲ ὑμῖν, ὅτι τοῦ ἱεροῦ μείζων<sup>1</sup> ἐστὶν ὧδε. 7. εἰ δὲ ἐγγνώκετε τί ἔστιν, "Ἐλεος" θελω καὶ οὐ θυσίαν, οὐκ ἂν<sup>2</sup> κατεδικάσατε τοὺς ἀναιτίους. 8. κύριος γάρ ἐστι καὶ<sup>3</sup> τοῦ σαββάτου ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου."

<sup>1</sup> μείζων in  $\aleph$ BD al. μείζων (LA) is a misjudged attempt at correction.

<sup>2</sup> This is another grammatical correction (vide ix. 13), ελεος in  $\aleph$ BCD 33.

<sup>3</sup> καὶ omitted in  $\aleph$ BCD, etc. It comes in from the parall.

read often enough, but had not understood. As Euthy. Zig. remarks, Jesus reproaches them for their vain labour, as not understanding what they read (μὴ ἐπιγινώσκουσιν ἢ ἀγαπινώσκουσι).—βιβηλοῦσι, profane, on the Pharisaic view of the Sabbath law, as an absolute prohibition of work. Perhaps the Pharisees themselves used this word as a technical term, applicable even to permissible Sabbath labour. So Schanz after Schöttgen.

Vv. 6-8. The principles involved. The facts stated raise questions as to the reasons. The Pharisees were men of rules, not accustomed to go back on principles. The passion for minutiae killed reflection. The reasons have been already hinted in the statement of the cases: ὅτε ἐπεινάσεν, ver. 3; ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, ver. 5: hunger, the temple; human needs, higher claims. These are referred to in inverse order in vv. 6-7.—Ver. 6. λέγω δὲ ὑμῖν: solemn affirmation, with a certain tone in the voice.—τοῦ ἱεροῦ μείζων. Though they might not have thought of the matter before, the claim of the temple to overrule the Sabbath law would be admitted by the Pharisees. Therefore, Jesus could base on it an argument a fortiori. The Sabbath must give way to the temple and its higher interests, therefore to something higher still. What was that something? Christ Himself, according to the almost unanimous opinion of interpreters, ancient and modern; whence doubtless the μείζων of T. R. But Jesus might be thinking rather of the kingdom than of the king; a greater interest is involved here, that of the kingdom of God. Fritzsche takes μείζων as = teaching men, and curing them of vice then going on. It may be asked: How did the interest come in? The disciples were following Jesus, but what was He about? What created the urgency? Whence came it that the disciples needed to pluck ears of standing corn? We do not know. That is one of the many lacunæ in the evangelic history. But it may be assumed that there was something urgent going on in connection with Christ's ministry, whereby He and His companions were overtaken with extreme hunger, so that they were fain to eat unprepared food (ἀκατέργαστον σίτον, Euthy. Zig. on ver. 7).—Ver. 7. The principle of human need stated in terms of a favourite prophetic oracle (ix. 13).—εἰ δὲ ἐγγνώκετε . . . οὐκ ἂν κατεδικάσατε: the form of expression, a past indicative in protasis, with a past indicative with ἂν in apodosis, implies that the supposition is contrary to fact (Burton, N. T. Moods and Tenses, § 248). The Pharisees did not know what the oracle meant; hence on a previous occasion Jesus bade them go and learn (ix. 13). If their pedantry blinded them to distinctions of higher and lower in institutions, or rather made them reckon the least the greatest command, minutiae testing obedience, it still more deadened their hearts to the claims of mercy and humanity. Of course this idolatry went on from bad to worse. For the Jews of a later, templeless time, the law was greater than the temple (Holtz., in H.C., quoting Weber).—ἀναιτίους: doubly guiltless: as David was through imperious hunger, as the priests were when subordinating Sabbath, to temple, requirements.—Ver. 8. This weighty logion is best understood when taken along with that in Mark ii. 27 = the Sabbath for man, not man for the Sabbath. The question is: Does it merely state a fact, or does it also contain the rationale of the fact? That depends on the sense we give to the title Son of Man. As a technical name = Messiah, it simply asserts the authority of Him who bears it to determine how the Sabbath is to be observed in the Kingdom of God. As a name of humility, making no obtrusive exceptional claims, like Son of David or Messiah, it suggests a reason for the lordship in sympathy with the ethical principle embodied in the prophetic oracle. The title does not indeed mean mankind, or any man, homo quivis, as Grotius and Kuinoel

9. Καὶ <sup>1</sup> μεταβὰς ἐκεῖθεν, ἦλθεν εἰς τὴν συναγωγὴν αὐτῶν. 10. j Ch. xi. 1. καὶ ἰδοῦ, ἄνθρωπος ἦν τὴν <sup>1</sup> χεῖρα ἔχων <sup>2</sup> ξηράν· καὶ ἐπηρώτησαν <sup>k</sup> parall. and αὐτόν, λέγοντες, “Εἰ ἔξῃστι τοῖς σάββασι θεραπεύειν <sup>2</sup> ;” ἵνα κατη- <sup>John v. 3.</sup> γορήσωσιν αὐτοῦ. 11. Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Τίς ἔσται <sup>3</sup> ἐξ ὑμῶν ἄνθρωπος, ὃς ἔξει πρόβατον ἓν, καὶ ἐὰν ἐμπέσῃ τοῦτο τοῖς σάββασιν think. It points to Jesus, but to Him not as an exceptional man (“der einzigartige,” Weiss), but as the representative man, maintaining solidarity with humanity, standing for the human interest, as the Pharisees stood for the supposed divine, the real divine interest being identical with the human. The radical antithesis between Jesus and the Pharisees lay in their respective ideas of God. It is interesting to find a glimpse of the true sense of this logion in Chrysostom: περὶ ἑαυτοῦ λέγων. Ὁ δὲ Μάρκος καὶ περὶ τῆς κοινῆς φύσεως αὐτῶν τοῦτο εἰρηκέναι φησίν. Hom. xxxix.—κύριος, not to the effect of abrogation but of interpretation and restoration to true use. The weekly rest is a beneficent institution, God’s holiday to weary men, and the Kingdom of Heaven, whose royal law is love, has no interest in its abolition.

<sup>1</sup> NBC omit ἦν τὴν. The text of Mt. as in T. R. has been influenced by that in Mk. (iii. 1).

<sup>2</sup> So in BC (W.H.), θεραπευσαι in NDL (Tisch.).

<sup>3</sup> εσται is omitted in CLXS, and bracketed in W.H.; it is found in NBD al.

Vv. 9-14. A Sabbath cure (Mk. iii. 1-6; Lk. vi. 6-11); not necessarily happening immediately after. Matthew and Luke follow Mark’s order, which is topical, not historical; another instance of collision as to Sabbath observance.—Ver. 9. καὶ μεταβὰς . . . αὐτῶν. The αὐτῶν seems to imply that our evangelist takes the order as one of close temporal sequence (Mark says simply “into a synagogue,” iii. 1). In that case the αὐτῶν would refer to the fault-finding Pharisees of the previous narrative, piqued by Christ’s defence and bent on further mischief (vide Weiss-Meyer). The narrative comes in happily here as illustrating the scope of the principle of humanity laid down in connection with the previous incident.—Ver. 10. καὶ ἰδοῦ, here, as in viii. 2, ix. 2, introducing in a lively manner the story.—ξηράν, a dry hand, possibly a familiar expression in Hebrew pathology (De Wette); useless, therefore a serious enough affliction for a working man (a mason, according to Hebrew Gospel, Jerome ad loc.), especially if it was the right hand, as Luke states. But the cure was not urgent for a day, could stand over; therefore a good test case as between rival conceptions of Sabbath law.—ἐπηρώτησαν. The Pharisees asked a question suggested by the case, as if eager to provoke Jesus and put Him to the proof. Mark says they observed Him, waiting for Him to take the initiative. The former alternative suits the hypothesis of immediate temporal sequence.—εἰ ἔξῃστιν, etc. After λέγοντες we expect, according to classic usage, a direct question without εἰ. The εἰ is in its place in Mark (ver. 2), and the influence of his text may be suspected (Weiss) as explaining the incorrectness in Matthew. But εἰ in direct questions is not unusual in N. T. (Mt. xix. 3; Lk. xiii. 23, xxii. 49), vide Winer, § 57, 2, and Meyer ad loc. In Mark’s account Christ, not the Pharisees, puts the question.

Vv. 11, 12. Christ’s reply, by two home-thrusting questions and an irresistible conclusion.—τίς . . . ἄνθρωπος. One is tempted here, as in vii. 9, to put emphasis on ἄνθρωπος: who of you not dead to the feelings of a man? Such questions as this and that in Lk. xv. 4 go to the root of the matter. Humanity was what was lacking in the Pharisæic character.—πρόβατον ἓν: one sheep answering to the one working hand, whence perhaps Luke’s ἡ δεξιὰ (vi. 6).—ἐὰν ἐμπέσῃ. The case supposed might quite well happen; hence in the protasis ἐὰν with subjunctive, and in the apodosis the future (Burton, N. T. Moods and Tenses, § 250). A solitary sheep might fall into a ditch on a Sabbath; and that is what its owner would do if he were an ordinary average human being, viz., lift it out at once. What would the Pharisee do? It is easy to see what he would be tempted to do if the one sheep were his own. But would he have allowed such action as a general rule? One would n here and ἄνθρωπος προβάτου; ὥστε ἔξεστι τοῖς σάββασι καλῶς ποιεῖν."

1 Ch. xv. 14. εἰς ἴβόθουον, οὐχὶ κρατήσῃ αὐτὸ καὶ ἐγερεῖ; 12. πόσω οὖν διαφέρει 1 k. vi. 39.
 in parall.
 in same sense. Ch.
 xvii. 11.
 Mk. ix. 12
 to restore social state). Heb. xiii. 19 (to friends). n Ch. xxii. 15; xxvii. 1, 7; xxviii. 12.

<sup>1</sup> ἜBL have σου before την χεῖρα.

<sup>2</sup> ἀπεκ. in ἜBLΔΣ al. D has αποκ. as in T. R.

<sup>3</sup> ἜBCDΣ place ἐξεληθόντες at the beginning of the sentence (Σ with καὶ before ἐξεληθόντες).

infer so from the fact that Jesus argued on such questions ex concessio. In that case the theory and practice of contemporary Pharisees must have been milder than in the Talmudic period, when the rule was: if there be no danger, leave the animal in the ditch till the morrow (vide Buxtorf, Syn. Jud., c. xvi.). Grotius suggests that later Jewish law was made stricter out of hatred to Christians.—Ver. 12. πόσω οὖν διαφέρει, etc. This is another of those simple yet far-reaching utterances by which Christ suggested rather than formulated His doctrine of the infinite worth of man. By how much does a human being differ from a sheep? That is the question which Christian civilisation has not even yet adequately answered. This illustration from common life is not in Mark and Luke. Luke has something similar in the Sabbath cure, reported in xiv. 1-6. Some critics think that Matthew combines the two incidents, drawing from his two sources, Mark and the Logia.—ὥστε, therefore, and so introducing here rather an independent sentence than a dependent clause expressive of result.—καλῶς ποιεῖν: in effect, to do good = εὖ ποιεῖν, i. e., in the present case to heal, θεραπεύειν, though in Acts x. 33, 1 Cor. vii. 37, the phrase seems to mean to do the morally right, in which sense Meyer and Weiss take it here also. Elsner, and after him Fritzsche, take it as = praclare agere, pointing to the ensuing miracle. By this brief prophetic utterance, Jesus sweeps away legal pedantries and casuistries, and goes straight to the heart of the matter. Beneficent action never unseasonable, of the essence of the Kingdom of God; therefore as permissible and incumbent on Sabbath as on other days. Spoken out of the depths of His religious consciousness, and a direct corollary from His benignant conception of God (vide Holtz., H. C., p. 91).

Vv. 13, 14. The issue: the hand cured, and Pharisaic ill-will deepened. Ver. 13. τότε λέγει. He heals by a word: sine contactu sola voce, quod ne speciem quidem violati Sabbati habere poterat (Grotius).—Ἐκτεινόν σου τ. χ. Brief authoritative word, possessing both physical and moral power, conveying life to the withered member, and inspiring awe in spectators.—καὶ ἔξέτ. καὶ ἀπεκατ. The double καὶ signifies the quick result ("celeritatem miraculi," Elsner). Grotius takes the second verb as a participle rendering: he stretched out his restored hand, assuming that not till restored could the hand be stretched out. The healing and the outstretching may be conceived of as contemporaneous.—ὕγιης ὡς ἡ ἄλλη: the evangelist adds this to ἀπεκατ. to indicate the completeness. We should have expected this addition rather from Luke, who ever aims at making prominent the greatness of the miracle, as well as its benevolence.—Ver. 14. ἐξεληθόντες: overawed for the moment, the Pharisaic witnesses of the miracle soon recovered themselves, and went out of the synagogue with hostile intent.—συμβούλιον ἔλαβον, consulted together = συμβουλευέσθαι.—κατ' αὐτοῦ, against Him. Hitherto they had been content with finding fault; now it is come to plotting against His life—a tribute to His power.—ἄπως, etc.: this clause indicates generally the object of their plotting, vis., that it concerned the life of the obnoxious one. They consulted not how to compass the end, but simply agreed together that it was an end to be steadily kept in view. The murderous will has come to birth, the way will follow in due course. Such is the evil fruit of Sabbath controversies.

ἀπολέωσιν. 15. Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς γνοὺς ἀνεχώρησεν ἐκεῖθεν· καὶ ὁ Ch. xvi. 20
 ἤκολούθησαν αὐτῷ ὄχλοι<sup>1</sup> πολλοί, καὶ ἐθεράπευσεν αὐτοὺς πάντας· (W.H.)
 16. καὶ ἐπετίμησεν αὐτοῖς, ἵνα μὴ<sup>2</sup> φανερόν αὐτὸν ποιήσωσιν· Mk. viii.
 17. ὅπως<sup>2</sup> πληρωθῆ τὸ ῥηθὲν διὰ Ἡσαίου τοῦ προφήτου, λέγοντος, 30 (with 18. Ἰδοῦ, ὁ παῖς μου, ὃν ἠρέτισα· ὁ ἀγαπητός μου, εἰς ὃν<sup>3</sup> ἔδόκησεν ἡ ψυχὴ μου· θῆσω τὸ πνεῦμά μου ἐπ' αὐτόν, καὶ κρίσει<sup>4</sup> ἔθε- Mk. iii. 12 τοῖς ἔθνεσιν ἀπαγγελεῖ· 19. οὐκ ἔρίσει, οὐδὲ<sup>5</sup> κραυγᾶσει· οὐδὲ with ἀκούσει τις ἐν ταῖς πλατείαις τὴν φωνὴν αὐτοῦ. 20. κάλαμον accus. as ἑστυγερμμένον οὐ κατεάξει, καὶ λίνον τυφόμενον οὐ σβέσει· ἕως here and ἃν<sup>6</sup> ἐκβάλλῃ εἰς νίκος τὴν κρίσιν. 21. καὶ ἐν<sup>4</sup> τῷ ὀνόματι αὐτοῦ Mk. iii. 12 ἔθνη ἑλπιούσι· t Mk. v. 4;
 xiv. 3. Lk
 ix. 39.

u ver. 35. Ch. xiii. 52. John x. 4

<sup>1</sup> NB omit ὄχλοι, which is inconsistent with πάντας. <sup>2</sup> NBCD have ἵνα.

<sup>3</sup> NB have simply ον. <sup>4</sup> Most uncials omit εν, which is found in D it. vg.

Vv. 15-21. Jesus retires; prophetic portraiture of His character. Verses 15 and 16 are abridged from Mk. iii. 7-12, which contains an account of an extensive healing ministry. The sequel of the Sabbath encounter is very vague. The one fact outstanding and noteworthy is the withdrawal of Jesus, conscious of having given deep offence, but anxious to avoid tragic consequences for the present. It is to that fact mainly that the evangelist attaches his fair picture of Jesus, in prophetic language. It is happily brought in here, where it gains by the contrast between the real Jesus and Jesus as conceived by the Pharisees, a miscreant deserving to die. It is not necessary to suppose that the historical basis of the picture is to be found exclusively in vv. 15, 16, all the more that the statement they contain is but a meagre reproduction of Mk. iii. 7-12, omitting some valuable material, e.g., the demoniac cry: "Thou art the Son of God". The historic features answering to the prophetic outline in the evangelist's mind may be taken from the whole story of Christ's public life as hitherto told, from the baptism onwards. Luke gives his picture of Jesus at the beginning (iv. 16-30) as a frontispiece, Matthew places his at the end of a considerable section of the story, at a critical turning point in the history, and he means the reader to look back over the whole for verification. Thus for the evangelist ver. 18 may point back to the baptism (iii. 13-17), when the voice from heaven called Jesus God's beloved Son; ver. 19 to the teaching on the hill

(v.-vii.), when the voice of Jesus was heard not in the street but on the mountain top, remote from the crowd below; ver. 20 to the healing ministry among the sick, physically bruised reeds, poor suffering creatures in whom the flame of life burnt low; ver. 21 to such significant incidents as that of the centurion of Capernaum (viii. 5-13). Broad interpretation here seems best. Some features, e.g., the reference to judgment, ver. 20, second clause, are not to be pressed.

The quotation is a very free reproduction from the Hebrew, with occasional side glances at the Sept. It has been suggested that the evangelist drew neither from the Hebrew nor from the Sept., but from a Chaldee Targum in use in his time (Lutteroth). It is certainly curious that he should have omitted Is. xlii. 4, "He shall not fail nor be discouraged," etc., a most important additional feature in the picture = Messiah shall not only not break the bruised reed, but He shall not be Himself a bruised reed, but shall bravely stand for truth and right till they at length triumph. Admirable historic materials to illustrate that prophetic trait are ready to our hand in Christ's encounters with the Pharisees (ix. 1-17, xii. 1-13). Either Matthew has followed a Targum, or been misled by the similarity of Is. xlii. 3 and 4, or he means ver. 20 to bear a double reference, and read: He shall neither break nor be a bruised reed, nor allow to be quenched either in others or in Himself the feeble flame: a strong, brave, buoyant, ever-victorious hero, helper of the weak, Him

22. Τότε προσηνέχθη<sup>1</sup> αὐτῷ δαιμονιζόμενος τυφλὸς καὶ κωφός· καὶ ἑθεράπευσεν αὐτόν, ὥστε τὸν τυφλὸν καὶ<sup>2</sup> κωφὸν καὶ λαλεῖν καὶ βλέπειν. 23. καὶ ἔξίσταντο πάντες οἱ ὄχλοι καὶ ἔλεγον, “Μῆτι οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ υἱὸς Δαβίδ;” 24. Οἱ δὲ Φαρισαῖοι ἀκούσαντες εἶπον, “Οὗτος οὐκ ἐκβάλλει τὰ δαιμόνια, εἰ μὴ ἐν τῷ Βεελζεβούλ ἄρχοντι τῶν δαιμονίων.” 25. Εἰδὼς δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς<sup>3</sup> τὰς ἐνθυμήσεις αὐτῶν εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Πᾶσα βασιλεία ἢ μερισθεῖσα καθ’ ἑαυτῆς ἔρημοῦται· καὶ πᾶσα πόλις ἢ οἰκία μερισθεῖσα καθ’ ἑαυτῆς, οὐ σταθήσεται.

<sup>1</sup> B Cur. Syr. Cop. have προσηνεγκαν with δαιμονιζομενον τυφλον και κωφον. Most MSS. as in T. R. W.H. adopt the reading of B, putting T. R. in the margin.

<sup>2</sup> NBD and some versions omit τυφλον και, also the και before λαλειν.

<sup>3</sup> NBD omit ο Ιησους.

self a stranger to weakness.—ἡρέτισα (ver. 18), an Ionic form in use in Hellenistic Greek, here only in N. T., often in Sept. = αἰρέομαι. Hesychius under ἡρετισαμένη gives as equivalents ἡγάπησα, ἐπιθύμησα, ἠθέλησα, ἠράσθην.—κραυγᾶσαι (ver. 19), late form for κράζω. Phrynichus, p. 337, condemns, as illiterate, use of κραυγασμός instead of κεκραγμός. On the words οὐδὲ κρ. Pricaeus remarks: “Sentio clamorem intelligi qui nota est animi commoti et effervescentis”. He cites examples from Seneca, Plutarch, Xenophon, etc.—ἀκούσει is late for ἀκούσεται. Verbs expressing organic acts or states have middle forms in the future (vide Rutherford, New Phrynichus, pp. 138, 376-412).—ἕως, ver. 20, followed by subjunctive, with ἄν, as in classics, in a clause introduced by ἕως referring to a future contingency.—τῷ ὄνοματι, ver. 21, dative after ἐλπιούσιν; in Sept., Is. xlii. 4, with ἐπί. This construction here only in N. T.

Vv. 22-37. Demoniac healed and Pharisaic calumny repelled (Mk. iii. 22-30; Lk. xi. 14-23—cf. Mt. ix. 32-34). The healing of a blind and dumb demoniac has its place here not for its own sake, as a miracle, but simply as the introduction to another conflict between Jesus and the Pharisees. It is a story of wicked calumny repelled. The transition from the fair picture of the true Jesus to this hideous Pharisaic caricature is highly dramatic in its effect.

Vv. 22, 23. τυφλὸς καὶ κωφός, blind as well as dumb. The demoniac in ix. 32 dumb only. But dumbness here also is the main feature; hence in last clause κωφὸν only, and λαλεῖν before βλέπειν.—ὥστε with infinitive, expressing here not merely tendency but result.—Ver. 23. ἐξίσταντο: not implying anything exceptionally remarkable in the cure; a standing phrase (in Mark at least) for the impression made on the people. They never got to be familiar with Christ's wonderful works, so as to take them as matters of course.—μῆτι implies a negative answer: they can hardly believe what the fact seems to suggest = can this possibly be, etc.? Not much capacity for faith in the average Israelite, yet honest-hearted compared with the Pharisee.—ὁ υἱὸς Δαβίδ: the popular title for the Messiah.

Ver. 24. Οἱ δὲ Φαρισαῖοι. They of course have a very different opinion. In Mark these were men come down from Jerusalem, to watch, not to lay hold of Jesus, Galilee not being under the direct jurisdiction of the Sanhedrim then (vide on Mark).—Οὗτος οὐκ ἐκβάλλει, etc.: theory enunciated for second time, unless ix. 34 be an anticipation by the evangelist, or a spurious reading. What diversity of opinion! Christ's friends, according to Mark, thought Him “beside himself”—mad, Messiah, in league with Beelzebub! Herod had yet another theory: the marvellous healer was John redivivus, and endowed with the powers of the other world. All this implies that the healing ministry was a great fact.—οὐκ . . . εἰ μὴ: the negative way of putting it stronger than the positive. The Pharisees had to add εἰ μὴ. They would gladly have said: “He does not cast out devils at all”. But the fact was undeniable; therefore they had to invent a theory to neutralise its significance.—ἄρχοντι, without article, might mean, as prince, therefore able to communicate such power. So Meyer, Weiss, et al. But the article may be omitted after Βεελζεβούλ as after βασιλεύς, or on account of the following genitive.

26. καὶ εἰ ὁ Σατανᾶς τὸν Σατανᾶν ἐκβάλλει, ἐφ' ἑαυτὸν ἐμερίσθη· πῶς οὖν σταθήσεται ἡ βασιλεία αὐτοῦ; 27. καὶ εἰ ἐγὼ ἐν Βεελζεβούλ ἔκβάλλω τὰ δαιμόνια, οἱ υἱοὶ ὑμῶν ἐν τίνι ἐκβάλλουσι; διὰ τοῦτο αὐτοὶ ὑμῶν ἔσονται κριταί.<sup>1</sup> 28. εἰ δὲ ἐγὼ ἐν Πνεύματι Θεοῦ<sup>2</sup> ἔκβάλλω τὰ δαιμόνια, ἄρα ἔφθασεν ἐφ' ὑμᾶς ἡ βασιλεία τοῦ Θεοῦ.

Rom. i. 31. 2 Cor. x. 14. Phil. iii. 16. 1 Thess. ii. 16 (in all—to reach).

<sup>1</sup> Ὡς BD have κριταί εσονται υμων.

<sup>2</sup> Most uncials have εγω after ἐν Πνεύματι Θεου, on which the emphasis ought to lie

So Schanz. Whether the Pharisees believed this theory may be doubted. It was enough that it was plausible. To reason with such men is vain. Yet Jesus did reason for the benefit of disciples.

Vv. 25-30. The theory shown to be absurd.—Ver. 25. εἰδὼς τὰς ἐνθυμήσεις. Jesus not only heard their words, but knew their thoughts, the malicious feelings which prompted their words, and strove so to present the case as to convict them of bad faith and dishonesty.—πᾶσα βασιλεία, etc.: statement of an axiom widely exemplified in human affairs: division fatal to stability in kingdoms and cities.—σταθήσεται: 1st future passive with an intransitive sense, vide Winer, § 38, 1.—Ver. 26 applies the axiom to Satan. εἰ, introduces a simple particular supposition without reference to its truth.—ἐμερίσθη: the aorist has the force of a perfect. Satan casting out Satan means self-stultification; ipso facto, self-division results. Against the argument it might be objected: Kingdoms and cities do become divided against themselves, regardless of fatal consequences, why not also Satan? Why should not that happen to Satan's kingdom which has happened even to the Christian Church? Jesus seems to have credited Satan with more astuteness than is possessed by states, cities, and churches. Satan may be wicked, He says in effect, but he is not a fool. Then it has to be considered that communities commit follies which individuals avoid. Men war against each other to their common undoing, who would be wiser in their own affairs. One Satan might cast out another, but no Satan will cast out himself. And that is the case put by Jesus. Some, e.g., De Wette and Fritzsche, take ὁ Σατανᾶς τ. Σ. ἐκβάλλει as = one Satan casting out another. But that is not Christ's meaning. He so puts the case as to make the absurdity evident. Ex hypothesis He had a right to put it so; for the theory was that Satan directly empowered and enabled Him to deliver men from his (Satan's) power.—Ver 27. To the previous convincing argument Jesus adds an argumentum ad hominem, based on the exorcism then practised among the Jews, with which it would appear the Pharisees found no fault.—οἱ υἱοὶ ὑμῶν, not of course Christ's disciples (so most of the Fathers), for the Pharisaic prejudice against Him would extend to them, but men belonging to the same school or religious type, like-minded. By referring to their performances Jesus put the Pharisees in a dilemma. Either they must condemn both forms of dis-possession or explain why they made a difference. What they would have said we do not know, but it is not difficult to suggest reasons. The Jewish exorcists operated in conventional fashion by use of herbs and magical formulæ, and the results were probably insignificant. The practice was sanctioned by custom, and harmless. But in casting out devils, as in all other things, Jesus was original, and His method was too effectual. His power, manifest to all, was His offence.—κριταί. Jesus now makes the fellow-religionists of the Pharisees their judges. On a future occasion He will make John the Baptist their judge (xxi. 23-27). Such home-thrusts were very inconvenient.

Ver. 28. The alternative: if not by Satan then by the Spirit of God, with an inevitable inference as to the worker and His work.—ἐν πνεύματι Θεοῦ. Luke has ἐν δακτύλῳ θ. The former seems more in keeping with the connection of thought as defending the ethical character of Christ's work assailed by the Pharisees. If, indeed, the spirit of God were regarded from the charismatic point of view, as the source of miraculous gifts, the two expressions would be synonymous. But there is reason to believe that by the time our Gospel was written the Pauline conception of the Holy Spirit's influence as chiefly ethical and immanent, as distinct from that of the primitive apostolic church, in which it was charismatic and transcendent, had gained currency (vide my St. Paul's

29. ἢ πῶς δύναται τις εἰσελθεῖν εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν τοῦ ἰσχυροῦ καὶ τὰ σκεύη αὐτοῦ διαρπάσαι,<sup>1</sup> ἐὰν μὴ πρῶτον δῆσῃ τὸν ἰσχυρόν; καὶ τότε τὴν οἰκίαν αὐτοῦ διαρπάσει.<sup>2</sup> 30. ὁ μὴ ὢν μετ' ἐμοῦ, κατ' ἐμοῦ

<sup>1</sup> BCXΣ have the simple αρπασαι. διαρπασαι (ΣDLΔ al.) conforms either to Mk. or to the next clause.

<sup>2</sup> ΣDΣ (Tisch.) have διαρπασθη. BCL al. fl. have διαρπασει, as in T.R. (W.H.).

Conception of Christianity, chap. xiii.). A trace of the new Pauline view may be found in Mt. x. 20: "It is not ye that speak, but the Spirit of your Father speaking in you". The influence is within, and the product is not unintelligible utterance, like that of the speaker with tongues (1 Cor. xii., xiv.), but wise, sincere apology for the faith. But why then did Luke not adopt this Pauline phrase? Because one of his main aims was to bring out the miraculousness of Christ's healing works; that they were done by the very finger of God (Exod. viii. 19).—ἐφθασεν. Fritzsche takes this word strictly as signifying not merely: the kingdom of God has come nigh you (ἤγγικεν, Lk. x. 9), but: has come nigh sooner than you expected. The more general sense, however, seems most suitable, as it is the usual sense in the N. T. The point at issue was: do the events in question mean Satan's kingdom come or God's kingdom come? It must be one or other; make up your minds which.—Ver. 29. To help them to decide Jesus throws out yet another parabolic line of thought.—ἦ! if all that I have said does not convince you consider this. The parable seems based on Is. xlix. 24, 25, and like all Christ's parabolic utterances appeals to common sense. The theme is, spoiling the spoiler, and the argument that the enterprise implies hostile purpose and success in it superior power. The application is: the demoniac is a captive of Satan; in seeking to cure him I show myself Satan's enemy; in actually curing him I show myself Satan's master.—τοῦ ἰσχυροῦ: the article is either generic, or individualising after the manner of parabolic speech. Proverbs and parables assume acquaintance with their characters.—σκεύη, household furniture (Gen. xxxi. 37); ἀρπάσαι, seize (Judges xxi. 21).—διαρπάσει, make a clean sweep of all that is in the house, the owner, bound hand and foot, being utterly helpless. The use of this compound verb points to the thoroughness of the cures wrought on demoniacs, as in the case of the demoniac of Gadara: quiet, clothed, sane (Mk. v. 15).—Ver. 30. One begins at this point to have the feeling that here, as elsewhere, our evangelist groups sayings of kindred character instead of exactly reproducing Christ's words as spoken to the Pharisees. The connection is obscure, and the interpretations therefore conflicting. On first view one would say that the adage seems more appropriate in reference to lukewarm disciples or undecided hearers than to the Pharisees, who made no pretence of being on Christ's side. Some accordingly (e.g., Bleek, after Elwert and Ullmann) have so understood it. Others, including Grotius, Westein, De Wette, take the ἐγώ of the adage to be Satan, and render: he who, like myself, is not with Satan is against him. Kypke, Observ. Sac., says: "Prima persona posita est a servatore pro quacunq; alia, proverbialiter, hoc sensu: qui socius cujusdam bella cum alio gerentis non est, is pro adversario censeri solet. Cum igitur ego me re ipsa adversarium Satanae esse ostenderit, nulla specie socius ejus potero vocari." This certainly brings the saying into line with the previous train of thought, but if Jesus had meant to say that He surely would have expressed Himself differently. The Fathers (Hilary, Jerome, Chrys.) took the ἐγώ to be Jesus and the ὁ μὴ ὢν to be Satan. So understood, the adage contains a fourth concluding argument against the notion of a league between Jesus and Satan. Most modern interpreters refer the ὁ μ. ω. to the Pharisees. Schanz, however, understands the saying as referring to the undecided among the people. The only serious objection to this view is that it makes the saying irrelevant to the situation.—σκορπίζει: late for the earlier σκεδάννυμι, vide Lob., Phryn., p. 218. As to the metaphor of gathering and scattering, its natural basis is not apparent. But in all cases, when one man scatters what another gathers their aims and interests are utterly diverse. Satan is the arch-waster, Christ the collector, Saviour.

Vv. 31, 32. Jesus changes His tone from argument to solemn warning. Ver.

ἐστι. καὶ ὁ μὴ συνάγων μετ' ἐμοῦ, <sup>1</sup> σκορπίζει. 31. Διὰ τοῦτο <sup>2</sup> λέγω ὑμῖν, Πᾶσα ἁμαρτία καὶ <sup>3</sup> βλασφημία ἀφεθήσεται τοῖς ἀνθρώποις· ἡ δὲ τοῦ Πνεύματος βλασφημία οὐκ ἀφεθήσεται τοῖς ἀνθρώποις.<sup>1</sup> 32. καὶ ὅς ἂν <sup>2</sup> εἶπῃ λόγον κατὰ τοῦ υἱοῦ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, ἀφεθήσεται αὐτῷ· ὅς δ' ἂν εἶπῃ κατὰ τοῦ Πνεύματος τοῦ Ἁγίου, οὐκ ἀφεθήσεται <sup>3</sup> αὐτῷ, οὔτε ἐν τούτῳ τῷ αἰῶνι οὔτε ἐν τῷ μέλλοντι.

Lk. xi. 23.
John x. 12;
xvi. 32. 2
Cor. ix. 9.
Ch. xv. 19.
Mk. iii. 28;
vii. 22.
Eph. iv
31 (evil speaking generally).
Ch. xxvi.

65. Mk. ii. 7; xiv. 64. John x. 33 (against God).

<sup>1</sup> B omit τοῖς ἀνθρώποις, which seem to be simply an echo of τ. αν. in the previous clause.

<sup>2</sup> ος εαν in most uncials. D has ος αν, as in T. R.

<sup>3</sup> For οὐκ ἀφεθήσεται found in most uncials B has οὐ μὴ ἀφεθῆ, which W.H. place in the margin.

31. Διὰ τοῦτο connects not merely with preceding verse, but with the whole foregoing argument. Mark more impressively introduces the blasphemy-logion with a solemn ἀμήν λέγω ὑμῖν.—πᾶσα ἁμαρτία, etc. A broad preliminary declaration of the pardonableness of human sin of all sorts, and especially of sins of the tongue, worthy and characteristic of Jesus, and making what follows more impressive.—ἡ δὲ τ. Π. βλασ. οὐκ ἀφεθήσεται: pointed, emphatic exception. Evidently the Spirit here is taken ethically. He represents the moral ideal, the absolutely good and holy. Blasphemy against the Spirit so conceived, unpardonable—that is our Lord's deliberate judgment.—βλασφημία, injurious speech (from βλάπτω and φήμη), in such a case will mean speaking of the holy One as if He were unholy, or, in the abstract, calling good evil, not by misunderstanding but through antipathy to the good.—Ver. 32. So serious a statement needs to be carefully guarded against misapprehension; therefore Jesus adds an explanatory declaration.—λόγον κατὰ τ. υ. τ. ἀνθρώπου. Jesus distinguishes between a word against the Son of Man and a word against the Holy Ghost. The reference in the former is to Himself, presumably, though Mark at the corresponding place has “the sons of men,” and no special mention of a particular son of man. Christ gives the Pharisees to understand that the gravamen of their offence is not that they have spoken evil of Him. Jesus had no exceptional sensitiveness as to personal offences. Nor did He mean to suggest that offences of the kind against Him were more serious or less easily pardonable than such offences against other men, say, the prophets or the Baptist. Many interpreters, indeed, think otherwise, and represent blasphemy against the Son of Man as the higher limit of the forgivable. A grave mistake, I humbly think. Jesus was as liable to honest misunderstanding as other good men, in some respects more liable than any, because of the exceptional originality of His character and conduct. All new things are liable to be misunderstood and decried, and the best for a while to be treated as the worst. Jesus knew this, and allowed for it. Men might therefore honestly misunderstand Him, and be in no danger of the sin against the Holy Ghost (e.g., Saul of Tarsus). On the other hand, men might dishonestly calumniate any ordinary good man, and be very near the unpardonable sin. It is not the man that makes the difference, but the source of the blasphemy. If the source be ignorance, misconception, ill-informed prejudice, blasphemy against the Son of Man will be equally pardonable with other sins. If the source be malice, rooted dislike of the good, selfish preference of wrong, because of the advantage it brings, to the right which the good seek to establish, then the sin is not against the man but against the cause, and the Divine Spirit who inspires him, and though the agent be but a humble, imperfect man, the sinner is perilously near the unpardonable point. Jesus wished the Pharisees to understand that, in His judgment, that was their position.—οὔτε, οὔτε analyse the negation of pardon, conceived as affecting both worlds, into its parts for sake of emphasis (vide on V. 34-36). Dogmatic inferences, based on the double negation, to possible pardon after death, are precarious. Lightfoot (Hor. Heb.) explains the double negation by reference to the Jewish legal doctrine that, in contrast to other sins, profaning the name of God

33. Ἡ ποιήσατε τὸ δένδρον καλόν, καὶ τὸν καρπὸν αὐτοῦ καλόν, ἢ ποιήσατε τὸ δένδρον σαπρὸν, καὶ τὸν καρπὸν αὐτοῦ σαπρὸν· ἐκ γὰρ τοῦ καρποῦ τὸ δένδρον γινώσκεται. 34. Γεννήματα ἐχιδνῶν, πῶς
 b Lk. vi. 45. δύνασθε ἀγαθὰ λαλεῖν, πονηροὶ ὄντες; ἐκ γὰρ τοῦ <sup>b</sup> περισσεύματος Mk. viii.
 8. 2 Cor. τῆς καρδίας τὸ στόμα λαλεῖ. 35. ὁ ἀγαθὸς ἄνθρωπος ἐκ τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ
 viii. 14.
 c Ch. xiii. θησαυροῦ τῆς καρδίας <sup>1</sup> ἐκβάλλει τὰ <sup>2</sup> ἀγαθὰ· καὶ ὁ πονηρὸς ἄνθρω-
 52. Lk. x.
 35 (in same πος ἐκ τοῦ πονηροῦ θησαυροῦ ἐκβάλλει πονηρά. 36. λέγω δὲ ὑμῖν, sense).
 d Lk. xvi. 2. ὅτι πᾶν ῥῆμα ἀργόν, ὃ ἐὰν λαλήσωσιν <sup>b</sup> οἱ ἄνθρωποι, <sup>d</sup> ἀποδώσουσι Acts xix.
 40. 1 Pet. περὶ αὐτοῦ <sup>d</sup> λόγον ἐν ἡμέρα κρίσεως. 37. ἐκ γὰρ τῶν λόγων σου
 iv. 5.
 δικαιωθήσῃ, καὶ ἐκ τῶν λόγων σου καταδικασθήσῃ.”

<sup>1</sup> Most uncials omit τῆς καρδίας. It comes from Lk. (vi. 45).

<sup>2</sup> BD al. omit τα, which, however, is found in  $\aleph$ CLΔΣ and retained by W.H. on the margin.

<sup>3</sup> For ο εαν λαλήσωσιν  $\aleph$ BC have ο λαλήσουσιν, D λαλουσιν.

could be expiated only by death, unpardonable in this life. Blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, says Jesus, in conscious antithesis, pardonable neither here nor there: “neque ante mortem, neque per mortem”.

Vv. 33-37. Kindred Logia. With the word concerning blasphemy the self-defence of Jesus against Pharisaic calumny reached its culmination and probably (as in Mark's report) its close. The sentences following seem to be accretions rather than an organic part of the discourse. They substantially reproduce sayings found in Sermon on Mount (vii. 16-20), there directed against false prophets, here against false religionists. Ver. 35 is found in Luke's version of the Sermon (vi. 45). They might have been remarks made to the disciples about the Pharisees, as in xvi. 6, though in their present form direct address is implied (vide ver. 34). Their essential import is that the nature or heart of a man determines his speech and action. Given the tree, the fruit follows.—Ver. 33. ποιήσατε = εἶπατε (Euthy. Zig.), judge, pronounce; call both tree and fruit good, or evil; they must both be of one kind, in fact and in thought (vide Kypke, ad loc.). The reference of the adage has been much discussed: to the Pharisees or to Christ? Kypke replies: to Christ if you connect with what goes before, to the Pharisees if with what follows. As an adage the saying admits of either application. The Fathers favoured the reference to Christ, whom Meyer follows.—Ver. 34. Γεννήματα ἐχιδνῶν, vide iii. 7. John and Jesus agree in thinking the Pharisees a viper-brood. Both conceive them as morally hopeless. The Baptist wonders that they should come to a baptism of repentance. Jesus thinks them far on the way to final impenitence. But the point He makes here is that, being what they are, they cannot but speak evil. The poison of their nature must come out in their words.—Ver. 35. ὁ ἀγαθὸς ἄ.: good in the sense of benignant, gracious, kindly, the extreme moral opposite of the malignant viper-nature.—θησαυροῦ: in ver. 34 the heart is conceived as a fountain, of which speech is the overflow, here as a treasure whose stores of thought and feeling the mouth freely distributes.—ἐκβάλλει suggests speech characterised by energy, passion. There was no lack of emphasis in Pharisaic comments on Jesus. They hissed out their malevolent words at Him, being not heartless but bad-hearted. But cf. texts referred to on margin.—Ver 36. πᾶν ρ. ἀργόν: speech being the outcome of the heart, no word is insignificant, not even that which is ἀργόν, ineffectual (α, ἔργον), insipid, “idle”. It is an index of thoughtlessness if not of malice. This verse contains an important warning, whether spoken at this time or not.—Ver. 37. ἐκ γὰρ τ. λόγων σου. Judgment by words here taught; in Mt. xxv. 31-46 judgment by the presence or absence of kind deeds. No contradiction, for words are viewed as the index of a good or bad heart: bad positively, like that of the Pharisees, who spoke wickedly; bad negatively, like that of the thoughtless, who speak senselessly. On the teaching of this passage cf. James iii.

38. Τότε ἀπεκρίθησαν<sup>1</sup> τινες τῶν γραμματέων καὶ Φαρισαίων, λέγοντες, "Διδάσκαλε, θέλομεν ἀπὸ σοῦ σημεῖον ἰδεῖν." 39. Ὁ δὲ ἀποκριθεὶς εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, "Γενεὰ πονηρὰ καὶ *μοιχαλὶς σημεῖον ἐπιζητεῖ· καὶ σημεῖον οὐ δοθήσεται αὐτῇ, εἰ μὴ τὸ σημεῖον Ἰωῶνᾶ τοῦ προφήτου. 40. Ὅσπερ γὰρ ἦν Ἰωῶνας ἐν τῇ κοιλίᾳ τοῦ κήτους τρεῖς ἡμέρας καὶ τρεῖς νύκτας, οὕτως ἔσται ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἐν τῇ καρδίᾳ τῆς γῆς τρεῖς ἡμέρας καὶ τρεῖς νύκτας. 41. Ἄνδρες Νινευῖται ἀναστήσονται ἐν τῇ κρίσει μετὰ τῆς γενεᾶς ταύτης, καὶ κατακρινούσιν αὐτήν· ὅτι μετενόησαν εἰς τὸ κήρυγμα Ἰωῶνᾶ· καὶ

Ch. xvi. 4
Mk. viii.
38. Jas.
1v. 4
vide at Ch
vi. 32.

<sup>1</sup> Ὡς BCDLΣ insert αὐτω before τινες.

Vv. 38-45. A sign asked and refused, with relative discourse (Lk. xi. 16, 29-36). Both Matt.'s and Luke's reports convey the impression that the demand for a sign, and the enunciation of the Satanic theory as to Christ's cures of demoniacs, were synchronous. If they were, the demand was impudent, hypocritical, insulting. Think of the men who could so speak of Christ's healing ministry wanting a sign that would satisfy them as to His Messianic claims! —Ver. 38. σημεῖον: what kind of a sign? They thought the cure of demoniacs a sign from hell. Elsewhere we read of their asking a sign from heaven (xvi. 1). From what quarter was the sign now asked to come from? Perhaps those who made the demand had no idea; neither knew nor cared. Their question really meant: these signs won't do; if you want us to believe in you you must do something else than cast out devils. The apparent respect and earnestness of the request are feigned: "teacher, we desire from you (emphatic position) to see a sign". It reminds one of the mock homage of the soldiers at the Passion (xxvii. 27-31). —Ver. 39. γενεὰ, as in xi. 16, a moral class, "quae in omni malitia et improbitate vivit," Suicer, s. v. γενεὰ.—μοιχαλὶς, unfaithful to God as a wife to a husband, apt description of men professing godliness but ungodly in heart.—ἐπιζητεῖ, hankers after, as in vi. 32; characteristic; men that have no light within crave external evidence, which given would be of no service to them. Therefore: οὐ δοθήσεται: it will not be given either by Jesus or by any one else. He declines, knowing it to be vain. No sign will convince them; why give one?—εἰ μὴ, etc.: except the sign of Jonah the prophet, which was no sign in their sense. What is referred to? But for what follows we should have said: the preaching of repentance by Jonah to the Ninevites. So Lk. xi. 30 seems to take it. Jonah preached repentance to the men of Nineveh as the only way of escape from judgment. Jesus points to that historic instance and says: Beware! Jonah was not the only prophetic preacher of repentance; but, as Nineveh is held up as a reproach to the persons addressed, to single him out was fitting. —Ver. 40 gives an entirely different turn to the reference. The verse cannot be challenged on critical grounds. If it is an interpolation, it must have become an accepted part of the text before the date of our earliest copies. If it be genuine, then Jesus points to His resurrection as the appropriate sign for an unbelieving generation, saying in effect: you will continue to disbelieve in spite of all I can say or do, and at last you will put me to death. But I will rise again, a sign for your confusion if not for your conversion. For opposite views on this interpretation of the sign of Jonah, vide Meyer ad loc. and Holtzmann in H.C.—Ver. 41. Application of the reference in ver. 39. The men of Nineveh are cited in condemnation of the Jewish contemporaries of Jesus. Cf. similar use of historic parallels in xi. 20-24.—πλεῖον Ἰωῶνᾶ, more than Jonah, cf. ver. 6; refers either to Jesus personally as compared with Jonah, or to His ministry as compared with Jonah's. In the latter case the meaning is: there is far more in what is now going on around you to shut you up to repentance than in anything Jonah said to the men of Nineveh (so Grotius).—Ver. 42. βασίλισσα νότου is next pressed into the service of putting unbelievers to shame. The form βασίλισσα was condemned by Phryn., but Elsner cites instances from Demosthenes and others

- g Lk. xi. 31. ἰδοῦ, πλείον ἰωῶ ὤδε. 42. ἡ βασίλισσα νότου ἐγερθήσεται ἐν τῇ Acts viii.
2. Rev.
xviii. 7. κρίσει μετὰ τῆς γενεᾶς ταύτης, καὶ κατακρινεῖ αὐτήν· ὅτι ἦλθεν ἐκ h Lk. xi. 31. τῶν ἡπεράτων τῆς γῆς ἀκοῦσαι τὴν σοφίαν Σολομῶντος καὶ ἰδοῦ, R.-m. x.
18. Heb.
vi. 16. πλείον Σολομῶντος ὤδε. 43. Ὅταν δὲ τὸ ἀκάθαρτον πνεῦμα ἐξέλθῃ
i Lk. xi. 24. ἀπὸ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, διέρχεται δι' ἄνδρων τόπων, ζητοῦν ἀνάπαυσιν, 2 Pet. ii.
17. Jude
12. καὶ οὐκ εὐρίσκει. 44. τότε λέγει, Ἐπιστρέψω εἰς τὸν οἶκόν μου,<sup>1</sup>
1 Cor. vii.
5 (to have leisure). καὶ ἐξῆλθον· καὶ ἐλθὼν εὐρίσκει ἰσχυλάζοντα, κ' σεσαρωμένον καὶ Lk. xi. 25; xv. 8.

<sup>1</sup>  $\aleph$   $\Delta$   $\Sigma$  read εἰς τὸν οἶκόν μου επιστρέψω. The reading in T. R. is assimilated to Lk. (xi. 24).

good writers. J. Alberti also (Observ. Philol.) cites an instance from Athenæus, lib. xiii. 595: βασιλίσσῃ ἔσει Βαβυλῶνος. The reference is to the story in 1 Kings x. and 2 Chron. ix. concerning the Queen of Sheba visiting Solomon.—ἐκ τῶν ἡπεράτων τῆς γῆς. Elsner quotes in illustration the exhortation of Isocrates not to grudge to go a long way to hear those who profess to teach anything useful.—πλείον Σ., again a claim of superiority for the present over the great persons and things of the past. On the apparent egotism of these comparisons, vide my Apologetics, p. 367; and remember that Jesus claimed superiority not merely for Himself and His work, but even for the least in the Kingdom of Heaven (xi. 11).

Vv. 43-45. A comparison. Cf. Lk. xi. 24-26. Formerly Jesus had likened the evil race of Pharisaic religionists to children playing in the market-place (xi. 16-19). Now He uses expelled demons to depict their spiritual condition. The similitude moves in the region of popular opinion, and gives a glimpse into the superstitions of the time. We gather from it, first, that the effects of the arts of exorcists were temporary; and, second, the popular theory to explain the facts: the demon returned because he could not find a comfortable home anywhere else. On this vide Lightfoot, Hor. Heb. The parable was naturally suggested by the cure of the demoniac (ver. 22).—Ver. 43. δι' ἀνδρων τόπων: the haunts of demons, as popularly conceived, were places uninhabited by men, deserts and graveyards. The demon in Tobit viii. 3 flies to the uppermost parts of Egypt; and in Baruch iv. 35 a land desolated by fire is to become tenanted by demons.—διέρχεται ζητοῦν: the spirit keeps moving on in quest of a resting place; like a human being he feels ill at ease in the monotonous waste of sand.—οὐκ εὐρίσκει:

in Luke εὐρίσκον. The change from participle to finite verb is expressive. The failure to find a resting place was an important fact, as on it depended the resolve to return to the former abode.—Ver. 44. σχυλάζοντα σ. καὶ κ. = un-tenanted and ready for a tenant, inviting by its clean, ornamented condition. The epithets simply describe in lively pictorial manner the risk of repossession. But naturally commentators seek spiritual equivalents for them. Ornamented how? With grace, say some (Hilary, Chrys., Godet), with sin, others (Orig., Jer., Euthy., Weiss, etc.). The ornamentation must be to the taste of the tenant. And what is that? Neither for sin nor for grace, but for sin counterfeiting grace; a form of godliness without the power; sanctity which is but a mask for iniquity. The house is decorated reputedly for God's occupancy, really for the devil's.—σεσαρωμένον; σαροῦν is condemned by Phryn.; "when you hear one say σάρωσον bid him say παρακώρησον".—Ver. 45. ἐπὶ ἕτερα πνεύματα, etc. This feature is introduced to make the picture answer to the moral condition of the Pharisees as conceived by Jesus. The parable here passes out of the region of popular imagination and natural probability into a region of deeper psychological insight. Why should the demon want associates in occupancy of the house? Why not rather have it all to himself as before?—οὕτως ἔσται, etc. Ethical application. The general truth implied is: moral and religious reform may be, has been, succeeded by deeper degeneracy. The question naturally suggests itself: what is the historical range of the application? It has been answered variously. From the lawgiving till the present time (Hil., Jer.); from the exile till now (Chrys., Grotius, etc.); from the Baptist till now (Weiss, etc.). Christ gives no hint of

<sup>1</sup> κεκοσμημένον. 45. τότε πορεύεται καὶ <sup>m</sup> παραλαμβάνει μεθ' ἑαυτοῦ <sup>l</sup> ἑπτὰ ἕτερα πνεύματα <sup>a</sup> πονηρότερα ἑαυτοῦ, καὶ εἰσελθόντα κατοικεῖ ἐκεῖ· καὶ γίνεται τὰ ἔσχατα τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἐκείνου χείρονα τῶν <sup>m</sup> πρώτων. οὕτως ἔσται καὶ τῇ γενεᾷ ταύτῃ τῇ πονηρᾷ." 46. "Ἐτι δὲ <sup>1</sup> αὐτοῦ λαλοῦντος τοῖς ὄχλοις, ἰδοῦ, ἡ μήτηρ καὶ οἱ ἀδελφοὶ αὐτοῦ εἰστήκεισαν ἔξω, <sup>o</sup> ζητοῦντες αὐτῷ λαλῆσαι. 47. εἶπε δέ τις αὐτῷ, "Ἰδοῦ, ἡ μήτηρ σου καὶ οἱ ἀδελφοὶ σου ἔξω ἐστήκασι, ζητοῦντές σοι λαλῆσαι."<sup>2</sup> 48. Ὁ δὲ ἀποκριθεὶς εἶπε τῷ εἰπόντι <sup>3</sup> αὐτῷ, "Τίς ἐστιν ἡ μήτηρ μου; καὶ τίνες εἰσὶν οἱ ἀδελφοὶ μου;" 49. Καὶ ἐκτείνας τὴν χεῖρα αὐτοῦ <sup>4</sup> ἐπὶ τοὺς μαθητὰς αὐτοῦ εἶπεν, "Ἰδοῦ, ἡ μήτηρ μου καὶ οἱ ἀδελφοὶ μου. 50. ὅστις γὰρ ἂν ποιήσῃ τὸ θέλημα τοῦ πατρὸς μου τοῦ ἐν οὐρανοῖς, αὐτὸς μου ἀδελφὸς καὶ ἀδελφὴ καὶ μήτηρ ἐστίν."

<sup>1</sup> SB omit δε (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> The whole of ver. 47 is wanting in SB, and is omitted by W.H. Tisch. puts it within brackets. It is an explanatory gloss.

<sup>3</sup> λεγοντι in SBDZ.

<sup>4</sup> SD omit αυτου (Tisch.). BC retain it (W.H. within brackets).

what period was in His thoughts, unless we find one in the epithet μοιχαλις (ver. 39), which recalls prophetic charges of unfaithfulness to her Divine Husband against Israel, and points to the exile as the crisis at which she seriously repented of that sin. It is not at all likely that Christ's view was limited to the period dating from John's ministry. Moral laws need large spaces of time for adequate exemplification. The most instructive exemplification of the degeneracy described is supplied by the period from Ezra till Christ's time. With Ezra ended material idolatry. But from that period dates the reign of legalism, which issued in Rabbinism, a more subtle and pernicious idolatry of the letter, the more deadly that it wore the fair aspect of zeal for God and righteousness.

Vv. 46-50. The relatives of Jesus (Mk. iii. 31-35; Lk. viii. 19-21). Matthew and Mark place this incident in connection with the discourse occasioned by Pharisaic calumny. Luke gives it in a quite different connection. The position assigned it by Matthew and Mark is at least fitting, and through it one can understand the motive. Not vanity: a desire to make a parade of their influence over their famous relative on the part of mother and brethren (Chrys., Theophy., etc.), but solicitude on His account and a desire to extricate Him from trouble. This incident should be viewed in connection with the statement in Mk. iii. 21 that friends thought Jesus beside Himself. They wished to rescue Him from Himself and from men whose ill-will He had, imprudently, they probably thought, provoked.—Ver. 46. ἀδελφοὶ, brothers in the natural sense, sons of Mary by Joseph? Presumably, but an unwelcome hypothesis to many on the theological grounds.—εἰστήκεισαν, pluperfect, but with sense of imperfect (Fritzsche). They had been standing by while Jesus was speaking.—ἔξω, on the outskirts of the crowd, or outside the house into which Jesus entered (Mk. iii. 19).—Ver. 47 (wanting in SBL) states what is implied in ver.

48 (τῷ λέγοντι), that some one reported to Jesus the presence of His relatives.—Ver. 48. τίς ἐστιν ἡ μήτηρ μου. One might have expected Jesus, out of delicacy, to have spoken only of His brethren, leaving the bearing of the question on His mother to be inferred. But the mention of her gave increased emphasis to the truth proclaimed. The question repels a well-meant but ignorant interference of natural affection with the sovereign claims of duty. It reveals a highly strung spirit easily to be mistaken for a morbid enthusiasm.—Ver. 49. ἐκτείνας τ. χ.: an eloquent gesture, making the words following, for those present, superfluous.—ἰδοῦ, etc. There

Ch. xxvii. XIII. 1. ἘΝ ΔΕ<sup>1</sup> Τῇ ἡμέρᾳ ἐκεῖνῃ ἐξελθὼν δὲ Ἰησοῦς ἀπὸ<sup>2</sup> τῆς
62. Mk.
iv. 1; vi. οἰκίας ἐκάθητο παρὰ τὴν θάλασσαν· 2. καὶ ἠσπύθησαν πρὸς αὐτὸν
30; vii. 1
(with πρὸς ὄχλοι πολλοί, ὥστε αὐτὸν εἰς τὸ<sup>3</sup> πλοῖον ἐμβάντα καθῆσθαι· καὶ τινα).

<sup>1</sup> NBΣ omit δε, which the ancient revisers seem to have inserted regularly as a transitional particle.

<sup>2</sup> NZ have εκ (Tisch.). B has neither εκ nor απο (W.H. omit απο and have εκ in margin).

<sup>3</sup> BCLZΣ omit το.

are idealists, promoters of pet schemes, and religious devotees whom it would cost no effort to speak thus; not an admirable class of people. It did cost Jesus an effort, for He possessed a warm heart and unblighted natural affections. But He sacrificed natural affection on the altar of duty, as He finally sacrificed His life.—Ver. 50. Definition of spiritual kinship. The highest brotherhood based on spiritual affinity.—ὄστις γὰρ ἂν ποιήσῃ: a general present supposition expressed by the subjunctive with ἂν followed by present indicative.—τὸ θέλημα τ. πατρός μ. τ. ἐν οὐρανοῖς: this probably comes nearest to Christ's actual words. In such a solemn utterance He was likely to mention His Father, whose supreme claims His filial heart ever owned. Mark has "the will of God"; Luke "those who hear and do the word of God"—obviously secondarily.

CHAPTER XIII. JESUS TEACHING IN PARABLES. The transition from the sultry, sombre atmosphere of chap. xii. into the calm, clear air of Christ's parabolic wisdom would be as welcome to the evangelist as it is to us. Yet even here we do not altogether escape the shadow of unbelief or spiritual insusceptibility. We read of much good seed wasted, bad seed sown among good, fish of all sorts caught in the net. The adoption of the parabolic method of teaching, indeed, had its origin in part in disappointing experiences; truths misapprehended, actions misunderstood, compelling the Teacher to fall back on natural analogies for explanation and self-defence. All the synoptists recognise the importance of this type of teaching by their formal manner of introducing the first of the group of seven parables contained in Matthew's collection. Cf. Mt. xiii. 3; Mk. iv. 2; Lk. viii. 4. Matthew's way of massing matter of the same kind most effectually impresses us with the significance of this feature in Christ's teaching ministry. That Jesus spoke all the seven parables grouped together in this chapter at one time is not certain or even likely. In the corresponding section Mark gives only two of the seven (Sower and Mustard Seed). Luke has the Sower only. The Sower, the Tares, and the Drag net may have formed a single discourse, as very closely connected in structure and import. Perhaps we should rather say had a place in the discourse from the boat, which seems to have been a review of the past ministry of Jesus, expressing chiefly disappointment with the result. Much besides parables would be spoken, the parables being employed to point the moral: much seed, little fruit, and yet a beginning made destined to grow; the situation to be viewed with patience and hope. Just how many of the parables reported by the evangelists were spoken then it is impossible to determine.

Vv. 1-9. The Parable of the Sower (Mk. iv. 1-9; Lk. viii. 4-8). Ver. 1. ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ ἐκεῖνῃ. The parable stands in the same connection in Mark (not in Luke), but not as following in immediate temporal sequence. No stress should be laid on Matthew's phrase "on that day".—ἐξελθὼν τῆς οἰκίας: the house in which Jesus is supposed to have been when His friends sought for Him, though Matthew makes no mention of it (vide Mk. iii. 19).—ἐκάθητο: as at the teaching on the hill (v. 1), suggestive of lengthened discourse. The Teacher sat, the hearers stood.—Ver. 2. ὄχλοι πολλοί, great numbers of people in all the accounts, compelling the Teacher to withdraw from the shore into the sea, and, sitting in a boat, to address the people standing on the margin. Much interest, popularity of the Teacher still great, and even growing; yet He has formed a very sober estimate of its value, as the parable following shows.—Ver. 3. ἐν παραβολαῖς: this method of teaching was not peculiar to Jesus—it was common among Easterns—but His use of it was unique in felicity and in the

πᾶς ὁ ὄχλος ἐπὶ τὸν <sup>b</sup> αἰγιαλὸν εἰστήκει. 3. καὶ ἐλάλησεν αὐτοῖς <sup>b</sup> ver. 48.
πολλὰ ἐν ὁ παραβολαῖς, λέγων, “Ἰδοῦ, ἐξῆλθεν ὁ σπείρων τοῦ σπείρειν. John xxi.
4. καὶ ἐν τῷ σπείρειν αὐτόν, ἃ μὲν ἔπασσε παρὰ τὴν ὁδὸν· καὶ ἦλθε <sup>1</sup> 4. Acts τὰ πετεινά, καὶ <sup>d</sup> κατέφαγεν αὐτά. 5. ἄλλα δὲ ἔπασσεν ἐπὶ τὰ <sup>c</sup> xxvii. 39.
<sup>e</sup> πετρῶδη, ὅπου οὐκ εἶχε γῆν πολλήν· καὶ εὐθέως ἐξανέτειλε, διὰ τὸ <sup>f</sup> 40.
μὴ ἔχειν βάθος <sup>2</sup> γῆς· 6. ἡλίου δὲ ἀνατειλαντος <sup>1</sup> ἔκαυματίσθη, καὶ <sup>c</sup> frequentin
διὰ τὸ μὴ ἔχειν ρίζαν, <sup>3</sup> ἐξηράνθη. 7. ἄλλα δὲ ἔπασσεν ἐπὶ τὰς <sup>d</sup> Gospp.
ἀκάνθας, καὶ ἀνέβησαν αἱ ἄκανθαι, καὶ ἀπέπνιξαν <sup>3</sup> αὐτά. 8. ἄλλα <sup>e</sup> and in δὲ ἔπασσεν ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν τὴν καλήν, καὶ ἐδίδου καρπὸν, ὃ μὲν ἑκατόν, <sup>f</sup> Heb. ix.
ὃ δὲ ἐξήκοντα, ὃ δὲ τριάκοντα. 9. ὁ ἔχων ὦτα ἀκούειν <sup>4</sup> ἀκουέτω.” <sup>g</sup> 9; xi. 19.
10. Καὶ προσελθόντες οἱ μαθηταὶ εἶπον αὐτῷ, “Διατί ἐν παραβολαῖς <sup>d</sup> Lk. xv. 30.
<sup>e</sup> ver. 20.
<sup>f</sup> Mk. iv. 5,
<sup>g</sup> 16.
<sup>h</sup> Mk. iv. 6.
<sup>i</sup> Rev. xvi.
<sup>j</sup> 8, 9.
<sup>k</sup> Ch. xxi.
<sup>l</sup> 19, 20.
<sup>m</sup> John xv. 6.
<sup>n</sup> Jas. i. 11.

<sup>1</sup> B has ελθοντα τα πετεινα κατεφαγεν, which W.H. put in the text, placing ἦλθον τ. π. και in the margin.

<sup>2</sup> B has τῆς before γῆς.

<sup>3</sup> N<sup>2</sup>D have ἐπνιξαν (Tisch.). BCZΣ al. and many min. have ἀπέπνιξαν (W.H. with ἐπνιξαν in margin).

<sup>4</sup> N<sup>2</sup>BL omit ἀκουειν, which comes from parall.

importance of the lessons conveyed. Abstract a priori definitions of the word serve little purpose; we learn best what a parable is, in the mouth of Jesus, by studying the parables He spoke. Thence we gather that to speak in parables means to use the familiar in nature or in human life (in the form of a narrative or otherwise) to embody unfamiliar truths of the spiritual world.

Vv. 3-9. The Parable.—Ver. 3. ὁ σπείρων: either ὁ generic, or the Sower of my story.—τοῦ σπείρειν: the infinitive of purpose with the genitive of article, very frequent in N. T. and in late Greek.—Ver. 4. παρὰ τὴν ὁδόν: not the highway, of which there were few, but the footpath, of which there were many through or between the fields.—Ver. 5. ἐπὶ τὰ πετρῶδη, upon shallow ground, where the rock was near the surface (οὐκ εἶχε γῆν πολλήν).—Ver. 6. ἔκαυματίσθη, it was scorched (by the sun) (cf. Rev. xvi. 8), which had made it spring earliest: promptly quickened, soon killed.—Ver. 7. ἐπὶ τὰς ἀκάνθας. Fritzsche prefers the reading εἰς because the seed fell not on thorns already sprung up, but on ground full of thorn seeds or roots. But the latter idea, which is the true one, can be expressed also by ἐπὶ.—ἀνέβησαν: the thorns sprang up as well as the corn, and growing more vigorously gained the upper hand.—ἐπνιξαν. Euthy. Zig. finds this idea in ἀνέβησαν, for which he gives as synonym ὑπερίσχυσαν.—Ver. 8. καλήν, genuinely good land free from all the faults of the other three: soft, deep, clean.—ἐδίδου, yielded. In other texts (iii. 8, 10; vii. 17) ποιεῖν is used.—ἑκατόν, ἐξήκοντα, τριάκοντα: all satisfactory; 30 good, 60 better, 100 best (Gen. xxvi. 12).—Ver. 9. ὁ ἔχων ὦτα ἀκ. ἀκ. An invitation to think of the hidden meaning, or rather a hint that there was such a meaning. The description of the land in which the sower carried on his operations would present no difficulties to the hearers: the beaten paths, the rocky spots, the thorny patches were all familiar features of the fields in Palestine, and the fate of the seed in each case was in accordance with common experience. But why paint the picture? What is the moral of the story? That Jesus left them to find out.

Vv. 10-17. The disciples ask an explanation. There is some difficulty in forming a clear idea of this interlude. Who asked? The Twelve only, or they and others with them, as Mark states (iv. 10)? And when? Immediately after the parable was spoken, or, as was more likely, after the teaching of the day was over? The one certain point is that an explanation was asked and given.—Ver. 10. διατί ἐν παραβολαῖς: Matthew makes the question refer to the method of teaching, Mark and Luke to the meaning of the parables spoken. The two questions were closely connected, λαλεῖς αὐτοῖς;” 11. Ὁ δὲ ἀποκριθεὶς εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Ὅτι ὑμῖν δέδοται γινῶναι τὰ μυστήρια τῆς βασιλείας τῶν οὐρανῶν, ἐκείνοις δὲ οὐ δέδοται. 12. Ὅστις γὰρ ἔχει, δοθήσεται αὐτῷ καὶ περισσευθήσεται· ὅστις δὲ οὐκ ἔχει, καὶ ὃ ἔχει, ἀρθήσεται ἀπ’ αὐτοῦ. 13.

h Gal. vi. 2. διὰ τοῦτο ἐν παραβολαῖς αὐτοῖς λαλῶ, ὅτι βλέποντες οὐ βλέπουσι, Phil. ii. 30.
i Acts xxviii. καὶ ἀκούοντες οὐκ ἀκούουσιν, οὐδὲ συνιοῦσι. 14. καὶ ἠ ἀναπληροῦται j Acts xxviii. ἐπ’<sup>1</sup> αὐτοῖς ἡ προφητεία Ἡσαίου, ἡ λέγουσα, Ἐκκοῦ ἀκούετε, καὶ k Acts οὐ μὴ συνῆτε· καὶ βλέποντες βλέπετε, καὶ οὐ μὴ ἴδῃτε. 15.
xxviii. 27.
l Mk. iv. 12. Ἐπαχύνθη γὰρ ἡ καρδία τοῦ λαοῦ τούτου, καὶ τοῖς ὠσὶ ἰ βαρέως
Lk. xxii. ἤκουσαν, καὶ τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς αὐτῶν ἔκαμμυσαν· μήποτε ἴδωσι τοῖς
32. Acts ὀφθαλμοῖς, καὶ τοῖς ὠσὶν ἀκούσωσι, καὶ τῇ καρδίᾳ συνῶσι, καὶ
iii. 19; xxviii. 27 ὀφθαλμοῖς, καὶ τοῖς ὠσὶν ἀκούσωσι, καὶ τῇ καρδίᾳ συνῶσι, καὶ (absol. = reform). ἔπιστρέψωσι, καὶ ἰάσωμαι<sup>2</sup> αὐτούς. 16. Ὑμῶν δὲ μακάριοι οἱ

<sup>1</sup> NBC omit επι, which may have been added by the grammarians to make the const. clearer.

<sup>2</sup> ἰασομαι in most uncials. Reading of T. R. in XΔ.

and both doubtless in the minds of the disciples. A more serious difficulty arises in connection with Christ's answer to their question, which seems to say that He adopted the parabolic method in order to hide the truths of the kingdom from unspiritual minds. Nothing is more certain than that Jesus neither did nor could adopt any such policy, and if the evangelists ascribed it to Him, then we should have no alternative but to agree with those who, like Holtzmann (H. C.) and Jülicher (Die Gleichnißreden Jesu, pp. 131, 149, vide also his Einleitung in das N. T., p. 228), maintain that the evangelists have mistaken His meaning, reading intention in the light of result. It is much better to impute a mistake to them than an inhuman purpose to Christ.

Ver. 11. τὰ μυστήρια: the word, as here used, might suggest the idea of a mysterious esoteric doctrine concerning the Kingdom of God to be taught only to a privileged inner circle. But the term in the N. T. means truths once hidden now revealed, made generally known, and in their own nature perfectly intelligible. So, e.g., in Eph. iii. 9, Col. i. 26. Jesus desired to make the truths of the kingdom of God known to all; by parables if they could not be understood otherwise. His aim was to enlighten, not to mystify.—Ver. 12. This moral apothegm is here given only in Matt. It contains a great truth, whether spoken or not on this occasion. For the construction, vide at x. 14.—περισσευθήσεται: again in Mt. xxv. 29, where the saying is repeated. This use of the passive in a neuter sense belongs to late Greek.—Ver. 13. διὰ τοῦτο ὅτι. Mark and Luke have ἵνα, the former assigning a reason, the latter ascribing a purpose. In Matt. Jesus says: I speak in parables because seeing they do not see, etc.; which ought naturally to mean: they are dull of apprehension, therefore I do my best to enlighten them.—Vv. 14, 15. The prophetic citation, given as such by Matthew only, may be due to him, though put into the mouth of Jesus. It is conceivable, however, that Jesus might use Isaiah's words in Isaiah's spirit, i. e., ironically, expressing the bitter feeling of one conscious that his best efforts to teach his countrymen would often end in failure, and in his bitterness representing himself as sent to stop ears and blind eyes. Such utterances are not to be taken as deliberate dogmatic teaching. If, as some allege, the evangelists so took them, they failed to understand the mind of the Master. The quotation exactly follows the Sept. The verb καμμύω (ver. 15, ἐκαμμυσαν) is condemned by Phryn. as barbarous, the right word being καταμύειν.—Vv. 16, 17. In Mk. (iv. 13) Jesus reproaches the disciples for their ignorance; here He congratulates them on their faculty of seeing and hearing (spiritually).—Ὑμῶν: in emphatic position, suggesting contrast between disciples and the multitude.—μακάριοι, vide on chap. v. 3.—ὅτι βλ., because, not for what, they see.—ἀμὴν γὰρ λέγω: introducing an important statement.—προφήται καὶ δίκαιοι, same

ὄφθαλμοί, ὅτι βλέπουσι· καὶ τὰ ὦτα ὑμῶν,<sup>1</sup> ὅτι ἀκούει.<sup>2</sup> 17. ἀμὴν γὰρ λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι πολλοὶ προφήται καὶ δίκαιοι ἐπεθύμησαν ἰδεῖν ἃ βλέπετε, καὶ οὐκ εἶδον· καὶ ἀκούσαι ἃ ἀκούετε, καὶ οὐκ ἤκουσαν. 18. Ὑμεῖς οὖν ἀκούσατε τὴν παραβολὴν τοῦ σπειρόντος.<sup>3</sup> 19. Παντὸς ἀκούοντος τὸν λόγον τῆς βασιλείας καὶ μὴ συνιέντος, ἔρχεται ὁ πονηρός, καὶ ἄρπάξει τὸ ἐσπαρμένον ἐν τῇ καρδίᾳ αὐτοῦ· οὗτός <sup>m Acts viii.</sup> ἐστὶν ὁ παρὰ τὴν ὁδὸν σπαρείς. 20. Ὁ δὲ ἐπὶ τὰ πετρώδη σπαρείς, <sup>39.</sup> οὗτός ἐστὶν ὁ τὸν λόγον ἀκούων, καὶ εὐθὺς μετὰ χαρᾶς λαμβάνων combination as in x. 41. The felicity now consists in the things seen and heard. The perceiving senses and the things to be perceived imply each other, neither by themselves yield enjoyment. This passage is given by Lk. (x. 23, 24) in a more suitable connection (report on their mission by the Seventy). Here it creates an exaggerated impression as to the extent of the new departure. The parabolic teaching of Jesus, as exemplified in the Sower and other parables here collected, was not an absolutely new feature. He had always been speaking more or less in parables ("Fishers of Men," iv. 19; "Salt of the Earth," "City on a Hill," v. 13, 14; "Two Builders," vii. 24-27; "Whole need not a Physician," ix. 12; "New Garment and New Wine," ix. 16, 17, etc.). Some of the parables in this connection, the Treasure and the Pearl, e.g., may be gems preserved from some otherwise forgotten synagogue discourses, say those delivered in the preaching tour through Galilee.

<sup>1</sup> B omits ὑμων (bracketed in W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> ἀκούουσι in ΞBCDXΣ. ἀκουει a grammatical correction (neut. pl. nom. ὦτα).

<sup>3</sup> σπειραντος in ΞBX.33. σπειροντος conforms to ver. 3.

Vv. 18-23. Interpretation of the Sower (Mk. iv. 14-20; Lk. viii. 11-15). Ver. 18. ὑμεῖς, emphatic, ye privileged ones.—οὖν referring to the happiness on which they have been congratulated.—Ver. 18. ἀκούσατε τ. π.: not, hear it over again, but, what it means.—σπειραντος, aorist, of the man who sowed in the story just told.—Ver. 19. παντὸς ἀκούοντος, in the case of any one who hears, "for the classical εἰάν τις ἀκούσῃ" (Camb. G. T.). It may be a case of interrupted construction, the sentence beginning with the intention to make the genitive dependent on an ἐκ τῆς καρδίας before ἀρπάξει (so Weiss).—τὸν λόγον τῆς βασιλείας: the Sower, unlike the other parables in this chapter, contains no hint that it concerns the kingdom. But in Christ's discourses that almost went without saying.—μὴ συνιέντος: "not taking it in," a phrase which happily combines the physical fact of the parable with the figurative sense.—ὁ πονηρός, the evil one, Satan, represented by the innocent birds of the parable. What a different use of the emblem from that in vi. 26!—ἐν τῇ καρδίᾳ: we should hardly say of truth not understood that it had been sown in the heart. But heart is used in Scripture in a wide sense, as the seat of intellect as well as of feeling. The word in the case supposed is in the mind, as the seed is in the ground: on it, if not in it; in it as words, if not as truth.—οὗτός ἐστιν, etc., this is he sown, etc., said of the man, not of the seed. Sign and thing signified identified, cf. "this is my body". Properly, the seed sown, etc., represents the case of such a man. So throughout the interpretation.—Ver. 20. μετὰ χαρᾶς λ.: this is the new feature in the second type added to the hearing of the first; hearing and receiving with joy characteristic of quick emotional shallow natures, but not of them only. Deep earnest natures also have joy in truth found, but with a difference.—Ver. 21. οὐκ ἔχει: instead of the participle ἔχων under the influence of Mk.'s text (Weiss).—πρόσκαιρος, temporary, cf. 2 Cor. iv. 18.—Ver. 22. ἀκούων, hearing alone predicated of the third type, but receiving both intellectually and emotionally implied; everything necessary present except purity of heart, singleness of mind. Hearing is to be taken here in a pregnant sense as distinct from the hearing that is no hearing (ver. 13).—μέριμνα τ. α., ἀπάτη τ. π.: together = worldliness. Lust for money and care go together and between them spoil many an earnest religious nature. —ἄκαρπος may refer either to the man

- o Mk. iv. 17. αὐτόν· 21. οὐκ ἔχει δὲ ρίζαν ἐν ἑαυτῷ, ἀλλὰ ἡ πρόσκαιρός ἐστι·
 2 Cor. iv.
 18. Heb. γενομένης δὲ θλίψεως ἢ διωγμοῦ διὰ τὸν λόγον, εὐθὺς σκανδαλίζεται.
 xi. 25.
 o Lk. viii. 22. Ὁ δὲ εἰς τὰς ἀκάνθας σπαρείς, οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ τὸν λόγον ἀκούων, 14; xxi.
 34. 2 Cor. καὶ ἡ ὁμέριμα τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτου<sup>1</sup> καὶ ἡ ἁπάτη τοῦ πλοῦτου 21, 28.
 p Mk. iv. 19. συμπνίγει τὸν λόγον, καὶ ἄκαρπος γίνεται. 23. Ὁ δὲ ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν
 Eph. iv. 24.
 Col. ii. 8. τὴν καλὴν<sup>2</sup> σπαρείς, οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ τὸν λόγον ἀκούων καὶ συνιῶν<sup>3</sup>.
 2 Thess.
 ii. 10. Heb. ὅς ἂν καρποφορεῖ, καὶ ποιεῖ ὁ<sup>4</sup> μὲν ἑκατόν, ὁ δὲ ἑξήκοντα, ὁ δὲ
 iii. 13. ἄ τριακόνα.”
 Pet. ii.
 23 (7).
 q here and in Lk. ii. 15. Acts xiii. 2; xv. 36. 1 Cor. vi. 20. 2 Cor. xii. 1 (?). Heb. ii. 16 (with πού)

<sup>1</sup> NSBD omit τουτου, which is an explanatory addition of the scribes.

<sup>2</sup> NSBCLAS have ἐπι τὴν καλὴν γῆν instead of the reading in T.R., which οὐκ ἔχει ver. δ.

<sup>3</sup> συνιεις in NSBD.

<sup>4</sup> Vide below.

(Meyer) or to the word (λόγον just before; Bengel, Weiss); sense the same. There is fruit in this case; the crop does not wither in the blade; it reaches the green ear, but it never ripens.—Ver. 23. ἀκούων καὶ συνιείς. The specific feature of the fourth and alone satisfactory type is not brought out either in Mt. or in Mk. but only in Lk. by his happy phrase: ἐν καρδίᾳ καλῇ καὶ ἀγαθῇ. The third type understands (Mt.) and receives into the heart (Mk.), but the fourth in addition receives into a clean, i.e., a “good and honest,” heart.—ὅς δὴ: δὴ occurs here for the first time in Mt., and only a few times altogether in the N. T., but always with marked expressiveness. According to Passow and Baumlein (Grammatik, § 669, and Untersuchungen über G. Partikeln, p. 98), connected with δῆλος in origin and meaning, and signifying that the thing stated is clear, specially important, natural in the given circumstances.—ὅς δὴ here = who, observe, or of course. Given such conditions, fruitfulness certainly results.—καρποφορεῖ, bringeth forth fruit such as is desired: ripe, useful.—ὁ in last clause may be pointed either ὁ μὲν, ὁ δὲ (T. R.) or ὁ μὲν, ὁ δὲ (W. H.). In the former case the meaning is: this man brings forth 100 fold, that man, etc.; in the latter, ὁ is accusative neuter after ποιεῖ, and refers to the fruit. Opinion very much divided, sense the same.

This interpretation of the Sower raises two questions: Was it needed? Does it really explain the parable? which is in effect to ask: Does it proceed from Jesus? As to the former: could not even the general hearer, not to speak of the Twelve, understand the parable well enough? True, no hint that it related to the kingdom was given, but, as already remarked, that might go without saying. Jesus had all along been using similitudes explaining His meaning rather than needing explanation. Then parabolic speech was common even in Rabbinical circles, a source at once of entertainment and of light to hearers. In Mt.'s report the disciples do not even ask an explanation, so that that given comes on us as a surprise (Holtz. in H. C.). Christ's audience might at least carry away the general impression that He was dissatisfied with the result of His ministry, in many cases in which His teaching seemed to Him like seed cast on unproductive places. It might require further reflection, more than the majority were capable of, to comprehend the reasons of failure. Self-knowledge and observation of character were needed for this. As to the interpretation given, it has been objected (Weiss, Jülicher, etc.) that it is allegorical in method, and that, while going into details as to the various persons and things mentioned in the parable and their import, it fails to give the one main lesson which it, like every parable, is designed to teach; in short, that we cannot see the wood for the trees. As to this it may be remarked: (1) There is a tangible difference between allegory and parable. Allegory and interpretation answer to each other part by part; parable and interpretation answer to each other as wholes. (2) Christ's parables are for the most part not allegories. (3) It does not follow that none of them can be. Why should the use of allegory be interdicted to Him?

24. Ἄλλην παραβολὴν παρέθηκεν αὐτοῖς, λέγων, “Ὁμοιώθη ἡ βασιλεία τῶν οὐρανῶν ἀνθρώπῳ σπείροντι<sup>1</sup> καλὸν σπέρμα ἐν τῷ ἀγρῷ αὐτοῦ· 25. ἐν δὲ τῷ καθεύδειν τοὺς ἀνθρώπους, ἤλθεν αὐτοῦ ὁ ἐχθρὸς καὶ ἔσπειρε<sup>2</sup> ζιζάνια ἀνὰ μέσον τοῦ σίτου, καὶ ἀπήλθεν.”

<sup>1</sup> ΞΒΜΧΔΠΣ have σπειραντι.

<sup>2</sup> Ξβ it. vg. several cursives have the compound ἐπεσπειρεν (Tisch., W.H.).

May the Sower not be an exception? That it is has been ably argued by Feine in Fahrbücher für Prot. Theologie, 1888, p. v. (4) The exclusion of so-called allegorising interpretation may be carried to a pedantic extreme in connection with all the parables, as it is, indeed, in my opinion, especially by Weiss. Thus we are told that in the saying “the whole need not a physician,” Jesus did not mean to suggest that He was a physician but only to hint the special claims of a class on His attention. But the question may be asked in every case: What was the genesis of the parable? How did it grow in Christ’s mind? The Sower, e.g.? Was it not built up of likenesses spontaneously suggesting themselves now and then; of Himself to a sower, and of various classes of hearers to different kinds of soil? In that case the “allegorical” interpretation is simply an analysis of the parable into its genetic elements, which, on that view, have more than the merely descriptive value assigned to them by Weiss. (5) As to missing the main lesson amid details: is it not rather given, Eastern fashion, through the details: the preaching of the kingdom not always successful, failure due to the spiritual condition of hearers? That is how we Westerns, in our abstract generalising way, put it. The Orientals conveyed the general through concrete particulars. Jesus did not give an abstract definition of the Fatherhood of God. He defined it by the connections in which He used the title Father. That Jesus talked to His disciples about the various sorts of hearers, their spiritual state, and what they resembled, I think intrinsically likely. It is another question whether His interpretation has been exactly reproduced by any of the Synoptists.

Vv. 24-30. The Tares. This parable has some elements in common with that in Mk. iv. 26-29, whence the notion of many critics that one of the two has been formed from the other. As to which is the original, opinion is much divided. (Vide Holtz., H. C.) Both, I should say.

The resemblance is superficial, the lesson entirely different.—The Sower describes past experiences; the Tares is prophetic of a future state of things. But may it not be a creation of apostolic times put into the mouth of Jesus? No, because (1) it is too original and wise, and (2) there were beginnings of the evil described even in Christ’s lifetime. Think of a Judas among the Twelve, whom Jesus treated on the principle laid down in the parable, letting him remain among the disciples till the last crisis. It may have been his presence among the Twelve that suggested the parable.

Ver. 24. παρέθηκεν, again in ver. 31, usually of food, here of parable as a mental entertainment; used with reference to laws in Ex. xxi. 1, Deut. iv. 44.—ὁμοιώθη, aorist used proleptically for the future; cf. 1 Cor. vii. 28.—ἀνθρώπῳ, likened to a man, inexactly, for: “to the experience of a man who,” etc., natural in a popular style.—σπείροντι, aorist because the seed had been sown when the event of the parable took place.—καλὸν, good, genuine, without mixture of other seeds.—Ver. 25. ἐν τῷ καθεύδειν = during the night.—α. ὁ ἐχθρὸς, his enemy. Weiss (Matt.-Evang., 347) thinks this feature no part of the original parable, but introduced to correspond with the interpretation (ver. 39), no enemy being needed to account for the appearance of the “tares,” which might grow then as now from seed lying dormant in the ground. Christ’s parables usually comply with the requirements of natural probability, but sometimes they have to depart from them to make the parable answer to the spiritual fact; e.g., when all the invited are represented as refusing to come to the feast (Lk. xiv. 16-24). The appearance of the “tares” might be made a preternatural phenomenon out of regard to the perfect purity of the seed, and the great abundance of bad men in a holy society. A few scattered stalks might spring up in a natural way, but whence so many?—ἐπέσπειρεν, deliberately sowed over the wheat seed as thickly as if no other seed were there.

† Mk. iv. 27. 26. ὅτε δὲ ἐβλάστησεν ὁ χόρτος, καὶ καρπὸν ἐποίησε, τότε ἐφάνη
 Heb. ix. 4.
 Jas. v. 18. καὶ τὰ ζιζάνια. 27. προσελθόντες δὲ οἱ δούλοι τοῦ οἰκοδεσπότου εἶπον αὐτῷ, Κύριε, οὐχὶ καλὸν σπέρμα ἔσπειρας ἐν τῷ σῶ ἀγρῷ;
 πόθεν οὖν ἔχει τὰ<sup>1</sup> ζιζάνια; 28. Ὁ δὲ ἔφη αὐτοῖς, Ἐχθρὸς ἀνθρω-
 πος τοῦτο ἐποίησεν. οἱ δὲ δούλοι εἶπον αὐτῷ,<sup>2</sup> Θέλεις οὖν ἀπελθόντες συλλέξωμεν αὐτά; 29. Ὁ δὲ ἔφη,<sup>3</sup> Οὐ· μήποτε συλλέγοντες τὰ ζιζάνια, <sup>4</sup> ἐκριζώσῃτε ἅμα αὐτοῖς τὸν σῖτον. 30. ἄφετε συναυξάνεσθαι ἀμφότερα μέχρι<sup>4</sup> τοῦ θερισμοῦ· καὶ ἐν τῷ<sup>5</sup> καιρῷ τοῦ θερισμοῦ ἐρῶ
 τοῖς <sup>6</sup>θερισταῖς, Συλλέξατε πρῶτον τὰ ζιζάνια, καὶ δῆσατε αὐτά εἰς <sup>6</sup>δέσμας πρὸς τὸ κατακαῦσαι αὐτά· τὸν δὲ σῖτον συναγάγετε<sup>7</sup>
 εἰς τὴν ἀποθήκην μου.”

<sup>1</sup> The art. τα in T.R. (N LX) is wanting in N<sup>b</sup>BCD al.

<sup>2</sup> B omits δουλοι (W.H.) and BC have αὐτω λεγουσιν for εἶπον αὐτω (T.R.).

N<sup>d</sup> have λεγ. αὐτω (Tisch.).

<sup>3</sup> φησιν in N<sup>b</sup>BC.

<sup>4</sup> BD have εως, which W.H. adopt, putting αχρι and μεχρι in margin.

<sup>5</sup> τω (in N<sup>b</sup>CL) is omitted in most uncials.

<sup>6</sup> εις omitted in LXD and bracketed in W.H.

<sup>7</sup> B has συναγαγετε (W.H. with συναγαγετε in margin).

—ζιζάνια = bastard wheat, darnel, lolium temulentum, common in Palestine (Furrer, Wanderungen, p. 293), perhaps a Semitic word. Another name for the plant in Greek is αἶρα (Suidas, Lex.).—Ver. 26. τότε ἐφάνη: not distinguishable in the blade, not till it reached the ear, then easily so by the form, the ear branching out with grains on each twig (Koetsveld, De Gelijk., p. 25).—Ver. 27. οὐχὶ κ. σ. ἔσπειρας, etc.: the surprise of the work-people arises from the extent of the wild growth, which could not be explained by bad seed (with so careful a master) or natural growth out of an unclean soil. The tares were all over the field.—Ver. 28. ἐχθρὸς ἀν.: an inference from the state of the field—fact not otherwise or previously known.—θέλεις . . . συλλέξωμεν, deliberative subjunctive in 1st person with θέλεις, 2nd person; no ἵνα used in such case (Burton, M. and T., § 171). The servants propose to do what was ordinarily done, and is done still (vide Stanley, Sinai and Palestine, p. 426, and Furrer, Wanderungen, 293: “men, women and children were in many fields engaged in pulling up the weeds,” in which he includes “den Lolch”).—Ver. 29. οὐ, emphatic; laconic “no,” for good reason.—μήποτε: the risk is that wheat and “tares” may be uprooted together.—ἅμα, with dative (αὐτοῖς) but not a preposition, the full phrase is ἅμα σὸν: “at the same time with,” as in 1 Thess. iv. 17, v. 10. On this word vide Bos, Ellip. Graec., p. 463, and Klotz, Devar., ii. 97. The roots being intertwined, and having a firm hold of the soil, both wheat and tares might be pulled up together.—Ver. 30. Συλλέξατε πρῶτον: before or after cutting down the crop? Not said which; order of procedure immaterial, for now the wheat is ripe.—δῆσατε εἰς δέσμας; the εἰς, omitted in some MSS., is not necessary before a noun of some meaning with the verb. Fritzsche thinks the expression without preposition more elegant. Meyer also omits, with appeal to Kühper on verbs with double accusatives.—This parable embodies the great principle of bad men being tolerated for the sake of the good. It relegates to the end the judgment which the contemporaries of Jesus, including the Baptist, expected at the beginning of the Messianic kingdom (Weiss-Meyer).

Vv. 31-35. The Mustard Seed and the Leaven (Lk. xiii. 18-21 (both); Mk. iv. 30-32 (Mustard Seed)). A couplet of brief parables of brighter tone than the two already considered, predicting great extensive and intensive development of the Kingdom of God; from Luke's narrative (xiii. 10), apparently part of a synagogue discourse. It is intrinsically probable that Jesus in all His addresses

31. Ἄλλην παραβολὴν παρέθηκεν αὐτοῖς, λέγων, “Ὁμοία ἐστὶν ἡ βασιλεία τῶν οὐρανῶν *κόκκῳ σινάπεως, ὃν λαβὼν ἄνθρωπος ἔσπειρεν ἐν τῷ ἀγρῷ αὐτοῦ· 32. ὃ μικρότερον μὲν ἐστι πάντων τῶν σπερμάτων· ὅταν δὲ αὐξηθῆ, μείζον τῶν ἰλαχάνων ἐστί, καὶ γίνεται δένδρον, ὥστε ἐλθεῖν τὰ πετεινὰ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, καὶ ἠ κατασκηνοῦν<sup>1</sup> ἐν τοῖς κλάδοις αὐτοῦ.”

33. Ἄλλην παραβολὴν ἐλάλησεν αὐτοῖς.<sup>2</sup> “Ὁμοία ἐστὶν ἡ βασιλεία τῶν οὐρανῶν ἂ ζύμη, ἣν ἂ λαβοῦσα γυνὴ ἐνέκρυψεν εἰς ἀλεύρου σάτα τρία, ἕως οὗ ὁ ἐξυμῶθη ὄλον.”

34. Ταῦτα πάντα ἐλάλησεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐν παραβολαῖς τοῖς ὄχλοις, καὶ χωρὶς παραβολῆς οὐκ<sup>3</sup> ἐλάλει αὐτοῖς· 35. ὅπως πληρωθῆ τὸ ῥηθὲν διὰ τοῦ προφήτου, λέγοντος, “Ἄνοιξεν ἐν παραβολαῖς τὸ στόμα μου· ἐρέζομαι κεκρυμμένα ἀπὸ καταβολῆς κόσμου.”<sup>4</sup>

b same use of word in ver. 31. c 1 Cor. v. 6. Gal. v. 9.

<sup>1</sup> κατασκηνοῦν in BD. <sup>2</sup> D, Syr. Sin. and Cur. omit ελ. αυτοις. W.H. bracket.

<sup>3</sup> ουδεν in BCD; ουκ in Mk. iv. 34, hence here in T.R.

<sup>4</sup> B (and Bb) omits κοσμου. So Tisch., W.H. al. Weiss suggests that the omission in B is an oversight.

in the synagogue and to the people used more or less the parabolic method. To this extent it may be literally true that “without a parable spake He not unto them” (ver. 34).

Ver. 31. σινάπεως: from σίναπι, late for νάπι in Attic, which Phryn. recommends to be used instead (Lobeck, 288).—Ver. 32. δ, neuter, by attraction of σπερμάτων, instead of ὃν in agreement with κόκκῳ, masculine.—μικρότερον, not less perhaps than all the seeds in the world. An American correspondent sent me a sample of the seeds of the cotton tree, which he thinks Christ would have made the basis of His parable had He spoken it in America.—μείζον τῶν ἰλαχάνων, greater than (all) the herbs. The comparison implies that it too is an herb. There would be no point in the statement that a plant of the nature of a tree grew to be greater than all garden herbs. This excludes the mustard tree, called Salvadora Persica, to which some have thought the parable refers.—δένδρον, not in nature but in size; an excusable exaggeration in a popular discourse. Koetsveld remarks on the greatly increased growth attained by a plant springing from a single seed with plenty of room all round it (De Gelyk., p. 50).—ὥστε here indicates at once tendency and result, large enough to make that possible, and it actually happened. The birds haunted the plant like a tree or shrub. Mark refers only to the possibility (iv. 32).—κατασκηνοῦν (cf. κατασκηνώσεις, viii. 20), not nidulari, to make nests (Erasmus), but to “lodge,” as in A. V. The mustard plant is after all of humble size, and gives a very modest idea of the growth of the kingdom. But it serves admirably to express the thought of a growth beyond expectation. Who would expect so tiny a seed to produce such a large herb, a monster in the garden?—Ver. 33. ὁμοία . . . ζύμη, like in respect of pervasive influence. In Rabbinical theology leaven was used as an emblem of evil desire (Weber, p. 221). Jesus had the courage to use it as an emblem of the best thing in the world, the Kingdom of God coming into the heart of the individual and the community.—ἐνέκρυψεν, hid by the process of kneading.—ἕως οὗ ἐξυμῶθη: ἕως with the indicative, referring to an actual past occurrence.

Both these parables show how thoroughly Jesus was aware that great things grow from minute beginnings. How different His idea of the coming of the kingdom, from the current one of a glorious, mighty empire coming suddenly, full grown! Instead of that a mustard seed, a little leaven!

Vv. 34, 35 contain a reflection more suitable for the close of the collection of parables in this chapter, brought in here apparently because the evangelist has x Ch. xvii.

20. Lk.
xvii. 6
(same phrase).
John xii.
24. 1 Cor.
xv. 37 (the word).
y Mk. iv. 32.
1. k. xi. 42.
Rom. xiv.
2.
z parall.
Acts ii. 26
(Ps. ciii.
(iv.) 12).
a Ch. xvi. 6, 11, 12.
Mk. viii.
15. Lk.
xii. 1 (fig.).
1 Cor. v. 6.
Gal. v. 9
(proverbially).

36. Τότε ἀφείς τοὺς ὄχλους, ἦλθεν εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν ὁ Ἰησοῦς<sup>1</sup>· καὶ προσῆλθον αὐτῷ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ, λέγοντες, “φράσον<sup>2</sup> ἡμῖν τὴν παραβολὴν τῶν ζιζανίων τοῦ ἀγροῦ.” 37. Ὁ δὲ ἀποκριθεὶς εἶπεν αὐτοῖς,<sup>3</sup> “Ὁ σπείρων τὸ καλὸν σπέρμα ἐστὶν ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου· 38. ὁ δὲ ἀγρὸς ἐστὶν ὁ κόσμος· τὸ δὲ καλὸν σπέρμα, οὗτοί<sup>4</sup> εἰσιν οἱ υἱοὶ τῆς βασιλείας· τὰ δὲ ζιζάνια εἰσιν οἱ υἱοὶ τοῦ πονηροῦ· 39. ὁ δὲ ἐχθρὸς ὁ σπείρας αὐτὰ ἐστὶν ὁ διάβολος· ὁ δὲ θερισμὸς<sup>5</sup> συντέλεια τοῦ<sup>4</sup> αἰῶνος ἐστὶν· οἱ δὲ θερισταὶ ἄγγελοι εἰσιν. 40. ὡς περ οὖν συλλέγεται τὰ ζιζάνια, καὶ πυρὶ κατακαίεται οὕτως ἔσται ἐν τῇ συντελείᾳ τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτου.<sup>5</sup> 41. ἀποστελεῖ ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου τοὺς ἀγγέλους αὐτοῦ, καὶ συλλέξουσιν ἐκ τῆς βασιλείας αὐτοῦ πάντα τὰ<sup>6</sup> σκάνδαλα καὶ τοὺς ποιούντας τὴν ἀνομίαν, 42. καὶ βαλοῦσιν αὐτοὺς εἰς τὴν<sup>6</sup> κάμινον τοῦ πυρός· ἐκεῖ ἔσται ὁ κλαυθμὸς καὶ ὁ

<sup>1</sup> NBD omit ο ἰ. <sup>2</sup> NB have διασαφησον. φρασον probably comes from xv. 15.

<sup>3</sup> NBD omit αυτοις.

<sup>4</sup> NBD omit του.

<sup>5</sup> NBD omit τουτου.

under his eye Mark's narrative, in which a similar reflection is attached to the parable of the mustard seed (iv. 33-34).—Ver. 34. χωρὶς παραβολῆς, etc.: if this remark apply to Christ's popular preaching generally, then the parables reported, like the healing narratives, are only a small selection from a large number, a fragrant posy culled from the flower garden of Christ's parabolic wisdom.—ἐλάλει: imperfect, pointing to a regular practice, not merely to a single occasion.—Ver. 35. Prophetic citation from Ps. lxxviii. 2, suggested by παραβολαῖς in Sept., second clause, free translation from Hebrew.—ἐρῦξομαι in Sept. for עָרַבְתִּי in Ps. xix. 2, etc. (not in lxxviii.

2), a poetic word in Ionic form, bearing strong, coarse meaning; used in softened sense in Hellenistic Greek. Chief value of this citation: a sign that the parabolic teaching of Jesus, like His healing ministry, was sufficiently outstanding to call for recognition in this way.

Vv. 36-43. Interpretation of the Tares. Not in Apostolic Document; style that of evangelist; misses the point of the parable—so Weiss (Matt.-Evang., p. 351). But if there was any private talk between Jesus and the Twelve as to the meaning of His parables, this one was sure to be the subject of conversation. It is more abstruse than the Sower, its lesson deeper, the fact it points to more mysterious. The interpretation given may of course be very freely reproduced.—Ver. 36. φράσον (διαἄφησον NB) again in xv. 15: observe the unceremonious style of the request, indicative of intimate familiar relations. Hesychius gives as equivalents for φράζει, δεικνύει, σημαίνει, λέγει, etc.—διασάφ. in Deut. i. 5 = make clear, a stronger expression.—Ver. 37. ὁ σπείρων: identified here with the Son of man (not so in interpretation of Sower).—Ver. 38. ὁ κόσμος, the wide world; universalism.—σπέρμα, not the word this time, but the children of the kingdom.—ζιζάνια, the sons of the wicked one (τοῦ πονηροῦ, the devil).—Ver. 39. συντέλεια αἰῶνος, the end of the world; phrase peculiar to this Gospel.—θερισταὶ ἄγγελοι. Weiss thinks this borrowed from Mt. xxiv. 31, and certainly not original. Perhaps not as a dogmatic interpretation, but quite possibly as a poetic suggestion.—Ver. 40. This and the following verses enlarge on the final separation.—Ver. 41. ἀποστελεῖ: cf. chap. xxiv. 31.—συλλέξουσιν, collect, and so separate.—τὰ σκάνδαλα: abstract for concrete; those who create stumbling blocks for others.—καὶ, exegetical, not introducing a distinct class, but explaining how the class already referred to cause others to stumble.—ποιούντας τ. ἀνομίαν: cf. vii. 23, where for ποι. stands ἐργαζόμενοι. Has ἀνομίαν here the technical sense of religious libertinism, or the general sense of moral transgression? Assuming the former alternative, some critics find here the sign-mark of a later apostolic time.—Ver. 42. ἐκεῖ ἔσται. etc.: held to be inappropriate βρυγμὸς τῶν ὀδόντων. 43. τότε οἱ δίκαιοι ἐκλάμψουσιν ὡς ὁ ἥλιος ἐν τῇ βασιλείᾳ τοῦ πατρὸς αὐτῶν. Ὁ ἔχων ὤτα ἀκούειν<sup>1</sup> ἀκούετω.

44. “Πάλιν<sup>2</sup> ὁμοία ἐστὶν ἡ βασιλεία τῶν οὐρανῶν θησαυρῷ κεκρυμμένῳ ἐν τῷ ἀγρῷ, ὃν εὐρῶν ἄνθρωπος ἔκρυψε, καὶ ἀπὸ τῆς χαρᾶς αὐτοῦ ὑπάγει, καὶ πάντα ὅσα ἔχει πωλεῖ,<sup>3</sup> καὶ ἀγοράζει τὸν ἀγρὸν ἐκεῖνον.

45. “Πάλιν ὁμοία ἐστὶν ἡ βασιλεία τῶν οὐρανῶν ἀνθρώπῳ<sup>4</sup> ἡ ἐμπόρῳ, ζητοῦντι καλοὺς μαργαρίτας· 46. ὃς εὐρῶν<sup>5</sup> ἔνα<sup>1</sup> πολυτίμον μαργαρίτην, ἀπελθὼν πέπρακε πάντα ὅσα εἶχε, καὶ ἠγόρασεν αὐτόν.

<sup>h</sup> Rev. xvii
(4 times).
<sup>i</sup> John xii. 3.
<sup>r</sup> 1 Pet. i. 7 (compar.).
Cf. Ch.
xxvi. 7
(Barut.).

<sup>1</sup>  $\aleph$ B omit ἀκούειν.

<sup>2</sup> BD omit πάλιν.

<sup>3</sup> πωλεῖ before πάντα in  $\aleph$ D. B gives πωλεῖ the same position but omits πάντα. So W.H. with πάντα in margin.

<sup>4</sup>  $\aleph$ B omit. W.H. relegate to margin.

<sup>5</sup> ευρων δε in  $\aleph$ BDL verss. (Tisch., W.H.).

here, because the gnashing of teeth is caused by cold, not by fire (Holtz., H. C.); appropriate in viii. 12, where the doom is rejection into the outer darkness.—Ver. 43. ἐκλάμψουσι: vide Dan. xii. 2, which seems to be in view; an expressive word suggestive of the sun emerging from behind a cloud. The mixture of good and evil men in this world hides the characters of both.

Vv. 44-53. Three other parables; the Treasure, the Pearl, the Net. Ver. 36 would seem to imply that the evangelist took these as spoken only to disciples in the house. But as the Net is closely connected in meaning with the Tares, it is more probable that these parables also are extracts from popular discourses of Jesus, which, like all the others, would gain greatly if seen in their original setting. The Treasure and the Pearl would have their fitting place in a discourse on the kingdom of God as the highest good (Mt. vi. 33).—Ver. 44. ἐν τῷ ἀγρῷ: the article may be generic, indicating the field as the locality, as distinct from other places where treasures were deposited.—ἐκρύψε, he hid once more what some one had previously hidden; the occurrence common, the occasions various.—χαρᾶς αὐτοῦ, in his joy rather than through joy over it, as many take the genitive, though both are admissible. The joy natural in a poor peasant; not less so the cunning procedure it inspired; ethically questionable, but parables are not responsible for the morality of their characters.—ὑπάγει, πωλεῖ, etc., four historic presents one after the other, in sympathy with the finder, and with lively effect.—πάντα ὅσα: all required for the purpose, yet the all might not amount to much: the field minus the treasure of no great value. Worth while, the treasure being a pure gain. The point of the parable is that the kingdom of heaven outweighs in value all else, and that the man who understands this will with pleasure part with all. It helps to show the reasonableness of the sacrifice for the kingdom Jesus demanded.

Ver. 45. ἐμπόρῳ ζ. κ. μ. A pearl merchant who went to the pearl fisheries to purchase from the divers, of course selecting the best; a connoisseur in valuables.—Ver. 46. πολυτίμον: precious because exceptionally large, well-shaped, and pure; such rare, but met with now and then.—ἀπελθὼν: he is taken by surprise, has not as much with him as will purchase it on the spot, sees it is worth his whole stock, agrees to buy and promises to return with the price.—πέπρακε, ἠγόρασεν, a perfect with an aorist. Not to be disposed of by saying that the former is an “aoristic” perfect (Burton, § 88).—πέπρακε points to a momentous step, taken once for all and having lasting effects. A great venture, a risky speculation. The treasure in the field was a sure gain for the finder, but it remained to be seen what the pearl merchant would get for his one pearl. After the sale of his stock the purchase of the one pearl was a matter of course. In the former of

- j here only in N.T. 47. "Πάλιν ὁμοία ἐστὶν ἡ βασιλεία τῶν οὐρανῶν σαγήνη βληθείῃ εἰς τὴν θάλασσαν, καὶ ἐκ παντὸς γένους συναγαγούσῃ.
- k here only.
1 vide Lk.
x. 34
(=vid. 8.).
l here only (ἀγγέλων.
Ch. xxv.
4), vide critical note 1. 48. ἦν, ὅτε ἐπληρώθη, <sup>k</sup> ἀναβιβάσαντες ἐπὶ τὸν αἰγιαλόν, καὶ καθίσαντες, συνέλεξαν τὰ κατὰ εἰς ἰάγγεϊα,<sup>1</sup> τὰ δὲ σαπρὰ ἔξω ἔβαλον. 49. οὕτως ἔσται ἐν τῇ συντελείᾳ τοῦ αἰῶνος. ἐξελεύσονται οἱ ἄγγελοι, καὶ ἀφοριοῦσι τοὺς πονηροὺς ἐκ μέσου τῶν δικαίων, 50. καὶ βαλοῦσιν αὐτοὺς εἰς τὴν κάμνον τοῦ πυρός· ἐκεῖ ἔσται ὁ κλαυθμὸς καὶ ὁ βρυγμὸς τῶν ὀδόντων." 51. λέγει αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς,<sup>2</sup> "Συνήκατε ταῦτα πάντα;" λέγουσιν αὐτῷ, "Ναί, κύριε."<sup>2</sup>
- m vide
below and at Ch.
xxvii. 57. 52. Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, "Διὰ τοῦτο πᾶς γραμματεὺς <sup>m</sup> μαθητευθεὶς εἰς τὴν βασιλείαν<sup>3</sup> τῶν οὐρανῶν ὁμοίός ἐστιν ἀνθρώπῳ οἰκοδεσπότη, ὅστις ἐκβάλλει ἐκ τοῦ θησαυροῦ αὐτοῦ καινὰ καὶ παλαιά."

<sup>1</sup> ἀγγεῖα in NBC.

<sup>2</sup> NBD omit λέγει α. ο. l., also κύριε after ναί.

<sup>3</sup> NBCS have τῇ βασιλεία. The reading in T.R. is a grammatical correction.

these two parables the Kingdom of Heaven appears as the object of a glad though accidental finding of a sure possession; in the latter as the object of systematic quest and venturesome faith. The difference between seekers and finders must not be exaggerated. The pearl merchant was also a finder. No one would set out on a journey to seek one unique pearl (Koetsveld). The spiritual class he represents are seekers after God and wisdom, finders of the Kingdom of God, of a good beyond their hope. Such seekers, however, are on the sure way to find.

Vv. 47-50. The Net. σαγήνη, vide on iv. 21.—ἐκ παντὸς γένους συν.: a matter of course, not intended but inevitable; large movements influence all sorts of people.—Ver. 48. καθίσαντες συνέλεξαν: equally a matter of course; a thing to be done deliberately, of which the sitting attitude is an emblem. There is a time for everything; the time for sorting is at the end of the fishing.—σαπρὰ, vide on vii. 17. Vv. 49, 50 contain the interpretation in much the same terms as in 41, 42.

Vv. 51, 52. Conclusion of the parabolic collection.—Ver. 52 contains an important logion of Jesus preserved by Matthew only, and connected by him with the parabolic teaching of Jesus. In this connection καινὰ καὶ παλαιά of course points to the use of the old familiar facts of nature to illustrate newly revealed truths of the kingdom. But we should not bind ourselves too strictly to this connection, keeping in mind Matthew's habit of grouping; all the more that, as Wendt has pointed out (Die Lehre Jesu, ii. 349), the idea expressed by γραμματεὺς does not get justice. It naturally points to acquaintance with the O. T., and combined with μαθητευθεὶς ε. τ. β. teaches that that knowledge may be usefully united with discipleship in the lore of the kingdom. In Wendt's words: "One remains in possession of the old, recognised as of permanent value, yet is not restricted to it, but along with it possesses a precious new element".—μαθητεύειν is here used transitively as in xxviii. 19, Acts xiv. 21.—ἐκβάλλει points to free distribution of treasures by the householder. He gives out new or old according to the nature of the article. The mere scribe, Rabbinical in spirit, produces only the old and stale. The disciple of the kingdom, like the Master, is always fresh-minded, yet knows how to value all old spiritual treasures of Holy Writ or Christian tradition.

Vv. 53-58. Visit to Nazareth (Mk. vi. 1-6, cf. Lk. iv. 16-30). In Mk. this is the next section after the parables, deducting what had previously been reported in Mt. (chaps. viii. and ix.), a pretty sure sign that our evangelist has Mk. under his eye. We can here see how he handles his source—substantial reproduction of the contents, no slavish copying of style, editorial discretion in reporting certain details. No attempt should be made to connect with the foregoing passage, except perhaps by

53. Καὶ ἐγένετο ὅτε ἐτέλεσεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς τὰς παραβολὰς ταύτας, μετῆρην ἐκέθειεν· 54. καὶ ἐλθὼν εἰς τὴν <sup>α</sup>πατρίδα αὐτοῦ, ἐδίδασκεν <sup>η</sup> here and in Mk.vi. 1. 4. αὐτοὺς ἐν τῇ συναγωγῇ αὐτῶν, ὥστε ἐκπλήττεσθαι <sup>1</sup> αὐτοὺς καὶ λέγειν, “Πόθεν τούτῳ ἡ σοφία αὕτη καὶ αἱ δυνάμεις; 55. οὐχ οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ τοῦ τέκτονος υἱός; οὐχὶ ἡ μήτηρ αὐτοῦ λέγεται Μαριάμ, καὶ οἱ ἀδελφοὶ αὐτοῦ Ἰάκωβος καὶ Ἰωσήφ <sup>2</sup> καὶ Σίμων καὶ Ἰούδας; 56. καὶ αἱ ἀδελφαὶ αὐτοῦ οὐχὶ πᾶσαι πρὸς ἡμᾶς εἰσι; πόθεν οὖν τούτῳ ταῦτα πάντα; 57. Καὶ ἐσκανδαλίζοντο ἐν αὐτῷ. Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Οὐκ ἔστι προφήτης ὁ ἄτιμος, εἰ μὴ ἐν τῇ πατρίδι αὐτοῦ <sup>3</sup> ο Mk. vi. 4. 1 Cor. iv. 10; xii. 23. καὶ ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ αὐτοῦ.” 58. Καὶ οὐκ ἐποίησεν ἐκεῖ δυνάμεις πολλὰς, διὰ τὴν ἀπιστίαν αὐτῶν.

<sup>1</sup> ἐκπλησσο. in most uncials.

<sup>2</sup> Ἰωσήφ in BCΣ. Ἰωσήφ is probably from Mk.

<sup>3</sup> BD omit αὐτοῦ. NZ have ἰδια before πατρίδι, which Tisch. and W.H. place in margin. L omits καὶ ἐν τ. οικ. αὐτοῦ.

the general category of prevalent un-receptivity to which also the following narrative (xiv. 1-12) may be relegated.—Ver. 53. μετῆρην: in classics to transfer something from one place to another. Hellenistic, intransitive = to remove oneself; one of Matthew's words (xix. 1).—Ver. 54. πατρίδα, in classics fatherland. Here and in parallels evidently = native town; home. Vide ver. 56 and Lk. iv. 16.—συναγωγῇ, singular, not plural, as in Vulgate. One syn. index of size of town (Grotius).—ὥστε, with infinitive: tendency and actual result. They were astonished and said: πόθεν . . . δυνάμεις, wisdom and marvellous works; of the latter they had heard, of the former they had had a sample. Whence? that is the question; not from schools, parentage, family, social environment, or mere surroundings and circumstances of any kind.—Ver. 55. ὁ τ. τέκτονος υἱός: Mk. has ὁ τέκτων, which our evangelist avoids; the son of the carpenter, one only in the town, well known to all.—Μαριάμ . . . Ἰάκωβος, etc., names given of mother and brothers, to show how well they know the whole family. And this other man just come back is simply another of the family whose name happens to be Jesus. Why should He be so different? It is an absurdity, an offence, not to be commonplace. The irritation of the Nazareans is satisfactory evidence of the extraordinary in Jesus.—Ver. 57. Proverb, not Jewish merely, but common property of mankind; examples from Greek and Roman authors in Pricaeus and Wetstein, including one from Pindar about fame fading at the family hearth (Olymp. Ode, xii. 3).—Ver. 58. Here also editorial discretion is at work. Mark states that Jesus was not able to work miracles in Nazareth, and that He marvelled at their unbelief. Matthew changes this into a statement that He did few miracles there because of their unbelief, and passes over the marvelling in silence.

CHAPTER XIV. DEATH OF THE BAPTIST: COMMENCEMENT OF A NEW DIVISION OF THE EVANGELIC HISTORY.

Vv. 1-12. Death of the Baptist (Mk. vi. 14-29, Lk. ix. 7-9). This section might with advantage have been given as a short chapter by itself, and a new start made with the feeding of the thousands which forms the first of a series of narratives together giving the story of the later Galilean ministry (xiv. 13—xx. 16). In this section (1-12) Matthew still has his eye on Mark, the story of the fate of the Baptist being there the next after the section in reference to mother and brethren, excepting the mission of the Twelve (Mk. vi. 7-13) already related in Mt. (x. 5-15). Indeed from this point onwards Matthew follows Mark's order. In the foregoing part of this Gospel the parallelism between it and Mark has been disturbed by the desire of the evangelist to draw largely on his other source, the Logia, and introduce teaching materials bearing on all the topics suggested in his introductory sketch of Christ's early Galilean ministry: Didache, chap. v.-vii.; apostolic mission (iv. 18-a vide iv. 24.

 b Ch. xviii.
 64; xxviii.
 7 (with art.).
 c Mk. vi. 14.
 Gwl. v. 6.
 28. v. 16.
 d Ch. xxii.
 28. Mk.
 vi. 18. 1
 Cor. v. 1;
 vii. 2, 29.
 e Ch. xxi. 26.
 46. Mk. xi.
 32. Phil.
 ii. 29.

XIV. 1. ἘΝ ἐκείνῳ τῷ καιρῷ ἤκουσεν Ἡρώδης ὁ τετράρχης<sup>1</sup> τὴν ἀκοὴν Ἰησοῦ, 2. καὶ εἶπε τοῖς παισὶν αὐτοῦ. “Οὗτός ἐστιν Ἰωάννης ὁ Βαπτιστής· αὐτὸς ἠγέρθη ἀπὸ τῶν νεκρῶν, καὶ διὰ τοῦτο αἱ δυνάμεις ἐνεργοῦσιν ἐν αὐτῷ.” 3. Ὁ γὰρ Ἡρώδης κρατήσας τὸν Ἰωάννην ἔδησεν αὐτὸν<sup>2</sup> καὶ ἔθετο ἐν φυλακῇ,<sup>3</sup> διὰ Ἡρωδιάδα τὴν γυναῖκα Φιλίππου τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ αὐτοῦ. 4. ἔλεγε γὰρ αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰωάννης,<sup>4</sup> “Οὐκ ἔξεστὶ σοὶ ἔχειν αὐτήν.” 5. Καὶ θέλων αὐτὸν ἀποκτείνειν, ἐφοβήθη τὸν ὄχλον, ὅτι ὡς ἔπροφήτην αὐτὸν εἶχον.

<sup>1</sup> τετρααρχης in NCZA. So Tisch. and W.H., though BD spell as in T.R.

<sup>2</sup> NB omit αὐτον, which is an undisputed reading in Mk., whence it may have been imported.

<sup>3</sup> NB read ἐν φυλακῇ ἀπέθετο, which Tisch. and W.H. adopt.

<sup>4</sup> ND omit art. before I. and BZ place αὐτῷ after I.

22), chap. x.; Baptist (chap. iii.), chap. xi.; Pharisees (chap. iii. 7-9), chap. xii.; popular preaching (iv. 23), chap. xiii. Chaps. viii., ix. disturb the order by grouping incidents illustrating the healing ministry.

Ver. 1. ἐν ἐκείνῳ τῷ καιρῷ. Mk. connects with return of Twelve from their mission (vi. 14), Mt. apparently with immediately preceding section. But the phrase recalls xi. 25, xii. 1, and it may be the evangelist is thinking generally of a time of prevailing insusceptibility (Weiss-Meyer).—Ἡρώδης: Herod Antipas, tetrarch of Galilee and Peraea for many years (4-39 A.D.), married to the daughter of Aretas, king of Arabia; like his father Herod the Great in cunning, ambition, and love of splendour in building and otherwise, whereof the new city of Tiberias was a monument (Schürer, Gesch., i. 359).—ἀκοήν, vide iv. 24. The fame of Jesus penetrated at last even into the royal palace, where very different matters occupied the attention, ordinarily.—Ver. 2. παισὶν αὐτοῦ: not his sons, but his servants, i.e., the courtiers, great men in their way, not the menials in the palace. The king would propound his odd theory in familiar talk, not in solemn conclave.—οὗτός ἐστιν, etc. It is this theory we have to thank for the narrative following, which in itself has no special connection with the evangelic history, though doubtless Christians would naturally read with interest the fate of the forerunner of Jesus. The king has the Baptist on the brain; and remarkable occurrences in the religious world recall him at once to mind. It is John! he (αὐτός) is risen; theory begotten of remorse; odd enough, but better than Pharisaic one begotten of malevolence; both witnessing to the extraordinary in Christ's career.—διὰ τοῦτο: the living John did no miracles, but no saying what a dead one redivivus can do?—ἐνεργοῦσιν, not: he does the mighty works, but: the powers (δυνάμεις) work in him, the powers of the invisible world, vast and vague in the king's imagination.

Ver. 3. γὰρ implies that the following story is introduced to make the king's theory intelligible. "Risen" implies previous death, and how that came about must be told to show the psychological genesis of the theory. It is the superstitious idea of a man who has murder on his conscience.—κρατήσας, etc.: fact referred to already in iv. 12, xi. 2; here the reason given. Of course Herod seized, bound, and imprisoned John through his agents.—διὰ Ἡρωδιάδα: a woman here, as so often, the cause of the tragedy.—γυναῖκα Φ.: vide on Mk.—Ver. 4. ἔλεγε γὰρ ὁ I. The progressive imperfect, with force of a pluperfect. John had been saying just before he was apprehended (Burton, Moods and Tenses, § 29).—οὐκ ἔξεστιν: doubly unlawful; as adultery, and as marriage within prohibited degrees (Lev. xviii. 16, xx. 21).—Ver. 5. θέλων: cf. i. 19. Mark gives a fuller statement as to Herod's feelings towards John. No injustice is done Herod here by ascribing to him a wish to get rid of John. There are always mixed feelings in such cases. Compare the relations of Alcibiades to Socrates as described by Plato (Συμπόσιον). ἐφοβήθη τ. δ.: that for one

6. <sup>2</sup> γενεσίων δὲ ἀγομένων<sup>1</sup> τοῦ Ἡρώδου, ὠρχήσατο ἡ θυγάτηρ τῆς f Cf. Gen.
Ἡρωδιάδος ἐν τῷ μέσῳ, καὶ ἤρесе τῷ Ἡρώδῃ · 7. ὅθεν μεθ' ὄρκου xī. 20.
ὠμολόγησεν αὐτῇ δοῦναι ὃ ἐὰν<sup>2</sup> αἰτήσῃται. 8. Ἡ δὲ <sup>3</sup> προβι- ἡμέρα βασθεῖσα ὑπὸ τῆς μητρὸς αὐτῆς, “ Δός μοι,” φησίν, “ ὦδε ἐπὶ γ γενεσίως.
33 (συν- in Acts xix.
W. H.).
ἡ πίνακι τὴν κεφαλὴν Ἰωάννου τοῦ Βαπτιστοῦ.” 9. Καὶ ἐλυπήθη<sup>4</sup> ὁ ἡ Lk. xi. 39.
βασιλεὺς, διὰ δὲ<sup>5</sup> τοὺς ὄρκους καὶ τοὺς συνακακίμενους ἐκέλευσε δοθῆναι · 10. καὶ πέμψας<sup>1</sup> ἀπεκεφάλισε τὸν<sup>4</sup> Ἰωάννην ἐν τῇ φυλακῇ. i Mk. vi. 16, 27. Lk. ix.
11. καὶ ἠνέχθη ἡ κεφαλὴ αὐτοῦ ἐπὶ πίνακι, καὶ ἐδόθη τῷ κορασίῳ · 9.
καὶ ἤνεγκε τῇ μητρὶ αὐτῆς. 12. καὶ προσελθόντες οἱ μαθηταὶ
αὐτοῦ ἦραν τὸ σῶμα,<sup>5</sup> καὶ ἔθασαν αὐτό<sup>6</sup> · καὶ ἐλθόντες ἀπήγγειλαν

<sup>1</sup> BDLZ have the dat. γενεσίοις and γενομένοις for ἀγομένων; the reading in T.R. is a grammatical correction.

<sup>2</sup> αν in BD.

<sup>3</sup> BD have λυπηθεῖς and omit δε. The reading of the T.R. is an attempt by resolution of the construction to make the meaning clear.

<sup>4</sup> BZ omit τον.

<sup>5</sup> BCDLΣ several cursives have πτωμα. for which σωμα has been substituted as more delicate.

<sup>6</sup> B have αυτον. αυτο in Mk. (vi. 29).

thing; also feared God and his conscience a little, not enough. It is well when lawless men in power fear anything.—ὄτι . . . εἶχον: they took John to be, regarded him as, a prophet.—εἶχον does not by itself mean to hold in high esteem (in pretio habere, Kypke). The point is that John for the people passed for a prophet, belonged to a class commanding religious respect (so Fritzsche, Meyer, etc.). Vide xxi. 46.

Ver. 6. γενεσίους γενομένοις: one expects the genitive absolute as in T.R., which just on that account is to be suspected. The dative of time. But cf. Mk. vi. 21, where we have γενομένης and γενεσίους occurring together, and vide Weiss, Mk.-Evang., p. 221, on the literary connection between the two texts. Most commentators take γενεσίους as referring to Herod's birthday. Some, e.g., Grotius, think of the anniversary of the accession to the throne = birthday of his reign. In classic Greek it means a feast in honour of the dead on their birthday, γενέθλια being the word for a birthday feast, vide Lobeck, Phryn., 103. Loesner, Observ. ad N. T. e. Phil. Alex., cites instances from Philo of the use of both words in the sense of a birthday feast.—ἡ θυγάτηρ τ. Ἡρωδ.: Salome by name.—ἐν τῷ μέσῳ, implies a festive assembly, as fully described in Mk.—Ver. 7. ὠμολόγησεν, confessed by oath; obligation to keep a promise previously given. Cf. Mk. vi. 22, where the fact is more fully stated. The account in Matt. seems throughout secondary.—Ver. 8. προβιβασθεῖσα; not “before instructed,” as in A. V., but “brought to this point”; urged on. It should require a good deal of “educating” to bring a young girl to make such a grim request. But she had learnt her lesson well, and asked the Baptist's head, as if she had been asking a favourite dish (ὡς περὶ τινος ἐδέσματος διαλεγομένη, Chrys., Hom. xviii.). Kypke cites two instances of the rare use of the word in the sense of instruction.—ὦδε here and now, on the spot, ἐξαυτῆς in Mk. That was an essential part of the request. No time must be left for repentance. If not done at once under the influence of wine and the momentary gratification given by the voluptuous dance, it might never be done at all. This implies that the Baptist was at hand, therefore that the feast was at Machaerus, where there was a palace as well as a fortress.—Ver. 9. λυπηθεῖς: participle used concessively, though grieved he granted the request; the grief quite compatible with the truculent wish in ver. 5.—βασιλεὺς: only by courtesy.—ὄρκους, plural, singular in ver. 7; spoken in passion, more like profane swearing than deliberate utterance once for all of a solemn oath.—Ver. 10. ἀπεκεφάλισε: expressive word, all too clear in meaning, though not found in Attic usage, or apparently

τῷ Ἰησοῦ. 13. καὶ ἀκούσας<sup>1</sup> ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἀνεχώρησεν ἐκεῖθεν ἐν πλοίῳ εἰς ἔρημον τόπον κατ' ἰδίαν. καὶ ἀκούσαντες οἱ ὄχλοι ἠκολούθησαν
j Mk. vi. 33 αὐτῷ<sup>1</sup> πεζῇ<sup>2</sup> ἀπὸ τῶν πόλεων.

14. Καὶ ἐξελθὼν ὁ Ἰησοῦς<sup>3</sup> εἶδε πολὺν ὄχλον, καὶ ἐσπλαγχνίσθη k Mk. vi. 5. ἐπ' αὐτούς,<sup>4</sup> καὶ ἐθεράπευσε τοὺς<sup>k</sup> ἀρρώστους αὐτῶν. 15. Ὁψίας
l Acts xxvii. ἐστιν ὁ τόπος, καὶ ἡ ὥρα ἤδη<sup>5</sup> παρήλθεν· ἀπόλυσον<sup>6</sup> τοὺς ὄχλους, i Cor. xi. δὲ γενομένης, προσήλθον αὐτῷ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ 13; xvi. 18.
30.
9 (same sense). ἵνα ἀπελθόντες εἰς τὰς κόμας ἀγοράσωσιν ἑαυτοῖς βρώματα." 16.
Ἅ δὲ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, "Ὅ χρεῖαν ἔχουσιν ἀπελθεῖν· δότε

<sup>1</sup> ἀκούσας δε ῥBDLZ.

<sup>2</sup> πεζοὶ ῥJLZ.

<sup>3</sup> ῥBD omit ο ἰ.

<sup>4</sup> αὐτοῖς in most uncials; ἐπ αὐτοὺς only in minusc.; from Mk.

<sup>5</sup> ῥBZ omit αὐτοῦ.

<sup>6</sup> ῥCZ add οὖν, which W.H. place in margin.

much used at all; a plebeian word, according to Salmasius cited by Kypke, who gives instances from late authors.—Ver. 11. ἠνέχθη, not expressly said "there and then," but all points to immediate production of the head on a platter in the banqueting hall before the guests; gruesome sight!—ἐδόθη, ἤνεγκε: what a nerve the girl must have had! her mother's nature in her; the dancing and the cool acceptance of the horrible gift well matched.—κορασίῳ: not to be taken strictly; a young unmarried woman, say, of twenty (Holtz., H. C.). The dancing of a mere girl would have been no entertainment to the sensual revellers. The treat lay in the indecency.—Ver. 12. πτώμα: carcase, used absolutely in this sense only in late writers. Earlier writers would say πτώμα νεκροῦ. Lobeck, Phryn., 375.

Vv. 13-21. Jesus retires; feeding of thousands (Mk. vi. 30-44; Lk. ix. 10-17).

—Ver. 13. ἀκούσας, having heard of the fate of John from John's disciples (ver. 12).—ἀνεχώρησεν ἐκεῖθεν: withdrew from where He was when the report reached Him; locality not indicated. Mark connects the retirement with the return of the Twelve from their mission, and the report they gave, and assigns as motive rest for the missionaries. The two events might synchronise, and escape from Herod's dangerous neighbourhood might be a joint motive for retirement. But against this is the speedy return (ver. 34).—ἐν πλοίῳ: naturally suggests a place near the sea as starting-point. But it may be rather intended to indicate in what direction they were going—to the eastern side of the lake.—εἰς ἑ. τ. κατ' ἰδίαν. These phrases have certainly more point in Mk. as referring to a multitude from which they wished to escape.—οἱ ὄχλοι: no previous mention of the crowds, and no hint that Jesus wished to get away from them; looks like a digest of a fuller narrative, such as that in Mk.—πεζῇ (or πεζοί), on foot, but not implying that all literally walked; there were sick among them who could not. The contrast is between going by sea and going by land. Cf. Acts xx. 13. Classical instances in philological commentaries (Wetstein, Kypke, Elsner, etc.).—Ver. 14. ἐξελθὼν, in this place, naturally means going forth from His retreat, in Mk. (vi. 34) going out of the ship, the crowd having arrived on the spot before Him. To escape from the people always difficult, now apparently more than ever. Evidently a time of special excitement, popularity at its height, though according to Fourth Gospel about to undergo a speedy decline.—ἐσπλαγχνίσθη, deponent passive, pitied; Hellenistic, and based on the Hebrew idea of the bowels as the seat of compassion; used by Symmachus in translation of Deut. xiii. 9.—ἐθεράπευσε: Mark gives prominence to the element of instruction; healing alone mentioned here.

Vv. 15-21. The feeding.—Ver. 15. ὀψίας γενομένης: might mean sunset as in viii. 16, but from the nature of the case must mean afternoon from 3 to 6, the first of the "two evenings".—ἔρημος, comparatively uninhabited, no towns near.—ἡ ὥρα ἤδη παρήλθεν: the meaning not clear. Mk. has: ἡδὴ ὥρας πολλῆς = already the hour is advanced. Various suggestions have been made: eating time (Grot.), healing and teaching time (Fritzsche), daytime (Meyer) is past. Weiss, with most probability, takes ὥρα

αὐτοῖς ὑμεῖς φαγεῖν.” 17. Οἱ δὲ λέγουσιν αὐτῷ, “Οὐκ ἔχομεν ὧδε εἰ μὴ πέντε ἄρτους καὶ δύο ἰχθύας.” 18. Ὁ δὲ εἶπε, “Φέρετέ μοι αὐτοὺς ὧδε.”<sup>1</sup> 19. Καὶ κελεύσας τοὺς ὄχλους ἀνακλιθῆναι ἐπὶ τοὺς χόρτους,<sup>2</sup> καὶ<sup>3</sup> λαβὼν τοὺς πέντε ἄρτους καὶ τοὺς δύο ἰχθύας, ἀναβλέψας εἰς τὸν οὐρανόν, <sup>m</sup> εὐλόγησε· καὶ <sup>n</sup> κλάσας ἔδωκε τοῖς <sup>m</sup> Ch. xxvi. 26. 1 Cor. x. 16. <sup>n</sup> Ch. xxvi. 26. Acts ii. 46 al. μαθηταῖς τοὺς ἄρτους, οἱ δὲ μαθηταὶ τοῖς ὄχλοις. 20. καὶ ἔφαγον πάντες, καὶ ἔχορτάσθησαν· καὶ ἦσαν τὸ περισσεῦον τῶν κλασμάτων, δώδεκα κοφίνους πλήρεις. 21. οἱ δὲ ἐσθίοντες ἦσαν ἄνδρες ὡσεὶ πεντακισχίλιοι, χωρὶς γυναικῶν καὶ παιδίων. 22. Καὶ εὐθέως <sup>o</sup> Acts xxvi. 11. Gal. ii. 3. 14. <sup>p</sup> Ch. xi. 31; xxvi. 32. Mk. x. 32. ἠγάκασεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς <sup>4</sup> τοὺς μαθητὰς αὐτοῦ <sup>5</sup> ἐμβῆναι εἰς τὸ <sup>6</sup> πλοῖον, καὶ <sup>p</sup> προάγειν αὐτὸν εἰς τὸ πέραν, ἕως οὐ ἀπολύσει τοὺς ὄχλους. 23. καὶ ἀπολύσας τοὺς ὄχλους, ἀνέβη εἰς τὸ ὄρος κατ’ ἰδίαν

<sup>1</sup> ὧδε αὐτοὺς in ΣΒΖ. <sup>2</sup> ΣBC have ἐπι τοῦ χορτοῦ; D the sing. also, but accus.

<sup>3</sup> ΒΓΔΣ omit καὶ.

<sup>4</sup> o l. wanting in ΣBCDΔΣ.

<sup>5</sup> Most uncials omit, but BXΣ retain αὐτοῦ.

<sup>6</sup> B and several cursives (1, 33, 124) omit το. W.H. place in margin.

= time for sending them away to get food.—ἀπόλυσον: though late for the purpose, not too late; dismiss them forthwith.—Ver. 16. οὐ χρείαν ἔχουσιν ἀπελθεῖν, etc.: even if, as some think, what happened was that under the moral influence of Jesus the people present generously made the provisions they had brought with them available for the company at large, the character of Jesus appears here in a commanding light. No situation appears to Him desperate, no crisis unmanageable. No need to go. Give ye them to eat, resources will be forthcoming (cf. Exod. xiv. 15). And they were, how we cannot tell. The story is a fact supported by the testimony of all four evangelists, not a baseless legend, or a religious allegory.—Ver. 17. πέντε ἄρτους κ. δ. ἰχ. A very modest supply even for the disciple circle. They seem, under the influence of Jesus, to have been a care-free company, letting to-morrow look after itself. “Learn the philosophy of the Twelve, and how they despised food. Being twelve they had only so much, and they readily gave up these” (Chrysos., H. xlix.). Five loaves and two fishes, all that was known to be in that vast gathering.—Ver. 18. φέρετε, etc.: Christ’s imperial way in critical situations often arrests attention. “Stretch forth thine hand” (xii. 13). “Bring them hither to me.”—Ver. 19. κελεύσας, λαβὼν, ἀναβλέψας, participles without copula all leading up to εὐλόγησεν, the central chief action: rapid, condensed narrative, briefly, simply, recounting an amazing event.—εὐλόγησεν with accusative (ἄρτους) understood. He blessed the loaves and fishes.—καὶ κλάσας ἔδωκεν, then dividing them gave them to the disciples, who in turn gave to the multitude.—τῷ λόγῳ καὶ τῇ εὐλογίᾳ αὔξων καὶ πληθύνων αὐτούς, Origen.—Ver. 20. δώδεκα κοφ. πλ. is in appos. with τὸ περισσεῦον τ. κ. They took the surplus of the broken pieces to the extent of twelve baskets.—κοφίνους, answering to the Rabbinical ספיק, a basket of considerable size (“ein grosses Behältniss,” Wünsche). Each of the Twelve had one. The word recalls the well-known line of Juvenal (Sat. iii. 14): “Judeis, quorum copinus foenumque suppellex,” on which and its bearing on this place vide Schöttgen (Hor. Tal.) and Elsner.—Ver. 21. πεντακισχίλιοι, 5000 men, not counting women and children. This helps us to attach some definite meaning to the elastic words, ὄχλος, ὄχλοι, so frequently occurring in the Gospels. Doubtless this was an exceptionally great gathering, yet the inference seems legitimate that ὄχλος meant hundreds, and πολλὸς ὄχλος thousands.

Vv. 22-36. The return voyage (Mk. vi. 45-56).—Ver. 22. ἠγάκασεν: a strong word needing an explanation not here given, supplied in John vi. 15. Of course there was no physical compulsion, but there must have been urgency on Christ’s part, and unwillingness on the part of disciples. Fritzsche objects to special προσεύξασθαι. Ὀψίας δὲ γενομένης, μόνος ἦν ἐκεῖ. 24. τὸ δὲ

 ρ Mk. vi. 48 πλοῖον ἤδη μέσον τῆς θαλάσσης ἦν<sup>1</sup> ἡ βασιανίζομενον ὑπὸ τῶν
 (there of the men, here of the ship). κυμάτων· ἦν γὰρ ἐναντίος ὁ ἄνεμος. 25. Τετάρτη δὲ φυλακῆ
 τῆς νυκτὸς ἀπῆλθε<sup>2</sup> πρὸς αὐτοὺς ὁ Ἰησοῦς,<sup>3</sup> περιπατῶν ἐπὶ τῆς
 θαλάσσης.<sup>4</sup> 26. καὶ ἰδόντες αὐτὸν οἱ μαθηταὶ<sup>5</sup> ἐπὶ τὴν θάλασσαν<sup>6</sup>
 r Mk. vi. 49 περιπατοῦντα ἐταράχθησαν, λέγοντες, “Ὅτι φάντασμα ἐστὶ.”
 (Wisdom xvi. 14 (15)). καὶ ἀπὸ τοῦ φόβου ἔκραξαν. 27. εὐθέως<sup>7</sup> δὲ ἐλάλησεν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς,<sup>8</sup> λέγων, “Θαρσεῖτε· ἐγὼ εἰμι, μὴ φοβεῖσθε.” 28. Ἀποκριθείς δὲ αὐτῷ ὁ Πέτρος εἶπε<sup>9</sup> “Κύριε, εἰ σὺ εἶ, κέλευσόν με πρὸς σε ἐλθεῖν<sup>10</sup> ἐπὶ τὰ ὕδατα.” 29. Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν, “Ἐλθέ.” Καὶ καταβὰς
 ἀπὸ τοῦ πλοίου ὁ<sup>11</sup> Πέτρος περιεπάτησεν ἐπὶ τὰ ὕδατα, ἐλθεῖν<sup>12</sup> πρὸς

<sup>1</sup> For μεσον . . . ἦν B, some verss. and minuss. have here σταδίους πολλοὺς ἀπο τῆς γῆς απειχεν, which W.H. adopt, putting in margin the reading of T.R., which is the undisputed reading in Mk.

<sup>2</sup> ἦλθεν in ΞBΣ verss.

<sup>3</sup> Omit o l. ΞBCD.

<sup>4</sup> ΞBD several cursives have the accus. here. <sup>5</sup> οἱ δε μαθ. ιδοντες α. in BD.

<sup>6</sup> τῆς θαλασσης in ΞBCD.

<sup>7</sup> εὐθως in ΞBD here as always in Mk., whence it may have come. In Mk. this is a standing variation. It need not be again referred to.

<sup>8</sup> o l. before αυτοῖς in B, omitted in ΞD, bracketed in W.H.

<sup>9</sup> The order of words varies here. W.H., after B, have αποκ. δε ο Π. ειπεν α.

<sup>10</sup> ΞBCDΔΣ many cursives have ελθειν προς σε.

<sup>11</sup> Art. omitted in ΞBD.

<sup>12</sup> και ηλθεν in BD.

emphasis, and renders: “auctor fuit discipulis, ut navem conscenderent”.—ἔως οὐ ἀπολύση, subjunctive, here used where optative would be used in classic Greek. Cf. xviii. 30, and vide Burton, § 324.—Ver. 23. ἀνέβη εἰς τὸ ὄρος. After dismissing the crowd Jesus retired into the mountainous country back from the shore, glad to be alone—κατ’ ἰδίαν, even to be rid of the Twelve for a season.—προσεύξασθαι: “Good for prayer the mountain, and the night, and the solitude (μόνωσις), affording quiet, freedom from distraction (τὸ ἀπερίσπαστον), and calm” (Euthy. Zig.).—ὀψίας γεν. refers, of course, to a later hour than in ver. 15.—Ver. 24. μέσον, an adjective agreeing with πλοῖον (Winer, § 54, 6), signifies not merely in the middle strictly, but any appreciable distance from shore. Pricaeus gives examples of such use. But the reading of B, probably to be preferred, implies that the boat was many stadii (25 or 30, John vi. 19 = 3 to 4 miles) from the eastern shore.—ὑπὸ τῶν κυμάτων: not in Mk., and goes without saying; when there are winds there will be waves.—ἐναντίος ὁ ἄνεμος: what wind? From what quarter blowing?

What was the starting-point, and the destination? Holtz. (H. C.) suggests that the voyage was either from Bethsaida Julias at the mouth of the upper Jordan to the north-western shore, or from the south end of the plain El-Batiha towards Bethsaida Julias, at the north end, citing Furrer in support of the second alternative, vide in Mk.—Ver. 25. τετάρτη φυλ. = 3 to 6, in the early morning, πρωτ.—ἐπὶ τ. θ.: the readings in this and the next verse vary between genitive and accusative. The sense is much the same. The evangelist means to represent Jesus as really walking on the sea, not on the land above the sea level (Paulus, Schenkel). Holtz. (H. C.), regarding it as a legend, refers to O. T. texts in which God walks on the sea.—Ver. 26. φάντασμα: a little touch of sailor superstition natural in the circumstances; presupposes the impression that they saw something walking on the sea.—Ver. 27. ἐλάλησεν: Jesus spoke; the words given (θαρσεῖτε, etc.), but the mere sound of His voice would be enough.

Vv. 28-33. Peter-episode, peculiar to Mt. The story is true to the character

τὸν Ἰησοῦν. 30. βλέπων δὲ τὸν ἄνεμον ἰσχυρὸν<sup>1</sup> ἐφοβήθη· καὶ ἀρξάμενος<sup>5</sup> καταποντίζεσθαι ἔκραξε, λέγων, “Κύριε, σῶσόν με.”<sup>Ch. xviii 6 only.</sup>
 31. Ἐυθέως δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐκτείνας τὴν χεῖρα ἐπελάβετο αὐτοῦ, καὶ λέγει αὐτῷ, “Ὀλιγόπιστε, εἰς τί<sup>1</sup> ἐδίστασας;”<sup>Ch. xviii. 17 only.</sup>
 32. Καὶ ἐμβάντων<sup>2</sup> αὐτῶν εἰς τὸ πλοῖον, ἠέκοπασεν ὁ ἄνεμος·<sup>Mk. iv. 39; vi. 51.</sup>
 33. οἱ δὲ ἐν τῷ πλοίῳ ἐλθόντες<sup>3</sup> προσεκύνησαν αὐτῷ λέγοντες, “Ἀληθῶς Θεοῦ υἱὸς εἶ.”
 34. Καὶ διαπεράσαντες ἦλθον εἰς τὴν γῆν<sup>4</sup> Γεννησαρέτ. 35. καὶ ἐπιγνόντες αὐτὸν οἱ ἄνδρες τοῦ τόπου ἐκέλευον ἀπέστειλαν εἰς ὅλην τὴν περίχωρον ἐκείνην, καὶ προσήνεγκαν αὐτῷ πάντας τοὺς κακῶς ἔχοντας· 36. καὶ παρεκάλουν αὐτόν, ἵνα μόνον ἄψωνται τοῦ κρασπέδου τοῦ ἱματίου αὐτοῦ· καὶ ὅσοι ἤψαντο, <sup>Lk. vii. 3 Acts xxiii. 24; xxviii. 43; 44; xxviii. 1, 4 1 Pet. iii. 20.</sup> διεσώθησαν.

<sup>1</sup> Omitted in SB 33.<sup>2</sup> αναβαντων in SBD 33.<sup>3</sup> Wanting in SBΣ.<sup>4</sup> SBD al. have επι instead of εις and omit την γην.

of Peter.—Ver. 30. βλέπων τὸν ἄνεμον, seeing the wind, that is, the effects of it. It is one thing to see a storm from the deck of a stout ship, another to see it in midst of the waves.—καταποντίζεσθαι: he walked at first, now he begins to sink; so at the final crisis, so at Antioch (Gal. ii. ix), so probably all through. A strange mixture of strength and weakness, bravery and cowardice; a man of generous impulses rather than of constant firm will. “Peter walked on the water but feared the wind: such is human nature, often achieving great things, and at fault in little things.”—(πολλάκις τὰ μεγάλα κατορθούσα, ἐν τοῖς ἐλάττωσι ἐλέγχεται, Chrys., H. 1.)—Ver. 31. ἐδίστασας: again in xviii. 17, nowhere else in N. T., from δῖς, double, hence to be of two minds, to doubt (cf. δίσυχος, James i. 8).—Ver. 32. ἀναβάντων αὐτῶν: Jesus and Peter.—ἠέκοπασεν: used in narrative of first sea-anecdote by Mk., iv. 39 = exhausted itself (from κόπος).—Ver. 33. οἱ ἐν τῷ πλοίῳ: cf. οἱ ἄνθρωποι in viii. 27; presumably the disciples alone referred to.—ἀληθῶς θ. υ. εἶ, a great advance on ποταπός (viii. 27). The question it implies now settled: Son of God.

Vv. 34-36. Safe arrival.—διαπεράσαντες, having covered the distance between the place where Jesus joined them and the shore.—ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν: they got to land; the general fact important after the storm.—εἰς Γεννησαρέτ, more definite indication of locality, yet not very definite; a district, not a town, the rich plain of Gennesaret, four miles long and two broad.—Ver. 35. καὶ ἐπιγνόντες, etc.: again popular excitement with its usual concomitants. The men of the place, when they recognised who had landed from the boat, sent round the word: Jesus has come! They bring their sick to Him to be healed.—Ver. 36. παρεκάλουν, etc.: they have now unbounded confidence in Christ's curative powers; think it enough to touch (μόνον ἄψωνται) the hem of His mantle.—διεσώθησαν: they are not disappointed; the touch brings a complete cure (διὰ in composition). The expression, ὅσοι ἤψαντο, implies that all who were cured touched: that was the uniform means. Mk.'s expression, ὅσοι ἄν ἤ, leaves that open.

CHAPTER XV. WASHING OF HANDS; SYROPHENICIAN WOMAN; SECOND FEEDING. The scene changes with dramatic effect from phenomenal popularity on the eastern shore, and in Gennesaret, to embittered, ominous conflict with the jealous guardians of Jewish orthodoxy and orthodoxy. The relations between Jesus and the religious virtuosi are becoming more and more strained and the crisis cannot be far off. That becomes clear to Jesus now, if it was not before (xvi. 21).

Vv. 1-20. Washing of hands (Mk. vii. 1-23).—Ver. 1. τότε connects naturally with immediately preceding narrative concerning the people of Gennesaret with unbounded faith in Jesus seeking healing by mere touch of His garment. Probably the one scene led to the other: growing popular enthusiasm deepening Pharisaic hostility.—προσέρχονται (οἱ) ἂ. ἰ. If οἱ be omitted, the sense is that certain persons came to Jesus from Jerusalem. If it be retained, the sense is: certain persons belonging to Jerusalem came from it, the preposition ἐν being

α Acts i. 25 (with ἀπό). XV. 1. ΤΟΤΕ προσέρχονται τῷ Ἰησοῦ οἱ<sup>1</sup> ἀπὸ Ἱεροσολύμων
 1 Mk. vii. 3. γραμματεῖς καὶ Φαρισαῖοι,<sup>2</sup> λέγοντες, 2. “Διατί οἱ μαθηταὶ σου
 5; 9, 13. 1 Cor. xi. 2. παραβαίνουσι τὴν<sup>3</sup> παράδοσιν τῶν πρεσβυτέρων; οὐ γὰρ ἵπτονται
 14. Gal. i. τὰς χεῖρας αὐτῶν,<sup>4</sup> ὅταν ἄρτον ἐσθίωσιν.” 3. Ὁ δὲ ἀποκριθεὶς εἶπεν
 11. 8. 2 Thess. ii. αὐτοῖς, “Διατί καὶ ὑμεῖς παραβαίνετε τὴν ἐντολὴν τοῦ Θεοῦ διὰ τὴν 15; iii. 6. παράδοσιν ὑμῶν; 4. Ὁ γὰρ Θεὸς ἐνετείλατο, λέγων,<sup>5</sup> ‘Τίμα τὸν
 c Mk. vii. 10; ix. 39. πατέρα σου,<sup>6</sup> καὶ τὴν μητέρα.’ καὶ, ‘Ὁ κακολογῶν πατέρα ἢ Acts xix. 9. Ch. xvi. 26; xxvii. μητέρα θανάτῳ τελευτάτω.’ 5. ὑμεῖς δὲ λέγετε, Ὅς ἂν εἶπῃ τῷ 24. Mk. v. 26; Heb. πατρὶ ἢ τῇ μητρὶ, Δῶρον, ὃ ἐὰν ἐξ ἐμοῦ<sup>4</sup> ὠφελήθῃς, καὶ<sup>6</sup> οὐ μὴ d xiii. 9 al.

<sup>1</sup> NBD omit οἱ. <sup>2</sup> Φαρ. καὶ γραμ. in NBD. <sup>3</sup> NBD Orig. omit αὐτων.

<sup>4</sup> For ἐνετείλατο λεγων BD have simply εἶπεν. <sup>5</sup> NBCD omit σου.

<sup>6</sup> NBCD omit καὶ, which affects the construction; vide below.

changed into ἀπὸ by attraction of the verb.—Φαρ. καὶ γρ., usually named in inverse order, as in T.R. Our evangelist makes the whole party come from Jerusalem; Mk., with more probability, the scribes only. The guardians of tradition in the Capital have their evil eye on Jesus and co-operate with the provincial rigorists.—Ver. 2. διατί οἱ μαθ. σου παραβ.: no instance of offence specified in this case, as in ix. 10 and xii. 1. The zealots must have been making inquiries or playing the spy into the private habits of the disciple circle, seeking for grounds of fault-finding (cf. Mk. vii. 2).—παραβαίνουσι: strong word (Mk.'s milder), putting breach of Rabbinical rules on a level with breaking the greatest moral laws, as if the former were of equal importance with the latter. That they were, was deliberately maintained by the scribes (vide Lightfoot).—τὴν παράδοσιν τ. π.: not merely the opinion, dogma, placitum, of the elders (Grotius), but opinion expressed ex cathedra, custom originated with authority by the ancients. The “elders” here are not the living rulers of the people, but the past bearers of religious authority, the more remote the more venerable. The “tradition” was unwritten (ἄγραφος διδασκαλία, Hesyeh), the “law upon the lip” reaching back, like the written law (so it was pretended), to Moses. Baseless assertion, but believed; therefore to attack the παράδοσις a Herculean, dangerous task. The assailants regard the act imputed as an unheard-of monstrous impiety. That is why they make a general charge before specifying the particular form under which the offence is committed, so giving the latter as serious an aspect as possible.—οὐ γὰρ ἵπτονται, etc.: granting the fact it did not necessarily mean deliberate disregard of the tradition. It might be an occasional carelessness on the part of some of the disciples (τινὰς, Mk. vii. 2) which even the offenders would not care to defend. A time-server might easily have evaded discussion by putting the matter on this ground. The Pharisees eagerly put the worst construction on the act, and Jesus was incapable of time-serving insincerity; thus conflict was inevitable.—νίπτεσθαι, the proper word before meat, ἀπονίπτεσθαι, after, Elsner, citing Athenaeus, lib. ix., cap. 18.—ἄρτον ἐσθίωσιν, Hebrew idiom for taking food. The neglect charged was not that of ordinary cleanliness, but of the technical rules for securing ceremonial cleanness. These were innumerable and ridiculously minute. Lightfoot, referring to certain Rabbinical tracts, says: “lege, si vacat, et si per taedium et nauseam potes”.

Vv. 3-6. Christ's reply: consists of a counter charge and a prophetic citation (vv. 7-9) in the inverse order to that of Mk.—Ver. 3. καὶ ὑμεῖς: the retort, if justifiable, the best defence possible of neglect charged = “we transgress the tradition because we want to keep the commands of God: choice lies between these; you make the wrong choice”. Grave issue raised; no compromise possible here.—διὰ τ. π. ὑμῶν: not rules made by the parties addressed (Weiss-Meyer), but the tradition which ye idolise, your precious paradosis.—Ver. 4. ὁ γὰρ θεός: counter charge substantiated. The question being the validity of the tradition and its value, its evil tendency might be illustrated at will in connection with any moral interest. It might have been illustrated directly in connection τιμήση<sup>1</sup> τὸν πατέρα αὐτοῦ ἢ τὴν μητέρα αὐτοῦ · 6. καὶ ἠκυρώσατε e Mk. vii. 13. Gal. iii. 17. τὴν ἐντολὴν<sup>2</sup> τοῦ Θεοῦ διὰ τὴν παράδοσιν ὑμῶν. 7. Ὑποκριταί, f Mk. vii. 6; xii. 28. ἡ καλῶς προεφῆτευσεν<sup>3</sup> περὶ ὑμῶν Ἡσαΐας, λέγων, 8. Ἐγγίζει μοι ὁ John iv. 39. λαὸς οὗτος τῷ στόματι αὐτῶν, καὶ τοῖς χεῖλεσι με τιμᾷ<sup>4</sup> ἢ δὲ Ironically in Mk. vii. 9. 2 Cor. xi. 4. καρδία αὐτῶν πόρρω ἀπέχει ἀπ' ἐμοῦ. 9. ἡ μάτην δὲ σέβονται με, g here and in Mk. vii. 7 (from Is. xxix. 13).

<sup>1</sup> ΞBCDΔΣ have τιμησει. τιμηση answers to ειπη, and being made dependent on ος αν by και is part of the protasis.

<sup>2</sup> τον λογον in BD (W.H.); τον νομον in ΞC (Tisch., W.H. marg.).

<sup>3</sup> Augment at beg., επροφ, in ΞBCDL.

<sup>4</sup> The T.R. gives the quotation in full. ΞBDL have ο λαος ουτος τοις χειλεσι με τιμα: Tisch., W.H. (ουτος ο λαος and αγαπη for τιμα in margin).

with moral purity versus ceremonial. The actual selection characteristic of Jesus as humane, and felicitous as exceptional<sup>ly</sup> clear.—τίμα . . . τελευτάτω: fifth commandment (Ex. xx. 12), with its penal sanction (Ex. xxi. 17).—Ver. 5 shows how that great law is compromised.—ὑμεῖς δὲ λέγ.: the emphatic antithesis of ὑμεῖς το θεός a pointed rebuke of their presumption. The scribes rivals to the Almighty in legislation. "Ye say": the words following give not the ipsissima verba of scribe-teaching or what they would acknowledge to be the drift of their teaching, but that drift as Jesus Himself understood it = "This is what it comes to."—Δῶρον = let it be a gift or offering devoted to God, to the temple, to religious purposes, i.e., a Corban (Mk. vii. 11); magic word releasing from obligation to show honour to parents in the practical way of contributing to their support. Of evil omen even when the "gift" was bonâ fide, as involving an artificial divorce between religion and morality; easily sliding into disingenuous pretexts of vows to evade filial responsibilities; reaching the lowest depth of immorality when lawmakers and unfilial sons were in league for common pecuniary profit from the nefarious transaction. Were the fault-finders in this case chargeable with receiving a commission for trafficking in iniquitous legislation, letting sons off for a percentage on what they would have to give their parents? Origen, Jerome, Theophy., Lutteroth favour this view, but there is nothing in the text to justify it. Christ's charge is based on the practice specified even at its best: honest pleading of previous obligation to God as a ground for neglecting duty to parents. Lightfoot (Hor. Heb.) understands the law as meaning that the word

Corban, even though profanely and heartlessly spoken, bound not to help parents, but did not bind really to give the property to sacred uses. "Ad dicanda sua in sacros usus per haec verba nullatenus tenebatur, ad non juvandum patrem tenebatur inviolabiliter."—οὐ μὴ τιμήσει, he shall not honour = he is exempt from obligation to: such the rule in effect, if not in words of the scribes in the case. The future here has the force of the imperative as often in the Sept. (vide Burton, M. and T., § 67). If the imperative meaning be denied, then οὐ μὴ τ. must be taken as a comment of Christ's. Ye say, "whosoever," etc.; in these circumstances of course he will not, etc. As the passage stands in T.R. the clause καὶ οὐ μὴ τιμήση, etc., belongs to the protasis, and the apodosis remains unexpressed = he shall be free, or guiltless, as in A. V.—Ver. 6. ἠκυρώσατε, ye invalidated, by making such a rule, the aorist pointing to the time when the rule was made. Or it may be a gnomic aorist: so ye are wont to, etc. The verb ἀκυρώω belongs to later Greek, though Elsner calls the phrase "bene Graeca".—διὰ . . . ὑμῶν: an account of your tradition, again to mark it as their idol, and as theirs alone, God having no part in it, though the Rabbis taught that it was given orally by God to Moses.—Ver. 7. ὑποκριταί: no thought of conciliation; open war at all hazards. "Actors," in their zeal for God, as illustrated in the case previously cited. God first, parents second, yet God not in all their thoughts.—καλῶς, appositely, to the purpose. Isaiah might not be thinking of the Pharisees, but certainly the quotation is very felicitous in reference to them, exactly describing their religious character. Mt. follows Mk. in quoting;

h here and in parall. in Gosp. frequent in Paul. Mk. vii. 7. Col. ii. 23 (not in profane authors). j here only in N. T. k Ch. xliii. 16, 24. Acts i. 16. Rom. ii. 19. l here only (in Ch. xliii. 36. T.R.).

διδάσκοντες <sup>h</sup> διδασκαλίας, <sup>1</sup> ἐντάλματα ἀνθρώπων.” 10. Καὶ προσκαλεσάμενος τὸν ὄχλον, εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Ἀκούετε καὶ συνίετε. 11. οὐ τὸ εἰσερχόμενον εἰς τὸ στόμα κοινοῖ τὸν ἄνθρωπον· ἀλλὰ τὸ ἐκπορευόμενον ἐκ τοῦ στόματος, τοῦτο κοινοῖ τὸν ἄνθρωπον.” 12. Τότε προσελθόντες οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ <sup>1</sup> εἶπον <sup>2</sup> αὐτῷ, “Οἶδας ὅτι οἱ Φαρισαῖοι ἀκούσαντες τὸν λόγον ἐσκανδαλίσθησαν;” 13. Ὁ δὲ ἀποκριθεὶς εἶπε, “Πᾶσα <sup>1</sup> φυτεία, ἣν οὐκ ἐφύτευεν ὁ πατήρ μου ὁ οὐράνιος, ἐκριζωθήσεται. 14. ἄφετε αὐτούς <sup>k</sup> ὁδηγοὶ εἰσι τυφλοὶ τυφλῶν <sup>δ</sup>. τυφλὸς δὲ τυφλὸν ἐὰν ὀδηγῇ, ἀμφότεροι εἰς βόθυνον πεσοῦνται.” 15. Ἀποκριθεὶς δὲ ὁ Πέτρος εἶπεν αὐτῷ, “<sup>1</sup> Φράσον neither follows closely the Sept. (Is. xxix. 13).—Ver. 8. ἡ δὲ καρδία, etc.: at this point the citation is particularly apposite. They were far from the true God in their thoughts who imagined that He could be pleased with gifts made at the expense of filial piety. Christ's God abhorred such homage, still more the hypocritical pretence of it.

<sup>1</sup>  $\aleph$ BD and several cursives omit αὐτου.

<sup>2</sup> λεγουσιν in BD.

<sup>3</sup> Instead of ὀδηγοὶ . . . τυφλων BDLZ have τυφλοὶ εἰσι ὀδηγοὶ (W.H.).  $\aleph$  has the same inverted, ὀδ. εἰσι τυφ.

Vv. 10, 11. Appeal to the people: a mortal offence to the Pharisees and scribes, but made inevitable by publicity of attack, the multitude being in the background and overhearing all.—ἀκούετε καὶ συνίετε: abrupt, laconic address; a fearless, resolute tone audible.—Ver. 11. Simple direct appeal to the moral sense of mankind; one of those emancipating words which sweep away the cobwebs of artificial systems; better than elaborate argument. It is called a parable in ver. 15, but it is not a parable in the strict sense here whatever it may be in Mk. (vide notes there). Parables are used to illustrate the ethical by the natural. This saying is itself ethical: τὸ ἐκπορευόμενον ἐκ τοῦ στόματος refers to words as expressing thoughts and desires (ver. 19).—οὐ τὸ εἰσερ. εἰς τὸ στόμα: refers to food of all sorts; clean food taken with unclean hands, and food in itself unclean. The drift of the saying therefore is: ceremonial uncleanness, however caused, a small matter, moral uncleanness the one thing to be dreaded. This goes beyond the tradition of the elders, and virtually abrogates the Levitical distinctions between clean and unclean. A sentiment worthy of Jesus and suitable to an occasion when He was compelled to emphasise the supreme importance of the ethical in the law—the ethical emphatically the law of God (τὴν ἐντολὴν τοῦ θεοῦ, ver. 3).

Vv. 12-14. Disciples report impression made on Pharisees by the word spoken to the people. Not in Mark.—Ver. 12. ἐσκανδαλίσθησαν: double offence—(1) appealing to the people at all; (2) uttering such a word, revolutionary in character.—Ver. 13. ὁ δὲ ἀποκριθεὶς, etc.: the disciples were afraid, but Jesus was indignant, and took up high ground.—φυτεία for φύτευμα, a plant, “not a wild flower but a cultivated plant” (Camb. G. T.), refers to the Rabbinical tradition; natural figure for doctrine, and so used both by Jesus and Greeks (vide Schöttgen and Kypke). Kypke remarks: “pertinet huc parabola περὶ τοῦ σπείροντος”.—ὁ πατήρ μου: the statement in the relative clause is really the main point, that the tradition in question was a thing with which God as Jesus conceived Him had nothing to do. This is an important text for Christ's doctrine of the Fatherhood as taught by discriminating use of the term πατήρ. The idea of God implied in the Corban tradition was that His interest was antagonistic to that of humanity. In Christ's idea of God the two interests are coincident. This text should be set beside xii. 50, which might easily be misunderstood as teaching an opposite view.—ἐκριζωθήσεται. This is what will be, and what Jesus wishes and works for: uprooting, destruction, root and branch, no compromise, the thing wholly evil. The response of the traditionalists was crucifixion.—Ver. 14. ἄφετε: the case hopeless, no reform possible; on the road to ruin.—τυφλοὶ εἰσι ὀδηγοὶ: the reading in B is very laconic = blind men ἡμῖν τὴν παραβολὴν ταύτην.”<sup>1</sup> 16. Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς<sup>1</sup> εἶπεν, “<sup>m</sup> Ἀκμὴν<sup>m</sup> here only. n Rom. i. 21, 31; x. 19. o Mk. vii. 21. Lk. ii. 35; ix. 47; xxiv. 38. 1 Cor. iii. 20. Jas. ii. 4. These are the only words common to this list with that in Gal. v. 19; both doubtful there.

καὶ ὑμεῖς<sup>a</sup> ἀσύνετοί ἐστε; 17. οὐκ<sup>2</sup> νοεῖτε, ὅτι πᾶν τὸ εἰσπορευόμενον εἰς τὸ στόμα εἰς τὴν κοιλίαν χωρεῖ, καὶ εἰς ἀφεδρῶνα ἐκβάλλεται; 18. τὰ δὲ ἐκπορευόμενα ἐκ τοῦ στόματος ἐκ τῆς καρδίας ἐξέρχεται, κακείνα κοινοὶ τὸν ἄνθρωπον. 19. ἐκ γὰρ τῆς καρδίας ἐξέρχονται<sup>o</sup> διαλογισμοὶ πονηροί, <sup>p</sup> φόνοι, <sup>r</sup> μοιχεῖαι, πορνείαι, κλοπαί, <sup>p</sup> ψευδομαρτυρίαι, βλασφημίαι. 20. ταῦτά ἐστι τὰ κοινοῦντα τὸν ἄνθρωπον· τὸ δὲ ἀνίπτους χερσὶ φαγεῖν οὐ κοινοὶ τὸν ἄνθρωπον.”

21. Καὶ ἐξελθὼν ἐκεῖθεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἀνεχώρησεν εἰς τὰ μέρη Τύρου

<sup>1</sup> NBZ omit ταυτην and Ιησους (D also omits I.).

<sup>2</sup> ov in BDZ 33.

are the leaders, the suggestion being: we know what happens in that case. The point is the inevitableness of ruin. What follows expresses what has been already hinted.—τυφλὸς δὲ τ. ἐ. ὁδ.: if blind blind lead; ὀδηγῆ, subjunctive, with ἔαν as usual in a present general supposition.—ἀμφότεροι, both: Rabbis or scribes and their disciples. Christ despaired of the teachers, but He tried to rescue the people; hence vv. 10, 11.

Vv. 15-20. Interpretation of saying in ver. 11.—Ver. 15. Πέτρος, spokesman as usual (ὁ θερμὸς καὶ πανταχοῦ προφθάνων, Chrys., Hom. li.).—παραβολὴν, here at least, whatever may be the case in Mk., can mean only a dark saying, σκοτεινὸς λόγος (Theophy. in Mk.), “oratio obscura” (Suicer). The saying, ver. 11, was above the understanding of the disciples, or rather in advance of their religious attainments; for men often deem thoughts difficult when, though easy to understand, they are hard to receive. The Twelve had been a little scandalised by the saying as well as the Pharisees, though they did not like to say so (καὶ αὐτοὶ ἡρέμα θορυβοῦμενοι, Chrys.).—Ver. 16. ἀκμὴν, accusative of ἀκμή, the point (of a weapon, etc.)=κατ’ ἀκμὴν χρόνου, at this point of time, still; late Greek, and condemned by Phryn., p. 123 (ἀντὶ τοῦ ἔτι).—ἀσύνετοί ἐστε. Christ chides the Twelve for making a mystery of a plain matter (“quare paraboliæ dictum putet quod perspicue locutus est,” Jerome). Very simple and axiomatic to the Master, but was it ever quite clear to the disciples? In such matters all depends on possessing the requisite spiritual sense. Easy to see when you have eyes.—Ver. 17. ἀφεδρῶνα: here only, probably a Macedonian word = privy; a vulgar word and a vulgar subject which Jesus would gladly have avoided, but He forces Himself to speak of it for the sake of His disciples. The idea is: from food no moral defilement comes to the soul; such defilement as there is, purely physical, passing through the bowels into the place of discharge. Doubtless Jesus said this, otherwise no one would have put it into His mouth. Were the Twelve any the wiser? Probably the very rudeness of the speech led them to think.—Ver. 18. ἐκπορευόμενα: words representing thoughts and desires, morally defiling, or rather revealing defilement already existing in the heart, seat of thought and passion.—Ver. 19. φόνοι, etc.: breaches of Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, and Ninth Commandments in succession.—Ver. 20. Emphatic final reassertion of the doctrine.

Vv. 21-28. Woman of Canaan (Mk. vii. 24-30). This excursion to the north is the result of a passionate longing to escape at once from the fever of popularity and from the odium theologicum of Pharisees, and to be alone for a while with the Twelve, with nature, and with God. One could wish that fuller details had been given as to its duration, extent, etc. From Mk. we infer that it had a wide sweep, lasted for a considerable time, and was not confined to Jewish territory. Vide notes there.

Ver. 21. ἀνεχώρησεν, cf. xii. 15.—εἰς τὰ μέρη Τ. καὶ Σ.: towards or into? Opinion is much divided. De Wette cites in favour of the latter, Mt. ii. 22, xvi. 13, and disposes of the argument against it based on ἀπὸ τῶν ὁρίων ἐκείνων (ver. 22) by the remark that it has force only if ὅρια, contrary to the usage of the evangelist, be taken as = boundaries instead of territories. On the whole, the conclusion must be that the narrative leaves the point uncertain. On psychological καὶ Σιδῶνος. 22. καὶ ἰδοῦ, γυνὴ Χανααῖα ἀπὸ τῶν ὀρίων ἐκείνων ἐξεληθούσα ἐκραύγασεν<sup>1</sup> αὐτῶ,<sup>2</sup> λέγουσα, “Ἐλέησόν με, κύριε, υἱὲ<sup>3</sup> Δαβὶδ· ἡ θυγάτηρ μου κακῶς δαμονίζεται.” 23. Ὁ δὲ οὐκ ἀπεκρίθη αὐτῇ λόγον. καὶ προσελθόντες οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ ἠρώτων<sup>4</sup> αὐτόν, λέγοντες, “Ἀπόλυσον αὐτήν, ὅτι κράζει ἣ ὄπισθεν ἡμῶν.” 24. Ὁ δὲ ἀποκριθεὶς εἶπεν, “Οὐκ ἀπεστάλην εἰ μὴ εἰς τὰ πρόβατα τὰ ἀπολωλότα οἴκου Ἰσραήλ.” 25. Ἡ δὲ ἐληθούσα προσεκύνη αὐτῶ, λέγουσα, “Κύριε, ἔβοήθει μοι.” 26. Ὁ δὲ ἀποκριθεὶς εἶπεν, “Οὐκ ἔστι καλὸν<sup>5</sup> λαβεῖν τὸν ἄρτον τῶν τέκνων, καὶ βαλεῖν τοῖς κυναρίοις.”

<sup>1</sup> ἐκραζεν in BDΣ (W.H.). The aor. ἐκραζεν in ΞΣ (Tisch. and W.H. marg.). The imperfect is truer to life.

<sup>2</sup> ΞBCZΣ omit αὐτῶ.

<sup>3</sup> υἱος in BD.

<sup>4</sup> ἠρωτουσιν in ΞBCDX.

<sup>5</sup> οὐκ ἐστι καλὸν is so weightily supported (all the great uncials with exception of D) that one can hardly refuse to accept it as the true reading. Yet the reading of D, οὐκ ἐξεστι, has strong claims, just on account of the severity it implies and because the other reading is that of Mk.

grounds the presumption is in favour of the view that Jesus crossed the border into heathen territory. After that interview with sanctimonious Pharisees who thought the whole world outside Judea unclean, it would be a refreshment to Christ's spirit to cross over the line and feel that He was still in God's world, with blue sky overhead and the sea on this hand and mountains on that, all showing the glory of their Maker. He would breathe a freer, less stifling atmosphere there.—Ver. 22. Χανααῖα: the Phoenicians were descended from a colony of Canaanites, the original inhabitants of Palestine, Gen. x. 15 (vide Benzinger, Heb. Arch., p. 63). Vide notes on Mk.—ἐλ. με, pity me, the mother's heart speaks.—υἱὲ Δ. The title and the request imply some knowledge of Jesus. Whence got? Was she a proselyte? (De Wette.) Or had the fame of Jesus spread thus far, the report of a wonderful healer who passed among the Jews for a descendant of David? The latter every way likely, cf. Mt. iv. 24. There would be some intercourse between the borderers, though doubtless also prejudices and enmities.—Ver. 23. ὁ δὲ οὐκ ἀπ.: a new style of behaviour on the part of Jesus. The role of indifference would cost Him an effort.—ἠρώτων (ουν W. and H. as if contracted from ἐρωτέω), besought; in classics the verb means to inquire. In N. T. the two senses are combined after analogy of ἤρωσ. The disciples were probably surprised at their Master's unusual behaviour; a reason for it would not occur to them. They change places with the Master here, the larger-hearted appearing by comparison the narrower-hearted.—ἀπόλυσον, get rid of her by granting her request.—ὄτι κράζει: they were moved not so much by pity as by dread of a sensation. There was far more sympathy (though hidden) in Christ's heart than in theirs. Deep natures are often misjudged, and shallow men praised at their expense.—Ver. 24. οὐκ ἀπεστάλην: Jesus is compelled to explain Himself, and His explanation is bona fide, and to be taken in earnest as meaning that He considered it His duty to restrict His ministry to Israel, to be a shepherd exclusively to the lost sheep of Israel (τὰ πρόβατα τ. ἁ., cf. ix. 36), as He was wont to call them with affectionate pity. There was probably a mixture of feelings in Christ's mind at this time; an aversion to recommence just then a healing ministry at all—a craving for rest and retirement; a disinclination to be drawn into a ministry among a heathen people, which would mar the unity of His career as a prophet of God to Israel (the drama of His life to serve its purpose must respect the limits of time and place); a secret inclination to do this woman a kindness if it could in any way be made exceptional; and last but not least, a feeling that her request was really not isolated but representative = the Gentile world in her inviting Him, a fugitive from His own land, to come over and help them, an omen of the transference of the kingdom from Jewish to Pagan soil.

27. Ἡ δὲ εἶπε, “Ναί, κύριε· καὶ γὰρ<sup>1</sup> τὰ κυνάρια ἐσθίει ἀπὸ τῶν<sup>2</sup> ψιχίων τῶν ἐπιπτόντων ἀπὸ τῆς ἐτραπέζης τῶν κυρίων αὐτῶν.” 8 Mk. vii. 28. Lk. xvi. 21 (T.R.), same phr. in Lk. xvi. 21.

28. Τότε ἀποκριθεὶς ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν αὐτῇ, “Ὡ γύναι, μεγάλη σου ἡ πίστις· γενηθήτω σοι ὡς θέλεις.” Καὶ ἰάθη ἡ θυγάτηρ αὐτῆς ἀπὸ τῆς ὥρας ἐκείνης.

29. Καὶ μεταβὰς ἐκείθεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἦλθε παρὰ τὴν θάλασσαν τῆς Γαλιλαίας· καὶ ἀναβὰς εἰς τὸ ὄρος, ἐκάθητο ἐκεῖ. 30. καὶ προσῆλθον αὐτῷ ὄχλοι πολλοί, ἔχοντες μεθ' ἑαυτῶν χωλοὺς, τυφλοὺς, κωφοὺς, <sup>1</sup>κυλλοὺς,<sup>2</sup> καὶ ἐτέρους πολλοὺς, καὶ ἔρριψαν αὐτοὺς u Ch. xviii 8. Mk. ix 43. παρὰ τοὺς πόδας τοῦ Ἰησοῦ<sup>3</sup> καὶ ἐθεράπευσεν αὐτούς· 31. ὥστε τοὺς ὄχλους<sup>4</sup> θαυμάσαι, βλέποντας κωφοὺς λαλοῦντας,<sup>5</sup> κυλλοὺς ὑγιεῖς,<sup>6</sup> χωλοὺς περιπατοῦντας, καὶ τυφλοὺς βλέποντας· καὶ

<sup>1</sup> B omits γαρ, which therefore W H. bracket. As Weiss suggests it may have fallen out per incuriam. It seems needed, vide below. Yet vide Mk.

<sup>2</sup> The order in which these four words (χωλοὺς, etc.) are given varies. B has κυλλοὺς before τυφλοὺς, which W.H. adopt. The order of T.R. is supported only by late MSS.

<sup>3</sup> αὐτον for του I. in ΞBDL.

<sup>4</sup> τον οχλον in ΞCDA.

<sup>5</sup> B has ακουοντας.

<sup>6</sup> Ξ omits this clause.

Vv. 25-28. Entreaty renewed at close quarters with success.—Ver. 25. ἡ δὲ ἔλθοῦσα, etc. Probably the mother read conflict and irresolution in Christ's face, and thence drew encouragement.—Ver. 26. οὐκ ἔστιν καλὸν, etc.: seemingly a hard word, but not so hard as it seems. First, it is not a simple monosyllabic negative, leaving no room for parley, but an argument inviting further discussion. Next, it is playful, humorous, bantering in tone, a parable to be taken cum grano. Third, its harshest word, κυναρίοις, contains a loophole. κυνάρια does not compare Gentiles to the dogs without, in the street, but to the household dogs belonging to the family, which got their portion though not the children's.—Ver. 27. ναί, κύριε· καὶ γὰρ, etc.: eager assent, not dissent, with a gleam in the eye on perceiving the advantage given by the comparison = Yes, indeed, Lord, for even, etc. Kypke cites an instance from Xenophon of the combination ναί καὶ γὰρ in the same sense.—ψιχίων, dimin. from ψίξ, a bit, crumb, found only in N. T. (here and Mk. vii. 28, Lk. xvi. 21 T. R.), another diminutive answering to κυνάρια = the little pet dogs, eat of the minute morsels. Curiously felicitous combination of ready wit, humility and faith: wit in seizing on the playful κυνάρια and improving on it by adding ψιχία, humility in being content with the smallest crumbs, faith in conceiving of the healing asked as only such a crumb for Jesus to give.—Ver. 28. Immediate compliance with her request with intense delight in her faith, which may have recalled to mind that of another Gentile (Mt. viii. 10). ὦ γύναι: exclamation in a tone enriched by the harmonies of manifold emotions. What a refreshment to Christ's heart to pass from that dreary pestilential traditionalism to this utterance of a simple unsophisticated moral nature on Pagan soil! The transition from the one scene to the other unconsciously serves the purposes of consummate dramatic art.

Vv. 29-31. Return to the Sea of Galilee (Mk. vii. 31-37).—Ver. 29. παρὰ τ. θ. τ. Γαλι., to the neighbourhood of the Sea of Galilee; on which side? According to Mk., the eastern, approached by a circuitous journey through Sidon and Decapolis. Weiss contends that Mt. means the western shore. The truth seems to be that he leaves it vague. His account is a meagre colourless reproduction of Mk.'s. He takes no interest in the route, but only in the incidents at the two termini. He takes Jesus north to the borders of Tyre to meet the woman of Canaan, and back to Galilee to feed the multitude a second time.—εἰς τὸ ὄρος, as in v. 1, and apparently for the same purpose: ἐκάθητο ἔ., sat down there to teach. This ascent of the hill bordering the lake is not in Mk.—Ver.

- † Mk. viii. 2 ἐδόξασαν τὸν Θεὸν Ἰσραήλ. 32. Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς προσκαλεσάμενος τὸν μαθητὰς αὐτοῦ εἶπε, “Σπλαγχνίζομαι ἐπὶ τὸν ὄχλον, ὅτι ἦδη ἡμέρας<sup>1</sup> τρεῖς<sup>2</sup> προσμένουσί μοι, καὶ οὐκ ἔχουσι τί φάγωσι. καὶ ἀπολύσαι αὐτοὺς<sup>3</sup> νήστεις οὐ θέλω, μήποτε ἐκλυθῶσιν ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ.”
- † Mk. viii. 2. Acts xi. 23; xiii. 43. I Tim. v. 5. αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Πόσους ἄρτους ἔχετε;” Οἱ δὲ εἶπον, “Ἐπτὰ, καὶ ὀλίγα<sup>4</sup> ἰχθύδια.” 35. Καὶ ἐκέλευσε τοῖς ὄχλοις<sup>5</sup> ἀναπεσεῖν ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν. 36. καὶ λαβὼν<sup>6</sup> τοὺς ἑπτὰ ἄρτους καὶ τοὺς ἰχθύδας,<sup>7</sup> οἱ δὲ εὐχαριστήσας ἔκλασε, καὶ ἔδωκε<sup>6</sup> τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ,<sup>7</sup> οἱ δὲ (= ἀνακαλινομαι). John xxi. 20 et al.

<sup>1</sup> ἡμεραι in most uncials. N and Origen have the accus. (ἡμερας T.R.), obviously a grammatical correction.

<sup>2</sup> NB omit αὐτου. <sup>3</sup> For ἐκελ. τοις οχ. NBD have παραγγειλας τω οχλω.

<sup>4</sup> For και λαβων NBD have ελαβε. <sup>5</sup> NBD insert και before ευχαριστησας.

<sup>6</sup> εδιδου in NBD.

<sup>7</sup> NBD omit αὐτου.

30. χωλούς, etc.: the people wanted healing, not teaching, and so brought their sick and suffering to Jesus.—ἐρριψαν: they threw them at His feet either in care-free confidence, or in haste, because of the greatness of the number. Among those brought were certain classed as κυλλούς, which is usually interpreted “bent,” as with rheumatism. But in xviii. 8 it seems to mean “mutilated”. Euthy. takes κυλλοὶ = οἱ ἄχειρες, and Grotius argues for this sense, and infers that among Christ’s works of healing were restorations of lost limbs, though we do not read of such anywhere else. On this view ὑγιείς, ver. 31, will mean ἄρτιους, integros.—Ver. 31. λαλοῦντας: this and the following participles are used substantively as objects of the verb βλέποντας, the action denoted by the participles being that which was seen.—ἐδόξασαν τ. θ. Ἰσραήλ. The expression suggests a non-Israelite crowd and seems to hint that after all for our evangelist Jesus is on the east side and in heathen territory. But it may point back to ver. 24 and mean the God who conferred such favours on Israel as distinct from the heathen (Weiss-Meyer).

Vv. 32-38. Second feeding (Mk. viii. 1-9).—Ver. 32. σπλαγχνίζομαι, with ἐπὶ as in xiv. 14, Mk. viii. 2, with περὶ in ix. 36. In the first feeding Christ’s compassion is moved by the sickness among the multitude, here by their hunger.—ἡμέραι τρεῖς: that this is the true reading is guaranteed by the unusual construction, the accusative being what one expects.

The reading of D adopted by Fritzsche, which inserts εἰσι καὶ after τρεῖς, though not to be accepted as the true reading, may be viewed as a solution of the problem presented by the true reading vide Winer, § 62, 2.—νήστεις, fasting (νη, ἐσθίω similar to νήπιος from νη, ἔπος), here and in parallel text in Mk. only. The motive of the miracle is not the distance from supplies but the exhausted condition of the people after staying three days with Jesus with quite inadequate provision of food. Mk. states that some were far from home (viii. 3), implying that most were not. But even those whose homes were near might faint (ἐκλυθῶσι, Gal. vi. 9) by the way through long fasting.—Ver. 33. τοσοῦτοι, ὥστε χορτάσαι. ὥστε with infinitive may be used to express a consequence involved in the essence or quality of an object or action, therefore after τοσοῦτος and similar words; vide Kühner, § 584, 2, aa.—Ver. 34. πόσους ἄρτους: the disciples have larger supplies this time than the first, after three days, and when the supplies of the multitude are exhausted: seven loaves and several small fishes.—Ver. 36. εὐχαριστήσας, a late Greek word (“does not occur before Polybius in the sense of gratias agere”—Camb. N. T.), condemned by Phryn., who enjoins χάριν εἰδέναι instead (Lobeck, p. 18). Elsner dissents from the judgment of the ancient grammarians, citing instances from Demosthenes, etc.—Ver. 37. ἑπτὰ σπιριδας: baskets different in number and in name. Hesychius μαθηταὶ τῷ ὄχλῳ.<sup>1</sup> 37. Καὶ ἔφαγον πάντες, καὶ ἐχορτάσθησαν· καὶ ἦσαν<sup>2</sup> τὸ περισσεῦον τῶν κλασμάτων, ἑπτὰ *σπιρῖδας πλήρεις.<sup>a</sup> 38. οἱ δὲ ἐσθίοντες ἦσαν τετρακισχίλιοι ἄνδρες, χωρὶς γυναικῶν καὶ παιδίων.

Ch. xvi. 10
Mk. viii. 8, 20. Acts
ix. 25.

39. Καὶ ἀπολύσας τοὺς ὄχλους ἐνέβη εἰς τὸ πλοῖον, καὶ ἦλθεν εἰς τὰ ὄρια Μαγδαλά.<sup>3</sup>

XVI. 1. Καὶ προσελθόντες οἱ Φαρισαῖοι καὶ Σαδδουκαῖοι πειράζοντες ἐπηρώτησαν<sup>4</sup> αὐτὸν σημεῖον ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ ἐπιδείξαι αὐτοῖς.

<sup>1</sup> τοὺς ὄχλους in NSBL al.

<sup>2</sup> ἦσαν after κλασμάτων in BD.

<sup>3</sup> Μαγδαλ in NSBD, adopted in Tisch., W.H., etc., and doubtless the true reading. Μαγδαλα is a known substituted for an unknown.

<sup>4</sup> ἐπηρωτων in NS (Tisch. and W.H. marg.).

defines σπιρῖς: τὸ τῶν πυρῶν ἄγγος = wheat-basket; perhaps connected with σπείρω, suggesting a basket made of rope-net; probably larger than κόφινος, for longer journeys (Grotius). Or does the different kind of basket point to different nationality; Gentiles? Hilary contends for Gentile recipients of the second blessing, with whom Westcott (Characteristics of Gospel Miracles, p. 13) agrees.—Ver. 39. Μαγδαλάν: the true reading, place wholly unknown, whence probably the variants.

CHAPTER XVI. SIGN SEEKERS: CAESAREA PHILIPPI. Again a dramatically impressive juxtaposition of events. First an ominous encounter with ill-affected men professedly in quest of a sign, then in a place of retreat a first announcement in startlingly plain terms of an approaching tragic crisis.

Vv. 1-12. Demand for a sign (Mk. viii. 11-21).—Ver. 1. προσελθόντες: one of Mt.'s oft-recurring descriptive words.—Φαρ. καὶ Σαδδ.: a new combination, with sinister purpose, of classes of the community not accustomed to act together; wide apart, indeed, in social position and religious tendency, but made allies pro tem. by common dislike to the movement identified with Jesus. Already scribes by themselves had asked a sign (xii. 38). Now they are joined by a party representing the priestly and governing classes among whom the "Sadducees" were to be found (Wellhausen, Die Pharisäer und die Sadducäer). Mk. mentions only the Pharisees (ver. 11), but he makes Jesus refer to the leaven of Herod in the subsequent conversation with the disciples, whence might legitimately be inferred the presence of representatives of that leaven. These Mt. calls "Sadducees," probably the better-known name, and practically identical with the Herod leaven. The "Herodians" were, I imagine, people for whom Herod the Great was a hero, a kind of Messiah, all the Messiah they cared for or believed in, one who could help worldly-minded Israelites to be proud of their country (vide Grotius on Mt. xvi. 6). It was among Sadducees that such heroworshippers were likely to be found.—ἐπηρώτησαν: here like the simple verb (xv. 23) = requested, with infinitive, ἐπιδείξαι, completing the object of desire.—σημεῖον ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ: before (xii. 38) only a sign. Now a sign from heaven. What might that be? Chrys. (Hom. liiii.) suggests: to stop the course of the sun, to bridle the moon, to produce thunder, or to change the air, or something of that sort. These suggestions will do as well as any. Probably the interrogators had no definite idea what they wanted, beyond desiring to embarrass or nonplus Christ.

Vv. 2-4. Reply of Jesus.—Vv. 2 and 3, though not in B and bracketed by W. H., may be regarded as part of the text. Somewhat similar is Lk. xii. 54-56. On some occasion Jesus must have contrasted the shrewd observation of His contemporaries in the natural sphere with their spiritual obtuseness.—Ver. 2. εὐδία, fine weather! (εὐ, Διὸς genitive of Zeus).—πυρράζει γὰρ ὁ ὀ: that the sign = a ruddy sky in the evening (πυρράζειν in Lev. xiii. 19, 24).—Ver. 3. χειμών, a storm to-day; sign the same, a ruddy sky in the morning.—στυγνάζων, late but expressive = triste coelum. No special meteorological skill indicated thereby, only the average power of observation based on experience, which is common to mankind. Lightfoot credits the Jews with

- a Sir. iii. 15. 2. ὁ δὲ ἀποκριθεὶς εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Ὅψιας<sup>1</sup> γενομένης λέγετε, Ἐὐδία·
 b Acts xxvii. πυρράζει γὰρ ὁ οὐρανός. 3. καὶ πρῶτῃ, Σήμερον<sup>b</sup> χειμῶν· πυρράζει 20 (same sense). γὰρ ὁ στυγνάζων ὁ οὐρανός. ὑποκριταί,<sup>2</sup> τὸ μὲν πρόσωπον τοῦ
 Ch. xxiv. οὐρανοῦ γινώσκετε διακρίνειν, τὰ δὲ σημεῖα τῶν καιρῶν οὐ δύνασθε;<sup>1</sup> 29 (winter) ἡ.
 c Mk. x. 22. 4. γενεὰ πονηρὰ καὶ μοιχαλὶς σημεῖον ἐπιζητεῖ· καὶ σημεῖον οὐ δοθήσεται αὐτῇ, εἰ μὴ τὸ σημεῖον Ἰωάννου τοῦ προφήτου.”<sup>3</sup> Καὶ d Mk. viii. καταλιπὼν αὐτοὺς, ἀπῆλθε.
 14 (with inf.). Heb. 5. Καὶ ἐλθόντες οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ<sup>4</sup> εἰς τὸ πέραν<sup>d</sup> ἐπελάθοντο
 vi. 10; xiii. 2. 16 ἄρτους λαβεῖν. 6. ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Ὁρᾶτε καὶ προσέχετε (with gen.). Phil. iii. 13 ἀπὸ τῆς ζύμης τῶν Φαρισαίων καὶ Σαδδουκαίων.” 7. Οἱ δὲ διελογί(accus.).

<sup>1</sup> From οψίας to δυνασθε, end of ver. 3, is bracketed as doubtful by modern editors. The passage is wanting in  $\aleph$ BVXΓ, Syr. Cur., and Syr. Sin., Orig., etc.

<sup>2</sup> DLΔ omit. <sup>3</sup>  $\aleph$ BDL omit του προφήτου. <sup>4</sup>  $\aleph$ BCD omit αυτου.

special interest in such observations, and Christ was willing to give them full credit for skill in that sphere. His complaint was that they showed no such skill in the ethical sphere; they could not discern the signs of the times (τῶν καιρῶν: the reference being, of course, chiefly to their own time). Neither Pharisees nor Sadducees had any idea that the end of the Jewish state was so near. They said εὐδία when they should have said χειμῶν. They mistook the time of day; thought it was the eve of a good time coming when it was the morning of the judgment day. For a historical parallel, vide Carlyle's French Revolution, book ii., chap. i., Astraea Redux.—Ver. 4. Vide chap. xii. 39.

Vv. 5-12. The one important thing in this section is the reflection of Jesus on what had just taken place. The historical setting is not clear. Jesus left the sign seekers after giving them their answer. The disciples cross the lake; in which direction? With or without their Master? They forget to take bread. When? On setting out or after arrival at the other side? ἐλθόντες εἰς τ. π., ver. 5, naturally suggests the latter, but, as Grotius remarks, the verb ἔρχεσθαι in the Gospels sometimes means ire not venire (vide, e.g., Lk. xv. 20). Suffice it to say that either in the boat or after arrival at the opposite side Jesus uttered a memorable word.—Ver. 6. ὁρᾶτε καὶ προσέχετε: an abrupt, urgent admonition to look out for, in order to take heed of, a phenomenon of very sinister import; in Scottish idiom “see and beware of”. More impressive still in Mk.: ὁρᾶτε, βλέπετε, a duality giving emphasis to the command (ἀναδιπλωσις, ἐμφαίνουσα ἐπίτασιν τῆς παραγγελίας, Euthy.).—ζύμης, leaven, here conceived as an evil influence, working, however, after the same manner as the leaven in the parable (xiii. 33). It is a spirit, a zeiigeist, insinuating itself everywhere, and spreading more and more in society, which Jesus instinctively shrank from in horror, and from which He wished to guard His disciples.—τῶν Φαρ. καὶ Σαδ.: one leaven, of two parties viewed as one, hence no article before Σαδ. Two leavens separately named in Mk., but even there juxtaposition in the warning implies affinity. The leaven of Pharisaism is made thoroughly known to us in the Gospels by detailed characterisation. Sadducaism very seldom appears on the stage, and few words of Jesus concerning it are recorded; yet enough to indicate its character as secular or “worldly”. The two classes, antagonistic at many points of belief and practice, would be at one in dislike of single-hearted devotion to truth and righteousness, whether in the Baptist (iii. 7) or in Jesus. This common action in reference to either might not be a matter of arrangement, and each might come with its own characteristic mood: the Pharisee with bitter animosity, the Sadducee with good-natured scepticism and in quest of amusement, as when they propounded the riddle about the woman married to seven brothers. Both moods revealed utter lack of appreciation, no friendship to be looked for in either quarter, both to be dreaded.—Ver. 7. ἐν ἑαυτοῖς: either each man in his own ζοντο ἐν ἑαυτοῖς, λέγοντες, “Ὅτι ἄρτους οὐκ ἐλάβομεν.” 8. Γνοῦς δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν αὐτοῖς,<sup>1</sup> “Τί διαλογίζεσθε ἐν ἑαυτοῖς, ὀλιγόπιστοι ὅτι ἄρτους οὐκ ἐλάβετε<sup>2</sup>; 9. οὐπω νοεῖτε, οὐδὲ ἠμνημονεύετε τοὺς πέντε ἄρτους τῶν πεντακισχιλίων, καὶ πόσους κοφίνους ἐλάβετε; 10. οὐδὲ τοὺς ἑπτὰ ἄρτους τῶν τετρακισχιλίων, καὶ πόσας σφυρίδας<sup>3</sup> ἐλάβετε; 11. πῶς οὐ νοεῖτε, ὅτι οὐ περὶ ἄρτου<sup>4</sup> εἶπον ὑμῖν προσέχειν<sup>5</sup> ἀπὸ τῆς ζύμης τῶν Φαρισαίων καὶ Σαδδουκαίων; 12. Τότε συνῆκαν, ὅτι οὐκ εἶπε προσέχειν ἀπὸ τῆς ζύμης τοῦ ἄρτου,<sup>6</sup> ἀλλ’ ἀπὸ τῆς διδαχῆς τῶν Φαρισαίων καὶ Σαδδουκαίων.

<sup>1</sup> ΞBDLΔΣ al. omit αὐτοῖς.

<sup>2</sup> σφυρίδας in BD.

<sup>3</sup> For προσεχειν ΞBCL have προσεχετε δε.

<sup>2</sup> ΞBD have εχετε (W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> ἄρτων in ΞBCL.

<sup>6</sup> τῶν ἄρτων in BL.

mind (Weiss), or among themselves, apart from the Master (Meyer).—ὅτι may be recitative or = “because”. He gives this warning because, etc.; sense the same. They take the Master to mean: do not buy bread from persons belonging to the obnoxious sects! or rather perhaps: do not take your directions as to the leaven to be used in baking from that quarter. Vide Light-foot ad loc. Stupid mistake, yet pardonable when we remember the abruptness of the warning and the wide gulf between Master and disciples: He a prophet with prescient eye, seeing the forces of evil at work and what they were leading to; they very commonplace persons lacking insight and foresight. Note the solitariness of Christ.—Ver. 8. ὀλιγόπιστοι: always thinking about bread, bread, instead of the kingdom and its fortunes, with which alone the Master was occupied.—Vv. 9, 10. And with so little excuse in view of quite recent experiences, of which the vivid details are given as if to heighten the reproach.—Ver. 11. προσέχετε, etc.: warning repeated without further explanation, as the meaning would now be self-evident.—Ver. 12. συνῆκαν, they now understood, at least to the extent of seeing that it was a question not of loaves but of something spiritual. One could wish that they had understood that from the first, and that they had asked their Master to explain more precisely the nature of the evil influences for their and our benefit. Thereby we might have had in a sentence a photograph of Sadducaism, e.g.—διδαχῆς, “doctrine”; that was in a general way the import of the ζύμη. But if Jesus had explained Himself He would have had more to say. The dogmas and opinions of the two parties in question were not the worst of them, but the spirit of their life: their dislike of real godliness.

Vv. 13-28. At Caesarea Philippi (Mk. viii. 27—ix. 1; Lk. ix. 18-27). The crossing of the lake (ver. 5) proved to be the prelude to a second long excursion northwards, similar to that mentioned in xv. 21; like it following close on an encounter with ill-affected persons, and originating in a kindred mood and motive. For those who regard the two feedings as duplicate accounts of the same event these two excursions are of course one. “The idea of two journeys on which Jesus oversteps the boundaries of Galilee is only the result of the assumption of a twofold feeding. The two journeys are, in truth, only parts of one great journey, on which Jesus, coming out of heathen territory, first touches again the soil of the holy land, in the neighbourhood of Caesarea Philippi.” Weiss, Leben Jesu, ii. 256. Be this as it may, this visit to that region was an eventful one, marking a crisis or turning-point in the career of Jesus. We are at the beginning of the fifth act in the tragic drama: the shadow of the cross now falls across the path. Practically the ministry in Galilee is ended, and Jesus is here to collect His thoughts and to devote Himself to the disciplining of His disciples. Place and time invite to reflection and forecast, and afford leisure for a calm survey of the whole situation. Note that at this point Lk. again joins his fellow-evangelists in his narrative. We have missed him from xiv. 23 onwards (vide notes on Lk.).

Ver. 13. Ἐλθῶν: here again this verb

13. Ἐλθὼν δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἰς τὰ μέρη Καισαρείας τῆς Φιλίππου ἡρώτα τοὺς μαθητὰς αὐτοῦ, λέγων, "Τίνα με<sup>1</sup> λέγουσιν οἱ ἄνθρωποι εἶναι, τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου;" 14. Οἱ δὲ εἶπον, "Οἱ μὲν Ἰωάννην τὸν Βαπτιστὴν· ἄλλοι δὲ Ἡλίαν· ἕτεροι δὲ Ἰερεμίαν, ἣ ἓνα τῶν

<sup>1</sup> NB and most versions omit με, which has probably come in from the parallels. The omission of με requires the , after εἶναι to be deleted.

may mean not arriving at, but setting out for, or on the way: unterwegs, Schanz. So Grotius: cum proficisceretur, non cum venisset. Fritzsche dissents and renders: postquam venerat. Mk. has ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ to indicate where the conversation began. On the whole both expressions are elastic, and leave us free to locate the ensuing scene at any point on the road to Caesarea Philippi, say at the spot where the city and its surroundings came into view.—Καισαρείας τ. φ.: a notable city, romantically situated at the foot of the Lebanon range, near the main sources of the Jordan, in a limestone cave, in the province of Gaulonitis, ruled over by the Tetrarch Philip, enlarged and beautified by him with the Herodian passion for building, and furnished with a new name (Paneas before, changed into Caesarea of Philip to distinguish from Caesarea on the sea). "A place of exceedingly beautiful, picturesque surroundings, with which few spots in the holy land can be compared. What a rush of many waters; what a wealth and variety of vegetation!" Furrer, Wanderungen, 414. Vide also the description in Stanley's Sinai and Palestine, and in Professor G. A. Smith's Historical Geography of the Holy Land.—τίνα λέγουσιν, etc.: with this grand natural scene possibly or even probably (why else name it?) in view, Jesus asked His disciples a significant question meant to lead on to important disclosures. The question is variously reported by the synoptists, and it is not easy to decide between the forms. It would seem simpler and more natural to ask, "whom do, etc., that I am?" (με εἶναι, Mk. and Lk.). But, on the other hand, at a solemn moment Jesus might prefer to speak impersonally, and ask: "whom . . . that the Son of Man is?" (Mt.). That title, as hitherto employed by Him, would not prejudice the question. It had served rather to keep the question who He was, how His vocation was to be defined, in suspense till men had learned to attach new senses to old words. It is intrinsically unlikely that He would combine the two forms of the question, and ask: "whom, etc., that I, the Son of Man, am?" as in the T. R. That consideration does not settle what Mt. wrote, but it is satisfactory that the best MSS. leave out the με. The question shows that Jesus had been thinking of His past ministry and its results, and it may be taken for granted that He had formed His own estimate, and did not need to learn from the Twelve how He stood. He had come to the conclusion that He was practically without reliable following outside the disciple circle, and that conviction is the key to all that follows in this memorable scene. How the influential classes, the Pharisees, and the priests and political men = Sadducees, were affected was apparent. Nothing but hostility was to be looked for there. With the common people on the other hand He had to the last been popular. They liked His preaching, and they took eager advantage of His healing ministry. But had they got a definite faith about Him, as well as a kindly feeling towards Him; an idea well-rooted, likely to be lasting, epoch-making, the starting-point of a new religious movement? He did not believe they had, and He expected to have that impression confirmed by the answer of the Twelve, as indeed it was.

Ver. 14. Reply of disciples: the general effect being: opinions of the people, favourable but crude, without religious definiteness and depth, with no promise of future outcome.—Ἰωάν., Ἡλίαν., Ἰερεμ. Historic characters, recent or more ancient, redivivi—that the utmost possible: unable to rise to the idea of a wholly new departure, or a greater than any character in past history; conservatism natural to the common mind. All three personages whose return might be expected; the Baptist to continue his work cut short by Herod, Elijah to prepare the way and day of the Lord (Mal. iv. 5), Jeremiah to bring back the ark, etc., which (2 Maccab. ii. 1-12) he had hid in a cave. Jeremiah is classed with the other well-known prophets (ἣ ἓνα τ. π.), and the supporters of that hypothesis are called ἕτεροι, as if to distinguish them not merely numeriπροφητῶν." 15. λέγει αὐτοῖς, "Ὑμεῖς δὲ τίνα με λέγετε εἶναι;" f Ch. xxvi. 63. Heb. iii. 12; ix. 24; x. 31

 16. Ἀποκριθεὶς δὲ Σίμων Πέτρος εἶπε, "Σὺ εἶ ὁ Χριστός, ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ τοῦ ζῶντος." 17. Καὶ ἀποκριθεὶς<sup>1</sup> ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν αὐτῷ, (an attribute of God).
 "Μακάριος εἶ, Σίμων Βᾶρ' Ἰωνᾶ, ὅτι ἡ σὰρξ καὶ τὸ αἷμα οὐκ ἠπέκαλυσέ 50. Gal. i. 16. Eph. vi. 12. Heb. ii. 14 (the same phrase in all). h Ch. xi. 25. Gal. i. 10.

<sup>1</sup> ἀποκριθεὶς δε in  $\aleph$ BD, cursives.

cally (ἄλλοι) but generically: a lower type who did not connect Jesus with Messiah in any way, even as forerunner, but simply thought of Him as one in whom the old prophetic charism had been revived.

Vv. 15, 16. New question and answer.—Ver. 15. ὑμεῖς δὲ, and you? might have stood alone, perhaps did originally. Jesus invites the Twelve to give Him their own view. The first question was really only introductory to this. Jesus desires to make sure that He, otherwise without reliable following, has in His disciples at least the nucleus of a community with a definite religious conviction as to the meaning of His ministry and mission.—Ver. 16. Σίμων Πέτρος: now as always spokesman for the Twelve. There may be deeper natures among them (John?), but he is the most energetic and outspoken, though withal emotional rather than intellectual; strong, as passionate character is, rather than with the strength of thought, or of a will steadily controlled by a firm grasp of great principles: not a rock in the sense in which St. Paul was one.—σὺ εἶ . . . τοῦ ζῶντος: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God," in Mk. simply "Thou art the Christ," in Lk. "the Christ of God". One's first thought is that Mk. gives the original form of the reply; and yet in view of Peter's vehement temperament one cannot be perfectly sure of that. The form in Mt. certainly answers best to the reply of Jesus, vide on ver. 17. In any case the emphasis lies on that which is common to the three reports: the affirmation of the Christhood of Jesus. That was what differentiated the disciples from the favourably disposed multitude. The latter said in effect: at most a forerunner of Messiah, probably not even that, only a prophet worthy to be named alongside of the well-known prophets of Israel. The Twelve through Peter said: not merely a prophet or a forerunner of the Messiah, but the Messiah Himself. The remainder of the reply in Mt., whether spoken by Peter, or added by the evangelist (to correspond, as it were, to Son of Man in ver. 13), is simply expansion or epexegetis. If spoken by Peter it serves to show that he spoke with emotion, and with a sense of the gravity of the declaration. The precise theological value of the added clause cannot be determined.

Vv. 17-19. Solemn address of Jesus to Peter, peculiar to Mt., and of doubtful authenticity in the view of many modern critics, including Wendt (Die Lehre Jesu, i., p. 181), either an addendum by the evangelist or introduced at a later date by a reviser. This question cannot be fully discussed here. It must suffice to say that psychological reasons are in favour of something of the kind having been said by Jesus. It was a great critical moment in His career, at which His spirit was doubtless in a state of high tension. The firm tone of conviction in Peter's reply would give Him a thrill of satisfaction demanding expression. One feels that there is a hiatus in the narratives of Mk. and Lk.: no comment, on the part of Jesus, as if Peter had delivered himself of a mere trite commonplace. We may be sure the fact was not so. The terms in which Jesus speaks of Peter are characteristic—warm, generous, unstinted. The style is not that of an ecclesiastical editor laying the foundation for Church power and prelatial pretensions, but of a noble-minded Master eulogising in impassioned terms a loyal disciple. Even the reference to the "Church" is not unseasonable. What more natural than that Jesus, conscious that His labours, outside the disciple circle, have been fruitless, so far as permanent result is concerned, should fix His hopes on that circle, and look on it as the nucleus of a new regenerate Israel, having for its raison d'être that it accepts Him as the Christ? And the name for the new Israel, ἐκκλησία, in His mouth is not an anachronism. It is an old familiar name for the congregation of Israel, found in Deut. (xviii. 16; xxiii. 2) and Psalms (xxii. 26), both books well known to

i here and in σου, ἀλλ' ὁ πατήρ μου ὁ ἐν τοῖς<sup>1</sup> οὐρανοῖς. 18. Καγὼ δέ σοι λέγω, xviii. 17 in Gospel: ὅτι σὺ εἶ Πέτρος, καὶ ἐπὶ ταύτῃ τῇ πέτρᾳ οἰκοδομήσω μου τὴν
 j Lk. xxi. 36 (W.H.); ἑκκλησίαν, καὶ πύλαι ἁδου οὐ<sup>1</sup> κατισχύσουσιν αὐτῆς, 19. καὶ<sup>2</sup> δώσω
 xxiii. 23. κ Lk. xi. 52. σοὶ τὰς κ<sup>3</sup> κλεῖς<sup>3</sup> τῆς βασιλείας τῶν οὐρανῶν· καὶ ὃ ἐὰν<sup>4</sup> ἴ δῆσῃς ἐπὶ
 Rev. i. 18; iii. 7; ix. τῆς γῆς, ἔσται δεδεμένον ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς· καὶ ὃ ἐὰν<sup>5</sup> ἴ λύσῃς ἐπὶ i: xx. 1.
 1 Ch. xviii. 18.

<sup>1</sup> B omits τοῖς, which W.H. bracket.

<sup>2</sup> NBD omit καί. (W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> κλειδας in NBL (W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> ο αν in BD.

<sup>5</sup> ο αν in D.

Jesus.—Ver. 17. μακάριος: weighty word chosen to express a rare and high condition, virtue, or experience ("hoc vocabulo non solum beata, sed etiam rara simul conditio significatur," Beng.). It implies satisfaction with the quality of Peter's faith. Jesus was not easily satisfied as to that. He wanted no man to call Him Christ under a misapprehension; hence the prohibition in ver. 20. He congratulated Peter not merely on believing Him to be the Messiah, but on having an essentially right conception of what the title meant.—Σ. Βαριωνᾶ: full designation, name, and patronymic, suiting the emotional state of the speaker and the solemn character of the utterance, echo of an Aramaic source, or of the Aramaic dialect used then, if not always, by Jesus.—σὰρξ καὶ αἷμα: synonym in current Jewish speech for "man". "Infinitā frequentiā hanc formulam loquendi adhibent Scriptores Judaici, eaque homines Deo opponunt." Lightfoot, Hor. Heb. Vide ver. 23. There is a tacit contrast between Peter's faith and the opinions of the people just recited, as to source. Flesh and blood was the source of these opinions, and the fact is a clue to the meaning of the phrase. The contrast between the two sources of inspiration is not the very general abstract one between creaturely weakness and Divine power (Wendt, Die Begriffe Fleisch und Geist, p. 60). "Flesh and blood" covers all that can contribute to the formation of religious opinion of little intrinsic value—tradition, custom, fashion, education, authority, regard to outward appearance. Hilary, and after him Lutteroth, takes the reference to be to Christ's flesh and blood, and finds in the words the idea: if you had looked to my flesh you would have called me Christ, the Son of David, but higher guidance has taught you to call me Son of God.—ὁ πατήρ μου: this is to be taken not in a merely ontological sense, but ethically, so as to account for the quality of Peter's faith. The true conception of Christhood was inseparable from the true conception of God. Jesus had been steadily working for the transformation of both ideas, and He counted on the two finding entrance into the mind together. No one could truly conceive the Christ who had not learned to think of God as the Father and as His Father. There were thus two revelations in one: of God as Father, and of Christ by the Father. Peter had become a Christian.

Ver. 18. καγὼ: emphatic, something very important about to be said to Peter and about him.—πέτρος, πέτρα, a happy play of words. Both are appellatives to be translated "thou art a rock and on this rock," the two being represented by the same word in Aramaean (ܐܦܬܪܐ).

Elsewhere in the Gospels Πέτρος is a proper name, and πέτρα only is used in the sense of rock (vii. 24). What follows is in form a promise to Peter as reward of his faith. It is as personal as the most zealous advocates of Papal supremacy could desire. Yet it is as remote as the poles from what they mean. It is a case of extremes meeting. Christ did not fight to death against one form of spiritual despotism to put another, if possible worse, in its room. Personal in form, the sense of this famous logion can be expressed in abstract terms without reference to Peter's personality. And that sense, if Christ really spoke the word, must be simple, elementary, suitable to the initial stage; withal religious and ethical rather than ecclesiastical. The more ecclesiastical we make it, the more we play into the hands of those who maintain that the passage is an interpolation. I find in it three ideas: (1) The ἐκκλησία is to consist of men confessing Jesus to be the Christ. This is the import of ἐπὶ τ. τ. π. οἰκοδομήσω μου τ. ἐκ. Peter, believing that truth, is the foundation, τῆς γῆς, ἔσται λελυμένος ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς." 20. Τότε διεστειλατο<sup>1</sup> τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ<sup>2</sup> ἵνα μηδενὶ εἴπωσιν, ὅτι αὐτός ἐστιν Ἰησοῦς<sup>3</sup> ὁ Χριστός.

21. <sup>m</sup> Ἀπὸ τότε ἤρξατο ὁ Ἰησοῦς<sup>4</sup> δεῖκνυέναι τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ, m Ch. iv. 17; xxvi. 16. Lk. xvi. 16. ὅτι δεῖ αὐτὸν ἀπελθεῖν εἰς Ἱερουσόλυμα,<sup>5</sup> καὶ πολλὰ παθεῖν ἀπὸ τῶν πρεσβυτέρων καὶ ἀρχιερέων καὶ γραμματέων, καὶ ἀποκτανθῆναι, καὶ

<sup>1</sup> ἐπετιμήσεν in BD. W.H. place it in text with διεστειλατο in margin. Mk. has ἐπετιμήσεν in the corresponding place.

<sup>2</sup>  $\aleph$ BCD omit αὐτου, which so often stands in T. R. where the best texts want it.

<sup>3</sup>  $\aleph$ BLXΓΔ omit Ἰησους.

<sup>4</sup> For ο Ἰησους  $\aleph$ B, Cop. have Ἰησους Χριστος; D Ἰησους without the art. Vide below.

<sup>5</sup> εἰς I. before ἀπελθεῖν in  $\aleph$ BD cursives.

and the building is to be of a piece with the foundation. Observe the emphatic position of μου. The ἐκκλησία is Christ's; confessing Him as Christ in Peter's sense and spirit = being Christian. (2) The new society is to be = the kingdom realised on earth. This is the import of ver. 19, clause 1. The keys are the symbol of this identity. They are the keys of the gate without, not of the doors within. Peter is the gate-keeper, not the οἰκονόμος with a bunch of keys that open all doors in his hands (against Weiss) — κλειδούχου ἔργον τὸ εἰσάγειν, Euthy. Observe it is not the keys of the church but of the kingdom. The meaning is: Peter-like faith in Jesus as the Christ admits into the Kingdom of Heaven. A society of men so believing = the kingdom realised. (3) In the new society the righteousness of the kingdom will find approximate embodiment. This is the import of ver. 19, second clause. Binding and loosing, in Rabbinical dialect, meant forbidding and permitting to be done. The judgment of the Rabbis was mostly wrong: the reverse of the righteousness of the kingdom. The judgment of the new society as to conduct would be in accordance with the truth of things, therefore valid in heaven. That is what Jesus meant to say. Note the perfect participles δεδεμένος, λελυμένος = shall be a thing bound or loosed once for all. The truth of all three statements is conditional on the Christ spirit continuing to rule in the new society. Only on that condition is the statement about the πύλαι ᾄδου, ver. 18, clause 2, valid. What precisely the verbal meaning of the statement is—whether that the gates of Hades shall not prevail in conflict against it, as ordinarily understood; or merely that the gates, etc., shall not be stronger than it, without thought of a conflict (Weiss), is of minor moment; the point is that it is not an absolute promise. The ἐκκλησία will be strong, enduring, only so long as the faith in the Father and in Christ the Son, and the spirit of the Father and the Son, reign in it. When the Christ spirit is weak the Church will be weak, and neither creeds nor governments, nor keys, nor ecclesiastical dignities will be of much help to her.

Ver. 20. διεστειλατο (T. R.), "charged" (A. V.) not necessarily with any special emphasis = graviter interdicere, but = monuit (Loesner and Fritzsche). Cf. Heb. xii. 20, where a stronger sense seems required. For ἐπετίμησε in BD here and in Mk. Euthy. gives κατησφαλίσατο = to make sure by injunction.—τοῖς μαθηταῖς: all the disciples are supposed to say amen to Peter's confession, thinking of God and of Jesus as he thought, though possibly not with equal emphasis of conviction.—ἵνα . . . ὁ Χριστός: no desire to multiply hastily recruits for the new community, supreme regard to quality. Jesus wanted no man to call Him Christ till he knew what he was saying: no hearsay or echoed confession of any value in His eyes.—αὐτός, the same concerning whom current opinions have just been reported (ver. 14). It was hardly necessary to take pains to prevent the faith in His Messiahship from spreading prematurely in a crude form. Few would call such an one as Jesus Christ, save by the Holy Ghost. The one temptation thereto lay in the generous beneficence of Jesus.

Vv. 21-28. Announcement of the

- ο Mk viii. 32. Cf. Acta xvii. 5; xviii. 26. ο Cf. Heb. viii. 12. ρ Mk viii. 33. Rom. viii. 5. Phil. ii. 5; iii. 19.
22. καὶ ἡ προσλαβόμενος αὐτὸν ὁ Πέτρος ἤρξατο ἐπιτιμᾶν αὐτῷ λέγων,<sup>1</sup> “Ὁ ἰλεὺς σοι, κύριε· οὐ μὴ ἔσται σοι τοῦτο.” 23. Ὁ δὲ στραφεὶς εἶπε τῷ Πέτρῳ, “Ὑπαγε ὀπίσω μου, Σατανᾶ, σκάνδαλόν μου εἶ.<sup>2</sup> ὅτι οὐ φρονεῖς τὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἀλλὰ τὰ

<sup>1</sup> For ἡρ. ἐπιτιμᾶν α. λεγων, which conforms to Mk., B has λεγει α. ἐπιτιμῶν (W.H. marg.).

<sup>2</sup> εἰ ἐμου in  $\Sigma$ B (Tisch., W.H.).

Passion with relative conversation (Mk. viii. 31—ix. 1; Lk. ix. 22-27).—Ver. 21. ἀπὸ τότε ἤρξατο (vide iv. 17) marks pointedly a new departure in the form of explicit intimation of an approaching final and fatal crisis. Time suitable. Disciples could now bear it, it could not be much longer delayed. Jesus could now face the crisis with composure, having been satisfied by Peter's confession that His labour was not going to be in vain. He then began to show, etc., for this was only the first of several communications of the same kind.—

Χριστὸς after Ἰησοῦς in  $\Sigma$ B is an intrinsically probable reading, as suiting the solemnity of the occasion and greatly enhancing the impressiveness of the announcement. Jesus, the Christ, to be crucified! But one would have expected the article before Χρ.—πολλὰ παθεῖν, the general fact.—ἀπὸ . . . γραμματέων, the three constituent parts of the Sanhedrim—elders, priests, scribes.—ἀποκτανθῆναι: one hard special fact, be killed.—ἐγερθῆναι: this added to make the other fact not altogether intolerable.

Ver. 22. Peter here appears in a new character; a minute ago speaking under inspiration from heaven, now under inspiration from the opposite quarter.—ἤρξατο, began to chide or admonish. He did not get far. As soon as his meaning became apparent he encountered prompt, abrupt, peremptory contradiction.—ἰλεὺς σοι: Elsner renders sis bono placidoque animo, but most (Erasmus, Grotius, Kypke, Fritzsche, etc.) take it = absit! God avert it! Vehement utterance of a man confounded and horrified. Perfectly honest and in one sense thoroughly creditable, but suggesting the question: Did Peter after all call Jesus Christ in the true sense? The answer must be: Yes, ethically. He understood what kind of man was fit to be a Christ. But he did not yet understand what kind of treatment such a man might expect from the world. A noble, benignant, really righteous man Messiah must be, said Peter; but why a man of sorrow he had yet to learn.—οὐ μὴ ἔσται, future of perfect assurance: it will not, cannot be.—Ver. 23. Ὑπαγε ὀ. μ. Σ.: tremendous crushing reply of the Master, showing how much He felt the temptation; calm on the surface, deep down in the soul a very real struggle. Some of the Fathers (Origen, Jerome) strive to soften the severity of the utterance by taking Satanas as an appellative = ἀντικείμενος, adversarius, contrarius, and pointing out that in the Temptation in the wilderness Jesus says to Satan simply Ὑπαγε = depart, but to Peter Ὑπ. ὀπίσω μου = take thy place behind me and be follower, not leader. But these refinements only weaken the effect of a word which shows that Jesus recognises here His old enemy in a new and even more dangerous form. For none are more formidable instruments of temptation than well-meaning friends, who care more for our comfort than for our character.—σκάνδαλον: not “offensive to me,” but “a temptation to me to offend,” to do wrong; a virtual apology for using the strong word Σατανᾶ.—οὐ φρονεῖς τὰ, etc., indicates the point of temptation = non stas a Dei partibus (Wolf), or φρονεῖν, etc. = studere rebus, etc. (Kypke), to be on God's side, or to study the Divine interest instead of the human. The important question is: What precisely are the two interests? They must be so conceived as not entirely to cancel the eulogium on Peter's faith, which was declared to be not of man but of God. Meyer's comment on τὰ τ. ἀ.—concerned about having for Messiah a mere earthly hero and prince (so Weiss also)—is too wide. We must restrict the phrase to the instinct of self-preservation = save your life at all hazards. From Christ's point of view that was the import of Peter's suggestion; preference of natural life to duty = God's interest. Peter himself did not see that these were the alternatives; he thought τῶν ἀνθρώπων.” 24. Τότε ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπε τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ, <sup>q</sup> “Εἴ τις θέλει ὀπίσω μου ἐλθεῖν, <sup>a</sup> ἀπαρνησάσθω ἑαυτόν, καὶ ἀράτω τὸν σταυρὸν αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἀκολουθείτω μοι. 25. ὃς γὰρ ἂν <sup>1</sup> θέλῃ τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ σῶσαι, ἀπολέσει αὐτήν· ὃς δ’ ἂν ἀπολέσῃ τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ ἕνεκεν ἐμοῦ, εὐρήσει αὐτήν· 26. τί γὰρ ὠφελεῖται <sup>2</sup> ἄνθρωπος, ἐὰν τὸν κόσμον ὅλον κερδήσῃ, τὴν δὲ ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ ζημιωθῇ; ἢ τί δώσει ἄνθρωπος ἀντάλλαγμα τῆς ψυχῆς αὐτοῦ; 27. μέλλει γὰρ ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἔρχεσθαι ἐν τῇ δόξῃ τοῦ πατρὸς αὐτοῦ μετὰ τῶν ἀγγέλων αὐτοῦ· καὶ τότε ἀποδώσει ἐκάστῳ κατὰ τὴν πρᾶξιν αὐτοῦ. 28. Ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, εἰσὶ τινες τῶν ὧδε ἐστῆκότων, <sup>3</sup> οἵτινες οὐ μὴ γέυσονται θανάτου, ἕως ἂν ἴδωσι τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἔρχόμενον ἐν τῇ βασιλείᾳ αὐτοῦ.”

Rom. viii. 13. w John viii. 52. Heb. ii. 9. x Lk. xxiii. 42.

<sup>1</sup> ean in  $\aleph$ BC. <sup>2</sup> ὠφελήθησεται in  $\aleph$ BL cursives. <sup>3</sup> ἐστῶτων in  $\aleph$ BCDL $\Sigma$ .

the two opposite interests compatible, and both attainable.

Vv. 24-28. General instruction on the subject of the two interests.—Ver. 24. εἶπε τοῖς μαθ.: in calm, self-collected, didactic tone Jesus proceeds to give the disciples, in a body, a lesson arising out of the situation.—εἴ τις θέλει: wishes, no compulsion; οὐ βιάζομαι, Chrys., who remarks on the wisdom of Jesus in leaving every man free, and trusting to the attraction of the life: αὐτῆ τοῦ πράγματος ἢ φύσις ἰκανὴ ἐφελκύσασθαι.—ἀπαρνησάσθω ἑαυτόν: here only, intimates that discipleship will call for self-denial, or self-subordination. Chrys. illustrates the meaning by considering what it is to deny another = not to assist him, bewail him or suffer on his account when he is in distress.—τὸν σταυρὸν looks like a trait introduced after Christ's passion. It need not be, however. Punishment by crucifixion was known to the Jews through the Romans, and it might be used by Jesus as the symbol of extreme torment and disgrace, even though He did not then know certainly that He Himself should meet death in that particular form. It became a common expression, but the phrase ἀράτω τ. σ. would sound harsh and startling when first used. Vide on Mt. x. 38.—Ver. 25. Vide x. 39. The Caesarea crisis was the most appropriate occasion for the first promulgation of this great ethical principle. It was Christ's first contribution towards unfolding the significance of His suffering, setting it forth as the result of a fidelity to righteousness incumbent on all.

Ver. 26. This and the following verses suggest aids to practice of the philosophy of “dying to live”. The statement in this verse is self-evident in the sphere of the lower life. It profits not to gain the whole world if you lose your life, for you cannot enjoy your possession; a life lost cannot be recovered at any price. Jesus wishes His disciples to understand that the same law obtains in the higher life: that the soul, the spiritual life, is incommensurable with any outward possession however great, and if forfeited the loss is irrevocable. This is one of the chief texts containing Christ's doctrine of the absolute worth of man as a moral subject. For the man who grasps it, it is easy to be a hero and face any experience. To Jesus Christ it was a self-evident truth.—ζημιωθῇ, not suffer injury to, but forfeit. Grotius says that the verb in classics has only the dative after it = mulctare morte, but Kypke and Elsner cite instances from Herod., Dion., Hal., Themis., etc., of its use with accusative.—ἀντάλλαγμα: something given in exchange. Cf. 1 Kings xxi. 2, Job xxviii. 15 (Sept.), a price to buy back the life lower or higher; both impossible.—Ver. 27. μέλλει points to something near and certain; note the emphatic position.—ἔρχεσθαι ἐν τ. δ., the counterpart experience to the passion; stated objectively in reference to the Son of Man, the passion spoken of in the second person (ver. 21). In Mk. both are objectively put; but the disciples took the reference as personal (Mk. viii. 32).—Ver. 27. This belongs to a third group of texts to be taken into account in an attempt

<sup>a</sup> Mk. ix. 8. XVII. 1. ΚΑΙ μεθ' ἡμέρας ἕξ παραλαμβάνει ὁ Ἰησοῦς τὸν Πέτρον
 Lk. xxiv.
<sup>51</sup> (T.R.) καὶ Ἰάκωβον καὶ Ἰωάννην τὸν ἀδελφὸν αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἀναφέρει αὐτοὺς
<sup>b</sup> Mk. ix. 2.
 Rom. xii. εἰς ὄρος ὕψηλόν κατ' ἰδίαν. 2. καὶ μετεμορφώθη ἔμπροσθεν αὐτῶν,
 2. 2 Cor.
 iii. 18. καὶ ἔλαμψε τὸ πρόσωπον αὐτοῦ ὡς ὁ ἥλιος, τὰ δὲ ἰμάτια αὐτοῦ to fix the import of the title—those which refer to apocalyptic glory in terms drawn from Daniel vii. 13.—τότε ἀποδώσει: the Son of Man comes to make final awards. The reference to judgment comes in to brace up disciples to a heroic part. It is an aid to spirits not equal to this part in virtue of its intrinsic nobleness; yet not much of an aid to those to whom the heroic life is not in itself an attraction. The absolute worth of the true life is Christ's first and chief line of argument; this is merely subsidiary.—Ver. 28. A crux interpretum, supposed by some to refer to the Transfiguration (Hilary, Chrys., Euthy., Theophy., etc.); by others to the destruction of Jerusalem (Wetstein, etc.); by others again to the origins of the Church (Calvin, Grotius, etc.). The general meaning can be inferred with certainty from the purpose to furnish an additional incentive to fidelity. It is: Be of good courage, there will be ample compensation for trial soon; for some of you even before you die. This sense excludes the Transfiguration, which came too soon to be compensatory. The uncertainty comes in in connection with the form in which the general truth is stated. As to that, Christ's speech was controlled not merely by His own thoughts but by the hopes of the future entertained by His disciples. He had to promise the advent of the Son of Man in His Kingdom or of the Kingdom of God in power (Mk.) within a generation, whatever His own forecast as to the future might be. That might postulate a wider range of time than some of His words indicate, just as some of His utterances and His general spirit postulate a wide range in space for the Gospel (universalism) though He conceived of His own mission as limited to Israel. If the logion concerning the Church (ver. 18) be genuine, Jesus must have conceived a Christian era to be at least a possibility, for why trouble about founding a Church if the wind-up was to come in a few years? The words of Jesus about the future provide for two possible alternatives: for a near advent and for an indefinitely postponed advent. His promises naturally contemplate the former; much of His teaching about the kingdom easily fits into the latter.—

γεύονται θ.: a Hebrew idiom, but not exclusively so. For examples of the figure of tasting applied to experiences, vide Elsner in Mk. For Rabbinical use, vide Schöttgen and Wetstein.—ἕως ἂν ἴδωσι, subjunctive after εἰ. ἂν as usual in classics and N. T. in a clause referring to a future contingency depending on a verb referring to future time.

CHAPTER XVII. THE TRANSFIGURATION; THE EPILEPTIC BOY; THE TEMPLE TRIBUTE. Three impressive tableaux connected by proximity in time, a common preternatural aspect, and deep moral pathos.

Vv. 1-13. The Transfiguration (Mk. ix. 2-13, Lk. ix. 28-36).—Ver. 1. μεθ' ἡμέρας ἕξ. This precise note of time looks like exact recollection of a strictly historical incident. Yet Holtzmann (H. C.) finds even in this a mythical element, based on Exodus xxiv. 16: the six days of Mt. and Mk. and the eight days of Lk., various expressions of the thought that between the confession of the one disciple and the experience of the three a sacred week intervened. Of these days we have no particulars, but on the principle that in preternatural experiences the subjective and the objective correspond, we may learn the psychological antecedents of the Transfiguration from the Transfiguration itself. The thoughts and talk of the company of Jesus were the prelude of the vision. A thing in itself intrinsically likely, for after such solemn communications as those at Caesarea Philippi it was not to be expected that matters would go on in the Jesus-circle as if nothing had happened. In those days Jesus sought to explain from the O. T. the δεῖ of xvi. 21, showing from Moses, Prophets, and Psalms (Lk. xxiv. 44) the large place occupied by suffering in the experience of the righteous. This would be quite as helpful to disciples summoned to bear the cross as any of the thoughts in xvi. 25-28.—Πέτρ., Ἰάκ., Ἰωάν.: Jesus takes with Him the three disciples found most capable to understand and sympathise. So in Gethsemane. Such differences exist in all disciple-circles, and they cannot be ignored by the teacher.—ἀναφέρει, leadeth up; in this sense not usual; of sacrifice in Jas. ii. 21 and in

ἐγένετο λευκὰ ὡς τὸ φῶς. 3. καὶ ἰδοῦ, ὤφθησαν<sup>1</sup> αὐτοῖς Μωσῆς<sup>c</sup> καὶ Ἠλίας, μετ' αὐτοῦ<sup>c</sup> συλλαλοῦντες.<sup>2</sup> 4. ἀποκριθεὶς δὲ ὁ Πέτρος εἶπε τῷ Ἰησοῦ, "Κύριε, <sup>d</sup>καλὸν ἔστιν ἡμᾶς ὧδε εἶναι· εἰ θέλεις, ποιήσωμεν<sup>3</sup> ὧδε τρεῖς σκηνάς, σοὶ μίαν, καὶ Μωσῆι μίαν, καὶ μίαν Ἠλία."<sup>c</sup> 5. Ἐτι αὐτοῦ λαλοῦντος, ἰδοῦ, νεφέλη φωτεινὴ ἐπεσκίασεν αὐτούς· καὶ ἰδοῦ, φωνὴ ἐκ τῆς νεφέλης, λέγουσα, "Οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ<sup>d</sup> υἱός μου ὁ ἀγαπητός, ἐν ᾧ εὐδόκησα· αὐτοῦ ἀκούετε."<sup>4</sup> 6. Καὶ

<sup>c</sup> Acts xxv 12 (μετά τιμος). Mk. ix. 4. Lk. ix. 30; xxii. 4 (dat.). Lk. iv. 36 (προς ἀλλήλους). Ch. xviii. 8 parall.; xvi. 24. Rom. xiv. 21. 1 Cor. vii. 8; ix. 15.

<sup>1</sup> ὠφθη NBD, which, the verb coming before the two nom., is legitimate. The T. R. is a grammatical correction of ancient revisers.

<sup>2</sup> NB place μετ' αὐτου after συλλαλοῦντες.

<sup>3</sup> ποιήσω in NBC. Vide below.

<sup>4</sup> ἀκούετε αὐτου in NBD 33.

Heb. vii. 27, xiii. 15.—ὄρος ὑψηλόν: Tabor the traditional mountain, a tradition originating in fourth century with Cyril of Jerusalem and Jerome. Recent opinion favours Hermon. All depends on whether the six days were spent near Caesarea Philippi or in continuous journeying. Six days would take them far. "The Mount of Transfiguration does not concern geography"—Holtz. (H. C.).—Ver. 2. μετεμορφώθη, transfiguratus est, Vulgate; became altered in appearance. Such transformation in exalted states of mind is predicated of others, e.g., of Iamblichus (Eunapius in I. Vitâ 22, cited by Elsner), and of Adam when naming the beasts (Fabricius, Cod. Pseud. V. T., p. 10).—ἐμπροσθεν αὐτῶν, so as to be visible to them, vide vi. 1. Luke's narrative seems to imply that the three disciples were asleep at the beginning of the scene, but awakened up before its close.—καὶ ἔλαμψε . . . φῶς: these words describe the aspect of the transformed person; face sun-bright, raiment pure white.—Ver. 3. καὶ ἰδοῦ introduces a leading and remarkable feature in the scene: ὤφθη αὐτοῖς, there appeared to the three disciples, not necessarily an absolutely real, objective presence of Moses and Elias. All purposes would be served by an appearance in vision. Sufficient objectivity is guaranteed by the vision being enjoyed by all the three, which would have been improbable if purely subjective. Recognition of Moses and Elias was of course involved in the vision. For a realistic view of the occurrence the question arises, how was recognition possible? Euthy. Zig. says the disciples had read descriptions of famous men, including Moses and Elias, in old Hebrew books. Another suggestion is that Moses appeared with the law in his hand, and Elias in his fiery chariot.—συλλαλοῦντες μ. ἀ., conversing with Jesus, and, it goes without saying (Lk. does say it), on the theme uppermost in all minds, the main topic of recent conversations, the cross; the vision, in its dramatis personæ and their talk, reflecting the state of mind of the seers.—Ver. 4. ἀποκριθεὶς ὁ Π. Peter to the front again, but not greatly to his credit.—καλὸν ἔστιν, etc., either it is good for us to be here = the place is pleasant—so usually; or it is well that we are here—we the disciples to serve you and your visitants—Weiss and Holtzmann (H. C.). Pricaeus, in illustration of the former, cites Anacreon:

Παρὰ τὴν σκιὴν Βάθυλλε
Κάθισον· καλὸν τὸ δένδρον.
Τίς ἂν οὖν ὄρων παρέλθοι Καταγώγιον τοιοῦτον.

—Ode 22.

This sense—amoenus est, in quo commoremur, locus, Fritzsche—is certainly the more poetical, but not necessarily on that account the truer to the thought of the speaker, in view of the remark of Lk. omitted in Mt., that Peter did not know what he was saying.—ποιήσω, deliberative substantive with θέλεις preceding and without ἵνα; the singular—shall I make?—suits the forwardness of the man; it is his idea, and he will carry it out himself.—τρεῖς σκηνάς: material at hand, branches of trees, shrubs, etc. Why three? One better for persons in converse. The whole scheme a stupidity. Peter imagined that Moses and Elias had come to stay. Chrys. suggests that Peter here indirectly renews the policy of resistance to going up to Jerusalem (Hom. lvi.).

Vv. 5-8. νεφέλη φωτεινὴ, a luminous

c Ch. xvii. 39. Lk. v. 16 (same const.).
 f Ch. xxvii. 54.
 g Ch. xxviii. 5, 10.
 h Ch. viii i. (with anon. more commonly with εκα, as here in W.H.). i here only in Gospels and in Acts (vii. 31, etc.).

ἀκούσαντες οἱ μαθηταὶ ἔπεσον ἐπὶ πρόσωπον αὐτῶν, καὶ ἔφοβήθησαν σφόδρα. 7. καὶ προσελθὼν<sup>1</sup> ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἤψατο αὐτῶν, καὶ εἶπεν, “Ἐγέρθητε καὶ μὴ φοβεῖσθε.” 8. Ἐπάραντες δὲ τοὺς ὀφθαλμούς αὐτῶν, οὐδένα εἶδον, εἰ μὴ τὸν Ἰησοῦν μόνον.
 9. Καὶ<sup>2</sup> καταβαινόντων αὐτῶν ἀπὸ<sup>2</sup> τοῦ ὄρους, ἐνετείλατο αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, λέγων, “Μηδεὶ εἶπητε τὸ ὄραμα, ἕως οὗ ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἐκ νεκρῶν ἀναστῆ.”<sup>3</sup> 10. Καὶ ἐπηρώτησαν αὐτὸν οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ,<sup>4</sup> λέγοντες, “Τί οὖν οἱ γραμματεῖς λέγουσιν, ὅτι

<sup>1</sup> προσηλθεν ο l. και in ΣBD; αφαμενος αυτων ειπεν in ΣB.

<sup>2</sup> εκ in ΣBCD al.; απο in Σ.

<sup>3</sup> εγερθη in BD; αναστη in ΣC. W.H. place the former in the text and the latter in margin.

<sup>4</sup> αυτου in BCD but wanting in ALZ 33.

cloud, still a cloud capable of casting a shadow, though a faint one (“non admodum atram,” Fritzsche). Some, thinking a shadow incompatible with the light, render επισκίασεν tegebatur, circumdabat. Loesner cites passages from Philo in support of this meaning.—αὐτοῖς. Whom? the disciples? Jesus, Moses, and Elias? all the six? or the two celestial visitants alone? All these views have been held. The second the more probable, but impossible to be certain.—καὶ ἰδοῦ, again introducing a main feature: first the visitants, now the voice from heaven. Relation of the ear to the voice the same as that of the eye to the visitants.—οὗτος: the voice spoken this time about Jesus; at the baptism to Him (Mk. i. 11), meant for the ear of the three disciples. The voice to be taken in connection with the announcement of the coming passion. Jesus God’s well-beloved as self-sacrificing.—ἀκούετε αὐτοῦ: to be taken in the same connection = hear Him when He speaks to you of the cross. Hunc audite, nempe solum, plena fide, perfectissimo obsequio, universi apostoli et pastores praesertim, Elsner.—Ver. 6. καὶ ἀκούσαντες, etc.: divine voices terrify poor mortals, especially when they echo and reinforce deep moving thoughts within.—Ver. 7. ἀψάμενος . . . εἶπεν: a touch and a word, human and kindly, from Jesus, restore strength and composure.—Ver. 8. And so ends the vision.—ἐπάραντες τ. ὀ., etc., raising their eyes they see no one but Jesus. Moses and Elias gone, and Jesus in His familiar aspect; the dazzling brightness about face and garments vanished.

Vv. 9-13. Conversation while descending the hill.—Ver. 9. μηδεὶ εἶπητε: injunction of secrecy. The reason of the injunction lies in the nature of the experience. Visions are for those who are prepared for them. It boots not to relate them to those who are not fit to receive them. Even the three were only partially fit; witness their terror (ver. 6).—τὸ ὄραμα, the vision, justifying the view above given of the experience, held, among others, by Elsner, Herder, Bleek and Weiss. Herder has some fine remarks on the analogy between the experiences of Jesus at His baptism and on the Mount, six days after the announcement at Caesarea Philippi, and those of other men at the time of moral decisions in youth and in the near presence of death (vide his Vom Erlöser der Menschen, §§ 18, 19).—ἕως οὗ, followed by subjunctive without ἄν; in this case (cf. xvi. 28) one of future contingency at a past time. The optative is used in classics (vide Burton, § 324). Not till the resurrection. It is not implied that Jesus was very desirous that they should then begin to speak, but only that they could then speak of the vision intelligently and intelligibly. Christ’s tone seems to have been that of one making light of the recent experience (as in Lk. x. 20).—Ver. 10. τί οὖν, etc.: does the οὖν refer to the prohibition in ver. 9 (Meyer), or to the appearance of Moses and Elias, still in the minds of the three disciples, and the lateness of their coming (Euthy., Weiss), or to the shortness of their stay? (Grotius, Fritzsche, Olsh., Bleek, etc.). Difficult to decide, owing to fragmentariness of report; but it is

Ἡλίαν δεῖ ἔλθειν πρῶτον;” 11. Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς<sup>1</sup> ἀποκριθεὶς εἶπεν αὐτοῖς,<sup>2</sup> “Ἡλίας μὲν ἔρχεται πρῶτον,<sup>3</sup> καὶ ἁποκαταστήσει πάντα· j vide at Ch xii. 13. 12. λέγω δὲ ὑμῖν, ὅτι Ἡλίας ἤδη ἦλθε, καὶ οὐκ ἐπέγνωσαν αὐτόν, ἀλλ’ ἐποίησαν ἐν αὐτῷ ὅσα ἠθέλησαν· οὕτω καὶ ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου μέλλει πάσχειν ὑπ’ αὐτῶν.” 13. Τότε συνήκαν οἱ μαθηταί, ὅτι περὶ Ἰωάννου τοῦ Βαπτιστοῦ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς.

14. Καὶ ἐλθόντων αὐτῶν<sup>4</sup> πρὸς τὸν ὄχλον, προσήλθεν αὐτῷ ἄνθρω-

<sup>1</sup> ᾤ BDLZ omit Ἰησοῦς.

<sup>2</sup> BD omit αυτοῖς.

<sup>3</sup> ᾤ BD omit πρῶτον, which probably has come in from ver. 10.

<sup>4</sup> ᾤ BZ sah. omit αὐτῶν.

most natural to take οὖν in connection with preceding verse, only not as referring to the prohibition of speech pro tem., but to the apparently slighting tone in which Jesus spoke. If the recent occurrence is not of vital importance, why then do the scribes say etc.? To lay the emphasis (with Weiss) on πρῶτον, as if the disciples were surprised that Moses and Elias had not come sooner, before the Christ, is a mistake. The advent would appear to them soon enough to satisfy the requirements of the scribes—just at the right time, after they had recognised in Jesus the Christ = Thou art the Christ we know, and lo! Elias is here to prepare the way for Thy public recognition and actual entry into Messianic power and glory. The sudden disappearance of the celestials would tend to deepen the disappointment created by the Master’s chilling tone, so that there is some ground for finding in οὖν a reference to that also.—Ver 11. ἔρχεται: present, as in ii. 4, praesens pro futuro, Raphel (Annotationes in S.S.), who cites instances of this enallage temporis from Xenophon. Wolf (Curæ Phil.), referring to Raphel, prefers to find in the present here no note of time, but only of the order of coming as between Elias and Christ. It is a didactic, timeless present. So Weiss.—ἀποκαταστήσει πάντα. This word occurs in Sept., Mal. iv. 5, for which stands in Lk. i. 17: ἐπιστρέψαι; the reference is to restitution of right moral relations between fathers and children, etc. Raphel cites instances of similar use from Polyb. The function of Elias, as conceived by the scribes, was to lead Israel to the Great Repentance. Vide on this, Weber, Die Lehren des T., pp. 337-8.—Ver. 12. λέγω δὲ: Jesus finds the prophecy as to the advent of Elias fulfilled in John the Baptist, so still further reducing the significance of the late vision. The contrast between the mechanical literalism of the scribes and the free spiritual interpretation of Jesus comes out here. Our Lord expected no literal coming of Elijah, such as the Patristic interpreters (Hilary, Chrys., Theophy., Euthy., etc.) supposed Him to refer to in ver. 11. The Baptist was all the Elijah He looked for.—οὐκ ἐπέγνωσαν: they did not recognise him as Elijah, especially those who professionally taught that Elijah must come, the scribes.—ἀλλ’ ἐποίησαν ἐν αὐτῷ, etc. Far from recognising in him Elijah, and complying with his summons to repentance, they murdered him in resentment of the earnestness of his efforts towards a moral ἀποκατάστασις (Herod, as representing the Zeitgeist).—ἐν αὐτῷ: literally, in him, not classical, but similar construction found in Gen. xi. 14, and elsewhere (Sept.).—οὕτως: Jesus reads His own fate in the Baptist’s. How thoroughly He understood His time, and how free He was from illusions!—Ver. 13. τότε συνήκαν: the parallel drawn let the three disciples see who the Elijah was, alluded to by their Master. What a disenchantment: not the glorified visitant of the night vision, but the beheaded preacher of the wilderness, the true Elijah!

Vv. 14-21. The epileptic boy (Mk. ix. 14-29; Lk. ix. 37-43).—Very brief report compared with Mk.—Ver. 14. ἐλθόντων: the αὐτῶν of T. R. might easily be omitted as understood from the connection.—γονυπετῶν, literally, falling upon the knees, in which sense it would naturally take the dative (T. R., αὐτῷ); here used actively with accusative = to beknee him (Schanz, Weiss).—Ver. 15. σαληνιάζεται, he is moonstruck; the symptoms as described are those of epilepsy, which were supposed to become aggravated with the phases of

κ with τινα here (W. H. and I in Mk. x. 17; with τινας in Mk. x. 17; with τινας, Ch. xxvii. 29. 1 Phil. ii. 15. (Deut. xxiii. 5). ἔως πότε ἔσομαι μεθ' ὑμῶν<sup>3</sup>; ἔως πότε ἀνέξομαι ὑμῶν; φέρετέ μοι αὐτὸν ὡς δε.<sup>2</sup> 18. Καὶ ἐπετίμησεν αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ ἐξῆλθεν ἀπ' αὐτοῦ τὸ δαιμόνιον, καὶ ἐθεραπεύθη ὁ παῖς ἀπὸ τῆς ὥρας ἐκείνης. 19. Τότε προσελθόντες οἱ μαθηταὶ τῷ Ἰησοῦ κατ' ἰδίαν εἶπον, "Διατί ἡμεῖς οὐκ ἠδυνήθημεν ἐκβαλεῖν αὐτό;" 20. Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς <sup>4</sup> εἶπεν<sup>5</sup> αὐτοῖς, "Διὰ τὴν ἀπιστίαν<sup>6</sup> ὑμῶν. ἀμὴν γὰρ λέγω ὑμῖν,

<sup>1</sup> αὐτον in nearly all uncials. αὐτῷ is a "mechanical repetition" (Weiss) of the previous αὐτῷ.

<sup>2</sup> εχει in  $\aleph$ BLZ; as the more usual word it is to be suspected. W.H. introduce it with hesitation.

<sup>3</sup> μεθ ὑμων εσομαι in  $\aleph$ BCDZ 33.

<sup>4</sup>  $\aleph$ BD 33, omit Ἰησοῦς.

<sup>5</sup>  $\aleph$ BD 33, etc., have λεγει.

<sup>6</sup> ολιγοπιστιαν in  $\aleph$ B cursives, and adopted by most editors, though απιστιαν in CD and other uncials, as involving a severer reflection, has much to recommend it. The tendency would be to tone down.

the moon (cf. iv. 24).—κακῶς πάσχει (ἔχει W. H. text), good Greek. Raphael (Annot.) gives examples from Polyb. = suffers badly.—Ver. 16. τοῖς μαθηταῖς: the nine left behind when Jesus and the three ascended the Mount. The fame of Jesus and His disciples as healers had reached the neighbourhood, wherever it was.—οὐκ ἠδυνήθησαν: the case baffled the seven of the Galilean mission.—Ver. 17. ὦ γενεά: exclamation of impatience and disappointment, as if of one weary in well-doing, or averse to such work just then. Who are referred to we can only conjecture, and the guesses are various. Probably more or less all present: parent, disciples, scribes (Mk. ix. 14). Jesus was far away in spirit from all, lonely, worn out, and longing for the end, as the question following (ἔως πότε, etc.) shows. It is the utterance of a fine-strung nature, weary of the dullness, stupidity, spiritual insusceptibility (ἀπιστος), not to speak of the moral perversity (διστραμμένη) all around Him. But we must be careful not to read into it peevishness or ungraciousness. Jesus had not really grown tired of doing good, or lost patience with the bruised reed and smoking taper. The tone of His voice, gently reproachful, would show that. Perhaps the complaint was spoken in an undertone, just audible to those near, and then, aloud: φέρετέ μοι: bring him to me, said to the crowd generally, therefore plural.—Ver. 18. τὸ δαιμόνιον: the first intimation in the narrative that it is a case of possession, and a hint as to the genesis of the theory of possession. Epilepsy presents to the eye the aspect of the body being in the possession of a foreign will, and all diseases with which the notion of demoniacal possession was associated have this feature in common. "Judæis usitatissimum erat morbos quosdam graviore, eos praesertim, quibus vel distortum est corpus vel mens turbata et agitata phrenesi, malis spiritibus attribueret." Lightfoot, Hor. Heb., ad loc. The αὐτῷ after ἐπετίμησεν naturally refers to the demon. This reference to an as yet unmentioned subject Weiss explains by the influence of Mk.

Ver. 19. κατ' ἰδίαν: the disciples have some private talk with the Master as to what has just happened.—διατί οὐκ ἠδυνήθημεν: the question implies that the experience was exceptional; in other words that on their Galilean mission, and, perhaps, at other times, they had possessed and exercised healing power.—Ver. 20. διὰ τὴν ολιγοπιστιαν, here only, and just on that account to be preferred to ἀπιστιαν (T. R.); a word coined to express the fact exactly: too little faith for the occasion (cf. xiv. 31)

ἐὰν ἔχητε πίστιν ὡς κόκκον σινάπεως, ἐρεῖτε τῷ ὄρει τούτῳ Μετάβηθι

“ἐντεῦθεν<sup>1</sup> * ἐκεῖ, καὶ μεταβήσεται· καὶ οὐδὲν ἄδυνατῆσει ὑμῖν.”<sup>2</sup>

21. τοῦτο δὲ τὸ γένος οὐκ ἐκπορεύεται, εἰ μὴ ἐν προσευχῇ καὶ νηστείᾳ.”<sup>2</sup>

22. ἌΝΑΣΤΡΕΦΟΜΕΝΩΝ<sup>3</sup> δὲ αὐτῶν ἐν τῇ Γαλιλαίᾳ, εἶπεν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Μέλλει ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου παραδίδοσθαι εἰς χεῖρας ἀνθρώπων, 23, καὶ ἀποκτενοῦσιν αὐτόν, καὶ τῇ τρίτῃ ἡμέρᾳ ἐγερθῆσεται.”<sup>4</sup> Καὶ ἐλυπήθησαν σφόδρα.

<sup>1</sup> μεταβα in SB; ενθεν in SBD.

<sup>2</sup> This whole verse is wanting in SB 33, some Latin verss., Syrr. verss. (Cur. Hier. Sin.). CDLΔΣ and many other uncials have it. It is doubtless a gloss foisted into the text.

<sup>3</sup> SB 1 it. vg. have συστρεφόμενων; changed into the more easily understood αναστρ. (T. R.).

<sup>4</sup> B has αναστησεται (W.H. margin).

That was a part of the truth at the least, and the part it became them to lay to heart.—ἀμὴν, introducing, as usual, a weighty saying.—ἐὰν ἔχητε, if ye have, a present general supposition.—κόκκον σινάπεως proverbial for a small quantity (xiii. 31), a minimum of faith. The purpose is to exalt the power of faith, not to insinuate that the disciples have not even the minimum. Schanz says they had no miracle faith (“fides miraculorum”).—τῷ ὄρει τούτῳ, the Mount of Transfiguration visible and pointed to.—μετάβα (-βηθι T. R.), a poetical form of imperative like ἀνάβα in Rev. iv. 1. Vide Schmiedel's Winer, p. 115.—ἐνθεν ἐκεῖ for ἐντεῦθεν ἐκεῖσε.—μεταβήσεται: said, done. Jesus here in effect calls faith an “uprooter of mountains,” a phrase current in the Jewish schools for a Rabbi distinguished by legal lore or personal excellence (Lightfoot, Hor. Heb., ad Mt. xxi. 21, Wünsche).—ἀδυνατῆσει used in the third person singular only in N. T. with dative = to be impossible; a reminiscence of Mk. ix. 23 (Weiss).—Ver. 21. Vide on Mk. ix. 29.

Vv. 22-23. Second announcement of the Passion (Mk. ix. 30, 31; Lk. ix. 44, 45).—Ver. 22. συστρεφόμενων α., while they were moving about, a reunited band.—ἐν τ. Γ.: they had got back to Galilee when the second announcement was made. Mk. states that though returned to familiar scenes Jesus did not wish to be recognised, that He might carry on undisturbed the instruction of the Twelve.—μέλλει, etc.: the great engrossing subject of instruction was the doctrine of the cross.—παραδίδοσθαι: a new feature not in the first announcement. Grotius, in view of the words εἰς χεῖρας ἀνθρώπων, thinks the reference is to God the Father delivering up the Son. It is rather to recent revelations of disaffection within the disciple-circle. For if there were three disciples who showed some receptivity to the doctrine of the cross, there was one to whom it would be very unwelcome, and who doubtless had felt very uncomfortable since the Caesarea announcement.—παραδ. contains a covert allusion to the part He is to play.—Ver. 23. ἐλυπήθησαν σφόδρα, they were all greatly distressed; but no one this time ventured to remonstrate or even to ask a question (Mk. ix. 32). The prediction of resurrection seems to have counted for nothing.

Vv. 24-27. The temple tax.—In Mt. only, but unmistakably a genuine historic reminiscence in the main. Even Holtzmann (H. C.) regards it as history, only half developed into legend.—Ver. 24. εἰς Καπ.: home again after lengthened wandering with the satisfaction home gives even after the most exhilarating holiday excursions.—Ver. 24. προσῆλθον οἱ, etc.: home-coming often means return to care. Here are the receivers of custom, as soon as they hear of the arrival, demanding tribute. From the Mount of Transfiguration to money demands which one is too poor to meet, what a descent! The experience has been often repeated in the lives of saints, sons of God, men of genius.—τὰ δίδραχμα: a δίδραχμον was a coin equal to two Attic drachmae, and to the Jewish half shekel

<sup>2</sup> ἐνθεν (W. H.) here and in Lk. xvi. 26 (vide critical note there).
<sup>3</sup> vide Ch. ii. 22 for similar use.
<sup>4</sup> Lk. i. 37 (Gen. xviii. 14).

q here only in N. T. Frequent in Sept. for ἡρω 24. Ἐλθόντων δὲ αὐτῶν εἰς Καπερναοὺμ, προσῆλθον οἱ τὰ δίδραχμα λαμβάνοντες τῷ Πέτρῳ, καὶ εἶπον, “Ὁ διδάσκαλος ὑμῶν οὐ τελεῖ τὰ δίδραχμα;” 25. Λέγει, “Ναί.” Καὶ ὅτε εἰσῆλθεν εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν, προέφθασεν αὐτὸν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, λέγων, “Τί σοι δοκεῖ, Σίμων; οἱ βασιλεῖς τῆς γῆς ἀπὸ τίνων λαμβάνουσι τέλη ἢ κῆνσον; ἀπὸ τῶν υἰῶν αὐτῶν, ἢ ἀπὸ τῶν ἀλλοτρίων;” 26. Λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Πέτρος, “Ἀπὸ τῶν ἀλλοτρίων.” Ἐφη αὐτῷ ὁ

<sup>6</sup> Rom. xiii. <sup>6</sup> Ch. xvii. <sup>17.</sup> Mk. <sup>xii. 14.</sup> John x. 5. <sup>Acts vii.</sup> 6. Heb. xi. 9, 34.

<sup>1</sup> ΣD omit τα here (Tisch.); BC retain it (W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> εἰσελθοντα in Σ (-τι 1); ελθοντα in B. Tisch. adopts the former; W.H. the latter, with εἰσελθοντα in margin.

<sup>3</sup> B has τινος, which W.H. place in the margin.

<sup>4</sup> For λεγει . . . Π. ΣBCL have ειποντος δε (Tisch., W.H.). The T. R. is a grammatical correction. The adoption of ειποντος requires a comma before εφη instead of a full stop as in T. R.

= about fifteen pence; payable annually by every Jew above twenty as a tribute to the temple. It was a tribute of the post-exilic time based on Exodus xxx. 13-16. After the destruction of the Temple the tax continued to be paid to the Capitol (Joseph. Bel. I. vii. 6, 7). The time of collection was in the month Adar (March).—τῷ Π. Peter evidently the principal man of the Jesus-circle for outsiders as well as internally.—οὐ τελεῖ. The receivers are feeling their way. Respect for the Master (διδάσκαλος) makes them go to the disciples for information, and possibly the question was simply a roundabout hint that the tax was overdue.—Ver. 25. ναί: this prompt, confident answer may be either an inference from Christ's general bearing, as Peter understood it, or a statement of fact implying past payment.—ἐλθόντα ε. τ. δ. The meeting of the tax collectors with Peter had taken place outside; it had been noticed by Jesus, and the drift of the interview instinctively understood by Him.—προέφθασεν, anticipated him, here only in N. T. Peter meant to report, but Jesus spoke first, having something special to say, and a good reason for saying it. In other circumstances He would probably have taken no notice, but left Peter to manage the matter as he pleased. But the Master is aware of something that took place among His disciples on the way home, not yet mentioned by the evangelist but about to be (xviii. 1), and to be regarded as the key to the meaning of this incident. The story of what Jesus said to Peter about the temple dues is really the prelude to the discourse following on humility, and that discourse in turn reflects light on the prelude.—τί σοι δοκεῖ; phrase often found in Mt. (xviii. 12, xxi. 28, etc.) with lively colloquial effect: what think you?—τέλη ἢ κῆνσον, customs or tribute; the former taxes on wares, the latter a tax on persons = indirect and direct taxation. The question refers specially to the latter.—ἀλλοτρίων, foreigners, in reference not to the nation, but to the royal family, who have the privilege of exemption.—Ver. 26. ἀραγε on the force of this particle vide at vii. 20. The γε lends emphasis to the exemption of the υἰοί. It virtually replies to Peter's ναί = then you must admit, what your answer to the collectors seemed to deny, that the children are free. The reply is a jeu d'esprit. Christ's purpose is not seriously to argue for exemption, but to prepare the way for a moral lesson.

Ver. 27. ἵνα μὴ σκανδαλ., that we may not create misunderstanding as to our attitude by asking exemption or refusing to pay. Nösgen, with a singular lack of exegetical insight, thinks the scandal dreaded is an appearance of disagreement between Master and disciple! It is rather creating the impression that Jesus and His followers despise the temple, and disallow its claims. And the aim of Jesus was to fix Peter's attention on the fact that He was anxious to avoid giving offence thereby, and in that view abstained from insisting on personal claims. Over against the spirit of ambition, which has begun to show itself among His disciples, He

Ἰησοῦς, “Ἄραγε ἐλεύθεροί εἰσιν οἱ υἱοί. 27. ἵνα δὲ μὴ σκανδα-<sup>u</sup> here only
 λίσωμεν<sup>1</sup> αὐτούς, πορευθεῖς εἰς τὴν<sup>2</sup> θάλασσαν, βάλε ἄγκιστρον,<sup>v</sup> here only
 καὶ τὸν ἀναβάτνα πρῶτον ἰχθὺν ἄρον· καὶ ἀνοίξας τὸ στόμα αὐτοῦ,<sup>w</sup> Cf. ἀντι εὐρήσεις<sup>v</sup> στατήρα· ἐκείνον λαβῶν δὸς αὐτοῖς ἄντι ἐμοῦ καὶ σοῦ.” Ch. xx. 28.

<sup>1</sup> σκανδαλιζόμεν in  $\aleph$ LX, adopted by Tisch. and placed in marg. by W.H.

<sup>2</sup> Many uncials ( $\aleph$ BLA al.) omit τὴν.

sets His own spirit of self-effacement and desire as far as possible to live peaceably with all men, even with those with whom He has no religious affinity. —πορευθεῖς ε. θ. Generally the instruction given is: go and fish for the money needful to pay the tax.—ἄγκιστρον, a hook, not a net, because very little would suffice; one or two fish at most.—πρῶτον ἰχθύν: the very first fish that comes up will be enough, for a reason given in the following clause.—ἀνοίξας . . . στατήρα: the words point to something marvellous, a fish with a stater, the sum wanted, in its mouth. Paulus sought to eliminate the marvellous by rendering εὐρήσεις not “find” but “obtain,” i.e., by sale. Beyschlag (Das Leben Jesu, p. 304) suggests that the use of an ambiguous word created the impression that Jesus directed Peter to catch a fish with a coin in its mouth. Ewald (Geschichte Christus, p. 467) thinks Jesus spoke very much as reported, but from the fact that it is not stated that a fish with a coin in its mouth was actually found, he infers that the words were not meant seriously as a practical direction, but were a spirited proverbial utterance, based on rare examples of money found in fishes. Weiss is of opinion that a simple direction to go and fish for the means of payment was in the course of oral tradition changed into a form of language implying a miraculous element. This view assumes that the report in Mt. was derived from oral tradition (vide Weiss, Das Leben Jesu, ii. 47, and my Miraculous Element in the Gospels, pp. 231-5). In any case the miracle, not being reported as having happened, cannot have been the important point for the evangelist. What he is chiefly concerned about is to report the behaviour of Jesus on the occasion, and the words He spoke revealing its motive.—ἀντι ἐμοῦ καὶ σοῦ: various questions occur to one here. Did the collectors expect Jesus only to pay (for Himself and His whole company), or did their question mean, does He also, even He, pay? And why pay only for Peter along with Himself? Were all the disciples not liable: Andrew, James and John there, in Capernaum, not less than Peter? Was the tax strictly collected, or for lack of power to enforce it had it become practically a voluntary contribution, paid by many, neglected by not a few? In that case it would be a surprise to many that Jesus, while so uncompromising on other matters, was so accommodating in regard to money questions. He would not conform to custom in fasting, Sabbath keeping, washing, etc., but He would pay the temple tax, though refusal would have had no more serious result than slightly to increase already existing ill-will. This view sets the generosity and nobility of Christ's spirit in a clearer light.

CHAPTER XVIII. MORAL TRAINING OF THE DISCIPLES. In this and the next two chapters the centre of interest is the spiritual condition of the Twelve, and the necessity thereby imposed on their Master to subject them to a stern moral discipline. The day of Caesarea had inaugurated a spiritual crisis in the disciple-circle, which searched them through and through, and revealed in them all in one form or another, and in a greater or less degree, moral weakness: disloyalty to the Master (xvii. 22), vain ambition, jealousy, party spirit. The disloyal disciple seems to have taken to heart more than the others the gloomy side of the Master's predictions, the announcement of the Passion; his more honest-hearted companions let their minds rest on the more pleasing side of the prophetic picture, the near approach of the kingdom in power and glory, so that while remaining true to the Master their hearts became fired with ambitious passions.

Vv. 1-14. Ambition rebuked (Mk. ix. 33-50; Lk. ix. 46-50, xv. 3-7, xvii. 1-4).—Ver. 1. ἐν ἑκ. τ. ὥρῃ, in that hour; the expression connects what follows very closely with the tax incident, and shows that the two things were intimately associated in the mind of the evangelist.—

- a Ch. xi. 11: XVIII. 1. ἘΝ ἐκείνῃ τῇ ὥρᾳ προσήλθον οἱ μαθηταὶ τῷ Ἰησοῦ, λέγοντες, "Τίς ἄρα *μείζων ἐστὶν ἐν τῇ βασιλείᾳ τῶν οὐρανῶν; Mk. ix. 34. Lk. ix. 46.
- b John xii. 2. Καὶ προσκαλεσάμενος ὁ Ἰησοῦς<sup>1</sup> παιδίον ἕστησεν αὐτὸ ἐν μέσῳ αὐτῶν, 3. καὶ εἶπεν, "Ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ἐὰν μὴ<sup>b</sup> στραφῆτε καὶ γένησθε ὡς τὰ παιδιά, οὐ μὴ εἰσέλθῃτε εἰς τὴν βασιλείαν τῶν οὐρανῶν. 4. ὅστις οὖν *ταπεινώσῃ<sup>2</sup> ἑαυτὸν ὡς τὸ παιδίον τοῦτο, οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ μείζων ἐν τῇ βασιλείᾳ τῶν οὐρανῶν. 5. καὶ ὅς ἐὰν δέξῃται παιδίον τοιοῦτον ἐν<sup>3</sup> ἐπὶ τῷ ὀνόματι μου, ἐμὲ δέχεται.
- d Ch. xxiv. 5 parall.

<sup>1</sup> NBL al. omit ο l.

<sup>2</sup> ταπεινώσει in all uncials.

<sup>3</sup> ἐν before παιδιον in BDLZ; τοιοῦτο in NBLΔ for the more usual τοιοῦτον in T. R. (ἐν παιδιον τοιοῦτο in Tisch. and W.H.).

τίς ἄρα μείζων: who then is greater, etc. ? The ἄρα may be taken as pointing back to the tax incident as suggesting the question, but not to it alone, rather to it as the last of a series of circumstances tending to force the question to the front: address to Peter at Caesarea Philippi; three disciples selected to be with the Master on the Hill of Transfiguration. From Mk. we learn that they had been discussing it on the way home.—ἐν τ. βασ. τ. οὐρ., in the Kingdom of Heaven; this is wanting in Mk., where the question is a purely personal one; who is the greater (among us, now, in your esteem)? In Mk. the question, though referring to the present, who is, etc., points to the future, and presents a more general aspect, but though it wears an abstract look it too is personal in reality = which of us now is the greater for you, and shall therefore have the higher place in the kingdom when it comes? It is not necessary to conceive every one of the Twelve fancying it possible he might be the first man. The question for the majority may have been one as to the respective claims of the more prominent men, Peter, James, John, each of whom may have had his partisans in the little band.—Ver. 2. παιδίον: the task of Jesus is not merely to communicate instruction but to rebuke and exorcise an evil spirit, therefore He does not trust to words alone, but for the greater impressiveness uses a child who happens to be present as a vehicle of instruction. The legendary spirit which dearly loves certainty in detail identified the child with Ignatius, as if that would make the lesson any the more valuable!—Ver. 3. ἐὰν μὴ στραφῆτε: unless ye turn round so as to go in an opposite direction. "Conversion" needed and demanded, even in the case of these men who have left all to follow Jesus! How many who pass for converted, regenerate persons have need to be converted over again, more radically! Chrys. remarks: "We are not able to reach even the faults of the Twelve; we ask not who is the greatest in the Kingdom of Heaven, but who is the greater in the Kingdom of Earth: the richer the more powerful" (Hom. lviii.). The remark is not true to the spirit of Christ. In His eyes vanity and ambition in the sphere of religion were graver offences than the sins of the worldly. His tone at this time is markedly severe, as much so as when He denounced the vices of the Pharisees. It was indeed Pharisaism in the bud He had to deal with. Resch suggests that στραφῆτε here simply represents the idea of becoming again children, corresponding to the Hebrew idiom which uses בָּשָׂר = πάλιν (Ausser-canonische Paralleltexte zu Mt. and Mk., p. 213).—ὡς τὰ παιδιά, like the children, in unpretentiousness. A king's child has no more thought of greatness than a beggar's.—οὐ μὴ εἰσέλθῃτε, ye shall not enter the kingdom, not to speak of being great there. Just what He said to the Pharisees (vide on chap. v. 17-20).—Ver. 4. ταπεινώσει ἑαυτὸν: the most difficult thing in the world for saint as for sinner. Raphael (Annot. in S. S.) distinguishes three forms of self-humiliation: in mind (Phil. ii. 3), by words, and by acts, giving classical examples of the latter two. It is easy to humble oneself by self-disparaging words, or by symbolic acts, as when the Egyptian monks wore hoods, like children's caps (Elsner), but to be humble in spirit, and so child-like!—ὁ μείζων. The really humble man is as great in the moral world as he is rare.

6. ὃς δ' ἂν σκανδαλίση ἓνα τῶν ὀ μικρῶν τούτων τῶν πιστευόντων <sup>ε</sup> Cf. ἡλαχίστων in
εἰς ἐμέ, <sup>ζ</sup> συμφέρει αὐτῷ, ἵνα κρεμασθῆ μύλος ὄνικος ἐπὶ <sup>1</sup> τὸν Ch. xxv.
τράχηλον αὐτοῦ, καὶ <sup>β</sup> καταποντισθῆ ἐν τῷ <sup>η</sup> πελάγει τῆς θαλάσσης. <sup>γ</sup> Ch. v. 29, 7. Οὐαὶ τῷ κόσμῳ ἀπὸ τῶν σκανδάλων· ἀνάγκη γάρ ἐστιν <sup>2</sup> ἐλθεῖν <sup>δ</sup> here and τὰ σκάνδαλα. πλὴν οὐαὶ τῷ ἀνθρώπῳ ἐκεῖνῳ, <sup>3</sup> δι' οὗ τὸ σκάνδαλον <sup>ε</sup> here and in Ch. xiv.
30.
h here and only

Acts xxvii. 5. The phrase ἐν τ. π. τ. θαλάσσης here only

• For ἐπι ἧBLZ have περι.

• Omitted in BL (W.H.); found in ἧD (Tisch.).

• <sup>3</sup> ΕΚΕΙΝῶ wanting in ἧDLΣ; found in B but not adopted by W.H. It looks like an echo of xxvi. 24, yet it answers well to the solemn tone of our Lord's utterance on this occasion.

Vv. 5-7.—Ver. 5. δέξεται: the discourse passes at this point from being child-like to gracious treatment of a child and what it represents.—ἐν παιδίον τοιοῦτο: the real child present in the room passes into an ideal child, representing all that the spirit of ambition in its struggle for place and power is apt to trample under foot. So in effect the majority of commentators; a few, including Bengel, De Wette, Bleek, Weiss, hold that the reference is still to a real child. In favour of this view is Luke's version: "Whoso receiveth this child," etc. (ix. 48). But the clause ἐπὶ τῷ ὀνόματί μου raises the child into the ideal sphere. The reception required does not mean natural kindness to children (though that also Christ valued), but esteeming them as fellow-disciples in spite of their insignificance. A child may be such a disciple, but it may also represent such disciples, and it is its representative function that is to be emphasised.—Ver. 6. σκανδαλίση: the opposite of receiving; treating harshly and contemptuously, so as to tempt to unbelief and apostasy. The pride and selfish ambition of those who pass for eminent Christians make many infidels.—ἓνα τ. μ. τ.: one of the large class of little ones; not merely child believers surely, but all of whom a child is the emblem, as regards social or ecclesiastical importance. Those who are caused to stumble are always little ones: "majores enim scandala non recipiunt," Jerome. One of them: "frequens unius in hoc capite mentio," Bengel. This is the one text in which Jesus speaks of Himself as the object of faith (vide The Kingdom of God, p. 263).—συμφέρει . . . ἵνα: vide on v. 29. Fritzsche finds here an instance of attraction similar to that in x. 25—καὶ ὁ δοῦλος, ὡς ὁ κ. α. Instead of saying συμφέρει α. κρεμασθῆναι . . . ἵνα καταποντισθῆ, the writer puts both verbs in the subjunctive after ἵνα.—μύλος ὄνικος. The Greeks called the upper millstone ὄνος the ass (ὁ ἀνώτερος λίθος, Hesychius), but they did not use the adjective ὄνικος. The meaning therefore is a millstone driven by an ass, i.e., a large one, as distinct from smaller-sized ones driven by the hand, commonly used in Hebrew houses in ancient times. "Let such a large stone be hung about the neck of the offender to make sure that he sink to the bottom to rise no more"—such is the thought of Jesus; strong in conception and expression, revealing intense abhorrence.—ἐν τῷ πελάγει τ. θ.: in the deep part of the sea. So Kypke, who gives examples; another significantly strong phrase. Both these expressions have been toned down by Luke.—καταποντισθῆ: drowning was not a form of capital punishment in use among the Jews. The idea may have been suggested by the word denoting the offence, σκανδαλίση. Bengel remarks: "apposita locutio in sermone de scandalo, nam ad lapidem offensio est" = "let the man who puts a stone in the path of a brother have a stone hung about his neck," etc. Lightfoot suggests as the place of drowning the Dead Sea, in whose waters nothing would sink without a weight attached to it, and in which to be drowned was a mark of execration.—Ver. 7. οὐαὶ τῷ κόσμῳ, woe to the world, an exclamation of pity at thought of the miseries that come upon mankind through ambitious passions. Some (Bleek, Weiss, etc.) take κόσμος in the sense of the ungodly world, as in later apostolic usage, and therefore as causing, not suffering from, the offences deplored. This interpretation is legitimate but not inevitable, and it seems better to take the word in the more general sense of humanity conceived of as grievously afflicted with "scandals" without reference to who is to blame. They are a great fact in the history of mankind, by whomsoever caused.—ἀπὸ τ. σ.: by reason of; points to the ultimate source of the misery.—τῶν σκανδάλων: the scandals; a general category, and a black one.—ἀνάγκη γάρ: they are inevitable; a fatality as well as a fact, on the wide scale of the world; they cannot be prevented, only deplored. No shallow optimism in Christ's view of life.—πλήν: adversative here, setting the woe that overtakes the cause of offences, over against that of those who suffer from them. Weiss contends that it is not adversative here any more than in xi. 24, but simply conducts from the general culpability of the world to the guilt of every one who is a cause of scandal, even when he does not belong to the world.

ἔρχεται. 8. Εἰ δὲ ἡ χεὶρ σου ἢ ὁ πούς σου σκανδαλίζει σε, ἔκκοψον αὐτὰ<sup>1</sup> καὶ βάλε ἀπὸ σοῦ· καλόν σοι ἐστὶν εἰσελθεῖν εἰς τὴν ζωὴν χωλὸν ἢ κυλλόν,<sup>2</sup> ἢ δύο χεῖρας ἢ δύο πόδας ἔχοντα βληθῆναι εἰς τὸ πῦρ τὸ αἰώνιον. 9. καὶ εἰ ὁ ὀφθαλμὸς σου σκανδαλίζει σε, ἔξελε αὐτὸν καὶ βάλε ἀπὸ σοῦ· καλόν σοι ἐστὶ<sup>1</sup> μονόφθαλμον εἰς τὴν ζωὴν ἢ εἰσελθεῖν, ἢ δύο ὀφθαλμοὺς ἔχοντα βληθῆναι εἰς τὴν γέενναν τοῦ πυρός. 10. Ὁρᾶτε μὴ καταφρονήσητε ἐνδὸς τῶν μικρῶν τούτων· λέγω γὰρ ὑμῖν, ὅτι οἱ ἄγγελοι αὐτῶν ἐν οὐρανοῖς<sup>1</sup> διὰ παντός

<sup>1</sup> αὐτον in  $\aleph$ B $\Delta$ L $\Sigma$ . αὐτα a grammatical correction.

<sup>2</sup> κυλλον η χωλον in  $\aleph$ B (Tisch., W.H.).

Vv. 8, 9. These verses are one of Mt.'s dualities, being found with some variations in the Sermon on the Mount (vv. 29-30). Repetition perhaps due to use of two sources, but in sympathy with the connection of thought in both places. Since the offender is the greater loser in the end, it is worth his while to take precautions against being an offender.—Ver. 8. χεῖρ, πούς: mentioned together as instruments of violence.—καλόν . . . ἢ: the positive for the comparative, or ἢ used in sense of magis quam. Raphael and Kypke cite instances of this use from classics. It may be an imitation of Hebrew usage, in which the comparative is expressed by the positive, followed by the preposition min. "A rare classical usage tends to become frequent in Hellenistic Greek if it be found to correspond to a common Hebrew idiom" (Carr, in Camb. N. T.). —κυλλόν: with reference to hand, mutilated; wanting one or both hands.—

χωλόν: in a similar condition regarding the feet (cf. xi. 5; xv. 30).—Ver. 9. ὀφθαλμός, the eye, referred to as the means of expressing contempt; in chap. v. 29 as inciting to lust.—μονόφθαλμον, properly should mean having only one eye by nature, but here = wanting an eye, for which the more exact term is ἑτερόφθαλμος, vide Lobeck, Phryn., p. 136.

Vv. 10-14. Still the subject is the child as the ideal representative of the insignificant, apt to be despised by the ambitious. From this point onwards Mt. goes pretty much his own way, giving logia of Jesus in general sympathy with the preceding discourse, serving the purpose of moral discipline for disciples aspiring to places of distinction.—Ver. 10. ὁρᾶτε μὴ καταφ.: μὴ with the subj. in an object clause after a verb meaning to take heed; common N. T. usage; vide Matt. xxiv. 4; Acts xiii. 40, etc.—ἐνδὸς, one, again.—λέγω γάρ: something solemn to be said.—οἱ ἄγγελοι αὐτῶν, etc. In general abstract language, the truth Jesus solemnly declares is that God, His Father, takes a special interest in the little ones in all senses of the word. This truth is expressed in terms of the current Jewish belief in guardian angels. In the later books of O. T. (Daniel), there are guardian angels of nations; the extension of the privilege to individuals was a further development. Christ's words are not to be taken as a dogmatic endorsement of this post-exilic belief exemplified in the story of Tobit (chap. v.). The same remark applies to the passages in which the law is spoken of as given through angelic mediation (Acts vii. 53; Gal. iii. 19; Heb. ii. 2). The λέγω γάρ does not mean "this belief is true," but "the idea it embodies, God's special care for

<sup>k</sup> βλέπουσι τὸ <sup>κ</sup> πρόσωπον τοῦ πατρὸς μου τοῦ ἐν οὐρανοῖς.<sup>1</sup> 11. <sup>k</sup> this phrase here only ἦλθε γὰρ ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου σώσαι τὸ ἀπολωλός.<sup>2</sup> 12. Τί ὑμῖν δοκεῖ; ἐὰν γένηται τινι ἀνθρώπῳ ἑκατὸν πρόβατα, καὶ πλανηθῇ ἐν 1 Acts xx. 16 ἐξ αὐτῶν· οὐχὶ ἀφείς<sup>3</sup> τὰ ἐννενηκονταεννέα, ἐπὶ τὰ ὄρη<sup>4</sup> πορευθεὶς (same Gal. vi. 14 ζῆτεῖ τὸ πλανώμενον; 13. καὶ ἐὰν<sup>1</sup> γένηται εὐρεῖν αὐτό, ἀμὴν λέγω const. with inf. ὑμῖν, ὅτι χαίρει ἐπ' αὐτῷ μᾶλλον, ἢ ἐπὶ τοῖς ἐννενηκονταεννέα τοῖς as here, cf. in ver. 12). μὴ πεπλανημένοις. 14. οὕτως οὐκ ἔστι θέλημα <sup>m</sup> ἔμπροσθεν τοῦ <sup>m</sup> πατρὸς ὑμῶν<sup>5</sup> τοῦ ἐν οὐρανοῖς, ἵνα ἀπολήται εἰς<sup>6</sup> τῶν μικρῶν τούτων. Lk. xi. 26. Lk. x. 21. 15. Ἐὰν δὲ ἀμαρτήσῃ εἰς σέ<sup>7</sup> ὁ ἀδελφός σου, ὕπαγε καὶ<sup>8</sup> ἔλεξον <sup>n</sup> αὐτὸν μεταξὺ σοῦ καὶ αὐτοῦ μόνου. ἐὰν σου ἀκούσῃ, ὁ ἐκέρδησας <sup>o</sup> τὸν ἀδελφόν σου· 16. ἐὰν δὲ μὴ ἀκούσῃ, παράλαβε μετὰ σοῦ ἔτι ἓνα <sup>p</sup> Lk. iii. 19. <sup>i</sup> Tim. v. 20. <sup>i</sup> Cor. ix. 19-22. <sup>i</sup> Pet. iii. 1.

<sup>1</sup> B has εν τω ουρανω (W.H. margin, bracketed).

<sup>2</sup> Ver. 11 is wanting in  $\aleph$ BL, 1, 13, 33, Egyptian verss., Syrr. Jerus. Sin., Orig., etc.; doubtless imported from Lk. xix. 10.

<sup>3</sup> αφησει in BL (Tisch., W.H.); D has αφησιν.

<sup>4</sup> και after ορη in BL.

<sup>5</sup> μου in B al.

<sup>6</sup> εν in  $\aleph$ BDL. εις is a grammatical correction.

<sup>7</sup>  $\aleph$ B omit εις σε.

<sup>8</sup>  $\aleph$ BD omit και.

the little, is true". This is an important text for Christ's doctrine of the Fatherhood. It teaches that, contrary to the spirit of the world, which values only the great, the Father-God cares specially for that which is apt to be despised.—βλέπουσι τ. πρ. In Eastern courts it is the confidential servants who see the face of the king. The figure is not to be pressed to the extent of making God like an Eastern despot.—Ver. 11 an interpolation from Lk. xix. 10, q. v.

Vv. 12-14. Parable of straying sheep (Lk. xv. 4-7); may seem less appropriate here than in Lk., but has even here a good setting, amounting to a climax = God cares not only for the lowly and little but even for the low—the morally erring. In both places the parable teaches the precious characteristically Christian doctrine of the worth of the individual at the worst to God.—Ver. 12. τί ὁ. δοκεῖ as in xvii. 25.—ἐὰν γένηται τ. ἀ. ἐ. πρόβατα: if a man happen to have as large a number, yet, etc.—καὶ π. ἐν: only one wanderer, out of so many.—πορευθεὶς ζῆτεῖ: does he not go and seek the one?—Ver. 13. καὶ . . . αὐτό: if it happen that he finds it. In Lk. he searches till he finds it.—ἀμὴν λέγω: specially solemn, with a view to the application to the moral sphere of what in the natural sphere is self-evident.—Ver. 14, application of the parable less emphatic than in Lk.—θέλημα, a will, for an object of will.—ἔμπροσθεν τ. π. μ.: before the face of = for, etc.

Vv. 15-17. How to deal with an erring brother.—The transition here is easy from warning against giving, to counsel how to receive, offences. The terms are changed: μικρὸς becomes ἀδελφός, giving offence not suiting the idea of the former, and for σκανδαλίζειν we have the more general ἀμαρτάνειν.—Vv. 16 and 17 have something answering to them in Lk. xvii. 3, coming in there after the group of parables in chaps. xv. and xvi., in which that of the Shepherd has its place; whence Wendt recognises these verses as an authentic logion probably closely connected with the parable in the common source. Ver. 17 he regards as an addition by the evangelist or a later hand. Holtzmann (H. C.) regards the whole section (15-17) as a piece of Church order in the form of a logion of the Lord.

Ver. 15. ἀμαρτήσῃ: apart from the doubtful εἰς σέ following, the reference appears to be to private personal offences, not to sin against the Christian name, which every brother in the community has a right to challenge, especially those closely connected with the offender. Yet perhaps we ought not too rigidly to draw a line between the two in an ideal community of love.—μεταξὺ σ. κ. α. μ.: the phrase implies that some one has the right and duty of taking the initiative. So far it is a personal affair to begin with. The simpler and more classical expression would be μόνος μόνον.—ἀκούσῃ, hear, in the sense of ἢ δύο, ἵνα ἐπὶ στόματος δύο μαρτύρων ἢ τριῶν σταθῇ πᾶν ῥῆμα.

<sup>p</sup> Here only 17. εἰς τὴν παρακούσιν αὐτῶν, εἰς τὴν ἐκκλησίαν· εἰς δὲ καὶ τῆς (Esther iii. 3, 8).

ἐκκλησίας παρακούσιν, ἕστω σοι ὡσπερ ὁ ἔθνικὸς καὶ ὁ τελώης.

18. Ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅσα εἰς δὴσῆτε ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, ἔσται δεδεμένα

<sup>q</sup> Ch. xx. 2. ἐν τῷ<sup>1</sup> οὐρανῷ· καὶ ὅσα εἰς λύσητε ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, ἔσται λελυμένα

<sup>13.</sup> Lk. v. 35. Acts ἐν τῷ<sup>1</sup> οὐρανῷ. 19. πάλιν<sup>2</sup> λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι εἰς δύο ὑμῶν<sup>3</sup> συμφωνή-
<sup>v.</sup> 9; xv. σωσιν<sup>3</sup> ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς περὶ παντὸς πράγματος οὗ εἰς αἰτήσονται, <sup>1</sup> B omits τω first time and B second time.

<sup>2</sup> B and many other uncials add ἀμην after πάλιν (W. H. in brackets).

<sup>3</sup> συμφωνήσουσιν in BBDLΔ (Tisch.).

submitting to admonition.—ἐκέρδηςας : gained as a friend, as a fellow-member of the Kingdom of God, or as a man = saved him from moral ruin? All three alternatives find support. Is it necessary or possible to decide peremptorily between them?—Ver. 16. εἰς δὲ μὴ ἄ. After a first failure try again, with added influence.—παράλαβε . . . ἵνα ἢ δύο. This bears a juridical aspect (Schanz), but it does not really pass out of the moral sphere; ethical influence alone contemplated; consensus in moral judgment carries weight with the conscience.—ἵνα ἐπὶ στόματος, etc. : reference to the legal provision in Deut. xix. 15 in a literary rather than in a legal spirit.—Ver. 17. εἰς δὲ π. ἄ. Try first a minimum of social pressure and publicity, and if that fail have recourse to the maximum.—εἰς τὴν ἐκκλησίαν : speak to the "Church"—the brotherhood of believers in the Christ. This to be the widest limit for the ultimate sphere of moral influence, as ex hypothesi the judgment of this new community will count for more to its members than that of all the world beyond.—ἕστω σοι, etc. : this failing, the offender puts himself outside the society, and there is nothing for it but to treat him as a heathen or a publican; which does not mean with indifference or abhorrence, but carefully avoiding fellowship with him in sin, and seeking his good only as one without. There is no reference in this passage to ecclesiastical discipline and Church censures. The older interpreters, in a theologico-polemical interest, were very anxious to find in it support for their developed ideas on these topics. The chief interest of historic exegesis is to divest it of an ecclesiastical aspect as much as possible, for only so can it suit the initial period, and be with any probability regarded as an utterance of Jesus. As such it may be accepted, when interpreted, as above. If, as we have tried to show, it was natural for Jesus to speak of a new community of faith at Caesarea, it was equally natural that He should return upon the idea in the Capernaum lesson on humility and kindred virtues, and refer to it as an instrument for promoting right feeling and conduct among professed disciples.—Ver. 18. Renewed promise of power to bind and loose, this time not to Peter alone, as in xvi. 19, but to all the Twelve, not qua apostles, with ecclesiastical authority, but qua disciples, with the ethical power of morally disciplined men. The Twelve for the moment are for Jesus = the ecclesia : they were the nucleus of it. The binding and loosing generically = exercising judgment on conduct; here specifically = treating sin as pardonable or the reverse—a particular exercise of the function of judging.

Vv. 19, 20. Promise of the power and presence of God to encourage concord.—Ver. 19. πάλιν ἀμην : a second amen, introducing a new thought of parallel importance to the former, in ver. 18.—εἰς δύο : two; not the measure of Christ's expectation of agreement among His disciples, but of the moral power that lies in the sincere consent of even two minds. It outweighs the nominal agreement of thousands who have no real bond of union.—συμφωνήσουσιν : agree, about what? not necessarily only the matters referred to in previous context, but anything concerning the Kingdom of God.—περὶ παντὸς πράγματος : concerning every or any matter, offences committed by brethren included of course.—γενήσεται : it shall be; what absolute confidence in the laws of the moral world!—παρὰ τ. π. μ. : from my Father. The Father-God of Jesus is here defined as a lover of peace and γενήσεται αὐτοῖς παρὰ τοῦ πατρὸς μου τοῦ ἐν οὐρανοῖς. 20. οὐ γάρ εἰσι δύο ἢ τρεῖς συνηγμένοι εἰς τὸ ἕμὸν ὄνομα, ἐκεῖ εἰμι ἐν μέσῳ αὐτῶν.”<sup>1</sup>

21. Τότε προσελθὼν αὐτῷ ὁ Πέτρος εἶπε,<sup>2</sup> “Κύριε, ἡ ποσάκις ἁμαρτήσῃ εἰς ἕμέ ὁ ἀδελφός μου, καὶ ἀφήσω αὐτῷ; ἕως ἑπτάκις;”

22. Λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Οὐ λήγω σοι ἕως ἑπτάκις, ἀλλ’ ἕως

Ch. xxviii
19. Acts
vii. 16;
xix. 5. 1
Cor. i. 12
(all of baptism into —eis—a name).
Ch. xxiii.
37. Lk.
xiii. 34.
t Lk. xvii. 4.

<sup>1</sup> This verse in Codex Bezae runs “for there are not (οὐκ εἰσιν γὰρ), etc., with whom (παρ’ οἷς) I am not in the midst of them”. Syr. Sin. has a similar reading.

<sup>2</sup> αὐτῷ after εἶπε in BD (Tisch., W.H., bracketed).  $\aleph$  omits αὐτῷ.

fraternal concord. In this verse we have a case of attraction, of the main subject into the conditional clause. Resolved, the sentence would run: πᾶν πρᾶγμα, ὃ ἐὰν αἰτήσωσιν, ἐὰν συμφωνήσουσιν περὶ αὐτοῦ, γενήσεται αὐτοῖς.—Ver. 20. δύο ἢ τρεῖς. Jesus deals in small numbers, not from modesty in His anticipations, but because they suit the present condition, and in jealousy for the moral quality of the new society.—συνηγμένοι εἰς, etc., not gathered to confess or worship my name, but gathered as believers in me. It is a synonym for the new society. The ecclesia is a body of men gathered together by a common relation to the name of the Christ: a Christian synagogue as yet consisting of the Twelve, or as many of them as were really one in heart.—ἐκεῖ εἰμι ἐν, etc.: there am I, now, with as many of you, my disciples, as are one in faith and brotherly love; not with any more even of you: far away from the man of ambitious, not to say traitorous, mind. There am I in reference to the future. His presence axiomatically certain, therefore expressed as a present fact, even with reference to a future time—a promise natural from One looking forward to an early death. Similar in import to Mt. xxviii. 20. For similar sayings of the Rabbis concerning the presence of the Divine Majesty, or the Shechinah, among two or three sitting in judgment or studying the law, vide Lightfoot and Schöttgen.

Vv. 21, 22. Peter's question about forgiving.—The second of two interpellations in the course of Christ's discourse (vide Mk. ix. 38-41; Lk. ix. 49, 50). Such words touch sensitive consciences, and the interruptions would be welcomed by Jesus as proof that He had not spoken in vain.—Ver. 21. ποσάκις, etc.: the question naturally arose out of the directions for dealing with an offending brother, which could only be carried out by one of placable disposition. Their presupposition is that a fault confessed is to be forgiven. But how far is this to go? In Lk. xvii. 3 the case is put of seven offences in a day, each in turn repented of and confessed. Is there not reason for doubting the sincerity of repentance in such a case? Or is this not at least the extreme limit? Such is Peter's feeling.—ἁμαρτήσῃ, ἀφήσω: two futures instead of ποσ. ἀμαρτῶντι, ἀφήσω: Hebrew idiom instead of Greek.—ἕως ἑπτάκις: Peter meant to be generous, and he went considerably beyond the Rabbinical measure, which was three times (Amos i. 6): “quicumque remissionem petit a proximo, ne ultra quam ter petat,” Schöttgen.—Ver. 22. οὐ: emphatic “no” to be connected with ἕως ἑπτάκις. Its force may be brought out by translating: no, I tell you, not till, etc.—ἀλλὰ ἐ. ἐ. ἐ.: Christ's reply lifts the subject out of the legal sphere, where even Peter's suggestion left it (seven times and no more—a hard rule), into the evangelic, and means: times without number, infinite placability. This alone decides between the two renderings of ἑβδομηκοντάκις ἑπτά: seventy-seven times and seventy times seven, in favour of the latter as giving a number (490) practically equal to infinitude. Bengel leans to the former, taking the termination -κις as covering the whole number seventy-seven, and referring to Gen. iv. 24 as the probable source of the expression. Similarly some of the Fathers (Orig., Aug.), De Wette and Meyer. The majority adopt the opposite view, among whom may be named Grotius and Fritzsche, who cite the Syriac version in support. On either view there is inexactness in the expression. Seventy times seven requires the termination -κις at both words. Seventy-seven times requires the -κις at u here only <sup>15</sup> ἑβδομηκοντάκις ἑπτὰ. 23. Διὰ τοῦτο ὁμοιώθη ἡ βασιλεία τῶν

 (Gen. 1v. 24)
 v here and οὐρανῶν ἀνθρώπῳ βασιλεῖ, ὅς ἠθέλησε ἵσκαρῆαι λόγον μετὰ τῶν in Ch. xlv. δούλων αὐτοῦ. 24. ἀρξάμενου δὲ αὐτοῦ συναίρειν, προσηνήχθη<sup>1</sup> 19 (same const.). αὐτῷ εἰς<sup>2</sup> ὀφειλέτης μυρίων ἑταλάντων. 25. μὴ ἔχοντας δὲ αὐτοῦ
 w here and ἀποδοῦναι, ἐκέλευσεν αὐτὸν ὁ κύριος αὐτοῦ<sup>3</sup> πρᾶθῆναι, καὶ τὴν in Ch. xlv. 15.
 x 1k xviii. γυναῖκα αὐτοῦ<sup>4</sup> καὶ τὰ τέκνα, καὶ πάντα ὅσα εἶχε<sup>5</sup> καὶ ἀποδοθῆναι.
 7. 1 Cor. 26. πεσῶν οὖν ὁ δούλος προσεκύνει αὐτῷ, λέγων, Κύριε,<sup>6</sup> μακροxiii. 4. θύμησον ἐπ' ἐμοί,<sup>7</sup> καὶ πάντα σοι<sup>8</sup> ἀποδώσω. 27. σπλαγχνισθεῖς δὲ

<sup>1</sup> προσηχθη in BD (W.H.); as in T. R., SLA al. (Tisch.)

<sup>2</sup> εἰς αὐτῷ in SB (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> NBDL omit αὐτου.

<sup>4</sup> SB omit this αὐτου also (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> B has εχει, which, just because of its singularity as a present among preterites, is to be preferred to ειχε, though found in most uncials.

<sup>6</sup> BD omit.

<sup>7</sup> DL have ἐπ' ἐμε.

<sup>8</sup> σοι after ἀποδώσω in NBL.

the end of the second word rather than at end of first: either ἑπτὰ καὶ ἑβδο . . . κίς, or ἑβδομ . . . τα ἑπτάκις.

Vv. 23-35. Parable of unmerciful servant.—Ver. 23. διὰ τοῦτο suggests that the aim of the parable is to justify the apparently unreasonable demand in ver. 22: unlimited forgiveness of injuries. After all, says Jesus, suppose ye comply with the demand, what do your remissions amount to compared to what has been remitted to you by God?—ἀνθρώπῳ βασιλεῖ: a man, a king; king an afterthought demanded by the nature of the case. Only a great monarch can have such debtors, and opportunity to forgive such debts.—συνᾶραι λόγον (found again in xv. 19), to hold a reckoning.—δούλων: all alike servants or slaves in relation to the king. So human distinctions are dwarfed into insignificance by the distance between all men and God.—Ver. 24. εἰς: one stood out above all the rest for the magnitude of his debt, who, therefore, becomes the subject of the story.—ὀφειλέτης μ. τ.: a debtor of, or to the extent of, a thousand talents—an immense sum, say millions sterling; payment hopeless; that the point; exact calculations idle or pedantic. It may seem to violate natural probability that time was allowed to incur such a debt, which speaks to malversation for years. But the indolence of an Eastern monarch must be taken into account, and the absence of system in the management of finance. As Koetsveld (De Gelijk., p. 286) remarks: "A regular control is not in the spirit of the Eastern. He trusts utterly when he does trust, and when he loses confidence it is for ever."—Ver. 25. πρᾶθῆναι . . . ἔχει: the order is given that the debtor be sold, with all he has, including his wife and children; hard lines, but according to ancient law, in the view of which wife and children were simply property. Think of their fate in those barbarous times! But parables are not scrupulous on the score of morality.—καὶ ἀποδοθῆναι: the proceeds of sale to be applied in payment of the debt.—Ver. 26. μακροθύμησον: a Hellenistic word, sometimes used in the sense of deferring anger (Prov. xix. 11 (Sept.)), the corresponding adjective in Ps. lxxxvi. 15; cf. 1 Cor. xiii. 4; 1 Thess. v. 14). That sense is suitable here, but the prominent idea is: give me time; wrath comes in at a later stage (ver. 34).—πάντα ἀποδώσω: easy to promise; his plea: better wait and get all than take hasty measures and get only a part.—Ver. 27. σπλαγχνισθεῖς: touched with pity, not unmixed perhaps with contempt, and associated possibly with rapid reflection as to the best course, the king decides on a magnanimous policy.—ἀπέλυσεν, τὸ δάνειον ἀφήκεν: two benefits conferred; set free from imprisonment, debt absolutely cancelled, not merely time given for payment. A third benefit implied, continuance in office. The policy adopted in hope that it will ensure good behaviour in time to come (Ps. cxxx. 4); perfectly credible even in an Eastern monarch.

Vv. 28-34. The other side of the picture.—Ver. 28. ἕνα τ. συνδούλων ἄ.: a fellow-slave though a humble one, which he should have remembered, but did not.

ὁ κύριος τοῦ δούλου ἐκείνου<sup>1</sup> ἀπέλυσεν αὐτόν, καὶ τὸ ἰδάνειον ἀφήκεν αὐτῷ. 28. Ἐξεληθὼν δὲ ὁ δούλος ἐκείνος<sup>1</sup> εὔρεν ἕνα τῶν συνδούλων αὐτοῦ, ὃς ὤφειλεν αὐτῷ ἑκατὸν δηνάρια, καὶ κρατήσας αὐτὸν ἔπνιγε, λέγων, Ἀπόδος μοι<sup>2</sup> ὅ τι<sup>3</sup> ὀφείλεις. 29. πεσῶν οὖν ὁ σύνδουλος αὐτοῦ εἰς τοὺς πόδας αὐτοῦ<sup>4</sup> παρεκάλει αὐτόν, λέγων, Μακροθύμησον ἐπ' ἐμοί,<sup>5</sup> καὶ πάντα<sup>6</sup> ἀποδώσω σοι. 30. ὁ δὲ οὐκ ἤθελεν, ἀλλὰ ἀπελθὼν ἔβαλεν αὐτόν εἰς φυλακὴν, ἕως οὗ<sup>7</sup> ἀποδῶ τὸ ὀφειλόμενον. 31. ἰδόντες δὲ<sup>8</sup> οἱ σύνδουλοι αὐτοῦ τὰ γενόμενα ἐλυπήθησαν σφόδρα· here only (Deut. xv. 8; xxiv. 11). here and in Mk. v. 13 (of drowning).

<sup>1</sup> B omits ἐκείνου here (W.H. in brackets) and ἐκεῖνος in ver. 28.

<sup>2</sup> BBDL omit μοι.

<sup>3</sup> BCD and other uncials have εἰ τι. ο τι (T. R.) only in minus., rejected by modern editors.

<sup>4</sup> εἰς τ. π. αὐτου omitted in BCDL and by modern editors.

<sup>5</sup> So in B and many uncials. CDL have ἐπ' ἐμε.

<sup>6</sup> πάντα is feebly attested and unsuitable to the case.

<sup>7</sup> ἕως in BCL.

<sup>8</sup> ουν in BBD 33 e.

—ἑκατὸν δηνάρια: some fifty shillings; an utterly insignificant debt, which, coming out from the presence of a king, who had remitted so much to him, he should not even have remembered, far less been in the mood to exact.—κρατήσας α. ἔπνιγε: seizing, he choked, throttled him, after the brutal manner allowed by ancient custom, and even by Roman law. The act foretokens merciless treatment: no remission of debt to be looked for in this quarter.—ἀπόδος εἰ τι ὀφ. In the εἰ τι some ingenious commentators (Fritzsche, e.g.) have discovered Greek urbanity! ("Non sine urbanitate Graeci a conditione vinculo aptarunt, quod a nulla conditione suspensum sit.") Weiss comes nearer the truth when he sees in it an expression of "merciless logic". He will have payment of whatever is due, were it only a penny.—Ver. 29. μακροθύμησον, etc.: the identical words he used himself just a few minutes ago, reminding him surely of his position as a pardoned debtor, and moving him to like conduct.—Ver. 30. οὐκ ἤθελεν: no pity awakened by the words which echoed his own petition. "He would not." Is such conduct credible? Two remarks may be made on this. In parabolic narrations the improbable has sometimes to be resorted to, to illustrate the unnatural behaviour of men in the spiritual sphere, e.g., in the parable of the feast (Lk. xiv. 16-24) all refuse; how unlikely! But the action of the pardoned debtor is not so improbable as it seems. He acts on the instinct of a base nature, and also doubtless in accordance with long habits of harsh tyrannical behaviour towards men in his power. Every way a bad man: greedy, grasping in acquisition of wealth, prodigal in spending it, unscrupulous in using what is not his own.—Ver. 31. ἰδόντες οἱ σ. ἐλυπήθησαν: the other fellow-servants were greatly vexed or grieved. At what? the fate of the poor debtor? Why then not pay the debt? (Koetsveld). Not sympathy so much as annoyance at the unbecoming conduct of the merciless one who had obtained mercy was the feeling.—διεσάφησαν: reported the facts (narraverunt, Vulg.), and so threw light on the character of the man (cf. Mt. xiii. 36, W. and H.).—τῷ κ. ἑαυτῶν, to their own master, to whom therefore they might speak on a matter affecting his interest.—Ver. 32. δ. πονηρέ: the king could understand and overlook dishonesty in money matters, but not such inhumanity and villainy.—π. τ. ὀφειλήν. ἐ.: huge, uncountable.—ἐπεὶ παρεκάλεισάς με, when you entreated me. In point of fact he had not, at least in words, asked remission but only time to pay. Ungenerous himself, he was incapable of conceiving, and therefore of appreciating such magnificent generosity.—Ver. 33. οὐκ ἔδει; was it not your duty? an appeal to the sense of decency and gratitude.—καὶ σὲ . . . ἠλέησα. There was condescension in putting the two cases together as parallel. Ten thousand acts of forgiveness such as the culprit was asked to καὶ ἔλθόντες διεσάφησαν τῷ κυρίῳ αὐτῶν<sup>1</sup> πάντα τὰ γενόμενα.

32. Τότε προσκαλεσάμενος αὐτὸν ὁ κύριος αὐτοῦ λέγει αὐτῷ, Δούλε

<sup>a</sup> Rom xiii. ποιητέ, πᾶσαν τὴν ἠδφειλὴν ἐκείνην ἀφήκᾳ σοι, ἐπεὶ παρεκάλεισάς
7. <sup>1</sup> Cor.
vii. 3. με· 33. οὐκ ἔδει καὶ σὲ ἐλεῆσαι τὸν σύνδουλόν σου, ὡς καὶ ἐγὼ σε

ἤλεησα; 34. καὶ ὀργισθεὶς ὁ κύριος αὐτοῦ παρέδωκεν αὐτὸν τοῖς

<sup>b</sup> here only. βασιανισταῖς, ἕως οὐ ἀποδῶ πᾶν τὸ ὀφειλόμενον αὐτῷ.<sup>2</sup> 35. Οὕτω

καὶ ὁ πατήρ μου ὁ ἐπουράνιος<sup>3</sup> ποιήσει ὑμῖν, ἐὰν μὴ ἀφήτε ἕκαστος

τῷ ἀδελφῷ αὐτοῦ ἀπὸ τῶν καρδιῶν ὑμῶν τὰ παραπτώματα αὐτῶν."<sup>4</sup>

<sup>1</sup> εαυτων in  $\aleph$ BC. D has αυτων as in T. R. Vide below.

<sup>2</sup> αυτω omitted in BD (W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> ουρανιος in  $\aleph$ BDL. επουρανιος is not found elsewhere in Mt.

<sup>4</sup> τα παρ. αυτων are wanting in  $\aleph$ BDL $\Sigma$  and most editors omit them.

perform would not have equalled in amount one act such as he had got the benefit of. The fact in the spiritual sphere corresponds to this.—Ver. 34. ὀργισθεὶς: roused to just and extreme anger.—ΒΑΣΙΑΝΙΣΤΑΙΣ: not merely to the gaolers, but to the tormentors, with instructions not merely to keep him safe in prison till the debt was paid, but still more to make the life of the wretch as miserable as possible, by place of imprisonment, position of body, diet, bed, etc., if not by instruments of pain. The word, chosen to suit the king's mood, represents a subjective feeling rather than an objective fact.

Ver. 35. Application.—οὕτως: so, mutatis mutandis, for feelings, motives, methods rise in the moral scale when we pass to the spiritual sphere. So in general, not in all details, on the same principle; merciless to the merciless.—ὁ πατήρ μ. ὁ οὐρ.: Jesus is not afraid to bring the Father in in such a connection. Rather He is here again defining the Father by discriminating use of the name, as One who above all things abhors mercilessness.—μου: Christ is in full sympathy with the Father in this.—ὑμῖν: to you, my own chosen disciples.—ἕκαστος: every man of you.—ἀπὸ τῶν καρδιῶν: from your hearts, no sham or lip pardon; real, unreserved, thoroughgoing, and in consequence again and again, times without number, because the heart inclines that way.

CHAPTER XIX. FAREWELL TO GALILEE. In Mt.'s narrative the journey of Jesus to the south, reported in ver. 1, marks the close of the Galilean ministry. Not so obviously so in Mk.'s (see notes there), though no hint is given of a return to Galilee. It is not perfectly clear whether the incidents reported are to be conceived as occurring at the southern end of the journey, or on the way within Galilee or without. The latter alternative is possible (vide Holtz., H. C., p. 214). The incidents bring under our notice a variety of interesting characters: Pharisees with captious questions, mothers with their children, a man in quest of the summum bonum, with words and acts of Jesus corresponding. But the disciplining of the Twelve still holds the central place of interest. Last chapter showed them at school in the house, this shows them at school on the way.

Vv. 1, 2. Introductory, cf. Mk. x. 1.—Ver. 1. καὶ ἐγένετο . . . λόγους τούτους: similar formulae after important groups of logia in vii. 28, xi. 1, xiii. 53.—μετῆρην: also in xiii. 53, vide notes there; points to a change of scene worthy of note, as to Nazareth, which Jesus rarely visited, or to Judaea, as here.—ἀπὸ τ. Γαλιλαίας. The visit to Nazareth was a movement within Galilee. This is a journey out of it not necessarily final, but so thought of to all appearance by the evangelist.—εἰς τὰ ὄρια τ. ἰ. π. τ. ἰ.: indicates either the destination = to the coasts of Judaea beyond the Jordan; or the end and the way = to the Judaea territory by the way of Peraea, i.e., along the eastern shore of Jordan. It is not likely that the writer would describe Southern Peraea as a part of Judaea, therefore the second alternative is to be preferred. Mk.'s statement is that Jesus went to the coasts of Judaea and (καὶ, approved reading, instead of διὰ τοῦ in T. R.) beyond Jordan. Weiss thinks that Mt.'s version arose from misunderstanding of Mk. But his understanding may have been a

XIX. 1. ΚΑΙ ἐγένετο ὅτε ἐτέλεσεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς τοὺς λόγους τούτους, ἄμετῆρην ἀπὸ τῆς Γαλιλαίας, καὶ ἦλθεν εἰς τὰ ὄρια τῆς Ἰουδαίας <sup>a</sup> Ch. xiii. 53. <sup>b</sup> πέραν τοῦ Ἰορδάνου. 2. καὶ ἠκολούθησαν αὐτῷ ὄχλοι πολλοί, καὶ <sup>b</sup> Ch. iv. 15. ἐθεράπευσεν αὐτοὺς ἐκεῖ. 3. Καὶ προσῆλθον αὐτῷ οἱ <sup>1</sup> Φαρισαῖοι πειράζοντες αὐτόν, καὶ λέγοντες αὐτῷ, <sup>2</sup> “Εἰ ἔξεστιν ἀνθρώπῳ <sup>3</sup> ἀπολύσαι τὴν γυναῖκα αὐτοῦ κατὰ πᾶσαν αἰτίαν;” 4. Ὁ δὲ ἀποκριθεὶς εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, <sup>4</sup> “Οὐκ ἀνέγνωτε ὅτι ὁ ποιήσας <sup>5</sup> ἀπ’ ἀρχῆς ἄρσεν καὶ θῆλυ ἐποίησεν αὐτούς, 5. καὶ εἶπεν, “Ἐνεκεν τούτου <sup>c</sup> καταλείψει ἄνθρωπος τὸν πατέρα καὶ τὴν μητέρα· καὶ <sup>c</sup> Mk. x. 7. Eph. v. 31. fr. Gen. ii. 24.

<sup>1</sup> οἱ omitted in BCLD al

<sup>2</sup> αὐτῷ omitted in ὩBCLΣ al. D has it.

<sup>3</sup> ὩBL omit ἀνθρώπῳ.

<sup>4</sup> ὩBDL omit αὐτοῖς.

<sup>5</sup> κτίσας in B, 1, 22, 33, 124, sah. cop. (W.H.).

<sup>6</sup> The simple κολληθήσεται in BD al. (modern editors). The compound (T.R.) is from the Sept.

true one, for Mk.'s statement may mean that Peræa was the first reached station (Holtz., H. C.), implying a journey on the eastern side. The suggestion that the writer of the first Gospel lived on the eastern side, and means by πέραν the western side (Delitsch and others), has met with little favour.—Ver. 2. ἠκολούθησαν: the crowds follow as if there had been no interruption, in Mt.; in Mk., who knows of a time of hiding (ix. 30), they reassemble (x. 1).—ἐθεράπευσεν α. ἐκεῖ: a healing ministry commences in the south; in Mk. a teaching ministry (x. 1).

Vv. 3-9. The marriage question (Mk. x. 2-9).—Ver. 3. Φ. πειράζοντες: Pharisees again, tempting of course; could not ask a question at Jesus without sinister motives.—εἰ ἔξεστιν: direct question in indirect form, vide on xii. 10.—ἀπολύσαι . . . κατὰ πᾶσαν αἰτίαν: the question is differently formulated in the two accounts, and the answer differently arranged. In Mk. the question is absolute = may a man put away his wife at all? in Mt. relative = may, etc. . . . for every reason? Under the latter form the question was an attempt to draw Jesus into an internal controversy of the Jewish schools as to the meaning of Deut. xxiv. 1, and put Him in the dilemma of either having to choose the unpopular side of the school of Shammai, who interpreted  $\text{בְּרַחֲמֵי}$  strictly, or exposing Himself to a charge of laxity by siding with the school of Hillel. It was a petty scheme, but characteristic. Whether the interrogants knew what Jesus had taught on the subject of marriage and divorce in the Sermon on the Mount is uncertain, but in any case all scribes and Pharisees knew by this time what to expect from Him. For κατὰ in the sense of propter, vide instances in Hermann's Viger, 632, and Kypke.—Ver. 4. οὐκ ἀνέγνωτε: the words quoted are to be found in Gen. i. 27, ii. 24.—ὁ κτίσας: the participle with article used substantively = the Creator.—ἀπ' ἀρχῆς goes along with what follows, Christ's purpose being to emphasise the primitive state of things. From the beginning God made man, male and female; suited to each other, needing each other.—ἄρσεν καὶ θῆλυ: "one male and one female, so that the one should have the one; for if He had wished that the male should dismiss one and marry another He would have made more females at the first," Euthy.—Ver. 5. καὶ εἶπεν: God said, though the words as they stand in Gen. may be a continuation of Adam's reflections, or a remark of the writer.—ἐνεκεν τούτου: connected in Gen. with the story of the woman made from the rib of the man, here with the origin of sex. The sex principle imperiously demands that all other relations and ties, however intimate and strong, shall yield to it. The cohesion this force creates is the greatest possible.—οἱ δύο: these words in the Sept. have nothing answering to them in the Hebrew, but they are true to the spirit of the original.—εἰς σάρκα μίαν: the reference is primarily to the physical

μίαν; <sup>6</sup> ὥστε οὐκέτι εἰσὶ δύο, ἀλλὰ σὰρξ μία· ὁ οὖν ὁ Θεὸς
<sup>4</sup> note and <sup>d</sup> συνέλευξεν, ἄνθρωπος μὴ χωριζέτω." 7. Λέγουσιν αὐτῷ, "Τί οὖν
 in Mt. x.
<sup>9</sup> Μωσῆς ἐνετείλατο δοῦναι βιβλίον ἀποστασίου, καὶ ἀπολῦσαι αὐτήν<sup>1</sup>;"
<sup>c</sup> Mt. x. 5; 8. Λέγει αὐτοῖς, "Ὅτι Μωσῆς πρὸς τὴν *σκληροκαρδίαν ὑμῶν ἐπέ-
 xvi. 14.
 (Deut. x. τρεψεν ὑμῖν ἀπολῦσαι τὰς γυναῖκας ὑμῶν· ἀπ' ἀρχῆς δὲ οὐ γέγονεν 16. Sir.
 xvi. 10.) οὕτω. 9. λέγω δὲ ὑμῖν, ὅτι<sup>2</sup> ὅς ἂν ἀπολύσῃ τὴν γυναῖκα αὐτοῦ, εἰ (John xviii.
 14 accus. μὴ ἐπὶ πορνείᾳ,<sup>3</sup> καὶ γαμήσῃ ἄλλην, μοιχᾶται· καὶ ὁ ἀπολελυμένην and inf.).
 2 Cor. xii. γαμήσας μοιχᾶται." <sup>4</sup> 10. Λέγουσιν αὐτῷ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ,<sup>5</sup> "Εἰ
 1 (inf. ab
 here). οὕτως ἐστὶν ἡ αἰτία τοῦ ἀνθρώπου μετὰ τῆς γυναικός, οὐ<sup>1</sup> συμφέρει

<sup>1</sup> NDLZ omit αὐτήν.

<sup>2</sup> BDZ old Lat. verss. omit ὅτι.

<sup>3</sup> μη for ει μη in most uncials. The explanatory ει (T. R.) is only in minus BD have παρεκτος λογου πορνειας, followed by ποιει αυτην μοιχευθηναι in B.

<sup>4</sup> The clause και ο απολ. γαμησας μοιχεται is omitted in NDLZ but found in BCAZ. The true reading is doubtful and the passage has puzzled editors.

<sup>5</sup> NB omit αυτου, found in the greater number of uncials.

fleshly unity. But flesh in Hebrew thought represents the entire man, and the ideal unity of marriage covers the whole nature. It is a unity of soul as well as of body; of sympathy, interest, purpose.—Ver. 6. ὥστε with indicative, expressing actual result as Christ views the matter. They are no longer two, but one flesh, one spirit, one person.—ὁ οὖν: inference from God's will to man's duty. The creation of sex, and the high doctrine as to the cohesion it produces between man and woman, laid down in Gen., interdict separation. Let the Divine Syzygy be held sacred! How small the Pharisaic disputants must have felt in presence of such holy teaching, which soars above the partisan views of contemporary controversialists into the serene region of ideal, universal, eternal truth!

Vv. 7-9. τί οὖν, etc.: such doctrine could not be directly gainsaid, but a difficulty might be raised by an appeal to Moses and his enactment about a bill of divorce (Deut. xxiv. 1): The Pharisees seem to have regarded Moses as a patron of the practice of putting away, rather than as one bent on mitigating its evil results. Jesus corrects this false impression.—Ver. 8. πρὸς τ., with reference to.—σκληροκαρδίαν: a word found here and in several places in O. T. (Sept.), not in profane writers; points to a state of heart which cannot submit to the restraints of a high and holy law, literally uncircumcisedness of heart (Deut. x. 16; Jer. iv. 4).—ἐπέτρεψεν, permitted, not enjoined. Moses is respectfully spoken of as one who would gladly have welcomed a better state of things; no blame imputed except to the people who compelled or welcomed such imperfect legislation (ὑμῶν twice in ver. 8).—ἀπ' ἀρχῆς, etc.: the state of things which made the Mosaic rule necessary was a declension from the primitive ideal.—Ver. 9, vide notes on Mt. v. 31, 32.

Vv. 10-12. Subsequent conversation with the disciples.—Christ's doctrine on marriage not only separated Him totò cælo from Pharisaic opinions of all shades, but was too high even for the Twelve. It was indeed far in advance of all previous or contemporary theory and practice in Israel. Probably no one before Him had found as much in what is said on the subject in Gen. It was a new reading of old texts by one who brought to them a new view of man's worth, and still more of woman's. The Jews had very low views of woman, and therefore of marriage. A wife was bought, regarded as property, used as a household drudge, and dismissed at pleasure—vide Benzinger, Heb. Arch., pp. 138-146.—Ver. 10. αἰτία: a vague word. We should say: if such be the state of matters as between husband and wife, and that is doubtless what is meant. So interpreted, αἰτία = res, conditio. (So Grotius.) Fritzsche regards the phrase ἡ αἰτία τ. ἀ. μ. τ. γ. as in a negligent way expressing the idea: if the reason compelling a man to live with a wife be so stringent (no separation save for adultery). If we interpret αἰτία in the light of ver. 3 (κατὰ π. αἰτίαν) the word will mean cause of separation. The sense is the same, but

γαμήσαι." 11. Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, "Οὐ πάντες ἔχωροῦσι τὸν λόγον g 2 Cor. vii. τούτου,<sup>1</sup> ἀλλ' οἷς δέδοται. 12. εἰσὶ γὰρ <sup>2</sup> εὐνοῦχοι, οἵτινες ἐκ h Acts viii<sup>2</sup> κοιλίας μητρὸς ἐγεννήθησαν οὕτω· καὶ εἰσιν εὐνοῦχοι, οἵτινες εὐνο-<sup>27</sup> χίσθησαν ὑπὸ τῶν ἀνθρώπων· καὶ εἰσιν εὐνοῦχοι, οἵτινες εὐνούχισαν ἑαυτοὺς διὰ τὴν βασιλείαν τῶν οὐρανῶν. ὁ δυνάμενος χωρεῖν χωρεῖτω."

13. Τότε προσηνέχθη <sup>2</sup> αὐτῷ παῖδια, ἵνα τὰς χεῖρας ἐπιθῇ αὐτοῖς, καὶ προσεῦξεται· οἱ δὲ μαθηταὶ ἐπετίμησαν αὐτοῖς· 14. ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν,<sup>3</sup> "Ἄφετε τὰ παῖδια, καὶ μὴ <sup>1</sup>κωλύετε αὐτὰ ἔλθεῖν

i Lk. xiii. 2
Acts. xvi
6; xxiv. 23.
Heb. vii.
23 (same const. acc
and inf.).

<sup>1</sup> B Orig. omit τούτου (W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> BCDL and most other uncials have the pl. προσηνεχθησαν. The sing. (T. R. after late uncials) is a gram. cor. to correspond with neut. pl. nom. (παῖδια).

<sup>3</sup> BCDL add αυτοῖς. (Tisch., W.H. in margin).

in any view the manner of expression is somewhat helpless, as was not unnatural in the circumstances. Euthy. gives both meanings = αἰτία συζυγίας and αἰτία διαξευγνύουσα, with a preference for the former.—ἀνθρώπων here = vir, maritus; instances of this use in Kypke, Palairot, etc.

Ver. 11. ὁ δὲ εἶπεν. Jesus catches up the remark of the disciples, and attaches to it a deeper sense than they thought of. Their idea was that marriage was not worth having if a man must put up with all the faults and caprices of a woman, without possibility of escape, except by gross misconduct. He thinks of the celibate state as in certain cases desirable or preferable, irrespective of the drawbacks of married life, and taking it even at the best.—τὸν λόγον thus will mean: what you have said, the suggestion that the unmarried condition is preferable.—χωροῦσι = capere, receive, intellectually and morally, for in such a case the two are inseparable. No man can understand as a matter of theory the preferableness of celibacy under certain circumstances, unless he be capable morally of appreciating the force of the circumstances.—ἀλλ' οἷς δέδοται: this phrase points chiefly to the moral capacity. It is not a question of intelligence, nor of a merely natural power of continence, but of attaining to such a spiritual state that the reasons for remaining free from married ties shall prevail over all forces urging on to marriage. Jesus lifts the whole subject up out of the low region of mere personal taste, pleasure, or convenience, into the high region of the Kingdom of God and its claims.—Ver. 12 is an explanatory commentary on δέδοται.—εὐνοῦχος: keeper of the bed-chamber in an Oriental harem (from εὐνή, bed, and ἔχω), a jealous office, which could be entrusted only to such as were incapable of abusing their trust; hence one who has been emasculated. Jesus distinguishes three sorts, two physical and one ethical: (1) those born with a defect (ἐγεννήθησαν οὕτως); (2) those made such by art (εὐνούχισθησαν ὑπὸ τῶν ἀνθρώπων); (3) those who make themselves eunuchs (εὐνούχισαν ἑαυτοὺς).—διὰ τὴν β. τ. ο., for the Kingdom of Heaven's sake. This explains the motive and the nature of ethical eunuchism. Here, as in xv. 17, Jesus touches on a delicate subject to teach His disciples a very important lesson, viz., that the claims of the Kingdom of God are paramount; that when necessary even the powerful impulses leading to marriage must be resisted out of regard to them.—ὁ δυνάμενος χωρεῖν χωρεῖτω: by this final word Jesus recognises the severity of the demand as going beyond the capacity of all but a select number. We may take it also as an appeal to the spiritual intelligence of His followers = see that ye do not misconceive my meaning. It is not monasticism, based on vows of life-long celibacy, a vast baleful misconception, turning a military requirement to subordinate personal to imperial interests, as occasion demands, into an elaborate ascetic system?

Vv. 13-15. Children brought for a blessing (Mk. x. 13-16; Lk. xviii. 15-17).—Ver. 13. τότε: if the order of the narrative reflect the order of events, this invasion by the children was a happy coincidence after those words about the sacred and indissoluble tie of

j for ἀποστ. πρὸς με<sup>1</sup>. Ἰ τῶν γὰρ τοιούτων ἐστὶν ἡ βασιλεία τῶν οὐρανῶν.”
cf. 1 Cor. iii. 21; vi. 19.
 k here and in ver. 29 and parall. 16. ΚΑΙ ἰδοῦ, εἰς προσελθῶν εἶπεν αὐτῷ,<sup>3</sup> “ Διδάσκαλε ἀγαθέ,<sup>4</sup> τί ἀγαθὸν ποιήσω, ἵνα ἔχω<sup>5</sup> κ’ ζωὴν κ’ αἰώνιον; ” 17. Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, Ch. xxv. 46. Lk. x. 25, for the summum bonum in Synop. Gospels.

<sup>1</sup> με in BCD; εμε in ΞLΔ.

<sup>2</sup> ΞBDLΔ place αυτοῖς after χεῖρας (Tisch., W.H.). <sup>3</sup> ΞB have αὐτῷ εἶπεν.

<sup>4</sup> ΞBDL Orig. Hil. omit ἀγαθε, which probably comes in from the parall., to which, indeed, Mt.'s version has been assimilated throughout (ver. 17) in T.R.

<sup>5</sup> σχω in BD Orig. (W.H.).

marriage and the duty of subordinating even it to the claims of the kingdom.—προσηνέχθησαν, passive, by whom brought not said, the point of the story being how Jesus treated the children.—ἵνα τ. χ. ἐπιθῆ, that he may lay His hands on them: the action being conceived of as present (Klotz ad Devar, p. 618).—καὶ προσεῦξεται: the imposition of hands was a symbol of prayer and blessing, possibly in the minds of those who brought the children it was also a protection from evil spirits (Orig.).—ἐπετίμησαν αὐτοῖς: the αὐτοῖς ought in strict grammar to mean the children, but it doubtless refers to those who brought them. The action of the disciples was not necessarily mere officiousness. It may have been a Galilean incident, mothers in large numbers bringing their little ones to get a parting blessing from the good, wise man who is leaving their country, unceremoniously crowding around Him, affectionately mobbing Him in a way that seemed to call for interference. This act of the mothers of Galilee revealed how much they thought of Jesus.—Ver. 14. ἀφετε, μὴ κωλύετε: visits of the children never unseasonable; Jesus ever delighted to look on the living emblems of the true citizen of the Kingdom of God; pleased with them for what they were naturally, and for what they signified.—τοιούτων, of such, i.e., the child-like; repetition of an old lesson (xviii. 3).—Ver. 15. ἐπορεύθη ἐκεῖθεν; He departed thence, no indication whence or whither. The results of this meeting are conceivable. Christians may have come out of that company. Mothers would not forget Him who blessed their children on the way to His cross, or fail to speak of the event to them when they were older.

Vv. 16-22.—A man in quest of the “summum bonum” (Mk. x. 17-22; Lk. xviii. 18-23). A phenomenon as welcome to Jesus as the visit of the mothers with their children: a man not belonging to the class of self-satisfied religionists of whom He had had ample experience; with moral ingenuousness, an open mind, and a good, honest heart; a malcontent probably with the teaching and practice of the Rabbis and scribes coming to the anti-Rabbinical Teacher in hope of hearing from Him something more satisfying. The main interest of the story for us lies in the revelation it makes of Christ's method of dealing with inquirers, and in the subsequent conversation with the disciples.

Ver. 16. ἰδοῦ, lo! introduces a story worth telling.—εἰς: one, singled out from the crowd by his approach towards Jesus, and, as the narrative shows, by his spiritual state.—Διδάσκαλε: this reading, which omits the epithet ἀγαθέ, doubtless gives us the true text of Mt., but in all probability not the exact terms in which the man addressed Jesus. Such a man was likely to accost Jesus courteously as “good Master,” as Mk. and Lk. both report. The omission of the epithet eliminates from the story the basis for a very important and characteristic element in Christ's dealing with this inquirer contained in the question: “Why callest thou me good?” which means not “the epithet is not applicable to me, but to God only,” but “do not make ascriptions of goodness a matter of mere courtesy or politeness”. The case is parallel to the unwillingness of Jesus to be called Christ indiscriminately. He wished no man to give Him any title of honour till he knew what he was doing. He wished this man in particular to think carefully on what is good, and who, all the more that there were competing types of goodness to choose from, that of the Pharisees, and that exhibited in His own teaching.—τί ἀγαθὸν ποιήσω. the ἀγαθὸν is omitted in the parallels,

“Τί με λέγεις ἀγαθόν; οὐδεὶς ἀγαθός, εἰ μὴ εἷς, ὁ Θεός.<sup>1</sup> εἰ δὲ θέλεις εἰσελθεῖν εἰς τὴν ζωὴν,<sup>2</sup> ἴτήρησον<sup>3</sup> τὰς ἐντολάς.” 18. Λέγει ἰ Ch. xliii. αὐτῷ, “<sup>m</sup> Ποίας;” Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς εἶπε, “Τό, οὐ φονεύσεις· οὐ<sup>5</sup> 20 (in sense of observe). μοιχεύσεις· οὐ κλέψεις· οὐ ψευδομαρτυρήσεις· 19. τίμα τὸν μ Ch. xxii. πατέρα σου<sup>4</sup> καὶ τὴν μητέρα· καὶ, ἀγαπήσεις τὸν πλησίον σου ὡς<sup>5a</sup> σεαυτόν.” 20. Λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ νεανίσκος, “Πάντα ταῦτα<sup>5</sup> ἐφύλαξά-

<sup>1</sup> For the clause τι με λεγεις . . . θεος in T. R.,  $\aleph$ BDL, many verss. (including Syr. Cur. and Sin.) Orig. read τι με ερωτας περι του αγαθου; εις εστιν ο αγαθος, which the R. V. and most modern editors adopt. Harmonistic assimilation is probably responsible for the T. R.

<sup>2</sup>  $\aleph$ BCDL place εισελθειν after ζωην.

<sup>3</sup> τηρει in BD.

<sup>4</sup>  $\aleph$ BCD omit σου.

<sup>5</sup> ταυτα παντα in BD.

but it is implied; of course it was something good that would have to be done in order to obtain eternal life. What good shall I do? Fritzsche takes this as not = quid boni faciam? but = quid, quod bonum sit, faciam? that is, not = what particular good action shall, etc., but = what in the name of good, etc. This is probably right. The man wants to know what the good really is . . . that by doing it he may attain eternal life. It was a natural question for a thoughtful man in those days when the teaching and practice of the religious guides made it the hardest thing possible to know what the good really was. It is a mistake to conceive of this man as asking what specially good thing he might do in the spirit of the type of Pharisee who was always asking, What is my duty and I will do it? (Schöttgen). Would Jesus have loved such a man, or would such a man have left His presence sorrowful?—ζωὴν αἰώνιον: an alternative name for the summum bonum in Christ's teaching, and also in current Jewish speech (Wünsche, Beiträge). The Kingdom of God is the more common in the Synoptics, the other in the fourth Gospel.—Ver. 17. τί με ἐρωτᾷς, etc.: it seems as if Jesus thought the question superfluous (so Weiss and Meyer), but this was only a teacher's way of leading on a pupil = “of course there is only one answer to that: God is the one good being, and His revealed will shows us the good He would have us do”. A familiar old truth, yet new as Christ meant it. How opposed to current teaching we know from Mt. xv. 4-9.—εἰ δὲ θέλεις, etc., but, to answer your question directly, if, etc.—ἴτη-ει (-ησον) τ. ἐν.: a vaguer direction than than it seems to us now. We now think only of the Ten Words. Then there were many commands of God besides these; and many more still of the scribes, hence most naturally the following question.—Ver. 18. ποιᾷς; not = τίνας (Grotius), but what sort of commands; out of the multitude of commands divine and human, which do you mean? He had a shrewd guess doubtless, but wanted to be sure. Christ's reply follows in this and subsequent verse, quoting in direct form prefaced with τό the sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth, and fifth commands of the Decalogue with that to love a neighbour as ourselves from Lev. xix. 18. This last Origen regarded as an interpolation, and Weiss thinks that the evangelist has introduced it from xxii. 39 as one that could not be left out. If it be omitted the list ends with the fifth, a significantly emphatic position, reminding us of Mt. xv. 4, and giving to the whole list an antithetic reference to the teaching of the scribes. In sending the inquirer to the second table of the Decalogue as the sum of duty, Jesus gave an instruction anything but commonplace, though it seem so to us. He was proclaiming the supremacy of the ethical, a most important second lesson for the inquirer, the first being the necessity of using moral epithets carefully and sincerely. From the answer given to this second lesson it will appear whereabouts the inquirer is, a point Jesus desired to ascertain.

Vv. 20-22. ὁ νεανίσκος, the youth; whence known? from a special tradition (Meyer); an inference from the expression ἐκ νεότητός μου in Mk. x. 20 (Weiss).—ἐφύλαξα (-άμην). Kypke and Elsnor take pains to show that the use of this verb (and of τηρεῖν, ver. 17) in the sense of obeying commands is good Greek. More

μην ἐκ νεότητός μου<sup>1</sup>· τί ἔτι ὑστερῶ;" 21. Ἐφη αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, α vide Ch. v. "Εἰ θέλεις <sup>48</sup> τέλειος εἶναι, ὑπάγε, ° πώλησόν σου τὰ ὑπάρχοντα, ο Ch. xiii. 44. καὶ δὸς πτωχοῖς· καὶ ἔξεις θησαυρὸν ἐν οὐρανῷ<sup>2</sup>· καὶ ° δεῦρο, P Ch. iv. 19; xi. 28 (pl. ἀκολουθεῖ μοι." 22. Ἀκούσας δὲ ὁ νεαρίσκος τὸν λόγον,<sup>3</sup> ἀπῆλθε form
 δεῦτε). λυπούμενος· ἦν γὰρ ἔχων κτήματα<sup>4</sup> πολλὰ.

23. Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς εἶπε τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ, "Ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, q here and in parall. ὅτι ° δυσκόλως πλουσίος<sup>5</sup> εἰσελεύσεται εἰς τὴν βασιλείαν τῶν

<sup>1</sup> For ἐφυλαξαμην ἐκ νεότητος μου (from the parall.) ἩBL have simply ἐφυλαξα.

<sup>2</sup> ἐν οὐρανοῖς in BCD.

<sup>3</sup> τον λογον (as in T. R.) in CD; τον λογον τουτον in B (W.H. in brackets).

<sup>4</sup> B has χρηματα, which even W.H. have disregarded.

<sup>5</sup> πλουσιος δυσκολως in ἩBCDLZ 33.

important is it to note the declaration the verb contains: all these I have kept from youth. To be taken as a simple fact, not stated in a self-righteous spirit (Weiss-Meyer), rather sadly as by one conscious that he has not thereby reached the desired goal, real rest in the highest good found. The exemplary life plus the dissatisfaction meant much: that he was not a morally commonplace man, but one with affinities for the noble and the heroic. No wonder Jesus felt interested in him, "loved him" (Mk. x. 21), and tried to win him completely. It may be assumed that the man appreciated the supreme importance of the ethical, and was not in sympathy with the tendency of the scribes to subordinate the moral to the ritual, the commands of God to the traditions of the elders.—τί ἔτι ὑστερῶ: the question interesting first of all as revealing a felt want: a good symptom; next as betraying perplexity = I am on the right road, according to your teaching; why then do I not attain the rest of the true godly life? The question, not in Mk., is implied in the tone of the previous statement, whether uttered or not.—Ver. 21. εἰ θέλεις τέλειος εἶναι (on τέλειος vide v. 48): if you wish to reach your end, the true life and the rest it brings.—ὑπάγε, etc.: go, sell off, distribute to the poor, and then come, follow me—such is the advice Christ gives: His final lesson for this inquirer. It is a subjective counsel relative to the individual. Jesus sees he is well-to-do, and divines where the evil lies. It is doubtful if he cares passionately, supremely for the true life; doubtful if he be τέλειος in the sense of single-mindedness. It is not a question of one more thing to do, but of the state of the heart, which the suggestion to sell off will test. The invitation to become a disciple is seriously meant. Jesus, who repelled some offering themselves, thinks so well of this man as to desire him for a disciple. He makes the proposal hopefully. Why should so noble a man not be equal to the sacrifice? He makes it with the firm belief that in no other way can this man become happy. Noblesse oblige. The nobler the man, the more imperative that the heroic element in him have full scope. A potential apostle, a possible Paul even, cannot be happy as a mere wealthy merchant or landowner. It is "a counsel of perfection," but not in the ascetic sense, as if poverty were the sure way to the higher Christian life; rather in the sense of the adage: of him to whom much is given shall much be required.—Ver. 22. ἀπῆλθεν: he would have to go away in any case, even if he meant to comply with the advice in order to carry it into effect. But he went away λυπούμενος, in genuine distress, because placed in a dilemma between parting with wealth and social position, and forfeiting the joy of discipleship under an admired Master. What was the final issue? Did "the thorns of avarice defile the rich soil of his soul" (Euthy.), and render him permanently unfruitful, or did he at last decide for the disciple life? At the worst see here the miscarriage of a really noble nature, and take care not to fall into the vulgar mistake of seeing in this man a Pharisee who came to tempt Jesus, and who in professing to have kept the commandments was simply a boastful liar. (So Jerome: "Non voto discentis sed tentantis interrogat . . . mentitur adolescens.")

Vv. 23-27. Conversation ensuing (Mk. x. 23-27; Lk. xviii. 24-27).—Ver. 23.

οὐρανῶν. 24. πάλιν δὲ λέγω ὑμῖν, εὐκοπώτερον ἐστὶ ἢ κάμηλον διὰ τὸ Ch. iii. 4
xiii. 24
 τρυπήματος<sup>1</sup> ῥαφίδος διελθεῖν,<sup>2</sup> ἢ πλούσιον εἰς τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ εἰσελθεῖν." 25. Ἀκούσαντες δὲ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ<sup>3</sup> ἐξεπλήσσοντο σφόδρα, λέγοντες, "Τίς ἄρα δύναται σωθῆναι;" 26. Ἐμβλέ-ψας δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, "Ἐπαρὰ ἀνθρώποις τοῦτο ἀδύνατον ἐστὶ, ἔπαρὰ δὲ Θεῷ πάντα δυνατὰ ἐστὶ."<sup>4</sup>

27. Τότε ἀποκριθεὶς ὁ Πέτρος εἶπεν αὐτῷ, "Ἰδοῦ, ἡμεῖς ἀφήκαμεν s Rom. ii. 13
(Gen. xviii
14).

<sup>1</sup> τρηματος in  $\aleph B$ .

<sup>2</sup> The majority of uncials have εἰσελθεῖν (Iisch.), but  $\text{L D } \alpha$  have διελθεῖν as in T, R. This reading requires εἰσελθεῖν in the next clause (so in BD).

<sup>3</sup> αὐτου wanting in  $\aleph BCDLZ \Delta$ .

<sup>4</sup> ἐστὶ is omitted in  $BC \Delta \alpha l$ . Though found in parall. (Lk.), from which it has probably been imported, the sentence is more impressive without it.

ἀμην, introduces as usual a solemn utterance.—πλούσιος: the rich man is brought on the stage, not as an object of envy or admiration, which he is to the worldly-minded, but as an object of commiseration.—δυσκόλως εἰσελεύσεται, etc.: because with difficulty shall he enter the Kingdom of Heaven. This is stated as a matter of observation, not without sympathy, and not with any intention to pronounce dogmatically on the case of the inquirer who had just departed, as if he were an absolutely lost soul. His case suggested the topic of wealth as a hindrance in the divine life.—δυσκόλως: the adjective δύσκολος means difficult to please as to food (δύς, κόλον), hence morose; here used of things, occurs only in this saying in N. T.—Ver. 24. πάλιν δὲ λέγω; reiteration with greater emphasis. The strong language of Jesus here reveals a keen sense of disappointment at the loss of so promising a man to the ranks of discipleship. He sees so clearly what he might be, were it not for that miserable money.—εὐκοπώτερον, etc.: a comparison to express the idea of the impossible. The figure of a camel going through a needle-eye savours of Eastern exaggeration. It has been remarked that the variation in the parallel accounts in respect to the words for a needle and its eye shows that no corresponding proverb existed in the Greek tongue (Camb. G. T.). The figure is to be taken as it stands, and not to be "civilised" (vide H. C.) by taking κάμηλος (or κάμιλος, Suidas) = a cable, or the wicket of an Oriental house. It may be more legitimate to try to explain how so grotesque a figure could become current even in Palestine. Furrer suggests a camel driver leaning against his camel and trying to put a coarse thread through the eye of a needle with which he sews his sacks, and, failing, saying with comical exaggeration: I might put the camel through the eye easier than this thread (Tsch., für M. und R.).—τρήματος from τιντρώω, to pierce.—ῥαφίδος, a word disapproved by Phryn., who gives βελόνη as the correct term. But vide Lobeck's note, p. 90. It is noticeable that Christ's tone is much more severe in reference to wealth than to wedlock. Eunuchism for the kingdom is optional; possession of wealth on the other hand seems to be viewed as all but incompatible with citizenship in the kingdom.

Ver. 25. ἐξεπλήσσοντο σφόδρα: the severity of the Master's doctrine on wealth as on divorce (ver. 12) was more than the disciples could bear. It took their breath away, so to speak.—τίς ἄρα, etc.: it seemed to them to raise the question as to the possibility of salvation generally. The question may represent the cumulative effect of the austere teaching of the Master since the day of Caesarea. The imperfect tense of ἐξεπλήσσοντο may point to a continuous mood, culminating at that moment.—Ver. 26. ἐμβλέψας denotes a look of observation and sympathy. Jesus sees that He has made too deep an impression, depressing in effect, and hastens to qualify what He had said: "with mild, meek eye soothing their scared mind, and relieving their distress" (Chrys., Hom. lxiii.).—παρὰ ἀνθρώποις, etc.: practically this reflection amounted to saying that the previous remark was to be taken cum grano, as referring to tendency rather than to fact. He did not mean that it was as impossible for a rich man to be saved as for a camel to pass through a πάντα, καὶ ἠκολουθήσαμέν σοι· τί ἄρα ἔσται ἡμῖν;” 28. Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “ Ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι ὑμεῖς οἱ ἀκολουθήσαντές ἐ Titus iii. 5. μοι, ἐν τῇ ἑπαλιγγενεσίᾳ, ὅταν καθίσῃ ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἐπὶ θρόνου δόξης αὐτοῦ, καθίσεσθε καὶ ὑμεῖς<sup>1</sup> ἐπὶ δώδεκα θρόνους, ὁ Lk. xxii. κρίνοντες τὰς δώδεκα φυλάς τοῦ Ἰσραὴλ. 29. καὶ πᾶς ὅς<sup>2</sup> 30. ἡ 1 Cor. ἀφήκεν οἰκίας, ἢ ἀδελφούς, ἢ ἀδελφάς, ἢ πατέρα, ἢ μητέρα, ἢ v Lk. xxi. 12. γυναῖκα,<sup>3</sup> ἢ τέκνα, ἢ ἀγροῦς, ἔνεκεν τοῦ ὀνόματός μου,<sup>4</sup> ἑκατοῖτα-πλασίονα<sup>5</sup> λήψεται, καὶ ζωὴν αἰώνιον κληρονομήσει. 30. πολλοὶ δὲ ἔσονται πρῶτοι ἔσχατοι, καὶ ἔσχατοι πρῶτοι.

<sup>1</sup> DLZ have καὶ αὐτοὶ (Tisch.), καὶ ὑμεῖς in BCX, which Weiss thinks a mechanical conformation to ὑμεῖς in first clause. W.H. retain ὑμεῖς, but in brackets.

<sup>2</sup> οστις in most uncials.

<sup>3</sup> BD omit ἡ γυναῖκα—a most probable omission.

<sup>4</sup> του εμου ονοματος in BB.

<sup>5</sup> πολλαπλασιονα in BL.

needle-eye, but that the tendency of wealth was to act powerfully as an obstructive to the spiritual life.

Vv. 27-30. A reaction (Mk. x. 28-31; Lk. xviii. 28-30).—Ver. 27. εἶπεν δὲ Π.: from depression the disciples, represented by Peter, pass to self-complacent buoyancy—their natural mood.—ἰδοὺ points to a fact deserving special notice in view of the recent incident.—ἡμεῖς, we, have done what that man failed to do: left all and followed Thee.—τί ἄρα, etc.: a question not given in Mk. and Lk., but implied in Peter's remark and the tone in which it was uttered: what shall be to us by way of recompense? Surely we shall attain what seems so hard for some to reach.—Ver. 28. ἀμὴν: introducing a solemn statement.—ὑμεῖς οἱ ἄκ.: not a nominative absolute (Palaiet, Observ.), but being far from the verb, ὑμεῖς is repeated (with καὶ) after καθίσεσθε.—ἐν τ. ἐπαλιγγενεσίᾳ to be connected with καθίσεσθε following. This is a new word in the Gospel vocabulary, and points to the general renewal—“re-gensis (nova erit genesis cui praeerit Adamus ii., Beng.)”—in the end of the days, which occupied a prominent place in Jewish apocalyptic hopes. The colouring in this verse is so strongly apocalyptic as to have suggested the hypothesis of interpolation (Weizsäcker), or of a Jewish-Christian source (Hilgenfeld). It is not in the parallels, but something similar occurs in Lk. xxii. 30. Commentators translate this promise, so strongly Jewish in form, into Christian ideas, according to their taste, reading into it what was not there for the disciples when it was spoken.—Ver. 29. General promise for all faithful ones.—

ἀδελφούς, etc.: detailed specification of the things renounced for Christ.—πολλαπλασίονα λήψεται: shall receive manifoldly the things renounced, i.e., in the final order of things, in the new-born world, as nothing is said to the contrary. Mk. and Lk. make the compensation present.—καὶ ζωὴν αἰώνιον: this higher boon, the summum bonum, over and above the compensation in kind. Here the latter comes first; in chap. vi. 33 the order is reversed.—Ver. 30. πολλοὶ δὲ ἔσονται, etc., but many first ones shall be last, and last ones first. Fritzsche reverses the meaning = many being last shall be first, so making it accord with xx. 16. The words are so arranged as to suggest taking πρῶτ. ἔσχ. and ἔσχ. πρῶτ. as composite ideas, and rendering: many shall be first-lasts, and last-firsts = there shall be many reversals of position both ways. This aphorism admits of many applications. There are not only many instances under the same category but many categories: e.g., first in this world, last in the Kingdom of God (e.g., the wealthy inquirer and the Twelve); first in time, last in power and fame (the Twelve and Paul); first in privilege, last in Christian faith (Jews and Gentiles); first in zeal and self-sacrifice, last in quality of service through vitiating influence of low motive (legal and evangelical piety). The aphorism is adapted to frequent use in various connections, and may have been uttered on different occasions by Jesus (cf. Lk. xiii. 30: Jew and Gentile), and the sphere of its application can only be determined by the context. Here it is the last of those above indicated, not the first, as Weiss holds, also Holtzmann (H. C.),

XX. 1. Ὁμοία γάρ ἐστιν ἡ βασιλεία τῶν οὐρανῶν ἀνθρώπῳ οἰκοδεσποτῇ, ὅστις ἐξῆλθεν ἅμα πρῶτὶ μισθώσασθαι ἐργάτας εἰς τὸν ἀμπελῶνα αὐτοῦ. 2. συμφωνήσας δὲ μετὰ τῶν ἐργατῶν ἕκαστος ἡμέρας τὴν ἡμέραν, ἀπέστειλεν αὐτοὺς εἰς τὸν ἀμπελῶνα αὐτοῦ. 3. Καὶ ἐξελθὼν περὶ τὴν τρίτην ὥραν, εἶδεν ἄλλους ἐστῶτας ἐν τῇ ἀγορᾷ ἀργούσ· 4. κακένοις εἶπεν, Ὑπάγετε καὶ ὑμεῖς εἰς τὸν ἀμπελῶνα, καὶ ὁ ἐὰν ἦ δίκαιον δώσω ὑμῖν. οἱ δὲ ἀπήλθον. 5. Πάλιν ἐξελθὼν περὶ ἕκτην καὶ ἐνάτην ὥραν ἐποίησεν ὡσαύτως. 6. Περὶ δὲ τὴν ἑνδεκάτην ὥραν ἐξελθὼν, εὗρεν ἄλλους ἐστῶτας ἀργούσ,<sup>5</sup> καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς, Τί ὧδε ἐστήκατε ὅλην τὴν ἡμέραν ἀργοί;

<sup>1</sup> τὴν (T. R.), found in Δ, is omitted in ΞBCD.

<sup>2</sup> So in CDLΣ; καὶ ἐκεινοῖς in ΞB and many others.

<sup>3</sup> δε after παλιν in ΞCDL 33. BX omit δε (W.H. in brackets).

<sup>4</sup> ΞBDL omit ὡραν (Tisch., W.H.). <sup>5</sup> ΞBDL omit ἀργούσ (Tisch., W.H.).

though admitting that there may be reference also to the self-complacent mood of Peter. The δὲ after πολλοὶ implies that this is the reference. It does not introduce a new subject, but a contrasted view of the same subject. The connection of thought is: self-sacrifice such as yours, Peter, has a great reward, but beware of self-complacency, which may so vitiate the quality of service as to make one first in sacrifice last in the esteem of God.

CHAPTER XX. PARABLE OF THE HOURS; TWO SONS OF ZEBEDEE; BLIND MAN AT JERICO.

Vv. 1-16. Parable of the hours, peculiar to Mt., and, whatever its real connection as spoken by Jesus, to be interpreted in relation to its setting as here given, which is not impossible. The parable is brought in as illustrating the aphorism in xix. 30.—Ver. 1. ὁμοία γάρ etc.: γάρ points back to previous sentence about first-lasts and last-firsts.—ἀνθ. οἰκοδ.: vide xiii. 52.—ἅμα πρῶτ: at early dawn (similar use of ἅμα in classics), at the beginning of the day, which was reckoned from six to six.—μισθώσασθαι: hiring has a prominent place in this parable, at the first, third, sixth, ninth, eleventh hour. Why so many servants wanted that day? This feature obtains natural probability by conceiving that it is the season of grape-gathering, which must be done at the proper time and promptly; the more hands the better (Koetsveld, De Gelijk.).—Ver. 2. ἐκ δηναρίου: on the basis of a penny; the agreement sprang out of the offer, and acceptance, of a denarius as a day's wage

(so Meyer, Weiss, etc.).—τὴν ἡμέραν = per diem, only a single day is contemplated in the parable.—Ver. 3. τρίτην ὥ.: the article τὴν before τρίτην in T. R., omitted in W. H., is not necessary before an ordinal.—ἐστῶτας ἕ. τ. ἀγ.: the market-place there as here, the place where masters and men met.—ἀργούσ (a and ἔργον), not = idle in habit, but unemployed and looking for work.—Ver. 4. καὶ ὑμεῖς: he had got a fair number of workers in the morning, but he is pleased to have more for an urgent piece of work. The expression has reference to the Master's mood rather than to the men's knowledge of what had taken place at the first hour.—ὁ ἐὰν δίκαιον: no bargain this time, only a promise of fair equitable dealing, will be just at least, give in proportion to length of service; privately intends to do more, or at least is that way inclined.—Ver. 5. ἐποίησεν ὡσαύτως: repetition of the action at sixth and ninth hours; more men still on similar footing.—Ver. 6. περὶ δὲ τὴν ἑνδεκ.: the δὲ marks this final procedure as noteworthy. We begin to wonder at all this hiring, when we see it going on even at the last hour. Is the master a humorist hiring out of benevolence rather than from regard to the exigencies of the work? Some have thought so (Olshausen, Goebel, Koetsveld), and there seems good ground for the suggestion, though even this unusual procedure may be made to appear probable by conceiving the master as anxious to finish the work on hand that day, in which case even an hour's work from a sufficient number of willing hands

Cf. Ch. xxvii. 7. I. k. xvi. 6. Acts i. 18 Ch. xxvii 46. Acts x. 9. Ch. xii. 36. 1 Tim. v. 13. Titus i. 12.

d Rom. viii 36; x. 21.

ε Lk. viii. 3. 7. λέγουσιν αὐτῷ, ὅτι οὐδεὶς ἡμᾶς ἐμισθώσατο. λέγει αὐτοῖς, Gal. iv. 2.
11 κ. xliii. 5. Ὑπάγετε καὶ ὑμεῖς εἰς τὸν ἀμπελῶνα, καὶ ὁ εἰς ἃν ἢ δίκαιον λήψεσθε.<sup>1</sup>
xxiv. 27.
47. κ. l. 8. Ὁφίας δὲ γενομένης λέγει ὁ κύριος τοῦ ἀμπελῶνος τῷ ὀπιτρόπῳ
i. 22, etc.
κ. l. ix. 3; αὐτοῦ, Κάλεσον τοὺς ἔργατας, καὶ ἀπόδος αὐτοῖς<sup>2</sup> τὸν μισθόν, ἄρξά-
x. i. John
ii. 6. Rev. μενος ἄπο τῶν ἑσχατῶν ἕως τῶν πρώτων. 9. καὶ ἐλθόντες<sup>3</sup> οἱ περὶ
iv. 8; xxi.
21. τὴν ἑνδεκάτην ὥραν ἔλαβον ἄνα ἑδνάριον. 10. ἐλθόντες δὲ<sup>4</sup> οἱ
h Lk. v. 30 πρώτοι ἐνόμισαν ὅτι πλεῖονα<sup>5</sup> λήψονται· καὶ ἔλαβον καὶ αὐτοὶ ἀνά (πρὸς τεταρτ.)
John vi. δηνάριον.<sup>6</sup> 11. λαβόντες δὲ<sup>7</sup> ἐγόγγυζον κατὰ τοῦ οἰκοδεσπότου, 41, 61 (περὶ τεταρτ.); vi.
43 (μετ' ἀλλήλων).
12. λέγοντες, ὅτι<sup>7</sup> οὗτοι οἱ ἑσχατοὶ μίαν ὥραν ἔποίησαν, καὶ
10 (absol.) ἵππους ἡμῖν αὐτοῦς<sup>8</sup> ἐποίησας, τοῖς βαστάσασι τὸ βάρος τῆς ἡμέρας i Acts xv. 33. 2 Cor xi. 25. James iv. 13.

<sup>1</sup> The words καὶ ο εαν . . . ληψεσθε come in from ver. 4, and are wanting in ΣBDLZ.

<sup>2</sup> αὐτοῖς wanting in ΣCLZ, but found in BD and many other uncials (W.H. in margin).

<sup>3</sup> So in ΣCL and many other uncials; ἐλθόντες δε in BD (W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> καὶ ἐλθόντες in BCD (W.H.). <sup>5</sup> πλειον in BCNZΣ.

<sup>6</sup> ἀνα δην. καὶ αὐτοὶ in ΣBLZ. <sup>7</sup> ΣBD omit οτι.

<sup>8</sup> αὐτους ἡμιν in ΣDLZ. BCN as in text. W.H., former in text, latter in margin.

may be of value.—τί ὧδε ἐστήκατε, etc., why stand ye here (ἐστήκα, perfect active, neuter in sense, and used as a present) all the day idle? The question answers itself; no man would stand all the day in the market-place idle unless because he wanted work and could not get it.—Ver. 7. ὑπάγετε καὶ ὑμεῖς: these words said this time with marked emphasis=you too go, though it be so late. This employer would probably be talked of among the workers as a man who had a hobby—a character; they might even laugh at his peculiar ways. The clause about payment in T. R. is obviously out of place in this case. The pay the last gang were entitled to was not worth speaking about.

Vv. 8-12. The evening settlement.—Ver. 8. ἄρξάμενος: a pregnant word, including not only the commencement of the process of paying but its progress. There is an ellipsis, καὶ ἐλθῶν being understood before ἕως (Kypke). Grotius thinks this does not really mean beginning with the last comers, but without regard to order of coming in, so that no one should be overlooked. He fails to see that the idiosyncrasy of the master is a leading point, indeed the key to the meaning of the parable. This beginning with the last is an eccentricity from an ordinary everyday-life point of view. The master chooses to do so: to begin with those who have no claims.—Ver. 9. ἀνά δηνάριον, a denarius each; ἀνά is distributive = "accipiebant singuli denar.". For this use of ἀνά vide Herrmann's Viger, p. 576.—Ver. 10. οἱ πρώτοι: the intermediates passed over, as non-essential to the didactic purpose, we arrive at the first, the men hired on a regular bargain in the morning.—ἐνόμισαν: they had noticed the paying of the last first, and had curiously watched to see or hear what they got, and they come with great expectations: twelve hours' work, therefore twelve times the sum given to the one-hour men.—καὶ αὐτοῖς: surprising! only a penny! What a strange, eccentric master! He had seen expectation in their faces, and anticipated with amusement their chagrin. The money was paid by the overseer, but he was standing by enjoying the scene.—Ver. 11. ἐγόγγυζον: imperfect; the grumbling went on from man to man as they were being paid; to the overseer, but at (κατὰ) the master, and so that he could overhear.—Ver. 12. Their grievous complaint.—οὗτοι, these, with a workman's contempt for a shamer.—ἐποίησαν. Some (Wetstein, Meyer, Goebel, etc.) render, spent = they put in their one hour; without doing any work to speak of. The verb

καὶ τὸν<sup>1</sup> καύσωνα. 13. ὁ δὲ ἀποκριθεὶς εἶπεν ἐνὶ αὐτῶν, Ἐταίρε, j Lk. xii. 55
οὐκ ἀδικῶ σε· οὐχὶ δηναρίου συνεφώνησάς μοι; 14. ἄρον τὸ σὸν jas. i. 11.
καὶ ὑπαγε. θέλω δὲ<sup>1</sup> τούτῳ τῷ ἔσχατῳ δοῦναι ὡς καὶ σοί.
15. ἡ<sup>2</sup> οὐκ ἔξεστί μοι ποιῆσαι ὃ θέλω<sup>3</sup> ἐν τοῖς ἐμοῖς; εἰ<sup>4</sup> ὁ ὀφθαλμός σου πονηρός ἐστιν, ὅτι ἐγὼ ἀγαθός εἰμι; 16. οὕτως ἔσονται οἱ ἔσχατοι πρῶτοι, καὶ οἱ πρῶτοι ἔσχατοι· πολλοὶ γάρ εἰσι κλητοί, ὀλίγοι δὲ ἐκλεκτοί.”<sup>5</sup>

<sup>1</sup> θέλω εγω in B (W.H. in margin).

<sup>2</sup> BDLZ omit η.

<sup>3</sup> ο θελω ποιησαι in BDLZ, so giving to ο θελω due emphasis (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> η in BCDNS (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> πολλοι γαρ . . . εκλεκτοι wanting in BBLZ; brought in from chap. xxii. 14.

is used in this sense (e.g., Acts xv. 33), and one is strongly tempted to adopt this rendering as true to the contemptuous feeling of the twelve-hour men for the one-hour men. Kypke remarks against it that if ἐποίησαν had been meant in this sense = “commorati sunt,” the word ὡδε = ἐν τῷ ἀμπελῶνι would have been added. Perhaps the strongest reason against it is that the one-hour men had worked with such good will (that goes without saying) that even prejudiced fellow-workers could not ignore the fact. So we must take ἐποίησαν = worked.—τὸ βάρος, τὸν καύσωνα: these the points of their case: not that they had worked hard while the others had not, but that they had borne the burden of a whole day’s work, and worked through the heat of the day, and now came to be paid, weary and sweat-stained. (Some take καύσωνα as referring to the sirocco or south-east wind; hot, dry and dust-laden. On the winds of Palestine, vide Benzinger, Heb. Arch., p. 30.) What was one hour in the late afternoon, however hard the last comers worked, to that! And yet they are made equal (ἴσους)! Surely good ground for complaint!

Vv. 13-15. The master’s reply.—Ver. 13. ἐνὶ, to one of them. It would have been undignified to make a speech in self-defence to the whole gang. That would have been to take the matter too seriously. The master selects a man, and quietly speaks his mind to him.—ἐταίρε, friend, comrade; familiar and kindly. Cf. Lk. xv. 31.—Ver. 14. ἄρον τὸ σὸν, take thine, thy stipulated denarius. It looks as if this particular worker had refused the penny, or was saucily handing it back.—θέλω, I choose, it is my pleasure; emphatically spoken. Summa hujus verbi potestas, Beng.—

τούτῳ τ. ἔσχ.: one of the eleventh-hour men singled out and pointed to.—Ver. 15. οὐκ ἔξεστί: right asserted to act as he chooses in the matter.—ἐν τοῖς ἐμοῖς, in matters within my own discretion—a truism; the question is: what belongs to that category? Fritzsche and De Wette render: in my own affairs; Meyer: in the matter of my own property.—ἡ (W.H.) introduces an alternative mode of putting the case, which explains how the complainants and the master see the matter so differently, they seeing in it an injustice, he a legitimate exercise of his discretion.—πονηρός, vide on vi. 22-24.—ἀγαθός, generous; doing more than justice demands. So Bengel. Cf. Rom. v. 7 for the distinction between δίκαιος and ἀγαθός.

Ver. 16. Christ here points the moral of the parable = xix. 30, the terms ἔσχατοι πρῶτοι changing places, the better to suit the story. The meaning is not: the last as the first, and the first as the last, all treated alike. True, all get the same sum; at least the last and first do, nothing being said of those between; but the point of the parable is not that the reward is the same. The denarius given to all is not the central feature of the story, but the will of the master, whose character from a commercial point of view is distinctly eccentric, and is so represented to make it serve the didactic purpose. The method of this master is commercially unworkable; combination of the two systems of legal contract and benevolence must lead to perpetual trouble. All must be dealt with on one footing. And that is what it will come to with a master of the type indicated. He will abolish contract, and engage all on the footing of generously rewarding generous service. The parable does not bring

17. ΚΑΙ ἀναβαίνων ὁ Ἰησοῦς<sup>1</sup> εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα παρέλαβε τοὺς δώδεκα μαθητὰς κατ' ἰδίαν ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ, καὶ<sup>2</sup> εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, 18. "Ἰδοὺ, ἀναβαίνομεν εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα, καὶ ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου παραδοθήσεται τοῖς ἀρχιερεῦσι καὶ γραμματεῦσι· καὶ κατακρινούσιν αὐτὸν θανάτῳ,<sup>3</sup> 19. καὶ παραδώσουσιν αὐτὸν τοῖς ἔθνεσιν εἰς τὸ ἐμπαῖξαι καὶ μαστιγῶσαι καὶ σταυρῶσαι· καὶ τῇ τρίτῃ ἡμέρᾳ ἀναστήσεται."

20. Τότε προσῆλθεν αὐτῷ ἡ μήτηρ τῶν υἱῶν Ζεβεδαίου μετὰ τῶν

<sup>1</sup> B begins this section thus: μελλων δε αναβαινειν I., which W.H. adopt and Tr. places on margin, Weiss approving, viewing the reading in T. R. as a reminiscence of Mk.

<sup>2</sup> καὶ ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ in  $\aleph$ BLZ (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> εἰς θανατον in  $\aleph$  (Tisch.). B omits (W.H. θανατω within brackets).

this out fully, as it gives the story only of a single day. It suggests rather than adequately illustrates its own moral, which is that God does not love a legal spirit. In the parable the men who worked on contract, and, as it came out at the end, in a legal temper, got their penny, but what awaits them in future is not to be employed at all. Work done in a legal spirit does not count in the Kingdom of God. In reward it is last, or even nowhere. This is the trend of the parable, and so viewed it has a manifest connection with Peter's self-complacent question. On this parable vide my Parabolic Teaching of Christ.

Vv. 17-19. Third prediction of the passion (Mk. x. 32-34; Lk. xviii. 31-34).—The first in xvi. 21; the second in xvii. 22. In the first it was stated generally that Jesus was about πολλὰ παθεῖν. Here the πολλὰ are detailed. In the second mention was made of betrayal (παραδίδοται, xvii. 31) into the hands of men. Here the "men" resolve into priests, scribes, and Gentiles.—Ver. 17. ἀναβαίνων: going up from Peraea to the ridge on which the Holy City stood. The reading μέλλων ἀναβ. may indicate that they are already on the west side of the Jordan, and about to commence the ascent (Weiss-Meyer).—εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα: face being now turned directly towards Jerusalem, thought naturally turns to what is going to happen there.—κατ' ἰδίαν: there is a crowd of pilgrims going the same way, so Jesus must take aside His disciples to speak on the solemn theme what is specially meant for their ear.—ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ, in the way, vide Mk.'s description, which is very graphic.—Ver. 18. Ἰδοὺ, ἀναβαίνομεν! a memorable fateful anabasis! It excites lively expectation in the whole company, but how different the thoughts of the Master from those of His followers!—κατακρινούσι, they shall sentence Him to death; a new feature.—Ver. 19. ἐμπαῖξαι, μαστιγῶσαι, σταυρῶσαι, mock, scourge, crucify; all new features, the details of the πολλὰ παθεῖν. Note the parts assigned to the various actors: the Jews condemn, the Gentiles scourge and crucify.

Vv. 20-28. The two sons of Zebedee (Mk. x. 35-45).—Ver. 20. τότε (in Mk. the vaguer καί), then; let us hope not quite immediately after, but it need not have been long after. How soon children forget doleful news and return to their play; a beneficent provision of nature in their case, that grief should be but a summer shower. Or did James and John with their mother not hear the sad announcement, plotting perhaps when the Master was predicting?—ἡ μήτηρ: in Mk. the two brothers speak for themselves, but this representation is true to life. Mothers can be very bold in their children's interest.—αιτούσα, begging; the petitioner a woman and a near relative, not easy to resist.—τι: vague; no verbal indication as yet what is wanted; her attitude showed she had a request to make, the manner revealing that it is something important, and also perhaps that it is something that should not be asked.—Ver. 21. εἰπέ ἵνα: vide on iv. 3.—καθίσωσιν, etc. = let them have the first places in the kingdom, sitting on Thy right and left hand respectively. After ἐκ δεξιῶν, ἐξ εὐωνύμων, μερῶν is understood = on the right and left parts. Vide Bos, Ellipses Graecae, p. 184, who cites an instance of the latter phrase from Diod. Sic. So this was all that came out of the discourse on child-likeness! (xviii. 3 ff.). But Jesus had also

υἱῶν αὐτῆς, προσκυνούσα καὶ αἰτοῦσά τι παρ<sup>1</sup> αὐτοῦ. 21. ὁ δὲ εἶπεν αὐτῇ, “Τί θέλεις;” λέγει αὐτῷ,<sup>2</sup> “Εἰπέ ἵνα καθίσωσιν οὗτοι οἱ δύο υἱοὶ μου, εἰς<sup>3</sup> ἐκ δεξιῶν σου,<sup>3</sup> καὶ εἰς ἐξ εὐωνύμων,<sup>4</sup> ἐν τῇ βασιλείᾳ σου.” 22. Ἀποκριθεὶς δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν, “Οὐκ οἴδατε τί αἰτείθε. δύνασθε πιεῖν τὸ ποτήριον, ὃ ἐγὼ μέλλω πίνειν, καὶ τὸ βάπτισμα, ὃ ἐγὼ βαπτίζομαι, βαπτισθῆναι;”<sup>5</sup> λέγουσιν αὐτῷ, “Δυνάμεθα.” 23. Καὶ<sup>6</sup> λέγει αὐτοῖς, “Τὸ μὲν ποτήριόν μου πίεσθε, καὶ τὸ βάπτισμα, ὃ ἐγὼ βαπτίζομαι, βαπτισθήσεσθε· τὸ δὲ καθίσαι ἐκ δεξιῶν μου καὶ<sup>7</sup> ἐξ εὐωνύμων μου,<sup>8</sup> οὐκ ἔστιν ἐμὸν<sup>9</sup> δοῦναι, ἀλλ’ οἷς ἠτοίμασται ὑπὸ τοῦ πατρὸς μου.” 24. Καὶ

Ch. xxv
44; xxvi
64; Heb.
i. 13.

1 Ch. xxv. 34
41. 1 Cor
ii. 9.

<sup>1</sup> παρ' in  $\aleph$ CNXZ al. (Tisch.). απ' in BD (W.H. text, παρ margin).

<sup>2</sup> ἡ δε εἶπεν in B. <sup>3</sup> σου wanting in  $\aleph$ B.

<sup>4</sup> σου added in  $\aleph$ BCNZ al. Wanting n D.

<sup>5</sup> The clause καὶ τὸ βάπτισμα . . . βαπτισθῆναι in this and the next verse is omitted in  $\aleph$ BDLZ. It has doubtless been imported from Mk.

<sup>6</sup>  $\aleph$ BDZ omit καὶ.

<sup>7</sup> καὶ in  $\aleph$ CDZ (Tisch.), ἡ in BL, Lat. verss. 1, 33 (W.H. margin).

<sup>8</sup> μου omitted in  $\aleph$ BCDL al.

CDA insert τοῦτο before δοῦναι.

spoken of thrones in the new Genesis, and that seems to have fired their imagination and stimulated their ambition. And “the gentle and humble” John was in this plot! Conventional ideas of apostolic character need revision.

Ver. 22. Jesus meets this bold petition as He met the scribe's offer of discipleship (viii. 19), aiming at disenchantment by pointing out what it involved: throne and suffering going together. — τὸ ποτήριον, the cup, emblem of both good and evil fortune in Hebrew speech (Ps. xi. 6; xxiii. 5); here of suffering. — δυνάμεθα, we are able; the prompt, decided answer of the two brothers to whom Jesus had addressed His question. Had they then laid to heart what Jesus had said shortly before concerning His passion, and subsequent resurrection, and made up their minds to share His sufferings that they might so gain a high place in the kingdom? Had they already caught the martyr spirit? It is possible. But it is also possible that they spoke without thinking, like Peter on the hill.—Ver. 23. τὸ μὲν π. μ. πίεσθε, as for my cup, ye shall drink of it: predictive of the future fact, and also conferring a privilege = I have no objection to grant you companionship in my sufferings; that favour may be granted without risk of abuse.—τὸ δὲ καθίσαι, etc., but as for sitting on right and left hand, that is another affair.—οὐκ ἔστιν ἐμὸν δοῦναι = is not a matter of mere personal favour; favouritism has no place here; it depends on fitness. That is the meaning of the last clause, οἷς ἠτοίμασται ὁ τ. π. μ. = it is not an affair of arbitrary favour on the part of the Father any more than on my part. Thrones are for those who are fit to sit on them, and prepared by moral trial and discipline to bear the honour worthily: τοῖς ἀπὸ τῶν ἔργων δυναμένοις γενέσθαι λαμπροῖς—Chrys., Hom. lxxv. The same Father illustrates by supposing an ἀγωνοθέτης to be asked by two athletes to assign to them the crowns of victory, and replying: “it is not mine to give, but they belong to those for whom they are prepared by struggle and sweat” (ἀπὸ τῶν πόνων καὶ τῶν ἰδρώτων).

Vv. 24-28. Commotion in the disciple-circle.—Ver. 24. οἱ δέκα: the Twelve were all on one moral level, not one superior to ambitious passion, or jealousy of it in another. Therefore the conduct of the two greatly provoked the ten.—ἠγανάκτησαν Passow derives from ἄγω and ἄγω, and gives as original sense to be in a state of violent excitement like new wine fermenting. The ten were “mad” at the two; pitiful exhibition in the circumstances, fitted to make Jesus doubt His choice of such men. But better were not to be found.—Ver. 25. προσκαλεσάμενος: Jesus had to call them to Him, therefore they had had

m Ch. xxi. ἀκούσαντες οἱ δέκα ἠγανάκτησαν περὶ τῶν δύο ἀδελφῶν. 25. ὁ δὲ 15; xxvi.
 8. Mk. x. Ἰησοῦς προσκαλεσάμενος αὐτοὺς εἶπεν, “Οἴδατε ὅτι οἱ ἄρχοντες τῶν 14; 41;
 xiv. 4. Lk. ἐθνῶν κατακυριεύουσιν αὐτῶν, καὶ οἱ μεγάλοι κατεξουσιάζουσιν
 xiii. 14.
 n Mk. x. 42. αὐτῶν. 26. οὐχ οὕτως δὲ ἔσται ἐν ὑμῖν ἄλλ’ ὅς ἐάν θέλῃ ἐν
 1 Pet. v. 3
 (Acts xix. ὑμῖν μέγας γενέσθαι, ἔστω ὑμῶν διάκονος. 27. καὶ ὅς ἐάν θέλῃ ἐν 16 = to gain the ὑμῖν εἶναι πρῶτος, ἔστω ὑμῶν δούλος. 28. ὡσπερ ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ mastery, overpower) ἀνθρώπου οὐκ ἦλθε διακονηθῆναι, ἀλλὰ διακονῆσαι καὶ δοῦναι o Mk. x. 42.
 p Mk. x. 45 τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ ἵνα ἴσθαι ἵνα ἴσθαι ἵνα ἴσθαι ἵνα ἴσθαι ἵνα ἴσθαι (Ex. xxi.
 30. Levit. xix. 20. Num. xxv. 31). q Rom. viii. 29. Heb. ii. 10. ix. 28.

<sup>1</sup> ἩΒΔΖΣ omit δε.

<sup>2</sup> ἔστιν in BDZ (W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> Some MSS. have εἶσται, which is adopted by W.H. in both places.

the decency not to quarrel in His presence. Magistro non praesente, Beng. —κατακυριεύουσιν: in the Sept. used in the sense of rule, Gen. i. 28, Ps. lxxii. 8; here the connection requires the idea of “lording it over,” the κατὰ having intensive force; so also in the ἄπ. λεγ. κατεξουσιάζουσιν, following = play the tyrant.—τῶν ἐθνῶν: from these occasional references to the outside peoples we get Christ’s idea of the Pagan world; they seek material good (vi. 32), use repetition in prayer (vi. 7), are subject to despotic rule.—οἱ μεγάλοι, the grandees.—αὐτῶν after the two verbs in both cases refers to the ἐθνῶν. Grotius takes the second as referring to the ἄρχοντες, and finds in the passage this sense: the rulers, monarchs, lord it over the people, and their grandees lord it over them, the rulers, in turn; a picture certainly often true to life. Perhaps the intention is to suggest that the rule of the magnates is more oppressive than that of their royal masters: they strain their authority. “Ipsis saepe dominis imperantiores,” Beng.—Ver. 26. οὐχ οὕτως ἔστιν ἐ. ὑ. It is not so among you. The ἔσται of T.R. is probably conformed to the two following ἔσται, but it is true to the meaning. Jesus speaks of a state of matters He desires, but which does not yet exist. The present spirit of the Twelve is essentially secular and pagan.—μέγας, διάκονος: greatness by service the law of the Kingdom of God, whereby greatness becomes another thing, not self-asserted or arrogated, but freely conceded by others.—Ver. 27. πρῶτος may be a synonym for μέγας = μέγιστος (De W.) and δούλος for διάκονος; or in both cases increased emphasis may be intended, πρῶτος pointing to a higher place of dignity, δούλος to a lower depth of servitude. Burton (M. and T. in N.T., § 68) finds in the two ἔσται in vv. 26 and 27 probable instances of the third person future used imperatively.

Ver. 28. ὡσπερ, καὶ γὰρ in Mk.; both phrases introducing reference to the summum exemplum (Bengel) in an emphatic way.—περ lends force to ὡς = even as, observe.—ὁ ὑ. τ. ἀνθρώπου: an important instance of the use of the title. On the principle of defining by discriminating use it means: the man who makes no pretensions, asserts no claims.—οὐκ ἦλθε points to the chief end of His mission, the general character of His public life: not that of a Pretender but that of a Servant.—δοῦναι τὴν ψυχὴν, to give His life, to that extent does the service go. Cf. Phil. ii. 8: μέχρι θανάτου, there also in illustration of the humility of Christ. It is implied that in some way the death of the Son of Man will be serviceable to others. It enters into the life plan of the Great Servant.—λύτρον, a ransom, characterises the service, another new term in the evangelic vocabulary, suggesting rather than solving a theological problem as to the significance of Christ’s death, and admitting of great variety of interpretation, from the view of Origen and other Fathers, who regarded Christ’s death as a price paid to the devil to ransom men from bondage to him, to that of Wendt, who finds in the word simply the idea that the example of Jesus in carrying the principle of service as far as to die tends by way of moral influence to deliver men’s minds from every form of spiritual bondage (Die Lehre Jesu, ii. 510-517). It is an interesting question, What clue can be found in Christ’s own words, as hitherto reported, to the use by Him on this occasion of the term λύτρον, and to

29. ΚΑΙ ἐκπορευομένων αὐτῶν ἀπὸ Ἱεριχώ, ἠκολούθησεν αὐτῶν ὄχλος πολὺς. 30. καὶ ἰδοὺ, δύο τυφλοὶ καθήμενοι παρὰ τὴν ὁδόν, ἀκούσαντες ὅτι Ἰησοῦς παράγει, ἔκραζαν, λέγοντες, "Ἐλέησον ἡμᾶς, κύριε, υἱὸς Δαβίδ." 31. Ὁ δὲ ὄχλος ἐπετίμησεν αὐτοῖς ἵνα ἴσιωπήσωσιν. οἱ δὲ μείζον ἔκραζον, λέγοντες, "Ἐλέησον ἡμᾶς, κύριε, υἱὸς Δαβίδ." 32. Καὶ στὰς ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐφώνησεν αὐτούς, καὶ εἶπε, "Τί θέλετε ποιῆσω ὑμῖν;" 33. Λέγουσιν αὐτῶ, "Κύριε, ἵνα ἀνοιχθῶσιν ἡμῶν οἱ ὀφθαλμοί." 34. Σπλαγχνισθεὶς δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἤψατο τῶν ὀφθαλμῶν αὐτῶν· καὶ εὐθέως ἀνέβλεψαν αὐτῶν οἱ ὀφθαλμοί,<sup>6</sup> καὶ ἠκολούθησαν αὐτῶ.

Ch. xxvi. 63. Mk. iii. 4; ix. 34; x. 48<sup>1</sup> xiv. 61. Lk. xix. 40. Acts xviii. 9. Ch. xxvi. 34, 74 parall. (intrans. to emit a sound); here and in Ch. xxvii. 47. Mk. ix. 35. x. 49, etc. (to call to oneself, with acc.). Lk. xiv. 12 (to invite). John xliii. 13 (to call by a name).

<sup>1</sup> κυριε ελεησον ημας in BLZ.  $\aleph$ D omit κυριε (Tisch.). Same order in ver. 31 in  $\aleph$ BDLZ.

<sup>2</sup> υιε in  $\aleph$ CDL $\Sigma$  (Tisch., W.H. margin).

<sup>3</sup> ανοιγωσιν in  $\aleph$ BDLZ 33.

<sup>4</sup> οι οφ. ημων in  $\aleph$ BDLZ 33.

<sup>5</sup> ομματων in BDLZ. T. R. follows  $\aleph$ CN in using the more common word οφθαλμων.

<sup>6</sup> αυτων οι οφθαλμοι wanting in  $\aleph$ BDLZ and omitted by modern editors.

the sense in which He uses it? Wendt contends that this is the best method of getting at the meaning, and suggests as the most congenial text Mt. xi. 28-30. I agree with him as to method, but think a better clue may be found in Mt. xvii. 27, the word spoken by Jesus in reference to the Temple Tax. That word began the striking course of instruction on humility, as this word (xx. 28) ends it, and the end and the beginning touch in thought and language. The didrachmon was a λύτρον (Exodus xxx. 12), as the life of the Son of Man is represented to be. The tax was paid ἀντὶ ἑμοῦ καὶ σοῦ. The life is to be given ἀντὶ πολλῶν. Is it too much to suppose that the Capernaum incident was present to Christ's mind when He uttered this striking saying, and that in the earlier utterance we have the key to the psychological history of the term λύτρον? On this subject vide my book The Kingdom of God, pp. 238-241.

Vv. 29-34. Blind men (man) at Jericho (Mk. x. 46-52, Lk. xviii. 35-43). The harmonistic problems as to the locality of this incident (leaving Jericho, Mt. and Mk.; entering, Lk.) and the number of persons healed (one Mk. and Lk., two Mt.) may be left on one side, as also the modern critical attempts to account for the origin of the discrepancies. Those interested may consult for the former Keil and Nösgen, for the latter Holtz.,

H.C., and Weiss-Meyer.—Ver. 29. ἀπὸ Ἱεριχώ, from Jericho, an important town every way; "the key—the 'Chiavenna'—of Palestine to any invader from this quarter" (Stanley, Sinai and Palestine, p. 305; the whole account there given should be read), situated in an oasis in the Judaean desert, caused by streams from the mountains above and springs in the valley; with a flourishing trade and fine buildings, Herod's palace included; two hours distant from the Jordan; from thence to the summit a steep climb through a rocky ravine, haunt of robbers.—ὄχλος πολὺς, a great crowd going to the feast in Jerusalem.—Ver. 30. ἀκούσαντες, etc. Luke explains that the blind man learnt that Jesus was passing in answer to inquiry suggested by the noise of a crowd. He knew who Jesus was: the fame of Jesus the Nazarene (Mk. and Lk.), the great Healer, had reached his ear.—υἱὸς Δ.: popular Messianic title (ix. 27, xv. 22).—Ver. 31. ἐπετίμησεν: same word as in xix. 13, and denoting similar action to that of the disciples in reference to the children, due to similar motives. Officious reverence has played a large part in the history of the Church and of theology.—μείζον ἔκραζον, they cried out the more; of course, repression ever defeats itself; μείζον, adverb, here only in N.T.—Ver. 32. ἐφώνησεν might mean "addressed them" (Fritzsche), but "called them" seems to

XXI. 1. ΚΑΙ ὅτε ἤγγισαν εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα, καὶ ἦλθον εἰς Βηθφαγὴ πρὸς<sup>1</sup> τὸ ὄρος τῶν ελαιῶν, τότε ὁ<sup>2</sup> Ἰησοῦς ἀπέστειλε δύο μαθητάς, 2. λέγων αὐτοῖς, " Πορευέθητε<sup>3</sup> εἰς τὴν κώμην τὴν ἀπέναντι<sup>4</sup> ὑμῶν· καὶ εὐθέως εὐρήσετε ὄνον δεδεμένον, καὶ πῶλον μετ' αὐτῆς· λύσαντες ἀγάγετέ<sup>5</sup> μοι. 3. καὶ ἐάν τις ὑμῖν εἴπῃ τι, ἐρεῖτε, Ὅτι ὁ Κύριος

<sup>1</sup> B has εἰς for πρὸς, which Weiss thinks has come from the parall.

<sup>2</sup> ο is wanting in BD (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> πορευεσθε in ΞBDLZ Orig. (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> κατεναντι in ΞBCDLZ (Tisch., Trg., W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> αγετε in BD (W.H. in margin).

suit the situation better; cf. the parallels.—τί θέλετε, etc., what do you wish me to do for you? Not a superfluous question; they were beggars as well as blind; they might want alms (vide Mk. x. 46). Mt. says nothing about their being beggars, but the question of Jesus implies it.—Ver. 33. ἵνα ἀνοιγῶσιν οἱ ὀφθ. They desire the greater benefit, opening of their eyes, which shows that the eyes of their mind were open as to Christ's power and will.—ἀνοιγῶσιν, 2nd aorist subjunctive, for which the T. R. has the more common 1st aorist.—Ver. 34. σπλαγχνισθεῖς. Note the frequent reference to Christ's pity in this gospel (ix. 36, xiv. 14, xv. 32, and here).—τῶν ὀμμάτων, a synonym for ὀφθαλμῶν, as if with some regard to style which the scribes might have been expected to appreciate, but have not (ὀφθ., thrice, T. R.). ὄμμα is poetic in class. Greek.—ἠκολούθησαν, they followed Him, like the rest, without guide (sine hodego, Beng.), so showing at once that their eyes were opened and their hearts grateful.

CHAPTER XXI. ENTRY INTO JERUSALEM, ETC.—V. I-II. The entry (Mk. xi. i-ii, Lk. xix. 29-44).—Ver. 1, ὅτε ἤγγισαν εἰς Ἱ., when, etc. The evangelist does not, like a modern tourist, make formal announcement of the arrival at a point near Jerusalem when the Holy City came first into view, but refers to the fact in a subordinate clause. The manner of entry is the more important matter for him.—εἰς Βηθφαγὴ, to Bethphage = the house of figs, mentioned here and in the synoptical parallels, nowhere else in O. or N. T., but from Talmudic sources appears to have been a better known and more important place than Bethany (Buxtorf, Talm. Lex., p. 1691). No trace of it now.—εἰς τ. ὄ. τ. Ἱελαῶν, to the Mount of Olives; the εἰς, in all the three phrases used to define the position, means near to, towards, not into.—τότε, then, introducing what for the evangelist is the main event. Bengel's comment is: vectura mysterii plena inuitur. It is possible to import too much mystery into the incident following.—Ver. 2. εἰς τὴν κώμην: that is, naturally, the one named, though if we take εἰς before Βηθφαγὴ as = into, it might be Bethany, on the other side of the valley. Some think the two villages were practically one (Porter, Handbook for Syria and Palestine, p. 180).—ὄνον δ. καὶ πῶλον, a she-ass with her foal, the latter alone mentioned in parall.; both named here for a reason which will appear.—λύσαντες ἀγάγετε, loose and bring; without asking leave, as if they were their own.—Ver. 3. ἐάν τις, etc. Of course it was to be expected that the act would be challenged.—ἐρεῖτε, ye shall say, future with imperative force.—ὄτι, recitative, introducing in direct form the words of the Master.—ὁ Κύριος, the Lord or Master; not surely = Jehovah (Alford, G. T.), but rather to be taken in same sense as in Mt. viii. 25, or in ver. 30 of this chap.—αὐτῶν χρεῖαν ἔχει, hath need of them; in what sense? Looking to the synop. narratives alone, one might naturally infer that the need was physical, due to the fatigue of a toilsome, tedious ascent. But according to the narrative in 4th Gospel the starting point of the day's journey was Bethany (xii. 1, 12). The prophetic reference in ver. 4 suggests a wholly different view, viz., that the animals were needed to enable Jesus to enter Jerusalem in a manner conformable to prophetic requirements, and worthy of the Messianic King. One is conscious of a certain reluctance to accept this as the exclusive sense of the χρεῖα. Lutteroth suggests that Jesus did not wish to mix among the crowd of pilgrims on foot lest His arrival should be concealed and

αὐτῶν χρεῖαν ἔχει· εὐθέως δὲ ἀποστελεῖ αὐτούς.” 4. Τοῦτο δὲ <sup>a</sup> ὄλον<sup>1</sup> γέγονεν, ἵνα πληρωθῆ τὸ ῥηθὲν διὰ τοῦ προφήτου, λέγοντος,
 5. ‘Εἶπατε τῇ θυγατρὶ Σιών, Ἰδοῦ, ὁ βασιλεὺς σου ἔρχεταιί σοι, πρᾶς καὶ <sup>a</sup> ἐπιβεβηκὼς ἐπὶ ὄνον καὶ <sup>2</sup> πῶλον υἱὸν ὕποζυγίου.’
 6. Πορευθέντες δὲ οἱ μαθηταί, καὶ ποιήσαντες καθὼς προσέταξεν <sup>3</sup> αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, 7. ἤγαγον τὴν ὄνον καὶ τὸν πῶλον, καὶ ἐπέθηκαν <sup>b</sup> ἐπάνω<sup>4</sup> αὐτῶν τὰ ἱμάτια αὐτῶν,<sup>5</sup> καὶ ἐπεκάθισεν ἐπάνω αὐτῶν. 8. ὁ <sup>c</sup> δὲ <sup>c</sup> πλείστος ὄχλος <sup>d</sup> ἔστρωσαν εαυτῶν τὰ ἱμάτια ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ· ἄλλοι δὲ <sup>c</sup> ἔκοπτον κλάδους ἀπὸ τῶν δένδρων, καὶ ἔστρώνονον ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ.
 great). 1 Cor. xiv. 27 (=at most, adv.) d Mk. xiv. 15. Lk. xxii. 12. Acts ix. 34.

<sup>1</sup> BCDLZ omit ὄλον, which is found in BNΣ. It is probably an echo of Ch. i. 22 (Weiss) (W.H. omit).

<sup>2</sup> καὶ ἐπι in BLN. CD with many others omit the ἐπι as in T. R. (ἐπὶ ὑποζύγιον καὶ πῶλον νέον in Zech. ix. 9, Sept.).

<sup>3</sup> συνεταξεν in BCD.

<sup>4</sup> ἐπ αὐτῶν in BDLZ.

<sup>5</sup> BD omit αὐτῶν.

the interest awakened by His presence lessened.—Ver. 4. ἵνα πληρωθῆ: ἵνα is to be taken here as always in this Gospel, in its strictly final sense. Such is the view of the evangelist and the view he wishes his readers to take. But it does not follow from this that Christ's whole action proceeded from a conscious intention to fulfil a prophecy. On the contrary, the less intention on His part the greater the apologetic value of the correspondence between prophecy and fact. Action with intention might show that He claimed to be, not that He was, the Messiah. On the other hand, His right to be regarded as the Messiah would have stood where it was though He had entered Jerusalem on foot. That right cannot stand or fall with any such purely external circumstance, which can at best possess only the value of a symbol of those spiritual qualities which constitute intrinsic fitness for Messiahship. But Jesus, while fully aware of its entirely subordinate importance, might quite conceivably be in the mood to give it the place of a symbol, all the more that the act was in harmony with His whole policy of avoiding display and discouraging vulgar Messianic ideas and hopes. There was no pretentiousness in riding into Jerusalem on the foal of an ass. It was rather the meek and lowly One entering in character, and in a character not welcome to the proud worldly-minded Jerusalemites. The symbolic act was of a piece with the use of the title “Son of Man,” shunning Messianic pretensions, yet making them in a deeper way.—Ver. 5.

The prophetic quotation, from Zech. ix. 9, prefaced by a phrase from Isaiah lxiii. 11, with some words omitted, and with some alteration in expression as compared with Sept.

Vv. 7-11. τὴν ὄνον καὶ τὸν πῶλον: that both were brought is carefully specified in view of the prophetic oracle as understood by the evangelist to refer to two animals, not to one under two parallel names.—ἐπέθηκαν: the two disciples spread their upper garments on the two beasts, to make a seat for their Master.—καὶ ἐπεκάθισεν ἐπ. αὐτῶν: if the second αὐτῶν be taken to have the same reference as the first the meaning will be that Jesus sat upon both beasts (alternately). But this would require the imperfect of the verb instead of the aorist. It seems best, with many ancient and modern interpreters, to refer the second αὐτῶν to the garments, though on this view there is a certain looseness in the expression, as, strictly speaking, Jesus would sit on only one of the mantles, if He rode only on one animal. Fritzsche, while taking the second ἄ. as referring to ἱμάτια, thinks the evangelist means to represent Jesus as riding on both alternately.—Ver. 8. ὁ δὲ πλείστος ὄχλος, etc., the most part of the crowd, follow the example of the two disciples, and spread their upper garments on the way, as it were to make a carpet for the object of their enthusiasm, after the manner of the peoples honouring their kings (vide Wetstein, ad loc.).—ἄλλοι δὲ ἔκοπτον: others, a small number comparatively, took to cutting down branches

here. 9. οἱ δὲ ὄχλοι οἱ προάγοντες<sup>1</sup> καὶ οἱ ἀκολουθοῦντες ἔκραζον, e
parall. and 1. k. ii. 14. λέγοντες, "Ὠσαννὰ τῷ υἱῷ Δαβὶδ· εὐλογημένος ὁ ἐρχόμενος ἐν f Ch. xxviii. 4 (metaph. ὀνόματι Κυρίου· Ὠσαννὰ ἐν τοῖς ὑψίστοις." as here).
Ch. xxvii. 51. Heb. 10. Καὶ εἰσελθόντος αὐτοῦ εἰς Ἱερουσόλυμα, ἔσεισθη πᾶσα ἡ xii. 26 πόλις, λέγουσα, "Τίς ἐστὶν οὗτος;" 11. Οἱ δὲ ὄχλοι ἔλεγον, (literally).
g Mk. xi. 15. "Οὗτός ἐστιν Ἰησοῦς ὁ προφήτης,<sup>2</sup> ὁ ἀπὸ Ναζαρετ τῆς Γαλιλαίας."
John ii. 15. h Mk. xi. 15 12. ΚΑΙ εἰσῆλθεν ὁ<sup>3</sup> Ἰησοῦς εἰς τὸ ἱερὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ,<sup>4</sup> καὶ ἐξέβαλε
(Hag. ii. 22. Job ix. 5). πάντας τοὺς πωλοῦντας καὶ ἀγοράζοντας ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, καὶ τὰς τραπέζας
i Ch. xxiii. 2. τῶν κολυβιστῶν κατέστρεψε, καὶ τὰς καθέδρας τῶν πωλοῦντων

<sup>1</sup> ΞBCDL add αὐτον.<sup>2</sup> ο προφητης Ιησους in ΞBD sah. cop.<sup>3</sup> ο omitted in ΞBCA.<sup>4</sup> του θεου omitted in ΞBL verss. (W.H. omit in text).

of trees and scattering them about on the way. Had they no upper garments, or did they not care to use them in that way? The branches, if of any size, would not improve the road, neither indeed would the garments. Lightfoot, perceiving this—"hoc forsan equitantes prosterneret"—thinks they used garments and branches to make booths, as at the feast of tabernacles. It was well meant but embarrassing homage.—Ver. 9. οἱ ὄχλοι: the crowd divided into two, one in front, one in rear, Jesus between.—ἔκραζον: lip homage followed the carpeting of the way, in words borrowed from the Psalter (Ps. cxviii. 25, 26), and variously interpreted by commentators.—Ὠσαννὰ τῷ υἱῷ Δ. Hosanna (we sing) to the son of David (Bengel).—εὐλογημένος, etc. (and we say), "Blessed, etc.," repeating words from the Hallel used at the passover season.—Ὠσαννὰ ἐν τοῖς ὑψίστοις = may our Hosanna on earth be echoed and ratified in heaven! All this homage by deed and word speaks to a great enthusiasm, the outcome of the Galilean ministry; for the crowd consists of Galileans. Perhaps the incident at Jericho, the healing of the blind men, and the vociferated title Son of David with which they saluted the Healer, gave the keynote. A little matter moves a crowd when it happens at the right moment. The mood of a festive season was on them.—Ver. 10. ἐσεισθη: even Jerusalem, frozen with religious formalism and socially undemonstrative, was stirred by the popular enthusiasm as by a mighty wind or by an earthquake (σεισμός), and asked (ver. 11), τίς οὗτος;—ὁ προφήτης, etc.: a circumstantial answer specifying name, locality, and vocation; not a low-pitched answer as Chrys. (and after him Schanz) thought (χαμαίηλος ἦν αὐτῶν ἡ γνώμη, καὶ ταπεινὴ καὶ σεσυρμένη, Hom. lxxvi.), as if they were ashamed of their recent outburst of enthusiasm. Rather spoken with pride = the man to whom we have accorded Messianic honours is a countryman of ours, Jesus, etc.

Vv. 12-17. Jesus visits the Temple (Mk. xi. 11, 15-19, Lk. xix. 45-48).—Ver. 12. εἰσῆλθεν, etc. He entered the Temple. When? Nothing to show that it was not the same day (vide Mk.).—ἐξέβαλεν. The fourth Gospel (ii. 14 f.) reports a similar clearing at the beginning of Christ's ministry. Two questions have been much discussed. Were there one or two acts of this kind? and if only one was it at the beginning or at the end as reported by the Synop.? However these questions may be decided, it may be regarded as one of the historic certainties that Jesus did once at least and at some time sweep the Temple clear of the unholy traffic carried on there. The evangelists fittingly connect the act with the first visit of Jesus to Jer. they report—protest at first sight!—πάντας τοὺς πωλ. καὶ ἀγ.: the article not repeated after καὶ. Sellers and buyers viewed as one company—kindred in spirit, to be cleared out wholesale.—τὰς τραπέζας, etc.: these tables were in the court of the Gentiles, in the booths (tabernaculæ) where all things needed for sacrifice were sold, and the money changers sat ready to give to all comers the didrachma for the temple tax in exchange for ordinary money at a small profit.—κολυβιστῶν, from κόλλυβος, a small coin, change money, hence agio; hence our word to denote those who traded in exchange, condemned by Phryn., p. 440, while approving κόλλυβος. Theophy.

τὰς περιστεράς. 13. καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς, "Γέγραπται, 'Ὁ οἶκός μου οἶκος προσευχῆς κληθήσεται· ὑμεῖς δὲ αὐτὸν ἐποιήσατε' <sup>1</sup> σπήλαιον John xi. 38. Heb. xi. 38. Rev. vi. 15. ληστῶν." 14. Καὶ προσήλθον αὐτῷ τυφλοὶ καὶ χωλοὶ ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ· καὶ ἐθεράπευσεν αὐτούς. 15. Ἴδόντες δὲ οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ γραμματεῖς τὰ θαυμάσια ἃ ἐποίησε, καὶ τοὺς παῖδας <sup>2</sup> κράζοντας ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, καὶ λέγοντας, "Ὡσαννὰ τῷ υἱῷ Δαβὶδ," ἠγαπάκτησαν, k here intrans. Lk. xi. 27 (with μαστούς). Ch. xxiv. 19. Mk. xiii. 17. Lk. xxi. 23 (to suckle). 16. καὶ εἶπον αὐτῷ, "Ἀκούεις τί οὗτοι λέγουσιν;" Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς λέγει αὐτοῖς, "Ναί· οὐδέποτε ἀνέγνωτε, "Ὅτι ἐκ στόματος ἠπίων καὶ <sup>3</sup> θηλαζόντων κατηρίσω αἶνον;" 17. καὶ καταλιπὼν αὐτοὺς ἐξῆλθεν ἐξω τῆς πόλεως εἰς Βηθανίαν, καὶ ἠύλισθη ἐκεῖ.

<sup>1</sup> ποιεῖτε in  $\aleph$ BL (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> τους after παιδας as well as before in  $\aleph$ B<sup>2</sup>DLN.

says: κολλυβισταὶ εἰσιν οἱ παρ' ἡμῖν λεγόμενοι τραπεζίται· κόλλυβος γὰρ εἶδος ἐστὶ νομίσματος εὐτέλης, ὡσπερ ἔχομεν τυχὸν ἡμεῖς τοὺς ὀβολοὺς ἢ τὰ ἀργύρια (vide Hesychius and Suicer).—τὰς περιστεράς, doves, the poor man's offering. The traffic was necessary, and might have been innocent; but the trading spirit soon develops abuses which were doubtless rampant at that period, making passover time a Jewish "Holy Fair," a grotesque and offensive combination of religion with shady morality.—Ver. 13. γέγραπται, it stands written, in Isaiah lvi. 7; from the Sept. but with omission of πᾶσιν τοῖς ἔθνεσιν, retained in Mk., and a peculiarly appropriate expression in the circumstances, the abuse condemned having for its scene the court of the Gentiles.—σπήλαιον ληστῶν, a den of robbers, a strong expression borrowed from another prophet (Jer. vii. 11), pointing probably to the avarice and fraud of the traders (τὸ γὰρ φιλοκερδὲς ληστρικὸν πάθος ἐστὶ, Theophy.), taking advantage of simple provincials. This act of Jesus has been justified by the supposed right of the zealot (Num. xxv. 6-13), which is an imaginary right: "ein unfindbar Artikel" (Holtz., H. C.), or by the reforming energy befitting the Messiah (Meyer). It needed no other justification than the indignation of a noble soul at sight of shameless deeds. Jesus was the only person in Israel who could do such a thing. All others had become accustomed to the evil.

Vv. 14-17, peculiar to Mt.—Ver. 14. τυφλοὶ καὶ χωλοὶ: that the blind and lame in the city should seek out Jesus is perfectly credible, though reported only by Mt. They would hear of the recent healing at Jericho, and of many other acts of healing, and desire to get a benefit for themselves.—Ver. 15. τὰ θαυμάσια: here only in N.T., the wonderful things, a comprehensive phrase apparently chosen to include all the notable things done by Jesus (Meyer), among which may be reckoned not only the cures, and the cleansing of the temple, but the enthusiasm which He had awakened in the crowd, to the priests and scribes perhaps the most offensive feature of the situation.—τοὺς παῖδας, etc.: the boys and girls of the city, true to the spirit of youth, caught up and echoed the cry of the pilgrim crowd and shouted in the temple precincts: "Hosanna, etc." ἠγαπάκτησαν, they were piqued, like the ten (xx. 24).—Ver. 16. ἀκούεις, etc.: the holy men attack the least objectionable phenomenon because they could do so safely; not the enthusiasm of the crowd, the Messianic homage, the act of zeal, all deeply offensive to them, but the innocent shouts of children echoing the cry of seniors. They were forsooth unseemly in such a place! Hypocrites and cowards! No fault found with the desecration of the sacred precincts by an unhallowed traffic.—ναί, yes, of course: cheery, hearty, yea, not without enjoyment of the ridiculous distress of the sanctimonious guardians of the temple.—οὐδ. ἀνέγνωτε as in xix. 4: felicitous citation from Ps. viii. 3, not to be prosaically interpreted as if children in arms three or four years old, still being suckled according to the custom of Hebrew mothers, were among the shouting juniors. These prompt happy citations show how familiar Jesus was with the O. T.—Ver. 17. Βηθανίαν, Bethany, 15 stadia from Jerusalem (John xi. 18), resting place of Jesus in the Passion week—

18. Πρωί<sup>1</sup> δὲ ἐπανάγων<sup>2</sup> εἰς τὴν πόλιν, ἐπέινασε· 19. καὶ ἰδὼν συκὴν μίαν ἐπὶ τῆς ὁδοῦ, ἦλθεν ἐπ' αὐτήν, καὶ οὐδὲν εὗρεν ἐν αὐτῇ εἰ μὴ φύλλα μόνον· καὶ λέγει αὐτῇ,<sup>3</sup> “Μηκέτι ἐκ σοῦ καρπὸς γένηται εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα.” Καὶ ἐξηράνθη ἡ παραχρῆμα ἡ συκὴ. 20. Καὶ ἰδόντες οἱ μαθηταὶ ἐθαύμασαν, λέγοντες, “Πῶς παραχρῆμα ἐξηράνθη ἡ συκὴ;” 21. Ἀποκριθεὶς δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ἐὰν ἔχητε πίστιν, καὶ μὴ<sup>4</sup> διακριθῆτε, οὐ μόνον τὸ τῆς συκῆς ποιήσετε, ἀλλὰ κἀν τῷ ὄρει τούτῳ εἶπτε, Ἄρθητι καὶ βληθήτι εἰς τὴν θάλασσαν, γενήσεται· 22. καὶ πάντα ὅσα ἂν αἰτήσητε ἐν τῇ προσευχῇ, πιστεύοντες, λήψετε.”

1 here twice frequently in Lk and Acts.

2 Acts x. 20.
 Rom. iv.
 20; xiv. 23.
 James 1. 6.

23. ΚΑΙ ἐλθόντι αὐτῷ<sup>4</sup> εἰς τὸ ἱερόν, προσῆλθον αὐτῷ διδάσκοντι οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ πρεσβύτεροι τοῦ λαοῦ, λέγοντες, “Ἐν ποίᾳ ἐξουσίᾳ ταῦτα ποιεῖς; καὶ τίς σοι ἔδωκε τὴν ἐξουσίαν ταύτην;”

<sup>1</sup> πρωί in ΞBD.

<sup>2</sup> επαναγαγων in ΞBL.

<sup>3</sup> ου before μηκετι in BL. Wanting in ΞCD.

<sup>4</sup> ελθοντος αυτου in ΞBCDL. The reading in T. R. (dat.) is a grammatical correction.

true friends there (vide Stanley, S. and P.). —ἠϋλίσθη, passed the night; surely not in the open air, as Wetstein and Grotius think. At passover time quarters could not easily be got in the city, but the house of Martha and Mary would be open to Jesus (cf. Lk. xxi. 37).

Vv. 18-22. The barren fig tree (Mk. xi. 12-14, 19-26).—The story of two morning journeys from Bethany to Jerusalem (vide Mk.) is here compressed into one.—Ver. 18. ἐπέινασε, He felt hungry. The fact seems to favour the hypothesis of a bivouac under the sky overnight. Why should one be hungry leaving the hospitable house of friends? (vide Mk.). This was no difficulty for the Fathers who regarded the hunger as assumed (σχηματίζεται πεινᾶν, Euthy.).—Ver. 19. συκὴν μίαν: εἰς in late Greek was often used for τις, but the meaning here probably is that Jesus looking around saw a solitary fig tree.—ἐπὶ τῆς ὁδοῦ, by the wayside, not necessarily above (Meyer).—ἦλθεν ἐπ' αὐτήν, came close to it, not climbed it (Fritzsche).—εἰ μὴ φύλλα: leaves only, no fruit. Jesus expected to find fruit. Perhaps judging from Galilean experience, where by the lake-shore the fig time was ten months long (Joseph., Bell. J., iii. 108. Vide Holtz., H. C.), but vide on Mk. xi. 13.—οὐ μηκέτι, etc.: according to some writers this was a prediction based on the observation that the tree was diseased, put in the form of a doom. So Bleek, and Furrer who marks: “Then said He, who knew nature and the human heart, ‘This tree will soon wither’; for a fig tree with full leaf in early spring without fruit is a diseased tree” (Wanderungen, p. 172).—καὶ ἐξ. παραχρῆμα, cf. Mk.’s account.—Ver. 20. οἱ μαθηταί, etc.: the disciples wondered at the immediate withering of the tree. Did they expect it to die, as a diseased tree, gradually?—Ver. 21 contains a thought similar to that in xvii. 20, q.v.—τὸ τῆς συκῆς, the matter of the fig tree, as if it were a small affair, not worth speaking about. The question of the disciples did not draw from Jesus explanations as to the motive of the malediction. The cursing of the fig tree has always been regarded as of symbolic import, the tree being in Christ’s mind an emblem of the Jewish people, with a great show of religion and no fruit of real godliness. This hypothesis is very credible.

Vv. 23-27. Interrogation as to authority (Mk. xi. 27-33, Lk. xx. 1-8), wherewith suitably opens the inevitable final conflict between Jesus and the religious leaders of the people.—Ver. 23. ἐλθόντος αὐτοῦ. ἔ. τ. ἰ.: coming on the second day to the temple, the place of concourse, where He was sure to meet His foes, nothing loath to speak His mind to them.—διδάσκοντι: yet He came to teach, to do good, not merely to fight.—ἐν ποίᾳ ἐξουσίᾳ, by what sort of authority? the question ever asked by the representa-

24. Ἀποκριθεὶς δὲ<sup>1</sup> ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Ἐρωτήσω ὑμᾶς κατὰ λόγον ἓνα, ὃν ἐὰν εἴπητέ μοι, κατὰ ὑμῖν ἐρῶ ἐν ποίᾳ ἐξουσίᾳ ταῦτα ποιῶ. 25. τὸ βάπτισμα<sup>2</sup> Ἰωάννου πόθεν ἦν; ἐξ οὐρανοῦ, ἢ ἐξ ἀνθρώπων;” Οἱ δὲ διελογίζοντο παρ’<sup>3</sup> ἑαυτοῖς, λέγοντες, “Ἐὰν εἴπωμεν, ἐξ οὐρανοῦ, ἐρεῖ ἡμῖν, Διὰ τί οὖν οὐκ ἐπιστεύσατε αὐτῷ; 26. ἐὰν δὲ εἴπωμεν, ἐξ ἀνθρώπων, φοβούμεθα τὸν ὄχλον· πάντες γὰρ<sup>4</sup> ἔχουσι τὸν Ἰωάννην ὡς προφήτην.”<sup>4</sup> 27. Καὶ ἀποκριθέντες<sup>a</sup> αὐτῷ Ἰησοῦ εἶπον, “Οὐκ οἶδαμεν.” Ἐφη αὐτοῖς καὶ αὐτός, “Οὐδὲ ἐγὼ λέγω ὑμῖν ἐν ποίᾳ ἐξουσίᾳ ταῦτα ποιῶ. 28. Τί δὲ ὑμῖν δοκεῖ; ἀνθρώπος εἶχε τέκνα δύο,<sup>5</sup> καὶ<sup>6</sup> προσελθὼν τῷ πρώτῳ εἶπε, Τέκνον,

<sup>1</sup> Some copies omit δε. ℣BCD have it.

<sup>2</sup> τὸ before Ἰωάννου in ℣BCZ 33.

<sup>3</sup> BL have ἐν (W.H. in brackets).

<sup>4</sup> ὡς προφήτην before ἔχουσι in ℣BCLZ 33 (so in modern editions).

<sup>5</sup> So in ℣CDL al. δυο τέκνα in B (W.H. in margin).

<sup>6</sup> καὶ is found in BCD and other uncials but wanting in ℣LZ. Tisch. omits and W.H. relegate to the margin.

tives of established order and custom at epoch-making initiators. So the Judaists interrogated St. Paul as to his right to be an apostle.—ταῦτα, vague (cf. xi, 25) and comprehensive. They have in view all the offences of which Jesus had been guilty, throughout His ministry—all well known to them—whatever He had done in the spirit of unconventional freedom which He had exhibited since His arrival in Jerusalem.—καὶ τίς: the second question is but an echo of the first: the quality of the authority (ποιῶ) depends on its source.—ταύτην, this authority, which you arrogate, and which so many unhappily acknowledge. It was a question as to the legitimacy of an undeniable influence. That spiritual power accredits itself was beyond the comprehension of these legalists.—Ver. 24. Jesus replies by an embarrassing counter-question as to the ministry of the Baptist.—λόγον ἓνα, hardly: one question for your many (Beng.) rather: a question, or thing, one and the same (cf. for εἷς in this sense Gen. xii. 25, 26; 1 Cor. iii. 8, xi. 5), an analogous question as we should say; one answer would do for theirs and for His.—Ver. 25. τὸ βάπτισμα τὸ Ἰ., the baptism as representing John's whole ministry.—ἐξ οὐρ. ἢ ἐξ ἀνθ., from heaven or from men? The antithesis is foreign to legitimist modes of thought, which would combine the two: from heaven but through men; if not through men not from heaven. The most gigantic and baleful instance of this fetish in modern times is the notion of church sacraments and orders depending on ordination. On the same principle St. Paul was no apostle, because his orders came to him “not from men nor by man,” Gal. i. 1.—ἐὰν εἴπωμεν, etc. The audible and formal answer of the scribes was οὐκ οἶδαμεν, in ver. 27. All that goes before from ἐὰν to προφήτην is the reasoning on which it was based, either unspoken (παρ’ or ἐν ἑαυτοῖς, Mt.) or spoken to each other (πρὸς, Mk. xi. 31); not likely to have been overheard, guessed rather from the puzzled expression on their faces.—οὐκ ἐπιστεύσατε: the reference here may be to John's witness to Jesus, or it may be general=why did ye not receive his message as a whole?—Ver. 26. ἐὰν δε, etc.: the mode of expression here is awkward. Meyer finds in the sentence an aposiopesis=“if we say of men—we fear the people”. What they mean is: we must not say of men, because we fear, etc. (cf. Mk.).—Ver. 27. οὐδὲ ἐγὼ, etc.: Jesus was not afraid to answer their question, but He felt it was not worth while giving an answer to opportunists.

Vv. 28-32. Parable of the two sons, in Mt. only, introduced by the familiar formula, τί δὲ ὑμῖν δοκεῖ (xvii. 25, xviii. 12), and having for its aim to contrast the conduct of the Pharisees towards the Baptist with that of the publicans. And as the publicans are simply used as a foil to bring out more clearly the Pharisaic character, the main subject of remark, it is highly probable that the son who represents the Pharisee was mentioned first, and the son who represents the ο Lk. xlii. ὕπαγε, σήμερον ὁ ἐργάζου ἐν τῷ ἀμπελώνί μου.<sup>1</sup> 29. Ὁ δὲ ἀποκριθεὶς

 14. John v. 17; ix. 4. εἶπεν,<sup>2</sup> Οὐ θέλω ὑστερον δὲ μεταμεληθεὶς, ἀπῆλθε. 30. Καὶ
 2. Theas. προσελθὼν τῷ δευτέρῳ εἶπεν ὡσαύτως. ὁ δὲ ἀποκριθεὶς εἶπεν, Ἐγὼ, iii. 10. Ch. xxvii. κύριε καὶ οὐκ ἀπῆλθε. 31. Τίς ἐκ τῶν δύο ἐποίησε τὸ θέλημα τοῦ
 p. 3. 1 Cor. vii. 8. πατρός; Ἰ. λέγουσιν αὐτῷ,<sup>3</sup> Ὁ πρῶτος.<sup>4</sup> λέγει αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Heb. vii. 21. Ἄμην λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι οἱ τελῶναι καὶ αἱ πόρναι προάγουσιν ὑμᾶς εἰς τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ. 32. ἦλθε γὰρ πρὸς ὑμᾶς Ἰωάννης<sup>5</sup> ἐν
 q Cf. 2 Pet. ii. 2 (ὁδοῦ τῆς ἀληθείας). ἡ δὲ δικαιοσύνης, καὶ οὐκ ἐπιστεύσατε αὐτῷ, οἱ δὲ τελῶναι καὶ αἱ πόρναι ἐπίστευσαν αὐτῷ· ὑμεῖς δὲ ἰδόντες οὐ<sup>6</sup> μετεμελήθητε ὑστερον τοῦ πιστεῦσαι αὐτῷ.

<sup>1</sup> μου is wanting in ΞCDLΔΣ. Tisch., Trg., omit, W.H. relegate to margin.

<sup>2</sup> B inverts the order of the two answers, so that verses 29, 30 stand thus: εγω, κυριε, και ουκ απηλθεν. προσελθων δε τω δευτερω ειπεν ωσαντως. ο δε αποκριθεις ειπεν. ου θελω· υστερον μεταμεληθεις απηλθε. Though supported only by some cursives and versions this reading of B commends itself as the true one, and it has been adopted by W.H. and Weiss. Vide below Syr. Sin. is not on the side of B.

<sup>3</sup> ΞBDL omit αυτω.

<sup>4</sup> Of course this should be ὁ ὑστερος on B's reading of vv. 29, 30. So in B.

<sup>5</sup> Ιωαννης before προς υ. in ΞBCL 33. ὁ ουδε in B. Some cursives and versions.

publican second; the order in which they stand in B, and adopted by W. and H. The parable, therefore, should read thus: "A certain man had two sons. He said to one, Go work, etc. He replied, Yes, sir, and went not. To the other he said the same. He replied, I will not, and afterwards went."—Ver. 28. τῷ ἀμπελώνι: constant need of work in a vineyard, and of superintendence of workers.—Ver. 29. ἔγω: laconic and emphatic as if eager to obey—κύριε, with all due politeness, and most filial recognition of paternal authority, the two words = our "Yes, sir".—Ver. 30. οὐ θέλω, I will not, I am not inclined; rude, sulky, unmannerly, disobedient, and making no pretence to filial loyalty.—Ver. 31. To the question, Who did the will of the father? the answer, when the parable is arranged as above, must, of course, be ὁ ὑστερος; the nay-sayer, not the yea-sayer. It is a wonder any answer was given at all when the purport of the parable was so transparent.—ἀμην λέγω ὑμῖν: introducing here, as always, a very important assertion. The statement following would give deadly offence to the Pharisees.—τελώναι, πόρναι, the publicans and the harlots, the two socially lowest classes. Jesus speaks here from definite knowledge, not only of what had happened in connection with the Baptist ministry, but of facts connected with His own. He has doubtless reminiscences of the "Capernaum mission" (chap. viii. 9-13) to go upon.—προάγουσιν, go before, anticipate (προλαμβάνουσιν, Euthy.), present tense: they are going before you now; last first, first last. Chrysostom, in Hom. lxvii., gives an interesting story of a courtesan of his time in illustration of this.—Ver. 32. ἐν ἡδὴ δικαιοσύνης: not merely in the sense of being a good pious man with whose life no fault could be found (Meyer; the Fathers, Chrys., Euthy., Theophy.), but in the specific sense of following their own legal way. John was a conservative in religion not less than the Pharisees. He differed from them only by being thoroughly sincere and earnest. They could not, therefore, excuse themselves for not being sympathetic towards him on the ground of his being an innovator, as they could with plausibility in the case of Jesus. The meaning thus is: He cultivated legal piety like yourselves, yet, etc.—ὑμεῖς δὲ ἰδόντες, when ye saw how the sinful took John's summons to repent ye did not even late in the day follow their example and change your attitude. They were too proud to take an example from publicans and harlots.—τοῦ πιστεῦσαι, inf. of result with τοῦ.

Vv. 33-46. Parable of the rebellious vine-dressers (Mk. xii. 1-12, Lk. xx. 9-19).—Ver. 33. ἄλλην π. ἀ., hear another parable; spoken at the same time, and

33. "Ἄλλην παραβολὴν ἀκούσατε. ἄνθρωπός τις<sup>1</sup> ἦν οἰκοδεσ-πότης, ὅστις ἐφύτευσεν ἀμπελῶνα, καὶ ἔφραγμὸν αὐτῷ περιέθηκε,<sup>r</sup> Mk. xii. 1.
 καὶ ὄρυξεν ἐν αὐτῷ ἑλιόσιον, καὶ ᾠκοδόμησε ἑπύργον, καὶ ἐξέδοτο<sup>2</sup> Eph αὐτὸν γεωργοῖς, καὶ ἀπεδήμησεν. 34. ὅτε δὲ ἤγγισεν ὁ καιρὸς τῶν<sup>u</sup> Ch. xxv.
 καρπῶν, ἀπέστειλε τοὺς δούλους αὐτοῦ πρὸς τοὺς γεωργούς, λαβεῖν<sup>v</sup> 18. Mk.
 τοὺς καρποὺς αὐτοῦ. 35. καὶ λαβόντες οἱ γεωργοὶ τοὺς δούλους<sup>t</sup> Rev. xiv.
 αὐτοῦ, ὃν μὲν ἔδειραν, ὃν δὲ ἀπέκτειναν, ὃν δὲ ἔλιθοβόλησαν.<sup>u</sup> 19, 20;
 36. πάλιν ἀπέστειλεν ἄλλους δούλους πλείονας τῶν πρώτων· καὶ<sup>v</sup> xii. 15.
 ἐποίησαν αὐτοῖς ὡσαύτως. 37. ὕστερον δὲ ἀπέστειλε πρὸς αὐτοὺς<sup>u</sup> Mk. xii. 1.
 τὸν υἱὸν αὐτοῦ, λέγων, Ἔντραπήσονται τὸν υἱὸν μου. 38. Οἱ δὲ<sup>v</sup> Lk. xiii. 4; γεωργοὶ ἰδόντες τὸν υἱὸν εἶπον ἐν ἑαυτοῖς, Οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ κληρονόμος·<sup>v</sup> Ch. xxiii.
 δεῦτε, ἀποκτείνωμεν αὐτόν, καὶ κατάσχωμεν<sup>w</sup> 37. Lk.
 αὐτοῦ. Acts vii.
 58.
 1. k. xviii.
 2, 4. Heb
 xii. 9.

<sup>1</sup> τις wanting in many uncials.

<sup>2</sup> ἐξεδετο in  $\aleph$ BCL. ἐξεδετο is a grammatical correction.

<sup>3</sup> σχῶμεν in  $\aleph$ BDLZ 33 (Tisch., W.H.).

of kindred import. The abrupt introduction betrays emotion. Jesus is aware that He has given mortal offence, and here shows His knowledge by foreshadowing His own doom. The former parable has exposed the insincerity of the leaders of Israel, this exposes their open revolt against even divine authority.
 —ἀμπελῶνα: it is another vineyard parable. They were both probably extemporised, the one suggesting the other, the picture of nondoing calling up the companion picture of misdoing.—φραγμὸν
 α. περιέθηκε, etc.: detailed description of the pains taken by the landlord in the construction of the vineyard, based on Isaiah's song of the vineyard (chap. v. 2), all with a view to fruitfulness, and to fruit of the best kind; for the owner, at least, is very much in earnest: a hedge to protect against wild beasts, a press and vat that the grapes may be squeezed and the juice preserved, a tower that the ripe fruit may not be stolen.—ἐξέδοτο, let it out on hire; on what terms—whether for a rent in money or on the metayer system, produce divided between owner and workers—does not here appear. The latter seems to be implied in the parallels (Mk. xii. 2, ἀπὸ τῶν καρπῶν, Lk. xx. 10, ἀπὸ τοῦ καρποῦ).—ἀπεδήμησεν, went abroad, to leave them freedom, and also to give them time; for the newly planted vines would not bear fruit for two or three years. No unreasonableness in this landlord.—Ver. 34. καιρὸς: not merely the season of the year, but the time at which the new vines might be expected to bear.—τοὺς καρποὺς: the whole, apparently implying a money rent.

 The mode of tenure probably not thought of by this evangelist.—αὐτοῦ should probably be referred to the owner, not to the vineyard = "his fruits," as in A. V.— Ver. 35. λαβόντες οἱ γ., etc. The husbandmen treat the messengers in the most barbarous and truculent manner:
 beating, killing, stoning to death; highly improbable in the natural sphere, but another instance in which parables have to violate natural probability in order to describe truly men's conduct in the spiritual sphere. On ἐδείραν Kyrie remarks: the verb déerare for verberare is so rare in profane writers that some have thought that for ἐδείραν should be read ἔδηραν, from δαίρω.—Ver. 36. πλείονας
 τ. π., more than the first. Some take
 πλ. as referring to quality rather than number: better than the former (Bengel, Goebel, etc.), which is a legitimate but not likely rendering. The intention is to emphasise the number of persons sent (prophets).—ὡσαύτως: no difference in the treatment; savage mood chronic.— Ver. 37. ὕστερον, not afterwards merely, but finally, the last step was now to be taken, the mission of the son and heir; excuses conceivable hitherto: doubt as to credentials, a provoking manner in those sent, etc.; not yet conclusively proved that deliberate defiance is intended.
 The patient master will make that clear before taking further steps.—ἐντραπήσονται (pass. for mid.), they will show respect to. It is assumed that they will have no difficulty in knowing him.—Ver.
 38. ἰδόντες: neither have they; they

39. καὶ λαβόντες αὐτὸν ἐξέβαλον ἔξω τοῦ ἀμπελῶνος καὶ ἀπέκτειναν.

40. ὅταν οὖν ἔλθῃ ὁ κύριος τοῦ ἀμπελῶνος, τί ποιήσει τοῖς γεωργοῖς

Ch. xxvi. ἐκείνοις; 41. Λέγουσιν αὐτῷ, "Κακοὺς κακῶς ἀπολέσει αὐτούς·

54. Mk.

iv. 49.

Lk. xxiv.

27. John

v. 39.

Mk. viii.

31; xii. 10.

Lk. iv. 22.

Heb. xii.

17 al.

καὶ τὸν ἀμπελῶνα ἐκδώσεται<sup>1</sup> ἄλλοις γεωργοῖς, οἵτινες ἀποδώσουσιν

αὐτῷ τὸν καρπὸν ἐν τοῖς καιροῖς αὐτῶν." 42. Λέγει αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Οὐδέποτε ἀνέγνωτε ἐν ταῖς ᾠδαῖς, 'Λίθον ὃν ᾠπεδοκί-μασαν οἱ οἰκοδομοῦντες, οὗτος ἐγενήθη εἰς κεφαλὴν γωνίας· παρὰ κυρίου ἐγένετο αὕτη, καὶ ἔστι θαυμαστὴ ἐν ὀφθαλμοῖς ἡμῶν;'

<sup>1</sup> ἐκδωσεται in all uncials nearly. ἐκδοσεται in minusc. only.

recognise at once the son and heir, and resolve forthwith on desperate courses, which are at once carried out. They eject the son, kill him, and seize the inheritance. The action of the parable is confined to a single season, the messengers following close on each other. But Jesus obviously has in His eye the whole history of Israel, from the settlement in Canaan till His own time, and sees in it God's care about fruit (a holy nation), the mission of the successive prophets to insist that fruit be forthcoming, and the persistent neglect and disloyalty of the people. Neglect, for there was no fruit to give to the messengers, though that does not come out in the parable. The picture is a very sombre one, but it is broadly true. Israel, on the whole, had not only not done God's will, but had badly treated those who urged her to do it. She killed her prophets (Mt. xxiii. 37).

Vv. 40-46. Application.—ὅταν οὖν ἔλθῃ ὁ κ., etc.: what would you expect the owner to do after such ongoings have been reported to him? Observe the subjunctive after ὅταν compared with the indicative ἤγγισεν after ὅτε, ver. 34. ὅτε points to a definite time past, ὅταν is indefinite (vide Hermann, Viger, p. 437).—Ver. 41. λέγουσι, they say: who? the men incriminated, though they could not but see through the thin veil of the allegory. In Mk. and Lk. the words appear to be put into Christ's mouth.—κακοὺς κακῶς ἀπολέσει: a solemn fact classically expressed ("en Graeci sermonis peritiam in Matthaeo"—Raphel, Annot.) = He will badly destroy bad men.—οἵτινες, such as; he will give out the vineyard to husbandmen of a different stamp.—τ. κ. ἐν τοῖς καιροῖς αὐτῶν: the fruits in their (the fruits') seasons, regularly year by year.—Ver. 42. οὐδέποτε ἀνέγνωτε, etc.: another of Christ's impromptu felicitous quotations; from Ps. cxviii. 22, 23 (Sept.). This quotation contains, in germ, another parable, in which the ejected and murdered heir of the former parable becomes the rejected stone of the builders of the theocratic edifice; only, however, to become eventually the accepted honoured stone of God. It is an apposite citation, because probably regarded as Messianic by those in whose hearing it was made (it was so regarded by the Rabbis—Schöttgen, ad loc.), and because it intimated to them that by killing Jesus they would not be done with Him.—Ver. 43. διὰ τοῦτο, introducing the application of the oracle, and implying that the persons addressed are the builders = therefore.—ἡ βασιλεία τ. θ.: the doom is forfeiture of privilege, the kingdom taken from them and given to others.—ἔθνη, to a nation; previously, as Paul calls it, a no nation (οὐκ ἔθνη, Rom. x. 19), the reference being, plainly, to the heathen world.—ποιοῦντι τ. κ. α.: cf. iii. 8, 10; vii. 17, bringing forth the fruits of it (the kingdom). The hope that the new nation will bring forth the fruit is the ground of the transference. God elects with a view to usefulness; a useless elect people has no prescriptive rights.—Ver. 44. This verse, bracketed by W. H., found in the same connection in Lk. (xx. 18), looks rather like an interpolation, yet it suits the situation, serving as a solemn warning to men meditating evil intentions against the Speaker.—ὁ πεισῶν: he who falls on the stone, as if stumbling against it (Is. viii. 14).—συνθλασθήσεται, shall be broken in pieces, like an earthen vessel falling on a rock. This compound is found only in late Greek authors.—ἃς ὃν δ' ἂν πέσῃ, on whom it shall fall, in judgment. The distinction is between men who believe not in the Christ through misunderstanding and those who reject Him through an evil heart of unbelief. Both suffer in

43. Διὰ τοῦτο λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι ἀρθήσεται ἀφ' ὑμῶν ἡ βασιλεία τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ δοθήσεται ἔθνοι ποιοῦντι τοὺς καρποὺς αὐτῆς. 44. καὶ ὁ πεσὼν ἐπὶ τὸν λίθον τοῦτον <sup>3</sup> συνθλασθήσεται· ἐφ' ὃν δ' ἂν πέσῃ, <sup>2</sup> Lk. xx. 18 "λικμήσει αὐτόν" <sup>1</sup> 45. Καὶ ἀκούσαντες οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ <sup>1</sup> Lk. xx. 18 Φαρισαῖοι τὰς παραβολὰς αὐτοῦ ἔγνωσαν ὅτι περὶ αὐτῶν λέγει· 46. καὶ ζητοῦντες αὐτὸν κρατῆσαι, ἐφοβήθησαν τοὺς ὄχλους, ἐπειδὴ <sup>2</sup> ὡς <sup>3</sup> προφήτην αὐτὸν εἶχον.

<sup>1</sup> This whole ver. (44) is omitted in D, 33, old Latin versions, Orig., etc. Tisch. omits and W.H. bracket. Weiss regards it as genuine, and thinks that if it had come in from Lk. it would have stood after ver. 42.

<sup>2</sup> επει in ℣BDL 33.

<sup>3</sup> εις in ℣BL (Tisch., W.H.).

consequence, but not in the same way, or to the same extent. The one is broken, hurt in limb; the other crushed to powder, which the winds blow away.—λικμήσει, from λικμός, a winnowing fork, to winnow, to scatter to the winds, implying reduction to dust capable of being so scattered = grinding to powder (conteret, Vulg.). For the distinction taken in this verse, cf. chaps. xi. 6; xii. 31, 32.—Ver. 45. The priests and Pharisees of course perceived the drift of these parabolic speeches about the two sons, the vine-dressers, and the rejected stone, and (ver. 46) would have apprehended Him on the spot (Lk. xx. 19) had they not feared the people.—ἐπει, since, introducing the reason of the fear, same as in ver. 26.—εις προφήτην = ὡς π., ver. 26, and in xiv. 5, also in reference to John. On this use of εις vide Winer, § 32, 4, b.

CHAPTER XXII. PARABLE OF THE WEDDING FEAST AND ENCOUNTERS WITH OPPONENTS.—Vv. 1-14. The royal wedding.—This parable is peculiar to Mt., and while in some respects very suitable to the situation, may not unreasonably be suspected to owe its place here to the evangelist's habit of grouping kindred matter. The second part of the parable referring to the man without a wedding robe has no connection with the present situation, or with the Pharisees who are supposed to be addressed. Another question has been much discussed, viz., whether this parable was spoken by Jesus at all on any occasion, the idea of many critics being that it is a parable of Christ's reconstructed by the evangelist or some other person, so as to make it cover the sin and fate of the Jews, the calling of the Gentiles, and the Divine demand for righteousness in all recipients of His grace. The resemblance between this parable and that of the Supper, in Lk. xiv. 16-24, is obvious. Assuming that Jesus uttered a parable of this type, the question arises: which of the two forms given by Mt. and Lk. comes nearer to the original? The general verdict is in favour of Luke's. As to the question of the authenticity of Mt.'s parable, the mere fact that the two parables have a common theme and many features similar is no proof that both could not proceed from Jesus. Why should not the later parable be the same theme handled by the same Artist with variations so as to make it serve a different while connected purpose, the earlier being a parable of Grace, the later a parable of Judgment upon grace despised or abused? If the didactic aim of the two parables was as just indicated, the method of variation was preferable to the use of two parables totally unconnected. "What is common gives emphasis to what is peculiar, and bids us mark what it is that is judged" (The Parabolic Teaching of Christ, p. 463). The main objections to the authenticity of the parable are its allegorical character, and its too distinct anticipation of history. The former objection rests on the assumption that Jesus uttered no parables of the allegorical type. On this, vide remarks on the parable of the Sower, chap. xiii.

Ver. 1. ἐν παραβολαῖς, the plural does not imply more than one parable, but merely indicates the style of address = parabolically.—Ver. 2. γάμους, a wedding feast; plural, because the festivities lasted for days, seven in Judges xiv. 17. The suggestion that the feast is connected with the handing over of the kingdom to the son ("quem pater successorem declarare volebat," Kuinoel) is not to be despised. The marriage

- XXII. 1. ΚΑΙ ἀποκριθεὶς ὁ Ἰησοῦς πάλιν εἶπεν αὐτοῖς ἐν παραβολαῖς,<sup>1</sup> λέγων, 2. “Ὁμοιώθη ἡ βασιλεία τῶν οὐρανῶν ἀνθρώπῳ βασιλεῖ, ὅστις ἐποίησε ἄγάμους τῷ υἱῷ αὐτοῦ· 3. καὶ ἀπέστειλε τοὺς δούλους αὐτοῦ ἵνα καλέσαι τοὺς κεκλημένους εἰς τοὺς γάμους, καὶ οὐκ ἤθελον ἔλθειν. 4. Πάλιν ἀπέστειλεν ἄλλους δούλους, λέγων, Εἴπατε τοῖς κεκλημένοις, Ἰδοὺ, τὸ ἄριστόν μου ἡτοιμάσα, οἱ ἄταῦροί μου καὶ τὰ σιτιστὰ τεθυμένα, καὶ πάντα ἔτοιμα· δεῦτε εἰς τοὺς γάμους. 5. Οἱ δὲ ἀμελήσαντες ἀπήλθον, ὁ μὲν<sup>8</sup> εἰς τὸν ἴδιον ἀγρόν, ὁ δὲ<sup>3</sup> εἰς<sup>4</sup> τὴν ἐμπορίαν αὐτοῦ· 6. οἱ δὲ λοιποὶ κρατήσαντες
- a here several times; xxv. 10. Lk. xii. 36; xiv. 8 (in all plural).
b vide Ch. ix. 13. I Cor. x. 27.
c Lk. xi. 28; Acts xiv. 13. Heb. ix. 13; x. 4.
d here only in N. T. (Joseph. Ant., viii. 2, 4. Cf. σιτιστός in Lk. xv. 23, 27, 30).

<sup>1</sup> αυτοις after παραβολαις in ΞBDL (modern editors).

<sup>2</sup> ητοιμακα in ΞBCDLΣ and adopted by modern editors.

<sup>3</sup> οσμεν, ος δε in ΞBCLΣ, several cursives.

<sup>4</sup> επι in ΞBCD, 13, 33, 69, etc.

and recognition of the son as heir to the throne might be combined, which would give to the occasion a political significance, and make appearance at the marriage a test of loyalty. Eastern monarchs had often many sons by different wives, and heirship to the throne did not go by primogeniture, but by the pleasure of the sovereign, determined in many cases by affection for a favourite wife, as in the case of Solomon (Koetsveld, de Gelijk.)—Ver. 3. καλέσαι τοὺς κεκλημένους, to invite the already invited. This second invitation seems to accord with Eastern custom (Esther vi. 14). The first invitation was given to the people of Israel by the prophets in the Messianic pictures of a good time coming. This aspect of the prophetic ministry was welcomed. Israel never responded to the prophetic demand for righteousness, as shown in the parable of the vine-dressers, but they were pleased to hear of God's gracious visitation in the latter days, to be invited to a feast in the indefinite future time. How they would act when the feast was due remained to be seen.—τοὺς δούλους, the servants, are John the Baptist and Jesus Himself, whose joint message to their generation was: the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand, feast time at length arrived.—οὐκ ἤθελον ἔλθειν. Israel in all her generations had been willing in a general way, quite intending to come; and the generation of John and Jesus were also willing in a general way, if it had only been the right son who was going to be married. How could they be expected to accept the obscure Nazarene for Bridegroom and Heir?—Ver. 4. ἄλλους δούλους refers to the apostles whose ministry gave to the same generation a second chance.—εἴπατε: the second set of messengers are instructed what to say; they are expected not merely to invite to but to commend the feast, to provoke desire.—Ἰδοὺ, to arrest attention.—ἄριστόν μου, the midday meal, as distinct from δεῖπνον, which came later in the day (vide Lk. xiv. 12, where both are named = early dinner and supper). With the ἄριστον the festivities begin.—ἡτοιμακα, perfect, I have in readiness.—ταῦροι, σιτιστὰ, bulls, or oxen, and fed beasts: speak to a feast on a vast scale.—τεθυμένα, slain, and therefore must be eaten without delay. The word is often used in connection with the slaying of sacrificial victims, and the idea of sacrifice may be in view here (Koetsveld).—πάντα, etc.: all things ready, come to the feast. This message put into the mouths of the second set of servants happily describes the ministry of the apostles compared with that of our Lord, as more urgent or aggressive, and proclaiming a more developed gospel. “They talked as it were of oxen and fed beasts and the other accompaniments of a feast, with an eloquence less dignified, but more fitted to impress the million with a sense of the riches of Divine grace” (The Parabolic Teaching of Christ).

Vv. 5-7. οἱ δὲ ἀμελήσαντες ἀπήλθον. The Vulgate resolves the participle and translates: “neglexerunt et abierunt,” so also the A.V. and R.V.; justly, for the participle points out the state of mind τούς δούλους αὐτοῦ ἔβρισαν καὶ ἀπέκτειναν. 7. Ἀκούσας δὲ ὁ βασιλεὺς ἠργίσθη, καὶ πέμψας τὰ στρατεύματα αὐτοῦ ἀπόλεσε τοὺς φονεῖς ἐκείνους, καὶ τὴν πόλιν αὐτῶν ἐνέπρησε. 8. Τότε λέγει τοῖς δούλοις αὐτοῦ, Ὁ μὲν γάμος ἑτοιμός ἐστιν, οἱ δὲ κεκλημένοι οὐκ ἦσαν ἄξιοι. 9. πορεύεσθε οὖν ἐπὶ τὰς διεξόδους τῶν ὁδῶν, καὶ ὅσους ἂν εὑρητε, καλέσατε εἰς τοὺς γάμους. 10. Καὶ ἐξεληθόντες οἱ δούλοι ἐκείνοι εἰς τὰς ὁδοὺς συνήγαγον πάντας ὅσους εὑρον, πονηροὺς τε καὶ ἀγαθοὺς· καὶ ἐπλήσθη ὁ γάμος ἀνακειμένων.

is rare in Mt.; here, Ch. xxvii. 48, xxviii. 12. Often in Acts and Heb.

<sup>1</sup> For ακουσας δε ο βασι. NBL have ο δε βασιλευς.

<sup>2</sup> D has το στρατευμα (Trig. in margin).

<sup>3</sup> ους in ND (W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> νυμφων in NBL (Tisch., W.H.).

which gave rise to the conduct specified. They treated the pressing invitations and glowing descriptions of the servants with indifference.—ὅς μὲν, ὅς δὲ: this one to his own (ἴδιον for αὐτοῦ = proprius for suus) field, that one to his trading (ἐμπορίαν here only in N. T. Cf. Lk. at this point).—Ver. 6. λοιποὶ, the rest, as if οἱ ἀμελήσαντες were only a part, the greater part, of the invited, while the expression by itself naturally covers the whole. Weiss finds in λοιποὶ a trace of patching: the parable originally referred to the people of Israel as a whole, but Mt. introduced a reference to the Sannhedrists and here has them specially in view as the λοιποὶ. Koetsveld remarks on the improbability of the story at this point: men at a distance—rulers of provinces—could not be invited in the morning with the expectation of their being present at the palace by midday. So far this makes for the hypothesis of remodelling by a second hand. But even in Christ's acknowledged parables improbabilities are sometimes introduced to meet the requirements of the case; e.g., in Lk.'s version of the parable all refuse.—κρατήσαντες . . . ἔβ. καὶ ἀπέκτειναν: acts of open rebellion inevitably leading to war. This feature, according to Weiss, lies outside the picture. Not so, if the marriage feast was to be the occasion for recognising the son as heir. Then refusal to come meant withholding homage, rebellion in the bud, and acts of violence were but the next step.—Ver. 7. τὰ στρατεύματα: the plural appears surprising, but the meaning seems to be, not separate armies sent one after another, but forces.—ἀπόλεσε, ἐνέπρησεν: the allegory here evidently refers to the destruction of Jerusalem; no argument against authenticity, if xxiv. 2 be a word of Jesus. Note that the destruction of Jerusalem is represented as taking place before the calling of those without = the Gentiles. This is not according to the historic fact. This makes for authenticity, as a later allegorist would have been likely to observe the historical order (vide Schanz).

Vv. 8-10. τότε: after the second set of servants, as many as survived, had returned and reported their ill-success.—λέγει, he says to them.—ἑτοιμός, ready, and more.—Ver. 9. ἐπὶ τὰς διεξόδους is variously interpreted: at the crossing-places of the country roads (Fritzsche, De Wette, Meyer, Goebel); or at the places in the city whence the great roads leading into the country start (Kypke, Loesner, Kuinoel, Trench, Weiss). "According as we emphasise one or other prep. in the compound word, either: the places whence the roads run out, or Oriental roads passing into the city through gates" (Holtz, H. C.). The second view is the more likely were it only because, the time pressing, the place where new guests are to be found must be near at hand. In the open spaces of the city, strangers from the country as well as the lower population of the town could be met with; the foreign element = Gentiles, mainly in view.—Ver. 10. πονηροὺς τε καὶ ἀγαθοὺς: not in the mood to make distinctions, τε connects πον. and ἀγαθ. together as one company = all they found, of all sorts, bad or good, the market-place swept clean.—ἐπλήσθη, was filled; satisfactory after the trouble in getting guests at all.—νυμφῶν, the marriage dining-hall; in ix. 15 the brideschamber.

Lk. xi. 45;
xviii. 32.
Acts xiv. 5.
Lk. xxiii.
11. Acts
xxiii. 10.
27. Rev.
ix. 16; xix.
14, 19.
h here only
in N. T. i here only
in N. T.
(P's. i. 3.
cxix. 136).
j This part.

- κ 1. κ. ιι. 55. 11. εἰσελθὼν δὲ ὁ βασιλεὺς <sup>κ</sup>θεάσασθαι τοὺς ἀνακειμένους εἶδεν ἐκεῖ ἄνθρωπον οἶκ ἐνδεδυμένον ἔνδυμα γάμου · 12. καὶ λέγει αὐτῷ, Ἐταῖρε, πῶς εἰσῆλθες ὧδε μὴ ἔχων ἔνδυμα γάμου; Ὁ δὲ <sup>1</sup>ἐφίμωθη.
- 1 ver. 34. 13. τότε εἶπεν ὁ βασιλεὺς <sup>1</sup> τοῖς διακόνοις, Δῆσαντες αὐτοῦ Mk. 1. 25; iv. 39. Lk. πόδας καὶ χεῖρας, ἄρατε αὐτὸν καὶ ἐκβάλετε <sup>2</sup> εἰς τὸ σκότος τὸ iv. 35. ἔξωτερον · ἐκεῖ ἔσται ὁ κλαυθμὸς καὶ ὁ βρυγμὸς τῶν ὀδόντων. 1 Tim. v. 18. 14. πολλοὶ γὰρ εἰσι κλητοί, ὀλίγοι δὲ ἐκλεκτοί."

<sup>1</sup> εἶπεν after βασιλεὺς in NBL, cursives (33, etc.).

<sup>2</sup> For ἀρατε α. καὶ εκβ. NBL have simply ἐκβαλετε αὐτον (Tisch., W.H.).

Vv. 11-14. The man without a wedding garment.—Though this feature has no connection with the polemic against the Sanhedrists, it does not follow, as even Weiss (Matthäus-Evang.) admits, that it was not an authentic part of a parable spoken by Jesus. It would form a suitable pendant to any parable of grace, as showing that, while the door of the kingdom is open to all, personal holiness cannot be dispensed with.—Ver. 11. θεάσασθαι: we are not to suppose that the king came in to look out for offenders, but rather to show his countenance to his guests and make them welcome.—ἄνθρωπον, etc.: while he was going round among the guests smiling welcome and speaking here and there a gracious word, his eye lighted on a man without a wedding robe. Only one? More might have been expected in such a company, but one suffices to illustrate the principle.—οἶκ ἐνδεδ.: we have here an example of occasional departure from the rule that participles in the N. T. take μὴ as the negative in all relations.—Ver. 12. ἔταῖρε, as in xx. 13.—πῶς εἰσῆλθες ὧδε: the question might mean, By what way did you come in? the logic of the question being, had you entered by the door you would have received a wedding robe like the rest, therefore you must have come over a wall or through a window, or somehow slipped in unobserved (Koetsveld). This assumes that the guests were supplied with robes by the king's servants, which in the circumstances is intrinsically probable. All had to come in a hurry as they were, and some would have no suitable raiment, even had there been time to put it on. What the custom was is not very clear. The parable leaves this point in the background, and simply indicates that a suitable robe was necessary, however obtained. The king's question probably means, how dared you come hither without, etc.?—μὴ ἔχων: μὴ this time, not οὐ, as in ver. 11, implying blame. Euthymius includes the question as to how the man got in among the matters not to be inquired into, διὰ τὴν αὐτονομίαν (freedom) τῆς παραβολῆς.—ὁ δὲ ἐφίμωθη, he was dumb, not so much from a sense of guilt as from confusion in presence of the great king finding fault, and from fear of punishment.—Ver. 13. τοῖς διακόνοις, the servants waiting on the guests, cf. Lk. xxii. 27, John ii. 5.—δήσαντες, ἐκβάλετε: disproportionate fuss, we are apt to think, about the rude act of an unmannerly clown. Enough surely simply to turn him out, instead of binding him hand and foot as a criminal preparatory to some fearful doom. But matters of etiquette are seriously viewed at courts, especially in the East, and the king's temper is already ruffled by previous insults, which make him jealous for his honour. And the anger of the king serves the didactic aim of the parable, which is to enforce the lesson: sin not because grace abounds. After all the doom of the offender is simply to be turned out of the festive chamber into the darkness of night outside.—ἐκεῖ ἔσται, etc.: stock-phrase descriptive of the misery of one cast out into the darkness, possibly no part of the parable. On this expression Furrer remarks: "How weird and frightful, for the wanderer who has lost his way, the night, when clouds cover the heavens, and through the deep darkness the howling and teeth-grinding of hungry wolves strike the ear of the lonely one! Truly no figure could more impressively describe the anguish of the God-forsaken" (Wanderungen, p. 181).—Ver. 14. πολλοὶ γὰρ: if, as γὰρ might suggest, the concluding aphorism referred exclusively to the fate of the unrobed guest, we should be obliged to conclude that the story did not supply a good illustration of its truth, only one.

15. Τότε πορευθέντες οἱ Φαρισαῖοι συμβούλιον ἔλαβον ὅπως αὐτὸν <sup>in here only</sup> <sup>in N. T.</sup> <sup>vide below.</sup> <sup>n Mk. xii. 14.</sup> <sup>John x. 13;</sup> <sup>xii. 6. 1</sup> <sup>Pet. v. 7</sup> <sup>(with πρ-ρ-</sup> <sup>τ(ων))</sup> <sup>o 2 Cor. x. 7</sup> <sup>(τὰ κατὰ πρόσωποι).</sup> παγιδεύσωσιν ἐν λόγῳ. 16. καὶ ἀποστέλλουσιν αὐτῷ τοὺς μαθητὰς αὐτῶν μετὰ τῶν Ἡρωδιανῶν, λέγοντες,<sup>1</sup> “Διδάσκαλε, οἶδαμεν ὅτι ἀληθῆς εἶ, καὶ τὴν ὁδὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐν ἀληθείᾳ διδάσκεις, καὶ οὐ μέλει σοι περὶ οὐδενός, οὐ γὰρ ὀβλέπεις εἰς πρόσωπον ἀνθρώπων.

<sup>1</sup> λεγοντας in ℣BL in agreement with μαθητας. The reading λεγοντες has CDΔΣ al. in its favour, but modern editors prefer the other.

out of many guests called being rejected. But the gnome really expresses the didactic drift of the whole parable. From first to last many were called, but comparatively few took part in the feast, either from lack of will to be there or from coming thither irreverently.

Vv. 15-22. The tribute question (Mk. xii. 13-17, Lk. xx. 20-26).—In this astute scheme the Sanhedrists, according to Mk., were the prime movers, using other parties as their agents. Here the Pharisees act on their own motion.—Ver. 15. τότε, then, with reference to xxi. 46, when the Sanhedrists were at a loss how to get Jesus into their power.—συμβούλιον ἔλαβον may refer either to process: consulting together; or to result: formed a plan.—ὅπως, either how (quomodo, Beza, wie, H. C.), which, however, would more naturally take the future indicative (Fritzsche), or, better, in order that.—παγιδεύσωσιν, they might ensnare, an Alexandrine word, not in classics, here and in Sept. (vide Eccl. ix. 12).—ἐν λόγῳ, by a word, either the question they were to ask (δι' ἐρωτήσεως, Euthy.), or the answer they hoped He would give (Meyer). For the idea, cf. Is. xxix. 21.—Ver. 16. ἀποστέλλουσιν, as in Mk. xii. 13; there intelligible, here one wonders why the sent of Mk. should be senders of others instead of acting themselves. The explanation may be that the leading plotters felt themselves to be discredited with Jesus by their notorious attitude, and, therefore, used others more likely to succeed. More than fault-finding is now intended—even to draw Jesus into a compromising utterance.—τοὺς μαθητὰς αὐ., disciples, apparently meant to be emphasised; i.e., scholars, not masters; young men, presumably not incapable of appreciating Jesus, in whose case a friendly feeling towards Him was not incredible, as in the case of older members of the party.—μετὰ τ. Ἡρωδιανῶν, with Herodians, named here only in Mat., associated with Sadducees in Mk. viii. 15; why so called is a matter of conjecture, and the guesses are many: soldiers of Herod (Jerome); courtiers of Herod (Fritzsche, following Syr. ver.); Jews belonging to the northern tetrarchies governed by members of the Herod family (Lutteroth); favours of the Roman dominion (Orig., De W., etc.); sympathisers with the desire for a national kingdom so far gratified or stimulated by the rule of the Herod family. The last the most probable, and adopted by many: Wetstein, Meyer, Weiss, Keil, Schanz, etc. The best clue to the spirit of the party is their association with the Pharisees here. It presumably means sympathy with the Pharisees in the matter at issue; i.e., nationalism versus willing submission to a foreign yoke; only not religious or theocratic, as in case of Pharisees, but secular, as suited men of Sadducaic proclivities. The object aimed at implies such sympathy. To succeed the snare must be hidden. Had the two parties been on opposite sides Jesus would have been put on His guard. The name of this party probably originated in a kind of hero-worship for Herod the Great. Vide on xvi. 1.—λέγοντας, etc., the snare set with much astuteness, and well baited with flattery, the bait coming first.—διδάσκαλε, teacher, an appropriate address from scholars in search of knowledge, or desiring the solution of a knotty question.—οἶδαμεν, we know, everybody knows. Even Pharisees understood so far the character of Jesus, as here appears; for their disciples say what they have been instructed to say. Therefore their infamous theory of a league with Beelzebub (xii. 24) was a sin against light; i.e., against the Holy Ghost. Pharisaic scholars might even feel a sentimental, half-sincere admiration for the character described, nature not yet dead in them as in their teachers. The points in the character specified are—

r here only 17. εἶπε<sup>1</sup> οὖν ἡμῖν, τί σοι δοκεῖ; ἔξεστι δοῦναι κῆνσον Καίσαρι,
 in N. T.
 q here, ἢ οὐ;” 18. Γνοῦς δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς τὴν πονηρίαν αὐτῶν εἶπε, “Τί με
 parall.,
 Rom. i. 23; πειράζετε, ὑποκριταί; 19. ἐπιδείξατέ μοι τὸ νόμισμα τοῦ κήνσου.”
 viii. 29 al.
 Heb. x. 1. Οἱ δὲ προσήνεγκαν αὐτῷ δηνάριον. 20. καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς,<sup>2</sup> “Τίνος r Mk. xii. 16. ἡ εἰκὼν αὐτῆ καὶ ἡ ἐπιγραφή;” 21. Λέγουσιν αὐτῷ,<sup>3</sup> “Καίσαρος.”
 Lk. xi. 24. ἡ εἰκὼν αὐτῆ καὶ ἡ ἐπιγραφή;”
 Mk. xv. 26. ἡ εἰκὼν αὐτῆ καὶ ἡ ἐπιγραφή;”
 Lk. xiii. Τότε λέγει αὐτοῖς, “Ἄποδοτε οὖν τὰ Καίσαρος Καίσαρι· καὶ τὰ τοῦ 38.
 s parall. and Θεοῦ τῷ Θεῷ.” 22. Καὶ ἀκούσαντες ἐθαύμασαν· καὶ ἀφέντες αὐτὸν Rom. xiii.
 7 in same ἀπῆλθον.
 sense.

<sup>1</sup> εἶπον in LZ 33: adopted by Tisch. and W.H., though εἶπε is found in  $\aleph$ BC.

<sup>2</sup> DLZ add ο Ἰησοῦς after αὐτοῖς and W.H. put it in margin.

<sup>3</sup>  $\aleph$ B omit αὐτῷ; found in DLZΔ, etc.

(1) sincerity—ἀληθής; (2) fidelity, as a religious teacher—καὶ τ. ὁ τ. θ. ἐν ἀληθείᾳ διδάσκει; (3) fearlessness—οὐ μέλει, etc.; (4) no respecter of persons—οὐ βλέπει, etc. = will speak the truth to all and about all impartially. The compliment, besides being treacherous, was insulting, implying that Jesus was a reckless simpleton who would give Himself away, and a vain man who could be flattered. But, in reality, they sinned in ignorance. Such men could not understand the character of Jesus thoroughly: e.g., His humility, His wisdom, and His superiority to partisan points of view.—Ver. 17. εἶπον οὖν, etc.: the snare, a question as to the lawfulness in a religious point of view (ἔξεστι—fas est, Grotius) of paying tribute to Caesar. The question implies a possible antagonism between such payment and duty to God as theocratic Head of the nation. Vide Deut. xvii. 15.—ἢ οὐ; yes or no? they expect or desire a negative answer, and they demand a plain one—responsum rotundum, Bengel; for an obvious reason indicated by Lk. (xx. 20). They demanded more than they were ready to give, whatever their secret leanings; no fear of them playing a heroic part.

Vv. 18-22. Christ's reply and its effect.—Ver. 18. πονηρίαν, ὑποκριταί, wickedness, hypocrites; the former the evangelist's word, the latter Christ's, both thoroughly deserved. It was a wicked plot against His life veiled under apparently sincere compliments of young inquirers, and men of the world who posed as admirers of straightforwardness.—Ver. 19. τὸ νόμισμα (Latin numisma, here only in N. T.) τοῦ κήνσου, the current coin of the tribute, i.e., in which the tribute was paid, a roundabout name for a denarius (Mark).—δηνάριον, a Roman coin, silver, in which metal tribute was paid (Pliny, N. H., 33, 3, 15; Marquardt, Röm. Alt., 3, 2, 147).—Ver. 20. ἡ εἰκὼν: the coin produced bore an image; perhaps not necessarily, though Roman, as the Roman rulers were very considerate of Jewish prejudices in this as in other matters (Holtzmann, H. C.), but at passover time there would be plenty of coins bearing Caesar's image and inscription to be had even in the pockets of would-be zealots.—Ver. 21. ἀπόδοτε, the ordinary word for paying dues (Meyer), yet there is point in Chrysostom's remark: οὐ γὰρ ἐστὶ τοῦτο δοῦναι, ἀλλ' ἀποδοῦναι· καὶ τοῦτο καὶ ἀπὸ τῆς εἰκόνης, καὶ ἀπὸ τῆς ἐπιγραφῆς δείκνυται (H. lxx.). The image and inscription showed that giving (ver. 17) tribute to Caesar was only giving back to him his own. This was an unanswerable argumentum ad hominem as addressed to men who had no scruple about using Caesar's coin for ordinary purposes, but of course it did not settle the question. The previous question might be raised, Had Caesar a right to coin money for Palestine, i.e., to rule over it? The coin showed that he was ruler de facto, but not necessarily de jure, unless on the doctrine that might is right. The really important point in Christ's answer is, not what is said but what is implied, viz., that national independence is not an ultimate good, nor the patriotism that fights for it an ultimate virtue. This doctrine Jesus held in common with the prophets. He virtually asserted it by distinguishing between the things of Caesar and the things of God. To have treated these as one, the latter category absorbing the former, would have been to say: The kingdom of God means the kingdom restored to Israel. By treating

23. Ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ προσῆλθον αὐτῷ Σαδδουκαῖοι, οἱ<sup>1</sup> λέγοντες μὴ εἶναι ἀνάστασιν, καὶ ἐπηρώτησαν αὐτόν, 24. λέγοντες, “ Διδασκαλε, Μωσῆς εἶπεν, ‘ Ἐάν τις ἀποθάνῃ μὴ ἔχων τέκνα, ἔπιγαμ- here only in N. T. (Gen. xxxiv. 9; xxviii. 8) βρεύσει ὁ ἀδελφὸς αὐτοῦ τὴν γυναῖκα αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἀναστήσει σπέρμα τῷ ἀδελφῷ αὐτοῦ.’ 25. Ἦσαν δὲ παρ’ ἡμῖν ἑπτὰ ἀδελφοί· καὶ ὁ πρῶτος γαμήσας<sup>2</sup> ἐτελεύτησε· καὶ μὴ ἔχων σπέρμα, ἀφῆκε τὴν u γυναῖκα αὐτοῦ τῷ ἀδελφῷ αὐτοῦ. 26. ὁμοίως καὶ ὁ δεύτερος, καὶ ὁ τρίτος, ἕως τῶν ἑπτὰ. 27. ὕστερον δὲ πάντων ἀπέθανε καὶ<sup>3</sup> ἡ γυνή. Mk xii. 24. 27. 1 Cor. vi. 9; xv. 33. Gal. vi. 7. Heb. v. 2. James i. 16 (all intrans.). 28. ἐν τῇ οὖν ἀναστάσει,<sup>4</sup> τίνος τῶν ἑπτὰ ἔσται γυνή; πάντες γὰρ ἔσχον αὐτήν.” 29. Ἀποκριθεὶς δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “ Πλα-

<sup>1</sup> Ἡ BDZ omit οι (Tisch., W.H.). It might fall out by similar ending of previous word. Vide below.

<sup>2</sup> γαμῆσας in Ἡ BLS, several cursives. γαμησας has probably been substituted as the more usual word: it is the reading of D, etc.

<sup>3</sup> καὶ omitted in Ἡ BLA, found in D; may have come in from Mk.

<sup>4</sup> οὖν after ἀναστάσει in Ἡ BDL.

them as distinct Jesus said in effect: The kingdom of God is not of this world, it is possible to be a true citizen of the kingdom and yet quietly submit to the civil rule of a foreign potentate. This is the permanent didactic significance of the shrewd reply, safe and true (tutum et verum, Bengel), by which Jesus outwitted His crafty foes.—Ver. 22. ἐθαύμασαν, wondered; the reply a genuine surprise, they had not thought it possible that He could slip out of their hands so completely and so easily.

Vv. 23-33. The Sadducaic puzzle (Mk. xii. 18-27, Lk. xx. 27-38).—Ver. 23. προσῆλθον, approached, but with different intent, aiming at amusement rather than deadly mischief. Jesus was of no party, and the butt of all the parties.—λέγοντες, with οἱ, introduces the creed of the Sadducees; without it, what they said to Jesus. They came and said: We do not believe in the resurrection, and we will prove to you its absurdity. This is probably Mt.'s meaning. He would not think it necessary to explain the tenets of the Sadducees to Jewish readers.—Ver. 24. Μωσῆς εἶπεν, what is put into the mouth of all is a free combination of Deut. xxv. 5, 6, with Gen. xxxviii. 8. In the latter text the Sept. has ἐπιγαμβρεύσαι for the Heb.  $\square\text{ך}$  = to perform the part of a levir (Latin for brother-in-law) by marrying a deceased brother's widow having no children. An ancient custom not confined to Israel, but practised by Arabians and other peoples (vide Ewald, Alterthümer, p. 278; Benzinger, H. A., p. 345).—Ver. 25. παρ’ ἡμῖν: this phrase “with us,” in Matthew only, seems to turn an imaginary case into a fact (Holtz., H. C.). A fact it could hardly be. As Chrys. humorously remarks, after the second the brothers would shun the woman as a thing of evil omen (οἰωνίσαντο ἂν τὴν γυναῖκα, H. lxx.).—Ver. 26. ἕως τῶν ἑπτὰ till the seven, i.e., till the number was exhausted by death. “Usque eo dum illi septem extincti essent” (Fritzsche).—Ver. 28. οὖν, introducing the puzzling question based on the case stated.—γυνή either subject=whose will the woman be? or better, the article being wanting, predicate = whose wife will she be? Cf. Luke, where γυνή is used twice.—πάντες γὰρ ἔ. α., all had her, and therefore (such is the implied thought) all had equal rights. Very clever puzzle, but not insuperably difficult even for Talmudists cherishing materialistic ideas of the resurrection life, who gave the first husband the prior claim (Schöttgen).

Vv. 29-33. Christ's answer.—One at first wonders that He deigned to answer such triflers; but He was willing meekly to instruct even the perverse, and He never forgot that there might be receptive earnest people within hearing. The Sadducees drew from Him one of His great words.—Ver. 29. πλανᾶσθε, ye err, passionless unprovocative statement, as if speaking indulgently to ignorant men.—

νάσθε, μὴ εἰδότες τὰς γραφάς, μηδὲ τὴν δύναμιν τοῦ Θεοῦ. 30. ἐν γὰρ τῇ ἀναστάσει οὔτε γαμοῦσιν, οὔτε ἐγκαμίζονται,<sup>1</sup> ἀλλ' ὡς ἄγγελοι τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐν<sup>2</sup> οὐρανῷ εἰσι. 31. περὶ δὲ τῆς ἀναστάσεως τῶν νεκρῶν, οὐκ ἀνέγνωτε τὸ ῥηθὲν ὑμῖν ὑπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ, λέγοντος, 32. 'Ἐγὼ εἰμι ὁ Θεὸς Ἀβραάμ, καὶ ὁ Θεὸς Ἰσαάκ, καὶ ὁ Θεὸς Ἰακώβ;' Οὐκ ἔστιν ὁ<sup>3</sup> Θεὸς Θεὸς<sup>4</sup> νεκρῶν, ἀλλὰ ζώντων." 33. Καὶ ἀκούσαντες οἱ ὄχλοι ἐξέπλησσαντο ἐπὶ τῇ διδαχῇ αὐτοῦ.

34. Οἱ δὲ Φαρισαῖοι, ἀκούσαντες ὅτι ἐφίμωσε τοὺς Σαδδουκαίους, ὡς ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ, 35. καὶ ἐπρωτότησεν εἰς ἐξ αὐτῶν ὁ νομικὸς, 45. τίτ. iii. 13. πειράζων αὐτόν, καὶ λέγων,<sup>5</sup> 36. "Διδάσκαλε, ποία ἐντολὴ μεγάλη

<sup>1</sup> γαμιζονται in  $\aleph$ BDL; the compound in many uncials.

<sup>2</sup>  $\aleph$ BL have τω before ουρανῶ. DΔΣ omit.

<sup>3</sup>  $\aleph$ D (Tisch.) omit ο. W.H. in brackets.

<sup>4</sup> The second θεος is wanting in  $\aleph$ BBDI.Δ al. It has been added to make the meaning clear. Tisch. and W.H. omit.

<sup>5</sup> καὶ λεγων is probably a mechanical addition. It is wanting in  $\aleph$ BI. 33, Egypt. verss.; found in DΔΣ. Tisch. and W.H. omit.

μὴ εἰδότες, etc.: doubly ignorant; of the Scriptures and of God's power, the latter form of ignorance being dealt with first.—Ver. 30. ἐν γὰρ τ. ἀναστάσει might be rendered, with Fritzsche, in the resurrection life or state, though in strictness the phrase should be taken as in ver. 28.—ὡς ἄγγελοι, as angels, so far as marriage is concerned, not necessarily implying sexlessness as the Fathers supposed.—ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ refers to the resurrected dead (Weiss), not to angels (Meyer) = they live an angelic life in heaven; by the transforming power of God.—Ver. 31. Thus far of the mode, now of the fact of resurrection.—οὐκ ἀνέγνωτε, have ye not read? Many times, but not with Christ's eyes. We find what we bring.—τὸ ῥηθὲν ὑμῖν, that said to you; to Moses first, but a word in season for the Sadducaic state of mind.—Ver. 32. Ἐγὼ εἰμι, etc., quoted from Ex. iii. 6. The stress does not lie on εἰμι, to which there is nothing corresponding in the Hebrew, but on the relation implied in the title: God of Abraham. Note in this connection the repetition of the Divine name before each of the patriarchal names, and here the article ὁ before θεός each time (not so in Sept.). The idea is that the Eternal could not stand in such intimate connection with the merely temporal. The argument holds a fortiori in reference to Christ's name for God, Father, which compels belief in human immortality, and in the immortality of all, for God is Father of all men, whereas the text quoted might avail in proof only of the immortality of the great ones, the heroes of the race.—οὐκ ἔστιν ὁ θεός, with the article θεός is subject, and the idea: God does not belong to the dead; without, it would be predicate = He is not a God of the dead. On second θεός vide critical notes.

Vv. 34-40. The great commandment (Mk. xii. 28-34).—In a still more marked degree than in the case of the man in quest of eternal life, Mk.'s account presents the subject of this incident in a more favourable light than that of Mt. The difference must be allowed to stand. Mk.'s version is welcome as showing a good side even in the scribe or Pharisee world.—Ver. 34. ἀκούσαντες, hearing; not without pleasure, if also with annoyance, at the uniform success of Jesus.—ἐφίμωσεν: silenced, muzzled, from φιμός, a muzzle (ver. 12, used in literal sense in Deut. xxv. 4).—Ver. 35. εἰς ἐξ αὐτῶν one of the men who met together to consult, after witnessing the discomfiture of the scribes, acting in concert with them, and hoping to do better.—νομικός: here only in Mt., several times in Lk. for the scribe class = a man well up in the law.—Ver. 36. ποία ἐντολή: what sort of a commandment? it is a question not about an individual commandment, but about the qualities that determine greatness in the legal region. This was a question of the schools. The disἐν τῷ νόμῳ;” 37. Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν<sup>1</sup> αὐτῷ, “Ἀγαπήσεις Κύριον τὸν Θεόν σου, ἐν ὅλῃ τῇ καρδίᾳ σου, καὶ ἐν ὅλῃ τῇ ψυχῇ σου, καὶ ἐν ὅλῃ τῇ διανοίᾳ σου. 38. αὕτη ἐστὶ πρώτη καὶ μεγάλη<sup>2</sup> ἐντολή. 39. δευτέρα δὲ<sup>3</sup> ὁμοία αὐτῇ,<sup>4</sup> Ἀγαπήσεις τὸν πλησίον σου ὡς σεαυτόν. 40. ἐν ταύταις ταῖς δυσὶν ἐντολαῖς ὅλος ὁ νόμος καὶ οἱ προφῆται ἔκρεμανται.”<sup>5</sup>

with ἐν
τινι here only; with ἐκ and
gen. ἵη
Acts
xxviii. 4;
with ἐπι
and gen.,
Gal. iii. 13
(of one hanging on a cross).

41. Συνηγμένων δὲ τῶν Φαρισαίων, ἐπηρώτησεν αὐτοὺς ὁ Ἰησοῦς,

42. λέγων, “Τί ὑμῖν δοκεῖ περὶ τοῦ Χριστοῦ; τίνος υἱὸς ἐστι;”

<sup>1</sup> For ο δε Ιησους ειπεν  $\aleph$ BL, Egypt. verss., have ο δε εφη. So Trg., Tisch., W.H., Ws.

<sup>2</sup> μεγαλη και πρωτη in  $\aleph$ BDLZ. The scribes would be apt to introduce the inverted order (as in T. R.) as the more natural.

<sup>3</sup>  $\aleph$ B omit δε.

<sup>4</sup> For ομοια αυτη B has simply ομοιως, which W.H. place in the margin. Perhaps it is the true reading.

<sup>5</sup> In  $\aleph$ BDLZ $\Sigma$  the verb comes before οι προφηται and is singular; doubtless the true reading.

distinction between little and great was recognised (vide chap. v. 19), and the grounds of the distinction debated (vide Schöttgen, ad loc., who goes into the matter at length). Jesus had already made a contribution to the discussion by setting the ethical above the ritual (xv. 1-20, cf. xix. 18-22).—Ver. 37. ἀγαπήσεις, etc. Jesus replies by citing Deut. vi. 5, which inculcates supreme, devoted love to God, and pronouncing this the great (μεγάλη) and greatest, first (πρώτη) commandment. The clauses referring to heart, soul, and mind are to be taken cumulatively, as meaning love to the uttermost degree; with “all that is within” us (πάντα τὰ ἐντός μου, Ps. ciii. 1). This commandment is cited not merely as an individual precept, but as indicating the spirit that gives value to all obedience.—Ver. 39. δευτέρα: a second commandment is added from Lev. xix. 18, enjoining loving a neighbour as ourselves. According to T. R., this second is declared like to the first (ὁμοία αὐτῇ). The laconic reading of B (δευτ. ὁμοίως) amounts to the same thing = the second is also a great, first commandment, being, though formally subordinate to the first, really the first in another form: love to God and love to man one. Euthy. Zig. suggests that Jesus added the second commandment in tacit rebuke of their lack of love to Himself.—Ver. 40. ὁ ὁ νόμος κρέματα. Jesus winds up by declaring that on these two hangs, is suspended, the whole law, also the prophets = the moral drift of the whole O. T. is love; no law or performance of law of any value save as love is the soul of it. So Jesus soars away far above the petty disputes of the schools about the relative worth of isolated precepts; teaching the organic unity of duty.

Vv. 41-46. Counter question of Jesus (Mk. xii. 35-37; Lk. xx. 41-44).—Not meant merely to puzzle or silence foes, or even to hint a mysterious doctrine as to the Speaker's person, but to make Pharisees and scribes, and Sanhedrists generally, revise their whole ideas of the Messiah and the Messianic kingdom, which had led them to reject Him.—Ver. 42. τί ὑμῖν δοκεῖ; what think you? first generally of the Christ (περὶ τ. Χ.); second more particularly as to His descent (τίνος υἱὸς ἐστι).—τοῦ Δαβὶδ, David's, the answer expected. Messiah must be David's son: that was the great idea of the scribes, carrying along with it hopes of royal dignity and a restored kingdom.—Ver. 43. πῶς οὖν, etc.: the question is meant to bring out another side of Messiah's relation to David, based on an admittedly Messianic oracle (Ps. cx. 1), and overlooked by the scribes. The object of the question is not, as some have supposed, to deny in toto the sonship, but to hint doubt as to the importance attached to it. Think out the idea of Lordship and see where

λέγουσιν αὐτῷ, "Τοῦ Δαβίδ." 43. λέγει αὐτοῖς, "Πῶς οὖν Δαβὶδ
 τ Cf. πνευ-<sup>2</sup> ἐν<sup>2</sup> πνεύματι κύριον αὐτὸν καλεῖ<sup>1</sup>; λέγων, 44. 'Εἶπεν δ<sup>2</sup> Κύριος ματθ in
 Gal. v. 5. τῷ κυρίῳ μου, Κάθου ἐκ δεξιῶν μου, ἕως ἂν θῶ τοὺς ἐχθρούς σου ὑποπόδιον<sup>3</sup> τῶν ποδῶν σου.' 45. Εἰ οὖν Δαβὶδ καλεῖ αὐτὸν κύριον, y here, πῶς υἱὸς αὐτοῦ ἔστι;" 46. Καὶ οὐδεὶς ἐδύνατο αὐτῷ ἀποκριθῆναι<sup>4</sup>
 parall.,
 John xxi. λόγον· οὐδὲ<sup>2</sup> ἔτόλμησέ τις ἀπ' ἐκείνης τῆς ἡμέρας ἐπερωτήσασθαι
 12 al.
 (with inf.). αὐτὸν οὐκέτι.

<sup>1</sup> ΞBDLZ put καλεῖ first, but differ in the order of κυριον αυτον.

<sup>2</sup> ο omitted in ΞBDZ.

<sup>3</sup> υποκατω in ΞBDL al.

<sup>4</sup> αποκ. αυτω in ΞBDLZΔΣ.

it will lead you, said Jesus in effect. The scribes began at the wrong end: at the physical and material, and it landed them in secularity. If they had begun with Lordship it would have led them into the spiritual sphere, and made them ready to accept as Christ one greater than David in the spiritual order, though totally lacking the conventional grandeur of royal persons, only an unpretending Son of Man.

CHAPTER XXIII. THE GREAT ANTI-PHARISAIC DISCOURSE. This is one of the great discourses peculiar to the first Gospel. That some such words were spoken by Jesus in Jerusalem in the Passion week may be inferred from Mk. xii. 38-40, Lk. xx. 45-47. The few sentences there reported look like a fragment, just enough to show that there must have been more—too meagre (gar zu dürftig., De W.) to have been all that Jesus said on such a large topic at such a solemn time. A weighty, deliberate, full, final statement, in the form of a dying testimony, was to be expected from One who had so often criticised the prevailing religious system in an occasional manner in His Galilean ministry—a summing up in the head-quarters of scribism of past prophetic censures uttered in the provinces. In such a final protest repetitions might be looked for (Nösgen). In any case, whether all the words here brought together were spoken at this time or not, the evangelist did well to collect them into one body, and he could not have introduced the collection at a more appropriate place.

Vv. 1-12. Introduction to the discourse.—Ver. 1. τοῖς ὄχλοις καὶ τ. μαθηταῖς: the discourse is about scribes and Pharisees, but the audience is conceived to consist of the disciples and the people. Meyer describes the situation thus: in the foreground Jesus and His disciples; a little further off the ὄχλος; in the background the Pharisees.—Ver. 2. ἐπὶ τ. Μ. καθέδρας, on the seat of Moses, short for, on the seat of a teacher whose function it was to interpret the Mosaic Law. The Jews spoke of the teacher's seat as we speak of a professor's chair.—ἐκάθισαν, in effect, a gnomic aorist = solent sedere (Fritzsche), not a case of the aorist used as a perfect = have taken and now occupy, etc. (Erasmus). Burton (Syntax) sees in this and other aorists in N. T. a tendency towards use of aorist for perfect not yet realised: "rhetorical figure on the way to become grammatical idiom, but not yet become such," § 55.—οἱ Φαρ. Wendt (L. Z., i., 186) thinks this an addition by the evangelist, the statement strictly applying only to the scribes.—Ver. 3. εἰπωσιν, say, in the sense of enjoining; no need therefore of τηρεῖν as in T. R.—ποιήσατε καὶ τηρεῖτε: The natural order if the previous τηρεῖν be omitted. The diverse tenses are significant, the former pointing to detailed performance, the latter to habitual observance. Christ here recognises the legitimacy of the scribal function of interpretation in a broad way, which may appear too unqualified and incompatible with His teaching at other times (Mt. xv. 1-20) (so Holtz., H. C.). Allowance must be made for Christ's habit of unqualified statement, especially here when He is going to attack in an uncompromising manner the conduct of the Jewish doctors. He means: as teachers they have their place, but beware of following their example.—Ver. 4 illustrates the previous statement.—δεσμεύουσι, etc., they bind together, like sheaves, heavy backloads of rules. Think, e.g., of the innumerable rules for Sabbath observance similar to that prohibiting rubbing ears of corn as work—threshing.—δυσβάστακτα may be a

XXIII. 1. ΤΟΤΕ ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐλάλησε τοῖς ὄχλοις καὶ τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ, 2. λέγων, “Ἐπὶ τῆς Μωσέως καθέδρας ἐκάθισαν οἱ γραμματεῖς καὶ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι · 3. πάντα οὖν ὅσα ἂν<sup>1</sup> εἴπωσιν ὑμῖν τηρεῖν,<sup>2</sup> τηρεῖτε καὶ ποιεῖτε<sup>3</sup> · κατὰ δὲ τὰ ἔργα αὐτῶν μὴ ποιεῖτε · λέγουσι γὰρ καὶ οὐ ποιοῦσι. 4. <sup>a</sup>δεσμεύουσι γὰρ<sup>4</sup> φορτία βαρέα καὶ δυσβάστακτα,<sup>5</sup> καὶ ἐπιτιθέασιν ἐπὶ τοὺς <sup>b</sup>ὤμους τῶν ἀνθρώπων · τῷ δὲ δακτύλῳ<sup>6</sup> αὐτῶν οὐ θέλουσι <sup>c</sup>κινήσαι αὐτά. 5. πάντα δὲ τὰ ἔργα αὐτῶν ποιοῦσι πρὸς τὸ θεαθῆναι τοῖς ἀνθρώποις. <sup>d</sup>πλατύνουσι δὲ<sup>7</sup> τὰ <sup>e</sup>φυλακτήρια αὐτῶν, καὶ μεγαλύνουσι τὰ κράσπεδα τῶν ἱματίων αὐτῶν<sup>8</sup>. 6. φιλοῦσιν τε<sup>9</sup> τὴν <sup>f</sup>πρωτοκλισίαν ἐν τοῖς δείπνοις, καὶ

Acts xxiv. 5 (to excite, metaph.). d 2 Cor. vi. 11, 13 (of the broadening or enlarging of the heart). e here only in N. T. f Lk. xiv. 7, 8.

<sup>1</sup> εαν in NLZΔΣ; αν in BD (Tisch., W.H. have εαν).

<sup>2</sup> NBDLZ omit τηρεῖν.

<sup>3</sup> NBDLZ invert the order of the two verbs. D has ποιεῖτε, the rest ποιησατε.

<sup>4</sup> δε in NBLΔΣ 33.

<sup>5</sup> NL omit και δυσβάστακτα (Tisch.). BΔΔΣ have the words, which may have come in from Lk. (xi. 46), but may also be a genuine reading (W.H. in margin).

<sup>6</sup> For τω δε δακτυλω NBDL read αυτοι δε τω δακ. <sup>7</sup> γαρ in NBDL, curs. verss.

<sup>8</sup> NBD omit των ιματιων αυτων. <sup>9</sup> δε in NBDLΔΣ.

spurious reading imported from Lk. xi. 46, but it states a fact, and was doubtless used by Jesus on some occasion. It shows by the way that He had no thought of unqualified approval of the teaching of the scribes.—ἐπὶ τ. ὤμους, on the shoulders, that they may feel the full weight, demanding punctual compliance.—αὐτοὶ δὲ τ. δακτύλω, etc., they are not willing to move or touch them with a finger; proverbial (Elsner) for “will not take the smallest trouble to keep their own rules”. A strong statement pointing to the subtle ways of evading strict rules invented by the scribes. “The picture is of the merciless camel or ass driver who makes up burdens not only heavy, but unwieldy and so difficult to carry, and then placing them on the animal’s shoulders, stands by indifferent, raising no finger to lighten or even adjust the burden” (Carr, C. G. T.).

Vv. 5-7. The foregoing statement is of course to be taken cum grano. Teachers who absolutely disregarded their own laws would soon forfeit all respect. In point of fact they made a great show of zeal in doing. Jesus therefore goes on to tax them with acting from low motives.—Ver. 5. πάντα δε, etc., in so far as they comply with their rules they act with a view to be seen of men. This is a repetition of an old charge (Mt. vi.)—πλατύνουσι γὰρ, etc.: illustrative instances drawn from the phylacteries and the tassels attached to the upper garment, the former being broadened, the latter lengthened to attract notice. The phylacteries (φυλακτήρια) were an admirable symbol at once of Pharisaic ostentation and Pharisaic make-believe. They were little boxes attached to the forehead and the left arm near the heart, containing pieces of parchment with certain texts written on them (Ex. xiii. 1-10, 11-16; Deut. vi. 4-10; xi. 13-22) containing figurative injunctions to keep in memory God’s laws and dealings, afterwards mechanically interpreted, whence these visible symbols of obedience on forehead and arm. The size of the phylacteries indexed the measure of zeal, and the wearing of large ones was apt to take the place of obedience. It was with the Pharisees as with Carlyle’s advertising hatter, who sent a cart through the street with a huge hat in it instead of making good hats. For details on phylacteries and fringes consult works on Jewish antiquities. Lund, Jüdischen Heiligthümer (1701), has a chapter (p. 796) on the dress of the Pharisees with pictorial illustrations. It has been discussed whether the name g parall. and Lk. xi. 43. τὰς ἑ πρωτοκαθεδρίας ἐν ταῖς συναγωγαῖς, 7. καὶ τοὺς ἀσπασμοὺς ἐν ταῖς ἀγοραῖς, καὶ καλεῖσθαι ὑπὸ τῶν ἀνθρώπων, ῥαββί, ῥαββί<sup>1</sup>. 8. ὑμεῖς δὲ μὴ κληθῆτε, ῥαββί· εἰς γὰρ ἐστὶν ὑμῶν ὁ καθηγητής, ὁ Χριστός<sup>2</sup>. πάντες δὲ ὑμεῖς ἀδελφοί ἐστε. 9. καὶ πατέρα μὴ καλέσητε ὑμῶν ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς· εἰς γὰρ ἐστὶν ὁ πατὴρ ὑμῶν,<sup>3</sup> ὁ ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς.<sup>4</sup> 10. μὴδὲ κληθῆτε, ἡ καθηγηταί· εἰς γὰρ ὑμῶν ἐστὶν ὁ καθηγητής,<sup>5</sup> ὁ Χριστός. 11. ὁ δὲ μείζων ὑμῶν ἔσται ὑμῶν διάκονος. 12. ὅστις δὲ ὑψώσει ἑαυτόν, ταπεινωθήσεται· καὶ ὅστις ταπεινώσει ἑαυτόν, ὑψωθήσεται.

h here only in N. T.

13. "Οὐαὶ δὲ ὑμῖν, γραμματεῖς καὶ Φαρισαῖοι, ὑποκριταί, ὅτι κατεσθίετε τὰς οἰκίας τῶν χηρῶν, καὶ προφάσει μακρὰ προσευχό-

<sup>1</sup> ΞBLΔΣ omit the second ραββί.

<sup>2</sup> BU, several cursives, have ο διδασκαλος instead of ο καθ. ο Χριστος, which seems a gloss from ver. 10.

<sup>3</sup> ὑμων before ο πατηρ in ΞBZ 33.

<sup>4</sup> ο ουρανιος for ο εν τ. ουρανοις in ΞBL 33.

<sup>5</sup> οτι καθηγ. υμ. εστιν εις in BDL 33.

φυλ. points to the keeping of the law or to the use of these things as amulets to ward off harm. The former was doubtless originally in view, but the superstitious abuse would soon creep in. The word is the equivalent in Hellenistic Greek for the Chaldee ܪܒܝܢܐ prayers.

—Ver. 6. πρωτοκλισίαν: with religious ostentation goes social vanity, love of the first place at feasts, and first seats (πρωτοκαθεδρίας) in synagogues; an insatiable hunger for prominence.—Ver. 7. τοὺς ἀσπασμοὺς, the (usual) salutations, in themselves innocent courtesies, but coveted because offered in public places, and as demonstrations of respect.—ῥαββί, literally, my great one, like the French monsieur; in Christ's time a new title of honour for the Jewish doctors (vide Lightfoot, Ewald. Gesch. Christi, p. 305; Schürer, ii., p. 315, who says the title came into use after the time of Christ).—Ver. 8. ὑμεῖς, you, emphatic: the Twelve, an earnest aside to them in special (an interpolation by the evangelist, Weiss-Meyer), be not ye called Rabbi.—μὴ κληθῆτε, "Do not seek to be called, if others call you this it will not be your fault". Euthy. Zig.—Ver. 9. πατέρα = abba, another title of honour for the Rabbis (Schöttgen). The clause is to be translated: a father of you call not upon earth = do not pronounce this sacred name with reference to men. Vide Winer, § 64, 4, and cf. Heb. iii. 13.

—Ver. 10. καθηγηταί, kindred with ὀδηγοί (ver. 16), guides, leaders in thought, desiring abject discipleship from followers. Gradatio: Rabbi, pater, ductor, Beng. The threefold counsel shows the intensely anti-prelatic spirit of Jesus. In spite of this earnest warning the love of pre-eminence and leadership has prevailed in the Church to the detriment of independence, the sense of responsibility, and loyalty to God.—ὁ Χριστός: in this place though not in ver. 8 a part of the true text, but possibly an addition by the evangelist ("a proof that Matthew here speaks, not Jesus," H. C.).—Vv. 11, 12, repeat in substance the teaching of xx. 26: xviii. 4; worth repeating and by no means out of place here.

Vv. 13-31. The seven woes.—There are eight, if we count that in ver. 13 of T. R., but as this ver. is omitted in the best MSS. and appears to be a gloss from Mk. and Lk. I do not count it. Vide notes on Mk. xii. 40. These woes seem to be spoken directly to the scribes and Pharisees. Weiss regards this as a rhetorical apostrophe, the disciples being the real audience throughout.—Ver. 14. ὑποκριταί. Vide at vi. 2. This epithet is applied to the scribes and Pharisees in each of the woes with terrific iteration.—κλείετε, ye shut the gates or the doors of the Kingdom of God, conceived as a city or palace. This the real effect of their action, not the ostensible. They μενοι· διὰ τοῦτο λήψεσθε περισσότερον κρίμα.<sup>1</sup> 14. Οὐαὶ<sup>2</sup> ὑμῖν, γραμματεῖς καὶ Φαρισαῖοι, ὑποκριταί, ὅτι κλείετε τὴν βασιλείαν τῶν οὐρανῶν ἔμπροσθεν τῶν ἀνθρώπων· ὑμεῖς γὰρ οὐκ εἰσέρχεσθε, οὐδὲ τοὺς εἰσερχομένους ἀφίετε εἰσελθεῖν. 15. Οὐαὶ ὑμῖν, γραμματεῖς καὶ Φαρισαῖοι, ὑποκριταί, ὅτι περιάγετε τὴν θάλασσαν καὶ τὴν ἕξηρὰν ποιῆσαι ἕνα ἁποστήλυτον, καὶ ὅταν γένηται, ποιεῖτε αὐτὸν υἱὸν γεέννης διπλότερον ὑμῶν. 16. Οὐαὶ ὑμῖν, ὄδηγοι τυφλοί, οἳ λέγοντες, Ὅς ἂν ὁμῶς ἐν τῷ ναῶ, οὐδὲν ἔστιν· ὅς δ' ἂν ὁμῶς ἐν

<sup>i</sup> Heb. xi. 29 (without γῆς in T.
R., with in W. H.).
Acts ii. 10;
vi. 5; xiii.
43.

<sup>1</sup> Ver. 13 omitted in  $\aleph$ BDLZ, some cursives, versions (including Syr. Sin.), Fathers, and by modern editors.

<sup>2</sup> δε must be supplied here if ver. 13 be omitted.

claimed to be opening the Kingdom while really shutting it, and therein lay their hypocrisy.—ἔμπροσθεν τ. ἀ.: as it were in men's faces, when they are in the act of entering.—ὑμεῖς γὰρ, etc. Cf. v. 20. They thought themselves certainly within, but in the judgment of Jesus, with all their parade of piety, they were without.—τ. εἰσερχομένους, those in the mood to enter, in the act of entering; the reference is to sincere seekers after God, and the statement is that the scribes were the worst advisers such persons could go to: the effect of their teaching would be to keep them out. This is the position implied throughout the Sermon on the Mount and in xi. 28-30.—Ver. 15. The second woe is the complement of the first: it represents the false guides, as, while utterly incompetent for the function, extremely eager to exercise it.—περιάγετε, ye move about, intransitive, the accusative following being governed by περὶ.—τ. ἕξηρὰν, the dry (land), sometimes ὑγρὰ is similarly used for the sea (examples in Elsner). Cf. ψυχρὸν for cold water in x. 42. To compass sea and land is proverbial for doing anything with great zeal.—π. ἕνα ἀποστήλυτον, to make a single proselyte. The zeal here ascribed to the Pharisees seems in one sense alien to their character as described in Lk. xviii. 11. One would expect them rather to be pleased to be a select few superior to all others than to be animated with a burning desire to gain recruits whether from Jews or from Gentiles. For an elaborate discussion of the question as to the existence of the proselytising spirit among the Jews vide Danz's treatise in Meuschen, Nov. Test. ex Tal. illustratum, p. 649. Vide also Wetstein, ad loc. Wünsche (Beiträge, p. 285) cites passages from the Talmud

to prove that the Pharisees, far from being addicted to proselytising, were rather reserved in this respect. He concludes that Mt. xxiii. 15 must refer not to making proselytes to Judaism from Gentiles, but to making additions to their sect from among Jews (Sectiverer). This, however, is against the meaning of ἀποστήλυτος. Assuming the fact to have been as stated, the point to be noted is that the Pharisees and scribes aimed chiefly, not at bringing men into the Kingdom of God, but into their own coterie.—διπλότερον ὑ., twofold more, duplo quam, Vulgate. Kypke, while aware that the comparative of διπλοῦς (διπλότερος) does not occur in profane writers, thinks it is used here in the sense of deceitful, and renders, ye make him a son of gehenna, more fraudulent, more hypocritical than yourselves. Briefly the idea is: the more converted the more perverted, "je bekehrter desto verkehrter" (Holtz., H. C.).

Vv. 16-22. The third woe refers to the Jesuitry of the scribes in the matter of oaths; the point emphasised, however, is their stupidity in this part of their teaching (cf. Mt. v. 33 f.), where Christ's teaching is directed against the use of oaths at all.—Ver. 16. ὄδηγ. τυφλοί, blind guides, not only deceivers but deceived themselves, lacking spiritual insight even in the simplest matters. Three instances of their blindness in reference to oaths are directly or indirectly indicated: oaths by the temple and the gold of the temple, by the altar and the offerings on it, by heaven and the throne of God therein. The principle underlying Rabbinical judgments as to the relative value of oaths seems to have been: the special form more binding than the general; therefore gold of the temple more than the temple, sacrifice on k absol. here and in ver. 18 only. τῷ χρυσῷ τοῦ ναοῦ, ἡ οὐκ ὀφείλει. 17. μωροὶ καὶ τυφλοὶ· τίς γὰρ μείζων ἐστίν, ὁ χρυσός, ἢ ὁ ναὸς ὁ ἀγιάζων<sup>1</sup> τὸν χρυσόν; 18. καί, ὅς ἐάν ὁμόση ἐν τῷ θυσιαστηρίῳ, οὐδέν ἐστίν· ὅς δ' ἂν ὁμόση ἐν τῷ δώρῳ τῷ ἐπάνω αὐτοῦ, ὀφείλει. 19. μωροὶ καὶ<sup>2</sup> τυφλοὶ· τί γὰρ μείζων, τὸ δῶρον, ἢ τὸ θυσιαστήριον τὸ ἀγιάζον τὸ δῶρον; 20. ὁ οὖν ὁμόσας ἐν τῷ θυσιαστηρίῳ ὁμνύει ἐν αὐτῷ καὶ ἐν πᾶσι τοῖς ἐπάνω αὐτοῦ· 21. καὶ ὁ ὁμόσας ἐν τῷ ναῷ ὁμνύει ἐν αὐτῷ καὶ ἐν τῷ<sup>1</sup> κατοικοῦντι<sup>3</sup> αὐτόν· 22. καὶ ὁ ὁμόσας ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ ὁμνύει ἐν τῷ θρόνῳ τοῦ Θεοῦ καὶ ἐν τῷ<sup>m</sup> καθημένῳ ἐπάνω αὐτοῦ.

<sup>1</sup> αγιασας in  $\aleph$ B $\Delta$ Z.

<sup>2</sup> μωροι και omitted in  $\aleph$ DLZ. BC $\Delta$  $\Sigma$  as in T. R.; Tisch. omits; W. II. relegate to margin.

<sup>3</sup> κατοικησαντι in CDLZ $\Delta$  $\Sigma$  al. κατοικουντι in  $\aleph$ B it. vul. Tisch., W. H., with κατοικησαντι in margin.

altar more than altar, throne of God in heaven more than heaven. Specialising indicated greater earnestness. Whether these forms of oath were actually used or current, and what precisely they meant, e.g., gold of the temple: was it ornament, utensil, or treasure? is immaterial. They may have been only hypothetical forms devised to illustrate an argument in the schools.—οὐδέν ἐστι, ὀφείλει: the formulae for non-binding and binding oaths; it is nothing (the oath, viz.); he is indebted, bound to performance =  $\text{בְּרִיף}$ .—Ver. 17. τίς γὰρ μείζων: Jesus answers this question by asserting the opposite principle to that laid down by the Rabbis: the general includes and is more important than the particular, which He applies to all the three cases (vv. 17, 19, 22). This is the more logical position, but the main point of difference is moral. The tendency of the Rabbis was to enlarge the sphere of insincere, idle, meaningless speech. Christ's aim was to inculcate absolute sincerity = always mean what you say; let none of your utterances be merely conventional generalities. Be as much in earnest when you say "by the temple" as when you say "by the gold of the temple"; rather be so truthful that you shall not need to say either.

Vv. 23-24. The fourth woe refers to tithe-paying (Lk. xi. 42).—ἀποδεκατοῦτε: a Hellenistic word = ye pay tithes, as in Gen. xxviii. 22; to take tithes from in Heb. vii. 5, 6.—ἡδύοσμον, ἀνηθον, κύμινον: garden herbs—mint (literally, sweet smelling), dill, also aromatic, cumin (Kümmel, German) with aromatic seeds.

All marketable commodities, used as condiments, or for medicinal purposes, presumably all tithable, the point being not that the Pharisees were wilful in tithe-paying, but that they were extremely scrupulous. Vide articles in Smith's Dictionary of the Bible. The Talmud itself, however, in a sentence quoted by Lightfoot ("decimatio oleorum est a Rabbinis") represents tithing of herbs as a refinement of the Rabbis.—τὰ βαρύτερα: either, the weightier, in the sense of xxii. 36 (Meyer), or the more difficult to do, in the sense of ver. 4 (Weiss after Fritzsche). The idea seems to be: they made a great show of zeal in doing what was easy, and shirked the serious and more arduous requirements of duty.—τ. κρίσιν, righteous judgment, implying and = the love of righteousness, a passion for justice.—τὸ ἔλεος, neuter, after the fashion of later Greek, not τὸν ἔλεον, as in T. R.: mercy; sadly neglected by Pharisees, much insisted on by Jesus.—τ. πίστιν, faith, in the sense of fidelity, true-heartedness. As a curiosity in the history of exegesis may be cited the use of this text by Schortinghuis, a Dutch pietist of the eighteenth century, in support of the duty of judging the spiritual state of others (κρίσιν)! Vide Ritschl, Geschichte des Pietismus, i., 329.—ταῦτα the greater things last mentioned.—ἔδει, it was your duty to do.—κάκείνα, and those things, the tithings, etc.: this the secondary duty; its subordinate place might be brought out by rendering: "while not neglecting to pay tithes as scrupulously as you please". Bengel thinks ταῦτα and ἐκείνα here refer not to the order of the words but to the relative import-δεκατοῦτε τὸ ἡδύοσμον καὶ τὸ ἄνηθον καὶ τὸ κύμινον, καὶ ἀφήκατε xviii. 12.

23. "Οὐαὶ ὑμῖν, γραμματεῖς καὶ Φαρισαῖοι, ὑποκριταί, ὅτι <sup>α</sup> ἀπο- Lk. xi. 42;
 τὰ βαρύτερα τοῦ νόμου, τὴν κρίσιν καὶ τὸν ἔλεον<sup>1</sup> καὶ τὴν πίστιν· Heb. vii. 5.
 ταῦτα<sup>2</sup> ἔδει ποιῆσαι, κάκεῖνα μὴ ἀφίεναι.<sup>3</sup> 24. ὁδηγοὶ τυφλοί, o here only
 οἱ<sup>4</sup> διυλίζοντες τὸν <sup>ρ</sup> κώνωπα, τὴν δὲ κάμηλον <sup>α</sup> καταπίνοντες. in N. T.
 25. Οὐαὶ ὑμῖν, γραμματεῖς καὶ Φαρισαῖοι, ὑποκριταί, ὅτι καθαρίζετε (Amos vi.
 τὸ ἔξωθεν τοῦ ποτηρίου καὶ τῆς παροψίδος, ἔσωθεν δὲ γέμουσιν ἐξ<sup>5</sup> 6). ἄρπαγῆς καὶ ἄκρασίας. 26. Φαρισαῖε τυφλέ, καθάρισον πρῶτον p here only τὸ ἐντὸς τοῦ ποτηρίου καὶ τῆς παροψίδος,<sup>6</sup> ἵνα γένηται καὶ τὸ ἐκτὸς in N. T.
 αὐτῶν<sup>7</sup> καθαρὸν. q Rev. xii.

r Lk. xi. 39.
Heb. x. 34.
s 1 Cor. vii. 5.

<sup>1</sup> το ελεος in ΞBDL. τον ελεον a grammatical correction.

<sup>2</sup> δε after ταυτα in BCLΔΣ.

<sup>3</sup> αφειναι in ΞBL. αφιεναι in CDΔΣ al.

<sup>4</sup> οι omitted in ΞBL, by oversight, Weiss thinks. Tisch. retains, W.H. omit.

<sup>5</sup> CD omit εξ, which, however, is in ΞBCLΔΣ, and is retained by Tisch., W.H., and other editors.

<sup>6</sup> και της παροψιδος is in ΞBCLΔΣ al., but is omitted by D, and may be a mechanical repetition from ver. 25 (Tisch. omits, W.H. bracket).

<sup>7</sup> αυτων in BD and several cursives, the natural reading if και της παροψ. be omitted.

ance of the things ("non pro serie verborum, sed pro ratione rerum"). On this view "these" means tithes-paying.—Ver. 24. διυλίζοντες (διὰ and ὕλη, Passow), a little used word, for which Hesy chius gives as a synonym, διηθέω, to strain through.—τὸν κώνωπα, τὴν κάμηλον, the gnat, the camel: article as usual in proverbial sayings. The proper object of the former part. is οἶνον: straining the wine so as to remove the unclean midge. Swallowing the camel is a monstrous supposition, but relevant, the camel being unclean, chewing the cud but not parting the hoof (Lev. xi. 4). The proverb clinches the lesson of the previous verse.

Vv. 25-26. Fifth woe, directed against externalism (Lk. xi. 39-41).—τῆς παροψίδος, the dish, on which viands were served. In classics it meant the meat, not the dish (τὸ ὄψον οὐχὶ δὲ τὸ ἀγγεῖον, Phryn., p. 176). Rutherford (New Phryn., p. 265) remarks that our word "dish" has the same ambiguity.—ἔσωθεν δὲ γέμουσιν ἐξ: within both cup and plate are full of, or from. ἐκ is either redundant or it points to the fulness as resulting from the things following: filled with wine and meat purchased by the wages of unrighteousness: luxuries acquired by plunder and licence. The verb γέμουσι occurs again in ver. 27 without ἐκ, and this is in favour of the second view. But on the other hand in ver. 26 the vessels are conceived of as defiled by ἀρπαγή and ἀκρασία, therefore presumably as filled with them. Here as in vi. 22, 23, the physical and ethical are mixed in the figure.—Ver. 26. Φαρισαῖε τυφλέ: change from plural to singular with increased earnestness, and a certain friendliness of tone, as of one who would gladly induce the person addressed to mend his ways.—καθάρισον: if ἐξ, ver. 25, is taken = by, then this verb will mean: see that the wine in the cup be no more the product of robbery and unbridled desire for other people's property (Weiss and Meyer). On the other view, that the cup is filled with these vices, the meaning will be, get rid of them.—ἵνα γένηται, etc., in order that the outside may become clean. The ethical cleanness is conceived of as ensuring the ceremonial. Or, in other words, ethical purity gives all the cleanness you need ("all things are clean unto you," Lk. xi. 41). Practically this amounts to treating ceremonial cleanness as of little account. Christ's way of thinking and the Pharisaic were really incompatible.

Vv. 27-28. Sixth woe, referring to no special Pharisaic vice, but giving a graphic picture of their hypocrisy in

27. "Οὐαὶ ὑμῖν, γραμματεῖς καὶ Φαρισαῖοι, ὑποκριταί, ὅτι παρt Ch. xviii. 61, 64, 66; xviii. 1. Rom. iii. 15. μοιάζετε<sup>1</sup> τάφοις "κεκοιαιμένοις, οἵτινες ἔξωθεν μὲν φαίνονται v Acts xxiii. 7. Acts iii. 2, 18. Rom. x. 15. ὠραῖοι, ἔσωθεν δὲ γέμουσιν ὀστέων νεκρῶν καὶ πάσης ἀκαθαρσίας.
 28. οὕτω καὶ ὑμεῖς ἔξωθεν μὲν φαίνεσθε τοῖς ἀνθρώποις δίκαιοι, v I. k. v. 20. Cor. x. 18, 20. Heb. x. 33. ἔσωθεν δὲ μεστοὶ ἐστε<sup>2</sup> ὑποκρίσεως καὶ ἀνομίας. 29. Οὐαὶ ὑμῖν, γραμματεῖς καὶ Φαρισαῖοι, ὑποκριταί, ὅτι οἰκοδομεῖτε τοὺς τάφοις τῶν προφητῶν, καὶ κοσμεῖτε τὰ μνημεῖα τῶν δικαίων, 30. καὶ λέγετε, Εἰ ἦμεν<sup>3</sup> ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις τῶν πατέρων ἡμῶν, οὐκ ἂν ἦμεν<sup>3</sup> κοινῶν αὐτῶν<sup>4</sup> ἐν τῷ αἵματι τῶν προφητῶν. 31. ὥστε μαρτυρεῖτε ἑαυτοῖς, ὅτι υἱοὶ ἐστε τῶν φονευσάντων τοὺς προφήτας. 32. καὶ ὑμεῖς πληρῶσατε<sup>5</sup> τὸ μέτρον τῶν πατέρων ὑμῶν. 33. ὄφεις, γεννήματα

<sup>1</sup> B I have the simple ομοιάζετε, which W.H. place in the margin.

<sup>2</sup> εστε μεστοι in  $\aleph$ BCDL 13, 33, 69 al.

<sup>3</sup> ἦμεθα in both places in most uncials, including  $\aleph$ BCDL.

<sup>4</sup> αυτων before κοινωνοι in BD (W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> πληρῶσατε in B 60, επληρῶσατε in D; both, according to Weiss, arising from inability to understand the sense of the imperative (W.H. have B's reading in margin).

general (cf. Lk. xi. 44).—Ver. 27. παρ-μοιάζετε, in B ὁμοιάζετε, under either form an hapax leg.—κεκοιαιμένοις (from κονία, dust, slaked lime), whitewashed, referring to the practice of whitewashing the sepulchres in the month Adar, before passover time, to make them conspicuous, inadvertent approach involving uncleanness. They would be wearing their fresh coat just then, so that the comparison was reasonable (vide Wetstein, ad loc.).—ἔξωθεν, ἔσωθεν, again a contrast between without and within, which may have suggested the comparison.—ὠραῖοι, fair, without; the result but not the intention in the natural sphere, the aim in the spiritual, the Pharisee being concerned about appearance (chap. vi).—ὀστέων, etc., revolting contrast: without, quite an attractive feature in the landscape; within, only death-fraught loathsomeness.—Ver. 28. οὕτω, etc.: the figure apposite on both sides; the Pharisaic character apparently saintly; really inwardly, full of godlessness and immorality (ἀνομίας), the result being gross systematic hypocrisy.

Vv. 29-33. Final woe (Lk. xi. 47-48), dealing with yet another phase of hypocrisy and a new form of the contrast between without and within; apparent zeal for the honour of deceased prophets, real affinity with their murderers.—Ver. 29. οἰκοδομεῖτε, may point to repair or extension of old buildings, or to new edifices, like some modern monuments, the outcome of dilettante hero-worship.—τάφοις, μνημεῖα, probably synonyms, though there may have been monuments to the dead apart from burying places, to which the former word points.—προφητῶν and δικαίων are also practically synonymous, though the latter is a wider category.—κοσμεῖτε points to decoration as distinct from building operations. Furrer (Wanderungen, p. 77) suggests that Jesus had in view the tomb of Zechariah, the prophet named in the sequel, in the valley of Jehoshaphat, which he describes as a lovely little temple with ornamental half and quarter pillars of the Ionic order.—Ver. 30. λέγετε: they not merely thought, or said by deed, but actually so pointed the moral of their action, not trusting to others to draw the inference.—ἦμεθα, not in classics, ἦμην the usual form of sing. in N. T. being also rare; the imperfect, but must be translated in our tongue, "if we had been". For the imperfect, used when we should use a pluperfect, vide Mt. xiv. 4, and consult Burton, § 29.—οὐκ ἂν ἦμεθα, the indicative with ἂν, as usual in suppositions contrary to fact, vide Burton, § 248.—Ver. 31. ὥστε, with indicative expressing result = therefore.—ἑαυτοῖς, to and against yourselves. Jesus reads more meaning into their words than they intended: "our fathers"; yes! they are your fathers, in spirit as well as in blood.—Ver. 32. καὶ, and, as ye have called yourselves their sons, ἐχιδῶν, πῶς φύγητε ἀπὸ τῆς κρίσεως τῆς γενένης; 34. Διὰ τοῦτο, ἰδοῦ, ἐγὼ ἀποστέλλω πρὸς ὑμᾶς προφήτας καὶ σοφοὺς καὶ <sup>x</sup> γραμμα- <sup>x</sup> vide Ch. <sup>xiii.</sup> 52. τεῖς· καὶ <sup>1</sup> ἐξ αὐτῶν ἀποκτενεῖτε καὶ σταυρώσετε, καὶ ἐξ αὐτῶν μαστιγώσετε ἐν ταῖς συναγωγαῖς ὑμῶν, καὶ διώξετε ἀπὸ πόλεως εἰς πόλιν· 35. ὅπως ἔλθῃ ἐφ' ὑμᾶς πᾶν αἷμα δίκαιον ἐκχυρόμενον <sup>2</sup> ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, ἀπὸ τοῦ αἵματος Ἄβελ τοῦ δικαίου, ἕως τοῦ αἵματος Ζαχαρίου υἱοῦ Βαραχίου, ὃν ἐφονεύσατε μεταξύ τοῦ ναοῦ καὶ τοῦ θυσιαστηρίου. 36. ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ἤξει ταῦτα πάντα <sup>3</sup> ἐπὶ τῆν

<sup>1</sup> ΞΒΔΣ ι, 13, 33, 69 al. omit καὶ, found in CDL.

<sup>2</sup> ἐκχυρομενον in ΞBCDΔΣ al., ι, 33 al.

<sup>3</sup> πάντα ταῦτα in ΒΧΔΣ (W.H. in margin); as in T. R., in ΞCDL, Vul. Cop. (Tisch., W.H. in text).

so show yourselves to be such indeed (Weiss).—πληρώσατε. The reading πληρώσετε is due to shrinking from the idea conveyed by the imperative. To the same cause is due the permissive (Grotius al.) or ironical (De W.) senses put upon the imperative. Christ means what He says: "Fill up the measure of your fathers; crown their misdeeds by killing the prophet God has sent to you. Do at last what has long been in your hearts. The hour is come."—Ver. 33. Awful ending to a terrific charge, indicating that the men who are predestined to superlative wickedness are appropriately doomed to the uttermost penalty.—ὄφεις, γεν. ἐχιδῶν; already stigmatised as false, fools, blind, they are now described as venomous, murderous in thought and deed. Cf. iii. 7.—πῶς φύγητε, the deliberative subjunctive. "The verb of a deliberative question is most frequently in the first person, but occasionally in the second or third. Mt. xxiii. 33, Rom. x. 14."—Burton, § 170.

Vv. 34-36. Peroration (Lk. xi. 49-51).—Ver. 34. διὰ τοῦτο. The sense requires that this be connected with both vv. 32 and 33. The idea is that all God's dealings with Israel have been arranged from the first so as to ensure that the generation addressed shall fill up the measure of Israel's guilt and penalty. The reference of ἀποστέλλω is not confined to what had been done for that generation. It covers all the generations from Abel downwards. The form in which the thought is expressed at first creates a contrary impression: Ἐγὼ ἀποστέλλω. But either the ἐγὼ is used in a supra-historical sense, or it must be regarded as a somewhat unsuitable word, and the correct expression of the source found in Luke's ἡ σοφία τοῦ θεοῦ εἶπεν, what follows becoming thus a quotation, either in reality from some unknown writing, as many think, or in the conception of the speaker. I see no insuperable difficulty in taking Mt.'s form as the original. Olshausen conceives of Jesus as speaking, not as a personality involved in the limits of temporal life, but as the Son of God, as the essential wisdom of God. The ἐγὼ might be justified without this high reference to the Divinity of Jesus, as proceeding from His prophetic consciousness in an exalted state of mind. The prophet habitually spoke in the name of God. Jesus also at such a great moment might speak, as it were impersonally, in the name of God, or of wisdom. Resch, Agrapha, p. 274 ff., endeavours to show that "the wisdom of God" was, like "the Son of Man," one of the self-designations of Jesus. Whether that be so or not, I think it is clear from this passage, and also from Mt. xi. 28-30 (vide remarks there), that He did sometimes, as it were, personate wisdom. The present ἀποστέλλω, regards the history of Israel sub specie aeternitatis, for which the distinction of present and past does not exist.—προφήτας, etc.: these names for the Sent clearly show that past and present are both in view. It is not merely the apostles, γραμματεῖς (cf. xiii. 52) = ἀποστόλους, Lk. xi. 49, that are in view.—σταυρώσετε, a hint at the impending tragic event, the Speaker one of the Sent.—καὶ ἐξ αὐτῶν, etc.: a glance at the fortunes of the Twelve. Cf. chap. x. 16-23.—Ver. 35. ὅπως ἔλθῃ: divine intention read in the light of result. God sent messengers that they might be killed, and that Israel by killing them might deserve to suffer in the final generation wrath to the uttermost. Vide on Mt. xxii. 7.—αἷμα, thrice named: "ter

- y Ch. xxiv. γενεάν ταύτην. 37. Ἱερουσαλήμ, Ἱερουσαλήμ, ἡ ἀποκτείνουσα τοὺς 31. Mk.
 xiii. 27. προφήτας καὶ λιθοβολοῦσα τοὺς ἀπεσταλμένους πρὸς αὐτήν, ποσάκις Lk. xiii. 34;
 pass. Mk. ἠθέλησα ἔπισυναγαγεῖν τὰ τέκνα σου, *ὄν *τρόπον ἐπισυναγείν 1. 33. Lk. *ὄρνις<sup>1</sup> τὰ<sup>b</sup> νοσσία<sup>2</sup> ἑαυτῆς<sup>2</sup> ὑπὸ τὰς<sup>ο</sup> πτέρυγας, καὶ οὐκ ἠθέλησατε ;
 xii. 1;
 xvii. 37.
 z same 38. Ἰδοὺ, ἀφίεται ὑμῖν ὁ οἶκος ὑμῶν ἔρημος<sup>3</sup>. 39. λέγω γὰρ ὑμῖν, phrase in Lk. xiii. Οὐ μὴ με ἴδητε ἀπ' ἄρτι, ἕως ἂν εἴπητε, Εὐλογημένος ὁ ἐρχόμενος ἐν
 34. Acts
 1. 11; vii. ὀνόματι Κυρίου."
 28. 2 Tim.
 iii. 8. a here and in Lk. xiii. 34. b here in N. T. (Pa. lxxiv. 3). c Lk. xiii. 34. Rev. iv. 8;
 ix. 9; xii. 14.

<sup>1</sup> ὄρνις before ἐπισυναγείν in ΣBDL 1, 33, 69 al.

<sup>2</sup> αὐτῆς in ΣDDΣ 33 (Tisch.). B has neither αὐτῆς nor ἑαυτῆς (W.H. have αὐτῆς, but within brackets).

<sup>3</sup> BL omit ἔρημος, found in very many uncials (ΣCDDΣ al.) and versions. The omission might be an assimilation to Lk. (xiii. 35), where the word is wanting in many of the best MSS., but it is more likely to be an explanatory gloss. Vide below.

hoc dicitur uno hoc versu magna vi," Bengel.—ἀπὸ τ. ἀ., etc., from the blood of Abel, the first martyr, mentioned in the first book of the Hebrew Bible, to the blood of Zechariah, the prophet named in the last book (2 Chron. xxiv. 20-22).—υἱοῦ Βαραχίου, the designation of the last but one of the minor prophets, applied here to the other Zechariah, by inadvertence either of the evangelist or of an early copyist.—ὄν ἐφονεύσατε, whom ye (through your spiritual ancestors) slew; fact as stated in 2 Chron. xxiv. 21.—Ver. 36. ἀμῶν; solemn introduction of a statement terrible to think of: sins of countless generations accumulating for ages, and punished in a final representative generation; true, however terrible.

Vv. 37-39. Apostrophe to the Holy City (Lk. xiii. 34).—Εἶτα πρὸς τὴν πόλιν ἀποστρέφει τὸν λόγον. Chrys., H. lxxiv. —Ver. 37. Ἱερουσαλήμ, the Hebrew form of the name, exceptional in Mt., very appropriate to the solemn situation. Twice spoken; why? "It is the fashion of one pitying, bewailing, and greatly loving," Chrys.—ἀποκτείνουσα, λιθοβολοῦσα: present participles, denoting habit and repute, now and always behaving so—killing, stoning.—πρὸς αὐτήν, to her, not to thee, because the participles are in the nominative, while Ἱερουσαλήμ is vocative: "exemplum compellationis per vocativum ad quam deinceps non amplius spectatur" (Fritzsche). Grotius regards the transition from second to third person as an Orientalism.—ποσάκις, how often; on this word has been based the inference of frequent visits to Jerusalem not mentioned in the Synoptics. But the allusion may be to the whole history of Israel (so Orig., Hil., Jer.) and to the whole people, as the children of the metropolis, the Speaker still continuing to speak in the name of God, as in ver. 34, and including Himself among God's agents.—ὄρνις, a bird or fowl; after Plato, a hen; so here, the emblem of anxious love. θερμὸν τὸ ζῶον περὶ τὰ ἔκγονα, Chrys. She gathers her chickens under her wings for protection against impending danger. This Jesus and all the prophets desired to do; a truth to be set over against the statement in vv. 34-35, which seems to suggest that God's aim was Israel's damnation.—τὰ νοσσία (Attic, νεοσσία: form disapproved by Phryn., p. 206), her brood of young birds. Cf. Ps. lxxiv. 4, where, as here, a pathetic use is made of the emblem.—οὐκ ἠθέλησατε, ye would not, though I would (ἠθέλησα). Man's consent necessary.—Ver. 38. Ἰδοὺ, etc., solemn, sorrowful abandonment of the city to its fate.—ἀφίεται ὑμῖν, spoken to the inhabitants of Israel.—ὁ οἶκος ὑ., your house, i. e., the city, not the temple; the people are conceived of as one family.—ἔρημος, wanting in BL, and omitted by W.H., is not necessary to the sense. The sentence is, indeed, more impressive without it: "Behold your house is abandoned to your care: those who would have saved you giving up further effort". What will happen left to be imagined; just what ἔρημος expresses—desolation.—Ver. 39. ἀπ' ἄρτι, from this moment, Christ's prophetic work

XXIV. 1. ΚΑΙ ἐξεληθὼν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐπορεύετο ἀπὸ τοῦ ἱεροῦ<sup>1</sup> καὶ προσήλθον οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ ἐπιδείξαι αὐτῷ τὰς οἰκοδομὰς τοῦ ἱεροῦ. 2. ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς<sup>2</sup> εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Οὐ βλέπετε πάντα ταῦτα<sup>3</sup>; ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, οὐ μὴ ἀφεθῆ ὡδε λίθος ἐπὶ λίθον, ὃς οὐ μὴ<sup>4</sup> καταλυθῆσεται.” 3. Καθημένου δὲ αὐτοῦ ἐπὶ τοῦ ὄρους τῶν ἐλαιῶν, προσήλθον αὐτῷ οἱ μαθηταὶ κατ’ ἰδίαν, λέγοντες, “Εἰπέ ἡμῖν, πότε ταῦτα ἔσται; καὶ τί τὸ σημεῖον τῆς σῆς<sup>5</sup> παρουσίας, καὶ τῆς<sup>6</sup> συντελείας

parall. Ch xxvi. 61. Acts vi. 14. 2 Cor. v. 1. Gal. ii. 18. again vv 27, 37, 39. nowhere else in Gosp., frequent in Epistles. c vide Ch. xiii. 39

<sup>1</sup> ἀπο τοῦ ἱεροῦ ἐπορεύετο in ΣBDLΔΣ (so modern editors).

<sup>2</sup> For ο δε Ἰησοῦς ΣBDL al. versions have ο δε ἀποκριθεὶς without Ἰησοῦς.

<sup>3</sup> ταῦτα παντα in ΣBCLX al. D has the words in same order as T. R.

<sup>4</sup> μὴ wanting in ΣBCDLXΔΣ al.

<sup>5</sup> τῆς omitted in ΣBCL 1, 33 al.

done now: it remains only to die.—ὡς ἂν εἴπητε: a future contingency on which it depends whether they shall ever see Him again (Weiss in Meyer). He will not trouble them any more till their mood change and they be ready to receive Him with a Messianic salutation.

The exquisite finish of this discourse, in the case of ordinary orators, would suggest premeditation and even writing. We have no means of knowing to what extent Jesus had considered beforehand what He was to say on this momentous occasion. The references to the whitened sepulchres and the tombs of the prophets show that the speech was in part at least an extempore utterance.

CHAPTER XXIV. THE APOCALYPTIC DISCOURSE. This chapter and its synoptical parallels (Mk. xiii., Lk. xxi.) present, in many respects, the most difficult problem in the evangelic records. Many questions may be, have been, asked concerning this discourse on things to come. Which of the three versions comes nearest to what Jesus said? Did He say all that is here reported on this occasion, or have we in all the versions, more or less, a combination of words spoken at different times? Were the words here collected, all of them, or even the greater number of them, ever spoken by Jesus at any time; have the evangelists not worked up into the discourse a Jewish, or Jewish-Christian, apocalypse, or given us a composition of their own, consisting of certain logia of the Master, as the nucleus, with additions, modifications, and comments in the light of subsequent events? Finally, what is the didactic significance of the discourse, what did Jesus mean to teach His disciples respecting the themes treated: the Ruin of the Holy City, the Coming of the Son of Man, and the End of the Age, and the connection between these things? A history of opinion on these topics cannot here be given; a confident attempt at answering the questions propounded I am not prepared to make; perhaps a final satisfactory solution of the problem is not attainable. I offer only a few general considerations which may, at least, help readers to assume a right attitude towards the problem, and to bring to the study of the discourse a sympathetic spirit.

1. The time was suitable for some such utterance. The situation was this: Jesus expecting death in a few days; convinced that the moral and religious condition of the Jewish people is hopelessly bad, and that it must ere long end in disaster and ruin; surrounded by friends who are to be, after the decease of their Master, the missionaries of a new faith in a troublous time, when an old world is going down and a new world is coming into being. Here surely is an occasion to provoke the prophetic mood! At such supreme crises prophetic utterances, apocalyptic forecasts, are inevitable. Here they are, whomsoever we have to thank for them. From whom are they more likely to have proceeded than from Him who had such clear insight into the moral forces at work, and into the spiritual phenomenology of the time?

2. The aim of any prophetic discourse Jesus might deliver at this crisis, like that of all true prophecy, would be ethical; not to foretell, like a soothsayer, but to forewarn and forearm the representatives of a new faith, so that they might not lose their heads or their hearts in an evil perplexing time—not to gratify curiosity but to fortify against coming trial.

d with μή and aor. sub. Mk. μή τις ὑμᾶς πλανήσῃ. 5. πολλοὶ γὰρ ἐλεύσονται ἐπὶ τῷ ὀνόματι xiii. 5. Lk. xxi. 8. μου, λέγοντες, Ἐγὼ εἰμι ὁ Χριστός· καὶ πολλοὺς πλανήσουσι. Acts xiii. 40. 1 Cor. viii. 9; x. 12. Gal. v. 15. Heb. xii. 25; with μή and fut. ind. Col. ii. 8. Heb. iii. 12.

3. Prophetic utterance with such an aim would not need to be exact in statements as to dates and details, but only to be true as to the sequence and general character of events. From all we know of Hebrew prophecy it was to be expected that the prophesying of Jesus would possess only this latter kind of truth, instead of being like a "history of events before they come to pass". The version of the evangelic apocalypse that least resembles the description of prophecy now quoted from Butler's Analogy (part ii., chap. vii.) will come nearest to the original utterance. This consideration tells in favour of Mt. and Mk.

4. All prophetic or apocalyptic utterances have much in common; phraseology and imagery tending to become stereotyped. The prophetic literature of the O. T. had indeed provided a vocabulary, which by the Christian era had become normative for all speech concerning the future. Hence Jewish, Jewish-Christian, and Pauline utterances of this kind would in many particulars resemble one another, and it might be difficult to decide by mere internal evidence from what circle any particular utterance emanated. But it is not probable that the evangelists would introduce into a professed report of a discourse by Jesus a current apocalypse of known Jewish origin unless they had reason to believe that Jesus had adopted it, or endorsed its forecast of the future (vide Weizsäcker, Untersuchungen über die Evang. Gesch., pp. 126, 551).

5. As we have seen reason to believe that in previous reports of our Lord's Discourses (e.g., of the Sermon on the Mount and of the Mission Discourse, chap. x.) grouping of kindred material irrespective of historical occasion has taken place, so we cannot be surprised if traces of a similar procedure present themselves here. The remark applies especially to the latter part of the chapter, vv. 37-51, which contain logia given by Lk. in other connections (chaps. xii. and xvii.).

Vv. 1-3. Introduction (cf. Mk. xiii. 1-4; Lk. xxi. 5-7).—Ver. 1. ἐξελθὼν, going out from the temple, within whose precincts the foregoing anti-Pharisaic manifesto had been spoken. The position assigned to ἀπὸ τοῦ ἱεροῦ before the verb, ἐπορ. in the best MSS., suggests connection with ἐξελθὼν. Some, however (Weiss, Schanz, etc.), insist that the words must be taken with ἐπορ. to give to the latter a definite sense. In reality they go along with both, the full meaning being: going out from the temple. He was going away from it, when, etc.—ἐπορεύετο: the imperfect, indicating an action in progress when something else happened. There is an emphasis on the idea of the verb. He was going away, like one who did not mean to return. Hence the action of the disciples next reported.—ἐπιδείξαι: they came to their Master, going before in a deeply pre-occupied mood, and tried to change the gloomy current of His thoughts by inviting Him to look back at the sacred structure; innocent, woman-like but vain attempt.—τὰς οἰκοδομὰς: the whole group of buildings belonging to the holy house; magnificent, splendid, as described by Josephus (B. J., v., 5, 6), appearing to one approaching from a distance like a snow mountain (ὄρει χιόνος πλήρει) topped with golden pinnacles, which for forty years, in his Napoleonic passion for architecture, Herod the Great had been building to the glory of God and of himself.—Ver. 2. ὁ δὲ ἀποκ., but, adversatively. He answered, in a mood entirely different from theirs.—οὐ βλέπετε; do you not see all these things? = you ask me to look at them, let me ask you in turn to take a good look at them.—ταῦτα: these things, not buildings, implying indifference to the splendours admired by the disciples.—οὐ μὴ ἀφεθῆ, etc.: not an exact description ex eventu, but a strong statement of coming destruction (by fire) in prophetically coloured language (Micah iii. 12; Jer. xxvi. 18). So Holtz., H.C.—Ver. 3. An interval of silence would naturally follow so stern a speech. This verse accordingly shows us Jesus with His disciples now on the other side of the Kidron, and sitting on the slope of Olivet, with face turned towards Jerusalem; Master and disciples sitting apart, and thinking their own thoughts. Satisfied that the Master means what He has said, and not daring to dispute His prophetic insight, they accept the fate predicted for Jerusalem, and now desire to know the when and how.—κατ' ἰδίαν looks as if borrowed from Mk., where it refers to four of the disciples coming apart from the rest. It goes without saying that none but the Twelve were there.—τί τὸ σημεῖον τ. σ. π., etc. The questioners took for granted that all three things went together: destruction of temple, advent of Son of Man, end of the current age. Perhaps the association of the three helped them to accept the first as a fact. Weizsäcker (Untersuchungen, p. 549, note 1) suggests that the second and third questions are filled in by the evangelist to correspond with the answer. So also Weiss in Meyer. The main subject of interrogation is the predicted ruin: when will it happen, and how shall it be known when it is at hand, so as to be prepared for it? Cf. Mk. and Lk., where this alone is the subject of question.—παρουσία (literally presence, second presence) and συντέλεια τοῦ αἰῶνος are the technical terms of the apostolic age, for the second advent of Christ and the close of the present order of things, and they occur in Mt. only, so far as the Gospels are concerned. Do not the ideas also belong to that age, and are not the questions here put into the mouth of the Twelve too advanced for disciples?

6. Μελλήσετε δὲ ἀκούειν πολέμους καὶ ἰσχυροὺς πολέμων. ὁρᾶτε, vide Ch. iv. 24. μὴ ἠθροεῖσθε· δεῖ γὰρ πάντα<sup>1</sup> γενέσθαι. ἀλλ' οὕτω ἐστὶ τὸ τέλος. f Mk. xiii. 7. 7. Ἐγερθήσεται γὰρ ἔθνος ἐπὶ ἔθνος, καὶ βασιλεία ἐπὶ βασιλείαν· ii. 2. καὶ ἔσονται λιμοὶ καὶ λοιμοί,<sup>2</sup> καὶ σεισμοὶ ἑκατὰ ἑτόπους. g same phrase in Mk. xiii. 8.

<sup>1</sup> πάντα omitted in  $\S$ DBL I, 33, 209. The sentence is more impressive without.

<sup>2</sup>  $\S$ BD a b e ff<sup>2</sup> omit καὶ λοιμοὶ possibly by similar ending (Weiss). The words are in C $\Delta$ S al. Mod. editions omit (Trg. in margin).

Vv. 4-14. Signs prelude of the end. (Mk. xiii. 5-13, Lk. xxi. 8-19).—Ver 4. βλέπετε: again (vide ver. 2), but here= see to it, take heed. Cf. Heb. iii. 12.—πλανήσῃ, lest any one deceive you; striking the practical ethical keynote of the whole discourse: its aim not to gratify curiosity, but to guard against deception and terror (μὴ θροεῖσθε, ver. 6)—heads cool, hearts brave, in a tragic epoch.—Ver. 5. πολλοὶ γὰρ ἐλεύσονται, etc., the first omen the advent of pseudo-Messiahs. This first mentioned, quite naturally. Ruin of Jerusalem and the nation will come through revolt against Rome, and the deepest cause of revolt will be the Messianic hope as popularly understood. Volcanic outbursts of Messianic fanaticism inevitable, all the more that they have rejected the true spiritual Christ. Josephus testifies that this was the chief incentive to war against Rome (B. J., vi. 54). The aim of the popular Messianic hope was independence, and all leaders of movements having that goal in view came in the name of "Christs," whether they formally assumed that name or not. It is doubtful if any did before the destruction of Jerusalem, but that does not falsify Christ's prediction, which is expressed in terms of an idea rather than in technical terms suggested by fact. It is not a vaticinium ex eventu; yet strictly true, if we understand by one coming in the name of Christ a leader of the fight for liberty (vindicem libertatis, Grotius).—πολλοὺς πλανήσουσιν. The political Christs, leaders of the war against Rome, deceived the bulk of the people. Jesus wished His followers to hold entirely aloof from the movement. To warn them against sympathising with it was by no means superfluous (vide Lk. xxiv. 21, Acts i. 6).—Ver. 6. Second sign: wars.—πολέμους καὶ ἰσχυροὺς π.: vague phrase suitable to the prophetic style, not ex eventu; well rendered in A. V. "wars and rumours of wars"=wars near and remote (Bengel, Meyer), or better: "actual and threatened" (Speaker's Com.). The reference is not to wars anywhere in the world, but to those in the Holy Land, arising, as they were sure sooner or later to do, out of Messianic fanaticisms. Christ speaks not out of foreknowledge of the actual facts as reported by contemporary historians and collected by modern commentators (Grotius, etc.), but by prophetic logic: given Messianic hopes misdirected, hence wars, hence ruin.—μελλήσετε, future of a verb, whose very meaning points to the future: ye will be about to hear, by-and-by, not for a while; often delusive times of peace before tragic times of war. Vide Carlyle's French Revolution, book i.—ὁρᾶτε, μὴ θροεῖσθε, see, be not scared

h Mk. xiii. 8. 8. πάντα δὲ ταῦτα ἀρχὴ ἢ ὠδίνων. 9. Τότε παραδώσουσιν ὑμᾶς Acts ii. 24.
1 Thes. v. εἰς θλίψιν, καὶ ἀποκτενοῦσιν ὑμᾶς· καὶ ἔσεσθε μισούμενοι ὑπὸ 3
 πάντων τῶν ἐθνῶν διὰ τὸ ὄνομά μου. 10. καὶ τότε σκανδαλισθήσονται πολλοί, καὶ ἀλλήλους παραδώσουσι, καὶ μισήσουσιν ἀλλήλους· out of your wits (θροέω, originally = cry aloud; later use = to terrify, as if with a scream; here passive in neuter sense). This reference to coming wars of liberation was natural, and necessary if the aim was to fortify disciples against future events. Nevertheless at this point, in the opinion of many critics, begins the so-called "Jewish apocalypse," which Mk. and after him Mt. and Lk. have interwoven with the genuine utterance of Jesus. The latter embraces all about false Christs and apostolic tribulations (4-5, 9-14, 22-23), the former all about war, flight, and the coming of the Son of Man with awful accompaniments (7-8, 15-22, 29-31). Vide Wendt, L. J., i., p. 10 f., where the two series are given separately, from Mk., following in the main Weiffenbach. This critical analysis is ingenious but not convincing. Pseudo-Christs in the sense explained and wars of liberation went together in fact, and it was natural they should go together in prophetic thought. The political Messiahs divorced from the politics become mere ghosts, which nobody need fear.—δεῖ γὰρ γ. Their eventual coming is a divine necessity, let even that consideration act as a sedative; and for the rest remember that the beginning of the tragedy is not the end—ἀλλ' οὐπω τ. τ.: the end being the thing inquired about—the destruction of the temple and all that went along with it.—Ver. 7. Further development of the war-portion, possibly here the prophetic range of vision widens beyond the bounds of Palestine, yet not necessarily. In support of limiting the reference to Palestine Kypke quotes from Josephus words describing the zealots as causing strife between people and people, city and city, and involving the nation in civil war (B. J., iv., 6).—λιμοὶ καὶ λοιμοί, famines and pestilences, the usual accompaniments of war, every way likely to be named together as in T. R.—καὶ σεισμοί, and earthquakes, representing all sorts of unusual physical phenomena having no necessary connection with the political, but appealing to the imagination at such times, so heightening the gloom. Several such specified in commentaries (vide, e.g., Speaker's C., and Alford, from whom the particulars are quoted), but no stress should be laid on them.—κατὰ τόπους: most take this as meaning not earthquakes passing from place to place (Meyer) but here and there, passim. Vide Elsner and Raphael, who cite classic examples. Grotius enumerates the places where they occurred.—Ver. 8. πάντα δὲ: yet all these but a beginning of pains. It is not necessary to find here an allusion to the Rabbinical idea of the birth pangs of Messiah, but simply the use of a natural and frequent Biblical emblem for distress of any sort. As to the date of the Rabbinical idea vide Keil. The beginning: such an accumulation of horrors might well appear to the inexperienced the end, hence the remark to prevent panic.

Vv. 9-14. Third sign, drawn from apostolic experiences. This passage Weiss regards as an interpolation into the prophetic discourse by Matthew following Mark. It certainly resembles Mt. x. 17-22 (much less, however, than the corresponding passage in Mk.), and individual phrases may be interpolations: but something of the kind was to be expected here. The disciples were not to be mere spectators of the tragedy of the Jewish nation destroying itself. They were to be active the while, preaching the gospel of the kingdom, propagating the new faith, bringing in a new world. Jesus would have them go on with their work undistracted by false enthusiasms, or warlike terrors, and to this end assures them that they will have both to do and to suffer a great deal before the final crisis of Jerusalem comes. The ground of this prophetic forecast as to their experience is faith that God will not allow the work He (Jesus) has inaugurated to perish. The gospel will be preached widely, with whatever tribulations to the preachers.—Ver. 9. θλίψιν, from θλίβω, originally pressure (στένωσις, Hesychius), in N. T. tropical, pressure from the evils of life, affliction. Again in ver. 29, in reference to the Jewish people. The apostles also are to have their thlipsis.—ἀποκτενοῦσιν ὑμᾶς, they will kill you. Lk. xxi. 16 has "some of you" (ἐξ ὑμῶν). Some qualification of the blunt statement is needed; such as: they will be in the mood to kill you (cf.

11. καὶ πολλοὶ ψευδοπροφῆται ἐγερθήσονται, καὶ πλανήσουσι πολ-<sup>i</sup> here and
 λούς· 12. καὶ διὰ τὸ <sup>1</sup>πληθυνθῆναι τὴν ἀνομίαν <sup>1</sup>ψυγήσεται ἡ in Acts vi.
 ἀγάπη τῶν πολλῶν· 13. ὁ δὲ ὑπομείνας εἰς τέλος, οὗτος σωθήσεται. j 7; vii. 17;
 14. καὶ κηρυχθήσεται τοῦτο τὸ εὐαγγέλιον τῆς βασιλείας ἐν ὅλῃ τῇ ix. 31; xii.
 οἰκουμένῃ, εἰς μαρτύριον πᾶσι τοῖς ἔθνεσι. καὶ τότε ἦξει <sup>k</sup>τὸ here only τέλος. 15. Ὅταν οὖν ἴδητε τὸ <sup>1</sup>βδέλυγμα τῆς <sup>m</sup>ἐρημώσεως, τὸ ῥηθὲν in N. T.
 Cf. 1 Cor.
 xv. 24 (τὸ
 τέλος absolutely).
 1 Mk. xiii. 14.
 Lk. xxi. 20.

Lk. xvi. 15. Rev. xvii. 4, 5; xxi. 27. m Mk. xiii. 14. Lk. xxi. 20.

John xvi. 2).—τῶν ἐθνῶν: not in Mark, universalising the statement = hated by all the nations, not Jews only.—Ver. 10. σκανδαλισθήσονται: natural sequel of apostolic tribulation, many weak Christians made to stumble (vide xiii. 21); this followed in turn by mutual treachery and hatred (καὶ ἀλλήλους, etc.).—Ver. 11. ψευδοπροφῆται, false prophets. The connection requires that these should be within the Christian community (otherwise in ver. 24), giving false presentations of the faith with corrupt motives. A common feature in connection with new religious movements (vide on vii. 15).—Ver. 12. ἀνομίαν. Weiss and Holtzmann (H. C.) take this in the specific sense of antinomianism, a libertine type of Christianity preached by the false prophets or apostles, the word in that sense of course to be credited to the evangelist. The word as used by Christ would naturally bear the general sense of godlessness or iniquity. We may wonder at the use of such a word in connection with nascent Christianity. It would require a considerable time to make room for such degeneracy. But the very point Jesus wishes to impress is that there will be room for that before the final crisis of Israel comes.—ψυγήσεται, etc., will cool the love of many. ψ. is an hapax leg. 2nd future passive of ψύχω, to breathe. One of the sad features of a degenerate time is that even the good loose their fervour.—ἀγάπη, love of the brotherhood, here only in this sense in Synoptical Gospels, the distinctive virtue of the Christian, with a new name for a new thing.—Ver. 13. ὁ ὑπομείνας, he that endureth; the verb used absolutely without object. The noun ὑπομονή is another of the great words of the N. T. Love and Patience, primary virtues of the Christian: doing good, bearing ill. The endurance called for is not merely in love (Fritzsche), but in the faith and life of a Christian in face of all the evils enumerated.—εἰς τέλος, to the end, i. e., of the θλίψις, as long as there are trials to endure.—σωθήσεται, shall be saved in the sense of xvi. 25. The implied truth underlying this test is that there will be ample time for a full curriculum of trial testing character and sifting the true from the false or temporary Christian.—Ver. 14 asserts the same thing with regard to the preaching of the gospel of the kingdom: time for preaching it in the whole world, to all nations, before the end. Assuming that the terminus is the same this statement seems inconsistent with that in x. 23. But the aim is different in the two cases. On the earlier occasion Jesus wished to ensure that all Israel should hear the gospel before the end came; therefore He emphasised the shortness of the time. Here He wishes to impress on the disciples that the end will not be for a good while; therefore He emphasises the amount of preaching that can be done. Just on this account we must not strain the phrases ἐν ὅλῃ τ. οἰκ., πᾶσιν τοῖς ἔθ. They simply mean: extensively even in the heathen world. But they have the merit of setting before the disciples a large programme to occupy their minds and keep them from thinking too much of the coming catastrophe.

Vv. 15-22. The end at last (Mk. xiii. 14-20, Lk. xxi. 20-24).—ὅταν οὖν, when therefore, referring partly to the preceding mention of the end, partly to the effect of the whole preceding statement: "This I have said to prevent premature alarm, not, however, as if the end will never come; it will, when therefore, etc."; the sequel pointing out the sign of the end now near, and what to do when it appears.—τὸ βδέλυγμα τῆς ἐρημώσεως: this the awful portent; what? The phrase is taken from Daniel as expressly stated in following clause (τὸ ῥηθὲν, etc.), vide Dan. ix. 27, xi. 31, xii. 11. There and in 1 Macc. i. 54 it seems to refer to some outrage on Jewish religious feeling in connection with the temple (ψκοδόμησαν β. ἐρ. ἐπὶ τὸ θυσιαστήριον are the words in 1 Macc. i. 54, similarly in vi. 7). In a Jewish apoca-

n Acts vi. 13 διὰ Δαυὶλ τοῦ προφήτου, ἑστὸς ἐν ἰτόπῳ ἁγίῳ· (ὁ ἀναγινώσκων (of the temple); νοεῖτω·) 16. τότε οἱ ἐν τῇ Ἰουδαίᾳ φευγέτωσαν ἐπὶ<sup>1</sup> τὰ ὄρη· cf. John xi. 48 17. ὁ ἐπὶ τοῦ δώματος μὴ καταβαινέτω<sup>2</sup> ἄραί τι<sup>3</sup> ἐκ τῆς οἰκίας (τόπος, of the land). αὐτοῦ· 18. καὶ ὁ ἐν τῷ ἀγρῷ μὴ ἐπιστρεψάτω ὀπίσω ἄραί τὰ ἱμάτια<sup>4</sup> αὐτοῦ. 19. οὐαὶ δὲ ταῖς ἐν γαστρὶ ἐχούσαις καὶ ταῖς θηλαζούσαις ἐν ἐκείναις ταῖς ἡμέραις. 20. προσεύχεσθε δὲ ἵνα μὴ γένηται ἡ

<sup>1</sup> εις in BDΔΣ al. The parall. have εις, and just on that account ἐπι (ΣLZ) may be the true reading.

<sup>2</sup> καταβατω in ΣBDLZΣ al. (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> τα in BLZΔΣ al. τι in D.

<sup>4</sup> το ἱματιον in ΣBDLZΣ al. The plural is pointless.

lypse, which this passage is by some supposed to form a part of, it might be expected to bear a similar meaning, a technical sense for a stereotyped expression. Not so on the lips of Jesus, who was not the slave of phrases but their master, using them freely. Then as employed by Him it must point to some broad, easily recognisable fact, which His followers could at once see and regard as a signal for flight; a fact not merely shocking religious feeling but threatening life, which He would have no disciple sacrifice in a cause with which they could have no sympathy. Then finally, true to the prophetic as distinct from the apocalyptic style, it must point to something revealing prophetic insight rather than a miraculous foresight of some very special circumstance connected with the end. This consideration shuts out the statue of Titus or Caligula or Hadrian (Jerome), the erection of a heathen altar, the atrocities perpetrated in the temple by the Zealots, etc. Luke gives the clue (ver. 20). The horror is the Roman army, and the thing to be dreaded and fled from is not any religious outrage it may perpetrate, but the desolation it will inevitably bring. That is the emphatic word in the prophetic phrase.—ἐρημώσεως is genitive of apposition = the horror which consists in desolation of the land. The appearance of the Romans in Palestine would at once become known to all. And it would be the signal for flight, for it would mean the end near, inevitable and terrible.—ἐν τόπῳ ἁγίῳ, one naturally thinks of the temple or the holy city and its environs, but a "holy place" in the prophetic style might mean the holy land. And Jesus can hardly have meant that disciples were to wait till the fatal hour had come.—ὁ ἀναγιν-ώσκων, etc.: this is most likely an interpolated remark of the evangelist bidding his readers note the correspondence between Christ's warning word and the fact. In Christ's own mouth it would imply too much stress laid on Daniel's words as a guide, which indeed they are not. In Mark there is no reference to Daniel, therefore the reference there must be to the gospel (on this verse consult Weiss-Meyer).

Ver. 16. οἱ ἐν τῇ Ἰ., those in Judaea who have no part in the struggle, with special reference to disciples of Jesus. There would naturally be some in the city, therefore the counsel to fly must refer to a point of time antecedent to the commencement of the siege.—ἐπὶ τὰ ὄρη, to the mountains outside of Judaea, i.e., east of the Jordan; general as befits prophetic speech. The actual place of refuge was Pella, as we learn from Eusebius, H. E., iii., 5, 3.—Vv. 17, 18 vividly express the urgency of the flight.—ὁ ἐπὶ τ. δ., etc., the man on the house top must fly without stopping to get articles of value in the house down the outside stair and off.—τὰ ἐκ τ. οἴκ., elliptical = the things in his house, from his house.—ὁ ἐν τῷ ἀγρῷ, let the man in the field, on hearing the fatal report, fly in his tunic, not returning home for his upper robe. "No man works in his mantle, the peasant leaves it at home, now as in Christ's time" (Furrer, Wanderungen, p. 117).—Vv. 19, 20 describe the pathos of the situation: woe to women with child, they cannot get rid of their burden; and to women nursing, they cannot abandon their children as men can their money or their clothes (διὰ τὸν δεσμόν τῆς φύσεως, Euthy. Cf. Chrys. and Theophy.). A touch this worthy of Jesus, sign mark of genuineness.—Ver. 20. προσεύχεσθε, φυγῆ ὑμῶν °χειμῶνος, μηδὲ ἐν<sup>1</sup> σαββάτῳ. 21. Ἔσται γὰρ τότε οὐκ ἂν ἐσώθη πᾶσα σὰρξ· διὰ δὲ τοὺς °ἐκλεκτοὺς κολοβωθήσονται αἱ ἡμέραι ἐκεῖναι. 22. καὶ εἰ μὴ °ἔκολοβώθησαν αἱ ἡμέραι ἐκεῖναι οὐκ ἂν ἐσώθη πᾶσα σὰρξ· διὰ δὲ τοὺς °ἐκλεκτοὺς κολοβωθήσονται αἱ ἡμέραι ἐκεῖναι. 23. Τότε ἐάν τις ὑμῖν εἴπῃ, Ἰδοὺ, ὧδε ὁ Χριστός, ἢ ὧδε, μὴ πιστεύσητε. 24. Ἐγερθήσονται γὰρ ψευδόχριστοι καὶ ψευδοπροφήται, καὶ °δώσουσι °σημεῖα μεγάλα καὶ °τέρατα, ὥστε πλανῆσαι,<sup>2</sup> εἰ δυνατόν, καὶ τοὺς ἐκλεκτούς. 25. Ἰδοὺ, προεῖρηκα etc. (ἴνα μὴ with subjunctive instead of infinitive as often in N. T. after verbs of exhorting, etc.), pray that your flight be not in winter (χειμῶνος, gen. time in wh.) or on the Sabbath (σαββάτῳ, dat., pt. of time). The Sabbatarianism of this sentence is a sure sign that it was not uttered by Jesus, but emanated from a Jewish source, say many, e.g., Weizsäcker (Untersuchungen, p. 124), Weiffenbach (Wiederkehrungsgedanke, i., p. 103) approving. But Jesus could feel even for Sabbatarians, if they were honest, as for those who, like John's disciples, fasted.—Vv. 21, 22. The extremity of the distress.—Ver. 21 represents it as unparalleled before or after, in terms recalling those of Daniel xii. 1; ver. 22 as intolerable but for the shortness of the agony.—ἐκολοβώθησαν (from κολοβός, κόλος, mutilated) literally to cut off, e.g., hands or feet, as in 2 Sam. iv. 12; here figuratively to cut short the time: nisi breviati fuissent (Vulgate). The aorist here, as in next clause (ἐσώθη), is used proleptically, as if the future were past, in accordance with the genius of prophecy.—οὐκ ἂν, etc.: the οὐκ must be joined to the verb, and the meaning is: all flesh would be not saved; joined to πᾶσα the sense would be not all flesh, i.e., only some, would be saved.—ἐσώθη refers to escape from physical death; in ver. 13 the reference is to salvation in a higher sense. This is one of the reasons why this part of the discourse is regarded as not genuine. But surely Jesus cared for the safety both of body and soul (vide x. 22, 30). The epistle of Barnabas (iv.) contains a passage about shortening of the days, ascribed to Enoch. Weizsäcker (Untersuchungen, p. 125) presses this into the service of the Jewish apocalypse hypothesis.—διὰ δὲ τ. ἐκλεκτούς: the use of this term is not foreign to the vocabulary of Jesus (vide xxii. 14), yet it sounds strange to our ears as a designation for Christians. It occurs often in the Book of Enoch, especially in the Similitudes. The Book begins: "The words of the blessing of Enoch, wherewith he blessed the elect and righteous who will be living in the day of tribulation when all the wicked and godless are removed" (vide Charles, The Book of Enoch, p. 58). The idea attaching to the word here seems to be: those selected for deliverance in a time of general destruction = the preserved. And the thought expressed in the clause is that the preserved are to be preservers. Out of regard to their intercessions away amid the mountains, the days of horror will be shortened. A thought worthy of Jesus.

(Deut. xiii. 1). s always plural and coupled with σημεῖα (John iv. 48. Acts ii. 19, 43, etc.).

<sup>1</sup> ἤΒΔΣ al. omit ἐν.

<sup>2</sup> πλανῆσαι is the reading of ΒΧΔΣ al., and probably the true one. ἤΔ have πλανηθῆναι (Tisch.). LZ have πλανασθαι (W.H. with πλανῆσαι in margin).

Vv. 23-28. False Christs again (Mk. xiii. 21-23, Lk. xvii. 23, 24, 37).—Ver. 24. ψευδόχριστοι, in the same sense as in ver. 5; there referred to as the cause of all the trouble, here as promising deliverance from the trouble they, or their like, have created. What would one not give for a Deliverer, a Messiah at such a dire crisis! The demand would create the supply, men offering themselves as Saviours from Rome's power, with prophets (ψευδοπροφήται) preaching smooth things, and assuring a despairing people of deliverance at the last hour.—μὴ πιστεύσητε, says Jesus (ver. 23), do not believe them: no salvation possible; listen not, but flee.—καὶ δώσουσιν, etc., and will give great signs and wonders. The words recall Deut. xiii. 1. Desperate situations require a full use of all possible powers of persua*vide* Ch. xvi. 3. here and in Mk. xiii. 20 in N.T., vide below. q vv. 24, 31. Mk. xiii. 20, 22. Lk. xviii. 7 (all apparently with a special sense). r Acts ii. 19, 43, etc.).

Ch. xviii. ὑμῖν. 26. ἐὰν οὖν εἴπωσιν ὑμῖν, ἰδοὺ, ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ ἐστί, μὴ
 3. Lk. x.
 18. xi. 36 ἐξέλθῃτε· ἰδοὺ, ἐν τοῖς ταμείοις, μὴ πιστεύσητε. 27. ὥσπερ γὰρ (of the gleam of a lamp);
 xvii. 24; οὕτως ἔσται καὶ<sup>1</sup> ἡ παρουσία τοῦ υἱοῦ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου. 28. ὅπου several times in γὰρ<sup>2</sup> ἐὰν ᾗ τὸ πῶμα, ἐκεῖ συναχθήσονται οἱ ἄετοί. 29. Εὐθέως Rev. (pl.).
 n Lk. xvii. Δὲ μετὰ τὴν θλίψιν τῶν ἡμερῶν ἐκείνων, ὁ ἥλιος σκοτισθήσεται, καὶ
 37. Rev.
 iv. 7; viii. 13 (W.H.); xii. 14.

<sup>1</sup> Most uncials (ΣBD, etc.) omit καί.

<sup>2</sup> ΣBDL omit γὰρ.

sion: signs and wonders, or the pretence of them: easily accepted as such by a fanaticised multitude, and sometimes so clever and plausible as to tempt the wise to credence.—ὥστε, with infinitive to express tendency; often inclusive of result, but not here.—αὶ δυνατὸν, if possible, the implication being that it is not. If it were the consequence would be fatal. The "elect" (τοὺς ἐκλεκτούς)—selected by Providence for safety in the evil day—would be involved in the general calamity. Christians, at Israel's great crisis, were to be saved by unbelief in pseudo-messiahs and pseudo-prophets.—Ver. 25. ἰδοὺ π. ὑ., emphatic nota bene, showing that there will be real danger of misplaced fatal confidences. Hence further expatiation on the topic in vv. 26-28 in graphic, pithy, laconic speech.—Ver. 26. ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ, a likely place for a Christ to be (Moses, Israel's first deliverer).—μὴ ἐξέλθῃτε, go not out (cf. xi. 7, 8, 9).—ἐν τοῖς ταμείοις (vide vi. 6), in the secret chambers, the plural indicating the kind of place, not any particular place. Both expressions—in the desert, in the secret recesses—point to non-visibility. The false prophets bid the people put their faith in a Messiah not in evidence, the Great Unseen = "The hour is come, and the man is somewhere, out of view, not far away, take my word for it". Interpreters who seek for exact historical fulfilments point to Simon son of Gioras, and John of Giscala: the former the Messiah in the desert of Tekoah, gathering a confiding multitude about him; the latter the Messiah in the secret places, taking possession of the interior part of the temple with its belongings in the final struggle (vide Josephus, B. J., iv., 9, 5 and 7; v. 6, 1, and Lutteroth, ad loc.).—Ver. 27. ὥσπερ γὰρ, etc.: the coming of the true Messiah, identified with the Son of Man, compared to the lightning, to suggest a contrast between Him and the false Christs as to visibility, and enforce the counsel to pay no heed to those who say: He is here, or He is there.—Ver. 28. πῶμα, carcase, as in xiv. 12, q.v.—ἄετοί, eagles, doubtless the carrion vultures are meant. The reference of this proverbial saying, as old as the book of Job (xxxix. 30), in this place is not clear. In the best text it comes in without connecting particle, the γὰρ of T. R. being wanting. If we connect it with ver. 27 the idea will be that Messiah's judicial function will be as universal as His appearance (Meyer and Weiss). But does not ver. 28 as well as ver. 27 refer to what is said about the false Christs, and mean: heed not these pretended Saviours; Israel cannot be saved: she is dead and must become the prey of the vultures? (So Lutteroth.) In this view the Jewish people are the carcase and the Roman army the eagles.

Vv. 29-31. The coming of the Son of Man (Mk. xiii. 24-27, Lk. xxi. 25-28).—Thus far the eschatological discourse has been found to bear on the predicted tragic end of Jerusalem. At this point the παρουσία, which, according to the evangelist, was one of the subjects on which the disciples desired information, becomes the theme of discourse. What is said thereon is so perplexing as to tempt a modern expositor to wish it had not been there, or to have recourse to critical expedients to eliminate it from the text. But nothing would be gained by that unless we got rid, at the same time, of other sayings of kindred character ascribed to Jesus in the Gospels. And there seems to be no reason to doubt that some such utterance would form a part of the eschatological discourse, even if the disciples did not ask instruction on the subject. The revelation as to the last days of Israel naturally led up to it, and the best clue to the meaning of the Parusia-logion may be to regard it as a pendant to that revelation.

Ver. 29. εὐθέως. Each evangelist expresses himself here in his own way, ἡ σελήνη οὐ δώσει τὸ φέγγος αὐτῆς, καὶ οἱ ἀστέρες πρесоῦνται ἄπο<sup>1</sup> τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, καὶ αἱ δυνάμεις τῶν οὐρανῶν σαλευθήσονται. 30. καὶ τότε φανήσεται τὸ σημεῖον τοῦ υἱοῦ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἐν τῷ<sup>2</sup> οὐρανῷ· καὶ τότε κόψονται πᾶσαι αἱ φυλαὶ τῆς γῆς, καὶ ὄψονται τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, ἐρχόμενον ἐπὶ τῶν νεφελῶν τοῦ οὐρανοῦ μετὰ δυνάμεως καὶ δόξης πολλῆς. 31. καὶ ἀποστελεῖ τοὺς ἀγγέλους αὐτοῦ μετὰ σάλπιγγος φωνῆς<sup>3</sup> μεγάλης, καὶ ἐπισυναΐξουσι τοὺς ἐκλεκτοὺς αὐτοῦ ἐκ τῶν τεσσάρων ἀνέμων, ἀπ' ἄκρων οὐρανῶν ἕως ἄκρων αὐτῶν.

Mk. xiii.
24. Lk.
xi. 33 (T.
R.).
1 Cor xv
52. 1
Thess. iv.
16. Heb.
xii. 19, etc.

<sup>1</sup> BD have εκ (Tisch.). απο in BLXΔΣ (W.H.). <sup>2</sup> NBL omit τω.

<sup>3</sup> NLA omit φωνης (Tisch., W.H. relegate to the margin). BD (και φωνης) XΣ al have it and it is doubtless genuine.

<sup>4</sup> B 1, 13, 69 add των after εως (W.H. insert, but bracketed).

Lk. most obviously adapting his words to suit the fact of a delayed parusia. Mt.'s word naturally means: immediately, following close on the events going before, the thlipsis of Jerusalem. One of the ways by which those to whom εὐθέρως is a stumbling block strive to evade the difficulty is to look on it as an inaccurate translation by the Greek Matthew of  $\sigma\eta\mu\epsilon\iota\omega\varsigma$ , supposed to be in Hebrew original. So Schott, Comm. Ex. Dog.—ὁ ἥλιος . . . σαλευθήσονται: a description in stock prophetic phrases (Is. xiii. 9, xxxiv. 4, Joel iii. 15, etc.) of what seems to be a general collapse of the physical universe. Is that really what is meant? I doubt it. It seems to me that in true prophetic Oriental style the colossal imagery of the physical universe is used to describe the political and social consequences of the great Jewish catastrophe: national ruin, breaking up of religious institutions and social order. The physical stands for the social, the shaking of heaven for the shaking of earth (Haggai ii. 6); or in the prophetic imagination the two are indissolubly blended: stars, thrones, city walls, temples, effete religions tumbling down into one vast mass of ruin. If this be the meaning εὐθέρως is to be strictly taken.—φέγγος, applicable to both sun and moon, but oftener applied to the moon or stars; φῶς oftener to the sun, but also to the moon. Vide Trench, Syn., p. 163.—Ver. 30. καὶ τότε. Amid the general crash what longing would arise in Christian hearts for the presence of the Christ! To this longing the announcement introduced by these words "and then"

responds.—τὸ σημεῖον τ. υἱ. τ. ἀ. The question what is this sign has greatly perplexed commentators, who make becoming confessions of ignorance. "We must not be positive in conjecturing," Morison. "What this shall be it is vain to conjecture," Cambridge N. T. Is the reference not to Daniel vii. 13, "one like the Son of Man," and the meaning: the sign which is the Son of Man, τ. υ. τ. ἀ. being genitive of appos.? So Weiss after Storr and Wolf.—("σημεῖον υἱοῦ, similis est illis quibus profani passim utuntur quando dicunt βία Ἡρακλέος," i.e., "vis Herculis seu ipse Hercules," Wolf, Curae Phil.) Christ His own sign, like the lightning or the sun, self-evidencing.—καὶ τότε κόψονται, etc.: a clause not in Mk. and obscure in meaning; why mourn? because they recognise in the coming One their Judge? or because they see in Him one who had been despised and rejected of men, and penitently (taking the sin home to themselves) acknowledge His claims? ("believed on in the world," 1 Tim. iii. 16).—ἐρχόμενον . . . πολλῆς, description of the coming; here as in xvi. 27, xxvi. 64, in terms drawn from Daniel vii. 13.—Ver. 31. μετὰ σάλπιγγος φ. μ., with a trumpet of mighty sound, another stock phrase of prophetic imagery (Is. xxvii. 13).—καὶ ἐπισυναΐξουσι τοὺς ἐκλεκτοὺς α., and they (the angels or messengers) shall collect the elect (as in vv. 22, 24), showing that the advent is described in terms suited to the situation previously depicted. The Christ comes for the comfort of those preserved from the general ruin.—ἐκ τῶν τ. ἀνέμων: not merely from the mountains east of the Jordan, but from every quarter of the

32. "Ἀπὸ δὲ τῆς συκῆς μάθετε τὴν παραβολὴν· ὅταν ἦδη ὁ κλάδος αὐτῆς γένηται ἁπαλός, καὶ τὰ φύλλα ἐκφύῃ, γινώσκετε ὅτι ἔγγυς τὸ ἔθνος· 33. οὕτως καὶ ὑμεῖς, ὅταν ἴδῃτε πάντα ταῦτα, γινώσκετε ὅτι ἔγγυς ἔστιν ἐπὶ θύραις. 34. ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν,<sup>1</sup> οὐ μὴ παρέλθῃ ἡ γενεὰ αὕτη, ἕως ἂν πάντα ταῦτα γένηται. 35. Ὁ οὐρανὸς καὶ ἡ γῆ παρελεύσονται,<sup>2</sup> οἱ δὲ λόγοι μου οὐ μὴ παρέλθωσι. 36. Περὶ δὲ τῆς ἡμέρας ἐκείνης καὶ τῆς ὥρας οὐδεὶς οἶδεν, οὐδὲ οἱ ἄγγελοι τῶν οὐρανῶν,<sup>4</sup> εἰ μὴ ὁ πατήρ μου<sup>5</sup> ὁ μόνος. 37. Ὡσπερ δὲ<sup>6</sup> αἱ ἡμέραι τοῦ Νῶε, οὕτως ἔσται καὶ<sup>7</sup> ἡ παρουσία τοῦ υἱοῦ τοῦ

<sup>1</sup> BDL add οτι after ὑμιν (W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> BDL read παρελευσεται. The plural (T. R.) is a grammatical correction.

<sup>3</sup> ΞBDD al. omit της before ωρας.

<sup>4</sup> After ουρανων ΞBD, old Latin vers., and some cursives add ουδε ο υιος hich is adopted by most modern editors.

<sup>5</sup> ΞBDLΔΣ omit μου.

<sup>6</sup> γαρ in BD.

<sup>7</sup> ΞBL omit και.

arth where faithful souls are found; tho of Is. xxvii. 13 again audible here. —ἀπ' ἄκρων, etc., echo of phrases in Deut. xxx. 4, Ps. xix. 7. This Parusialogion is not to be regarded as a didactic statement, but simply as a λόγος παρακλήσεως for the comfort of anxious spirits. With that aim it naturally places the Parusia within the reach of those it is designed to comfort. After the ruin of Israel there is no history; only the wind-up. Jerusalem destroyed, the curtain falls. Christ's didactic words suggest another aspect, a delayed Parusia, vide on xvi. 28. From the foregoing exposition it appears that the coming of the Son of Man is not to be identified with the judgment of Jerusalem, but rather forms its preternatural background.

Vv. 32-36. Parabolic close (Mk. xiii. 28-32, Lk. xxi. 29-33).—Ver. 32. ἀπὸ τῆς συκῆς, etc., from the fig tree learn its parable, rapid condensed speech befitting the tense state of mind; learn from that kind of tree (article generic) the lesson it can teach with regard to the moral order: Tender branch, young leaf = summer nigh. Schott, Comm. Ex. Dog., p. 125, renders ἀπὸ τ. σ. ὄφε ficus = ficum contemplando. On the form ἐκφύη vide notes on Mk.—Ver. 33. οὕτως κ. ὅ, so do ye also when ye see all these things, recognise that it is nigh, at the doors. What are "these things"? what "it"? The former are the things mentioned in vv. 15-21 (ὅταν οὖν ἴδῃτε, ver. 15), the latter is the παρουσία.—Ver. 34. Solemn assurance that the predicted will come to pass.—πάντα ταῦτα is most naturally taken to mean the same things as in ver. 33, the main subject of the discourse, the impending destruction of the Jewish state. Jesus was quite certain that they would happen within the then living generation (ἡ γενεὰ αὕτη), not merely through miraculous foresight but through clear insight into the moral forces at work.—Ver. 35. Declaration similar to that in chap. v. 18 concerning the validity of the law.—Ver. 36. περὶ δὲ τῆς ἡμέρας ἐκείνης καὶ τῆς ὥρας, of that day and hour. The reference is to the coming of the Son of Man, the expression throughout the N. T. having the value of an "indisputable fixed terminus technicus," Weiffenbach, Wiederkunftsgedanke, p. 157.—οὐδεὶς οἶδεν, no one knows, a statement made more emphatic by application to the angels of heaven, and even to the Son (οὐδὲ ὁ υἱός). The meaning is not that Jesus disclaims even for Himself knowledge of the precise day, month, or year of what in ver. 34 He has declared will happen within the present generation; whether, e.g., the crisis of the war would be in 69 or 70 A.D. That is too trivial a matter to be the subject of so solemn a declaration. It is an intimation that all statements as to the time of the παρουσία must be taken in a qualified sense as referring to a subject on which certain knowledge is not attainable or even desirable. It looks like Jesus correcting Himself, or using two ways of speaking, one for comfort (it will be soon), and one for caution (it ἀνθρώπου. 38. ὡσπερ<sup>1</sup> γὰρ ἦσαν ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις ταῖς πρὸ τοῦ * Lk. xvii. 27. 2 Pet. κατακλυσμοῦ, * τρώγοντες καὶ πίνοντες, γαμοῦντες καὶ ἐκγαμίζοντες,<sup>2</sup> iii. 6. ἄχρι ἧς ἡμέρας εἰσῆλθε Νῶε εἰς τὴν <sup>b</sup> κιβωτόν, 39. καὶ οὐκ ἔγνωσαν, <sup>a</sup> here and in John, εἰς ἧλθεν ὁ κατακλυσμός καὶ ἦρεν ἅπαντας, οὕτως ἔσται καὶ <sup>c</sup> ἡ <sup>d</sup> παρουσία τοῦ υἱοῦ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου. vide refl. below and remarks.

40. “Τότε δύο ἔσονται<sup>4</sup> ἐν τῷ ἀγγῶ· ὁ<sup>5</sup> εἰς παραλαμβάνεται, <sup>b</sup> Lk. xvii. 27. Heb. καὶ ὁ<sup>5</sup> εἰς ἀφίεται. 41. δύο * ἀλήθουσαι ἐν τῷ μύλῳ<sup>6</sup>. μία <sup>c</sup> παραλαμβάνεται, καὶ μία ἀφίεται. <sup>d</sup> Lk. xvii. 27. Heb. ix. 4; xi. 7. 1 Pet. iii. 20. Rev. xi. 19. Lk. xvii. 35. Acts xiv. 16 ul. 1 Cor. x. 13 (with acc. of person and inf.).

42. “Γρηγορεῖτε οὖν, ὅτι οὐκ οἴδατε ποῖα ὥρα<sup>7</sup> ὁ κύριος ἔρχεται· ἔρχεται· 43. ἐκεῖνο δὲ γινώσκετε, ὅτι εἰ ἦδει ὁ οἰκοδεσπότης ποῖα φυλακῆ ὁ κλέπτῃς ἔρχεται, ἐγρηγόρησεν ἂν, καὶ οὐκ ἂν <sup>d</sup> εἶασε may not be so soon as even I think or you expect). His whole manner of speaking concerning the second advent seems to have two faces; providing on the one hand for the possibility of a Christian era, and on the other for an accelerated Parusia.

<sup>1</sup> ws in BL 33. <sup>2</sup> BD 33 have the simple γαμίζοντες (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> BD omit καὶ. <sup>4</sup> εσονται δυο in BL. <sup>5</sup> ο in both places omitted in BDL.

<sup>6</sup> μυλω in BLΔΣ. D has μυλων. <sup>7</sup> ημερα in BDΔΣ, cursives.

Vv. 37-42. Watch therefore (cf. Lk. xvii. 26-30, 34-36).—Ver. 37. αἱ ἡμέραι τ. Νῶε, the history of Noah used to illustrate the uncertainty of the Parusia.—Ver. 38. ἦσαν with the following participles is not an instance of the periphrastic imperfect. It rather stands by itself, and the particles are descriptive predicates. Some charge these with sinister meaning: τρώγοντες, hinting at gluttony because often used of beasts, though also, in the sense of eating, of men (John vi. 58, xiii. 18). So Beza and Grotius; γαμοῦντες καὶ γαμίζοντες, euphemistically pointing at sexual licences on both sides (Wolf, “omnia vagis libidinibus miscbantur”). The idea rather seems to be that all things went on as usual, as if nothing were going to happen. In the N. T., and especially in the fourth Gospel, τρώγω seems to be used simply as a synonym for ἐσθίω. In like manner all distinction between ἐσθίειν and χορτάζεσθαι (= to feed cattle in classics) has disappeared. Vide Mk. vii. 27, 28, and consult Kennedy, Sources of New Testament Greek, p. 82.—Ver. 39. οὐκ ἔγνωσαν, they did not know, scil., that the flood was coming till it was on them.—Ver. 40, 41 graphically illustrate the suddenness of the Parusia.—εἰς εἰς (ver. 40) instead of εἰς ἑτέρος, so μία μία in ver. 41. Of these idioms Herrmann in Viger (p. 6) remarks: “Sapiunt Ebraisimum”.—παραλαμβάνεται, ἀφίεται, one is taken, one left. The reference may either be to the action of the angels, ver. 31 (Meyer), or to the judicial action of the Son of Man seizing some, leaving free others (Weiss-Meyer). The sentences are probably proverbial (Schott), and the terms may admit of diverse application. However applied, they point to opposite destinies.—ἀλήθουσαι, grinding: ἀλήθω, late for ἀλέω, condemned by Phryn., p. 151.—ἐν τῷ μύλῳ (T. R.), in the mill house.—ε. τ. μύλῳ (W.H.), in or with the millstone. The reference is to a handmill, which required two to work it when grinding was carried on for a considerable time—women’s work (vide Robinson, i., 485; Furrer, Wand., p. 97; Bénézinger, p. 85, where a figure is given).—Ver. 42. γρηγορεῖτε, watch, a frequently recurring exhortation, implying not merely an uncertain but a delayed Parusia, tempting to be off guard, and so making such repeated exhortations necessary.—ποῖα ἡμέρα, on what sort of a day, early or late; so again in ver. 43, at what sort of a watch, seasonable or unseasonable.

Vv. 43-51. Two parables: the Thief and the Two Servants, enforcing the lesson: Watch!—Ver. 43. γινώσκετε, observe, nota bene.—εἰ ἦδει: supposition contrary to fact, therefore verbs in prot. and apod. indicative.—ὁ κλέπτῃς, admirably selected character. It is the thief’s business to keep people in the dark as to the time of his coming, or as to his coming at all.—οἰκοδεσπότης suggests the idea of a great man, but in reality it διορυγῆναι<sup>1</sup> τὴν οἰκίαν αὐτοῦ. 44. διὰ τοῦτο καὶ ὑμεῖς γίνεσθε ἔτοιμοι· ὅτι ἢ ὥρα οὐ δοκεῖτε,<sup>2</sup> ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἔρχεται.

45. Τίς ἄρα ἔστιν ὁ πιστὸς δούλος καὶ φρόνιμος, ὃν κατέστησεν ὁ κύριος αὐτοῦ<sup>3</sup> ἐπὶ τῆς θεραπείας<sup>4</sup> αὐτοῦ, τοῦ διδόναι<sup>5</sup> αὐτοῖς τὴν

e Lk. xii. 42. τροφήν ἔν ἰ καιρῷ; 46. μακάριος ὁ δούλος ἐκεῖνος, ὃν ἔλθων ὁ κύριος αὐτοῦ εὐρήσει ποιοῦντα οὕτως.<sup>6</sup> 47. Ἄμην λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι

ἐπὶ πᾶσι τοῖς ὑπάρχουσιν αὐτοῦ καταστήσει αὐτόν. 48. Ἐὰν δὲ

f Ch. xxv. 5. Lk. i. 21 εἶπη ὁ κακὸς δούλος ἐκεῖνος ἐν τῇ καρδίᾳ αὐτοῦ, ἰ χρονίζει ὁ κύριος (to tarry, with ἐν); μου<sup>7</sup> ἔλθειν,<sup>8</sup> 49. καὶ ἄρξηται τύπτειν τοὺς συνδούλους,<sup>9</sup> ἔσθιεν δὲ καὶ

xii. 45. Heb. x. 37. πίνειν<sup>10</sup> μετὰ τῶν μεθυόντων, 50. ἤξει ὁ κύριος τοῦ δούλου ἐκεῖνου

g here and in Lk. xii. ἐν ἡμέρᾳ ἢ οὐ προσδοκᾷ, καὶ ἐν ὥρᾳ ἢ οὐ γινώσκει, 51. καὶ ἡ διχο-

46. τομήσει αὐτόν, καὶ τὸ ἡ μέρος αὐτοῦ μετὰ τῶν ὑποκριτῶν<sup>11</sup> θήσει· ἐκεῖ

h same phrase in Lk. xii. 46. ἔσται ὁ κλαυθμὸς καὶ ὁ βρυγμὸς τῶν ὀδόντων.

<sup>1</sup> διορυχθῆναι ἤ DIL 33; as in T. R. in BΔΣ.

<sup>2</sup> ἡ οὐ δοκεῖτε ὥρα in ἤ BDI.

<sup>3</sup> ἤ BDIL I, 33 al. omit αὐτοῦ.

<sup>4</sup> οἰκετίας in BILΔΣ (W.H.). θεραπείας in D al.

<sup>5</sup> δουναί in ἤ BCDILΔΣ. διδοναί is from Lk.

<sup>6</sup> οὕτως ποιοῦντα in ἤ BCDIL.

<sup>7</sup> μου before ὁ κύριος in ἤ BCDIL al.

<sup>8</sup> ἤ B 33 omit ἔλθειν.

<sup>9</sup> ἤ BCDIL add αὐτοῦ.

<sup>10</sup> ἔσθιεν δὲ καὶ πίνειν in ἤ BCDIL.

is a poor peasant who is in view. He lives in a clay house, which can be dug through (sun-dried bricks), vide διορυχθῆναι in last clause. Yet he is the master in his humble dwelling (cf. on vi. 19).—Ver. 45. τίς, who, taken by Grotius, Kuinoel, Schott, etc. = εἶ τις, si quis, supposing a case. But, as Fritzsche points out, the article before π. δούλος is inconsistent with this sense.—πιστὸς, φρόνιμος: two indispensable qualities in an upper servant, trusty and judicious.—θεραπείας (T. R.), service = body of servants, οἰκετίας (B., W.H.), household = domestics.—Ver. 46 answers the question by felicitation.—μακάριος, implying that the virtue described is rare (vide on chap. v. 3): a rare servant, who is not demoralised by delay, but keeps steadfastly doing his duty.—ἐπὶ π. τ. ὑπάρχουσι, this one among a thousand is fit to be put in charge of the whole of his master's estate.—Ver. 48. The other side of the picture—ἐὰν δὲ . . . ἐκεῖνος: not the same individual, but a man placed in the same post ("cui eadem provincia sit demandata," Schott).—χρονίζει (again in xxv. 5): the servant begins to reflect on the fact that his lord is late in coming, and is demoralised.—ἄρξηται, he (now) begins to play the tyrant (τύπτειν) and to indulge in excess (ἔσθιεν καὶ πίνειν, etc.). Long delay is necessary to produce such complete demoralisation.—Ver. 50. ἤξει: the master comes at last, and of course he will come unexpected. The delay has been so long that the unworthy servant goes on his bad way as if the master would never come at all.—Ver. 51. διχοτομήσει, he will cut him in sunder as with a saw, an actual mode of punishment in ancient times, and many commentators think that this barbarous penalty is seriously meant here. But this can hardly be, especially as in the following clause the man is supposed to be still alive. The probable meaning is: will cut him in two (so to speak) with a whip = thrash him, the base slave, unmercifully. It is a strong word, selected in sympathy with the master's rage. So Schott: "verberibus multis eam castigavit". Koetsveld, De Gelijk., p. 246, and Grimm (Thayer) but with hesitancy. Beza and Grotius interpret: will divide him from the family = dismiss him.—μετὰ τῶν ὑποκριτῶν, with the hypocrites, i.e., eye-servants, who make a great show of zeal under the master's eye, but are utterly negligent behind his back. In Lk. the corresponding phrase is τῶν ἀπίστων, the unfaithful.

XXV. 1. "ΤΟΤΕ ὁμοιωθήσεται ἡ βασιλεία τῶν οὐρανῶν δέκα<sup>a</sup> παρθένοις, αἰτινες λαβοῦσαι τὰς λαμπάδας αὐτῶν<sup>1</sup> ἐξῆλθον εἰς ἀπάντησιν<sup>2</sup> τοῦ νυμφίου.<sup>2</sup> 2. πέντε δὲ ἦσαν ἐξ αὐτῶν<sup>3</sup> φρόνιμοι,<sup>4</sup> καὶ αἱ<sup>5</sup> πέντε μωραί.<sup>4</sup> 3. αἰτινες<sup>6</sup> μωραί, λαβοῦσαι τὰς λαμπάδας ἑαυτῶν,<sup>7</sup> οὐκ ἔλαβον μεθ' ἑαυτῶν<sup>b</sup> ἔλαιον· 4. αἱ δὲ φρόνιμοι ἔλαβον ἔλαιον ἐν τοῖς ἀγγείοις αὐτῶν<sup>8</sup> μετὰ τῶν λαμπάδων αὐτῶν.<sup>8</sup> 5. χρονίζοντος δὲ τοῦ νυμφίου, ἐνύσταξαν πᾶσαι καὶ ἐκάθευδον.

anointing). Lk. xvi. 6. Rev. vi. 6; xviii. 13 (commerce). c 2 Pet. ii. 3 (Ps. lxxvi. 7).

<sup>1</sup> εαυτων in BDL (W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> υπαντησιν in ΞBC (Tisch., W.H.). After νυμφίου is added και της νυμφης in DΣ it. vul., Syr. Sin., Or., Hil. W.H. place this reading in margin, and it calls for further discussion. Vide below for Resch's view.

<sup>3</sup> ἐξ αυτων ησαν in ΞBCDLZΔΣ.

<sup>4</sup> μωραι, φρονιμοι in ΞBCDLZΣ, several cursives including 33.

<sup>5</sup> αι omitted in ΞBCDLZΣ, 33 al.

<sup>6</sup> αι γαρ for αιτινες in ΞBCLΣ 33.

<sup>7</sup> αυτων in BCDA. ΞL have neither αυτ. nor εαυτ. (Tisch.).

<sup>8</sup> First αυτων omit ΞBDLZ. For second ΞB have εαυτων.

CHAPTER XXV. THREE ESCHATOLOGICAL PARABLES. These parables (especially the first and third) are appropriately introduced by Mt. at this place, whether actually uttered in immediate connection with the Olivet discourse, or during the Passion week, or otherwise. In his reproduction of the book of Logia, Wendt gives the group of parables inculcating constant preparedness for the Parusia, including the Waiting Servants (Lk. xii. 35-38); the Thief (Mt. xxiv. 43, 44; Lk. xii. 39, 40); the Upper Servant (Mt. xxiv. 45-51; Lk. xii. 42, 48), and the Ten Virgins (Mt. xxv. 1-12; Lk. xiii. 25), a somewhat earlier place (L. J., i., pp. 118-122).

Vν. 1-13. Parable of the Ten Virgins, in Mt. only.—Ver. 1. τότε, then, connecting what follows in the evangelist's mind with the time referred to in the previous parable, i.e., with the Parusia.—δέκα παρθένοις: ten virgins, not as the usual number—as to that no information is available—but as one coming readily to the mind of a Jew, as we might in a similar case say a dozen.—αἰτινες, such as; αἱ might have been used, but the tendency in N. T. and late Greek is to prefer ὅστις to ὅς.—τὰς λαμπάδας α., their torches consisting of a wooden staff held in the hand, with a dish at the top, in which was a piece of cloth or rope dipped in oil or pitch (vide Lightfoot, Hor. Heb.). Rutherford (New Phrynicus, p. 131) says that λαμπάδας is here used in the sense of oil lamps, and that in the common dialect λαμπάς became equivalent to λύχνος.—εἰς ὑπ(ἀπ-)άντησιν: vide at viii. 34.—τοῦ νυμφίου: the bridegroom, who is conceived of as coming with his party to the house of the bride, where the marriage feast is to take place, contrary to the usual though possibly not the invariable custom (Judges xiv. 10). The parable at this point seems to be adapted to the spiritual situation—the Son of Man coming again. Resch thinks καὶ τῆς νύμφης a true part of the original parable, without which it cannot be understood (Aussercanonische Paralleltexte zu Mt. und Mk., p. 300).—Ver. 2. πέντε μωραί, πέντε φρόνιμοι: equal numbers of both, not intended to represent the proportion in the spiritual sphere; foolish, wise, not bad and good, but imprudent and prudent, thoughtless and thoughtful. Even the "foolish" might be very attractive, lovable girls; perhaps might have been the favourites at the feast: for wisdom is apt to be cold; foolish first named in best MSS., and properly, for they play the chief rôle in the story, and are first characterised in the sequel.—Ver. 3. ἔλαιον: the statement about the foolish, indicating the nature or proof of their folly, is that they took their lamps but did not take oil. None? or only not a supply sufficient for an emergency—possible delay? Goebel (Die Parabeln Jesu) decides for d here only 6. μέσης δὲ νυκτὸς κραυγὴ γέγονεν, ἰδοῦ, ὁ νυμφίος ἔρχεται,<sup>1</sup> in sense of trim. ἐξέρχεσθε εἰς ἀπάντησιν αὐτοῦ.<sup>2</sup> 7. Τότε ἠγέρθησαν πᾶσαι αἱ

 c Ch. iii. 9; παρθένοι ἐκεῖναι, καὶ ἔκόσμησαν τὰς λαμπάδας αὐτῶν.<sup>3</sup> 8. αἱ δὲ
 xvi. 8; μωραὶ ταῖς φρονίμοις εἶπον, Δότε ἡμῖν ἐκ τοῦ ἔλαιου ὑμῶν, ὅτι αἱ
 Rom. viii. xxiii. 31. λαμπάδες ἡμῶν σβέννυνται. 9. Ἀπεκρίθησαν δὲ αἱ φρόνιμοι, 23. 1 Cor. xi. 31 (all instances of the reflex. pron. used in ref. to 1st and 2nd pers.). λέγουσαι, Μήποτε οὐκ ἄρκεσθι ἡμῖν καὶ ὑμῖν· πορεύεσθε δὲ<sup>4</sup> μᾶλλον πρὸς τοὺς πωλοῦντας, καὶ ἀγοράσατε ἑαυταῖς. 10. ἀπερ-

<sup>1</sup> ἔρχεται omit ΞBCDLZ (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> Οmit αὐτου ΞB (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> εαυτων in ΞABLZΣ.

<sup>4</sup> ου μη in BCDXΔΣ (W.H.), ουκ in ΞALZ (Tisch., W.H., in margin).

<sup>5</sup> The best authorities omit δε.

the former view. His idea of the whole situation is this: the virgins meet at the bride's house, there wait the announcement of the bridegroom's approach, then for the first time proceed to light their lamps, whereupon the foolish find that there is nothing in the dish except a dry wick, which goes out shortly after being lighted. In favour of this view he adduces the consideration that the other alternative makes the wise too wise, providing for a rare occurrence. Perhaps, but on the other hand Goebel's view makes the foolish too foolish, and also irrelevantly foolish, for in the case supposed they would have been at fault even if the bridegroom had not tarried. But the very point of the parable is to illustrate the effect of delay. On the various ways of conceiving the situation, vide The Parabolic Teaching of Christ.—Ver. 4. ἐν τοῖς ἀγγείοις: the wise took oil in the vessels, i.e., in vessels, with an extra supply, distinct from the cups at the top of the torches containing oil.—Ver. 5. χρονίζοντος τ. ν.: no reason given for delay, a possibility in natural life, the point on which the spiritual lesson, "be ready," hinges.—ἐνύστασαν, they nodded, aorist, because a transient state; ἐκάθευδον, and remained for some time in slumber, imperfect, because the state continuous. Carr (Camb. N. T.) cites Plato, Apol. Socr., as illustrating the discriminating use of the two verbs in reference to the two stages of sleep.—πᾶσαι, all, sleep in the circumstances perfectly natural and, everything being ready, perfectly harmless.—Ver. 6. ἰδοῦ ὁ νυμφίος: at length at midnight a cry is raised by some one not asleep—lo! the bridegroom; laconic, rousing, heard by all sleepers.—ἐξέρχεσθε εἰς ἀπάντησιν, go forth to meeting: no words that can be dispensed with here either. Go forth whence? from the bride's house (Goebel); from some inn, or private dwelling on the way, whither they have turned in on finding that the bridegroom tarried (Bleek, Meyer, Weiss). On this point Goebel's view is to be preferred.—Ver. 7. ἐκόσμησαν, trimmed, or proceeded to trim, for which the imperfect would have been more suitable. In the case of the five foolish it was an action attempted rather than performed, begun rather than completed.—Ver. 8. σβέννυνται, are going out, as in R.V.—Ver. 9. μήποτε, lest, implying, and giving a reason for, an unexpressed declinature. Kypke renders, perhaps, fortasse, citing examples from classics, also Loesner, giving examples from Philo. Elsner suggests that ὄρατε or βλέπετε is understood before μήποτε. Schott, putting a comma after ὑμῖν, and omitting δὲ after πορεύεσθε, translates thus: lest perchance there be not enough for us and you, go rather to them that sell, etc. ("ne forte oleum neque nobis neque vobis sufficit, abite potius," etc.).—πορεύεσθε, etc.: this seems a cold, ungenerous suggestion on the part of the wise, and apparently untrue to what was likely to occur among girls at such a time. Could the oil really be got at such a time of night? and, supposing it could, would going not throw them out of the festivities? Augustine says: "non consulentium sed irradientium est ista responsio" (Serm. xc., iii., 8). More humanely, in the modern spirit, Koetsveld suggests that the marriage procession to music and song was very slow, and that there was a fair chance of overtaking it after the purchase (De Gelijk., p. 220). Let us hope so; but I fear we must fall back on the fact that "sudden emergencies bring χομένων δὲ αὐτῶν ἀγοράσαι, ἦλθεν ὁ νυμφίος· καὶ αἱ ἑτοιμοὶ εἰσηλθόν μετ' αὐτοῦ εἰς τοὺς γάμους, καὶ ἐκλείσθη ἡ θύρα. 11. Ὑστερον δὲ ἔρχονται καὶ αἱ λοιπαὶ παρθένοι, λέγουσαι, Κύριε, κύριε, ἄνοιξον ἡμῖν. 12. Ὁ δὲ ἀποκριθεὶς εἶπεν, Ἄμην λέγω ὑμῖν, οὐκ οἶδα ὑμᾶς. 13. Γρηγορεῖτε οὖν, ὅτι οὐκ οἶδατε τὴν ἡμέραν οὐδὲ τὴν ὥραν, ἐν ἣ ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἔρχεται.<sup>1</sup>

14. "Ὅσπερ γὰρ ἄνθρωπος ἠποδημῶν ἐκάλεσε τοὺς ἰδίους δούλους, καὶ παρέδωκεν αὐτοῖς τὰ ὑπάρχοντα αὐτοῦ· 15. καὶ ᾧ μὲν ἔδωκε πέντε τάλαντα, ᾧ δὲ δύο, ᾧ δὲ ἓν, ἐκάστῳ ἑκατὰ τὴν ἰδίαν

<sup>f</sup> Ch. xxi. 33.
Mk. xii. 1.
Lk. xv. 13;
xx. 9.
<sup>g</sup> 2 Cor. viii. 3.

<sup>1</sup> The words ἐν ἣ ο υἱος τ. α. ερ. are omitted in  $\aleph$  ABCDLXΔΣ 33 al. plur., and by modern editors.

into play a certain element of selfishness," and take the advice of the wise as simply a refusal to be burdened with their neighbours' affairs.

Ver. 10. ἀπερχομένων, etc. The foolish took the advice and went to buy, and in so doing acted in character; foolish in that as in not having a good supply of oil. They should have gone on without oil, the great matter being to be in time. By reckoning this as a point in their folly we bring the foolish virgins into analogy with the foolish builder in chap. vii. 26. Vide notes there, and also The Parabolic Teaching of Christ, p. 505 f. Of course, on this view the oil has no significance in the spiritual sphere. It plays a great part in the history of interpretation. For Chrys. and Euthy., the lamp = virginity, and the oil = pity, and the moral is: continence without charity worthless; a good lesson. "Nothing," says the former, "is blinder than virginity without pity; thus the people are used to call the merciless dark (σκοτεινούς)," Hom. lxxviii.—ἐκλείσθη ἡ θύρα, the door was shut, because all the guests were supposed to be within; no hint given by the wise virgins that more were coming. This improbable in the natural sphere.—Ver. 11. κύριε, κύριε, etc., master, master, open to us; a last, urgent, desperate appeal, knocking having preceded (Lk. xiii. 25) without result. The fear that they are not going to be admitted has seized their hearts.—Ver. 12. οὐκ οἶδα ὑμᾶς, I do not know you; in the natural sphere not a judicial penalty for arriving too late, but an inference from the late arrival that those without cannot belong to the bridal party. The solemn tone, however (ἀμην λ. ὅ.), shows that the spiritual here invades the natural. Pricæus refers to Lk. xi. 7 as helping to understand the temper of the speech from within = do not trouble me, the door is shut.—Ver. 13. The moral, γρηγορεῖτε, watch; not directed against sleep (ver. 5) but against lack of forethought. The reference of the parable to the Parusia, according to Weiss (Meyer), is imposed upon it by the evangelist.

Vv. 14-30. Parable of the Talents (cf. Lk. xix. 11-28), according to Weiss (Mt.-Ev., 535) and Wendt (L. J., i., 145) not a Parusia-parable originally, but spoken at some other time, and inculcating, like the parable of the unjust steward, skill and fidelity in the use of earthly goods.—Ver. 14. Ὅσπερ: suggests a comparison between the parabolic history and the course of things in the kingdom, but the apodosis carrying out the comparison is omitted.—γὰρ implies that the point of comparison is in the view of the evangelist the same as in the preceding parable.—ἀποδημῶν, about to go abroad.—ἐκάλεσε, etc., called his own servants and delivered to them his means; not an unnatural or unusual proceeding introduced against probability for the sake of the moral lesson; rather the best thing he could do with his money in his absence, dividing it among carefully selected slaves, and leaving them to do their best with it. Investments could not then be made as now (vide Koetsveld, p. 254).—Ver. 15. πέντε, δύο, ἓν: the number of talents given in each case corresponded to the master's judgment of the capacity (δύναμιν) of each man. All were supposed to be trustworthy and more or less capable. Even one talent represented a considerable sum, especially for that period when a denarius was a day's wage.—καὶ ἀπεδήμησεν, and then he went away. So ends the account of the master's action.—εὐθὺς should be connected with πορευθεὶς, whereby it gains

ἔδυναμι· καὶ ἀπεδήμησεν εὐθέως. 16. πορευθεὶς δὲ<sup>1</sup> ὁ τὰ πέντε τάλαντα λαβὼν εἰργάσατο<sup>2</sup> ἐν αὐτοῖς, καὶ ἐποίησεν<sup>3</sup> ἄλλα πέντε τάλαντα.<sup>4</sup> 17. ὡσαύτως καὶ<sup>5</sup> ὁ τὰ δύο ἐκέρδησε καὶ αὐτὸς<sup>6</sup> ἄλλα δύο. 18. ὁ δὲ τὸ ἐν λαβὼν ἀπελθὼν ὤρυξεν ἐν τῇ γῆ,<sup>7</sup> καὶ ἀπέκρυψε<sup>8</sup> τὸ ἀργύριον τοῦ κυρίου αὐτοῦ. 19. Μετὰ δὲ χρόνον πολὺν<sup>9</sup> ἔρχεται ὁ κύριος τῶν δούλων ἐκείνων, καὶ συναίρει μετ' αὐτῶν λόγον.<sup>10</sup> 20. καὶ προσελθὼν ὁ τὰ πέντε τάλαντα λαβὼν προσήνεγκεν ἄλλα πέντε τάλαντα, λέγων, Κύριε, πέντε τάλαντά μοι παρέδωκας· ἴδε, ἄλλα πέντε τάλαντα ἐκέρδησα ἐπ' αὐτοῖς.<sup>11</sup> 21. Ἐφη δὲ<sup>12</sup> αὐτῷ

<sup>1</sup> ἔδυναμι omit δε, the insertion of which is due to the εὐθέως being taken as belonging to ἀπεδήμησεν. It should be taken with πορευθεὶς (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> εἰργάσατο in ἔδυναμι.

<sup>3</sup> ἐκέρδησεν in BCDLΣ (W.H.). ἔδυναμι has ἐποίησεν (Tisch.).

<sup>4</sup> BL omit this second τάλαντα (W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> καὶ omitted in ἔδυναμι (Tisch., W.H., in text, insert in margin).

<sup>6</sup> καὶ αὐτὸς omit ἔδυναμι.

<sup>7</sup> γῆν in ἔδυναμι (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>8</sup> ἐκρυψε in ἔδυναμι 33.

<sup>9</sup> πολὺν χρόνον in ἔδυναμι.

<sup>10</sup> λόγον before μετ' αὐτῶν in ἔδυναμι. <sup>11</sup> ἐπ' αὐτοῖς omit ἔδυναμι.

<sup>12</sup> δε omitted in ἔδυναμι, also in ver. 22 after προσελθὼν in ἔδυναμι.

significance as indicating the temper of the servant. He lost no time in setting about plans for trading, with the talents entrusted to him (so Fritzsche, Weiss, Schanz, and Holtz., H. C.).—Ver. 16. εἰργάσατο ἐν αὐτοῖς, traded in or with them, used in classics also in this sense but without any preposition before the dative of the material.—ἄλλα πέντε, other five, which speaks to a considerable period in the ordinary course of trade.—Ver. 17. ὡσαύτως, in like manner; that absolutely the same proportion between capital and gain should be maintained in the two cases was not likely but possible, and the supposition is convenient for the application.—Ver. 18. ὤρυξεν γῆν, dug up the earth, and hid the silver of his master. Not dishonest—the master had not misjudged as to that—but indolent, unenterprising, timid. What he did was often done for safety. The master might have done it himself, but he wanted increase as well as safety. In Lk.'s parable the same type of man buries his pound in a narikin. A talent was too large to be put up that way.

Vv. 19-23.—Ver. 19. πολὺν χρόνον, the master returns after a long time, an important expression in a parable relating to the Parusia, as implying long delay.—συναίρει λόγον, maketh a reckoning, as in xviii. 23.—Ver. 20. The first servant gives his report:

bringing five and five, he presents them to his master, and says: ἴδε, as if inviting him to satisfy himself by counting.—Ver. 21. εὖ, well done! excellent! = εὖγε in classics, which is the approved reading in Lk. xix. 17. Meyer takes it as an adverb, qualifying πιστός, but standing in so emphatic a position at the head of the sentence and so far from the word it is supposed to qualify it inevitably has the force of an interjection—ἀγαθὲ καὶ πιστέ, devoted and faithful: two prime virtues in the circumstances. On the sense of ἀγαθός, vide xx. 15.—ἐπὶ π. σε καταστήσω, I will set thee over many things. The master means to make extensive use of the talents and energy of one who had shown himself so enthusiastic and trustworthy in a limited sphere.—εἰσελθε ε. τ. χαρὰν τ. κ. σ. This clause seems to be epexegetical of the previous one, or to express the same idea under a different form. χαρά has often been taken as referring to a feast given on the occasion of the master's return (so De Wette, Trench, etc.). Others (Reuss, Meyer, Weiss, Speaker's Com.) take it more generally as denoting the master's state of joy. Thus viewed, the word takes us into the spiritual sphere, the joy of the Lord having nothing in common with the affairs of the bank (Reuss, Hist. Ev.). Weiss thinks this second description of the reward proὁ κύριος αὐτοῦ, ἡ Εὐ, δοῦλε ἀγαθὲ καὶ πιστέ, ἐπὶ ὀλίγα ἤς πιστός, ἡ here and in ver. 23 only. ἐπὶ πολλῶν σε καταστήσω· εἰσελθε εἰς τὴν χαρὰν τοῦ κυρίου σου. i here only of a man. 22. Προσελθὼν δὲ καὶ ὁ τὰ δύο τάλαντα λαβὼν<sup>1</sup> εἶπε, Κύριε, δύο John vi. 60 (of a τάλαντα μοι παρέδωκας· ἴδε, ἄλλα δύο τάλαντα ἐκέρδησα ἐπ' αὐτοῖς.<sup>1</sup> word). Jas. 23. Ἐφη αὐτῷ ὁ κύριος αὐτοῦ, Εὐ. δοῦλε ἀγαθὲ καὶ πιστέ, ἐπὶ ὀλίγα 60 (of a ἤς πιστός, ἐπὶ πολλῶν σε καταστήσω· εἰσελθε εἰς τὴν χαρὰν τοῦ j word) of the wind). κυρίου σου. 24. Προσελθὼν δὲ καὶ ὁ τὸ ἓν τάλαντον εἰληφώς εἶπε, Ch. xxvi. 31. Mk. Κύριε, ἔγνω σε ὅτι ἰ σκληρὸς εἶ ἄνθρωπος, θερίζων ὅπου οὐκ ἔσπειρας, xiv. 27 (of a flock). καὶ συνάγων ὄθεν οὐ<sup>1</sup> διεσκορπίσας· 25. καὶ φοβηθεῖς, ἀπελθὼν Lk. xv. 13; xvi. 7 (of ἔκρυψα τὸ τάλαντόν σου ἐν τῇ γῆ· ἴδε, ἔχεις τὸ σόν. 26. Ἀπο- k here and in Rom. κριθεῖς δὲ ὁ κύριος αὐτοῦ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, Πονηρὲ δοῦλε καὶ ἄοκνηρέ, xii. 11. ἡ here only. ἥδεις ὅτι θερίζω ὅπου οὐκ ἔσπειρα, καὶ συνάγω, ὄθεν οὐ διεσκορπίσα. l Heb. xi. 19 (in same sense). 27. Ἐδει οὖν σε<sup>2</sup> βαλεῖν τὸ ἀργύριον<sup>3</sup> μου τοῖς ἰτραπεζίταις· καὶ Lk. xix. 23. ἐλθὼν ἐγὼ ἔκομισάμην ἂν τὸ ἕμὸν σὺν ἰτόκῳ. 28. ἄρατε οὖν ἀπ' ἰ ceeds from the evangelist interpreting the parable allegorically of Messiah's return. But we escape this inference if we take the phrase "the joy of thy lord" as = the joy of lordship (herilis gaudii, Grotius, and Elsner after him). The faithful slave is to be rewarded by admission to fellowship in possession, partnership. Cf. μέτοχοι τοῦ χριστοῦ in Heb. iii. 14 = sharers ("fellows") with Christ, not merely "partakers of Christ". —Ver. 23. Praise and recompense awarded to the second servant in identical terms: reward the same in recognition of equal devotion and fidelity with unequal ability a just law of the Kingdom of God, the second law bearing on "Work and Wages" there. For the first, vide on xx. 1-16. Euthymius remarks ἴση ἡ τιμὴ διότι καὶ ἴση ἡ σπουδή.

<sup>1</sup> ABCLΔΣ omit λαβων. ΞD have it. Probably a gloss, as is also επ αυτοις (wanting in ΞBDL) at the end of ver. 22.

<sup>2</sup> σε ουν in ΞBCL 33.

<sup>3</sup> τα αργυρια in ΞB.

Vv. 24-30.—Ver. 24. εἰληφώς, the perfect participle, instead of λαβὼν in ver. 20, because the one fact as to him is that he is the man who has received a talent of which he has made no use. (So Weiss in Meyer.)—ἔγνω σε ὅτι, for ἔγνω ὅτι συ, by attraction.—σκληρὸς, "hard": grasping, ungenerous, taking all to himself, offering no inducements to his servants, as explained in the proverbial expressions following: θερίζων, etc., reaping where you do not sow, and gathering where (ὄθεν instead of ὅπου, a word signifying de loco, instead of a word signifying in loco; vide Kypke for other examples) you did not scatter with the fan = appropriating everything produced on his land by the labour of his servants, without giving them any share —no inducement to work for such a curmudgeon of a master: all toil, no pay. Compare this with the real character as revealed in: "Enter thou into the joy of lordship".—Ver. 25. φοβηθεῖς, etc., fearing: loss of the talent by trade; he thought the one thing to make sure of, in the case of such a master, was that what he had got might be safe.—ἐν τῇ γῆ: the primitive bank of security. Vide xiii. 44.—ἴδε ἔχεις τὸ σόν, see you have what belongs to you; no idea that the master was entitled not only to the talent, but to what it might earn.—Ver. 26. πονηρὲ (vide on vi. 23), "wicked" is too general a meaning: mean-spirited or grudging would suit the connection better.—πνηρὸς is the fitting reply to σκληρὸς, and the opposite of ἀγαθὸς. You call me hard, I call you a churl: with no heart for your work, unlike your fellow-servant who put his whole heart into his work.—ἀοκνηρέ, slothful; a poor creature altogether: suspicious, timid, heartless, spiritless, idle.—ἥδεις, etc.: a question, neither making an admission nor expressing surprise or anger, but leading up to a charge of inconsistency = If that was your idea of me, why then, etc.—Ver. 27. ἔδει, etc., you ought in that case to have cast my silver to the money-changers, or bankers. That could have been done without αὐτοῦ τὸ τάλαντον, καὶ δότε τῷ ἔχοντι τὰ δέκα τάλαντα. 29. Τῷ γὰρ ἔχοντι παντὶ δοθήσεται, καὶ περισσευθήσεται· ἀπὸ δὲ τοῦ<sup>1</sup> μὴ ἔχοντος, καὶ ὃ ἔχει, ἀρθήσεται ἀπ' αὐτοῦ. 30. Καὶ τὸν ὀ ἀχρεῖον δοῦλον ἐκβάλλετε<sup>2</sup> εἰς τὸ σκότος τὸ ἐξώτερον. ἐκεῖ ἔσται ὁ κλαυθμὸς καὶ ὁ βρυγγμὸς τῶν ὀδόντων.

31. "Ὅταν δὲ ἔλθῃ ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἐν τῇ δόξῃ αὐτοῦ, καὶ πάντες οἱ ἅγιοι<sup>3</sup> ἄγγελοι μετ' αὐτοῦ, 32. τότε καθίσει ἐπὶ θρόνον δόξης αὐτοῦ, καὶ συναχθήσεται<sup>4</sup> ἔμπροσθεν αὐτοῦ πάντα τὰ ἔθνη, καὶ ἀφοριεῖ<sup>5</sup> αὐτοὺς ἀπ' ἀλλήλων, ὡσπερ ὁ ποιμὴν ἀφορίζει τὰ

<sup>1</sup> For απο δε του ἸBDL have του δε (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> εκβαλετε in ἸABCLXΔΣ.

<sup>3</sup> ἸBDL omit ἅγιοι.

<sup>4</sup> συναχθησονται in ἸBDLΣ. The singular is a grammatical correction.

<sup>5</sup> ἀφορισει in ἸΛΔ (Tisch., W.H.). BD have ἀφοριει as in T. R. (Weiss).

trouble or risk, and with profit to the master.—ἐγὼ, apparently intended to be emphatic, suggesting a distribution of offices between servant and master= yours to put it into the bank, mine to take it out. So Field (Oitium Nor.), who, following a hint of Chrys., translates: "And I should have gone (ἐλθὼν) to the bank and received back mine own (or demanded it) with interest".—σὺν τόκῳ, literally, with offspring: a figurative name for interest on money.—Ver. 28. ἄρατε, etc., take the one talent from the man who made no use of it, and give it to the man who will make most use of it.—Ver. 29. General principle on which the direction rests pointing to a law of life, hard but inexorable.—Ver. 30. ὀχρεῖον, useless. Palairt renders injuriousum; Kypke, improbum. Being useless, he was both injurious and unjust. The useless man does wrong all round, and there is no place for him either in this world or in the Kingdom of God. His place is in the outer darkness.

Difference of opinion prevails as to whether this parable refers to the use of material goods for the Kingdom of God, or to the use of spiritual gifts. It is not, perhaps, possible to decide in ignorance of the historical occasion of the parable, nor is it necessary, as the same law applies.

Vv. 31-46. The Judgment programme.—Much diversity of opinion has prevailed in reference to this remarkable passage; as to the subjects of the judgment, and the authenticity of this judgment programme as a professed logion of Jesus. Are the judged all mankind, Christian and non-Christian, or Christians only, or non-Christian peoples, including unbelieving Jews, or the Jewish people excluded? Even as early as Origen it was felt that there was room for doubt on such points. He says (Comm. in Ev. M.): "Utrum segregabuntur gentes omnes ab omnibus qui in omnibus generationibus fuerint, an illae tantum quae in consummatione fuerint derelictae, aut illae tantum quae crediderunt in Deum per Christum, et ipsae utrum omnes, an non omnes, non satis est manifestum. Tamen quibusdam videtur de differentiâ eorum, quae crediderunt haec esse dicta." Recent opinion inclines to the view that the programme refers to heathen people only, and sets forth the principle on which they shall be judged. As to the authenticity of the logion critics hold widely discrepant views. Some regard it as a composition of the evangelists. So Pfeiderer, e.g., who sees in it simply the literary expression of a genial humane way of regarding the heathen on the part of the evangelist, an unknown Christian author of the second century, who had charity enough to accept Christlike love on the part of the heathen as an equivalent for Christian faith (Urchristenthum, p. 532). Holtzmann, H. C., also sees in it a second-hand composition, based on 4 Esdras vii. 33-35, Apoc. Bar. lxxxiii. 12. Weiss, on the other hand, recognises as basis an authentic logion of Jesus, setting forth love as the test of true discipleship, which has been worked over by the evangelist and altered into a judgment programme for heathendom. Wendt (L. Z., p. 186) thinks that the logion in its original form was such a programme. This seems to be the most probable opinion.

πρόβατα ἀπὸ τῶν ἑρίφων. 33. καὶ στήσει τὰ μὲν πρόβατα ἐκ δεξιῶν <sup>p</sup> αὐτοῦ, τὰ δὲ ἐρίφια ἐξ εὐωνύμων. Lk. xv. 29.
Lk. xi. 50.
John xvii.
21. Heb.
iv. 3; ix.
26 al.
Ch. xxvii.
7. Acts
xvii. 21.
Eph. ii. 19.
Heb. xi. 13.
here and
in vv. 38, 43 (Deut.
xvii. 2.
Josh. ii. 18.
Judges
xix. 18).
Lk. i. 68,
78; vii. 16.
Acts vii.
23. Jas. i.
27.

34. "Τότε ἐρεῖ ὁ βασιλεὺς τοῖς ἐκ δεξιῶν αὐτοῦ, Δεῦτε, οἱ εὐλογημένοι τοῦ πατρὸς μου, κληρονομήσατε τὴν ἡτοιμασμένην ὑμῖν βασιλείαν ἀπὸ καταβολῆς κόσμου. 35. ἐπέινασα γάρ, καὶ ἐδώκατέ μοι φαγεῖν· ἐδίψησα, καὶ ἐποτίσατέ με· ἕξενος ἤμην, καὶ σιτηγάγετέ με· 36. γυμνός, καὶ περιεβάλατέ με· ἡσθένησα, καὶ ἐπισκέψασθέ με· ἐν φυλακῇ ἤμην, καὶ ἤλθετε πρὸς με. 37. Τότε ἀποκριθήσονται αὐτῷ οἱ δίκαιοι, λέγοντες, Κύριε, πότε σὲ εἶδομεν πεινῶντα, καὶ ἐθρέψαμεν; ἢ διψῶντα, καὶ ἐποτίσαμεν· 38. πότε δέ σὲ εἶδομεν ξένον, καὶ συνηγάγομεν; ἢ γυμνόν, καὶ περιεβάλομεν;

Ver. 31. ὅταν δὲ, the description following recalls xxiv. 30, to which the ὅταν seems to refer.—Ver. 32. πάντα τὰ ἔθνη naturally suggests the heathen peoples as distinct from Jews, though the latter may be included, notwithstanding the fact that in one respect their judgment day had already come (xxiv. 15-22).—ἀφοριεῖ: first a process of separation as in the interpretation of the parable of the tares (xiii. 40).—τὰ πρόβατα ἀπὸ τῶν ἐρίφων, the sheep from the young goats. Sheep and goats, though feeding together under the care of the same shepherd, seem of their own accord to separate into two companies. Tristram and Furrer bear witness to this.—Ver. 33. καὶ στήσει, etc., the bare placing of the parties already judges, the good on the right, the evil on the left; sheep, emblems of the former; goats, of the latter. Why? No profit from goats, much from sheep; from their wool, milk, lambs, says Chrys., Hom. lxxix. Lust and evil odour secure for the goat its unenviable emblematic significance, say others: "id animal et libidinosum et olidum" (Grotius). Lange suggests stubbornness as the sinister quality. More important is the point made by Weiss that the very fact that a separation is necessary implies that all were one flock, i.e., that the judged in the view of Jesus are all professing Christians, disciples true or false.

Vv. 34-40. οἱ εὐλογημένοι τοῦ πατρὸς μου, my Father's blessed ones, the participle being in effect a substantive.—κληρονομήσατε, etc.: this clause Weiss regards as a proof that the parable originally referred to disciples, as for them only could the kingdom be said to be prepared from the foundation of the world. Wendt, holding the original reference to have been to the heathen, brackets the words from οἱ εὐλογ. τοῦ κόσμου as of doubtful authenticity.—Ver. 35. ἐπέινασα, ἐδίψησα, ξένος ἤμην: hungry, thirsty, a stranger. The claims created by these situations are universally recognised though often neglected; to respond to them is a duty of "common humanity".—συνηγάγετέ με, ye received me (into your house) (cf. Judges xix. 18.—οὐκ ἔστιν ἀνὴρ συνάγων με εἰς οἶκίαν) Meyer, Weiss, and others, with stricter adherence to the literal meaning of the word, render: ye gathered me into the bosom of your family; Fritzsche: ye admitted me to your table ("simul convivio adhibuistis").—Ver. 36. γυμνός, ἡσθένησα, ἐν φυλακῇ: deeper degrees of misery demanding higher degrees of charity; naked = ill clad, relief more costly than in case of hunger or thirst; sick, calling for sympathy prompting to visits of succour or consolation; in prison, a situation at once discreditable and repulsive, demanding the highest measure of love in one who visits the prisoner, the temptation being strong to be ashamed of one viewed as a criminal, and to shrink from his cell, too often dark and loathsome.—ἐπισκέψασθέ με, this verb is often used in the O. T. and N. T. in the sense of gracious visitation on the part of God (for ἤρξατο in Sept.)

(vide Lk. i. 78, and the noun ἐπισκοπή in Lk. xix. 44).—Ver. 37. κύριε: supposed necessarily spoken by disciples not to know or believe in Jesus (Weiss). The title fits the judicial dignity of the person addressed by whomsoever used. In disclaiming the praise accorded, those who call the Judge κύριος virtually deny personal acquaintance with Him.—Ver. 40. ἐφ' ὅσον, in so far as = καθ' ὅσον

39. πότε δέ σε εἶδομεν ἀσθενῆ,<sup>1</sup> ἢ ἐν φυλακῇ, καὶ ἤλθομεν πρὸς σε ;
40. Καὶ ἀποκριθεὶς ὁ βασιλεὺς ἐρεῖ αὐτοῖς, Ἄμην λέγω ὑμῖν, ἐφ' ὅσον ἐποιήσατε ἐνὶ τούτων τῶν ἀδελφῶν μου<sup>2</sup> τῶν ἐλαχίστων, ἐμοὶ ἐποιήσατε.

41. "Τότε ἐρεῖ καὶ τοῖς ἐξ εὐωνύμων, Πορεύεσθε ἀπ' ἐμοῦ, οἱ<sup>3</sup>

<sup>3</sup> Mk. xi. 21. "κατηραμένοι, εἰς τὸ πῦρ τὸ αἰώνιον, τὸ ἤτοιμασμένον τῷ διαβύλῳ
Lk. vi. 28.
Rom. xii.
74. Jas.
iii. 9.

καὶ τοῖς ἀγγέλοις αὐτοῦ. 42. ἐπέειπασα γάρ, καὶ οὐκ ἐδώκατέ μοι φαγεῖν· ἐδίψησα, καὶ οὐκ ἐποτίσατέ με· 43. ξένος ἦμην, καὶ οὐ συνηγάγετέ με· γυμνός, καὶ οὐ περιεβάλετέ με· ἀσθενής, καὶ ἐν φυλακῇ, καὶ οὐκ ἐπεσκέψασθέ με. 44. Τότε ἀποκριθήσονται αὐτῷ<sup>4</sup> καὶ αὐτοί, λέγοντες, Κύριε, πότε σέ εἶδομεν πεινῶντα, ἢ διψῶντα, ἢ

<sup>v</sup> here and in 1 John
iv. 18 in
N. T.
(Ezek. xiv.
3. Wisdom xi. 14;
xvi. 24 al.
in Sept.).
ζῶν ἀσθενῆ, ἢ ἐν φυλακῇ, καὶ οὐ διηκονήσαμέν σοι ;
45. Τότε ἀποκριθήσεται αὐτοῖς, λέγων, Ἄμην λέγω ὑμῖν, ἐφ' ὅσον ἐποιήσατε ἐνὶ τούτων τῶν ἐλαχίστων, οὐδὲ ἐμοὶ ἐποιήσατε.
46. Καὶ ἔ-λευσονται οὗτοι εἰς ἑκόλασιν αἰώνιον· οἱ δὲ δίκαιοι εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον."

<sup>1</sup> BD have ασθενοντα (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> B omits των αδελφων μου, probably an error of similar ending.

<sup>3</sup> NBL 33 omit οι, a significant omission. Vide below.

<sup>4</sup> αυτω has only minus. to support it.

(Heb. vii. 20), used of time in Mt. ix. 15.—ἐνὶ . . . ἐλαχίστων, the Judge's brethren spoken of as a body apart, not subjects, but rather instruments, of judgment. This makes for the non-Christian position of the judged. The brethren are the Christian poor and needy and suffering, in the first place, but ultimately and inferentially any suffering people anywhere. Christian sufferers represent Christ, and human sufferers represent Christians.—τῶν ἐλαχίστων seems to be in apposition with ἀδελφῶν, suggesting the idea that the brethren of the Son of Man are the insignificant of mankind, those likely to be overlooked, despised, neglected (cf. x. 42, xviii. 5).

Vv. 41-46. κατηραμένοι, cursed, not the cursed (οἱ wanting), and without τοῦ πατρὸς μου. God has no cursed ones.—εἰς τὸ πῦρ, etc., the eternal fire is represented as prepared not for the condemned men, but for the devil and his angels. Wendt brackets the clause κατηραμένοι . . . ἀγγέλοις αὐτοῦ to suggest that as Jesus spoke it the passage ran: go away from me, for I was hungry, etc.—Vv. 42, 43, simply negative all the statements contained in vv. 35, 36.—Ver. 44 repeats in summary form the reply of the δίκαιοι, mutatis mutandis, rapidly enumerating the states of need, and disclaiming, with reference to all, neglect of service, οὐ διηκονήσαμέν σοι; ver. 45 repeats ver. 40 with the omission of τῶν ἀδελφῶν μου and the addition of οὐκ before ἐποιήσατε.—Ver. 46. κόλασιν, here and in 1 John iv. 18 (ὁ φόβος κόλασιν ἔχει), from κολάζω = mutilation or pruning, hence suggestive of corrective rather than of vindictive punishment as its tropical meaning. The use of this term in this place is one of the exegetical grounds rested on by those who advocate the "larger hope". Another is the strict meaning of αἰώνιος: agelong, not everlasting. From the combination results the phrase: agelong, pruning, or discipline, leaving room for the hope of ultimate salvation. But the doctrine of the future states must ultimately rest on deeper considerations than those supplied by verbal interpretation. Weiss (Mt.-Evang.) and Wendt (L. 5.) regard ver. 46 as an interpolation by the evangelist.

The doctrine of this passage is that love is the essence of true religion and the ultimate test of character for all men Christian or non-Christian. All who truly love are implicit Christians. For such everywhere the kingdom is prepared. They are its true citizens and God is their Father. In calling those vv. 58, 69.

XXVI. 1. ΚΑΙ ἐγένετο ὅτε ἐτέλεσεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς πάντας τοὺς λόγους τούτους, εἶπε τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ, 2. "Ὅρατε ὅτι μετὰ δύο ἡμέρας τὸ πάσχα γίνεται, καὶ ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου παραδίδοται εἰς τὸ σταυρωθῆναι." 3. Τότε συνήχθησαν οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ γραμματεῖς<sup>1</sup> καὶ οἱ πρεσβύτεροι τοῦ λαοῦ εἰς τὴν αὐλὴν τοῦ ἀρχιερέως τοῦ λεγομένου Καϊάφα, 4. καὶ συμβουλευσάντο ἵνα τὸν Ἰησοῦν κρατή-

Mk. xiv.
54, 66; xv.
16. Lk.
xi. 21;
xxii. 55.
John xviii.
15. Vide
below.

<sup>1</sup> καὶ οἱ γραμματεῖς omitted in  $\Sigma$ ABDL (Tisch., W.H., Ws.).

who love the Father's blessed ones Jesus made an important contribution to the doctrine of the Fatherhood, defining by discriminating use the title "Father".

CHAPTERS XXVI.-XXVII. THE PASSION HISTORY. These chapters give with exceptional fulness and minuteness of detail the story of Christ's last sufferings and relative incidents. The story finds a place in all four Gospels (Mk. xiv., xv.; Lk. xxii., xxiii.; John xviii., xix.), showing the intense interest felt by Christians of the apostolic age in all that related to the Passion of their Lord. Of the three strata of evangelic tradition relating respectively to what Jesus taught, what He did, and what He suffered, the last-named probably came first in origin. Men could wait for the words and deeds, but not for the awful tale of suffering. Even Holtzmann, who puts the teaching first, recognises the Passion drama as the nucleus of the tradition as to memorable facts and experiences. In the formation of the Passion chronicle the main facts would naturally come first; around this nucleus would gather gradually accretions of minor incidents, till by the time the written records began to be compiled the collection of memorabilia had assumed the form it bears, say, in the Gospel of Mark; the historic truth on the solemn subject, at least as far as it could be ascertained. The passionless tone of the narrative in all four Gospels is remarkable; the story is told in subdued accent, in few simple words, as if the narrator had no interest in the matter save that of the historian: ἀπαθῶς ἅπαντα διηγούνται, καὶ μόνης τῆς ἀληθείας φροντίζουσι. Euthy. Zig. ad Mt. xxvi. 67.

Chapter xxvi. and parallels contain the anointing, the betrayal, the Holy Supper, the agony, the apprehension, the trial, the denial by Peter.

Vv. 1-5. Introductory (Mk. xiv. 1, 2, Lk. xxii. 1, 2).—Vv. 1-2 contain a prediction by Jesus two days before Passover of His approaching death; vv. 3-5 a notice of a consultation by the authorities as to how they might compass His death. In the parallels the former item appears as a mere date for the latter, the prediction being eliminated.—Ver. 1. πάντας τ. λόγους τούτους, all these sayings, most naturally taken as referring to the contents of chaps. xxiv., xxv., though a backward glance at the whole of Christ's teaching is conceivable. Yet in case of such a comprehensive retrospect why refer only to words? Why not to both dicta et facta?—Ver. 2. τὸ πάσχα, used both of festival, as here, and of victim, as in ver. 17. The Passover began on the 14th of Nisan; it is referred to here for the first time in our Gospel.—παραδίδοται, present, either used to describe vividly a future event (Burton, M. T., § 15) or to associate it with the feast day as a fixture (γίνεται), "calendar day and divine decree of death fixed beyond recall" (Holtz., H. C.), or to imply that the betrayal process is already begun in the thought of the false-hearted disciple.—Ver. 3. τότε, two days before Passover.—συνήχθησαν points to a meeting of the Sanhedrim.—εἰς τὴν αὐλὴν denotes the meeting place, either the palace of the high priest in accordance with the use of αὐλή in later Greek (Weiss), or the court around which the palatial buildings were ranged (Meyer) = atrium in Vulgate, followed by Calvin. In the latter case the meeting would be informal. In any case it was at the high priest's quarters they met: whereupon Chrys. remarks: "See the inexpressible corruption of Jewish affairs. Having lawless proceedings on hand they come to the high priest seeking authority where they should encounter hindrance" (Hom. lxxix.).—Καϊάφα, Caiaphas, surname, Joseph his name, seventeen years high priest (vide Joseph. Ant., 18, 2, 2; 4, 3).—Ver. 4. ἵνα with subjunctive after a verb of effort or plan; in classic Greek oftener ὅπως with future indicative (Burton, § 205).—δύλω by,

σωσι δόλω,<sup>1</sup> καὶ ἀποκτείνωσιν. 5. ἔλεγον δέ, “Μὴ ἐν τῇ ἑορτῇ, ἵνα μὴ θόρυβος γένηται ἐν τῷ λαῷ.”

6. Τοῦ δὲ Ἰησοῦ γενομένου ἐν Βηθανίᾳ ἐν οἰκίᾳ Σίμωνος τοῦ
 1. Mk. xiv. 3. λεπροῦ, 7. προσῆλθεν αὐτῷ γυνὴ ἡ ἀλάβαστρον ἡ μύρου ἔχουσα<sup>2</sup>
 1. k. vii. 37
 (gender doubtful).
 2. Mk. xiv. 3
 (cf. const.).
 3. βαρυτίμου,<sup>3</sup> καὶ ὁ κατέχεεν ἐπὶ τὴν κεφαλὴν<sup>4</sup> αὐτοῦ ἀνακειμένου.
 4. Mk. xiv. 3
 (cf. const.).
 5. ἰδόντες δὲ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ ἠγανάκτησαν, λέγοντες, “Εἰς τί
 ἡ ἀπώλεια αὕτη; 9. ἡδύνατο<sup>6</sup> γὰρ τοῦτο τὸ μύρον<sup>7</sup> πραθῆναι

<sup>1</sup> Δολω κρατησωσι in ΣABDLΔΣ (Tisch., W.H., Ws.). T. R. supported only by minusc.

<sup>2</sup> ἔχουσα before ἀλαβαστρον μυρον in ΣBDL 13, 33, 69, etc.

<sup>3</sup> πολυτιμου in ΣADL (Tisch.) as in T. R. in ΒΓΔΣ (W.H.). πολυτιμου probably comes from John xii. 3.

<sup>4</sup> ἐπι της κεφαλης in ΣBD 1, 13, 69 al. (Tisch., W.H.). <sup>5</sup> ΣBDL omit αὐτου.

<sup>6</sup> ἡδυνατο in ΣBLΔ. <sup>7</sup> ΣABDL al. omit το μυρον (Tisch., W.H., Ws.).

craft, a method characteristic of clerics; indigna consultatio (Bengel); cowardly and merciless.—Ver. 5. ἔλεγον δέ: δέ points back to ver. 1, which fixes the passion in Passover time, while the Sanhedrists thought it prudent to keep off the holy season for reason given.—μῆ, etc., to avoid uproar apt to happen at Passover time, Josephus teste (B. J., i., 4, 3).

Vv. 6-13. Anointing in Bethany (Mk. xiv. 3-9, cf. John xii. 1-11). Six days before Passover in John; no time fixed in Mt. and Mk. Certainly within Passion week. The thing chiefly to be noted is the setting of this pathetic scene, between priestly plotting and false discipleship. “Hatred and baseness on either hand and true love in the midst” (Training of the Twelve).—Ver. 6. τοῦ δὲ Ἰησοῦ, etc.: indicates the scene, in Bethany, and in the house of Simon known as the leper (the one spoken of in viii. 2?). The host of Lk. vii. 36 ff. was a Simon. On the other hand, the host of John xii. 1 f., or at least a prominent guest, was Lazarus, brother of Martha and Mary. This and other points of resemblance and difference raise the question: do all the four evangelists tell the same story in different ways? On this question endless diversity of opinion has prevailed. The probability is that there were two anointings, the one reported with variations by Mt., Mk., and John, the other by Lk.; and that the two got somewhat mixed in the tradition, so that the precise details of each cannot now be ascertained. Happily the ethical or religious import of the two beautiful stories is clear.—Ver. 7. ἀλάβαστρον, an “alabaster” (vase), the term, originally denoting the material, being transferred to the vessel made of it, like our word “glass” (Speaker’s Com.), in common use for preserving ointments (Pliny, N.H., iii., 3). An alabaster of nard (μύρου) was a present for a king. Among five precious articles sent by Cambyses to the King of Ethiopia was included a μύρον ἀλάβ. (Herod., iii., 20). On this ointment and its source vide Tristram, Natural History of the Bible, p. 484 (quoted in notes on Mk.).—βαρυτίμου (here only in N. T.), of great price; this noted to explain the sequel.—κεφαλῆς: she broke the vase and poured the contents on the head of Jesus, feet in John; both possible; must be combined, say the Harmonists.—Ver. 8. ἠγανάκτησαν, as in xx. 24. The disciple-circle experienced various annoyances from first to last: Syrophenician woman, mothers and children, ambition of James and John, Mary of Bethany. The last the most singular of all. Probably all the disciples disapproved more or less. It was a woman’s act, and they were men. She was a poet and they were somewhat prosaic.—ἀπώλεια, waste, a precious thing thrown away. To how many things the term might be applied on similar grounds! The lives of the martyrs, e.g., cui dono? That is the question; not so easily answered as vulgar utilitarians think. Beside this criticism of Mary place Peter’s revolt against the death of Jesus (xvi. 22).—Ver. 9. δοθῆναι, etc., to be given (the proceeds, subject easily understood) to the poor. How much better a use than

πολλοῦ, καὶ δοθῆναι πτωχοῖς.” 10. Γνοὺς δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Τί <sup>α</sup>κόπους <sup>δ</sup>παρέχετε τῇ γυναικί; ἔργον γὰρ καλὸν <sup>Lk. xi. 7;</sup> εἰργάσατο <sup>xviii. 5;</sup> <sup>1</sup>εἰς ἐμέ. 11. πάντοτε γὰρ τοὺς πτωχοὺς ἔχετε μεθ’ ἑαυτῶν. <sup>Gal. vi. 17.</sup> ἐμὲ δὲ οὐ πάντοτε ἔχετε. 12. βαλοῦσα γὰρ αὕτη το μύρον τοῦτο ἐπὶ τοῦ σώματός μου πρὸς τὸ <sup>ε</sup>ἐνταφιάσαι με ἐποίησεν. 13. ἀμήνη <sup>John xix</sup> λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅπου ἐὰν κηρυχθῆ τὸ εὐαγγέλιον τοῦτο ἐν ὅλῳ τῷ κόσμῳ, <sup>40 (Gen</sup> λαληθήσεται καὶ ὁ ἐποίησεν αὕτη, εἰς <sup>1. 2).</sup> <sup>f Mk. xiv. 9.</sup> <sup>Acts x. 4</sup> <sup>(Sir. xlv.</sup> <sup>16 al.).</sup> 14. Τότε πορευθεὶς εἰς τῶν δώδεκα, ὁ λεγόμενος Ἰούδας Ἰσκαριώτης, πρὸς τοὺς ἀρχιερεῖς, 15. εἶπε, “Τί θέλετέ μοι δοῦναι, καὶ γὰρ

<sup>1</sup> ηργασατο in <sup>BD</sup> (Tisch., W.H.). εἰρ. in BL.

to waste it in the expression of a sentiment!—Ver. 10. γνοὺς, perceiving though not hearing. We have many mean thoughts we would be ashamed to speak plainly out.—τί κόπους παρέχετε, etc., why trouble ye the woman? a phrase not frequent in classic authors, though similar ones occur, and even this occasionally (vide Kypke); found not only here but in Lk. xi. 7, xviii. 5, Gal. vi. 17, the last place worthy to be associated with this; St. Paul and the heroine of Bethany kindred spirits, liable to “troubles” from the same sort of people and for similar reasons.—καλὸν, noble, heroic: a deed done under inspiration of uncalculating love.—Ver. 11 suggests a distinction between general ethical categories and duties arising out of special circumstances. Common men recognise the former. It takes a genius or a passionate lover to see and swiftly do the latter. Mary saw and did the rare thing, and so achieved an ἔργον καλὸν.—ἐμὲ δὲ οὐ π., “a melancholy litotes” (Meyer).—Ver. 12. πρὸς τὸ ἐνταφ., to prepare for burial by embalming; so near is my death, though ye thought not of it: effect of the woman’s act, not her conscious purpose. The Syriac version introduces a quasi. She meant nothing but to show her love, quickened possibly by instinctive foreboding of ill. But an act done in that spirit was the best embalming of Christ’s body, or rather of His act in dying, for the two acts were kindred. Hence naturally the solemn declaration following, an essential part of the story, of indubitable authenticity.—Ver. 13. τὸ εὐ. τοῦτο, this gospel, the gospel of my death of love.—ἐν ὅλῳ τῷ κόσμῳ: after ὅπου ἐὰν might seem superfluous; not so, however: it serves to indicate the range of the “wheresoever”: wide as the world, universality predicted for Christianity, and also for the heroine of the anointing. Chrysostom, illustrating Christ’s words, remarks: Even those dwelling in the British Isles (Βρετανικὰς νήσους) speak of the deed done in a house in Judaea by a harlot (Hom. lxxx.: Chrys. identifies the anointing here with that in Lk. vii.).

Vv. 14-16. Judas offers to betray Jesus (Mk. xiv. 10, 11, Lk. xxii. 3-6).—Ver. 14. τότε, then; the roots of the betrayal go much further back than the Bethany scene—vide on xvii. 22, 23—but that scene would help to precipitate the fatal step. Death at last at hand, according to the Master’s words. Then a base nature would feel uncomfortable in so unworldly company, and would be glad to escape to a more congenial atmosphere. Judas could not breathe freely amid the odours of the ointment and all it emblemized.—εἰς τ. δ., one of the Twelve (!).—Ver. 15. τί θέλετε, etc., what are ye willing to give me? Mary and Judas extreme opposites: she freely spending in love, he willing to sell his Master for money. What contrasts in the world and in the same small circle! The mercenary spirit of Judas is not so apparent in Mk. and Lk.—καὶ γὰρ, etc.: καὶ introducing a co-ordinate clause, instead of a subordinate clause, introduced by ὥστε or ἵνα; a colloquialism or a Hebraism: the traitor mean in style as in spirit.—ἔστησαν, they placed (in the balance) = weighed out. Many interpret: they agreed = συνεφώνησαν. So Theophy.: “Not as many think, instead of ἐξυγοστάτησαν”. This corresponds with Mk. and Lk., and the likelihood is that the money would not be paid till the work was done (Fritzsche). But Mt. has the prophecies ever in view, and uses here a prophetic word (Zech. xi. 12, ἔστησαν τὸν μισθὸν μου τρι. ἀργ., Sept.), indifferent as to the time when g here only ὑμῖν παραδώσω αὐτόν; " Οἱ δὲ ἔστησαν αὐτῷ τριάκοντα ἀργύρια · in this sense. 16. καὶ ἀπὸ τότε ἐζητεῖ ἡ εὐκαιρίαν ἵνα αὐτὸν παραδῶ.

h Lk. xxii. 6

17. Τῆσι δὲ πρώτῃ τῶν ἀζύμων προσῆλθον οἱ μαθηταὶ τῷ Ἰησοῦ, λέγοντες αὐτῷ,<sup>1</sup> " Ποῦ θέλεις ἐτοιμάσωμέν σοι φαγεῖν τὸ πάσχα; "

i here only. 18. Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν, " Ὑπάγετε εἰς τὴν πόλιν πρὸς τὸν δεῖνα, καὶ εἶπατε
j Heb. xi. 28. αὐτῷ, Ὁ διδάσκαλος λέγει, Ὁ καιρὸς μου ἐγγύς ἐστι · πρὸς σὲ ἵ ποιῶ τὸ ἵ πάσχα μετὰ τῶν μαθητῶν μου." 19. Καὶ ἐποίησαν οἱ μαθηταὶ ὡς συνέταξεν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ ἠτοίμασαν τὸ πάσχα.

20. Ὁψίας δὲ γενομένης ἀνέκειτο μετὰ τῶν δώδεκα. 21. καὶ ἐσθιόντων αὐτῶν εἶπεν, " Ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι εἰς ἐξ ὑμῶν παραδώσει με." 22. Καὶ λυπούμενοι σφόδρα ἤρξαντο λέγειν αὐτῷ ἕκαστος

<sup>1</sup> ἜBDLΔ omit αὐτῷ.

payment was made. Coined money was in use, but the shekels may have been weighed out in antique fashion by men careful to do an iniquitous thing in the most orthodox way. Or there may have been no weighing in the case, but only the use of an ancient form of speech after the practice had become obsolete (Field, Ol. Nor.). The amount = about three or four pounds sterling, a small sum for such a service; too small thinks Meyer, who suggests that the real amount was not known, and that the sum was fixed in the tradition to suit prophecy.—Ver. 16. εὐκαιρίαν, a good occasion, the verb, εὐκαιρέω (Mk. vi. 31), belongs to late Greek (Lobeck, Phryn., p. 125).

Vv. 17-19. Arrangements for Paschal Feast (Mk. xiv. 12-16, Lk. xxii. 7-13).—Ver. 17. τῇ δὲ πρώτῃ τ. ἀ. The sacred season which began on the 14th Nisan and lasted for seven days, was two feasts rolled into one, the Feast of the Passover and the Feast of Unleavened Bread, and it was called by either name indifferently.—ποιῶ, where? A much more perplexing question is: when? Was it on the evening of the 13th (beginning of 14th), as the Fourth Gospel seems to say, or on the evening of the following day, as the synoptical accounts seem to imply, that Jesus kept the Paschal Feast? This is one of many harmonistic problems arising out of the Gospel narratives from this point onwards, on which an immense amount of learned labour has been spent. The discussions are irksome, and their results uncertain; and they are apt to take the attention off far more important matters: the essentials of the moving tale, common to all the evangelists. We must be content to remain in doubt as to many points.—θέλεις ἐτοιμάσωμεν, the deliberative subjunctive, without ἵνα after θέλεις.—Ver. 18. ὑπάγετε, go ye into the city, i.e., Jerusalem.—πρὸς τὸν δεῖνα, to such a one, evidently no sufficient direction. Mk. and Lk. are more explicit. Mt. here, as often, abbreviates. Doubtless a previous understanding had been come to between Jesus and an unknown friend in Jerusalem. Euthy. suggests that a roundabout direction was given to keep Judas in ignorance as to the rendezvous.—ὁ καιρὸς μου, my time (of death). Some (Grotius, Speaker's Com., Carr, Camb. N.T.) find in the words a reason for anticipating the time of the Paschal Feast, and so one of the indications, even in the Synoptics, that John's date of the Passion is the true one.—ποιῶ τ. π., I make or keep (present, not future), a usual expression in such a connection. Examples in Raphael.—μετὰ τ. μ.: making thirteen with the Master, a suitable number (justa φρατρία, Grotius), between the prescribed limits of ten and twenty. The lamb had to be entirely consumed (Ex. xii. 4, 43). Did Jesus and the Twelve eat the Paschal lamb?

Vv. 20-25. The presence of a traitor announced (Mk. xiv. 18-21, Lk. xxii. 21-23).—Vv. 20, 21. ὀψίας δὲ γ. It is evening, and the company are at supper, and during the meal (ἐσθιόντων αὐ., ver. 21) Jesus made a startling announcement. At what stage is not indicated. Elsner suggests a late stage: "Cum fere comedissent; vergente ad finem coenae," because an early announcement would have killed appetite.—Ver. 21. παραδώσει με, shall betray me. General announcement, without any clue to the individual, as in Mk. ver. 18.—Ver. 22.

αὐτῶν,<sup>1</sup> "Μῆτι ἐγὼ εἶμι, κύριε;" 23. 'Ο δὲ ἀποκριθεὶς εἶπεν, "Ὁ ἐμβάψας μετ' ἐμοῦ ἐν τῷ <sup>k</sup> τρυβλίῳ τὴν χεῖρα,<sup>2</sup> οὗτός με παρα- <sup>k</sup> δώσει. 24. ὁ μὲν υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἵπτάγει, καθὼς γέγραπται <sup>k</sup> ἐν τῷ βιβλίῳ· ἐν τῷ βιβλίῳ γέγραπται ἡ ἐκείνη ἡμερὰ καὶ ἡ ὥρα· καὶ οὐδεὶς γινώσκει τὴν ἡμέραν καὶ τὴν ὥραν ἧς ἔρχεται ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου. 21 in Mk. xiv. 21 in sense of dying.

25. Ἀποκριθεὶς δὲ Ἰουδας ὁ παραδίδους αὐτὸν εἶπε, "Μῆτι ἐγὼ εἶμι, ῥαββί;" Λέγει αὐτῷ, " <sup>m</sup> Σὺ <sup>m</sup> εἶπας." <sup>m</sup> ver. 64.

26. Ἐσθιόντων δὲ αὐτῶν, λαβὼν ὁ Ἰησοῦς τὸν<sup>8</sup> ἄρτον, καὶ εὐλογήσας, ἔκλασε καὶ ἔδιδου<sup>4</sup> τοῖς μαθηταῖς, καὶ<sup>4</sup> εἶπε, "Λάβετε, φάγετε·

<sup>1</sup> εἰς ἕκαστος without αὐτῶν in  $\aleph$ BCLZ 33 (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> τὴν χεῖρα before ἐν τῷ τρυβλίῳ in  $\aleph$ ABLZ.

<sup>3</sup>  $\aleph$ BCDLZ omit τον.

<sup>4</sup> For ἐδίδου τ. μ. καὶ εἶπε  $\aleph$ BDLZ, cursives, have δους τ. μ. εἶπεν.

λυπούμενοι seems a weak word, and the addition of the evangelist's pet word σφόδρα does not make it strong. None of the accounts realistically express the effect which must have been produced.—ἤρξαντο helps to bring out the situation: they began to inquire after some moments of mute astonishment.—μῆτι ἐγὼ, etc., can it be I? expecting or hoping for a negative answer; yet not too sure: probably many of them were conscious of fear; even Peter might be, quite compatibly with his boldness a little later.—Ver. 23. ὁ ἐμβάψας, he who dipped, dips, or shall have dipped. The aorist participle decides nothing as to time, but merely points to a single act, as distinct from a process (cf. the present in Mk.). The expression in Mt. does not necessarily identify the man unless we render: who has just dipped, and conceive of Jesus as dipping immediately after. (So Weiss.) In favour of this view it may be said that there was no sense in referring to a single act of dipping, when there would be many in the course of the meal, unless the circumstances were such as to make it indicate the individual disciple. The mere dipping in the same dish would not identify the traitor, because there would be several, three or four, doing the same thing, the company being divided into perhaps three groups, each having a separate dish.—τὴν χεῖρα. The ancients used their hands, not knives and forks. So still in the East.—τρυβλίῳ. Hesychnius gives for this word ἄξοβάφιον = acetabulum, a vessel for vinegar. Hence Elsner thinks the reference is to a vessel full of bitter herbs steeped in vinegar, a dish partaken of at the beginning of the meal. More probably the words point to a dish containing a mixture of fruit—dates, figs, etc.—vinegar and spices, in which bread was dipped, the colour of bricks or mud, to remind them of the Egyptian bondage (vide Buxtorf, Lex. Talm., p. 831). The custom of dipping here referred to is illustrated by the following from Furrer (Wanderungen, p. 133): "Before us stood two plates, one with strongly spiced macaroni, the other with a dish of fine cut leeks and onions. Spoons there were none. There were four of us who dipped into the same dish."—Ver. 24. ὑπάγει, goeth, a euphemism for death. Cf. John xiii. 33.—καλὸν ἦν without the ἄν, not unusual in conditional sentences of this sort: supposition contrary to fact (vide Burton, M. T., §§ 248-9).

Vv. 26-29. The Lord's Supper (Mk. xiv. 22-25; Lk. xxii. 19, 20).—Ver. 26. ἐσθ. δὲ αὐτῶν: same phrase as in ver. 21, with δὲ added to introduce another memorable incident of the paschal supper. No details are given regarding that meal, so that we do not know how far our Lord followed the usual routine, for which consult Lightfoot, Hor. Heb., or Smith's Dictionary, article Passover. Neither can we with certainty fix the place of the Holy Supper in the paschal meal, or in relation to the announcement of the traitor. The evangelists did not concern themselves about such subordinate matters.—λαβὼν, etc., having taken a cake of bread and given thanks He broke it. The benediction may have been an old form put to a new use, or original.—εὐλογήσας has not ἄρτον for its object, which would in that case have been placed after it.—δους, etc., giving τοῦτό ἐστι τὸ σῶμά μου." 27. Καὶ λαβὼν τὸ<sup>1</sup> ποτήριον, καὶ<sup>2</sup> εὐχαριστήσας, ἔδωκεν αὐτοῖς, λέγων, "Πίετε ἐξ αὐτοῦ πάντες· 28. τοῦτο γάρ ἐστι τὸ αἷμά μου, τὸ τῆς καινῆς<sup>3</sup> διαθήκης, τὸ περὶ πολλῶν ἐκχυνόμενον εἰς ἄφεςιν ἁμαρτιῶν. 29. λέγω δὲ ὑμῖν, ὅτι<sup>4</sup> οὐ μὴ πῖω ἂπ' ἄρτι ἐκ τούτου τοῦ γεννήματος<sup>5</sup> τῆς ἀμπέλου, ἕως α Ch. xiii. τῆς ἡμέρας ἐκείνης, ὅταν αὐτὸ πῖνω μεθ' ὑμῶν καινὸν ἐν<sup>α</sup> τῇ βασιλείᾳ τοῦ<sup>α</sup> πατρὸς μου."

<sup>1</sup> ἜBLZΔΣ omit το (Tisch., W.H., Ws.).

<sup>2</sup> καὶ is in ἜBD, but wanting in CLZΔΣ I, 33. W.H. put it in brackets.

<sup>3</sup> For μου, το της καινης ἜBLZ have μου της, omitting καινης. D has the same with καινης.

<sup>4</sup> ἜDZΣ omit οτι (Tisch., W.H., Ws.); ABCLΔ have οτι.

<sup>5</sup> γεννηματος in ἜABCDL al. pl.

to the disciples; the cake broken into as many morsels, either in the act of giving or before the distribution began.—λάβετε φάγετε, take, eat.—λάβετε only in Mk. (W. and H.).—φάγετε probably an interpretative addition, true but unnecessary, by our evangelist.—τοῦτό ἐστιν τὸ σῶμά μου, this is my body. The ἐστι is the copula of symbolic significance. Jesus at this sacred moment uses a beautifully simple, pathetic, and poetic symbol of His death. But this symbol has had the fate of all religious symbolism, which is to run into fetish worship; in view of which the question is raising itself in some thoughtful minds whether discontinuance, at least for a time, of the use of sacraments would not be a benefit to the religion of the spirit and more in harmony with the mind of Christ than their obligatory observance.—Ver. 27. ποτήριον, a cup, the article being omitted in best MSS. It is idle, and in spirit Rabbinical, to inquire which of the four cups drunk at the paschal feast. The evangelist had no interest in such a question.—εὐχαριστήσας: a different word from that used in reference to the bread, but similar in import = having given thanks to God. Observe, Jesus was in the mood, and able, at that hour, to thank and praise, confident that good would come out of evil. In Gethsemane He was able only to submit.—λέγων, etc.: Mk.'s statement that all drank of the cup, Mt. turns into a direction by Jesus to do so, liturgical practice influencing the report here as in φάγετε. Jesus would use the fewest words possible at such an hour.—Ver. 28. τὸ αἷμά μου: the very colour of the wine suggestive; hence called αἷμα σταφυλῆς in Deut.

xxxii. 14; my blood, pointing to the passion, like the breaking of the bread.—τῆς διαθήκης (for the two gen. μου τ. δ. dependent on αἷμα, vide Winer, 30, 3, 3), the blood of me, of the covenant. The introduction of the idea appropriate to the circumstances: dying men make wills (διατίθενται οἱ ἀποθνήσκοντες, Euthy.). The epithet καινῆς in T. R. is superfluous, because involved in the idea. The covenant of course is new. It is Jeremiah's new covenant come at last. The blood of the covenant suggests an analogy between it and the covenant with Israel ratified by sacrifice (Ex. xxiv. 8).—τὸ περὶ πολλῶν ἐκχυνόμενον: the shedding for many suggests sacrificial analogies; the present participle vividly conceives that which is about to happen as now happening; περὶ πολλῶν is an echo of ἀντὶ πολλῶν in xx. 28.—εἰς ἄφεςιν ἁμαρτιῶν: not in Mk., and may be a comment on Christ's words, supplied by Mt.; but it is a true comment. For what else could the blood be shed according to Levitical analogies and even Jeremiah's new covenant, which includes among its blessings the complete forgiveness of sin?—Ver. 29 contains an express statement of the fact implied in the preceding actions, viz., that death is near. It is the last time I shall drink paschal (τούτου τ. γ., etc.) wine with you. I am to die at this passover. The second half of the sentence is not to be taken prosaically. It is the thought of meeting again, brought in to brighten the gloom of the leave-taking ("so tritt zu dem Lebewohl ein Gedanke an das Wiederssehen," Holtz., H.C.). To disentangle figure from fact in this poetic utterance about the new

30. Καὶ ὁ ὑμνήσαντες ἐξήλθον εἰς τὸ ὄρος τῶν ἐλαιῶν. 31. τότε λέγει αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “ Πάντες ὑμεῖς σκανδαλισθήσεσθε ἐν ἐμοὶ ἐν τῇ νυκτὶ ταύτῃ. γέγραπται γάρ, ‘ Πατάξω τὸν ποιμένα, καὶ διασκορπισθήσεται <sup>1</sup> τὰ πρόβατα τῆς ποίμνης.’ 32. μετὰ δὲ τὸ ἐγερεθῆναί με, προάξω ὑμᾶς εἰς τὴν Γαλιλαίαν.” 33. Ἀποκριθεὶς δὲ ὁ Πέτρος εἶπεν αὐτῷ, “ Εἰ καὶ <sup>2</sup> πάντες σκανδαλισθήσονται ἐν σοὶ, ἐγὼ οὐδέποτε σκανδαλισθήσομαι.” 34. Ἐφη αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “ Ἀμὴν λέγω σοι, ὅτι ἐν ταύτῃ τῇ νυκτὶ, πρὶν ἢ ἀλέκτορα φωνῆσαι, τρὶς ἀπαρνήσῃ με.” 35. Λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Πέτρος, “ Κἂν δέη με σὺν σοὶ ἀποθανεῖν, οὐ μὴ σε ἀπαρνήσομαι.” Ὁμοίως καὶ πάντες οἱ μαθηταὶ εἶπον.

Mk. xiv. 26
(absol. as here).

ver. 74.
Mk. xiv.
30, 68. Lk.
xxii. 34, 60.
John xiii
38; xviii
27.

<sup>1</sup> διασκορπισθήσονται in  $\Sigma$ ABCIL $\Sigma$ . The sing. a correction.

<sup>2</sup> καὶ omitted in most uncials.

wine is impossible. Hence such comments as those of Bengel and Meyer, to the effect that καινὸν points to a new kind of wine (“novitatem dicit plane singulare,” Beng.), serve no purpose. They turn poetry into prose, and pathos into bathos.

The remarkable transaction narrated in vv. 26-29 was an acted parable proclaiming at once the fact and the epoch-making significance of the approaching passion. It sets in a striking light the personality of Jesus; His originality, His tenderness, His mastery of the situation, His consciousness of being through His life and His death the inaugurator of a new era.—Was Judas present? Who can tell? Lk.’s narrative seems to imply that he was. Mt. and Mk. give no sign. They cannot have regarded his absence as of vital importance.

Vv. 30-46. Gethsemane (Mk. xiv. 26-42, Lk. xxii. 39-46).—Ver. 30. ὑμνήσαντες. With this participle, referring to the last act within the supper chamber—the singing of the paschal hymn (the Hallel, part 2, Ps. 115-118, or possibly a new song, Grotius)—we pass without, and after talk between Jesus and the disciples, arising out of the situation, arrive at the scene of another sacred memory of the passion eve. If, as is said (Lightfoot, Hor. Heb.), it was required of Jews that they should spend passover night in Jerusalem, the spirit of Jesus led Him elsewhere—towards the Mount of Olives, to the garden of the agony.—Ver. 31. τότε, then, on the way through the valley between the city and Olivet, the valley of Jehoshaphat (Kedron), suggestive of prophetic memories (Joel iii., Zech. xiii., xiv.), leading up, as well as the present situation, to the topic.—πάντες, all; one false-hearted, all without exception weak.—ἐν ἐμοί, in what is to befall me.—ἐν τῇ ν. τ. So near is the crisis, a matter of hours. The shadow of Gethsemane is beginning to fall on Christ’s own spirit, and He knows how it must fare with men unprepared for what is coming.—γέγραπται γάρ: in Zech. xiii. 7, freely reproduced from the Hebrew.—Ver. 32 predicts a brighter future to alleviate the gloom. The Shepherd will yet again go before His flock (προάξω, pastoris more, Grotius), leading them.—εἰς τ. Γαλιλαίαν, the place of reunion. This verse is wanting in the Fayum Fragment, which Harnack regards as a sign of its great antiquity. Resch, Agrapha, p. 495.—Ver. 33. εἰ πάντες σκανδαλισθήσονται, if, or although, all shall be offended; the future implies great probability of the case supposed; Peter is willing to concede the likelihood of the assertion in reference to all the rest.—ἐγὼ οὐδέποτε, I, never, vehemently spoken and truly, so far as he knows himself; sincere in feeling, but weaker than he is aware of.—Ver. 34. ἐν. τ. τ. ν., repetition of statement in ver. 31, with added emphasis (ἀμὴν, etc.), and = never? this night I tell you.—πρὶν ἀλέκτορα φωνῆσαι: more exact specification of the time to make the statement more impressive = before the dawn.—ἀλέκτωρ, poetic form for ἀλεκτρυών. This fowl not mentioned in O. T.; probably introduced into Palestine after the exile, possibly from Babylon (Benzinger, pp. 38, 94). Not allowed to be kept in Jerusalem according to Lightfoot, but this is contradicted by others (Schöttgen, Wünsche). In any case the prohibition would not apply to the Romans. Though no hen had been in Jerusalem, Jesus might have spoken the words to mark

q Mk. xiv. 32. John iv. 5. Acts i. 18, 19; iv. 34 (pl. lands); v. 3, 8; xxviii. 7 (pl.).
 r Mk. xiv. 33. Phil. ii. 26. parall. Mk. vi. 26. Lk. xviii. 23, 24.
 t here and in Mk. xiv. 35.

36. ΤΟΤΕ ἔρχεται μετ' αὐτῶν ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἰς ἄχωριον λεγόμενον Γεθσημανῆ, καὶ λέγει τοῖς μαθηταῖς, "Καθίσατε αὐτοῦ, ἕως οὐ<sup>1</sup> ἀπελθῶν προσεύξωμαι ἐκεῖ." 37. Καὶ παραλαβὼν τὸν Πέτρον καὶ τοὺς δύο υἱοὺς Ζεβεδαίου, ἤρξατο λυπεῖσθαι καὶ ἄδημονεῖν. 38. τότε λέγει αὐτοῖς, "Περίλυπός ἐστιν ἡ ψυχὴ μου ἕως θανάτου· μείνατε ὧδε καὶ γρηγορεῖτε μετ' ἐμοῦ." 39. Καὶ προσελθὼν<sup>2</sup> μικρὸν, ἔπεσεν ἐπὶ πρόσωπον αὐτοῦ προσευχόμενος, καὶ λέγων, "Πάτερ μου, εἰ δυνατὸν ἐστι, ἄπαρθέτω ἀπ' ἐμοῦ τὸ ποτήριον τοῦτο· πλὴν οὐχ ὡς ἐγὼ θέλω, ἀλλ' ὡς σύ." 40. Καὶ ἔρχεται πρὸς τοὺς μαθητάς, καὶ εὕρισκει αὐτοὺς καθεύδοντας, καὶ λέγει τῷ Πέτρῳ, "Οὕτως οὐκ

<sup>1</sup> The reading varies here, some MSS. having εως ου (B, etc.), some εως αν (DLΔ), some εως (ΣCM).

<sup>2</sup> εκει προσευξωμαι in ΣBDL 33 al.

<sup>3</sup> So in ΒΣ (W.H. in text). Most uncials read προσελθων (Tisch., W.H., in margin). Weiss thinks this an assimilation to Mt.'s usual expression, and προελθων the true reading.

the time of night.—τρῖς, thrice, suggestive of denial in aggravated form; on which, not on the precise number of times, as an instance of miraculous prediction, stress should be laid.—Ver. 35: intensified protestation of fidelity—καὶ before ἐάν (κἄν) intensive, introducing an extreme case, death for the Master.—οὐ μὴ, making the predictive future emphatically negative=I certainly will not.—ὁμοίως, similarly, weaker than Mk.'s ὡσαύτως. Very improbable, thinks De Wette. But the disciples were placed in a delicate position by Peter's protestations, and would have to say something, however faint-heartedly.

Vv. 36-46. The agony (so called from the word ἀγωνία in Lk. xxii. 44, ἀπαξ λεγ.).—Ver. 36. ἄχωριον, a place in the sense of a property or farm = villa in Vulgate, ager, Hilary, Grundstück, Weizsäcker's translation.—Γεθσημανῆ, probably = יְהוֹשֻׁעַ תַּבַּי, an oil press.

Descriptions of the place now identified with it in Robinson's Researches, Furrer's Wanderungen, and Stanley's Sinai and Palestine.—καθίσατε αὐτοῦ: Jesus arranges that a good distance shall be between Himself and the body of the disciples when He enters the valley of the shadow of death. He expects no help from them.—ἐκεῖ, there! pointing to the place visible in the moonlight.—Ver. 37. παραλαβὼν: He takes the same three as at the transfiguration along with Him that they may be near enough to prevent a feeling of utter isolation.—ἤρξατο, He began. This beginning refers to the appearance of distress; the inward beginning came earlier. He hid His feelings till He had reduced His following to three; then allowed them to appear to those who, He hoped, could bear the revelation and give Him a little sympathy.—ἀδημονεῖν, of uncertain derivation. Euthy. gives as its equivalent βαρυνθῆναι, to be dejected or heavy-hearted.—Ver. 38. τοτὲ λέγει αὐτ.: He confides to the three His state of mind without reserve, as if He wished it to be known. Cf. the use made in the epistle to the Hebrews of this frank manifestation of weakness as showing that Christ could not have usurped the priestly office, but rather simply submitted to be made a priest (chap. v. 7, 8).—περίλυπος, overwhelmed with distress, "über und über traurig" (Weiss).—ἕως θανάτου, mortally = death by anticipation, showing that it was the Passion with all its horrors vividly realised that was causing the distress. Hilary, true to his docetic tendency, represents Christ as distressed on account of the three, fearing they might altogether lose their faith in God.—ὧδε: the three stationed nearer the scene of agony to keep watch there.—Ver. 39. μικρὸν, a little space, presumably near enough for them to hear (cf. Lk. xxii. 41).—ἐπὶ πρόσωπον, on His face, not on knees, summa demissio (Beng.).—πάτερ, Father! Weiss in Markus-Evang. seems to think that the one word Abba was all the three heard, the rest of the prayer being an ισχύσατε μίαν ὥραν γρηγορήσαι μετ' ἐμοῦ; 41. γρηγορεῖτε καὶ προσεύχεσθε, ἵνα μὴ εἰσέλθητε εἰς πειρασμόν. τὸ μὲν πνεῦμα πρόθυμον, ἡ δὲ σὰρξ ἀσθενής." 42. Πάλιν ἔκ " δευτέρου ἀπελθὼν ἢ Mk. xiv. 72. John ix. 24. Acts xi. 9. Heb. ix. 28. προσηύξατο, λέγων, " Πάτερ μου, εἰ οὐ δύναται τούτο τὸ ποτήριον<sup>1</sup> παρελθεῖν ἀπ' ἐμοῦ,<sup>2</sup> ἔὰν μὴ αὐτὸ πῖω, γενηθήτω τὸ θελημά σου." 43. Καὶ ἔλθων εὐρίσκει αὐτοὺς πάλιν<sup>3</sup> καθεύδοντας· ἦσαν γὰρ αὐτῶν οἱ ὀφθαλμοὶ ἔββαρημένοι. 44. Καὶ ἀφείς αὐτούς, ἀπελθὼν ἢ Mk. xiv. 40 (T. R.). Lk. ix. 32; xxi. 34. 2 Cor. i. 8; v. 4. πάλιν,<sup>4</sup> προσηύξατο ἐκ τρίτου, τὸν αὐτὸν λόγον εἰπών.<sup>5</sup> 45. τότε ἔρχεται πρὸς τοὺς μαθητὰς αὐτοῦ,<sup>6</sup> καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς, " Καθεύδετε τὸ<sup>7</sup> λοιπὸν καὶ ἀναπαύεσθε· ἰδοῦ, ἤγγικεν ἡ ὥρα, καὶ ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου παραδίδοται εἰς χεῖρας ἀμαρτωλῶν. 46. ἐγείρεσθε, ἄγωμεν. ἰδοῦ, ἤγγικεν ὁ παραδιδούς με."

<sup>1</sup> ἧ ABCILΔ omit τὸ ποτήριον (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> ἧ BDL omit ἀπ' ἐμοῦ (Tisch., W.H.). <sup>3</sup> πάλιν εὐρεν αὐτοὺς in ἧ BCDILΣ.

<sup>4</sup> πάλιν ἀπελθὼν in ἧ BCDIL.

<sup>5</sup> ἧ BL have a second πάλιν after εἰπών.

<sup>6</sup> Most uncials omit αὐτοῦ.

<sup>7</sup> τὸ omitted in BCL.

expansion and interpretation by the evangelist. But if they heard one word they could hear more. The prayer uttered in such a state of distress would be a loud outburst (cf. μετὰ κραυγῆς ἰσχυρᾶς, Heb. v. 7), at once, therefore before the disciples had time to fall asleep or even get drowsy.—τὸ ποτήριον τ., this cup (of death).—πλὴν, etc., howbeit not as I wish, but as Thou, expressively elliptical; no doubt spoken in a calmer tone, the subdued accent suggestive of a change of mood even if the very words did not distinctly reach the ear of the three. Grotius, from theological solicitudes, takes θέλω=θέλωμι, "vellem" ("more Hebraeorum, qui neque potentialem neque optativum modum habent").—Ver. 40. ἔρχεται: not necessarily immediately after uttering the foregoing prayer. Jesus may have lain on the ground for a considerable time silent.—τῷ Πέτρῳ: all three were asleep, but the reproach was most fitly addressed to Peter, the would-be valiant and loyal disciple.—οὕτως: Euthy. puts a mark of interrogation after this word, whereby we get this sense: So? Is this what it has come to? You were not able to watch with me one hour! A spirited rendering in consonance with Mark's version.

Vv. 42-46. Further progress of the agony.—That Jesus had not yet reached final victory is apparent from His complaint against the disciples. He came craving, needing a sympathy He had not got. When the moment of triumph comes He will be independent of them.

—Ver. 42. λέγων, saying; whereupon follow the words. Mark simply states that Jesus prayed to the same effect.—οὐ δύναται: οὐ not μὴ. He knows that it is not possible, yet the voice of nature says strongly: would that it were!—Ver. 43. καθεύδοντας: again! surprising, one would say incredible on first thoughts, but not on second. It was late and they were sad, and sadness is soporific.—Ver. 44. Jesus leaves them sleeping and goes away again for the final struggle, praying as before.—Ver. 45. καθεύδετε λ. κ. ἀναπαύεσθε, sleep now and rest; not ironical or reproachful, nor yet seriously meant, but concessive = ye may sleep and rest indefinitely so far as I am concerned; I need no longer your watchful interest. The Master's time of weakness is past; He is prepared to face the worst.—ἡ ὥρα: He expects the worst to begin forthwith: the cup, which He prayed might pass, to be put immediately into His hands.—παραδίδοται, betrayal the first step, on the point of being taken.—ἀμαρτωλῶν, the Sanhedrists, with whom Judas has been bargaining.—ἐγείρ. ἄγωμ.: sudden change of mood, on signs of a hostile approach: arise, let us go; spoken as if by a general to his army.—ὁ παραδιδούς, the traitor is seen to be coming. It is noticeable that throughout the narrative, in speaking of the action of Judas, the verb παραδίδομι is used instead of προδίδωμι: the former expresses the idea of delivering to death, change from rest to a courageous coming of the fall

47. Καὶ ἔτι αὐτοῦ λαλοῦντος, ἰδοῦ, Ἰούδας εἰς τῶν δώδεκα ἤλωε, <sup>in parall. in evangelio.</sup> καὶ μετ' αὐτοῦ ὄχλος πολὺς μετὰ μαχαιρῶν καὶ ῥυλῶν, ἀπὸ τῶν ἀρχιερέων καὶ πρεσβυτέρων τοῦ λαοῦ. 48. ὁ δὲ παραδίδους αὐτὸν ἔδωκεν αὐτοῖς σημεῖον, λέγων, “Ὁν ἂν φιλήσω, αὐτός ἐστι· κρατήσατε αὐτόν.” 49. Καὶ εὐθέως, προσελθὼν τῷ Ἰησοῦ εἶπε, “Χαῖρε, ῥαββί,” καὶ κατεφίλησεν αὐτόν. 50. ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν αὐτῷ, “Ἐταῖρε, ἐφ' ᾧ<sup>1</sup> πάρει;” Τότε προσελθόντες ἐπέβαλον τὰς χεῖρας the latter of delivering into the hands of those who sought His life (Euthy. on ver. 21).

<sup>1</sup> ἐφ' οἱ in  $\Sigma$  ABCDLA, etc. (modern editors).

The scene in the garden is intrinsically probable and without doubt historical. The temptation was to suppress rather than to invent in regard both to the behaviour of Jesus and to that of His disciples. It is not the creation of theology, though theology has made its own use of it. It is recorded simply because it was known to have happened.

Vv. 47-56. The apprehension (Mk. xiv. 43-52, Lk. xxii. 47-53).—εἰς τ. δώδεκα, as in ver. 14, repeated not for information, but as the literary reflection of the chronic horror of the apostolic church that such a thing should be possible. That it was not only possible but a fact is one of the almost undisputed certainties of the passion history. Even Brandt, who treats that history very sceptically, accepts it as fact (Die Evangelische Geschichte, p. 18).—μετ' αὐτοῦ, etc.: the description of the company to whom Judas acted as guide is vague; ὄχ. πολ. is elastic, and might mean scores, hundreds, thousands, according to the standard of comparison.—ὄχλος does not suggest soldiery as its constituents, neither does the description of the arms borne—swords and staves, Lk. (xxii. 52, στρατηγῶς τ. ἱεροῦ) seem to have in his mind the temple police, consisting of priests and Levites with assistants, and this view appears intrinsically probable, though Brandt (E. G., p. 4) scouts it. The Jewish authorities would make arrangements to ensure their purpose; the temple police was at their command, and they would send a sufficiently large number to overpower the followers of their victim, however desperate their resistance.—Ver. 48. ἔδωκεν: the traitor, as he approached the place where he shrewdly guessed Jesus would be, gave (dedit, Vulg.), not had given. His plan was not cut and dry from the first. It flashed upon him as he drew near and began to think how he would meet his Master. The old charm of the Master

reasserts itself in his soul, and he feels he must salute Him affectionately. At the same instant it flashes upon him that the kiss which both smouldering love and cowardice compel may be utilised as a sign. Inconsistent motives? Yes, but such is human nature, especially in the Judas type: two-souled men, drawn opposite ways by the good and evil in them; betraying loved ones, then hanging themselves.—Ver. 48. αὐτός ἐστιν, He and no other is the man.—Ver. 49. κατεφίλησεν, kissed Him heartily. In late Greek there was a tendency to use compounds with the force of the simple verb, and this has been supposed to be a case in point (De Wette). But coming after φιλήσω, ver. 48, the compound verb is plainly used with intention. It occurs again in Lk. vii. 38, 45, xv. 20, obviously with intensive force. What a tremendous contrast between the woman in Simon's house (Lk. vii.) and Judas! Both kissed Jesus fervently: with strong emotion; yet the one could have died for Him, the other betrays Him to death. Did Jesus remember the woman at that moment?—Ver. 50. ἔταῖρε: so might a master salute a disciple, and disciple or companion is, I think, the sense of the word here (so Elsner, Palaiet, Wolf, Schanz, Carr, Camb. N. T.). It answers to ῥαββί in the salute of Judas.—ἐφ' ὃ πάρει, usually taken as a question: “ad quid venisti?” Vulg. Wherefore art thou come? A. V. “Wozu bist du da?” Weizsäcker. Against this is the grammatical objection that instead of ὃ should have been τί. Winer, § 24, 4, maintains that ὃς might be used instead of τίς in a direct question in late Greek. To get over the difficulty various suggestions have been made: Fritzsche renders: friend, for what work you are come! taking ὃ = οὖν. Others treat the sentence as elliptical, and supply words before or after: e.g., say for what you are come (Morison), or what you have come for, that do, R. V., Meyer, Weiss. The last is least satisfactory, for Judas had already done it, as Jesus instinctively ἐπὶ τὸν Ἰησοῦν, καὶ ἐκράτησαν αὐτόν. 51. Καὶ ἰδοῦ, εἰς τῶν μετὰ Ἰησοῦ, ἐκτείνας τὴν χεῖρα, ἠπέσπασε τὴν μάχαιραν αὐτοῦ, καὶ πατάξας τὸν δούλον τοῦ ἀρχιερέως ἀφείλεν αὐτοῦ τὸ ὄτιον. 52. τότε λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Ἀπόστρεψόν σου τὴν μάχαιραν<sup>1</sup> εἰς τὸν τόπον αὐτῆς· πάντες γὰρ οἱ λαβόντες μάχαιραν ἐν μαχαίρα ἀπολοῦνται. 53. ἢ δοκεῖς ὅτι οὐ δύναμαι ἄρτι<sup>2</sup> παρακαλέσαι τὸν πατέρα μου, καὶ παραστήσει μοι πλείους ἢ<sup>3</sup> δώδεκα λεγεῶνας ἀγγέλων; 54. πῶς οὖν πληρωθῶσιν αἱ γραφαί, ὅτι οὕτω δεῖ γενέσθαι;”

55. Ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ὥρᾳ εἶπεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς τοῖς ὄχλοις, “Ὡς ἐπὶ ληστήν ἐξήλθετε μετὰ μαχαίρων καὶ ξύλων ἠσπασαίνε με; καθ’ x here only in same sense (Mk. simple verb). Cf. Lk. xxii. 41. Acts xx. 30; xxi. 1. Mk. xiv. 47 (T. R.). Lk. xxii. 51. John xviii. 10 (T. R.). y parall. Acts i. 16; xii. 3; xxiii. 27.

<sup>1</sup> σου after τὴν μάχαιραν in  $\mathfrak{H}$ BDL.

<sup>2</sup> ἀρτι after παραστήσει μοι in  $\mathfrak{H}$ BL 33 al. (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> For πλείους η  $\mathfrak{H}$ BD have πλειω. The reading in T. R. is a grammatical correction, uncalled for as the construction in πλειω δ. λεγεῶνας is good Greek.

knew. Fritzsche's suggestion is ingenious, and puts a worthy thought into Christ's mouth. Perhaps the best solution is to take the words as a question in effect, though not in form. Disciple, for which, or as which, you are present? Comrade, and as a comrade here? So Judas pretended, and by the laconic phrase Jesus at once states and exposes the pretence, possibly pointing to the crowd behind in proof of the contrary. So in effect Beng.: “hocine illud est cuius causa ades?”; also Schanz. The point is that the Master gives the false disciple to understand that He does not believe in his paraded affection.

Vv. 51-54. Blood drawn.—ἰδοῦ, introducing a second scene connected with the apprehension (cf. ver. 47); the use of a weapon by one of Christ's disciples. A quite likely occurrence if any of them happened to have weapons in their hands, though we may wonder at that. It might be a large knife used in connection with the Paschal feast. Who used the weapon is not said by the Synop. Did they know? The article before μάχαιραν might suggest that the whole party were armed, each disciple having his sword. The fear that they might be explains the largeness of the band following Judas.—Ver. 52. ἀπόστρεψον: Jesus could not encourage the use of arms by His disciples, and the order to sheathe the weapon He was sure to give. The accompanying word, containing a general legal maxim: draw the sword, perish with the sword (the subsequent history of the Jewish people a tragic exemplification of its truth), suitably enforces the order. Weiss thinks that this word recorded here was spoken by Jesus at some other time, if at all, for it appears to be only a free reproduction of Rev. xiii. 10 (Meyer, ed. Weiss). This and the next two verses are wanting in Mk. and Lk.—Ver. 53 gives another reason for not using the sword: if it were God's will that His Son should be rescued it could be done in a different way. The way suggested is described in military language, the verbs παρακαλεῖν and παριστάνει being both used in classics in connection with military matters, and the word λεγεῶνας suggesting the battalions of the Roman army.—δώδεκα, twelve legions, one for each of the twelve disciples.—πλειῶ, even more than that vast number, Divine resources boundless. The free play of imagination displayed in this conception of a great army of angels evinces the elasticity of Christ's spirit and His perfect self-possession at a critical moment.—Ver. 54. πῶς οὖν: refers to both forms of aid, that of the sword and that of angels (Grotius, Fritzsche); rescue in any form inconsistent with the predicted destiny of Messiah to be a sufferer.—ὅτι οὕτω, etc., the purport of all prophetic scripture is that thus it should be: apprehension and all that is to follow.

Vv. 55, 56. Jesus complains of the manner of His apprehension.—ἐν ἐκ. τ. ὥρᾳ, connects with ἐκράτησαν αὐτόν in ver. 50. Having said what was necessary to the bellicose disciple, Jesus turns to the party which had come to arrest Him, ἡμέραν πρὸς ὑμᾶς<sup>1</sup> ἐκαθεζόμεν διδάσκων ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ,<sup>2</sup> καὶ οὐκ ἐκρατήσατέ με. 56. τοῦτο δὲ ὄλον γέγονεν, ἵνα πληρωθῶσιν αἱ γραφαὶ τῶν προφητῶν.” Τότε οἱ μαθηταὶ<sup>3</sup> πάντες ἀφέντες αὐτὸν ἔφυγον.

57. Οἱ δὲ κρατήσαντες τὸν Ἰησοῦν ἀπήγαγον πρὸς Καϊάφαν τὸν ἀρχιερέα, ὅπου οἱ γραμματεῖς καὶ οἱ πρεσβύτεροι συνήχθησαν. 58. Ὁ δὲ Πέτρος ἠκολούθει αὐτῷ ἀπὸ<sup>4</sup> μακρόθεν, ἕως τῆς αὐλῆς τοῦ ἀρχιερέως· καὶ εἰσελθὼν ἔσω ἐκάθητο μετὰ τῶν ὑπηρετῶν, ἰδεῖν

<sup>1</sup> NBL 33 omit πρὸς ὑμας (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> εν τῷ ἱερῷ before ἐκαθεζομην in NBL 33 (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> B has αὐτου after μαθηται (W.H. in margin).

<sup>4</sup> BD have απο (W.H. in brackets). NCLA omit (Tisch.).

here called τοῖς ὄχλοις.—ὡς ἐπὶ ληστῆν, etc. : the words may be taken either as a question or as a statement of fact. In either case Jesus complains that they have arrested Him as if He were a robber or other criminal. A robber as distinct from a thief (vide Trench, Synonyms) is one who uses violence to possess himself of others' property, and Christ's complaint is in the first place that they have treated Him as one who meant to offer resistance. But the reference to His past habit in the sequel seems to show that He has another complaint in His mind, viz., that they have regarded Him as one hiding from justice. The allusion is to the invasion of His privacy in the garden, and the implied suggestion that they have put a false construction on His presence there. They think He has been seeking escape from His fate when in fact He has been bracing Himself up for it! To what misconstruction the holiest and noblest actions are liable, and how humiliating to the heroic soul! It was thoroughly characteristic of Jesus that He should feel the humiliation, and that He should at once give expression to the feeling. This against Brandt (p. 6), who thinks this utterance in no respect appropriate to the situation.—καθ' ἡμέραν, etc. : Jesus asks in effect why they did not apprehend Him while, for several days in succession, He sat in the temple precincts teaching. To this it might be replied that that was easier said than done, in midst of a miscellaneous crowd containing not a few friends of the obnoxious teacher (so Brandt). But what Jesus is concerned to point out is, not the practicability of arrest in the temple, but that His behaviour had been fearless. How could they imagine that a man who spoke His mind so openly could slink away into hiding-places like an evil-doer? Brandt remarks that the complaint is addressed to the wrong persons: to the underlings rather than to the hierarchs. It is addressed to those who actually apprehended Jesus, whoever they were. Who composed that crowd it would not be easy in the dark to know.—Ver. 56. τοῦτο δὲ, etc. : a formula of the evangelist, introducing another reference by Jesus to the prophecies in these terms, ἵνα πληρωθῶσιν, etc. Jesus reconciles Himself to the indignity in the manner of His arrest, as to the arrest itself, and all that it involved, by the thought that it was in His "cup" as described by the prophets. The prophetic picture of Messiah's experience acted as a sedative to His spirit.—τότε, then, when the apprehension had been effected, and meekly submitted to by Jesus.—πάντες, Peter included.—ἔφυγον, fled, to save themselves, since their Master could not be saved. This another bitter drop in the cup: absolute loneliness.

Vv. 57-68. Before Caiaphas (Mk. xiv. 53-65; Lk. xxii. 54, 66-71).—πρὸς Καϊάφαν, to Caiaphas, who sent them forth, and who expects their return with their victim.—ὅπου, where, i.e., in the palace of Caiaphas.—γρ. καὶ πρ.: scribes and presbyters, priests and presbyters in ver. 3. Mk. names all the three; doubtless true to the fact.—συνήχθησαν, were assembled, waiting for the arrival of the party sent out to arrest Jesus. In Mk. the coming together of the Sanhedrim appears to be synchronous with the arrival of Jesus. This meeting happens when the world is asleep, and when τὸ τέλος. 59. Οἱ δὲ ἄρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ πρεσβύτεροι<sup>1</sup> καὶ τὸ συνέδριον ἔβλον ἐξήτουν * ψευδομαρτυρίαν κατὰ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, ὅπως αὐτὸν θανατώσωσι, 60. καὶ<sup>2</sup> οὐχ<sup>3</sup> εὗρον· καὶ πολλῶν * ψευδομαρτύρων προσελθόντων, οὐχ εὗρον.<sup>2</sup> Ὑστερον δὲ προσελθόντες δύο ψευδομάρτυρες<sup>3</sup> 61. εἶπον, “Οὗτος ἔφη, Δύναμαι καταλύσαι τὸν ναὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ<sup>4</sup> διὰ τριῶν ἡμερῶν οἰκοδομησαί αὐτόν.”<sup>4</sup> 62. Καὶ ἀναστὰς ὁ ἄρχιερεὺς εἶπεν αὐτῷ, “Οὐδὲν ἀποκρίνη; τί οὗτοί σου * καταμαρτυροῦσιν;”

a Ch. xv. 19
b Ch. xii. 43
c 1 Cor. xv 15.
d parall.
Mk. ii. 1
Acts xxiv
17. Gal
ii. 1.
Ch. xxvii
13. Mk.
xiv. 60.

<sup>1</sup> BDL 69 it. vg., Egypt. verss., omit οἱ πρεσβύτεροι, which comes in from ver. 57.

<sup>2</sup> For the passage καὶ οὐκ εὗρον . . . οὐκ εὗρον BCL verss. have καὶ οὐκ εὗρον πολλῶν προσελθόντων ψευδομαρτύρων (Tisch., W.H., Ws.).

<sup>3</sup> BBL omit ψευδομαρτυρες.

<sup>4</sup> B omits αὐτον (W.H.).

judicial iniquity can be perpetrated quietly.—Ver. 58 is the prelude to the story of Peter's denial, which is resumed at ver. 69 after the account of the trial. Similarly in Mk. Lk. gives the story without interruption.—μακρόθεν, from afar: Peter followed his Master, having after a while recovered from the general panic; more courageous than the rest, yet not courageous enough; just enough of the hero in him to bring him into the region of temptation.—ἕως τ. αὐ. Cf. Mk., ver. 54.—ἰδεῖν τὸ τέλος, to see the end; a good Greek phrase. Motives: curiosity and honest interest in the fate of his loved Master. Jerome puts these alternatively: “vel amore discipuli vel humana curiositate”.

Vv. 59-68. The trial.—Ver. 59. τ. συν. βλον, the whole Sanhedrim, cf. πάντες in Heb. iii. 16, the statement in both cases admitting of a few exceptions.—ψευδομαρτυρίαν, false evidence, of course in the first place from the evangelist's point of view (μαρτυρίαν in Mk.), but substantially true to the fact. They wanted evidence for a foregone conclusion; no matter though it was false if it only looked true and hung fairly well together. Jesus was apprehended to be put to death, and the trial was only a blind, a form rendered necessary by the fact that there was a Procurator to be satisfied.—Ver. 60. οὐχ εὗρον: they found not false witness that looked plausible and justified capital punishment.—πολλῶν π. ψ.: it was not for want of witnesses of a kind; many offered themselves and made statements, but they did not serve the purpose: either trivial or inconsistent; conceivable in the circumstances; coming forward on the spur of the moment from the crowd in answer to an invitation from prejudiced judges eager for damnatory evidence. Those who responded deserved to be stigmatised as false. None but base, mean creatures would have borne evidence in such a case.—δύο, only two had anything to say worth serious attention.—Ver. 61. οὗτος ἔφη, this person said: then follows a version of a word really spoken by Jesus, of a startling character, concerning destroying and rebuilding the temple. An inaccurate report of so remarkable a saying might easily go abroad, and the version given by the two witnesses seems from xxvii. 40 to have been current. They might, therefore, have borne wrong evidence without being false in intention.—δύναμαι, in an emphatic position, makes Jesus appear as one boasting of preternatural power, and τὸν ναὸν τοῦ θεοῦ, as irreverently parading His power in connection with a sacred object.—διὰ τ. ἡ., literally through three days = after: for similar use of the preposition, vide Gal. ii. 1. The meaning is: after three days I will complete the rebuilding, so that διὰ in effect is = ἐν in John ii. 19.—Ver. 62. ἀναστὰς ὁ ἄρ.: the high priest rose up not because he felt the evidence just led to be very serious, rather in irritation because the most damaging statements amounted to nothing more serious. A man could not be sentenced to death for a boastful word (Grotius).—οὐδὲν ἀποκρίνη . . . καταμαρτυροῦσιν: either one question as in Vulg.: “nihil respondes ad ea quae isti adversum te testificantur?” or two as in A. V. and R. V., so also Weizsäcker: answerest Thou nothing? what do these witness against Thee? It is an attempt of a baffled man to draw Jesus into explanations about the saying which will make it more damaging as evidence against Him. What about this pretentious word

63. Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς ἐσιώπα. καὶ ἀποκριθεὶς<sup>1</sup> ὁ ἀρχιερεὺς εἶπεν αὐτῷ, f here only. "Ἐξορκίζω σε κατὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ τοῦ ζῶντος, ἵνα ἡμῖν εἴπῃς, εἰ σὺ εἶ ὁ Χριστὸς, ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ." 64. Λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Σὺ εἶπας.
 g Mk. xiv. πλὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ἀπ' ἄρτι ὤψεσθε τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου καθήμενον Acts xiv. 14. ἐκ δεξιῶν τῆς δυνάμεως καὶ ἐρχόμενον ἐπὶ τῶν νεφελῶν τοῦ οὐρανοῦ."
 h Mk. xiv. 64. Mk. 65. Τότε ὁ ἀρχιερεὺς διέρρηξε τὰ ἱμάτια αὐτοῦ, λέγων, "Ὅτι<sup>2</sup> Mt. 23 (T. R.), with ἐβλασφήμησε· τί ἔτι χρεῖαν ἔχομεν μαρτύρων; ἴδε, νῦν ἠκούσατε
 gen. of ἔβλασφήμησε τὴν βλασφημίαν αὐτοῦ.<sup>3</sup> 66. τί ὑμῖν δοκεῖ;" Οἱ δὲ ἀποκριθέντες penalty εἶπον, "Ἦνοχος θανάτου ἐστί." 67. Τότε ἐπέτυσαν εἰς τὸ (Gen. xxvi. 11). πρόσωπον αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἑκολάφισαν αὐτόν· οἱ δὲ ἐρράπισαν, 68.
 I Mk. xiv. 65. 1 Cor. iv. λέγοντες, "Προφήτευσον ἡμῖν, Χριστέ, τίς ἐστὶν ὁ παῖσας σε;"
 11. 2 Cor. xii. 7. 1 Pet. ii. 20.

<sup>1</sup> BLZ vul. copt. al. omit ἀποκριθεὶς.

<sup>2</sup> BDLZΣ 33 omit οτι.

<sup>3</sup> BDLZ omit αὐτου.

of yours; is it true that you said it, and what does it mean?—Ver. 63. ἐσιώπα: Jesus seeing the drift of the questions gave the high priest no assistance, but continued silent.—ἐξορκίζω (ἐξορκῶ more common in classics). The high priest now takes a new line, seeing that there is no chance of conviction any other way. He puts Jesus on His oath as to the cardinal question of Messiahship.—εἰ σὺ εἶ ὁ Χριστὸς, etc.: not two questions but one, Son of God being exegetical of the title Christ. If He was the one He was the other ipso facto.—Ver. 64. σὺ εἶπας: in current phrase=I am. Was Jesus morally bound to answer? Why not continue silent? First, the whole ministry of Jesus had made the question inevitable. Second, the high priest was the proper person to ask it. Third, it was an important opportunity for giving expression to His Messianic self-consciousness. Fourth, silence would, in the circumstances, have amounted to denial.—πλὴν not="nevertheless," but rather=may more: I have something more startling to tell you. What follows describes the future of the Son of Man in apocalyptic terms, and is meant to suggest the thought: "the time is coming when you and I shall change places; I then the Judge, you the prisoners at the bar".

Vv. 65-68. τότε: At last they have, or think they have, Him at their mercy.—διέρρηξεν, etc.: a very imposing act as the expression of true emotion; in reality a theatrical action demanded by custom and performed in accordance with rule: length and locality of rent, the garments to be rent (the nether; all of them, even if there were ten, said the Rabbinical rule: note the plural here, τὰ ἱμάτια), all fixed. A common custom among Eastern peoples. It was highly proper that holy men should seem shocked immeasurably by "blasphemy".—ἐβλασφήμησεν: Was it blasphemy for a man to call Himself Messiah in a country where a messiah was expected? Obviously not. It might be to call oneself Messiah falsely. But that was a point for careful and deliberate examination, not to be taken for granted. The judgment of the high priest and the obsequious vote of the Sanhedrim were manifestly premature. But it does not follow from this that the evangelist's account of the trial is unhistorical (Brandt, p. 62). The Sanhedrists, as reported, behave no more.—Ver. 66. ἔνοχος θανάτου: death the penalty of blasphemy, Lev. xxiv. 15, and of being a false prophet, Deut. xviii. 20.—Vv. 67-68: to judicial injustice succeed personal indignities: spitting in the face (ἐπέτυσαν), smiting with the fist (ἐκολάφισαν, not Attic, κονδυλίξω used instead), or with the open hand (ἐρράπισαν, originally to beat with rods). Euthy. Zig. dist. nguishes the two last words thus: κολαφισμός is a stroke on the neck with the hollow of the hand so as to make a noise, ραπισμός a stroke on the face. The perpetrators of these outrages in Mk. are τινὲς and οἱ ὑπηρέται, the former word presumably pointing to some Sanhedrists. In Mt. the connection suggests Sanhedrists alone. Incredible that they should condescend to so unworthy proceedings, one is inclined to say. Yet it was night, there was intense dislike and they might feel

69. Ὁ δὲ Πέτρος ἔξω ἐκάθητο<sup>1</sup> ἐν τῇ αὐλῇ, καὶ προσῆλθεν αὐτῷ μία<sup>1</sup> παιδίσκη, λέγουσα, “Καὶ σὺ ἦσθα μετὰ Ἰησοῦ τοῦ Γαλιλαίου.” j parall. Lk.
 70. Ὁ δὲ ἠρνήσατο ἔμπροσθεν πάντων, λέγων, “Οὐκ οἶδα τί λέγεις.” Acts xii.
 71. Ἐξεληθόντα δὲ αὐτὸν<sup>2</sup> εἰς τὸν<sup>2</sup> κ<sup>2</sup> πυλῶνα, εἶδεν αὐτὸν ἄλλη, καὶ λέγει τοῖς ἐκεῖ, “Καὶ<sup>2</sup> οὗτος ἦν μετὰ Ἰησοῦ τοῦ Ναζωραίου.” k Lk. xvi. 20.
 72. Καὶ πάλιν ἠρνήσατο<sup>2</sup> μεθ’ ὄρκου, “Ὅτι οὐκ οἶδα τὸν ἄνθρωπον.” i Acts x. 17;
 73. Μετὰ μικρὸν δὲ προσελθόντες οἱ ἐστῶτες εἶπον τῷ Πέτρῳ, xiv. 13.
 “Ἄληθῶς καὶ σὺ ἔξ αὐτῶν εἶ· καὶ γὰρ ἡ<sup>3</sup> λαλιά σου ἀδήλόν σε<sup>3</sup> ποιεῖ.” 74. Τότε ἤρξατο καταναθεματίζειν<sup>4</sup> καὶ ὀμνύειν, “Ὅτι οὐκ οἶδα τὸν ἄνθρωπον.” Καὶ εὐθέως ἀλέκτωρ ἐφώνησε. 75. καὶ ἐμνήσθη ὁ Πέτρος τοῦ ῥήματος τοῦ<sup>5</sup> Ἰησοῦ εἰρηκότος αὐτῷ,<sup>5</sup> “Ὅτι πρὶν ἀλέκτορα φωνῆσαι, τρίς ἀπαρνήσῃ με.” καὶ ἐξεληθὼν ἔξω<sup>6</sup> ἔκλαυσε πικρῶς. o Ch. ii. 18.
 Mk. v. 38,
 39. Lk. vi.
 21, 25.

<sup>1</sup> ἐκαθητο ἔξω in  $\aleph$ BDLZ.<sup>2</sup>  $\aleph$ B LZ omit this αὐτον.<sup>3</sup>  $\aleph$ BD omit καὶ before οὗτος.<sup>4</sup> The mass of uncials have καταθεματίζειν.<sup>5</sup> The article is wanting in most uncials.<sup>6</sup>  $\aleph$ BDL omit αὐτω.

they did God service by disgracing a pretender. Hence the invitation to the would-be christ to prophesy (προφήτευσον) who smote him when he was struck behind the back or blindfolded (Mk. xiv. 65). Thus did they fill up the early hours of the morning on that miserable night. Sceptical critics, e.g., Brandt, p. 69, also Holtz., H. C., suggest that the colouring of this passage is drawn from O. T. texts, such as Micah iv. 14 (Sept. v. 1, A. V.), Is. l. 6, liii. 3-5, 1 Kings xxii. 24, and that probably the texts created the “facts”. That of course is abstractly possible, but the statement of the evangelist is intrinsically probable, and it is to be noted that not even in Mt. is there a “that it might be fulfilled”.

Vv. 69-75. Peter's denial (Mk. xiv. 66-72, Lk. xxii. 54-62). The discrepancies of the four accounts here are perplexing but not surprising. It would be difficult for any one present in the confused throng gathered within the palace gate that night to tell exactly what happened. Peter himself, the hero of the tale, had probably only hazy recollections of some particulars, and might not always relate the incident in the same way. Harmonistic efforts are wasted time. Comparative exegesis may partly explain how one narrative, say Mt.'s, arose out of another, e.g., Mk.'s (Weiss, Marcus-Evang.). But on the whole it is best to take each version by itself, as one way of telling a story, which in the main is accepted even by writers like Brandt as one of the certainties of the Passion history.

Ver. 69. ὁ δὲ Π. : δὲ resumes the Peter-episode introduced at ver. 58.—ἐκάθητο, was sitting, while the judicial proceedings were going on.—αὐλῇ, here means the court, atrium; the trial would take place in a chamber within the buildings surrounding the court.—μία π., one servant girl, to distinguish from another referred to in ver. 71 (ἄλλη).—καὶ σὺ, you too, as if she had seen Jesus in company with His disciples, Peter one of them, recognisable again, perhaps during the last few days.—Γαλιλαίου: He a Galilean; you, too, by your tongue.—Ver. 70. οὐκ οἶδα, etc.: affectation of extreme ignorance. So far from knowing the man I don't even know what you are talking about. This said before all (ἔμπ. πάντων). First denial, entailing others to follow.—Ver. 71. εἰς τ. πυλῶνα, to or towards the gateway, away from the crowd in the court.—ἄλλη (παιδίσκη), another saw him, and said, not to him, but to others there (not easy to escape!).—οὗτος, etc., this person, pointing to him, was, etc.—Ver. 72. μεθ’ ὄρκου: second denial, more emphatic, with an oath, and more direct; I know not the man (τὸν ἄν.).—Ver. 73. οἱ ἐστῶτες, loungers; seeing Peter's confusion, and amusing themselves by tormenting him.—ἄληθῶς, beyond doubt, you, too, are one of them; of the notorious gang.—ἡ λαλιά: They had

XXVII. 1. ΠΡΩΙΑΣ δὲ γενομένης, συμβούλιον ἔλαβον πάντες οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ πρεσβύτεροι τοῦ λαοῦ κατὰ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, ὥστε θανατῶσαι αὐτόν· 2. καὶ δῆσαντες αὐτὸν ἀπήγαγον, καὶ παρέδωκαν αὐτὸν Ποντίῳ<sup>1</sup> Πιλάτῳ τῷ ἡγεμόνι.

3. Τότε ἰδὼν Ἰούδας ὁ παραδιδούς<sup>2</sup> αὐτόν, ὅτι κατεκρίθη, μεταμεληθεὶς ἀπέστρεψε<sup>3</sup> τὰ τριάκοντα ἀργύρια τοῖς ἀρχιερεῦσι καὶ heard him speak in his second denial, which so leads up to a third. Galilean speech was defective in pronouncing the gutturals, and making  $\Psi = \Pi$ .—Ver. 74. καταθεματίζειν (here only, καταθεθ. in T. R., probably belonging to vulgar speech, Meyer), to call down curses on himself, sign of irritation and desperation; has lost self-control completely.—καὶ εὐθύς: just after this passionate outburst a cock crew.—"Magna circumstantia," Beng.—Ver. 75. καὶ ἐμνήσθη: The cock crowing caused a sudden revulsion of feeling, and flashed in on Peter's mind the light of a vivid recollection: the word his Master had spoken.—πριν, etc., repeated as in ver. 34.—ἐξελθὼν, going out, neither in fear of apprehension (Chrys., Euthy.) nor from shame (Orig., Jer.), but that he might give free rein to penitent feeling.—ἐκλαυσεν, wept loudly, as distinct from δακρύειν (John xi. 35), to shed tears.

<sup>1</sup> αὐτον Ποντιω omitted in  $\aleph$ BL $\Sigma$ ; C omits αὐτον. The words are an explanatory gloss.

<sup>2</sup> παραδους in BL 33.

<sup>3</sup> εστρεψε in  $\aleph$ BL (Tisch., W.H., Ws.).

CHAPTER XXVII. THE PASSION HISTORY CONTINUED.—Vv. 1, 2. Morning meeting of the Sanhedrim (Mk. xv. 1, Lk. xxii. 66, xxiii. 1).—Ver. 1. συμβούλιον ἔλαβον: this consultation took place at a meeting of Sanhedrim, which was probably only a continuation of the night meeting, though regarded as formally a second meeting, to keep right with the law which humanely required, at least, two sittings in a grave criminal case; the Sanhedrists in this, as in all things, careful to observe the letter, while sinning against the spirit of the law. Those who were present at the night meeting would scarcely have time to go home, as the hearing of many witnesses (xxvi. 59) would take hours. Absent members might be summoned to the morning meeting (Elsner), or might come, knowing that they were expected.—πάντες points to a full meeting, as does also τοῦ λαοῦ after πρεσβύτεροι. The meeting was supremely important, though in one respect pro forma. The law or custom required a death sentence to be pronounced during day-time. Therefore, the vote of the night meeting had to be formally confirmed. Then they had to consider in what shape the case was to be put so as to ensure the consent of Pilate to the execution of their sentence; a most vital matter.—ὥστε θανατῶσαι αὐτόν, so that they might compass His death; the phrase seems meant to cover both aspects of the business on hand: the formal sentence of death, and the adoption of means for securing that it might be carried into effect.—ὥστε, with infinitive, here expresses tendency: that He should die, the drift of all done. The result as yet remained uncertain.—Ver. 2. δῆσαντες: no mention of binding before in Mt.'s narrative. If Jesus was bound at His apprehension the fetters must have been taken off during the trial.—ἀπήγαγον, etc., they led Him away and delivered Him to Pontius Pilate. No mention at this point what they had resolved to say to Pilate. That comes out in Pilate's questioning. Pilate was a very undesirable judge to come to with such a cause a poor representative of Roman authority; as described by Philo. and Josephus, as destitute of fear of God or respect for justice, as the unjust judge of the parable; but, like him, accessible on the side of self-interest, as, no doubt, the Sanhedrists knew very well.—τῷ ἡγεμόνι, the governor; a general title for one exercising supreme authority as representing the emperor. The more specific title was ἐπίτροπος, procurator. The ordinary residence of procurators was Caesarea, on the sea coast, but it was their custom to be in Jerusalem at passover time, with a detachment of soldiers, to watch over the public peace.

Vv. 3-10. The despair of Judas.—Peculiar to Matthew; interesting to the evangelist as a testimony even from the

τοῖς<sup>1</sup> πρεσβυτέροις, 4. λέγων, “Ἡμαρτον παραδοὺς αἷμα ἄθῶον.”<sup>a</sup> a here and Οἱ δὲ εἶπον, “Τί πρὸς ἡμᾶς; σὺ ὄψει.”<sup>2</sup> 5. Καὶ ρίψας τὰ ἀργύρια <sup>in ver. 24.</sup> ἐν τῷ ναῷ,<sup>3</sup> ἀνεχώρησε· καὶ ἀπελθὼν<sup>b</sup> ἀπήγξατο. 6. Οἱ δὲ ἀρχιερεῖς <sup>b here only in N. T.</sup> λαβόντες τὰ ἀργύρια εἶπον, “Οὐκ ἔξεστι βαλεῖν αὐτὰ εἰς τὸν <sup>(Tobit iii.
10).</sup>
 ἴσθμον, ἐπεὶ<sup>d</sup> τιμὴ αἱματός ἐστι.” 7. Συμβούλιον δὲ λαβόντες, <sup>c here only.
d here, ver.
9. Acts
iv. 34. 1
Cor. vi. 20
al.</sup>
 ἠγόρασαν ἐξ αὐτῶν τὸν ἀγρὸν τοῦ ἑραμῆως, εἰς ἑταφὴν τοῖς ξένοις.
 8. διὸ ἐκλήθη ὁ ἀγρὸς ἐκεῖνος ἀγρὸς αἱματος, ἕως τῆς σήμερον.
 9. τότε ἐπληρώθη τὸ ῥηθὲν διὰ Ἱερεμίου τοῦ προφήτου, λέγοντος, <sup>e
Rom. ix.
21.</sup>
 “Καὶ ἔλαβον τὰ τριάκοντα ἀργύρια, τὴν τιμὴν τοῦ τετιμημένου, ὃν <sup>f here only.
21.</sup>
 ἐτιμήσαντο ἀπὸ υἴων Ἰσραὴλ· 10. καὶ ἔδωκαν αὐτὰ εἰς τὸν ἀγρὸν τοῦ ἑραμῆως, καθὰ συνέταξέ μοι Κύριος.”

<sup>1</sup> NBCL 33 omit τοῖς.

<sup>2</sup> ὄψη in the most important uncials.

<sup>3</sup> εἰς τον ναον in NBL 33, 69 al. (Tisch., W.H., Ws.).

false disciple to the innocence of Jesus, and the wickedness of His enemies, and as a curious instance of prophecy fulfilled.—Ver. 3. τότε connects the repentance of Judas with the leading of Jesus away to Pilate which he regarded as sealing his fate. What happened was but the natural result of the apprehension which he himself had brought about, and he doubtless had the natural issue in view at the moment of apprehension. But reaction had set in, partly as a matter of course in a “two-souled” man, partly at sight of the grim reality: his Master led to death by his assistance (ὅτι κατεκρίθη).—μεταμεληθεὶς, regretting, rueing what he had done: wishing it were undone.—ἀπέστρεψε (ἐστρεψε W.H. as in Is. xxxviii. 8), returned the thirty pieces of silver, a sign in such a nature that the repentance as far as it went was very real.—Ver. 4. ἡμαρτον, I sinned, I did wrong.—παραδοὺς α. ἄ. explains how. The sinning and the betraying are one, therefore the participle does not point to an act antecedent to that of the main verb.—αἷμα ἄθῶον, innocent blood, for the blood of an innocent person. So in Deut. xxvii. 25. Palaiet cites examples to prove that Greek writers used αἷμα as = ἀθροπος.—τί πρὸς ἡμᾶς: that is not our concern.—σὺ ὄψει, look thou to that = “tu videris,” a Latinism. The sentiment itself a Cainism. “Ad modum Caini loquuntur vera progenies Caini” (Grotius).—Ver. 5. εἰς τὸν ναόν: not in that part of the temple where the Sanhedrim met (Grotius), or in the temple at large, in a place accessible to laymen (Fritzsche, Bleek), or near the temple (Kypke), but in the holy place itself (Meyer, Weiss, Schanz, Carr, Morison); the act of a desperate man determined they should get the money, and perhaps hoping it might be a kind of atonement for his sin.—ἀπήγξατο, strangled himself; usually reconciled with Acts i. 18 by the supposition that the rope broke. The suggestion of Grotius that the verb points to death from grief (“non laqueo sed moestitiâ”) has met with little favour.—Ver. 6. κορβανᾶν, the treasury, referred to by this name by Joseph. (B. J. ii. 9, 4).—τιμὴ αἱματός ἐστι: exclusion of blood money from the treasury, an extension of the law against the wages of harlotry (Deut. xxiii. 18).—Ver. 7. τὸν ἀγρὸν τ. ἑραμῆως, the field of the potter. The smallness of the price has suggested to some (Grotius, e.g.) that it was a field for potter’s clay got cheap because worked out. But in that case it would naturally be called the field of the potters.—ξένοις most take as referring to Jews from other lands dying at Jerusalem at passover time.—Ver. 8. ἀγρὸς αἱματος = aceldama, Acts i. 18, name otherwise explained there.—ἕως τῆς σήμερον: phrase frequent in O. T. history; sign of late date of Gospel, thinks De Wette.

Vv. 9, 10. Prophetic reference, τότε, as in ii. 17, not ἴνα or ὅπως.—διὰ Ἱερεμίου, by Jeremiah, in reality by Zechariah (xi. 13), the reference to Jeremiah probably due to there being somewhat similar texts in that prophet (xviii. 2, 3, xxxii. 6-15) running in the evangelist’s mind. A petty error. More serious is the question whether this is not a case of prophecy creating “facts,” whether the whole story here told is not a legend growing out of the O. T. text quoted. So Brandt, who thinks the betrayal the only fact in the story of Judas, all the rest legendary (E. G., p. 11). The truth rather seems to be that facts, historical traditions, suggested texts which otherwise would never have been thought of. This may be inferred from the manipulation necessary to make the prophecy correspond to the facts: ἔλαβον, 1st person singular in Sept., 3rd person plural here = they took; the expression “the children of Israel” introduced with apparent intention to make the nation responsible for the betrayal; the substitution of the phrase “the field of the potter” for “the house of the Lord”. And after all the manipulation how different the circumstances in the two cases! In the one case it is the prophet himself, valued at a petty sum, who cast his price into the House of the Lord; in the other, it is the priests, who bought the life of the prophet of Nazareth for a small sum, who give the money for a potter’s field. The only real point of resemblance is the small value set upon a prophet in either case. It is a most unsatisfactory instance of prophetic fulfilment, almost as much so as that in Mt. ii. 23. But its very unsatisfactoriness makes for the historicity of the story. That the prophetic text, once associated with the story in the minds of believers, reacted on the manner of telling it, e.g., as to the weighing of the price (xxvi. 15), and the casting of the money into the holy place (xxvii. 5), is conceivable.

11. Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς ἔσθη<sup>1</sup> ἔμπροσθεν τοῦ ἡγεμόνος· καὶ ἐπηρώτησε αὐτὸν ὁ ἡγεμὼν, λέγων, “Σὺ εἶ ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων;” Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς ἔφη αὐτῷ,<sup>2</sup> “Σὺ λέγεις.” 12. Καὶ ἐν τῷ κατηγορεῖσθαι αὐτὸν ὑπὸ τῶν ἀρχιερέων καὶ τῶν πρεσβυτέρων, οὐδὲν ἀπεκρίνατο. 13. τότε λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Πιλάτος, “Οὐκ ἀκούεις πόσα σοῦ καταμαρτυροῦσι;” 14. Καὶ οὐκ ἀπεκρίθη αὐτῷ πρὸς οὐδὲ ἐν ῥῆμα, ὥστε θαυμάζειν τὸν ἡγεμόνα λίαν.

<sup>1</sup> ἘBCLE have εσταθη, for which the scribes substituted the more usual εσθη.

<sup>2</sup> αὐτῷ has the support of ABXΔΣ, but Tisch. and W.H. (in text) on the authority of ἘL omit it.

Vv. 11-26. Jesus before Pilate (Mk. xv. 2-15, Lk. xxiii. 2-7, 13-25).—Ver. 11. Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς: δὲ resumes an interrupted story (ver. 2).—σὺ εἶ, etc.: Art Thou the King of the Jews? The question reveals the form in which the Sanhedrists presented their accusation. They had translated “Christ” into “King of the Jews” for Pilate’s benefit, so astutely giving a political aspect to what under the other name was only a question of religion, or, as a Roman would view it, superstition. A most unprincipled proceeding, for the confession of Jesus that He was the Christ no more inferred a political animus than their own Messianic expectations.—σὺ λέγεις = yes. One is hardly prepared for such a reply to an equivocal question, and there is a temptation to seek escape by taking the words interrogatively = dost thou say so? or evasively, with Theophy. = you say, I make no statement. Explanations such as are given in John xviii. 33-37 were certainly necessary.—Ver. 12. The accusations here referred to appear to have been made on the back of Pilate’s first question and Christ’s answer. Mark indicates that they were copious. In Luke the charge is formulated before Pilate begins to interrogate (xxiii. 2). The purpose of their statements would be to substantiate the main charge that Jesus claimed to be King of the Jews in a sense hostile to Roman supremacy. What were the materials of proof? Possibly perverse construction of the healing ministry, of the consequent popularity, of Christ’s brusquely independent attitude towards Rabbinism, suggesting a defiant spirit generally.—οὐδὲν ἀπεκρίνατο (note use of 1st aorist middle instead of the more usual ἀπεκρίθη). Jesus made no reply to these plausible mendacities, defence vain in such a case.—Ver. 13. Pilate noting His silence directs His attention to what they have been saying.—Ver. 14. καὶ οὐκ ἀπεκρίθη: still no reply, though no disrespect to the governor intended.—ὥστε θαυμάζειν, etc., the governor was very much (λίαν, at the end, emphatic) astonished: at the silence, and at the man; the silence attracting

15. Κατὰ δὲ ἑορτὴν <sup>ε</sup>εἰώθει ὁ ἡγεμὼν <sup>β</sup>ἀπολύειν ἓνα τῷ ὄχλῳ <sup>γ</sup> Mk. x. 1.
<sup>δ</sup>δέσμιον, ὃν ᾔθελον. 16. εἶχον δὲ τότε δέσμιον <sup>δ</sup>ἐπίσημον, λεγόμενον Lk. iv. 16.
 Βαραββᾶν. 17. συνηγμένων οὖν αὐτῶν, εἶπεν αὐτοῖς ὁ Πιλάτος, <sup>ε</sup>Acts xvii.
 “Τίνα θέλετε ἀπολύσω ὑμῖν; Βαραββᾶν, ἢ Ἰησοῦν τὸν λεγόμενον <sup>ζ</sup>Acts iii. 13.
 Χριστόν;” 18. ᾔδει γὰρ ὅτι <sup>κ</sup>διὰ <sup>κ</sup>φθόνον παρέδωκαν αὐτόν. <sup>ι</sup> here and
 19. Καθημένου δὲ αὐτοῦ ἐπὶ τοῦ βήματος, ἀπέστειλε πρὸς αὐτὸν ἢ in Mk. xv.
 γυνὴ αὐτοῦ, λέγουσα, “Μηδὲν σοι καὶ τῷ δικαίῳ ἐκείνῳ· πολλὰ <sup>κ</sup>6 in Gosp.
 γὰρ ἔπαθον σήμερον κατ’ ὄναρ δι’ αὐτόν.” 20. Οἱ δὲ ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ Acts xvi.
 οἱ πρεσβύτεροι ἔπεισαν τοὺς ὄχλους, ἵνα αἰτήσωνται τὸν Βαραββᾶν, <sup>λ</sup>25, 27.
<sup>μ</sup>Ep. iii. 1
<sup>ν</sup>al.
<sup>ξ</sup>Rom. xvi. 7
 (in a good sense).
<sup>ο</sup>Phil. i. 15.

attention to the Silent One.—A new type of Jew this. The result of his observation is a favourable impression; how could it be otherwise? Pilate was evidently not alarmed by the charge brought against Jesus. Why? Apparently at first glance he saw that the man before him was not likely to be a pretender to royalty in any sense that he need trouble himself about. The σὺ in an emphatic position in ver. 11 suggests this = You the King of the Jews! Then there was nothing to bear out the pretension: no position, prestige, wealth, following; no troops, etc. (Grotius).

Vv. 15-18. Appeal to the people.—Pilate, not inexperienced in Jewish affairs, nor without insight into the ways of the ruling class, suspects that there are two sides to this matter. The very accusation suggests that the accused may be innocently popular, and the accusers jealous. An existing custom gives the opportunity of putting this to the test.—Ver. 15. κατὰ ἑορτὴν, at least time (singulis festis, Hermann, Viger, p. 633), not all feasts, but the passover meant.—εἰώθει, was accustomed; time and circumstances of the origin of this custom unknown; a custom likely to arise sooner or later, as it symbolised the nature of the passover as a passing over (Weiss-Meyer), and helped to make the governor's presence at that season wear a gracious aspect; on that account probably originating under the Romans.—Ver. 16. εἶχον: they, the people (ὄχλω, ver 15).—ἐπίσημον: pointing not to the magnitude of his crime, but to the fact that for some reason or other he was an object of popular interest.—Βαραββᾶν, accusative of Βαραββᾶς = son of a father, or with double ρ, and retaining the ν at the end, Bar-Rabban = son of a Rabbi. Jerome in his Commentary on Mt. mentions that in the Hebrew Gospel the word was interpreted filii magistri eorum. Origen mentions that in some

MSS. this man bore the name Jesus, an identity of name which makes the contrast of character all the more striking. But the reading has little authority.—Ver. 17. τίνα θέλετε ἀπολύσω. Here Pilate seems to take the initiative; in Mk. he is first reminded of the custom (xv. 8). Mk.'s whole account is fuller and clearer.—Βαρ. ἢ Ἰησ. The two names put before the people, as presumably both popular more or less, Barabbas for some unknown reason, Jesus by inference from being called “Christ”. No favouritism implied. Pilate is feeling his way, wants to do the popular thing as safest for himself.—Ver. 18. ᾔδει, he knew, perhaps too strong a word, the fact being that he shrewdly suspected—knew his men, and instinctively divined that if Jesus was a popular favourite the Pharisees would be jealous. This explains his sang froid in reference to the title “King of the Jews,” also his offering the name of Jesus to the people.

Vv. 19-20. Interlude of Pilate's wife, in Mt. alone, probably introduced to explain the bias of Pilate in favour of Jesus apparent in the sequel (Weiss-Meyer).—Ver. 19. μηδὲν, etc., nothing to thee and that just one = have nothing to do with proceedings against Him.—πολλὰ γὰρ: reason for the advice, an unpleasant dream in the morning (σήμερον, to-day, early). The historicity of this incident is of course doubted, the use made of it, with embellishments, in apocryphal writings (Acta Pilati) being pressed into the service. But it is quite credible nevertheless. First, the wife of Pilate might be there, for it had become customary for wives to accompany provincial governors. Tacitus, Ann. iii. 33, 34, mentions an unsuccessful attempt in the senate to put down the practice. Second, she had a husband that much needed good advice, and would often get it from a good wife. Third, it was a womanly act.

τὸν δὲ Ἰησοῦν ἀπολέσωσιν. 21. ἀποκριθεὶς δὲ ὁ ἡγεμὼν εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Τίνα θέλετε ἀπὸ τῶν δύο ἀπολύσω ὑμῖν;” Οἱ δὲ εἶπον, “Βαραββᾶν.”<sup>1</sup> 22. Λέγει αὐτοῖς ὁ Πιλάτος, “Τί οὖν ποιήσω Ἰησοῦν τὸν λεγόμενον Χριστόν;” Λέγουσιν αὐτῷ<sup>2</sup> πάντες, “Σταυρωθήτω.”

<sup>1</sup> Mk. x. 26; 23. Ὁ δὲ ἡγεμὼν<sup>8</sup> ἔφη, “Τί γὰρ κακὸν ἐποίησεν;” Οἱ δὲ<sup>1</sup> περισσῶς ἔκραζον, λέγοντες, “Σταυρωθήτω.” 24. Ἴδων δὲ ὁ Πιλάτος, <sup>xxvi. 11.</sup> ὅτι οὐδὲν ὠφελεῖ, ἀλλὰ μᾶλλον θόρυβος γίνεται, λαβὼν ὕδωρ, <sup>m here only.</sup> ἀπένιψατο τὰς χεῖρας ἀπέναντι<sup>4</sup> τοῦ ὄχλου, λέγων, “Ἀθῶός εἰμι ἀπὸ τοῦ αἵματος τοῦ δικαίου<sup>5</sup> τούτου· ὑμεῖς ὄψεσθε.” 25. Καὶ ἀποκριθεὶς πᾶς ὁ λαὸς εἶπε, “Τὸ αἷμα αὐτοῦ ἐφ’ ἡμᾶς καὶ ἐπὶ τὰ τέκνα ἡμῶν.”

<sup>n here and in Mk. xv. 15.</sup> 26. Τότε ἀπέλυσεν αὐτοῖς τὸν Βαραββᾶν· τὸν δὲ Ἰησοῦν<sup>3</sup> φραγελλώσας παρέδωκεν ἵνα σταυρωθῇ.

<sup>1</sup> τον before Βαρ. in NBL I, 33.

<sup>2</sup> αὐτῷ omitted in NABDΔΣ.

<sup>8</sup> NB 33, 69 omit ηγεμων.

<sup>4</sup> κατεναντι in BD (W.H. in text bracketed). NLDΣ have απεναντι (Tisch.).

<sup>5</sup> BD omit του δικαίου, which probably has crept in from ver. 19.

Vv. 20-26. Result of the appeal to the people.—Ver. 20. οἱ δὲ ἀρχ., etc.: the Sanhedrists saw the danger, and set themselves to bias the popular judgment, not sure what might otherwise happen—with success, ἐπέισαν. So when, after due interval, the governor put the question, the reply was (ver. 21) τὸν Βαραββᾶν, and to the further question what then was to be done with Jesus: the unanimous (πάντες) reply was Σταυρωθήτω. Where were the men who had a few days ago shouted Hosanna? If there, how fickle; if absent, why? Or were they silent, cowed by the prevailing mood?—Ver. 23. τί γὰρ κακὸν: elliptical, implying unwillingness to carry out the popular will. (Fritzsche, Grotius.) Some, Palairot, Raphel, etc., take γὰρ as redundant.—περισσῶς ἔκραζον, they kept crying out more loudly. Cf. Mk., where the force of περισσῶς comes out more distinctly.—Ver. 24. ὅτι οὐδὲν ὠφελεῖ, that it was no use, but rather only provoked a more savage demand, as is the way of mobs.—λαβὼν ὕδωρ, etc.: washed his hands, following a Jewish custom, the meaning of which all present fully understood, accompanying the action with verbal protestations of innocence. This also, with the grim reply of the people (ver. 25), peculiar to Mt.; a “traditional addition” (Weiss).—Ver. 26. τότε ἀπέλυσεν: Pilate, lacking the passion for justice, judges not according to the merits but according to policy. When he discovered that Jesus was not a popular favourite, in fact had no friends, he had no more interest in Him, but acted as the people wished, loosing Barabbas and delivering Jesus to be crucified, after having first subjected Him to scourging (φραγελλώσας = flagello, a Latinism probably borrowed from Mk.). Such was the barbarous practice of the Romans. It is alluded to by Josephus (B. J., v. 11, 1) in these terms: μαστιγούμενοι δὴ καὶ προβασανιζόμενοι τοῦ θανάτου πᾶσαν αἰκίαν ἀνεσταυροῦντο τοῦ τείχους ἀντικρῦ. Brandt thinks that the alleged custom of releasing a prisoner had no existence, and that the story in the Gospels arose out of an occurrence at a later time, the release of a prisoner the son of a Rabbi concerned in a tumult. The Christians said: they release the son of the Scribe and they crucified our Jesus, and at last the incident was read back into the story of the Passion (E. G., pp. 94-105).

Vv. 27-31. Jesus the sport of the soldiery (Mk. xv. 16-20).—Ver. 27. τότε: when Jesus had been sentenced to crucifixion.—οἱ στρατιῶται τ. ἡ., the soldiers of the governor, i.e., his bodyguard.—παραλαβόντες, etc.: they conducted Jesus from the scene of judgment (without) to the πραιτώριον, i.e., the official residence of the procurator, either Herod's palace, or more probably a palace connected with the fort Antonia, with barracks attached. The word has various meanings: a general's tent, a governor's residence, the barracks of the Praetorian

27. ΤΟΤΕ οἱ στρατιῶται τοῦ ἡγεμόνος, παραλαβόντες τὸν Ἰησοῦν εἰς τὸ °πραιτώριον, συνήγαγον ἐπ' αὐτὸν ὄλην τὴν σπείραν· 28. καὶ ο Mk. xv. ἐκδύσαντες<sup>1</sup> αὐτόν, περιέθηκαν αὐτῷ χλαμύδα κοκκίνην<sup>2</sup>. 29. καὶ xviii 28-33: xix. 9. Acts xxiii. 35. Phil. i. 13. πλέξαντες στέφανον ἐξ ἀκανθῶν, ἐπέθηκαν ἐπὶ τὴν κεφαλὴν<sup>3</sup> αὐτοῦ, καὶ κάλαμον ἐπὶ τὴν δεξιάν<sup>4</sup> αὐτοῦ· καὶ γονυπετήσαντες ἔμπροσθεν αὐτοῦ, ἐνέπαιζον<sup>5</sup> αὐτῷ, λέγοντες, “Χαῖρε, ὁ βασιλεὺς<sup>6</sup> τῶν Ἰουδαίων.” 30. καὶ ἐμπτύσαντες εἰς αὐτόν, ἔλαβον τὸν κάλαμον, καὶ ἔτυπον εἰς τὴν κεφαλὴν αὐτοῦ. 31. Καὶ ὅτε ἐνέπαιζαν αὐτῷ, ἐξέδυσαν αὐτὸν τὴν χλαμύδα, καὶ ἐνέδυσαν αὐτὸν τὰ ἱμάτια αὐτοῦ· καὶ ἀπήγαγον αὐτὸν εἰς τὸ σταυρῶσαι. 32. Ἐξερχόμενοι δὲ εὗρον

<sup>1</sup> BD and some old Latin codd. have ενδυσαντες, which Weiss thinks has been changed into εκ. from not being understood. Vide below.

<sup>2</sup> χλαμυδα κοκκινην before περιεθηκαν in ℣BDL 69 al. (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> ἐπι της κεφαλης in ℣BL 69.

<sup>4</sup> εν τη δεξια in ℣ABDLΣ I, 33, 69 al.

<sup>5</sup> ενεπαιζαν in ℣BDL 33.

<sup>6</sup> BDA have βασιλευ (W.H. in brackets, ο βασι. in margin).

guard, the Praetorian guard itself.—συνήγαγον, etc.: gathered about Him (for sport) the whole σπείραν, at most a cohort of 600, more probably a maniple of 200. (“σπείρα, anything twisted round like a ball of thread, is a translation of ‘manipulus’; a wisp of hay.” Carr in Cam. N. T., ad loc.) A large number to assemble for such a purpose, but Roman soldiers at passover time would always be on the alert for serious work or sport, and here was no ordinary chance of both, a man sentenced to be crucified who passed for King of the Jews. What more natural than to make sport of Him, and through Him to show their contempt for the Jewish people? (Holtzmann, H.C.).—Ver. 28. ἐκδύσαντες (or ἐνδ.) a.: taking off (or putting on) His clothes. If we adopt the former reading, the implied situation will be this: Jesus first stripped for scourging, then re clothed; then stripped again at the commencement of the mocking process. If the latter, this: Jesus after scourging led naked to the praetorium, then clothed, all but His upper garment, instead of which they put on χλαμύδα κ. (Meyer).—χλαμ. κοκκίνην, a scarlet cloak, probably a soldier’s sagum. Carr renders a soldier’s scarf, and suggests that it may have been a worn-out scarf of Pilate’s (Herod’s, Elsner). The ridicule would be more lifelike if it was really a fine article that might be, or had been, worn by a potentate.—πλέξαντες στ. ἐξ ἀ., weaving out of thorns a crown;

not, say Meyer and Weiss, hard and sharp, so as to cause great pain, but young, flexible, easily plaited, the aim being to ridicule not to inflict torture. Possibly, but the soldiers would not make a point of avoiding giving pain. They would take what came first to hand.—κάλαμον, a reed; apparently under the gov. of ἐπέθηκαν, but really the object of ἔθηκαν, understood.—γονυπετήσαντες: after the investiture comes the homage, by lowly gesture and worshipful salutation: χαῖρε βασιλεῦ τ. ἰ. Hail, King of the Jews. A mockery of the nation in intention quite as much as of the particular victim. Loesner (Observ. ad N. T.) adduces from Philo. (in Flaccum, 6) a historic parallel, in which the youth of Alexandria treat similarly a half-witted person, Karabas, the real design being to insult Herod Agrippa. Schanz and Holtzmann also refer to this incident.—Ver. 30. At this point rough sport turns into brutal treatment, as the moment for execution of the sentence approaches.—ἐμπτύσαντες: spitting, substituted for kissing, the final act of homage, followed by striking with the mock sceptre (ἔτυπον ε. τ. κ.).—Ver. 31. ἐξέδυσαν, etc.: they took off the mock royal robe, and put on again His own garments (τὰ ἱμάτια, the upper garments, but why the plural?). No mention of the crown; left on according to some of the ancients, Origen, e.g.: “semel imposita et nunquam detracta”; and, according to the same Father, con

Γ Ch v 41 ἄνθρωπον Κυρηναῖον, ὀνόματι Σίμωνα· τοῦτον ἠγγάρευσαν ἵνα ἄρῃ
 q John iv. τὸν σταυρὸν αὐτοῦ.
 7-10.
 Γ Acts viii. 33. ΚΑΙ ἔλθόντες εἰς τόπον λεγόμενον Γολγοθᾶ, ὅς<sup>1</sup> ἐστὶ λεγόμενος 23.
 2 I k xiii. 1 κρανίου τόπος,<sup>2</sup> 34. ἔδωκαν αὐτῷ<sup>3</sup> πικρὸν ὄξος<sup>3</sup> μετὰ<sup>4</sup> χολῆς
 (same const.). ἠμεμιγμένον· καὶ γευσάμενος οὐκ ἠθέλε<sup>4</sup> πικρῖν. 35. Σταυρώσαντες

<sup>1</sup> ο in most uncials.

<sup>2</sup> κρανίου τοπος λεγομενος in NBL I, 33 al.

<sup>3</sup> οινον in NBDL (Tisch., W.H.). Weiss thinks it possible that οινος has come from Mk.

<sup>4</sup> ἠθέλησεν in NBDLΣ.

sumed by the head of Jesus ("consumpta a capite Jesu"). Taken off doubtless along with the rest, for there must be no mockery of Jesus or Jews before the public. Such proceedings only for the barracks (Holtz., H.C.).

Vv. 32-38. Crucifixion (Mk. xv. 21-27; Lk. xxiii. 26, 35-38).—This part of the story begins with the closing words of ver. 31: "they led Him away to be crucified".—Ver. 32. ἔξερχόμενοι: going out (of the city) according to later Roman custom, and in harmony also with Jewish usage (Num. xv. 35, 1 Kings xxi. 23, Acts vii. 58).—ἄνθρ. Κυρ.: a man of Cyrene, in Libya, presumably recognisable as a stranger, with whom liberties might be taken.—ἠγγάρευσαν, compelled; a military requisition. Cf. at chap. v. 41.—ἵνα ἄρῃ τ. σ. Jesus, carrying His cross according to the custom, has broken down under His burden; Gethsemane, betrayal, the ordeal of the past sleepless night, scourging, have made the flesh weak. No compassion for Him in finding a substitute; the cross must be carried, and the soldiers will not.—σταυρὸν: see on ver. 35.—Γολγοθᾶ: Weiss remarks on the double λεγόμενον—before the name, and in the following interpretation—and thinks it a sign that Mt. is copying from Mk. One wonders indeed why Mt., writing for Jews, should explain the word at all.—κρανίου τόπος, place of a skull ("Calvariae locus," Vulg., whence "Calvary" in Lk., A. V.), of skulls rather, say many interpreters; a place of execution, skulls lying all about (Jerome started this view). Recent interpreters (including Schanz) more naturally take the word as pointing to the shape of the hill. The locality is quite uncertain.

Ver. 34. οἶνον μετὰ χολῆς μ., wine mingled with gall. Mk. has ἔσμυρνωμένον οἶν., wine drugged with myrrh, a drink given by a merciful custom before execution to deaden the sense of pain.

The wine would be the sour wine or posca used by Roman soldiers. In Mk. Jesus declines the drink, apparently without tasting, desiring to suffer with clear mind. In Mt. He tastes (γευσάμενος) and then declines, apparently because unpalatable, suggesting a different motive in the offerers, not mercy but cruelty; maltreatment in the very drink offered. To this view of the proceeding is ascribed the μετὰ χολῆς of Mt.'s text, not without the joint influence of Ps. lxix. 22 (Meyer and Weiss). Harmonists strive to reconcile the two accounts by taking χολή as signifying in Hellenistic usage any bitter liquid (quamvis amaritium, Elsner), and therefore among other things myrrh. Prov. v. 4, Lament. iii. 15 (Sept.), in which χολή stands for worm-wood, ἡρῶλη, are cited in proof of this.

Against the idea that Mt.'s text has been altered from Mk.'s under the influence of Ps. lxix. 22, is the retention of οἶνος (ὄξος in Ps. and in T. R.) and the absence of any reference to the passage in the usual style—"that it might be fulfilled," etc.

Ver. 35. σταυρώσαντες (from σταυρόω, to drive stakes; in later Greek, and in N. T., to impale on a stake, σταυρός). All the evangelists touch lightly the fact of crucifixion, hurrying over the painful subject as quickly as possible; Mt., most of all, disposing of it in a participial clause. Many questions on which there has been much discussion suggest themselves, e.g., as to the structure and form of the cross: did it consist of an upright beam (palus, stipes) and a cross beam (patibulum, antenna), or of the former only, the hands being nailed to the beam above the head? (so Fulda, Das Kreuz und die Kreuzigung, 1878). Was Christ's cross a crux commissa (T) or a crux immissa (†)? Or is this distinction a purely imaginary one, as Fulda (p. 126) maintains against Justus Lipδὲ αὐτόν, ἑδιεμερίσαντο τὰ ἱμάτια αὐτοῦ, ἢ βάλλοντες <sup>1</sup> κλήρον· ἵνα t Lk. xi. 17, 18; xii. 52, 53; xxii. 17. Acta ii. 3, 45. u the phrase here and in parall. ver. 54. Ch. xxviii. 4. Acta xii. 5, 6 (same sense).

πληρωθῆ τὸ ῥήθην ὑπὸ τοῦ προφήτου, ἑδιεμερίσαντο τὰ ἱμάτιά μου ἑαυτοῖς, καὶ ἐπὶ τὸν ἱματισμόν μου ἔβαλον κλήρον.<sup>2</sup> 36. Καὶ καθήμενοι ἑτέηρουν αὐτὸν ἐκεῖ. 37. Καὶ ἐπέθηκαν ἐπάνω τῆς κεφαλῆς αὐτοῦ τὴν αἰτίαν αὐτοῦ γεγραμμένην, “Οὗτός ἐστιν Ἰησοῦς ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων.” 38. Τότε σταυροῦνται σὺν αὐτῷ δύο λησται, εἷς ἐκ δεξιῶν καὶ εἷς ἐξ εὐωνύμων.

w Mk. xv. 26. Acta xxv. 16, 27.

<sup>1</sup> βαλοντες in  $\aleph$ AD (W.H. in margin).

<sup>2</sup> From ἵνα πληρωθῆ to end of ver. 35 is omitted in  $\aleph$ ABDL $\Sigma$ . It has probably come in from John xix. 24.

sius, till Fulda the great authority on the subject of crucifixion? The work of the more recent writer should certainly be consulted before coming to a final decision on the form of the cross or the method of crucifixion. Another question is, what did Jesus carry to the place of execution: the upright post or the cross beam? (the latter according to Marquardt, Röm. Alter. vii. 1, 1). And how was His body fixed to the cross: were the feet, e.g., nailed as well as the hands, or only tied to the beam with a rope or with wands or left free? The passages cited from ancient authors bearing on the subject, Artemidorus, Plautus, Seneca, are diversely interpreted, and the practice does not seem to have been invariable. Crucifixion was at best a rude mode of executing justice, and, especially in time of war, seems to have been performed by soldiers in diverse fashions, according to their whim (ἄλλον ἄλλω σχήματι πρὸς χλεύην, Joseph., v. 11, 1; plates showing various forms in Fulda). Still there would be a normal mode, and in the case of Jesus, when only one or two were put to death, it would probably be followed. His cross has generally been supposed to have been a crux immissa, with the accusation on the point of the upright post above the cross beam, with a peg whereon to sit. Whether His feet were pierced with nails cannot be certainly determined. Paulus took the negative side in the interest of the hypothesis that Jesus did not really die on the cross; Meyer strongly maintains the contrary, vide ad loc. The fragment of the Gospel of Peter speaks of nails in the hands only: “then they drew the nails from the hands of the Lord”. Fulda takes the same view, representing the hands as nailed, the feet as tied to the beam.—τὰ ἱμάτια: the probability is that Jesus had been stript absolutely naked (γυμνοὶ σταυροῦνται, Artemid., Oneirocritica, ii. 58). On the dividing of the garments vide John xix. 23 f. The prophetic reference ἵνα πληρωθῆ in T. R. has little authority, and seems inserted from John xix. 24, by a scribe who thought it what the first evangelist should say. This is a second instance where a chance of prophetic citation is not taken advantage of.—Ver. 36: this statement about the executioners sitting down to watch Jesus takes the place of a statement as to the time of execution in Mk. The purpose apparently was to guard against a rescue.—Ver. 37: this fact is mentioned out of its proper place. It is probable that the placard with the accusation was fixed up before the cross was erected. As it stands in Mt.’s narrative, it looks like an after-thought of the soldiers as they sat keeping watch, their final jest at the expense of their victim and the nation to which He belonged. What the custom was as to this is not known. Of the various versions of the inscription Mk.’s is the shortest: THE KING OF THE JEWS; to this Mt. prefixes: This is Jesus.—Ver. 38: τότε introduces the fact mentioned as an accompaniment of the crucifixion of Jesus, without indicating its precise place in the course of events.—σταυροῦνται, the historical present with lively effect; and passive, probably to imply that this act was performed by other soldiers. This very slight notice grows into a considerable incident in the hands of Luke.

Vv. 39-44. Taunts of spectators (Mk. xv. 29-32; Lk. xxiii. 35-37, 39). The last drop in Christ’s bitter cup. To us it may seem incredible that even His worst enemies could be guilty of anything so brutal as to hurl taunts at one suffering the agonies of crucifixion. But men then felt very differently from us, thanks to the civilising influence of the x vide Ch.

xxiii. 4.

39. Οἱ δὲ παραπορευόμενοι ἐβλασφήμουν αὐτόν, * κινουῦντες τὰς κεφαλὰς αὐτῶν, 40. καὶ λέγοντες, “Ὁ καταλύων τὸν ναὸν καὶ ἐν τρισὶν ἡμέραις οἰκοδομῶν, σώσον σεαυτόν· εἰ υἱὸς εἶ τοῦ Θεοῦ,<sup>1</sup> κατάβηθι ἀπὸ τοῦ σταυροῦ.” 41. Ὁμοίως δὲ καὶ<sup>2</sup> οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς ἐμπαίζοντες μετὰ τῶν γραμματέων καὶ πρεσβυτέρων ἔλεγον, 42. “Ἄλλους ἔσωσεν, ἑαυτὸν οὐ δύναται σῶσαι. εἰ<sup>3</sup> βασιλεὺς Ἰσραὴλ ἐστί, καταβάτω νῦν ἀπὸ τοῦ σταυροῦ, καὶ πιστεύσομεν αὐτῷ.<sup>4</sup> 43. πέποιθεν ἐπὶ τὸν Θεόν<sup>5</sup>· ῥυσάσθω νῦν αὐτόν,<sup>6</sup> εἰ θέλει αὐτόν. εἶπε γάρ, “Ὅτι Θεοῦ εἰμι υἱός.” 44. Τὸ δ’ αὐτὸ καὶ οἱ λησταὶ οἱ ὕσταυρωθέντες αὐτῷ<sup>7</sup> ἠνείδιζον αὐτῷ.<sup>8</sup>

y Rom. vi.
6 Gal ii.
20 (in fig.
sense).

<sup>1</sup> εἰ υἱὸς θεοῦ εἰ in B (W.H. in margin).

<sup>2</sup> ὁμοίως simply in ἩΛΑ (Tisch.). ὁμοίως καὶ in BK (W.H. in brackets).

<sup>3</sup> ἩΒΔΛ omit εἰ (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> ἐπὶ τῷ θεῷ in B (W.H. in margin).

<sup>7</sup> σὺν αὐτῷ in ἩΒΔΛ.

<sup>4</sup> ἐπ’ αὐτὸν in ἩΒΛ.

<sup>6</sup> ἩΒΛ 33 omit αὐτόν.

<sup>8</sup> αὐτόν in all uncials.

Christian faith, which has made the whole details of the Passion history so revolting to the Christian heart. These sneers at the great Sufferer are not invented fulfillments of prophecy (Ps. xxii. 7, 8; so Brandt), but belong to the certainties of the tragic story as told by the synoptists.—Ver. 39. οἱ παραπορευόμενοι, the passers by: the place of crucifixion therefore near a road; going to or from the temple services (Speaker's Com.); or on work-day business, the 13th not the 14th of the month? (Fritzsche, De Wette).—κινουῦντες τ. κ. α., shaking or nodding the head in the direction of the cross, as if to say: that is what it has come to.—Ver. 40. ὁ καταλύων (cf. ἡ ἀποκτείνουσα, xxiii. 37), this and the other taunts seem to be echoes of words said to or about Jesus at the trial, of which a report has already gone abroad among the populace. Whether the saying about destroying the temple was otherwise known can only be a matter of conjecture.—εἰ υἱὸς εἶ τ. θ.: Jesus had confessed Himself to be the Son of God at the trial (xxvi. 64).—κατάβηθι: the God of this world and all men of the world have but one thought as to Sonship; of course it means exceptional privilege. What can a Son of God have to do with a cross?—Ver. 41. ὁμοίως, etc.: one might have expected the dignitaries, priests, scribes, elders, to have left that low-minded work to the mob. But they condescend to their level, yet with a difference. They speak about the Sufferer, not to Him, and in a tone of affected seriousness and fairness.—Ver.

42. ἄλλους ἔσωσεν, etc., He saved others, Himself He cannot save. Both facts; the former they can now afford to admit, and they do so all the more readily that it serves as a foil to the other fact patent to everybody.—βασιλεὺς Ἰ. Messianic King—the claim involved in the confession before the Sanhedrim, refuted by the cross, for who could believe that Messiah would be crucified?—καταβάτω νῦν, etc.: yet let Him come down now from the cross, and we will believe on Him at once. These pious scoffers profess their readiness to accept descent from the cross as the conclusive sign from heaven they had always been asking for.—Ver. 43. This looks like a mere echo of Ps. xxii. 9 (not a literal quotation from the Sept., however, rather recalling Is. xxxvi. 5) rather than a word likely to be spoken by the Sanhedrists. What did they know about the personal piety of Jesus? Probably they were aware that He used to call God “Father,” and that may be the basis of the statement, along with the confession of Sonship before the Sanhedrim: θεοῦ εἰμι υἱός.—νῦν, now is the time for testing the value of His trust; a plausible wicked sneer.—εἰ θέλει αὐτόν, if He love Him, an emphatic if, the love disproved by the fact.—θέλει is used in the sense of love in the Sept. (Ps. xviii. 20; xli. 12). Palaret gives examples of a similar use in Greek authors.—Ver. 44: the co-crucified brigands join with the mob and the priests in ribaldry.—τὸ αὐτὸ: Fritzsche supplies ἐποίουν after this phrase and renders: the same thing

45. Ἐπὶ δὲ ἑκτῆς ὥρας σκότος ἐγένετο ἐπὶ πᾶσαν τὴν γῆν ἕως ὥρας ἑνάτης· 46. περὶ δὲ τὴν ἑνάτην ὥραν ἀνεβόησεν<sup>1</sup> ὁ Ἰησοῦς φωνῇ μεγάλῃ, λέγων, “Ἠλί, Ἠλί,<sup>2</sup> λαμὰ<sup>3</sup> σαβαχθανί;” τοῦτ’ ἔστι, “Θεὲ μου, Θεὲ μου, ἰνατί με ἔγκατέλιπες;” 47. Τινὲς δὲ τῶν ἐκεῖ ἐστῶτων<sup>4</sup> ἀκούσαντες ἔλεγον, “Ὅτι Ἠλίαν φωνεῖ οὗτος.” 48. Καὶ εὐθέως δραμῶν εἰς ἕξ αὐτῶν, καὶ λαβῶν<sup>5</sup> ἀπόγγον, πλήσας τε ὄξους, καὶ περιθεὶς καλάμῳ, ἐπότιζεν αὐτόν· 49. οἱ δὲ λοιποὶ ἔλεγον,<sup>5</sup> “Ἄφες, ἴδωμεν εἰ ἔρχεται Ἠλίας σώσων αὐτόν.”<sup>6</sup>

Mk. xv. 34
2 Cor. iv.
9. 2 Tim.
iv. 10, 16.
Heb. x.
25; xiii. 5.
36. John
xix. 29.

<sup>1</sup> εβησεν in BL 33, 69 (Trg., W.H.) from Mk. ?

<sup>2</sup> Ελωι, Ελωι in B (W.H. in text).

<sup>3</sup> λεμα in ΞBL; there are other variants.

<sup>4</sup> ἐστηκωτων in ΞBCL 33.

<sup>5</sup> BD have εἶπαν (W.H. in brackets).

<sup>6</sup> ΞBCL add αλλος δε λαβων λογην ενυξεν αυτου την πλευραν και εξηλθεν υδωρ και αιμα (W.H. in double brackets). It is an early addition from John xix. 34.

did the robbers, for they too reproached him (“idem vero etiam latrones fecerunt, nempe ei conviciati sunt”). It seems simpler to take αὐτὸ as one of two accusatives, depending on ἀνείδιζον, αὐτόν following (the true reading) being the other. Vide Winer, § 32, 4.

Vv. 45-49. Darkness without and within (Mk. xv. 33-36, Lk. xxiii. 44-46).—Ver. 45. ἀπὸ δὲ ἑκτῆς ὥρας: three hours, according to Mark (ver. 25, cf. 33), after the crucifixion the darkness came on. This is the first reference in Matthew to a time of day. The definiteness of the statement in this respect seems to vouch for the historicity of the fact stated. Those who find in it legend or myth point to the Egyptian darkness, and prophetic texts such as Amos viii. 9, Joel ii. 31, etc. (none of which, however, are cited by the evangelist), as explaining the rise of the story. The cause of this darkness is unknown (vide notes on Mark). It could not, of course, be an eclipse of the sun at full moon. Origen saw this and explained the phenomenon by the hypothesis of dense masses of cloud hiding the sun. Others (Paulus, De Wette, etc.) have suggested a darkening such as is wont to precede an earthquake. To the evangelist the event probably appeared supernatural.—ἐπὶ π. τ. γῆν, Origen and many after him restrict the reference to Palestine. The fragment of the Gospel of Peter limits it to Judaea (πᾶσαν τ. Ἰουδαίαν). In the thought of the evangelist the expression had probably a wider though indefinite range of meaning, the whole earth (Weiss) or the whole Roman world (Grotius).—ἕως ὥ. ἑνάτης: the end as exactly indicated as the beginning, another sign of historicity. The fact stated probably interested the evangelist as an emblem of the spiritual eclipse next to be related.—Ver. 46. Ἠλί, Ἠλί, etc.: the opening words of Ps. xxii., but partly at least in Aramaic not in Hebrew, wholly so as they stand in Codex B (W.H.), ἐλωί, ἐλωί, etc., corresponding exactly to the version in Mark.—Ἠλί, Ἠλί, if the true reading in Matthew, seems to be an alteration made to suit what follows, whereby the utterance of Jesus becomes a mixture of Hebrew and Aramaic. It is not likely that Jesus would so express Himself. He would speak wholly either in Hebrew or in Aramaic, saying in the one case: “eli eli lamah asavtani”; in the other: “eloi eloi lema savachtani”. The form the utterance assumed in the earliest evangelic report might be an important clue. This Resch finds in the reading of Codex D, which gives the words in Hebrew. Resch holds that D often preserves the readings of the Urevangelium, which, contrary to Weiss, he believes to have contained a Passion history in brief outline (Aggrapha, p. 53). Brandt expresses a similar view (E. G., pp. 228-232). The probability is that Jesus spoke in Hebrew. It is no argument against this that the spectators might not understand what He said, for the utterance was not meant for the ears of men. The historicity of the occurrence has been called in question on the ground that one in a state of dire distress would not express his feelings in borrowed

- b here only
 in N. T.
 (Gen. xxxv. 18).
 c here in parall. and in Heb.
 vi. 10; ix.
 21; x. 20.
 d 1 Cor. xv.
 18, 20. 1
 Thess. iv.
 13, 15 al.
 e here only
 in Gospp.
50. Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς πάλιν κράζας φωνῇ μεγάλῃ ἠέφηκε τὸ πνεῦμα.
 51. Καὶ ἰδοῦ, τὸ καταπέτασμα τοῦ ναοῦ ἐσχίσθη εἰς δύο<sup>1</sup> ἀπὸ ἄνωθεν ἕως κάτω· καὶ ἡ γῆ ἐσεισθη, καὶ αἱ πέτραι ἐσχίσθησαν· 52. καὶ τὰ μνημεῖα ἀνεώχθησαν, καὶ πολλὰ σώματα τῶν κεκοιμη-μένων ἁγίων ἤγερθη,<sup>2</sup> 53. καὶ ἐξελθόντες ἐκ τῶν μνημείων, μετὰ τὴν ἔγερσιν αὐτοῦ, εἰσῆλθον εἰς τὴν ἁγίαν πόλιν, καὶ ἐνεφανίσθησαν πολλοῖς.
- f Heb. ix. 24 (pass. as here).

<sup>1</sup> εἰς δυο after κάτω in BCL (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> ἤγερθη is as usual the sing. to suit a neut. pl. nom. ἤγερθησαν in  $\aleph$ BDL.

phrases. The alternative is that the words were put into the mouth of Jesus by persons desirous that in this as in all other respects His experience should correspond to prophetic anticipations. But who would have the boldness to impute to Him a sentiment which seemed to justify the taunt: "Let Him deliver Him if He love Him"? Brandt's reply to this is: Jewish Christians who had not a high idea of Christ's Person (E. G., p. 245). That in some Christian circles the cry of desertion was an offence appears from the rendering of "eli eli" in Evang. Petri—ἡ δύναμις μου ἡ δ. μ. = my strength, my strength. Its omission by Luke proves the same thing.—Ver. 47. τινὲς δὲ: not Roman soldiers, for they knew nothing about Elias; might be Hellenistic Jews who did not understand Hebrew or Aramaean (Grotius); more probably heartless persons who only affected to misunderstand. It was poor wit, and showed small capacity for turning to advantage the words spoken. How much more to the purpose to have said: Hear Him! He actually confesses that His God in whom He trusted has forsaken Him.—Ver. 48. εἰς ἐξ αὐτῶν, one of the bystanders, not one of the τινὲς, with some human pity, acting under the impression, how got not indicated, that the sufferer was afflicted with thirst.—ὄξους, sour wine, posca, the drink of Roman soldiers, with sponge and reed at hand, for use on such occasions.—Ver. 49. ἄφες: either redundant coalescing with ἰδόμεν = let us see (cf. chap. vii. 4), age videamus, Grotius (vide also Burton, M. T., § 161), or meaning: hold, stop, don't give Him the drink, let us see whether Elias will come (ἔρχεται, comes without fail) to help Him. The latter is the more probable. The λοιποὶ belong to the scoffing crew. The remainder of this verse about the spear thrust—another, final, act of mercy, though attested by important MSS., seems to be imported from John xix. 34. It is omitted in R. V. Vv. 50-56. Death and its accompaniments (Mk. xv. 37-41, Lk. xxiii. 46-49).—Ver. 50. πάλιν, pointing back to the cry in ver. 46.—φωνῇ μεγάλῃ. The Fathers found in the loud cry a proof that Jesus died voluntarily, not from physical exhaustion. Some modern writers, on the contrary, regard the cry as the utterance of one dying of a ruptured heart (Dr. Stroud on The Physical Cause of Christ's Death; Hanna, The Last Day of Our Lord's Passion). Mt.'s narrative, like Mk.'s, gives the impression that the cry was inarticulate. Brandt recognises this cry as historical.—Ver. 51. καὶ ἰδοῦ, introducing solemnly a series of preternatural accompaniments, all but the first peculiar to Mt.—τὸ καταπέτασμα, the veil between the holy place and the most holy.—ἐσχίσθη: this fact, the rending of the veil, is mentioned by all the Synoptists, though Lk. introduces it at an early point in the narrative. It might have happened, as a natural event, an accidental coincidence, though it is not so viewed by the evangelist. A symbolic fiction, according to Brandt. The legendary spirit took hold of this event, magnifying the miracle. In the Hebrew Gospel the rending of the veil is transformed into the fracture of the lintel of the temple: "Superliminare templi infinitae magnitudinis fractum esse atque divisum" (Jerome, Com.).—καὶ ἡ γῆ, etc.: an earthquake, preceding and conditioning the greatest marvel of all, the opening of the graves and the resurrection of many saints (vv. 52 and 53). We seem here to be in the region of Christian legend. Certainly the legendary spirit laid hold of this feature with great eager-

54. Ὁ δὲ ἑκατόνταρχος καὶ οἱ μετ' αὐτοῦ τηροῦντες τὸν Ἰησοῦν, ἰδόντες τὸν σεισμόν καὶ τὰ γενόμενα,<sup>1</sup> ἐφοβήθησαν σφόδρα, λέγοντες, "Ἀληθῶς Θεοῦ υἱὸς<sup>2</sup> ἦν οὗτος."

55. Ἦσαν δὲ ἐκεῖ γυναῖκες πολλαὶ ἀπὸ μακρόθεν θεωροῦσαι, αἰτίνες ἠκολούθησαν τῷ Ἰησοῦ ἀπὸ τῆς Γαλιλαίας, διακονοῦσαι αὐτῷ·
56. ἐν αἷς ἦν Μαρία ἡ Μαγδαληνὴ, καὶ Μαρία ἡ τοῦ Ἰακώβου καὶ Ἰωσὴ μήτηρ, καὶ ἡ μήτηρ τῶν υἱῶν Ζεβεδαίου.

57. ὈΨΙΑΣ δὲ γενομένης, ἦλθεν ἄνθρωπος πλούσιος ἀπὸ Ἀριμαθαίας, τοῦνομα Ἰωσήφ, ὃς καὶ αὐτὸς ἐμαθήτευσε<sup>3</sup> τῷ Ἰησοῦ·
58. οὗτος προσελθὼν τῷ Πιλάτῳ, ᾗτήσατο τὸ σῶμα τοῦ Ἰησοῦ.

<sup>1</sup> γινομενα in BD 33.

<sup>2</sup> BD have υἱος θεου (W.H. in margin).

<sup>3</sup> So in BLD. NCD have ἐμαθητευθη, which, though adopted by Tisch and W.H. (text), may be suspected of assimilation to the form used in Chap. xiii. 52, xxviii. 19. Vide below.

ness, expanding and going into details, giving, e.g., the names of those who rose: Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, etc. (Vide Evang. Nicod., c. 17, and The Acts of Pilate in Thilo's Codex Apocryphus, N. T., p. 810).—Ver. 53. μετὰ τὴν ἔγερσιν αὐτοῦ, after the raising (active) of Jesus (by God), i.e., after Christ's own resurrection: not after the raising (of them) by Him, as if αὐτοῦ were genitive subjective. So Fritzsche, who, however, brackets the phrase as a doubtful reading. ἔγερσιν occurs here only in N. T.—Ver. 54. ἑκατόνταρχος = κεντυρίων in Mk., the officer in charge of the detachment entrusted with the execution, not hitherto mentioned.—οἱ μετ' αὐτοῦ, etc.: the whole military party make pious reflections in Mt.; in Mk., with more probability, the centurion only.—καὶ τὰ γινόμενα, and (generally) the things happening, the earthquake included. For a similar use of καὶ vide xxvi. 59.—υἱὸς θεοῦ: Lk. substitutes for this "a just man". In the centurion's mouth the words would mean more than that and less than the sense they bear for a Christian = a hero, an extraordinary man. Yet Lk.'s rendering is to the point, because the Roman soldier is conceived as seeing in the events the anger of the gods at the treatment of an innocent man.—Ver. 55. γυναῖκες, women, bolder than men, love casting out fear. Lk. associates with them others called οἱ γνωστοὶ αὐτῷ, His acquaintance, which might include the disciples. Though they fled panic-stricken they may have rallied and returned to see the end, either along with the women or mixed in the crowd, and so have become qualified afterwards for witnessing to what happened. It is no argument against this that no mention is made of them in the narratives. It is no part of the plan of the evangelists to indicate the sources of their information. The women are not mentioned for this purpose, but because they have a part to play in the sequel. If they had been introduced as witnesses it would not have been made so clear that they stood "afar off" (ἀπὸ μακρόθεν). In like manner that Peter followed his Master to the judgment hall is told, not that he may be available as a witness, but because there is a story of denial to relate about him.—πολλαί, many, a tribute to the impression made on feminine hearts by the Galilean ministry; for it was from Galilee they came, as the following clause states (αἰτίνες, etc., defining them as women who knew Him well, loved Him warmly, and served Him devotedly).—Ver. 56. ἐν αἷς: three out of the many named, with a reference to the sequel, or as the best known. Mary of Magdala (first mention in Mt.), Mary, the mother of a well-known pair of brothers, and the mother of the sons of Zebedee (Salome in Mk.).

Vv. 57-66. Burial (Mk. xv. 42-47, Lk. xxiii. 50-56). ἦλθεν, etc., there came (to the place of crucifixion, the centre of interest in the preceding narrative) a man (unknown to readers), rich (this fact put in the forefront by Mt.—εὐσχήμων βουλευτής in Mk. On εὐσχήμων Phrynichus remarks that the vulgar take it as = rich, or in good social position, while the ancients took it as applying to the noble or symmetrical. Mt. may be following vulgar usage, but also with an eye to Is. liii. 9: "with the rich in

τότε ὁ Πιλάτος ἐκέλευσεν ἀποδοθῆναι τὸ σῶμα.<sup>1</sup> 59. καὶ λαβὼν τὸ
 κ here and σῶμα ὁ Ἰωσήφ ἐνετύλιξεν αὐτὸ<sup>2</sup> σινδόνι καθαρᾷ, 60. καὶ ἐθηκεν in Lk. αὐτὸ ἐν τῷ καινῷ αὐτοῦ μνημείῳ, ὃ ἠελατόμησεν ἐν τῇ πέτρᾳ· καὶ xxiii. 53. John xv. 7. προσκυλίσας λίθον μέγαν τῇ θύρᾳ τοῦ μνημείου, ἀπῆλθεν. 61. ἦν h Mk. xv. 46 (Ex. xxi. 33). δὲ ἐκεῖ Μαρία ἡ Μαγδαληνῆ, καὶ ἡ ἄλλη Μαρία, καθήμεναι ἀπέναντι i Mk. xi. 12. τοῦ τάφου.
 John i. 29. Acts x. 9
 al. 62. Τῆ δὲ ἑπαύριον, ἣτις ἐστὶ μετὰ τὴν παρασκευὴν, συνήχθησαν
 j 2 Cor. vi. οἱ ἄρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι πρὸς Πιλάτον, 63. λέγοντες, "Κύριε.
 S. i Tim. iv. 1 (adj.). ἐμνήσθημεν ὅτι ἐκεῖνος ὁ ἄπλάνος εἶπεν ἔτι ζῶν, Μετὰ τρεῖς ἡμέρας
 2 John 7.

<sup>1</sup> NBL omit το σωμα (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> BD have εν before σινδονι (W.H. in brackets).

His death"); from Arimathaea (Ramathaim Zophim, 1 Sam. i. 1); the name Joseph, and the relation to Jesus that of a disciple (ἐμαθητεύσε, which, if the correct reading, is an instance of the use of this verb in a neuter sense. Cf. xiii. 52, xxviii. 19, Acts xiv. 21).—Ver. 58. προσελθὼν: from the cross Joseph returns, and approaches Pilate to beg the body of Jesus for burial. In the case of the crucified such a request was necessary, but was generally granted ("Eorum in quos animadvertitur corpora non aliter sepeliuntur quam si fuerit petitum et permissum". Ulpian. de Cadav. punit. in Justinian, Corpus Jur. Civ. xlvi. 24, 1). The general practice was to leave the bodies to waste. The privilege of burial was sometimes granted for money. There is nothing to show that Pilate condescended to such meanness, at least in the present instance, though Theophy. suggests that he did.—ἐκέλευσεν ἀποδοθῆναι, he ordered it to be delivered.—Ver. 59. ἐνετύλιξεν (little used, found in Aristophanes), wrapped.—σινδόνι καθαρᾷ, in clean, i.e., never before used linen.—σινδὼν is of uncertain derivation and varying sense, being applied to cloths of diverse material, but here generally understood as meaning linen cloth, wrapped in strips round the body as in the case of mummies in Egypt, the body being first washed (Acts ix. 37). As to this way of preparing dead bodies for burial we have no details in O. T. (Benzinger, p. 163).—Ver. 60. ἐν τῷ καινῷ αὐτοῦ μνημείῳ, in his own new tomb, recently prepared for himself. This not brought out in parallels.—ἐλατόμησεν (λαῖς τέμνω): the aorist for the pluperfect, as in ver. 55; he had hewn out of the rock = ἐν τῇ πέτρᾳ, the article pointing to the custom of making sepulchres in rock.—λίθον μέγαν: the usual mode of shutting the door of the tomb; the Jews called the stone golul, the roller.—ἀπῆλθεν: the entombment over, Joseph went away; but the Dead One was not left alone.—Ver. 61. ἦν δὲ ἐκεῖ, etc., but, in contrast to Joseph, there was there Mary, the woman of Magdala, also the other Mary, sitting in front of the tomb.—τάφου here, as in xxiii. 27, 29, used of a place of burial, not of the act of burial. The word is peculiar to Mt. in the N. T.

Vv. 62-66. Precautions against theft of the body; peculiar to Mt., and among the less certain elements of the Passion history, owing its origin and presence in this Gospel apparently to the exigencies of the primitive Christian apologetic against Jewish unbelief, which, as we gather from ver. 64, must have sought to invalidate the faith in the resurrection of Jesus by the hypothesis of theft accounting for an empty grave. The transactions here recorded effectually dispose of that hypothesis by making theft impossible. Is the story true, or must we, with Meyer, relegate it to the category of unhistorical legend? Meyer founds largely on the impossibility of Christ predicting so distinctly as is here implied, even to His own disciples, His resurrection. That means that the priests and Pharisees could have had no such solicitude as is ascribed to them. All turns on that. If they had such fears, so originating, it would be quite natural to take precautions against a trick. I think it quite possible that even independently of the saying in chap. xii. 40, given as spoken to Pharisees, it had somehow reached their ears that Jesus had predicted His Passion, and in speaking of it was wont to connect with it the idea

ἐγείρομαι. 64. κέλευσον οὖν <sup>k</sup> ἀσφαλισθῆναι τὸν τάφον ἕως τῆς <sup>k</sup> Acts xvi
 τρίτης ἡμέρας· μήποτε ἐλθόντες οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ<sup>1</sup> νυκτὸς<sup>2</sup> κλέψωσιν <sup>24</sup>
 αὐτόν, καὶ εἴπωσι τῷ λαῷ, Ἠγέρθη ἀπὸ τῶν νεκρῶν· καὶ ἔσται ἡ ἐσχάτη<sup>1</sup> πλάνη χείρων τῆς πρώτης.” 65. Ἐφη δὲ<sup>3</sup> αὐτοῖς ὁ Πιλάτος, <sup>l</sup> here only “Ἐχετε <sup>m</sup> κουστωδία· ὑπάγετε, ἀσφαλίσασθε ὡς οἴδατε.” 66. Οἱ <sup>in Gospels,</sup>
 δὲ πορευθέντες ἠσφαλίσαντο τὸν τάφον, σφραγίσαντες τὸν λίθον <sup>frequent</sup> μετὰ τῆς κουστωδίας. <sup>in Epp.</sup> <sup>m</sup> here and in Ch.
 xxviii. ix.

<sup>1</sup> <sup>ss</sup>B omit αὐτον, found in CDL al. (W.H. place it in margin).

<sup>2</sup> νυκτος wanting in many uncials (Tisch., W.H. omit).

<sup>3</sup> BL and other uncials omit δε (Tisch., W.H., in margin).

of rising again, and it was natural that at such a time they should not despise such reports.

Ver. 62. τῇ ἑπαύριον, the next day, i.e., the Jewish Sabbath, curiously described as the day (ἡ τις) μετὰ τὴν παρασκευὴν, the more important day defined by reference to the less important, suggesting that Mt. has his eye on Mk.'s narrative (xv. 42). So Weiss-Meyer.—Ver. 63. ἐκείνος: contemptuous reference, as to one not worthy to be named, and far off, a thing of the past removed for ever by death.—ὁ πλάνος: a wanderer in the first place, then derivatively, from the character of many wanderers, in N. T. a deceiver.—ἐγείρομαι, present for future, expressing strong confidence.—Ver. 64. ἕως τ. τρίτης ἡμέρας: the definite specification of time here and in ver. 63 may have been imported into the story in the course of the tradition.—ἡ ἐσχάτη πλάνη, the last delusion = faith in the resurrection, belief in the Messiahship of Jesus being the first.—χείρων, worse, not so much in character as in consequences, more serious.—Ver. 65. ἔχετε: probably imperative, not indicative = have your watch, the ready assent of a man who thinks there is not likely to be much need for it, but has no objections to gratify their wish in a small matter. So most recent interpreters—Meyer, Weiss, Holtz., Weizsäcker, Morison, Spk., Com., Alford. The Vulgate takes it as indicative = habetis, which Schanz follows. This rendering implies that Pilate wished them to be content with what they had already, either their own temple watch or soldiers already put at their disposal. Carr (Camb. N. T.) doubts the correctness of the modern interpretation on the ground that no clear example of the use of ἔχειν in the sense of “to take” occurs in either classical or Hellenistic Greek.—κουστωδία, a guard; a Latinism, a natural word for the Roman Pilate to use.—ὑπάγετε ἀσφαλίσασθε, the three verbs: ἔχ. ὑπάγ. ἀσφαλ., following each other without connecting particles form an asyndeton “indicating impatience on the part of Pilate” (Camb. N. T.).—ὡς οἴδατε, as ye know how.—Ver. 66. ἠσφαλίσαντο is to be taken with the last clause—μετὰ τῆς κουστωδίας, which points to the main means of securing the tomb against plunder. The participial clause—σφραγίσαντες τὸν λίθον—is a parenthesis pointing to an additional precaution, sealing the stone, with a thread over it and sealed to the tomb at either end. The worthy men did their best to prevent theft, and—the resurrection!

CHAPTER XXVIII. THE RESURRECTION AND THE GREAT COMMISSION.

Vv. 1-10. The open grave (Mk. xvi. 1-8, Lk. xxiv. 1-11).—Ver. 1. ὀψέ . . . σαββάτων, a curious and puzzling note of time, inconsistent with itself if translated “late on Sabbath, towards day-break on the first day of the week,” and on the assumption that the day is supposed to begin and end at sunset. That would give, as the time at which the events to be narrated happened, the afternoon of one day and the early morning of the next. Of course the two clauses are meant to coincide in meaning, and a way out of the difficulty must be sought. One is to take ὀψέ as = post, after the Sabbath, or late in comparison with the Sabbath, σαββάτων in clause 1 being in effect a genitive of comparison. So Euthy. and Grotius, who take σαββ. as = the whole passover week, De Wette, Weizsäcker, etc. Another is to take ὀψέ as = not later than, but late on, and to assume that the day is conceived to begin and end with sunrise according to the civil mode of reckoning. So Kypke, Meyer, Weiss, Morison. Authorities are divided as to

<sup>a</sup> Lk xxiii
54. <sup>οὐδε</sup> notes
there.

XXVIII. 1. ὉΨΕ δὲ σαββάτων, τῇ * ἐπιφωσκούσῃ εἰς μίαν σαββάτων, ἦλθε Μαρία ἡ Μαγδαληνὴ, καὶ ἡ ἄλλη Μαρία, θεωρήσαι τὸν τάφον. 2. Καὶ ἰδοῦ, σεισμὸς ἐγένετο μέγας· ἄγγελος γὰρ Κυρίου καταβὰς ἐξ οὐρανοῦ, προσελθὼν<sup>1</sup> ἀπεκύλισε τὸν λίθον ἀπὸ τῆς θύρας,<sup>2</sup>

<sup>b</sup> here only
in N T.
(Gen. v. 3.)

καὶ τὸ ἔνδυμα αὐτοῦ λευκὸν ὡσεὶ<sup>3</sup> χιῶν. 4. ἀπὸ δὲ τοῦ φόβου αὐτοῦ ἐσείσθησαν οἱ τηροῦντες, καὶ ἐγένοντο<sup>4</sup> ὡσεὶ<sup>3</sup> νεκροί. 5. Ἀποκριθεὶς δὲ ὁ ἄγγελος εἶπε ταῖς γυναῖξί, “Μὴ φοβεῖσθε ὑμεῖς· οἶδα γὰρ ὅτι Ἰησοῦν τὸν ἐσταυρωμένον ζητεῖτε. 6. οὐκ ἔστιν ὧδε· ἠγέρθη γάρ, καθὼς εἶπε. δεῦτε, ἴδετε τὸν τόπον ὅπου

<sup>1</sup> καὶ before προσελθων in ΞBCL.

<sup>2</sup> ΞBD omit ἀπο της θυρας (so Tisch. and W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> ΞBD have ὡς here, and with these LΔ in end of ver. 4.

<sup>4</sup> ἐγενηθησαν in ΞBCDL 33.

Greek usage, Meyer and Weiss, e.g., contending that ὡπὲ always means lateness of the period specified, and still current. Holtzmann, H. C., remarks that only from the second clause do we learn that by the first is not meant the evening of the Sabbath, but the end of the night following, conceived as still belonging to the Sabbath.—τῇ ἐπιφωσκούσῃ, supply ἡμέρα or ὥρα.—εἰς μίαν. σ., towards day one of the week (Sabbath in first clause).—ἦλθε, came, singular though more than one concerned, as in xxvii. 56, 61. Mary of Magdala, evidently the heroine among the women.—θεωρήσαι τ. τ., to see the sepulchre; no word of anointing, that being excluded by the story of the watch.—Ver. 2. The particulars in this and the following two verses are peculiar to Mt.: first, an earthquake (σεισμὸς), as in xxvii. 51; second, an angel descending from heaven; third, the angel rolling away the stone; fourth, the angel sitting on the stone as guard.—Ver. 3. Ἰδέα (here only in N. T.; in Sept., Dan. i. 13, 15), the appearance, aspect (of the countenance of the angel). Vide Trench, Syn., p. 262, on μορφή, σχῆμα, ἰδέα.—ὡς ἀστραπή (xxiv. 27), as lightning—brilliant, dazzling.—τὸ ἔνδυμα α., his raiment as distinct from his face—ὡς χιῶν, white as snow (cf. Mt. xvii. 2).—Ver. 4. ὡς νεκροί: the keepers, through fear of the angel, were shaken as by an earthquake, and became as dead men—stupefied, helpless, totally incapacitated for action by way of preventing what is assumed, though not directly stated, to have happened. The resurrection is not described.

Vv. 5-7. The angel speaks to the women.—μὴ φοβεῖσθε ὑμεῖς, fear not ye, with tacit reference to the guards.—οἶδα γὰρ: γὰρ gives a reason for the soothing tone of the address. The angel recognises them as friends of the Crucified.—Ver. 6. οὐκ ἔστιν, etc.: with what sublime simplicity and brevity is the amazing story told! “Versus hic incisa habet perquam apta” (Beng.). The last clause is better without the epithet ὁ κύριος, more in keeping with the rest. Bengel calls it gloriosa appellatio, but, as Meyer remarks, just on that account it was more liable to be added than omitted.—Ver. 7. ταχὺ πορευθεῖσαι: introducing “quite in his own (the evangelist’s) manner of expression” (Weiss) the command of the angel = go quickly and tell, etc.—προάγει: present; He is even now going before you into Galilee; in accordance with the prediction in xxvi. 32 the risen Shepherd is on His way to the pre-appointed rendezvous.—ὄψεσθε, there shall ye see Him, and be able to satisfy yourselves that He is indeed risen. With this word ends the message to the disciples.—ἰδοῦ εἶπον ὑμῖν, behold I said it to you = note what I say, and see if it do not come true. Mark has καθὼς εἶπεν ὑμῖν = as He said to you, referring to the promise of Jesus, and forming part of the message to the disciples.

Vv. 8-10. Appearance of Jesus to the women on the way to deliver their message.—Ver. 8. ἀπελθεῖσαι: the reading of T. R. (ἐξελθ.) implies that they had been within the tomb, of which no mention is made in Matthew. They went away from, not out of, the tomb. — ἔκειτο ὁ Κύριος.<sup>1</sup> 7. καὶ ταχὺ πορευθεῖσαι εἶπατε τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ, ὅτι ἠγέρθη ἀπὸ τῶν νεκρῶν· καὶ ἰδοῦ, προάγει ὑμᾶς εἰς τὴν Γαλιλαίαν· ἐκεῖ αὐτὸν ὄψεσθε. ἰδοῦ, εἶπον ὑμῖν.” 8. Καὶ ἐξεληθούσαι<sup>2</sup> ταχὺ ἀπὸ τοῦ μνημείου μετὰ φόβου καὶ χαρᾶς μεγάλης, ἔδραμον ἀπαγγεῖλαι τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ. 9. ὡς δὲ ἐπορεύοντο ἀπαγγεῖλαι τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ,<sup>3</sup> καὶ ἰδοῦ, ὁ<sup>4</sup> Ἰησοῦς ἀπήντησεν<sup>5</sup> αὐταῖς, λέγων, “Χαίρετε.” Αἱ δὲ προσελθούσαι ἐκράτησαν αὐτοῦ τοὺς πόδας, καὶ προσεκύνησαν αὐτῷ. 10. τότε λέγει αὐταῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς· “Μὴ φοβεῖσθε· ὑπάγετε, ἀπαγγείλατε τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς μου, ἵνα ἀπέλθωσιν εἰς τὴν Γαλιλαίαν, κακεῖ με ὄψονται.”

<sup>1</sup>  $\aleph$ B 33 omit ο κυριος (W.H. relegate to margin).

<sup>2</sup> ἀπελθουσαι in  $\aleph$ BCL 33 (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> From ως δ. επορ. το αυτου is omitted in  $\aleph$ BD 33, 69 and many versions, and left out by modern editors. The passage may have fallen out by similar ending (αυτου—αυτου).

<sup>4</sup>  $\aleph$ ABCD omit ο; found in DL.

<sup>5</sup>  $\aleph$ BC have υπηνητησεν.

ἀπὸ τ. μν., depending on ἀπελθούσαι, in Mark on ἐφυγον.—μετὰ φόβου καὶ χαρᾶς μεγάλης, with fear and great joy. This union of apparently opposite emotions is true to human nature. All powerful tides of gladness cause nervous thrills that feel like fear and trembling. Cf. Isaiah lx. 5 and Phil. ii. 12. The fear and trembling St. Paul speaks of are the result of an exhilarating consciousness of having a great solemn work in hand—a race to run, a prize to win.—Ver. 9. καὶ ἰδοῦ, and behold, another surprise (ver. 2). They are on the way to tell the disciples that they are to be favoured with a meeting in Galilee, and lo! they are themselves privileged to meet the risen One.—ὑπήνητησεν, cf. chap. viii. 34, xxv. 1, 6.—ἐκράτησαν, etc., they took hold of His feet and cast themselves before Him; the gesture befitting the circumstances, an unlooked-for meeting with one who has been crucified and whose aspect is greatly changed. Impossible to resume the old familiar relations as if nothing had happened.—Ver. 10. μὴ φοβεῖσθε: kindly in word and tone, meant to remove the embarrassment visible in their manner.—ὑπάγετε, ἀπαγγείλατε, another asyndeton as in xxvii. 65. The instructions to the women simply repeat, in much the same words, those given by the angel (ver. 7), with the exception that the disciples are spoken of by the kindly name of “brethren”.

The similarity of vv. 9, 10 to John xx. 14-18 has been remarked on (vide Weiss, Meyer, on ver. 9). It has been lately commented on in connection with the theory of a “four-gospel Canon” prepared by the Presbyters of Asia Minor in the beginning of the second century. Vide Der Schluss des Marcus-Evangeliums der Vier-Evangelien-Kanon und die kleinasiatischen Presbyter, by Dr. Paul Rohrbach. Rohrbach’s idea is that when this Canon was prepared the editors altered more or less the statements of the Synoptists as to the visions of the Risen Christ so as to bring them somewhat into harmony with those of the fourth Gospel. For this purpose Mark’s original ending was cancelled and the present one, vv. 9-20, put in its place. The editorial procedure in the case of Matthew consisted in inserting vv. 9, 10 in the narrative, thus providing for at least one vision in Jerusalem, and making room for more, and so cancelling the impression otherwise produced that Jesus was seen only in Galilee. In support of the view that vv. 9, 10 are an editorial addition at a later date Rohrbach adduces the fact that the narrative has an appearance of continuity when they are omitted, and also that the instructions of Jesus to the women are a mere echo of those given by the angel.

Vv. 11-15. The guards and the priests.—Ver. 11. πορευομένων δὲ α., while the women go on their errand, the guards, crestfallen, play their poor part. Some of them (τινὲς) go into the city and report in their own way to the priests all that has happened.—Ver. 12. ἀργύρια;

11. Πορευομένων δὲ αὐτῶν, ἰδοῦ, τινὲς τῆς κουστωδίας ἐλθόντες εἰς τὴν πόλιν ἀπήγγειλαν τοῖς ἀρχιερεῦσιν ἅπαντα τὰ γενόμενα. 12. καὶ συναχθέντες μετὰ τῶν πρεσβυτέρων, συμβουλίον τε λαβόντες ἀργύρια ἰκανὰ ἔδωκαν τοῖς στρατιώταις, 13. λέγοντες, “ἴπατε, Ὅτι οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ νυκτὸς ἐλθόντες ἔκλεψαν τὸν ἡμῶν κοιμημένων, 14. καὶ ἐὰν ἀκουσθῇ τοῦτο ἐπὶ<sup>1</sup> τοῦ ἡγεμόνος, ἡμεῖς πείσομεν αὐτόν,<sup>2</sup> καὶ ὑμᾶς ἀμερίμους ποιήσομεν.” 15. Οἱ δὲ λαβόντες τὰ ἀργύρια ἐποίησαν ἑαυτοῖς ἐδιδάχθησαν. καὶ διεφημίσθη<sup>3</sup> ὁ λόγος οὗτος παρὰ Ἰουδαίοις μέχρι τῆς σήμερον.<sup>4</sup>

16. Οἱ δὲ ἔνδεκα μαθηταὶ ἐπορεύθησαν εἰς τὴν Γαλιλαίαν, εἰς τὸ

<sup>1</sup> BD have υπο instead of επι (W.H. in margin), probably because ηκουσθη was understood in the usual sense. Vide below.

<sup>2</sup> NB omit αυτον. <sup>3</sup> So in ABCDL (W.H. brackets); εφημ. in  $\aleph\Delta$  33 (Tisch.).

<sup>4</sup> BDL vulg. add ημερας (W.H. in brackets), which just because it is unusual is probably genuine (Tisch. omits after  $\aleph\Lambda\Gamma\Delta$ , etc.).

the holy men thoroughly understand the power of money; silver pieces, shekels are meant.—ἰκανὰ probably means here a considerable number, not a number sufficient to bribe the soldiers (Meyer and Weiss). They gave with a free hand. This sense of ἰκανός is frequent in the N. T. Vide, e.g., Mk. x. 46, of the crowd following Jesus at Jericho, and Acts xxvii. 9 (of time).—Ver. 13. εἴπατε, introducing the lie they put into the mouths of the soldiers. The report to be set abroad assumes that there is a fact to be explained, the disappearance of the body. And it is implied that the statement to be given out as to that was known by the soldiers to be false: i.e., they were perfectly aware that they had not fallen asleep at their post and that no theft had taken place. The lie for which the priests paid so much money is suicidal; one half destroys the other. Sleeping sentinels could not know what happened.—Ver. 14. ἐὰν ἀκουσθῇ, either: if this come to the ears of, etc., as in A. V., or: if this come to a hearing, a trial, before, etc., as in R. V. margin. The latter is preferred by many modern commentators. The reading ἐπὶ τ. ἡ. suits the second sense best. Cf. 1 Cor. vi. 1, 1 Tim. v. 19.—ἡμεῖς, emphatic, implying a great idea of their influence, on their part.—πείσομεν, will persuade him; how not said, money conceivably in their minds. Kypke renders: will appease; so also Loesner (“aliquem pacare vel precibus vel donis”), citing examples from Philo. The ordinary punishment for falling asleep on the watch was death. Could soldiers be persuaded by any amount of money to run such a risk? Of course they might take the money and go away laughing at the donors, meaning to tell their general the truth. Could the priests expect anything else? If not, could they propose the project seriously? The story has its difficulties.—ἀμερίμους, free from grounds of anxiety; guaranteed against all possible unpleasant consequences. Bengel's comment on this verse is: “Quam laboriosum bellum mendacii contra veritatem!”—Ver. 15. This verse states that the soldiers did as instructed, so originating a theft theory, which, according to our evangelist, was current in his day in Jewish circles at the time he wrote.

Vv. 16-20. The meeting in Galilee, peculiar to Mt.—Ver. 16. οἱ δὲ ἔνδεκα μ., the eleven, not merely to discount Judas, but to indicate that what follows concerns the well-known Twelve (minus one), the future Apostles of the faith.—εἰς τὸ ὄρος, to the mountain, a more specific indication of the locality than any previously reported. Conjectures have been made as to the mountain meant, e.g., that on which the hill teaching was communicated. An interesting suggestion but unverifiable.—οὐ, an adverb = ubi, used pregnantly so as to include quo: whither Jesus had bid them go, and where He wished them to remain.—ἐτάξατο: if this points to an instruction given expressly by Jesus, it is strange that the evangelist has not recorded it. It rather seems to presuppose an understanding based on experiences of the Galilean ministry as to the rendezvous ὄρος οὐ ἐτάξατο αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς. 17. καὶ ἰδόντες αὐτόν, προσεκύνησαν αὐτῷ<sup>1</sup>. οἱ δὲ ἐδίστασαν. 18. καὶ προσελθὼν ὁ Ἰησοῦς d Ch. vi. 10;

ἐλάλησεν αὐτοῖς, λέγων, “Ἐδόθη μοι πᾶσα ἐξουσία ἔν ὠρανῷ xvi. 19;
καὶ ἔπι<sup>2</sup> γῆς. 19. πορευθέντες οὖν<sup>3</sup> μαθητεύσατε πάντα τὰ ἔθνη, xviii. 18 (similar phrases).

<sup>1</sup> NBD 33 it. omit αὐτω.

<sup>2</sup> ἐπι γης in NADΣ al. (Tisch.). ἐπι της γης in BD (W.H in brackets).

<sup>3</sup> οὖν in ΒΔΠΣ, verss. (W.H.). NΑ and other uncials omit (Tisch.).

The meeting place would be some familiar haunt, recalling many past associations and incidents, only imperfectly recorded in the Gospels. If there was such a retreat among the mountains often resorted to, it would doubtless be the scene of the hill teaching, as well as of other unrecorded disciple experiences. The disciples would need no express direction to go there. Instinct would guide them.—Ver. 17. A very meagre statement, the whole interest of the evangelist being absorbed by the words spoken by Jesus.—προσεκύνησαν as in ver. 9, but the men less demonstrative than the women; no mention of seizing Jesus by the feet.—οἱ δὲ ἐδίστασαν: but some doubted (cf. xiv. 31, in reference to Peter). This clause seems to qualify and limit the previous statement as to the worshipping, giving this sense: they worshipped, i.e., the most of them, for some were in doubt. So Meyer, who cites in support Klotz, Ad Devar, whose statement is to the effect that in passages of this kind containing a clause with δὲ without a μὲν preceding, a universal affirmation is first made and then a division follows, which shows that a universal affirmation was not really intended (p. 358). Various methods have been adopted to get rid of the unwelcome conclusion that some of the eleven did not do homage, e.g., by taking ἐδίστασαν as a pluperfect (Fritzsche, Grotius), or by finding the doubters among the 500 mentioned by St. Paul (1 Cor. xv. 6), or even by altering the text οἱ δὲ into οὐδέ (Beza). The whole narrative is so brief and vague as to lend support to the hypothesis that in the appearance of Jesus here recorded we have not one particular occurrence, but a general picture of the Christophanies, in which mingled conflicting feelings of reverent recognition and hesitation as to the identity of the person played their part. Such is the view of Keil, Steinmeyer, and Holtzmann (H. C.).

Vv. 18-20. The final commission.—Ver. 18. προσελθὼν, approaching; the speech of Jesus is majestic, but His bearing is friendly, meant to set them free from doubt and fear.—ἐλάλησε: this may seem a word not sufficiently dignified for the communication made. But it is often used, especially in Hebrews, in reference to divine revelations (vide, e.g., chap. i. 1).—ἐδόθη μοι, there was given to me; the aorist as in xi. 27, the thought of which earlier text this utterance reiterates and amplifies. The reference may be to the resurrection, and the meaning that that event ipso facto placed Jesus in a position of power. Cf. Rom. i. 4.—πᾶσα ἐξουσία, every form of authority; command of all means necessary for the advancement of the Kingdom of God.—ἐν ὠρανῷ: this points to session on His celestial throne at the right hand of God. Jesus speaks as one already in heaven. There is no account of the ascension in Mt. It is conceived as involved in the resurrection.—ἐπι γῆς: upon earth, the whole earth. The two phrases together point to a universal cosmic dominion. But so far as earth is concerned, the dominion is only a matter of right or theory, a problem to be worked out. Hence what follows.—Ver. 19. πορευθέντες οὖν: the οὖν omitted in many texts aptly expresses the connection. The commission to the Apostles arises out of the power claimed = all power has been given to me on earth, go ye therefore, and make the power a reality.—μαθητεύσατε πάντα τὰ ἔθνη: make disciples (act., cf. at xxvii. 57) of all the nations (cf. x. 5, “go not into the way of the Gentiles”).—βαπτίζοντες: baptism the condition of discipleship = make disciples by baptising; the sole condition, circumcision, and everything particularistic or Judaistic tacitly negated. Christian baptism referred to here only in this Gospel.—αὐτοὺς refers to ἔθνη, a constr. ad sensum, as in Acts xv. 17; Rom. ii. 14. In the anabaptist controversy αὐτοὺς was taken

c Acts viii. βαπτίζοντες<sup>1</sup> αὐτοὺς * εἰς τὸ * ὄνομα τοῦ Πατρὸς καὶ τοῦ Υἱοῦ καὶ
 16; xix. 5.
 Rom. vi. τοῦ Ἁγίου Πνεύματος, 20. διδάσκοντες αὐτοὺς ἵτηρεῖν πάντα ὅσα
 3. 1 Cor.
 i. 13; x. 2. ἐνετειλάμην ὑμῖν· καὶ ἰδοὺ, ἐγὼ μεθ' ὑμῶν εἰμι πάσας τὰς ἡμέρας
 Gal. iii. 27
 (all with εἰς and accus.). ἕως τῆς * συντελείας τοῦ * αἰῶνος. Ἄμην.*<sup>2</sup> f vide at Ch. xix. 17. g vide at Ch. xiii. 39.

<sup>1</sup> βαπτισαντες in BD (W.H. margin). βαπτίζοντες (T.R., W.H., text). The reading of T.R. (HΔΣ) is probably a conformation to διδάσκοντες in next clause.

<sup>2</sup> The Ἄμην is not found in HΔBD 1, 33, and is left out by modern editors.

by the opponents of infant baptism as referring to μαθητὰς in μαθητεύσατε, and the verb was held to mean "teach". For some references to this extinct controversy vide Wetstein, ad loc., and Hermann's Viger, p. 61.—εἰς τὸ ὄνομα, into the name, i.e., as confessing the name which embodies the essence of the Christian creed.—τοῦ πατρὸς, etc.: it is the name not of one but of three, forming a baptismal Trinity—Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. It is not said into the names of, etc., nor into the name of the Father, and the name of the Son, and the name of the Holy Ghost.—Hence might be deduced the idea of a Trinity constituting at the same time a Divine Unity. But this would probably be reading more into the words than was intended.—Ver. 20. διδάσκοντες a., teaching them, present participle, implying that Christian instruction is to be a continuous process, not subordinate to and preparing for baptism, but continuing after baptism with a view to enabling disciples to walk worthily of their vocation.—τηρεῖν: the teaching is with a view not to gnosis but to practice; the aim not orthodox opinion but right living.—πάντα ὅσα ἐνετειλάμην ὑμῖν: the materials of instruction are to be Christ's own teaching. This points to the desirableness for the Church's use of an oral or written tradition of Christ's words: these to be the rule of faith and practice.—καὶ ἰδοὺ, introducing an important promise to the missionaries of the new universal religion to keep them in courage and good hope amid all difficulties.—ἐγὼ μεθ' ὑμῶν, I the Risen, Exalted, All-powerful One, with you my apostles and representatives engaged in the heroic task of propagating the faith.—εἰμι, am, not will be, conveying the feeling of certainty, but also spoken from the eternal point of view, sub specie aeternitatis, for which distinctions of here and there, now and then, do not exist.

Cf. John viii. 58, "before Abraham was I am". In the Fourth Gospel the categories of the Absolute and the Eternal dominate throughout.—πάσας τὰς ἡμέρας, all the days, of which, it is implied, there may be many; the vista of the future is lengthening.—ἕως τῆς συντελείας τοῦ αἰῶνος, until the close of the current age, when He is to come again; an event, however, not indispensable for the comfort of men who are to enjoy an uninterrupted spiritual presence.

This great final word of Jesus is worthy of the Speaker and of the situation. Perhaps it is not to be taken as an exact report of what Jesus said to His disciples at a certain time and place. In it the real and the ideal seem to be blended; what Jesus said there and then with what the Church of the apostolic age had gradually come to regard as the will of their Risen Lord, with growing clearness as the years advanced, with perfect clearness after Israel's crisis had come. We find here (1) a cosmic significance assigned to Christ (all power in heaven and on earth); (2) an absolutely universal destination of the Gospel; (3) baptism as the rite of admission to discipleship; (4) a rudimentary baptismal Trinity; (5) a spiritual presence of Christ similar to that spoken of in the Fourth Gospel. To this measure of Christian enlightenment the Apostolic Church, as represented by our evangelist, had attained when he wrote his Gospel, probably after the destruction of Jerusalem. Therein is summed up the Church's confession of faith conceived as uttered by the lips of the Risen One. "Expressly not as words of Jesus walking on the earth, but as words of Him who appeared from heaven, the evangelist here presents in summary form what the Christian community had come to recognise as the will and the promise of their exalted Lord" (Weiss-Meyer).

ΤΟ ΚΑΤΑ ΜΑΡΚΟΝ

ΑΓΙΟΝ ΕΥΑΓΓΕΛΙΟΝ.

Ι. Ι. ἈΡΧΗ τοῦ εὐαγγελίου Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, υἱοῦ τοῦ Θεοῦ<sup>1</sup>.

2. ὡς<sup>2</sup> γέγραπται ἐν τοῖς προφήταις,<sup>3</sup> “Ἰδοῦ, ἐγὼ<sup>4</sup> ἀποστέλλω
τὸν ἄγγελόν μου πρὸ προσώπου σου, ὃς κατασκευάσει τὴν ὁδόν

<sup>1</sup> The title υἱοῦ τ. Θε. is wanting in ℵ and omitted by Tisch. and W.H. (in text). Most uncials and many verss. have it. Its omission is probably due to similar ending. BDL omit τῶν.

<sup>2</sup> καθὼς in ℵBLΔ (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> For ἐν τοῖς π. in many uncials ℵBDLΔ 33, Lat. and Syr. verss., have ἐν τῶ ἱσασα τῶ π. The T.R. is a gram. cor.

<sup>4</sup> ἐγὼ is in ℵLΔΣ (Tisch.), but wanting in BD (W.H.).

CHAPTER I. THE BAPTIST. THE BAPTISM AND TEMPTATION OF JESUS. BEGINNINGS OF THE GALILEAN MINISTRY.—Vv. 1-8. The appearance and ministry of the Baptist (Mt. iii. 1-12, Lk. iii. 1-18).—Ver. 1. ἀρχή, etc.: This verse may best be taken as the superscription of the whole Gospel, and as meaning: Here begins the Gospel concerning Jesus Christ the Son of God. So viewed it should be made to stand apart, ver. 2 beginning a new section as in the Greek Testament of W. and H. If we connect ver. 1 closely with vv. 2-4 it will contain the statement that the Gospel of Jesus Christ began with the ministry of the Baptist. On this view the connection of the sentences may be taken in two ways: either ver. 1 may be joined closely to ver. 2, the resulting sense being: the beginning of the Gospel (was) as it is written = was in accordance with the prophetic oracle predicting the introduction of Messiah by a forerunner, the story of the Baptist then following as the fulfilment of the prophecy; or vv. 2, 3 may be bracketed as a parenthesis, and ver. 1 connected with ver. 4, yielding this sense: the beginning of the Gospel was or became (ἐγένετο) John the Baptist. All three ways give a perfectly good meaning. In favour of the first view is the absence of the article before ἀρχή; against it has been alleged (Holtzmann, H. C.) that καθὼς in Matthew and Mark always connects with what goes before, never introduces a protasis as in Lk. vi. 31.—τοῦ εὐαγγελίου ἰ. Χ., the good news concerning, not preached by, ἰ. Χ. being genitive objective; not quite the evangelic record, but on its way to that final meaning of εὐαγγέλιον. “Christ” here appears as a proper name, as in Mt. i. 1.—υἱοῦ τ. Θεοῦ; this title, even if omitted, is implicit in the title Christ, but it is every way likely to have formed a part of the original text, as indicating the point of view in which Jesus is to be presented to readers of the Gospel. Without assuming any acquaintance on the part of the evangelist with the Gospel of the Infancy in Matthew and Luke we may say that this title takes the place of the opening chapters in these Gospels. It is all that Mark offers to gratify the curiosity to which these chapters owe their origin. Who is this remarkable Personage of whom you write? He is “the Son of God”. How much that was meant to convey cannot be certainly determined.

Vv. 2-4. καθὼς introduces a prophetic

σου ἔμπροσθέν σου.<sup>1</sup> 3. Φωνὴ βοῶντος ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ, “Ἐτοιμάσατε τὴν ὁδὸν Κυρίου· εὐθείας ποιεῖτε τὰς τρίβους αὐτοῦ.”<sup>2</sup> 4. Ἐγένετο Ἰωάννης<sup>3</sup> βαπτίζων ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ, καὶ<sup>4</sup> κηρύσσων βάπτισμα μετανοίας εἰς ἄφεσιν ἁμαρτιῶν. 5. καὶ ἐξεπορεύετο πρὸς αὐτὸν πᾶσα ἡ Ἰουδαία χώρα, καὶ οἱ Ἱεροσολυμίται· καὶ ἐβαπτίζοντο πάντες<sup>5</sup> ἐν τῷ Ἰορδάνῃ ποταμῷ ὑπ’ αὐτοῦ,<sup>6</sup> ἔξομολογούμενοι τὰς ἁμαρτίας αὐτῶν. 6. ἦν δὲ<sup>6</sup> Ἰωάννης<sup>6</sup> ἐνδεδυμένος τρίχας καμήλου, καὶ ζώην δερματίνην περὶ τὴν ὀσφῆν αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἔσθων<sup>7</sup> ἀκρίδας καὶ μέλι ἄγριον. 7. Καὶ ἐκήρυσσε, λέγων, “Ἐρχεται ὁ ἰσχυρότερός μου ὀπίσω μου, οὗ οὐκ εἰμί ἰκανὸς ἅψασθαι τὸν

<sup>a</sup> John viii. 6. S.

<sup>1</sup> ἔμπροσθεν σου omitted in NBDL al. It is probably from Mt. xi. 10.

<sup>2</sup> ο before βαπτίζων in NBLA (Tisch., Trg., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> καὶ in NDL al. (Tisch.), but wanting in B 33 al. (W.H. omit).

<sup>4</sup> πάντες before καὶ εβαπ. in NBDL. <sup>5</sup> ὑπ αὐτου before ἐν τῷ Ι. in NBL 33.

<sup>6</sup> καὶ ἦν in NBL 33, and ο before Ι. in NBLΣ. <sup>7</sup> ἐσθων in NBLA 33.

citation as protasis to the historical statement about John in ver. 4 = in accordance with, etc., John appeared. The prophetic reference and the historical statement are given in inverse order in Matthew.—ἐν τῷ Ἰσραὴλ, in Isaiah, the actual quotation being from Isaiah and Malachi (ver. 2) conjointly. An inaccuracy doubtless, but not through an error of memory (Meyer and Weiss), but through indifference to greater exactness, the quotation from Isaiah being what chiefly occupied the mind. It is something analogous to attraction in grammar. It is Mark's only prophetic citation on his own account.—Ἰδοὺ begins the quotation from Mal. iii. 1, given as in Mt. xi. 10, with μου, after προσώπου and ὁδόν, changed into σου.—Ver. 3. Quotation from Is. xl. 3 as in Mt. iii. 3.—Ver. 4. ἐγένετο Ἰ.: in accordance with, and in fulfilment of, these prophetic anticipations, appeared John.—ὁ βαπτίζων = the Baptist (substantive participle), that the function by which he was best known.—εἰς ἄφεσιν ἁμαρτιῶν: this clause (in Luke, and in Matthew) may plausibly be represented as a Christianised version of John's baptism (Weiss), but of course John's preaching and baptism implied that if men really repented they would be forgiven (Holtz., H. C.).

Vv. 5-8. Ver. 5 describes the widespread character of the movement much as in Mt., only that Judaea comes before Jerusalem, and the district of the Jordan is not mentioned.—Ver. 6 describes John's way of life as in Mt., ἐνδεδυμένος standing for εἶχεν τὸ ἔνδυμα, and ἔσθων for ἡ τροφή ἦν.—Ver. 7. καὶ ἐκήρυσσεν, introducing a special and very important part of his kyrygma: inter alia he kept saying—anxious to prevent men from forming a wrong impression of his position. This is what makes mention of his ministry relevant in the evangelic record.—λύσαι τὸν ἱμάντα, to loose the latchet of, instead of τὰ ὑποδ. βαστάσαι; a stronger expression of subordination, practically the same idea.—Ver. 8. πνεύματι ἁγίῳ: καὶ πυρὶ omitted, whereby the view presented of Messiah's function becomes less judicial, more Christian. Mt.'s account here is truer to John's conception of the Messiah. Mk.'s was probably influenced by the destination of his Gospel for Gentile readers.

Vv. 9-11. The baptism of Jesus (Mt. iii. 13-17; Lk. iii. 21, 22).—Ver. 9. ἐν ἐκείναις τ. ἡ. = in those days; an indefinite note of time = while John was carrying on his ministry of preaching and baptising.—ἦλθεν Ἰησοῦς, came Jesus, with what feelings, as compared with Pharisees and Sadducees, vide notes on Mt.—ἀπὸ Ναζ. τ. Γαλ., from Nazareth, presumably His home; of Galilee, to define the part of the country for outsiders; only Galilee mentioned in Mt.—εἰς τὸν Ἰ.: ἐν with dative in ver. 5. The expression is pregnant, the idea of descending into the river being latent in εἰς.—ὑπὸ Ἰωάν., by John; no hesitation indicated; cf. remarks on three synoptical narratives on this point in Mt. It does ἕϊμάντα τῶν ὑποδημάτων αὐτοῦ. 8. ἐγὼ μὲν<sup>1</sup> ἐβάπτισα ὑμᾶς ἐν<sup>2</sup> ὕδατι· αὐτὸς δὲ βαπτίσει ὑμᾶς ἐν<sup>2</sup> Πνεύματι Ἀγίῳ.” 9. Καὶ<sup>3</sup> ἐγένετο ἐν ἐκείναις ταῖς ἡμέραις, ἦλθεν Ἰησοῦς ἀπὸ Ναζαρετ τῆς Γαλιλαίας, καὶ ἐβαπτίσθη ὑπὸ Ἰωάννου εἰς τὸν Ἰορδάνην.<sup>4</sup> 10. καὶ εὐθὺς<sup>5</sup> ἀναβαίνων ἀπὸ τοῦ ὕδατος, εἶδε σχιζομένους τοὺς οὐρανοὺς, καὶ τὸ Πνεῦμα ὡσεὶ<sup>6</sup> περιστερὰν καταβαίνον ἐπ’<sup>7</sup> αὐτόν. 11. καὶ φωνῆ ἐγένετο ἐκ τῶν οὐρανῶν, “Σὺ εἶ ὁ υἱὸς μου ὁ ἀγαπητός, ἐν ᾧ<sup>8</sup> εὐδόκησα.” 12. Καὶ εὐθὺς τὸ Πνεῦμα αὐτὸν<sup>9</sup> ἐκβάλλει εἰς τὴν ἔρημον. 13. καὶ ἦν ἐκεῖ<sup>9</sup> ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ ἡμέρας τεσσαράκοντα,<sup>10</sup> πειραζόμενος ὑπὸ τοῦ Σατανᾶ, καὶ ἦν μετὰ τῶν θηρίων· καὶ οἱ ἄγγελοι διηκόνουν αὐτῷ.

<sup>1</sup> BL 33, 69 verss. omit μὲν, doubtless a gram. cor. to answer to δε.

<sup>2</sup> The first ἐν not in BL cursives, the second not in BL (Tisch. omits first, W. H. both).

<sup>3</sup> B omits καὶ (W. H., in margin).

<sup>4</sup> εἰς τὸν ἰ. ὑπο ἰω. in BL 33, 69 al.

<sup>5</sup> The best texts have εὐθὺς uniformly in Mk. <sup>6</sup> ὡς in ABDLD.

<sup>7</sup> εἰς αὐτὸν in BD 13, 69.

<sup>8</sup> σοὶ in BLAΔΣ (Tisch., W. H.).

<sup>9</sup> ABDL 33 omit ἐκεῖ, meant originally perhaps as a substitute for ἐν τῇ ἐρημῷ following.

<sup>10</sup> τεσσ. ἡμέρας in BL 33.

not even appear whether John had any suspicion that the visitor from Nazareth was ὁ ἰσχυρότερος, of whom he had spoken. The manner in which the baptism of Jesus is reported is the first instance of the realism of this Gospel, facts about Jesus stated in a naked manner as compared, e.g., with Lk., who is influenced by religious decorum.—Ver. 10. εὐθὺς, straightway, a favourite word of Mk.'s, to be taken with εἶδε = as soon as He had ascended, etc., He saw. For similar usage in reference to εἶτα vide Hermann, Viger, p. 772.—σχιζομένους, being rent asunder, a sudden event; a stronger word than that used in Mt. and Lk. (ἀνεψύθησαν—ἦναι). The subject of εἶδε is Jesus.—εἰς αὐτόν: this reading suggests the idea of a descent not merely upon (ἐπὶ) but into Him, as if to take up its abode; henceforth the immanent spirit of Jesus.

Vv. 12, 13. The temptation (Mt. iv. 1-11; Lk. iv. 1-13).—Ver. 12. ἐκβάλλει: historic present, much used in Mk. with lively effect; introduces a new situation. The first thing the Spirit does (εὐθὺς) is to drive Jesus into the wilderness, the expression not implying reluctance of Jesus to go into so wild a place (Weiss), but intense preoccupation of mind. Allowing for the weakening of the sense in Hellenistic usage (H. C.), it is a very strong word, and a second instance of Mk.'s realism: Jesus thrust out into the inhospitable desert by force of thought. De Wette says that the ethical significance of the temptation is lost in Mk.'s meagre narrative, and that it becomes a mere marvellous adventure. I demur to this. The one word ἐκβάλλει tells the whole story, speaks as far as may be the unspeakable. Mt. and Lk. have tried to tell us what happened, but have they given us more than a dim shadow of the truth?—Ver. 13. πειραζόμενος, being tempted, presumably the whole time; doubtless the real truth. Two powers at work all through, the Spirit of God and the spirit of evil.—ἦν μετὰ τ. θηρ.: not merely pictorial or intended to hint danger; meant rather to indicate the uninhabited nature of the place; no supplies obtainable there, hunger therefore a part of the experience.—οἱ ἄγγελοι: angels as opposed, not to devils (Schanz), but to human beings, of whom there were none.—διηκόνουν, ministered; in what way not said, but implying exhaustion. These few touches of Mk. suggest a vivid picture of a spiritual crisis: intense preoccupation, instinctive retreat into congenial grim solitudes, temptation, struggle, fierce and protracted, issuing here. Lk.

iii. 16.
John i. 27
(Acts xxii.
25 of things to bind prisoners)

cf. in Mt.
ix. 38.
John x. 4.

14. ΜΕΤΑ ΔΕ<sup>1</sup> τὸ παραδοθῆναι τὸν Ἰωάννην, ἦλθεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἰς τὴν Γαλιλαίαν, κηρῦσων τὸ εὐαγγέλιον τῆς βασιλείας<sup>2</sup> τοῦ Θεοῦ, 15. καὶ λέγων,<sup>3</sup> “Ὅτι πεπλήρωται ὁ καιρὸς, καὶ ἤγγικεν ἡ βασιλεία

τοῦ Θεοῦ· μετανοεῖτε, καὶ<sup>4</sup> πιστεύετε<sup>4</sup> ἐν τῷ εὐαγγελίῳ.”

<sup>1</sup> Iohn iii. 15 (with ev.).

16. Πέριπατῶν δὲ<sup>4</sup> παρὰ τὴν θάλασσαν τῆς Γαλιλαίας, εἶδε Σίμωνα καὶ Ἀνδρέαν τὸν ἀδελφὸν αὐτοῦ,<sup>5</sup> βάλλοντας ἀμφίβληστρον<sup>6</sup> ἐν τῇ θαλάσῃ· ἦσαν γὰρ ἀλιεῖς· 17. καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Δεῦτε ὀπίσω μου, καὶ ποιήσω ὑμᾶς γενέσθαι ἀλιεῖς ἀνθρώπων.”

18. Καὶ εὐθέως ἀφέντες τὰ δίκτυα αὐτῶν<sup>7</sup> ἠκολούθησαν αὐτῷ.

19. Καὶ προβὰς ἐκεῖθεν<sup>8</sup> ὀλίγον, εἶδεν Ἰάκωβον τὸν τοῦ Ζεβεδαίου, καὶ Ἰωάννην τὸν ἀδελφὸν αὐτοῦ, καὶ αὐτοὺς ἐν τῷ πλοίῳ καταρτίζοντας τὰ δίκτυα. 20. καὶ εὐθέως ἐκάλεσεν αὐτούς· καὶ ἀφέντες τὸν πατέρα αὐτῶν Ζεβεδαῖον ἐν τῷ πλοίῳ μετὰ τῶν μισθῶν, ἀπῆλθον ὀπίσω αὐτοῦ.

<sup>1</sup> μετα· δε in  $\aleph$ L $\Delta$  $\Sigma$  (Tisch.). καὶ μετα in BD (W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> τῆς βασιλ. omit  $\aleph$ BL 33; brought in by scribes as the usual phrase.

<sup>3</sup> καὶ λέγων omitted in  $\aleph$  (Tisch., W.H., in brackets); found in BLD.

<sup>4</sup> καὶ παραγων in  $\aleph$ BDL 13, 33, 69 al. T.R. assimilated to Mt. iv. 18.

<sup>5</sup> Σιμωνος in  $\aleph$ BL.

<sup>6</sup> For βαλλ. ἀμφίβλ. (from Mt. iv. 18)  $\aleph$ BL have ἀμφιβαλλοντας (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>7</sup> αὐτῶν omitted in  $\aleph$ BCL.

<sup>8</sup> BDL omit ἐκεῖθεν.

in weakness, calling for preternatural aid.

Vv. 14-20. The Galilean ministry begins (Mt. iv. 12-22; Lk. iv. 14).—Ver. 14. τὸ εὐαγγ. τ. θεοῦ: the Gospel of God, the good news sent by God to men through Jesus, a strong name for Christ's message.—Ver. 15. ἡ βασιλεία τ. θ.: this defines more precisely the gospel Jesus preaches. It is the gospel of the Kingdom of God. But even this is vague. The kingdom may be differently conceived: as an awful thing or as a beneficent thing. The summons following throws light on its nature.—μετανοεῖτε καὶ πιστεύετε: “repent” echoes John's preaching, and savours of awe, but “believe” is a new word, and presumably the watchword of the new ministry. And the name for the message to be believed settles the nature of the kingdom. Its coming is good news (ἐν τῷ εὐαγγελίῳ). For πιστεύειν ἐν, vide Gal. iii. 26, Eph. i. 13.—Ver. 16. ἀμφιβάλλοντας, just because different from Mt.'s expression, to which the T. R. assimilates Mk.'s, is likely to be the true reading, and is very expressive: casting about (their nets understood, here only).—Ver. 17. γενέσθαι: I will make you become, implying a gradual process of training; therefore the disciples called as early as possible.—Ver. 20. μετὰ μισθῶν: they left their father with the hired assistants. This is taken by some as a merely pictorial trait, but others justly regard it as a touch of humanity. It comforted Mk. and probably his voucher Peter that the two brothers did not need to leave their father alone. He could do without them.

Vv. 21-28. First appearance in the synagogue; first impressions (Lk. iv. 31-37).—Ver. 21. εἰσπορεύονται: Jesus and the four newly acquired disciples enter or arrive at.—Καπ., Capernaum; first mention. From Mk.'s narrative alone we should gather that Jesus arrived at Capernaum on His way northwards from the south—from the Jordan to Galilee, then along the shore of the lake to Capernaum.—εὐθέως: seems to imply arrival on Sabbath.—σάββασιν: dative plural as if from σάββας; plural, after analogy of names for feast days (τὰ ἄζυμα, τὰ γενέσια, τὰ ἐγκαίνια).—ἐδίδασκε: Mt. in his general summary of the Galilean ministry applies both this word and κηρῦσσω to Christ's synagogue utterances. These, addressed to a

21. Καὶ εἰσπορεύονται εἰς Καπερναοῦμ· καὶ εὐθέως τοῖς σάββασι
 εἰσελθὼν εἰς τὴν συναγωγὴν, ἐδίδασκε.<sup>1</sup> 22. καὶ ἐξεπλήσσοντο ἐπὶ
 τῇ διδαχῇ αὐτοῦ· ἦν γὰρ διδάσκων αὐτοὺς ὡς ἐξουσίαν ἔχων, καὶ οὐχ ὡς οἱ γραμματεῖς. 23. Καὶ<sup>2</sup> ἦν ἐν τῇ συναγωγῇ αὐτῶν ἄνθρωπος ὃ ἐν πνεύματι ὁ ἀκαθάρτω, καὶ ἀνέκραξε, 24. λέγων, “Ἐα,<sup>3</sup> τί ἡμῖν καὶ σοί, Ἰησοῦ Ναζαρηνέ; ἦλθες ἀπολέσαι ἡμᾶς; οἶδα<sup>4</sup> σε τίς εἶ, ὁ ἅγιος τοῦ Θεοῦ.” 25. Καὶ ἐπετίμησεν αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, λέγων, “Φιμώθητι, καὶ ἔξελθε ἐξ αὐτοῦ.” 26. Καὶ ὁ σπαράξαν αὐτὸν τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἀκάθαρτον, καὶ κράξαν<sup>5</sup> φωνῇ μεγάλῃ, ἐξῆλθεν ἐξ αὐτοῦ.
 27. καὶ ἡ θάμβηθησαν πάντες,<sup>6</sup> ὥστε συζητεῖν πρὸς αὐτούς,<sup>7</sup>

<sup>e</sup> again in Ch. v. 12.
<sup>f</sup> same exp.
 in John
 vi. 69
 (W.H.).
<sup>g</sup> Ch. ix. 20.
 Lk. ix. 39.
<sup>h</sup> Ch. x. 24, 32 (Wisdom xvii.
 3).

<sup>1</sup> εἰσελθων . . . ἐδίδασκε (T.R.) is the reading of BD (W.H. text). Some copies omit εἰσελθων, and place ἐδίδασκε before εἰς τ. συν.; so  $\aleph$ L (Tisch., W.H., in margin. Ws. retains, T.R.).

<sup>2</sup> καὶ ευθὺς in  $\aleph$ BL 33; ευθὺς left out because not understood.

<sup>3</sup> εα not in  $\aleph$ BD. It probably comes in from Lk. (iv. 34).

<sup>4</sup> οἶδαμεν in  $\aleph$ LD (Tisch., W.H., in margin), οἶδα in BCD $\Sigma$ ; probably correct.

<sup>5</sup> φωνησαν in  $\aleph$ BL 33 (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>6</sup> απαντες in  $\aleph$ BL; παντες in CD $\Delta$  al.

<sup>7</sup>  $\aleph$ CD $\Delta$  $\Sigma$  have προς εαυτους (W.H. marg.).  $\aleph$ B have simply αυτους (Tisch., W.H., text. Ws.).

popular audience, would come more properly under the head of kerygma than of didache.—Ver. 22. ἐξεπλήσσοντο: they were amazed; a strong word, several times in Mk. (Mt. vii. 28).—ὡς ἐξουσίαν ἔχων, etc.: a similar remark in Mt. vii. 29 (see notes there) appended to Sermon on Mount. Mk. gives no discourse, but only notes the impression made. “A poor substitute for the beautiful Sermon on the Mount” (Schanz). Doubtless, but let us be thankful for what we do get: a record of the impression made by Christ’s very first appearance in the synagogue, witnessing to a striking individuality. Mk. omits much, and is in many ways a meagre Gospel, but it makes a distinctive contribution to the evangelic history in showing by a few realistic touches (this one of them) the remarkable personality of Jesus.

Vv. 23–28. The demoniac.—Ver. 23. εὐθὺς: almost = ἰδοῦ, Matthew’s word for introducing something important.—αὐτῶν, in their synagogue, i.e., the synagogue of the same men who had been surprised at Christ’s preaching. They are to get a new surprise, though one would have been enough for one day. We also get a surprise, for nothing in Mark’s narrative thus far has prepared us to expect such an event as is reported. In his general sketch of the Galilean ministry (iv. 23–25) Matthew combines the three features: preaching, teaching, and healing.—ἐν π. ἀ. = with an unclean spirit (Maldonatus, Holtz., H. C.), in the power of, possessed by, Meyer, Weiss, Keil, etc. An unclean spirit is Mark’s standing name for what Matthew commonly calls δαίμων or δαιμόνιον.—Ver. 24. τί ἡμῖν καὶ σοί, what to us and to Thee. The diseased man speaks for the demon in him, and the demon speaks for the fraternity as all having one interest. For the phrase used in a similar sense vide 1 Kings xvii. 18.—Ναζαρηνέ: first certain intimation (cf. ver. 9) that Jesus belonged to Nazareth. The corresponding adjective in Matthew is Ναζωραῖος (ii. 23).—ἦλθες ἀ. ἡ. may be either a question or an assertion, the sense of the whole passage being: Thou art come to destroy us, for I know well who Thou art—the Holy One of God (Fritzsche). The epithet, ἅγιος, applied to Jesus is in antithesis to ἀκαθάρτω.—Ver. 25. φιμώθητι: vide at Mt. xxii. 12.—Ver. 26. σπαράξαν, convulsing, throwing into a spasm. This reveals a characteristic of the malady under which the man suffered. He appears to have been an epileptic. The Gadarene demoniac was a madman. This was the final fit before recovery.—Ver. 27. ἐθάμβηθησαν: another strong word peculiar to Mark = they were λέγοντας, "Τί ἐστὶ τοῦτο; τίς ἡ διδαχὴ ἡ καινὴ αὕτη, ὅτι<sup>1</sup> κατ' ἐξουσίαν καὶ τοῖς πνεύμασι τοῖς ἀκαθάρτοις ἐπιτάσσει, καὶ ὑπακούουσιν αὐτῷ;" 28. Ἐξῆλθε δὲ<sup>2</sup> ἡ ἀκοὴ αὐτοῦ εὐθὺς<sup>3</sup> εἰς ὄλην τὴν περίχωρον τῆς Γαλιλαίας.

29. Καὶ εὐθὺς ἐκ τῆς συναγωγῆς ἐξεληθόντες, ἦλθον<sup>4</sup> εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν Σίμωνος καὶ Ἀνδρέου, μετὰ Ἰακώβου καὶ Ἰωάννου. 30. ἡ δὲ <sup>there and in</sup> <sup>Mt. viii.</sup> <sup>14.</sup> πενθερὰ Σίμωνος κατέκειτο ἑπύρεσσοσα. καὶ εὐθὺς λέγουσιν

<sup>1</sup> The scribes have flattened the text here into commonplace, and left only one cause of wonder instead of two. The true reading, because realistic, true to life, is doubtless that of NBL: διδαχὴ καινὴ κατ' ἐξουσίαν καὶ, in which κατ' ἐξ. may be joined either to what goes before or to what follows.

<sup>2</sup> καὶ ἐξῆλθεν in NBCDLΔΣ 33.

<sup>3</sup> BCL add πανταχοῦ after εὐθὺς. It may have fallen out by similar ending (αυτοῦ). <sup>4</sup> ἐξελθῶν ἦλθεν in BΔΣ old Latin verss. (W.H. marg.). The T.R. is supported by NACL (Tisch.).

astonished, i.e., at the sudden and complete recovery. They saw at a glance that the attack had not run its usual course.—ὥστε with the infinitive here expressing result.—συζητεῖν, to seek together; in N. T. tropical = to inquire of one another, to discuss. The word occurs several times in Mark.—τί ἐστὶ τοῦτο; The question refers to the whole appearance of Jesus in the synagogue that day. One surprise following close on another provoked wondering inquiry as to the whole phenomenon. The words following state the twofold ground of their astonishment: (1) διδαχὴ καινὴ κατ' ἐξουσίαν, a style of teaching new as to authoritativeness (entirely different from the familiar type of the scribes); (2) καὶ τοῖς πνεύμασι τοῖς ἀκαθάρτοις ἐπιτάσσει, etc., also He commandeth the unclean spirits so that they obey Him. Both equally unlooked for: the former a moral miracle, the latter a physical; both revealing an imperial spirit exercising sway over the minds and bodies of men.—Ver. 28. ἡ ἀκοή, the report, as in Mt. xiv. 1, xxiv. 6.—εὐθὺς, expressive of the lightning speed with which rumour travels = πανταχοῦ = πανταχοῖ, in every direction.—εἰς ὄλην τ. π. τ. Γαλ., a vague phrase suggestive of a wide range of circulation, even beyond the boundaries of Galilee. But that can hardly be meant. Recent interpreters take it as meaning that the fame spread into the Galilean environment of Capernaum, along the lake north and south, and back into the hill country.

Similarity at certain points in this incident to the story of the Gadarene demoniac, especially in the deprecatory speech (ver. 24, Mt. viii. 29), has suggested the hypothesis of borrowing on one side or other. Keim thinks this not a real history but an acted programme, like the change of water into wine in John ii., and like the preaching programme in Lk. iv. (L. 7., ii. 165, 203), a mere duplicate of the Gadara story. Weiss thinks the words spoken by the demoniac (ver. 34) are borrowed from that story, and that Mark reproduces the features with which Peter was wont to describe such cases. The life-like reflections of the spectators (ver. 27) powerfully witness for the reality of the occurrence.

Vv. 29-31. Cure of Peter's mother-in-law (Mt. viii. 14, 15; Lk. iv. 38, 39).—ἐξεληθόντες ἦλθον: even if the reading of B (participle and verb singular) be the true one, as it probably is just because the more difficult, the implied fact is that Jesus left the synagogue accompanied by His disciples, probably all four, Simon and Andrew as well as James and John. Jesus came from the synagogue to the house of Simon and Andrew, with them, and with James and John.—Ver. 30. πυρέσσοσα (same word in Matthew), fevered, or feverish, doubtless a common occurrence in the damp, marshy flats by the lake.—λέγουσι αὐτῷ π. α., forthwith they tell Him about her, not necessarily as expecting Him to heal her, but to account for her absence, or as one naturally tells a friend of family troubles.—Ver. 31. ἤγειρεν, etc., He took hold of her hand and so raised her up, the cure taking place simultaneously. In Matthew the touch (ἥψατο) is the αὐτῷ περὶ αὐτῆς. 31. καὶ προσελθὼν ἤγειρεν αὐτήν, κρατήσας τῆς χειρὸς αὐτῆς<sup>1</sup>· καὶ ἀφήκεν αὐτήν ὁ ἵπυρετὸς εὐθὺς,<sup>2</sup> καὶ διηκόνει<sup>j</sup> αὐτοῖς. 32. Ὁψίας δὲ γενομένης, ὅτε ἔδου<sup>8</sup> ὁ ἥλιος, ἔφερον πρὸς αὐτὸν πάντας τοὺς κακῶς ἔχοντας καὶ τοὺς δαιμονιζομένους·<sup>k</sup> 33. καὶ ἡ πόλις ὅλη ἐπισυνηγμένη ἦν<sup>4</sup> πρὸς τὴν θύραν. 34. καὶ ἐθεράπευσε πολλοὺς κακῶς ἔχοντας ποικίλαις νόσοις· καὶ δαιμόνια πολλὰ ἐξέβαλε, καὶ οὐκ ἤφιε λαλεῖν τὰ δαιμόνια, ὅτι ᾔδεισαν αὐτόν. 35. Καὶ πρῶτ<sup>5</sup> ἔννυχον<sup>5</sup> λίαν ἀναστὰς ἐξῆλθε, καὶ ἀπῆλθεν εἰς ἔρημον τόπον, κάκει προσήχητο. 36. καὶ<sup>1</sup> κατεδίωξαν<sup>6</sup> αὐτὸν ὁ<sup>7</sup> ἵπυρετὸς<sup>l</sup> here only in N.T.

<sup>1</sup> NBL omit αὐτῆς.

<sup>2</sup> NBCL 33 al. omit εὐθὺς.

<sup>3</sup> BD had εδουσε, which being used transitively by the Greeks was likely to be corrected into εδου by the ancient revisers.

<sup>4</sup> For ἡ πόλις . . . ἦν NBCL 33 have ἡν ὅλη ἡ πόλις ἐπισυνηγμένη (Tisch. W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> ἐννυχα in NBCL (modern editions).

<sup>6</sup> κατεδίωξεν in NB, which revisers would readily change into the plural.

<sup>7</sup> NBL omit ο.

means of cure. Holtz. (H. C.) thinks Jesus took hold of her hand simply by way of greeting, and that the result was unexpected, Jesus thus discovering an unsuspected power.

Vv. 32-34. Cures on Sabbath evening (Mt. viii. 16, 17; Lk. iv. 40, 41).—Ver. 32. ὁψίας, etc.: exact indication of time by two phrases, on the arrival of evening when the sun set; evening a vague phrase = late afternoon. It was Sabbath, and the people would wait till sunset when Sabbath closed. Hence the double note of time. So most recent commentators, also Victor Ant. in Cramer's Catena (ἐπειδὴ ἐνόμιζον μὴ ἐξεῖναι τινι θεραπεύειν σαββάτῳ, τούτου χάριν τοῦ σαββάτου τὸ πέρασ ἀνέμενον). Matthew and Luke divide Mark's phrases between them. The first sufficed for Matthew because he says nothing of its being Sabbath. This instance of duality in expression in Mark has done service in connection with Griesbach's hypothesis that Mark is made up from Matthew and Luke.—κακῶς ἔχοντας, such as were ailing, peculiar to Mark.—τοὺς δαιμονιζομένους: them specially, because of what happened in the synagogue.—Ver. 33. ὅλη ἡ πόλις, a colloquial exaggeration.—πρὸς τ. θύραν: the door of Peter's house. Meyer thinks that in the interval Jesus had gone to His own house, and that it was there the people gathered. But does Mark's gospel think of Jesus as having a residence in Capernaum? Weiss answers in the negative.—Ver.

34. πολλοὺς, many; not all? In Matthew many are brought and all are healed.—ἤφιε, allow, imperfect, as if from ἀφίω with augment on preposition, again in xi. 16; prorsus barbara (Fritzsche).—ὅτι ᾔδεισαν α., because they knew Him. On the insight of demoniacs cf. at Mt. viii. 28 ff.

Vv. 35-39. Flight from Capernaum (Lk. iv. 42-44).—Ver. 35. πρῶτ<sup>5</sup>, early, an elastic word, the last watch from three to six, defined more exactly by ἐννυχα λίαν = much in the night, at the beginning of the watch, or at the dark hour before dawn.—ἐννυχα is the neuter plural of ἐννυχος, nocturnal, used as an adverb (here only).—ἀναστὰς, etc.: He rose up, went out of Capernaum, went away to a desert, solitary place, and there engaged in prayer. It was a kind of flight from Capernaum, the scene of those remarkable occurrences; "flight from the unexpected reality into which His ideal conception of His calling had brought Him," Holtz., H. C. The real reason of the flight was doubtless a desire to preach in as many synagogues as possible before the hostility of the scribes, instinctively dreaded, had time to act obstructively. Jesus had a plan of a preaching tour in Galilee (vide ver. 38), and He felt He could not begin too soon. He left in the night, fearing opposition from the people.—Ver. 36. κατεδίωξεν: followed Him up; almost pursued Him as a fugitive; verb singular, though more than one followed,

Σίμων καὶ οἱ μετ' αὐτοῦ· 37. καὶ εὐρόντες αὐτόν,<sup>1</sup> λέγουσιν αὐτῷ, “Ὅτι πάντες ζητοῦσί σε.” 38. Καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς, “Ἄγωμεν<sup>2</sup> εἰς
 τὰς ἐχομένας<sup>3</sup> κωμοπόλεις, ἵνα κἀκεῖ κηρύξω· εἰς τοῦτο γὰρ ἐξελήλυθα.”<sup>3</sup> 39. Καὶ ἦν<sup>4</sup> κηρύσσων ἐν ταῖς συναγωγαῖς<sup>5</sup> αὐτῶν, εἰς ὅλην τὴν Γαλιλαίαν, καὶ τὰ δαιμόνια ἐκβάλλων.

40. Καὶ ἔρχεται πρὸς αὐτὸν λεπρός, παρακαλῶν αὐτὸν καὶ γονυ-πετῶν αὐτόν,<sup>6</sup> καὶ<sup>7</sup> λέγων αὐτῷ, “Ὅτι, ἐὰν θέλῃς, δύνασαι με καθαρίσαι.” 41. Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς<sup>8</sup> σπλαγχνισθεὶς, ἐκτείνας τὴν χεῖρα, ἤψατο αὐτοῦ,<sup>9</sup> καὶ λέγει αὐτῷ, “Θέλω, καθαρῖσθητι.” 42. Καὶ εἰπόντος αὐτοῦ,<sup>10</sup> εὐθέως, ἀπήλθεν ἀπ' αὐτοῦ ἡ λέπρα, καὶ ἐκαθαρίσθη.

<sup>1</sup> NBL have ευρον αυτον και.

<sup>2</sup> NBCL 33 add αλλαχου, a rare word (here only in Mk.), and apparently superfluous, therefore likely to be omitted.

<sup>3</sup> NBCL 33 have εξηλθον, doubtless the true reading, changed into εξεληλυθα because the meaning was not understood and under the influence of Lk. Jesus is explaining why He left Capernaum so hastily. Vide below.

<sup>4</sup> ηλθεν in NBL Cop. Aeth. verss. (Tisch., W.H.). ην is from Lk. (iv. 44).

<sup>5</sup> εἰς τ. συναγωγας in NABCDLΔ curs. (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>6</sup> BD omit και γονυπετων αυτον, possibly by homoeot. NL have και γονυ without αυτον.

<sup>7</sup> NB 69 omit και.

<sup>8</sup> For ο δε Ι. NBD have simply και (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>9</sup> αυτου ηψατο in NBL.

<sup>10</sup> ειπ. αυτου is a gloss, omitted in NBDL.

Peter, the chief of them, being thought of mainly. A strong term like ἐκβάλλει, ver. 12, all allowance made for weakened force in Hellenistic usage.—Ver. 37. πάντες ζητοῦσί σε, all seek Thee, not merely all the people of Capernaum, but all the world: “nemo non te quaerit,” Fritzsche; a colloquial exaggeration.—Ver. 38. ἄγωμεν: let us go, intransitive; not so used in Greek authors.—κωμοπόλεις, village towns; towns as to extent of population, villages as without walls (Kypke); Oppidula (Beza); here only in N. T., found in Strabo.—κηρύξω: that there I may preach, no word of healing; because no part of His vocation (Klostermann); because subordinate to the preaching (Schanz).—ἐξήλθον: I came out (from Capernaum, ver. 35). This may seem trivial (Keil), but it appears to be the real meaning, and it is so understood by Meyer, Weiss, Holtz., and even Schanz. The Fathers understood the words as meaning: “I am come from heaven”. So Keil. In this clause Weiss finds evidence that in Mk.'s narrative Jesus has no home in Capernaum. He has visited it, done good in it, and now He wants to go elsewhere.—Ver. 39. ἦλθεν (vide critical notes).—εἰς τ. συν. may be connected with ἦλθεν, and the sentence will run thus: He came, preaching, to their synagogues, all over Galilee; also casting out devils, the healing ministry being referred to as subordinate to the teaching. If we connect εἰς τὰς συν. with κηρύσσων the word “synagogues” will refer to the assemblies rather than to the places = preaching to their synagogues, as we might say “preaching to their churches” or “congregations”. For similar expressions cf. xiii. 10, xiv. 9, John viii. 26. This short verse contains the record of an extensive preaching tour, of which not a single discourse has been preserved. Doubtless some of the parables were spoken on these occasions. Note the synagogue, not the market place, was the scene of Christ's addresses; His work religious, not political (Schanz).

Vv. 40-45. The leper (Mt. viii. 1-4; Lk. v. 12-16).—Ver. 40. καὶ ἔρχεται, etc., and there cometh to Him, historic present as so often; where this happened not said, probably an incident of the preaching tour; “in one of the cities,” says Lk.—ἐὰν θέλῃς δύν.: the leper has seen or heard enough of Christ's healing ministry to be sure as to the power. He doubts the will, naturally from the nature of the disease, especially if it be the first cure of the kind, or the first so far as the man knows.—Ver. 41. σπλαγχνισθεὶς, having compassion. Watch carefully

43. Καὶ ἐμβριμησάμενος αὐτῷ, εὐθέως ἐξέβαλεν αὐτόν, 44. καὶ λέγει αὐτῷ, “Ὅρα, μηδενὶ μηδὲν εἴπης· ἀλλ’ ὕπαγε, σεαυτὸν δείξον τῷ ἱερεῖ, καὶ προσένεγκε περὶ τοῦ καθαρισμοῦ σου ἃ προσέταξε Μωσῆς, εἰς μαρτύριον αὐτοῖς.” 45. Ὁ δὲ ἐξελθὼν ἤρξατο κηρύσσειν πολλὰ καὶ διαφημίζειν τὸν λόγον, ὥστε μηκέτι αὐτὸν δύνασθαι <sup>2</sup> φανερώσιν <sup>10.</sup> John vii <sup>Act.</sup> εἰς πόλιν <sup>1</sup> εἰσελθεῖν· ἀλλ’ ἔξω ἐν <sup>2</sup> ἐρήμοις τόποις ἦν, καὶ ἤρχοντο <sup>10.</sup> Act. <sup>2.</sup> πρὸς αὐτὸν πανταχόθεν.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>1</sup> The order of the words varies in the MSS.

<sup>2</sup> εἰπ in  $\aleph$ BLΔ.

<sup>3</sup> παντοθεν in many uncials (Tisch., W.H.).

the portraiture of Christ's personality in this Gospel, Mk.'s speciality.—Ver. 42. ἀπῆλθεν, etc.: another instance of duality, the leprosy left him, and he or it was cleansed. Lk. has the former of the two phrases, Mt. the latter.—καθαρίζειν is Hellenistic for καθαίρειν.—Ver. 43. ἐμβριμησάμενος, etc.: assuming a severe aspect, vide notes on the word at Mt. ix. 30, especially the quotation from Euthy. Zig.—ἐξέβαλεν α., thrust him out of the synagogue or the crowd. It is not quite certain that the incident happened in a synagogue, though the inference is natural from the connection with ver. 39. Lepers were not interdicted from entering the synagogue. These particulars are peculiar to Mk., and belong to his character-sketching. He does not mean to impute real anger to Jesus, but only a masterful manner dictated by a desire that the benefit should be complete = away out of this, to the priest; do what the law requires, that you may be not only clean but recognised as such by the authorities, and so received by the people as a leper no longer.—Ver. 44. εἰς μαρτύριον αὐτοῖς: for a testimony from priest to people, without which the leper would not be received as clean.—Ver. 45. What Jesus feared seems to have happened. The man went about telling of his cure, and neglecting the means necessary to obtain social recognition as cured.—τὸν λόγον: “the matter,” A. V. Perhaps we should translate strictly the word, i.e., the word Jesus spoke: “I will, be thou clean”. So Holtz. after Fritzsche. So also Euthy. Zig. (διεφημίσει τὸν λόγον, ἐν εἰρήκην αὐτῷ ὁ χριστὸς, δηλαδὴ τὸ θέλω, καθαρίσθητι, ὡς μετ’ ἐξουσίας γενόμενον).—εἰς πόλιν: the result was that Jesus could not enter openly into a city, a populous place, but was obliged to remain in retired spots. This cure and the popularity it caused may have co-operated to bring Christ's synagogue ministry to an abrupt termination by stirring up envy. Jesus was between two fires, and His order to the leper, “Go, show thyself,” had a double reference: to the man's good and to the conciliation of the scribes and synagogue rulers.—καὶ ἤρχοντο, etc.: and (still) they kept coming from all quarters. Popularity at its height. There is nothing corresponding to ver. 45 in Mt.

CHAPTER II. INCIPIENT CONFLICT. This chapter and the first six verses of the next report incidents which, though not represented as happening at the same time, have all one aim: to exhibit Jesus as becoming an object of disfavour to the religious classes, the scribes and Pharisees. Sooner or later, and soon rather than later, this was inevitable. Jesus and they were too entirely different in thought and ways for good will to prevail between them for any length of time. It would not be long before the new Prophet would attract their attention. The comments of the people in Capernaum synagogue, doubtless often repeated elsewhere, on the contrast between His style of teaching and that of the scribes, would soon reach their ears, and would not tend to promote a good understanding. That was one definite ground of offence, and others were sure to arise.

Vv. 1-12. The palsied man (Mt. ix. 1-8; Lk. v. 17-26).—Ver. 1. Thereading of  $\aleph$ BL (W.H.) with εἰσελθὼν for εἰσῆλθεν in T. R., and omitting καὶ before ἠκούσθη, gives a ruggedly anacolouthistic construction (“and entering again into Capernaum after days it was heard that He was at home”), which the T. R. very neatly removes. The construction of the sentence, even as it stands in the critically approved text, may be made smoother by taking ἠκούσθη not im-

II. 1. Καὶ πάλιν εἰσῆλθεν<sup>1</sup> εἰς Καπερναοὺμ δι' ἡμερῶν· καὶ<sup>2</sup> ἠκούσθη ὅτι εἰς οἶκόν<sup>3</sup> ἔστι· 2. καὶ εὐθέως συνήχθησαν πολλοί,<sup>a</sup> ὥστε μὴκέτι ἔχωρεῖν μὴδὲ τὰ πρὸς τὴν θύραν· καὶ<sup>b</sup> ἐλάλει αὐτοῖς<sup>c</sup> τὸν λόγον. 3. Καὶ ἔρχονται πρὸς αὐτόν, παραλυτικὸν φέροντες,<sup>d</sup> αἰρόμενον ὑπὸ τεσσάρων. 4. καὶ μὴ δυνάμενοι προσεγγίσει<sup>e</sup> αὐτῷ διὰ τὸν ὄχλον, ἀπεστέγασαν τὴν στέγην ὅπου ἦν, καὶ<sup>f</sup> ἐξορύξαντες<sup>g</sup> χαλῶσι τὸν κράββατον,<sup>6</sup> ἐφ' ᾧ<sup>7</sup> ὁ παραλυτικὸς κατέκειτο.

<sup>1</sup> εἰσελθων πάλιν in  $\aleph$ B $\Delta$ L; probably correct just because of the halting const. which the T.R. rectifies.

<sup>2</sup>  $\aleph$ BL omit καί; for the connection of the words vide below.

<sup>3</sup>  $\aleph$ B $\Delta$ L $\Sigma$  have εν οικω (Tisch., W.H. in text). But εις οικον (C $\Delta$  al.) is to be preferred as the more difficult.

<sup>4</sup>  $\aleph$ BL have φεροντες προς αυτον παραλυτικον.

<sup>5</sup> προσενγκαι in  $\aleph$ BL 33 (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>6</sup> Spelt κραβαττον in most uncials.

<sup>7</sup> ὅπου in  $\aleph$ B $\Delta$ L. εφ ω (T.R.) is explanatory.

personally, but as referring to Jesus. He entering, etc., was heard of as being at home (Schanz and Holtzmann alternatively).—πάλιν, again, a second time, i. 21 mentioning the first. He has not been there apparently since He left it (i. 35) on the preaching tour in Galilee.—δι' ἡμερῶν, after days, cf. Gal. ii. 1; classical examples of this use of διὰ in Wetstein and Elsner. The expression suggests a short period, a few days, which seems too short for the time required for the preaching tour, even if it had been cut short by hostile influence, as is not improbable. The presence of scribes at this scene is very significant. They appear hostile in attitude on Christ's return to Capernaum. They had probably been active before it. Fritzsche translates: interjectis pluribus diebus. For a considerable time διὰ χρόνον would be the appropriate phrase. We get rid of the difficulty by connecting δι' ἡμερῶν with ἠκούσθη (Kloster.), the resulting meaning being that days elapsed after the arrival in Capernaum before people found out that Jesus was there. He had been absent possibly for months, and probably returned quietly.—ἐν οἴκῳ or εἰς οἶκον (T.R.) = at home (in Peter's house presumably); εἰς οἶκον suggests the idea of entrance.—Ver. 2. συνήχθησαν πολλοί: with the extraordinary incidents of some weeks or months ago fresh in their memory, a great gathering of the townspeople was inevitable.—ὥστε, etc.: the gathering was phenomenal; not only the house filled, but the space round about the door crowded—no room for more people even there (μὴδὲ), not to speak of within.—τὸν λόγον: the phrase has a secondary sound, as if an echo of the speech of the apostolic church, but the meaning is plain. Jesus was preaching the gospel of the kingdom when the following incident happened. Preaching always first.—Ver. 3. ἔρχονται: historic present with lively effect. The arrival creates a stir.—φεροντες: this may mean more than the four who actually carried the sick man (ὑπὸ τεσσάρων), friends accompanying. The bearers might be servants (Schanz).—Ver. 4. The particulars in this verse not in Mt., who did not care how they found their way to Jesus; enough for him that they succeeded somehow.—προσεγγίσει (T.R.): here only in N. T. to approach; προσενέγκαι (W.H.), to bring near (the sick man understood) to Him, Jesus.—ἀπεστέγασαν τ. σ., removed the roof, to which they would get access by an outside stair either from the street or from the court.—ὅπου ἦν, where He was; where was that? in an upper room (Lightfoot and Vitringa), or in a room in a one-storied house (Holtz., H. C.), or not in a room at all, but in the atrium or com- pluvium, the quadrangle of the house (Faber, Archäol., Jahn, Archäol.). In the last-mentioned case they would have to remove the parapet (battlement, Deut. xxii. 8) and let the man down into the open space.—ἐξορύξαντες: not something additional to but explanatory of ἀπεστέγασαν = they unroofed by digging through the material—tiles, laths, and

5. ἰδὼν δὲ<sup>1</sup> ὁ Ἰησοῦς τὴν πίστιν αὐτῶν λέγει τῷ παραλυτικῷ, "Τέκνον, ἀφέωνται<sup>2</sup> σοι αἱ ἁμαρτίαι σου."<sup>3</sup> 6. Ἦσαν δέ τινες τῶν γραμματέων ἐκεῖ καθήμενοι, καὶ διαλογιζόμενοι ἐν ταῖς καρδίαις αὐτῶν, 7. "Τί<sup>4</sup> οὗτος οὕτω λαλεῖ βλασφημίας<sup>5</sup>; τίς δύναται ἀφιέναι ἁμαρτίας, εἰ μὴ εἰς, ὁ Θεός;" 8. Καὶ εὐθὺς ἐπιγνοῦς ὁ Ἰησοῦς<sup>6</sup> τῷ πνεύματι αὐτοῦ, ὅτι οὕτως<sup>6</sup> διαλογίζονται ἐν ἑαυτοῖς, f Ch. viii. 12 εἶπεν αὐτοῖς,<sup>7</sup> "Τί ταῦτα διαλογίζεσθε ἐν ταῖς καρδίαις ὑμῶν; 9. τί ἐστὶν εὐκοπώτερον, εἰπεῖν τῷ παραλυτικῷ, Ἀφέωνται<sup>8</sup> σοι<sup>9</sup> αἱ

<sup>1</sup> και ιδων in  $\aleph$ BCL 33.

<sup>2</sup> B 33 have αφιενται. αφεωνται conforms to Lk. (v. 20), and is to be suspected.

<sup>3</sup> For σοι αι αμ. σου (from Lk.)  $\aleph$ B $\Delta$ L $\Delta$  have σου αι αμ.

<sup>4</sup> οτι in B (W. H. marg.).

<sup>5</sup> In the T. R., ουτος ουτω λαλει βλασφημιας, we detect the hand of harmonising and prosaic revisers once more. The true reading is τι (B, οτι) ουτος ουτως λαλει; βλασφημει ( $\aleph$ BDL). Vide below.

<sup>6</sup> B omits ουτως (W. H. in brackets).

<sup>7</sup> λεγει in  $\aleph$ BL 33. B omits αυτοις (W. H. in brackets).

<sup>8</sup> αφιενται in  $\aleph$ B. <sup>9</sup> σου in  $\aleph$ BL al.

plaster.—κράβαττον: a small portable couch, for the poor, for travellers, and for sick people; condemned by Phryn., p. 62; σκίμπους the correct word. Latin grabatus, which may have led Mk. to use the term in the text.—Ver. 5. τὴν πίστιν α., their faith, that of the bearers, shown by their energetic action, the sick man not included (οὐ τὴν πίστιν τοῦ παραλελυμένου ἀλλὰ τῶν κομισάντων, Victor Ant., Cramer, Cat.).—τέκνον, child, without the cheering θάρσει of Mt.

Vv. 6-12. Thus far of the sick man, how he got to Jesus, and the sympathetic reception he met with. Now the scribes begin to play their part. They find their opportunity in the sympathetic word of Jesus: thy sins be forgiven thee; a word most suitable to the case, and which might have been spoken by any man.—τινες τ. γρ.: Lk. makes of this simple fact a great affair: an assembly of Pharisees and lawyers from all quarters—Galilee, Judaea, Jerusalem, hardly suitable to the initial stage of conflict.—ἐκεῖ καθήμενοι: sitting there. If the posture is to be pressed they must have been early on the spot, so as to get near to Jesus and hear and see Him distinctly.—ἐν ταῖς καρδίαις α.: they looked like men shocked and disapproving. The popularity of Jesus prevented free utterance of their thought. But any one could see they were displeased and why. It was that speech about forgiveness.—Ver. 7. τί οὗτος οὕτω λαλεῖ; βλασφημεῖ.

This reading of  $\aleph$ BDL is far more life-like than that of the T. R., which exemplifies the tendency of copyists to smooth down into commonplace whatever is striking and original = why does this person thus speak? He blasphemes. The words suggest a gradual intensification of the fault-finding mood: first a general sense of surprise, then a feeling of impropriety, then a final advance to the thought: why, this is blasphemy! It was nothing of the kind. What Jesus had said did not necessarily amount to more than a declaration of God's willingness to forgive sin to the penitent. They read the blasphemy into it.—Ver. 8. εὐθὺς ἐπιγνοῦς: Jesus read their thoughts at once, and through and through (ἐπι).—τῷ πνεύματι, by His spirit, as distinct from the ear, they having said nothing.—Vv. 9, 10, vide notes on Mt.—Ver. 11. σοὶ λέγω, I say to thee, a part of Christ's speech to the man in Mk., not likely to have been so really; laconic speech, the fewest words possible, characteristic of Jesus.—ἔγειρε, means something more than age (Fritzsche) = come, take up thy bed. Jesus bids him do two things, each a conclusive proof of recovery: rise, then go to thy house on thine own feet, with thy sick-bed on thy shoulder.—Ver. 12 tells how the man did as bidden, to the astonishment of all spectators.—πάντας, all, without exception, scribes included? (Kloster.) It might have been so had the sentence stopped ἀμαρτίαι, ἢ εἰπεῖν, "Ἐγειραι,<sup>1</sup> καὶ<sup>2</sup> ἄρον σου τὸν κράββατον,<sup>3</sup> καὶ περιπάτει; 10. ἵνα δὲ εἰδῆτε, ὅτι ἐξουσίαν ἔχει ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἀφίεναι ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς<sup>4</sup> ἀμαρτίας, (λέγει τῷ παραλυτικῷ,) 11. Σοὶ λέγω ἔγειραι,<sup>5</sup> καὶ<sup>6</sup> ἄρον τὸν κράββατόν σου, καὶ ὕπαγε εἰς τὸν οἶκόν σου." 12. Καὶ ἠγέρθη εὐθέως, καὶ<sup>7</sup> ἄρας τὸν κράββατον, ἐξῆλθεν ἐναντίον<sup>8</sup> πάντων· ὥστε ἐξίστασθαι πάντας, καὶ δοξάζειν τὸν Θεόν, λέγοντας,<sup>9</sup> "Ὅτι οὐδέποτε οὕτως<sup>10</sup> εἶδομεν."

13. Καὶ ἐξῆλθε πάλιν παρὰ τὴν θάλασσαν· καὶ πᾶς ὁ ὄχλος ἤρχετο πρὸς αὐτόν, καὶ ἐδίδασκεν αὐτούς. 14. Καὶ παράγων εἶδε Λευὴν τὸν τοῦ Ἀλφαίου, καθήμενον ἐπὶ τῷ τελωνίῳ, καὶ λέγει αὐτῷ, "Ἀκολούθει μοι." Καὶ ἀναστὰς ἠκολούθησεν αὐτῷ. 15. Καὶ ἐγέ-

<sup>1</sup> εγειρε in  $\aleph$ CD al. (Tisch.). εγειρον in BL (W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> και in  $\aleph$ BD (Tisch.), omit CDL (W.H. in brackets).

<sup>3</sup> τον κραβ. σου in  $\aleph$ BCDL $\Sigma$ .

<sup>4</sup> επι της γης αφιεναι in  $\aleph$ CDL $\Delta\Sigma$  (Tisch.). αφ. αμαρ. επι τ. γ. in B (W.H. text).

<sup>5</sup> εγειρε in most uncials.

<sup>6</sup> και omit  $\aleph$ BCDL.

<sup>7</sup> και ευθως in  $\aleph$ BCL.

<sup>8</sup> εμπροσθεν in  $\aleph$ BL.

<sup>9</sup> B omits (W.H. in brackets). D has και λεγειν. <sup>10</sup> ουτως ουδεποτε  $\aleph$ BDL.

there. For no doubt the scribes were as much astonished as their neighbours at what took place. But they would not join in the praise to God which followed.—οὕτως οὐδέποτε εἶδομεν: elliptical, but expressive, suited to the mental mood = so we never saw, i.e., we never saw the like.

N.B.—The title "Son of Man" occurs in this narrative for the first time in Mk.'s Gospel; vide on Mt. viii. 20, ix. 6.

Vv. 13-17. Call of Levi, feast following (Mt. ix. 9-13; Lk. v. 27-32). This incident is not to be conceived as following immediately after that narrated in the foregoing section.—Ver. 13 interrupts the continuity of the history. It states that Jesus went out again (cf. i. 16) alongside (παρὰ) the sea, that the multitude followed Him, and that He taught them. A very vague general notice, serving little other purpose than to place an interval between the foregoing and following incidents.—Ver. 14. Λευὴν. Levi, the son of Alphaeus, the name here and in Lk. different from that given in first gospel, but the incident manifestly the same, and the man therefore also; Levi his original name, Matthew his apostle name. Mk. names Matthew in his apostle list (iii. 18), but he fails to identify the two, though what he states about Levi evidently points to a call to apostleship similar to that to the four fishermen (i. 16, 20). The compiler of the first Gospel, having Mk. before him, and, noticing the omission, substituted the name Matthew for Levi, adding to it λεγόμενον (ix. 9) to hint that he had another name.—ἀκολούθει μοι: a call to apostleship (in terms identical in all three Synoptics), and also to immediate service in connection with the mission to the publicans (vide on Mt.).—Ver. 15. ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ αὐτοῦ: whose house? Not perfectly clear, but all things point to that of Levi. There is no mention of a return to Capernaum, where Jesus dwelt. The custom house may have been outside the town, nearer the shore. Then if the house of Jesus (Peter's) had been meant, the name of Jesus should have stood after οἰκία instead of at the close of the verse. The main point to note is that whatever house is meant, it must have been large enough to have a hall or court capable of accommodating a large number of people. Furrer assumes as a matter of course that the gathering was in the court. "Here in the court of one of these ruined houses sat the Saviour of the lost in the midst of publicans and sinners" (Wanderungen, p. 375).—πολλοί, etc.: many to be taken in earnest, not slurred over, as we are apt to do when we think of this feast as a private entertainment given by Mt. to his quondam friends, Jesus being nothing more than a guest.—ἦσαν γὰρ πολλοὶ καὶ ἠκολούθουν αὐτῷ: Mk. here takes

νετο ἐν τῷ<sup>1</sup> κατακεῖσθαι αὐτὸν ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ αὐτοῦ, καὶ πολλοὶ τελῶναι καὶ ἁμαρτωλοὶ συναρέκειντο τῷ Ἰησοῦ καὶ τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ· ἦσαν γὰρ πολλοί, καὶ ἠκολούθησαν<sup>2</sup> αὐτῷ. 16. καὶ οἱ γραμματεῖς καὶ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι,<sup>3</sup> ἰδόντες αὐτὸν ἐσθίοντα<sup>4</sup> μετὰ τῶν τελωνῶν καὶ ἁμαρτωλῶν,<sup>5</sup> ἔλεγον τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ, “Τί<sup>6</sup> ὅτι μετὰ τῶν τελωνῶν καὶ ἁμαρτωλῶν ἐσθίει καὶ πίνει;”<sup>7</sup> 17. Καὶ ἀκούσας ὁ Ἰησοῦς λέγει αὐτοῖς, “Οὐ χρεῖαν ἔχουσιν οἱ ἰσχύοντες ἰατροῦ, ἀλλ’ οἱ κακῶς ἔχοντες. οὐκ ἦλθον καλέσαι δικαίους, ἀλλὰ ἁμαρτωλοὺς εἰς μετάνοιαν.”<sup>8</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Instead of εγενετο εν τω  $\aleph$ BL 33 have simply γινεται (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> ηκολουθουν in  $\aleph$ BLΔ (modern editors).

<sup>3</sup> For και οι Φ. BLD have των Φαρισαιων, which doubtless the ancient scribes stumbled at as unusual.

<sup>4</sup> For αυτον εσθιοντα B 33 have οτι εσθιει (W.H., R.G.T.),  $\aleph$ DL οτι ησθιει (Tisch.). The T.R. follows ACΔΣ.

<sup>5</sup> αμαρτωλων και τελωνων in BDL 33, to be preferred just because unusual.

<sup>6</sup> Omit τι BL 33 (W.H.).

<sup>7</sup>  $\aleph$ BD omit και πινει, which the scribes would be ready to insert.

<sup>8</sup>  $\aleph$ ABDLΔΣ al. verss. omit εις μετανοιαν, which has been imported from Lk.

pains to prevent us from overlooking the πολλοὶ of the previous clause = for they, the publicans, and generally the people who passed for sinners, were many, and they had begun to follow Him. Some (Schanz, Weiss, etc.) think the reference is to the disciples (μαθηταῖς), mentioned here for first time, therefore a statement that they were numerous (more, e.g., than four), quite apposite. But the stress of the story lies on the publicans, and Christ's relations with them. (So Holtz., H. C.) It was an interesting fact to the evangelist that this class, of whom there was a large number in the neighbourhood, were beginning to show an interest in Jesus, and to follow Him about. To explain the number Elsner suggests that they may have gathered from various port towns along the shore. Jesus would not meet such people in the synagogue, as they seem to have been excluded from it (vide Lightfoot and Wünsche, ad Mt. xviii. 17). Hence the necessity for a special mission.—Ver. 16. ἔλεγον: the scribes advance from thinking (ii. 6) to speaking; not yet, however, to Jesus but about Him to His disciples. They note, with disapproval, His kindly relations with “sinners”. The publicans and other disreputables had also noted the fact. The story of the palsied man and the “blasphemous” word, “thy sins be forgiven thee,” had got abroad, making them prick up their ears, and awakening decided interest in these tabooed circles, in the “Blasphemer”.—Ver. 17. καλέσαι: to call, suggestive of invitations to a feast (Fritzsche, Meyer, Holtz.), and making for the hypothesis that Jesus, not Matthew, was the real host at the social gathering: the whole plan His, and Matthew only His agent; vide notes on Mt. He called to that particular feast as to the feast of the kingdom, the one a means to the other as the end.—δικαίους, ἁμαρτωλοῦς: Jesus preferred the company of the sinful to that of the righteous, and sought disciples from among them by preference. The terms are not ironical. They simply describe two classes of society in current language, and indicate with which of the two His sympathies lay.

Vv. 18-22. Fasting (Mt. ix. 14-17, Lk. v. 33-39).—Ver. 18. καὶ, and, connection purely topical, another case of conflict.—ἦσαν νηστεύοντες, either: were wont to fast (Grotius, Fritzsche, Schanz, etc.), or, and this gives more point to the story: were fasting at that particular time (Meyer, Weiss, Holtz., H. C.).—ἔρχονται καὶ λέγ., they come and say, quite generally; they = people, or some representatives of John's disciples, and the Pharisees.—Ver. 19. μὴ δύνανται, etc.; the question answers

18. Καὶ ἦσαν οἱ μαθηταὶ Ἰωάννου καὶ οἱ τῶν Φαρισαίων<sup>1</sup> νηστεύοντες· καὶ ἔρχονται καὶ λέγουσιν αὐτῷ, “Διατί οἱ μαθηταὶ Ἰωάννου καὶ οἱ<sup>2</sup> τῶν Φαρισαίων νηστεύουσιν, οἱ δὲ σοὶ μαθηταὶ οὐ νηστεύουσι;” 19. Καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Μὴ δύναται οἱ υἱοὶ τοῦ νυμφῶνος, ἐν ᾧ ὁ νυμφίος μετ’ αὐτῶν ἔστι, νηστεύειν; ὅσον χρόνον μεθ’ ἑαυτῶν ἔχουσι τὸν νυμφίον,<sup>3</sup> οὐ δύναται νηστεύειν· 20. ἔλευσονται δὲ ἡμέραι ὅταν ἀπαρθῇ ἀπ’ αὐτῶν ὁ νυμφίος, καὶ τότε νηστεύσουσιν ἐν ἐκείναις ταῖς ἡμέραις.<sup>4</sup> 21. καὶ<sup>5</sup> οὐδεὶς ἐπίβλημα ῥάκουσ ἀγνάφου ἐπιρράπτει ἐπὶ ἱματίῳ παλαιῷ<sup>6</sup>. εἰ δὲ μή, αἶρει τὸ πλήρωμα αὐτοῦ<sup>7</sup> τὸ καινὸν τοῦ παλαιοῦ, καὶ χεῖρον σχίσμα γίνεται. 22. καὶ οὐδεὶς βάλλει οἶνον νέον εἰς ἀσκοῦς παλαιούς· εἰ δὲ μή, ῥήσσει<sup>8</sup> ὁ οἶνος ὁ νέος<sup>9</sup> τοὺς ἀσκοῦς, καὶ ὁ οἶνος ἐκχεῖται καὶ οἱ ἀσκοὶ ἀπολλοῦνται<sup>10</sup>. ἀλλὰ οἶνον νέον εἰς ἀσκοῦς καινοὺς βλητέον.”<sup>11</sup>

<sup>1</sup> For τῶν Φαρισαίων see ABCD al. verss. have Φαρισαῖοι.

<sup>2</sup> BCL have μαθηταὶ after οἱ.

<sup>3</sup> BCL arrange thus: ἐχουσι τον ν. μετ αυτων.

<sup>4</sup> εν εκεινη τη ημερα in ABCDLΔΣ, etc.

<sup>5</sup> και omit ABCLA 33.

<sup>6</sup> επι ιματιον παλαιον in BCDL. The dat. conforms to Mt.

<sup>7</sup> απ αυτου in BLS

<sup>8</sup> ρηξει in BCDL 33.

<sup>9</sup> BCDL 13, 69 al. omit ο νεος.

<sup>10</sup> BL (D in part) read ο οιν. απολλυται και οι ασ. T.R. conforms to Mt.

<sup>11</sup> B omit βλητεον (from Lk.). D and old Lat. verss. omit the whole clause itself, and is allowed to do so in Mt. and Lk. Mk. at the expense of style answers it formally in the negative.—ὅσον χρόνον, etc. For all this the Syriac Vulgate has a simple no.—Ver. 20. Here also the style becomes burdened by the sense of the solemn character of the fact stated: there will come days when the Bridegroom shall be taken from them, and then shall they fast—in that day! This final expression, ἐν ἐκείνῃ ἡμέρᾳ, singular, for plural in first clause, is very impressive, although Fritzsche calls it proprus intolerabile. There is no ground for the suggestion that the phrase is due to the evangelist, and refers to the Friday of the Passion Week (Holtz., H. C.). It might quite well have been used by Jesus.—Ver. 21. ἐπιρράπτει, sews upon, for ἐπιβάλλει in Mt. and Lk.; not in Greek authors, here only in N. T.; in Sept., Job xvi. 15, the simple verb.—εἰ δὲ μή: vide on εἰ δὲ μήγε in Mt. ix. 17.—αἶρει, etc.: that which filleth up taketh from it (ἀπ’ αὐτοῦ)—the new, viz., from the old; the second clause explanatory of the first.—καὶ χ. σ. γ., and a worse rent takes place.—Ver. 22. ῥήξει. Pricaeus

(ad Mt. ix. 17) quotes from Seneca (83 Epist.): “musto dolia ipsa rumpuntur”—of course, a fortiori, old skins.—καὶ ὁ οἶνος, etc.: and the wine is lost, also the skins.—ἀλλὰ, etc.: this final clause, bracketed in W. and H., with the βλητέον, probably inserted from Lk., gives very pithy expression to the principle taught by the parable: but new wine into new skins! As to the bearing of both parables as justifying both John and Jesus, vide notes on Mt., ad loc.

Vv. 23-28. The Sabbath question (Mt. xii. 1-8, Lk. vi. 1-5).—Ver. 23. καὶ ἐγ. connection with foregoing topical, not temporal; another case of conflict.—αὐτὸν παραπορεύσθαι: ἐγένετο is followed here by the infinitive in first clause, then with καὶ and a finite verb in second clause. It is sometimes followed by indicative with καὶ, and also without καὶ (vide Burton's Syntax, § 360).—παραπορ. stands here instead of διαπορ. in Lk., and the simple verb with διὰ after it in Mt. It seems intended to combine the ideas of going through and alongside. Jesus went through a corn field on a footpath with grain on either side.—ὁδὸν ποιεῖν is a puzzling phrase. In

23. Καὶ ἐγένετο παραπορεύεσθαι αὐτὸν ἐν τοῖς σάββασι<sup>1</sup> διὰ τῶν σπορίμων, καὶ ἤρξαντο οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ<sup>2</sup> ὁδὸν ποιεῖν<sup>3</sup> τίλλοντας τοὺς στάχους. 24. καὶ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι ἔλεγον αὐτῷ, “Ἴδε, τί ποιοῦσιν ἐν<sup>4</sup> τοῖς σάββασι, ὁ οὐκ ἔξεστι;” 25. Καὶ αὐτὸς ἔλεγεν<sup>5</sup> αὐτοῖς, “Οὐδέποτε ἀνέγνωτε, τί ἐποίησε Δαβὶδ, ὅτε χρεῖαν ἔσχε καὶ ἐπείνασεν αὐτὸς καὶ οἱ μετ’ αὐτοῦ; 26. πῶς<sup>6</sup> εἰσηλθεν εἰς τὸν οἶκον τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐπὶ Ἄβιάθαρ τοῦ<sup>7</sup> ἀρχιερέως, καὶ τοὺς ἄρτους τῆς προθέσεως ἔφαγεν, οὓς οὐκ ἔξεστι φαγεῖν εἰ μὴ τοῖς ἱερεῦσι,<sup>8</sup> καὶ ἔδωκε καὶ τοῖς σὺν αὐτῷ οὔσι;” 27. Καὶ ἔλεγεν αὐτοῖς, “Τὸ σάββατον διὰ τὸν ἄνθρωπον ἐγένετο, οὐχ<sup>9</sup> ὁ ἄνθρωπος διὰ τὸ σάββατον. 28. ὥστε κύριός ἐστιν ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου καὶ τοῦ σαββάτου.”

<sup>1</sup> BCD have διαπορ. (Lk.). N<sup>1</sup>BCDLA place αὐτον ἐν τοῖς σαββασι before the verb.

<sup>2</sup> οἱ μαθ. before ἤρξαντο in N<sup>1</sup>BCDL 33, 69 al.

<sup>3</sup> B has οδοποιεῖν (W.H. margin).

<sup>4</sup> N<sup>1</sup>ABCDDΣ it. vulg. omit ἐν.

<sup>5</sup> N<sup>1</sup>BCL omit αὐτος (most modern editions. Ws. after Meyer dissents). For ἐλεγεν N<sup>1</sup>CL it. vulg. have λεγει (Tisch., W.H., Ws.).

<sup>6</sup> BD omit πῶς (W.H. in brackets).

<sup>7</sup> N<sup>1</sup>B<sup>1</sup>L omit του.

<sup>8</sup> τοὺς ἱερεῖς in N<sup>1</sup>BL.

<sup>9</sup> καὶ οὐχ in N<sup>1</sup>BCLΔΣ 33 verss.

classic Greek it means to make a road = viam sternere, ὁδὸν ποιεῖσθαι meaning to make way = iter facere. If we assume that Mk. was acquainted with and observed this distinction, then the meaning will be: the disciples began to make a path by pulling up the stalks (τίλλοντας τοὺς στάχους), or perhaps by trampling under foot the stalks after first plucking off the ears. The ἤρξαντο in that case will mean that they began to do that when they saw the path was not clear, and wished to make it more comfortable for their Master to walk on. But it is doubtful whether in Hellenistic Greek the classic distinction was observed, and Judges xvii. 8 (Sept.) supplies an instance of ὁδὸν ποιεῖν = making way, “as he journeyed”. It would be natural to Mk. to use the phrase in the sense of iter facere. If we take the phrase in this sense, then we must, with Beza, find in the passage a permutata verborum collocatio, and translate as if it had run: ὁδὸν ποιοῦντες τίλλειν: “began, as they went, to pluck,” etc. (R. V.). The former view, however, is not to be summarily put aside because it ascribes to the disciples an apparently wanton proceeding. If there was a right of way by use and wont, they would be quite entitled to act so. The only difficulty is to understand how a customary path could have remained untrodden till the grain was ripe, or even in the ear. On this view vide Meyer. Assuming that the disciples made a path for their Master by pulling up the grain, with which it was overgrown, or by trampling the straw after plucking the ears, what did they do with the latter? Mt. and Lk. both say or imply that the plucking was in order to eating by hungry men. Meyer holds that Mk. knows nothing of this hunger, and that the eating of the ears came into the tradition through the allusion to David eating the shewbread. But the stress Mk. lays on need and hunger (duality of expression, ver. 25) shows that in his idea hunger was an element in the case of the disciples also.—Ver. 24. ἔλεγον αὐτῷ. In this case they speak to Christ against His disciples; indirectly against Him.—ὁ οὐκ ἔξεστιν: the offence was not trampling the grain or straw, but plucking the ears—reaping on a small scale; rubbing = threshing, in Lk.—χρεῖαν ἔσχε καὶ ἐπείνασεν: another example of Mk.’s duality, intelligible only if hunger was the point of the story. The verbs are singular, because David (αὐτὸς) is the hero, his followers in the background.—Ver. 26. ἐπὶ

III. 1. ΚΑΙ εἰσῆλθε πάλιν εἰς τὴν<sup>1</sup> συναγωγὴν, καὶ ἦν ἐκεῖ

<sup>a</sup> Ch. ix. 18. ἄνθρωπος * ἐξηραμμένην ἔχων τὴν χεῖρα, 2. καὶ <sup>b</sup> παρετήρουν<sup>2</sup> <sup>b</sup> Lk. vi. 7;
 xiv. i. xx. αὐτὸν εἰ τοῖς σάββασιν θεραπεύσει αὐτόν, ἵνα κατηγορήσωσιν αὐτοῦ.
 20. Acts
 ix. 24. 3. καὶ λέγει τῷ ἀνθρώπῳ τῷ ἐξηραμμένην ἔχοντι τὴν χεῖρα,<sup>3</sup>
 "Ἐγειραι<sup>4</sup> εἰς τὸ μέσον." 4. Καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς, "Ἐξεστὶ τοῖς σάββασιν ἀγαθοποιῆσαι,<sup>5</sup> ἢ κακοποιῆσαι; ψυχὴν σῶσαι, ἢ ἀπο-

<sup>1</sup> NB omit τὴν, which may have come in from Lk. (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> So in NB. CDΔΣ have the middle (Lk.).

<sup>3</sup> τῷ τὴν χεῖρα ἔχοντι ξηραν in BL (W.H.). NCA have τὴν ξηραν χεῖρα ἔχοντι (Tisch.).

<sup>4</sup> εγειρε in most uncials.

<sup>5</sup> ἀγαθὸν ποιῆσαι in ND (Tisch.). BCLΔΣ have ἀγαθοπ. as in T.R. (possibly assimilated to κακοποιῆσαι, W.H.).

Ἀβιάθαρ ἄρ.: under A., a note of time, also implying his sanction: the sanction of a distinguished sacerdotal character = of Abiathar as priest. But Ahimelech was the priest then (1 Sam. xxi. 2 f.). Either a natural error arising from the close connection of David with Abiathar, the well-known high priest, or we must adopt one or other of the solutions proposed: father and son, Ahimelech and Abiathar, both bore both names (1 Sam. xxii. 20, 2 Sam. viii. 17, 1 Chron. xviii. 16)—so the Fathers; Abiathar, the son, Ahimelech's assistant at the time, and mentioned as the more notable as approving of the conduct of his own father and of David (Grotius); ἐπὶ taken in the sense it bears in Mk. xii. 26 (ἐπὶ βάρῳ)—in the passage about Abiathar—not a satisfactory suggestion.—Ver. 27. καὶ ἔλεγεν, etc., and He said to them; this phrase is employed to introduce a saying of Jesus containing a great principle. The principle is that the Sabbath is only a means towards an end—man's highest good. Strange that Mk. should have been allowed to have a monopoly of this great word! For this saying alone, and the parable of gradual growth (iv. 26-29), his Gospel was worth preserving.—Ver. 28. ὥστε; wherefore, so then, introducing a thesis of co-ordinate importance, while an inference from the previous statement.—ὁ υἱὸς τ. α.: the Son of Man, as representing the human interest, as opposed to the falsely conceived divine interest championed by the Pharisees.—καὶ τ. σ., even of the Sabbath, so inviolable in your eyes. Lord, not to abolish but to interpret and keep in its own place, and give it a new name. No disparagement of Sabbath meant.

CHAPTER III. THE SABBATH QUESTION CONTINUED. THE DISCIPLE-CIRCLE. Another Sabbatic conflict completes the group of incidents (five in all) designed to illustrate the opposition of the scribes and Pharisees to Jesus. Then at v. 7 begins a new section of the history, extending to vi. 13, in which the disciples of Jesus are, speaking broadly, the centre of interest. First the people, then their religious heads, then the nucleus of the new society.

Vv. 1-6. The withered hand (Mt. xii. 9-14, Lk. vi. 6-11).—Ver. 1. καὶ: connection simply topical, another instance of collision in re Sabbath observance.—πάλιν: as was His wont on Sabbath days (i. 21, 39).—συναγωγὴν: without the article (NB), into a synagogue, place not known.—ἐξηραμμένην, dried up, the abiding result of injury by accident or disease, not congenital—"non ex utero, sed morbo aut vulnere; haec vis participii," Beng.—Ver. 2. παρετήρουν, they were watching Him; who, goes without saying: the same parties, i.e., men of the same class, as those who figure in the last section. This time bent on finding Jesus Himself at fault in re the Sabbath, instinctively perceiving that His thoughts on the subject must be wholly diverse from theirs.—Ver. 3. ἔγειρε εἰς: pregnant construction = arise and come forth into the midst. Then, the man standing up in presence of all, Jesus proceeds to catechise the would-be fault-finders.—Ver. 4. ἀγαθὸν ποιῆσαι ἢ κακοποιῆσαι, either: to do good or evil to one, or to do the morally good or evil. Recent commentators favour the latter as essential to the cogency of Christ's argument. But the former seems more consonant to κτείναι;” Οἱ δὲ ἐσιώπων. 5. καὶ ἐπεριβλεψάμενος αὐτοὺς μετ’ ὀργῆς, συλλυπούμενος ἐπὶ τῇ πωρώσει τῆς καρδίας αὐτῶν, λέγει τῷ ἀνθρώπῳ, “Ἐκτεινον τὴν χεῖρά σου.”<sup>1</sup> Καὶ ἐξέτεινε, καὶ ἀποκατεστάθη ἡ χεὶρ αὐτοῦ ὑγιής ὡς ἡ ἄλλη.<sup>2</sup> 6. Καὶ ἐξεληθόντες οἱ Φαρισαῖοι εὐθέως μετὰ τῶν Ἡρωδιανῶν συμβούλιον ἐποίουν<sup>3</sup> κατ’ αὐτοῦ, ὅπως αὐτὸν ἀπολέσωσι.

Lk. vi. 10, and several times elsewhere; in Mk. always in mid. here only in N.T. Rom. xi. 25. Eph. iv. 18.

7. ΚΑΙ ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἀνεχώρησε μετὰ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ<sup>4</sup> πρὸς τὴν θάλασσαν· καὶ πολὺ πλῆθος ἀπὸ τῆς Γαλιλαίας ἠκολούθησαν<sup>5</sup> αὐτῷ, καὶ ἀπὸ τῆς Ἰουδαίας, 8. καὶ ἀπὸ Ἱεροσολύμων, καὶ ἀπὸ τῆς Ἰδουμαίας, καὶ πέραν τοῦ Ἰορδάνου· καὶ οἱ<sup>6</sup> περὶ Τύρον καὶ Σιδῶνα,

<sup>1</sup> B omits σου (W.H. χεῖρα without σου in marg.).
<sup>2</sup> υγιης ως η αλλη has little attestation; comes from Mt.
<sup>3</sup> εδιδουν in BL; unusual and therefore altered into εποιουν, or εποιησαν.
<sup>4</sup> μετα τ. μ. α. ανεχωρησεν in ΞBCDLA al.; the true reading, vide below.
<sup>5</sup> So in ΞCA (Tisch.); -ησεν in BL (W.H.). The position of the verb in the sentence varies.
<sup>6</sup> Omit οι ΞBCLA.

the situation. It was a question of performing an act of healing. Christ assumes that the ethically good coincides with the humane (Sabbath made for man). Therein essentially lay the difference between Him and the Pharisees, in whose theory and practice religious duty and benevolence, the divine and the human, were divorced. To do good or to do evil, these the only alternatives: to omit to do good in your power is to do evil; not to save life when you can is to destroy it.—ἐσιώπων, they were silent, sullenly, but also in sheer helplessness. What could they reply to a question which looked at the subject from a wholly different point of view, the ethical, from the legal one they were accustomed to? There was nothing in common between them and Jesus.—Ver. 5. περιβλεψάμενος, having made a swift, indignant (μετ’ ὀργῆς) survey of His foes.—συλλυπούμενος: this present, the previous participle aorist, implying habitual pity for men in such a condition of blindness. This is a true touch of Mk.’s in his portrait of Christ.—τῆς καρδίας: singular, as if the whole class had but one heart, which was the fact so far as the type of heart (hardened) was concerned.—Ver. 6. ἐξεληθόντες: the stretching forth of the withered hand in obedience to Christ’s command, conclusive evidence of cure, was the signal for an immediate exodus of the champions of orthodox Sabbath-keeping; full of wrath because the Sabbath was broken, and especially because it was broken by a miracle bringing fame to the transgressor—the result plots (συμβούλιον ἐδιδουν, here only) without delay (εὐθύς) against His life.—μετὰ τῶν Ἡρωδιανῶν, with the Herodians, peculiar to Mk.; first mention of this party. A perfectly credible circumstance. The Pharisaic party really aimed at the life of Jesus, and they would naturally regard the assistance of people having influence at court as valuable.

 Vv. 7-12. The fame of Jesus spreads notwithstanding (vide Mt. iv. 25, xii. 15 f.; Lk. vi. 17-19).—Ver. 7. μετὰ τῶν μαθητῶν, with the disciples: note—they now come to the front. We are to hear something about them to which the notice of the great crowd is but the prelude. Hence the emphatic position before the verb.—πρὸς τὴν θάλασσαν: as if to a place of retreat (vide ver. 9). πολὺ πλῆθος: πολὺ, emphatic, a vast, exceptionally great crowd, in spite, possibly in consequence, of Pharisaic antagonism. Of course this crowd did not gather in an hour. The history is very fragmentary, and blanks must be filled up by the imagination. Two crowds meet—(1) πολὺ πλῆθος from Galilee; (2) from more remote parts: Judaea, Jerusalem, Idumaea, Peraea, and the district of Tyre and Sidon—πλῆθος πολὺ (ver. 8): a considerable crowd, but not so great.—ἀπὸ τ. Ἰδουμαίας: Idumaea, mentioned here only, “then practically the southern f here only in sense of crowding. Cf. Mt. vii. 14. Elsewhere meta-phorical. g here only in same sense. h here and in Mt. xii. 16 (=to make one known).

πλήθος πολὺ, ἀκούσαντες<sup>1</sup> ὅσα ἐποίει,<sup>1</sup> ἦλλον πρὸς αὐτόν. 9. καὶ εἶπε τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ, ἵνα πλοιάριον προσκαρτερῇ αὐτῷ, διὰ τὸν ὄχλον, ἵνα μὴ ἐθλίβωσιν αὐτόν. 10. πολλοὺς γὰρ ἐθεράπευσεν, ὥστε ἐπιτίπτειν αὐτῷ, ἵνα αὐτοῦ ἄψωνται, ὅσοι εἶχον μάλιστα. 11. καὶ τὰ πνεύματα τὰ ἀκάθαρτα, ὅταν αὐτὸν ἐθεώρει,<sup>2</sup> προσέπιπτεν<sup>2</sup> αὐτῷ, καὶ ἔκραζε,<sup>2</sup> λέγοντα, “Ὅτι σὺ εἶ ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ.” 12. Καὶ πολλὰ ἐπετίμα αὐτοῖς, ἵνα μὴ αὐτὸν<sup>h</sup> φανερόν ποιήσωσι.<sup>3</sup> 13. Καὶ ἀναβαίνει εἰς τὸ ὄρος, καὶ προσκαλεῖται οὓς ἠθέληεν αὐτός· καὶ ἀπῆλθον πρὸς αὐτόν. 14. καὶ ἐποίησε δώδεκα,<sup>4</sup> ἵνα ὡσι μετ’ αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἵνα ἀποστέλλῃ αὐτοὺς κηρύσσειν, 15. καὶ ἔχειν ἐξουσίαν θεραπεύειν τὰς νόσους, καὶ<sup>5</sup> ἐκβάλλειν τὰ δαιμόνια· 16. καὶ

<sup>1</sup> ακουοντες in ΞΒΔ; CD have ακουσαντες; ποιει in BL (W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> εθεωρουν, προσεπιπτον, εκραζον in best MSS. The sing. a gram. cor. (neut. pl. nom.).

<sup>3</sup> ποιωσι in B<sup>2</sup>DL; as in T.R. in ΞBCΔΣ (Tisch. former, W.H. latter).

<sup>4</sup> ΞBCΔ add ους και αποστολους ωνομασε, probably an importation from Lk.

<sup>5</sup> θεραπευειν τας νοσους και omitted in ΞBCLΔ.

Shephelah, with the Negeb.”—G. A. Smith, Historical Geography of the Holy Land, p. 239. Mentioned by Josephus (B. J., iii. 3-5) as a division of Judaea.—Ver. 9. ἵνα πλοιάριον προσκαρτερῇ: a boat to be always in readiness, to get away from the crowds. Whether used or not, not said; shows how great the crowd was.—Ver. 10. ὥστε ἐπιτίπτειν: so that they knocked against Him; one of Mk.’s vivid touches. They hoped to obtain a cure by contact anyhow brought about, even by rude collision.—μάστιγας, from μαστιξ, a scourge, hence tropically in Sept. and N. T., a providential scourge, a disease; again in v. 29, 34.—Ver. 11. ὅταν ἐθ. In a relative clause like this, containing a past general supposition, classical Greek has the optative without ἄν. Here we have the imperfect indicative with ἄν (ὅτε ἄν). Vide Klotz., ad Devar, p. 690, and Burton, M. and T., § 315. Other examples in chap. vi. 56, xi. 19.—προσέπιπτον, fell before (ἐπιτίπτειν, above, to fall against).—Σὺ εἶ ὁ υ. τ. θ.: again an instance of spiritual clairvoyance in demoniacs. Vide at Mt. viii. 29.—Ver. 12. This sentence is reproduced in Mt. xii. 16, but without special reference to demoniacs, whereby it loses much of its point.

Vv. 13-19a. Selection of the Twelve (cf. Mt. x. 2-4, Lk. vi. 12-16).—Ver. 13. εἰς τὸ ὄρος. He ascends to the hill; same expression as in Mt. v. 1; reference not to any particular hill, but to the hill country flanking the shore of the lake; might be used from whatever point below the ascent was made.—προσκαλεῖται, etc., He calls to Him those whom He Himself (αὐτός after the verb, emphatic) wished, whether by personal communication with each individual, or through disciples, not indicated. It was an invitation to leave the vast crowd and follow Him up the hill; addressed to a larger number than twelve, from whom the Twelve were afterwards selected.—ἀπῆλθον π. α.: they left the crowd and followed after Him.—Ver. 14. He is now on the hill top, surrounded by a body of disciples, perhaps some scores, picked out from the great mass of followers.—καὶ ἐποίησε δώδεκα: and He made, constituted as a compact body, Twelve, by a second selection. For use of ποιεῖν in this sense vide 1 Sam. xii. 6, Acts ii. 36, Heb. iii. 2. God “made” Jesus as Jesus “made” the Twelve. What the process of “making” in the case of the Twelve consisted in we do not know. It might take place after days of close intercourse on the hill.—ἵνα ὡσιν μετ’ αὐτοῦ, that they might be (constantly) with Him; first and very important aim of the making, mentioned only by Mk—training contemplated.—ἵνα ἀποστέλλῃ: to send them out on a preaching and healing mission, also in view, but only after a while. This verb frequent in Mk. Note the absence of τοῦ before κηρύσσειν and ἔχειν (ver. 15).—Ver. 16. καὶ ἐποίησεν τ. δ., and He

ἔπεθηκε<sup>1</sup> τῷ Σίμωνι ὄνομα<sup>2</sup> Πέτρον· 17. καὶ Ἰάκωβον τὸν τοῦ<sup>j</sup> Ζεβεδαίου, καὶ Ἰωάννην τὸν ἀδελφὸν τοῦ Ἰακώβου· καὶ ἐπέθηκεν αὐτοῖς ὀνόματα Βοανεργές,<sup>3</sup> ὃ ἐστίν, Υἱοὶ βροντῆς· 18. καὶ Ἀνδρέαν, καὶ Φίλιππον, καὶ Βαρθολομαῖον, καὶ Ματθαῖον, καὶ Θωμᾶν, καὶ Ἰάκωβον τὸν τοῦ Ἀλφαίου, καὶ Θαδδαῖον, καὶ Σίμωνα τὸν Κανανίτην,<sup>4</sup> 19. καὶ Ἰούδαν Ἰσκαριώτην,<sup>5</sup> ὃς καὶ παρέδωκεν αὐτόν. <sup>j</sup> the phrase here only in N.T. (I Macc. ii. 17; xiii. 52).

Καὶ ἔρχονται<sup>6</sup> εἰς οἶκον· 20. καὶ συνέρχεται πάλιν<sup>7</sup> ὄχλος, ὥστε μὴ δύνασθαι αὐτοὺς μήτε<sup>8</sup> ἄρτον φαγεῖν. 21. καὶ ἀκούσαντες<sup>1</sup> οἱ

<sup>1</sup> Το καὶ ἐπεθηκε ΞBCD prefix καὶ εἰποιήσε τοὺς δ. : a probable reading, vide below.

<sup>2</sup> ὄνομα τῷ Σιμονι in ΞBCLΔ.

<sup>3</sup> Βοανηργες in ΞABCLΔ<sup>2</sup> 33.

<sup>4</sup> Καναναιοι in ΞBCDLΔ 33 it. vulg.

<sup>5</sup> Ἰσκαριωθ in ΞBCLΔ 33.

<sup>6</sup> ἐρχεται in ΞB. The plural (T.R.) is a correction.

<sup>7</sup> ο before ὄχλος in ΞBDD (W.H. bracketed).

<sup>8</sup> μήτε in ΞCDE (Tisch.). μήδε in BLD 33 (W.H.).

appointed as the Twelve—the following persons, the twelve names mentioned being the object of ἐποίησε, and τοὺς δ. being in apposition.—Πέτρον is the first name, but it comes in very awkwardly as the object of the verb ἐπέθηκε. We must take the grammar as it stands, content that we know, in spite of crude construction, what is meant. Fritzsche (after Beza, Erasmus, etc.) seeks to rectify the construction by prefixing, on slender critical authority, πρῶτον Σίμωνα, then bracketing as a parenthesis καὶ ἐπέθηκε . . . Πέτρον = first Simon (and He gave to Simon the name Peter).—

Ver. 17. Βοανεργές = שֶׁבַע בְּנֵי גֵרִי as pronounced by Galileans; in Syrian = sons of thunder; of tumult, in Hebrew. Fact mentioned by Mk. only. Why the name was given not known. It does not seem to have stuck to the two disciples, therefore neglected by the other evangelists. It may have been an innocent pleasantry in a society of free, unrestrained fellowship, hitting off some peculiarity of the brothers. Mk. gives us here a momentary glimpse into the inner life of the Jesus-circle—Peter, whose new name did live, doubtless the voucher. The traditional interpretation makes the epithet a tribute to the eloquence of the two disciples (διὰ τὸ μέγα καὶ διαπύσιον ἡχῆσαι τῆς οἰκουμένης τῆς θεολογίας τὰ δόγματα. Victor Ant.).—Ver. 18. Ματθαῖον. One wonders why Mk. did not here say: Levi, to whom He gave the name Matthew. Or did this disciple get his new name independently of Jesus? This list of names shows the importance of the act of selecting the Twelve. He gives the names, says Victor Ant., that you may not err as to the designations, lest any one should call himself an apostle ἵνα μὴ ὁ τυχὼν εἴπῃ ἀπόστολος γεγονέναι).

Vv. 19b-21. The friends of Jesus think Him out of His sensus; peculiar to Mk. One of his realisms which Mt. and Lk. pass over in silence.—Ver. 19b. καὶ ἔρχεται εἰς οἶκον, and He cometh home (“nach Haus,” Weizs.) to house-life as distinct from hill-life (εἰς τὸ ὄρος, ver. 13). The formal manner in which this is stated suggests a sojourn on the hill of appreciable length, say, for some days. How occupied there? Probably in giving a course of instruction to the disciple-circle; say, that reproduced in the “Sermon on the Mount” = the “Teaching on the Hill,” vide introductory notes on Mt. v.—Ver. 20. The traditional arrangement by which clause b forms part of ver. 19 is fatal to a true conception of the connection of events. The R. V., by making it begin a new section, though not a new verse, helps intelligence, but it would be better still if it formed a new verse with a blank space left between. Some think that in the original form of Mk. the Sermon on the Mount came in here. It is certainly a suitable place for it. In accordance with the above suggestion the text would stand thus:—

Ver. 19. And Judas Iscariot, who also betrayed Him.

Ver. 20. And He cometh home.

Ver. 21. And the multitude cometh together again, etc.

συνέρχεται: the crowd, partially dis

1 2 Cor. v παρ' αὐτοῦ ἐξῆλθον κρατῆσαι αὐτόν· ἔλεγον γάρ, "Ὅτι ἔξέστη."<sup>13</sup>
 22. Καὶ οἱ γραμματεῖς οἱ ἀπὸ Ἱεροσολύμων καταβάντες ἔλεγον, 1 Ch. ix. 29; "Ὅτι Βεελζεβούλ ἔχει," καὶ "Ὅτι ἐν τῷ ἄρχοντι τῶν δαιμονίων
 xvi. 17.

persed, reassembles (implying lapse of an appreciable interval). Jesus had hoped they would go away to their homes in various parts of the country during His absence on the hill, but He was disappointed. They lingered on.—ὄστε, etc.: the crowding about the house and the demand for sight and succour of the Benefactor were so great that they (Jesus and His companions) could not find leisure, not even (μηδὲ) to take food, not to speak of rest, or giving instruction to disciples. Erasmus (Adnot.) thinks the reference is to the multitude, and the meaning that it was so large that there was not bread for all, not to speak of kitchen (obsonia).—Ver. 21 introduces a new scene into the lively drama. The statement is obscure partly owing to its brevity (Fritzsche), and it is made obscurer by a piety which is not willing to accept the surface meaning (so Maldonatus—"hunc locum difficiliorē pietas facit"), which is that the friends of Jesus, having heard of what was going on—wonderful cures, great crowds, incessant activity—set out from where they were (ἐξῆλθον) with the purpose of taking Him under their care (κρατῆσαι αὐτόν), their impression, not concealed (ἔλεγον γάρ, they had begun to say), being that He was in an unhealthy state of excitement bordering on insanity (ἐξέστη). Recent commentators, German and English, are in the main agreed that this is the true sense.—οἱ παρ' αὐτοῦ means either specifically His relatives ("sui" Vulg., οἱ οἰκεῖοι α.—Theophy.), so Raphel, Wetstein, Kypke, Loesner, with citations from Greek authors, Meyer and Weiss, identifying the parties here spoken of with those referred to in ver. 31; or, more generally, persons well disposed towards Jesus, an outer circle of disciples (Schanz and Keil).—ἀκούσαντες: not to be restricted to what is mentioned in ver. 20; refers to the whole Galilean ministry with its cures and crowds, and constant strain. Therefore the friends might have come from a distance, Nazareth, e.g., starting before Jesus descended from the hill. That their arrival happened just then was a coincidence.—ἔλεγον γάρ: for they were saying, might refer to others than those who came to lay hold of Jesus—to messengers who brought them news of what was going on (Bengel), or it might refer quite impersonally to a report that had gone abroad ("rumor exierat," Grotius), or it might even refer to the Pharisees. But the reference is almost certainly to the friends. Observe the parallelism between οἱ παρ' αὐτοῦ, ἔλεγον γάρ, οἱ ἐξέστη and οἱ γραμματεῖς, οἱ . . . ἔλεγον, οἱ Βεελ. ἔχει in ver. 22 (Fritzsche points this out in a long and thorough discussion of the whole passage).—ἐξέστη: various ways of evading the idea suggested by this word have been resorted to. It has been referred to the crowd = the crowd is mad, and won't let Him alone. Viewed as referring to Jesus it has been taken = He is exhausted, or He has left the place = they came to detain Him, for they heard that He was going or had gone. Both these are suggested by Euthy. Zig. Doubtless the reference is to Jesus, and the meaning that in the opinion of His friends He was in a state of excitement bordering on insanity (cf. ii. 12, v. 42, vi. 51). δαίμονα ἔχει (Theophy.) is too strong, though the Jews apparently identified insanity with possession. Festus said of St. Paul: "Much learning doth make thee mad". The friends of Jesus thought that much benevolence had put Him into a state of enthusiasm dangerous to the health both of body and mind. Note: Christ's healing ministry created a need for theories about it. Herod had his theory (Mt. xiv.), the friends of Jesus had theirs, and the Pharisees theirs: John redivivus, disordered mind, Satanic possession. That which called forth so many theories must have been a great fact.

Vv. 22-30. Pharisaic theory as to the cures of demoniacs wrought by Jesus (Mt. xii. 22-37, Lk. xi. 17-23).—Ver. 22. οἱ γραμ. οἱ ἀπὸ Ἱ., the scribes from Jerusalem. The local Pharisees who had taken the Herodians into their murderous counsels had probably also communicated with the Jerusalem authorities, using all possible means to compass their end. The representatives of the southern scribes had probably arrived on the scene about the same time as the friends of Jesus, although it is not inconceivable that Mk. introduces the narrative regarding them here because ἐκβάλλει τὰ δαιμόνια.” 23. Καὶ προσκαλεσάμενος αὐτούς, ἐν παραβολαῖς ἔλεγεν αὐτοῖς, “ Πῶς δύναται Σατανᾶς Σατανᾶν ἐκβάλλειν; 24. καὶ ἐὰν βασιλεία ἐφ’ ἑαυτὴν μερισθῆ, οὐ δύναται σταθῆναι ἢ βασιλεία ἐκείνη· 25. καὶ ἐὰν οἰκία ἐφ’ ἑαυτὴν μερισθῆ, οὐ δύναται<sup>1</sup> σταθῆναι ἢ οἰκία ἐκείνη<sup>2</sup>. 26. καὶ εἰ ὁ Σατανᾶς ἀνέστη ἐφ’ ἑαυτὸν καὶ μεμέρισται,<sup>3</sup> οὐ δύναται σταθῆναι,<sup>4</sup> ἀλλὰ τέλος ἔχει. 27. οὐ<sup>5</sup> δύναται οὐδεὶς τὰ<sup>6</sup> σκευὴ τοῦ ἰσχυροῦ, εἰσελθὼν εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν<sup>6</sup> αὐτοῦ, διαρπάσαι, ἐὰν μὴ πρῶτον ἰσχυρὸν δῆσῃ, καὶ τότε τὴν οἰκίαν αὐτοῦ διαρπάσει. 28. ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι<sup>m Rom. iii 25. 1 Cor vi. 18.</sup> πάντα ἀφεθήσεται τὰ<sup>m</sup> ἁμαρτήματα τοῖς υἱοῖς τῶν ἀνθρώπων,<sup>7</sup> καὶ<sup>8</sup>

<sup>1</sup> δυνασεται in  $\aleph$ BCLD (Tisch., W.H.). δυναται conforms to ver. 24.

<sup>2</sup> ἡ οἰκία ἐκεῖνη στηναί in BL (Trg., W.H.); σταθῆναι in  $\aleph$ CD (Tisch.).

<sup>3</sup> καὶ ἐμερισθη in BL (W.H.), ἐμερισθη καὶ in  $\aleph$ CD (Tisch.).

<sup>4</sup> στηναί in  $\aleph$ BCL (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> ἀλλ before οὐ in  $\aleph$ BCLD 33 al.

<sup>6</sup> εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν τοῦ ἰσχυροῦ εἰσελθὼν τὰ σκευὴ αὐτοῦ in  $\aleph$ BCLD (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>7</sup> τὰ ἁμαρ. after ἀνθρώπων in  $\aleph$ ABCDL 33 (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>8</sup> καὶ after καὶ in  $\aleph$ ABCEGLDΣ (Tisch., W.H.).

of the resemblances and contrasts between their theory and that of the friends. Mt. sets the incident in different relations, yielding a contrast between Pharisaic ideas and those of the people respecting the cure of demoniacs by Jesus (xii. 22 f.).—Βεελζεβούλ ἔχει, He hath Beelzebub, implying that Beelzebub hath Him, using Him as his agent. The expression points to something more than an alliance, as in Mt., to possession, and that on a grand scale; a divine possession by a base deity doubtless, god of flies (Beelzebub) or god of dung (Beelzebub), still a god, a sort of Satanic incarnation; an involuntary compliment to the exceptional power and greatness of Jesus.—ἐν τῷ ἄρχοντι τ. δ.: the assumption is that spirits are cast out by the aid of some other spirit stronger than those ejected.—Ver. 23. προσκαλεσάμενος: Jesus, not overawed by the Jerusalem authorities, invites them to come within talking distance, that He may reason the matter with them.—ἐν παραβολαῖς, in figures: kingdom, house, plundering the house of a strong man. Next chapter concerning the parabolic teaching of Jesus casts its shadow on the page here. The gist of what Jesus said to the scribes in refutation of their theory is: granting that spirits are cast out by aid of another spirit, more is needed in the latter than superior strength. There must be qualitative difference—in nature and interest. The argument consists of a triple movement of thought. 1. The absurdity of the theory is broadly asserted. 2. The principle on which the theory is wrecked is set forth in concrete form. 3. The principle is applied to the case in hand.—πῶς δύναται, etc., how can Satan cast out Satan? It is not a question of power, but of motive, what interest can he have? A stronger spirit casting out a weaker one of the same kind? (so Fritzsche).—Vv. 24, 25 set forth the principle or rationale embodied in two illustrations. The theory in question is futile because it involves suicidal action, which is not gratuitously to be imputed to any rational agents, to a kingdom (ver. 24), to a house (ver. 25), and therefore not to Satan (ver. 26).—Ver. 27 by another figure shows the true state of the case. Jesus, not in league with Satan or Beelzebub, but overmastering him, and taking possession of his goods, human souls. The saying is given by Mk. much the same as in Mt.

Vv. 28, 29. Jesus now changes His tone. Thus far He has reasoned with the scribes, now He solemnly warns to this effect. “You do not believe your own theory; you know as well as I how absurd it is, and that I must be casting out devils by a very different spirit from βλασφημίας ὅσας<sup>1</sup> ἂν βλασφημήσωσιν· 29. ὃς δ' ἂν βλασφημήσῃ εἰς τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ Ἅγιον, οὐκ ἔχει ἄφεσιν εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα, ἀλλ' ἐνοχὸς ἐστίν<sup>2</sup> αἰωνίου κρίσεως<sup>3</sup>·” 30. ὅτι ἔλεγον, “Πνεῦμα ἀκάθαρτον ἔχει.” 31. “Ἐρχονται οὖν<sup>4</sup> οἱ ἀδελφοὶ καὶ ἡ μήτηρ αὐτοῦ<sup>5</sup> καὶ ἔξω ἐστῶτες<sup>6</sup> ἀπέστειλαν πρὸς αὐτόν, φωνοῦντες<sup>7</sup> αὐτόν. 32. καὶ ἐκάθητο ὄχλος περὶ αὐτόν·<sup>8</sup> εἶπον δὲ<sup>9</sup> αὐτῷ, “Ἰδοῦ, ἡ μήτηρ σου

<sup>1</sup> ὅσα in ΞBDA. ὅσας a gram. cor.

<sup>2</sup> ἐστίν in ΞDLA (Tisch.), ἐστίν in BC (W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> ἀμαρτηματος in ΞBLA 33 Lat. Codd. κρίσεως (T.R.) is explanatory of a difficult word.

<sup>4</sup> For ερχ. οὖν ABCLΔ have καὶ ἐρχονται (W.H.). ΞD have καὶ ἐρχεται.

<sup>5</sup> ἡ μήτηρ α. καὶ οἱ ἀδελφοὶ in ΞBCDLΔ. The plural verb gave rise to the transposition in T.R.

<sup>6</sup> στηκόντες in BCA (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>7</sup> καλοντες in ΞBCL.

<sup>8</sup> περὶ αὐτον ὄχλος in ABCLΔΣ.

<sup>9</sup> καὶ λεγουσιν in ΞBCDLΔ.

Beelzebub. You are therefore not merely mistaken theorists, you are men in a very perilous moral condition. Beware!”—Ver. 28. ἀμὴν: solemn word, introducing a solemn speech uttered in a tone not to be forgotten.—πάντα ἀφεθήσεται, all things shall be forgiven; magnificently broad proclamation of the wideness of God's mercy. The saying as reproduced in Lk. xii. 10 limits the reference to sins of speech. The original form, Weiss thinks (in Meyer), but this is very doubtful. It seems fitting that when an exception is being made to the pardonableness of sin, a broad declaration of the extent of pardon should be uttered.—τοῖς υἱοῖς τ. ἁ., to the sons of men; this expression not in Mt., but in its place a reference to blasphemy against the Son of Man. To suspect a literary connection between the two is natural. Which is the original form? Mk.'s? (Holtz., H. C., after Pfeiderer.) Mt.'s? (Weiss in Meyer.) The latter the more probable. Vide on ver. 30.—τὰ ἁμαρ. καὶ αἱ βλ.: either in apposition with and explicative of πάντα, or τὰ ἁμαρ., the subject which πάντα qualifies. The former construction yields this sense: all things shall be forgiven to, etc., the sins and the blasphemies wherewith soever they shall blaspheme. The last clause qualifying βλασφημίας (ὅσα ἔαν βλ.) which takes the place of πάντα in relation to ἁμαρτ. is in favour of the latter rendering = all sins shall be forgiven, etc., and the blasphemies, etc.—Ver. 29. The great exception, blasphemy against the Holy Ghost.—εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα: hath not forgiveness for ever.

Cf. the fuller expression in Mt.—ἀλλ' ἐνοχὸς ἐστίν, but is guilty of. The negative is followed by a positive statement of similar import in Hebrew fashion.—αἰωνίου ἀμαρτηματος, of an eternal sin. As this is equivalent to “hath never forgiveness,” we must conceive of the sin as eternal in its guilt, not in itself as a sin. The idea is that of an unpardonable sin, not of a sin eternally repeating itself. Yet this may be the ultimate ground of unpardonableness: unforgivable because never repented of. But this thought is not necessarily contained in the expression.—Ver. 30. ὅτι ἔλεγον, etc., because they said: “He hath an unclean spirit,” therefore He said this about blasphemy against the Holy Ghost—such is the connection. But what if they spoke under a misunderstanding like the friends, puzzled what to think about this strange man? That would be a sin against the Son of Man, and as such pardonable. The distinction between blasphemy against the Son of Man and blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, taken in Mt. xii. 31, is essential to the understanding of Christ's thought. The mere saying, “He hath an unclean spirit,” does not amount to the unpardonable sin. It becomes such when it is said by men who know that it is not true; then it means calling the Holy Spirit an unclean spirit. Jesus believed that the scribes were in that position, or near it.

Vv. 31-35. The relatives of Jesus (Mt. xii. 46-50, Lk. viii. 19-21).—Ver. 31. ἔρχονται, even without the οὖν following in T. R., naturally points back καὶ οἱ ἀδελφοί σου<sup>1</sup> ἔξω ζητοῦσί σε". 33. Καὶ ἀπεκρίθη αὐτοῖς, λέγων,<sup>2</sup> "Τίς ἐστὶν ἡ μήτηρ μου ἢ<sup>3</sup> οἱ ἀδελφοί μου<sup>4</sup>;" 34. Καὶ περιβλεψάμενος<sup>5</sup> κύκλῳ τοὺς περὶ αὐτὸν<sup>5</sup> καθημένους, λέγει, "Ἴδε, n Ch. vi. 6. Lk. ix. 12. Rom. xv. 19. Rev. iv. 6; v. 11; vii. 11.

ἡ μήτηρ μου καὶ οἱ ἀδελφοί μου. 35. ὃς γὰρ<sup>6</sup> ἂν ποιῆσῃ τὸ θέλημα<sup>7</sup> τοῦ Θεοῦ, οὗτος ἀδελφός μου καὶ ἀδελφή μου<sup>8</sup> καὶ μήτηρ ἐστί."

<sup>1</sup> D adds καὶ αἱ ἀδελφαὶ σου, which may have fallen out by similar ending in ΞBCLΔ (W.H. margin).

<sup>2</sup> καὶ ἀποκριθεὶς α. λέγει in ΞBCLΔ (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> καὶ in ΞBCLΔ.

<sup>4</sup> BD omit this μου.

<sup>5</sup> τοὺς περὶ α. κυκλῳ in ΞBCLΔ.

<sup>6</sup> γὰρ omitted in B.

<sup>7</sup> τα θέληματα in B (W.H. margin).

<sup>8</sup> μου omitted in ΞABDLΔ.

to ver. 21. The evangelist resumes the story about Christ's friends, interrupted by the encounter with the scribes (so Grotius, Bengel, Meyer, Weiss, Holtz.; Schanz and Keil dissent).—στήκοντες, from στήκω, a late form used in present only, from ἔστηκα, perfect of ἵστημι.—Ver. 32. The crowd gathered around Jesus report the presence of His relatives. According to a reading in several MSS., these included sisters among those present. They might do so under a mistake, even though the sisters were not there. If the friends came to withdraw Jesus from public life, the sisters were not likely to accompany the party, though there would be no impropriety in their going along with their mother. They are not mentioned in ver. 31. On the other hand, ἀδελφή comes in appropriately in ver. 35 in recognition of female disciples, which may have suggested its introduction here.—Ver. 33. τίς ἐστίν, etc., who is my mother, and (who) my brothers? an apparently harsh question, but He knew what they had come for.—Ver. 34. περιβλεψάμενος, as in ver. 5, there in anger, here with a benign smile.—κύκλῳ: His eye swept the whole circle of His audience; a good Greek expression.—Ver. 35. ὃς ἂν, etc.: whosoever shall do the will of God ("of my Father in heaven," Mt.), definition of true discipleship.—ἀδελφός, ἀδελφή, μήτηρ: without the article, because the nouns are used figuratively (Fritzsche). This saying and the mood it expressed would confirm the friends in the belief that Jesus was in a morbid state of mind.

CHAPTER IV. PARABOLIC TEACHING. In common with Mt., Mk. recognises that teaching in parables became at a given date a special feature of Christ's didactic ministry. He gives, however, fewer samples of that type than the first evangelist. Two out of the seven in Mt., with one peculiar to himself, three in all; in this respect probably truer to the actual history of the particular day. Teaching in parables did not make an absolutely new beginning on the day on which the Parable of the Sower was spoken. Jesus doubtless used similitudes in all His synagogue discourses, of which a few samples may have been preserved in the Mustard Seed, the Treasure, and the Pearl.

Vv. 1-9. The Sower. (Mt. xiii 1-9, Lk. viii. 4-8).—Ver. 1. πάλιν ἤρξατο. After spending some time in teaching disciples, Jesus resumes His wider ministry among the people in the open air: at various points along the shore of the sea (παρὰ τ. θ.). Speaking to larger crowds than ever (ὄχλος πλείστος), which could be effectively addressed only by the Speaker getting into a boat (πλοῖον, τὸ πλοῖον would point to the boat which Jesus had asked the disciples to have in readiness, iii. 9), and sailing out a little distance from the shore, the people standing on the land as close to the sea as possible (πρὸς τ. θ.).—Ver. 2. πολλά: a vague expression, but implying that the staple of that day's teaching consisted of parables, probably all more or less of the same drift as the parable of the Sower, indicating that in spite of the ever-growing crowds Jesus was dissatisfied with the results of His popular ministry in street and synagogue = much seed-sowing, little fruit. The formation of the disciple-circle had revealed that dissatisfaction in another way. Probably some of the parables spoken in the boat have not been preserved, the Sower

IV. 1. ΚΑΙ πάλιν ἤρξατο διδάσκειν παρὰ τὴν θάλασσαν· καὶ συνήχθη<sup>1</sup> πρὸς αὐτὸν ὄχλος πολὺς,<sup>2</sup> ὥστε αὐτὸν ἐμβάντα εἰς τὸ πλοῖον<sup>3</sup> καθίσθαι ἐν τῇ θαλάσῃ· καὶ πᾶς ὁ ὄχλος πρὸς τὴν θάλασσαν ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς ἦν<sup>4</sup>. 2. καὶ ἐδίδασκεν αὐτοὺς ἐν παραβολαῖς πολλά, καὶ ἔλεγεν αὐτοῖς ἐν τῇ διδαχῇ αὐτοῦ, 3. "Ἀκούετε. ἰδοῦ, ἐξῆλθεν ὁ σπείρων τοῦ<sup>5</sup> σπείραι· 4. καὶ ἐγένετο ἐν τῷ σπείρειν, ὁ μὲν ἔπεσε παρὰ τὴν ὁδὸν, καὶ ἦλθε τὰ πετεινὰ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ<sup>6</sup> καὶ κατέφαγεν αὐτό. 5. ἄλλο δὲ<sup>7</sup> ἔπεσεν ἐπὶ τὸ πετρῶδες, ὅπου οὐκ εἶχε γῆν πολλήν· καὶ εὐθέως ἐξανέτειλε, διὰ τὸ μὴ ἔχειν βάθος<sup>8</sup> γῆς· 6. ἡλίου δὲ ἀνατείλαντος<sup>9</sup> ἐκαυματίσθη,<sup>10</sup> καὶ διὰ τὸ μὴ ἔχειν

<sup>1</sup> συναγεται in SBCLD (modern editors).

<sup>2</sup> πλειστος in SBCLD (Tisch., W.H., al.).

<sup>3</sup> εἰς πλοῖον ἐμβάντα in SBCL. DD have same order with το before πλοῖον.

<sup>4</sup> ἦσαν in SBCLD 33. ην is a gram. cor.

<sup>5</sup> SB omit του, found in CLD.

<sup>6</sup> Omit του ουρανου SBABCLDS.

<sup>7</sup> καὶ ἄλλο (ἀλλα D 33) in SBCLD.

<sup>8</sup> βάθος γης in SBABCLDS, but B has της γ., and perhaps this is the true reading, though recent editors adopt the other.

<sup>9</sup> καὶ ὅτε ἀνετείλειν ὁ ἡλιος in SBCLD. T.R. conforms to Mt.

<sup>10</sup> BD have ἐκαυματίσθησαν (W.H. margin).

servicing as a sample.—ἐν τῇ διδαχῇ α. In the teaching of that day He said inter alia what follows.—Ver. 3. ἀκούετε: hear! listen! a summons to attention natural for one addressing a great crowd from a boat, quite compatible with ἰδοῦ, which introduces the parable (against Weiss in Meyer). The parable is given here essentially as in Mt., with only slight variations: σπείραι (ver. 3) for σπείρειν; ὁ μὲν (ver. 4) for ἄ μιν, ἄλλο (vv. 5, 7) for ἄλλα. To the statement that the thorns choked the grain (συνέπνιξαν αὐτό), Mk. adds (ver. 7) καὶ καρπὸν οὐκ ἔδωκεν, an addition not superfluous in this case, as it would have been in the two previous, because the grain in this case reaches the green ear. To be noted further is the expansion in ver. 8, in reference to the seed sown on good soil. Mt. says it yielded fruit (ἐίδου καρπὸν), Mk. adds ἀναβαίνοντα καὶ αὐξανόμενα, καὶ ἔφερον, all three phrases referring to ἄλλα at the beginning of the verse. The participles taken along with ἐίδου καρπὸν distinguish the result in the fourth case from those in the three preceding. The first did not spring up, being picked up by the birds, the second sprang up but did not grow, withered by the heat, the third sprouted and grew up but yielded no (ripe) fruit, choked by thorns (Grotius). —καὶ ἔφερον introduces a statement as to the quantity of fruit, the degrees being arranged in a climax, 30, 60, 100, instead of in an anti-climax, as in Mt., 100, 60, 30.—Ver. 9. καὶ ἔλεγεν: this phrase is wanting in Mt., and the summons to reflection is more pithily expressed there = who hath ears let him hear. The summons implies that understanding is possible even for those without.

Vv. 10-12. Disciples ask an explanation of the parable (Mt. xiii. 10-17, Lk. viii. 9-10). Ver. 10. κατὰ μόνας (ὁδοῦς or χώρας understood), alone—οἱ περὶ αὐτὸν, those about Him, not = οἱ παρ' αὐτοῦ (iii. 21), nor = the Twelve, who are separately mentioned (σὺν τ. δωδ.); an outer circle of disciples from which the Twelve were chosen.—τὰς παραβολάς, the parables, spoken that day. They asked Him about them, as to their meaning. The plural, well attested, implies that the parables of the day had a common drift. To explain one was to explain all. They were a complaint of the comparative fruitlessness of past efforts.—Ver. 11. ὑμῖν, to you has been given, so as to be a permanent possession, the

ρίζαν ἐξηράνθη. 7. καὶ ἄλλο ἔπεσεν εἰς τὰς ἀκάνθας· καὶ ἀνέβησαν αἱ ἄκανθαι, καὶ συνέπνιξαν αὐτό, καὶ καρπὸν οὐκ ἔδωκε. 8. καὶ ἄλλο<sup>1</sup> ἔπεσεν εἰς τὴν γῆν τὴν καλήν· καὶ ἐδίδου καρπὸν ἀναβαίοντα καὶ αὐξάνοντα,<sup>2</sup> καὶ ἔφερεν ἐν<sup>3</sup> τριάκοντα, καὶ ἐν<sup>3</sup> ἑξήκοντα, καὶ ἐν<sup>3</sup> ἑκατόν.” 9. Καὶ ἔλεγεν αὐτοῖς,<sup>4</sup> “Ὁ ἔχων<sup>5</sup> ὧτα ἀκούειν ἀκούετω.” 10. Ὅτε δὲ<sup>6</sup> ἐγένετο ἡ καταμόνας, ἠρώτησαν<sup>7</sup> αὐτὸν οἱ <sup>a here and in Lk. ix. 18.</sup> περὶ αὐτὸν σὺν τοῖς δώδεκα τὴν παραβολήν.<sup>8</sup> 11. καὶ ἔλεγεν αὐτοῖς, “Ὑμῖν δέδοται γινῶναι τὸ μυστήριον<sup>9</sup> τῆς βασιλείας τοῦ Θεοῦ· ἐκεῖνοις δὲ τοῖς ἔξω, ἐν παραβολαῖς τὰ πάντα γίνεται· 12. ἵνα βλέποντες βλέπωσι, καὶ μὴ ἴδωσι· καὶ ἀκούοντες ἀκούωσι, καὶ μὴ συνιῶσι· μήποτε ἐπιστρέψωσι, καὶ ἀφεθῆ ἑαυτοῖς τὰ ἁμαρτήματα.”<sup>10</sup> 13. Καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς, “Οὐκ οἴδατε τὴν παραβολὴν ταύτην; καὶ πῶς πάσας τὰς παραβολὰς γνῶσεσθε; 14. ὁ σπείρων τὸν λόγον σπείρει. 15. οὗτοι δὲ εἰσιν οἱ παρὰ τὴν ὁδόν, ὅπου σπείρεται ὁ λόγος, καὶ

<sup>1</sup> ἀλλα in NBCL. ἄλλο conforms to that in ver. 7.

<sup>2</sup> αυξανομενον in ACDLA (Tisch.). αυξανομενα in SB (W.H.) agreeing with ἀλλα.

<sup>3</sup> Most uncials have εν thrice (= εν). SCD have εις thrice (Tisch., Trg.). BL have εις εν εν (W.H. text), out of which the other readings probably grew.

<sup>4</sup> Most uncials and many verss. omit αυτοις.

<sup>5</sup> NBCDA have ος εχει., ο εχων is from parall.

<sup>6</sup> και οτε in NBCDLA.

<sup>7</sup> ηρωτων ABLA 33 (-ουν NC, Tisch.).

<sup>8</sup> τας παραβολας in NBCLA.

<sup>9</sup> το μυστηριον διδοται (without γινωμαι) in NBL (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>10</sup> NBCL omit τα αμαρτηματα, which is an explanatory gloss.

mystery of the Kingdom of God. They have been initiated into the secret, so that for them it is a secret no longer, not by explanation of the parable (Weiss), but independently. This true of them so far as disciples; discipleship means initiation into the mystery. In reality, it was only partially, and by comparison with the people, true of the disciples.—γινῶναι in T. R. is superfluous.—τοῖς ἔξω refers to the common crowd.—ἐν παραβολαῖς: all things take place as set forth in parables. This implies that the use of parables had been a standing feature of Christ's popular kerygma, in synagogue and street.—Ver. 12 seems to state the aim of the parabolic method of teaching as being to keep the people in the dark, and prevent them from being converted and forgiven. This cannot really have been the aim of Jesus. Vide notes on the parable of the Sower in Mt., where the statement is softened somewhat.

Vv. 13-20. Explanation of the Sower (Mt. xiii. 18-23, Lk. viii. 11-15), prefaced by a gentle reproach that explanation should be needed.—Ver. 13. οὐκ οἴδατε . . . γνῶσεσθε: not one question = know ye not this parable, and how ye shall know all, etc. (so Meyer and Weiss), but two = know ye not this parable? and how shall ye, etc. (so most), the meaning being, not: if ye know not the simpler how shall ye know the more difficult? but rather implying that to understand the Sower was to understand all the parables spoken that day (πάσας τὰς παρ.). They had all really one burden: the disappointing result of Christ's past ministry.—Ver. 14, in effect, states that the seed is the word.—Ver. 15. οἱ παρὰ τὴν ὁδόν: elliptical for, those in whose case the seed falls along the way = the “way-side” men, and so in the other cases.—ἔπου for εἰς οὓς, Euthy. Zig.—Ver. 16. ὁμοίως would stand more naturally before οὗτοι = on the same method of interpretation.—σπειρόμενοι: this class are identified with the seed rather than with the soil, but the sense, though crudely expressed ὅταν ἀκούσωσιν, εὐθέως ἔρχεται ὁ Σατανᾶς καὶ αἶρει τὸν λόγον τὸν ἐσπαρμένον ἐν ταῖς καρδίαις αὐτῶν.<sup>1</sup> 16. καὶ οὗτοί εἰσιν ὁμοίως οἱ ἐπὶ τὰ πετρώδη σπειρόμενοι, οἷ, ὅταν ἀκούσωσι τὸν λόγον, εὐθέως μετὰ χαρᾶς λαμβάνουσιν αὐτόν, 17. καὶ οὐκ ἔχουσι ρίζαν ἐν ἑαυτοῖς, ἀλλὰ πρόσκαιροί εἰσιν· εἶτα γενομένης θλίψεως ἢ διωγμοῦ διὰ τὸν λόγον, εὐθέως σκανδαλίζονται. 18. καὶ οὗτοί<sup>2</sup> εἰσιν οἱ εἰς τὰς ἀκάθας σπειρόμενοι, οὗτοί εἰσιν οἱ τὸν λόγον ἀκούοντες,<sup>3</sup> 19. καὶ αἱ μέριμναι τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτου,<sup>4</sup> καὶ ἡ ἀπάτη τοῦ πλούτου, καὶ αἱ περὶ τὰ λοιπὰ ἐπιθυμίαι εἰσπορευόμεναι συμπνίγουσι τὸν λόγον, καὶ ἄκαρπος γίνεται. 20. καὶ οὗτοί<sup>5</sup> εἰσιν οἱ ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν τὴν καλὴν σπαρέντες, οἵτινες ἀκούουσι τὸν λόγον καὶ παραδέχονται, καὶ καρποφοροῦσιν, ἐν τριάκοντα, καὶ ἐν ἐξήκοντα, καὶ ἐν ἑκατόν.” 21. Καὶ ἔλεγεν αὐτοῖς, “Μῆτι<sup>6</sup> ὁ λύχνος ἔρχεται,<sup>7</sup> ἵνα ὑπὸ τὸν

For εν τ. κ. α. (T.R.) B has εις αυτους (Trg., W.H.),  $\aleph$ C $\Delta$  εν αυτους (Tisch.).

<sup>2</sup> αλλοι in  $\aleph$ BCD $\Delta$ .

<sup>3</sup> ακουσαντες in  $\aleph$ BCD $\Delta$  (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> τουτου is an explanatory gloss not found in the best MSS.

<sup>5</sup> εκεινοι in  $\aleph$ BCL $\Delta$ .

<sup>6</sup> οτι before μητι in BL (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>7</sup> ερχεται before ο λυχνος in  $\aleph$ BCD $\Delta$  33.

is plain. They are the “rocky ground” men.—Ver. 18. ἄλλοι εἰσίν, there are others; ἄλλοι, well attested (οὗτοί in T. R.), is significant. It fixes attention on the third type of hearers as calling for special notice. They are such as, lacking the thoughtlessness of the first and shallowness of the second class, and having some depth and earnestness, might be expected to be fruitful; a less common type and much more interesting.—Ver. 19 specifies the hindrances, the choking thorns—μέριμναι τ. α., cares of life, in the case of thoughtful devout poor (Mt. vi. 25 f.).—ἀπάτη τ. πλ., the deceitfulness of wealth in the case of the commercial class (Chorazin, Bethsaida, Capernaum: Mt. xi. 21-23. Vide notes there).—αἱ π. τ. λ. ἐπιθυμίαι, the lusts for other things—sensual vices in the case of publicans and sinners (chap. ii. 13-17). Jesus had met with such cases in His past ministry.—Ver. 20. παραδέχονται, receive, answering to συνιείς in Mt. This does not adequately differentiate the fourth class from the third, who also take in the word, but not it alone. Lk. has supplied the defect.—εν might be either ἐν = this one 30, that one 60, etc., or ἐν = in 30, and in 60, and in 100 = good, better, best, not inferior, respectable, admirable. The lowest degree is deemed satisfactory. On the originality of the interpretation and on the whole parable vide in Mt.

Vv. 21-25. Responsibilities of disciples (Mt. v. 15, x. 26, vii. 2; Lk. viii. 16-18). True to His uniform teaching that privileges are to be used for the benefit of others, Jesus tells His disciples that if they have more insight than the multitude they must employ it for the common benefit. These sentences in Mk. represent the first special instruction of the disciples. Two of them, vv. 21, 24, are found in the Sermon on the Mount (Mt. v. 15, vii. 2). The whole of them come in appositely here, and were probably spoken at this time. (Cf. Lk. viii. 16-18, where they are partially given in the same connection.) In any case, their introduction in connection with the parables is important as showing that Mk. can hardly have seriously believed, what he certainly seems to say, that Jesus spoke parables to blind the people.—Ver. 21. μῆτι ἔρχεται, does the light come, for is it brought, in accordance with classic usage in reference to things without life; examples in Kypke, e.g., οὐκ ἔμειν' ἐλθεῖν τράπεζαν νυμφίαν. Pindar, Pyth., iii., 28 = “non expectavit donec adferretur mensa sponsalis”.—ὁ τ. κλίνην: not necessarily a table-couch (Meyer), might μόδιον τεθῆ ἢ ὑπὸ τὴν κλίνην; οὐχ ἵνα ἐπὶ τὴν λυχρίαν ἐπιτεθῆ<sup>1</sup>; 22. οὐ γὰρ ἐστὶ τι κρυπτόν, ὃ ἐὰν μὴ<sup>2</sup> φανερωθῆ· οὐδὲ ἐγένετο ἀπόκρυφον, ἀλλ' ἵνα εἰς φανερόν ἔλθῃ<sup>3</sup>. 23. εἴ τις ἔχει ὄψα ἀκούειν, ἀκούετω." 24. Καὶ ἔλεγεν αὐτοῖς, "Βλέπετε τί ἀκούετε. ἐν ᾧ μέτρῳ μετρεῖτε, μετρηθήσεται ὑμῖν, καὶ προστεθήσεται ὑμῖν τοῖς ἀκούουσιν.<sup>4</sup> 25. ὃς γὰρ ἂν ἔχη,<sup>5</sup> δοθήσεται αὐτῷ· καὶ ὃς οὐκ ἔχει, καὶ ὃ ἔχει ἀρθήσεται ἀπ' αὐτοῦ."

26. Καὶ ἔλεγεν, "Οὕτως ἐστὶν ἡ βασιλεία τοῦ Θεοῦ, ὡς ἐὰν<sup>6</sup>

<sup>1</sup> τεθῆ in  $\Sigma$ BCDLA al.

<sup>2</sup> Instead of ο εαν μη  $\Sigma$ BD have εαν μη ινα (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> ελθῆ εἰς φαν. in  $\Sigma$ CDLA. <sup>4</sup> τοῖς ακουουσιν is a gloss, omitted in  $\Sigma$ BCDLA.

<sup>5</sup> For αν εχη  $\Sigma$ BCLA have εχει. <sup>6</sup>  $\Sigma$ BDLA 33 al. omit εαν.

be a bed, high enough to be in no danger of being set on fire. Vide on Mt. v. 15. The moral: let your light shine that others may know what ye know.—Ver. 22. Double statement of the law that the hidden is to be revealed; 1st, predictively: there is nothing hidden which shall not be revealed; 2nd, interpretatively, with reference to the purpose of the hider: nor did anything become concealed with any other view than that it should eventually come to manifestation.—ἀπόκρυφον (ἀποκρύπτω), here and in Lk. viii. 17, Col. ii. 3.—ἀλλ': in effect = εἰ μὴ nisi, but strictly ἐγένετο ἀπόκρυφον is understood to be repeated after it = nothing becomes concealed absolutely, but it is concealed in order that, etc. This is universally true. Things are hid because they are precious, but precious things are meant to be used at some time and in some way. All depends on the time and the way, and it is there that diversity of action comes in. Christ's rule for that was: show your light when it will glorify God and benefit men; the world's rule is: when safe and beneficial to self.—Ver. 23. In ver. 9 a summons to try to understand the parable; here a summons to those who have understood, or shall understand, the parable, or the great theme of all the parables, to communicate their knowledge. Fritzsche, after Theophy. and Grot., thinks that in vv. 21, 22, Jesus exhorts His disciples to the culture of piety or virtue, not to the diffusion of their light, giving, as a reason, that the latter would be inconsistent with the professed aim of the parables to prevent enlightenment!—Ver. 24. βλέπετε, etc., take heed what you hear or how (πῶς, Lk.), see that ye hear to purpose.—ἐν

ᾧ μέτρῳ, etc. = careful hearing pays, the reward of attention is knowledge (ἐν ᾧ μέτρῳ μετρεῖτε τὴν προσοχὴν ἐν τῷ αὐτῷ μετρηθήσεται ὑμῖν ἢ γνώσις, Euthy, Zig.). In Mt. vii. 2 the apothegm is applied to judging. Such moral maxims admit of many applications. The idea of measuring does not seem very appropriate here. Holtz. (H. C.) thinks ver. 24 interrupts the connection.—προστεθήσεται implies that the reward will be out of proportion to the virtue; the knowledge acquired to the study devoted to the subject. There shall be given over and above, not to those who hear (T. R., τοῖς ἀκούουσιν), but to those who think on what they hear. This thought introduces ver. 25, which, in this connection, means: the more a man thinks the more he will understand, and the less a man thinks the less his power of understanding will become. "Whoso hath attention, knowledge will be given to him, and from him who hath not, the seed of knowledge will be taken. For as diligence causes that seed to grow, negligence destroys it," Euthy.

Vv. 26-29. Parable of the Blade, the Ear, and the Full Corn.—Peculiar to Mark and beyond doubt a genuine utterance of Jesus, the doctrine taught being over the head of the reporter and the Apostolic Church generally.—Ver. 26. καὶ ἔλεγεν, and He said, to whom? The disciples in private, or the crowd from the boat? The absence of αὐτοῖς after ἔλεγεν (cf. vv. 21, 24) is not conclusive against the former, as Weiss and Meyer think. On the latter view vv. 21-25 are a parenthesis. In any case this new parable refers to the disciples as representing the fertile soil, and is a pendant to the parable of the Sower, teaching that even in the case of

ἄνθρωπος βάλη τὸν σπόρον ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, 27. καὶ καθέυθη καὶ ἐγειρήται
 νύκτα καὶ ἡμέραν, καὶ ὁ σπόρος βλαστάνη<sup>1</sup> καὶ μηκύνηται<sup>2</sup> ὡς οὐκ οἶδεν αὐτός. 28. <sup>b</sup>αὐτομάτη γὰρ<sup>3</sup> ἡ γῆ καρποφορεῖ, πρῶτον χόρτον, εἶτα<sup>4</sup> στάχυν, εἶτα<sup>4</sup> πλήρη σίτον<sup>5</sup> ἐν τῷ στάχυϊ. 29. ὅταν δὲ παραδῶ<sup>6</sup> ὁ καρπός, εὐθέως ἀποστελλεῖ τὸ δρέπανον, ὅτι ὁ παρ-εστηκεν ὁ θερισμός.”
 30. Καὶ ἔλεγε, “Τίτι<sup>7</sup> ὁμοιώσωμεν τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἣ ἐν ποίᾳ παραβολῇ παραβάλωμεν αὐτήν<sup>8</sup>; 31. ὡς κόκκῳ σινάπews, ὅς, ὅταν σπαρῆ ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, μικρότερος<sup>9</sup> πάντων τῶν σπερμᾶ-

<sup>1</sup> βλαστα in BCDLΔ (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> μηκυνεται in BD, implying that βλαστα is also indicative.

<sup>3</sup> γαρ omit ΞABCL.

<sup>4</sup> εἰτε in ΞBLΔ.

<sup>5</sup> πλήρης σίτος in BD (Alford, Tisch., Trg., W.H.). CΣ have πλήρης σίτον, which W.H. (appendix) regard as probably the true reading, πλήρης being an indeclinable adjective as in Acts vi. 5. Weiss, on the other hand, regards this reading of CΣ as a half correction.

<sup>6</sup> παραδοι in ΞBDD. CL have παραδω.

<sup>7</sup> πως in ΞBCLΔ (Tisch., W.H. al.).

<sup>8</sup> εν τινι αυτην παραβολη θωμεν in ΞBCLΔ (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>9</sup> μικροτερον ον in ΞBL(ων)Δ 33, εστι (in T.R. supplying the place of ον) being omitted (Tisch., W.H.).

the fourth type of hearers the production of fruit is a gradual process demanding time. Put negatively it amounts to saying that Christ's ministry has as yet produced no fruit properly speaking at all, but only in some cases met with a soil that gives promise of fruit (the disciples). The parable reveals at once the discrimination and the patience of Jesus. He knew the difference between the blade that would wither and that which would issue in ripe grain, and He did not expect this result in any case per saltum. A parable teaching this lesson was very seasonable after that of the Sower.—Ver. 27. καθέυθη . . . ἡμέραν, sleep and rise night and day, suggestive of the monotonous life of a man who has nothing particular to do beyond waiting patiently for the result of what he has already done (seed sown). The presents express a habit, while βάλη, ver. 26, expresses an act, done once for all.—βλαστᾶ (the reading in BDL, etc., as if from βλαστᾶω) may be either indicative or subjunctive, the former if we adopt the reading μηκύνεται (BD., etc.) = and the seed sprouts and lengthens.—ὡς οὐκ οἶδεν αὐτός, how knoweth not (nor careth) he, perfectly indifferent to the rationale of growth; the fact enough for him.—Ver. 28. αὐτομάτη (αὐτός and μέμαα from absolute μάω, to desire eagerly), self-moved, spontaneously, without external aid, and also beyond external control; with a way and will, so to speak, of its own that must be respected and waited for. Classical examples in Wetstein, Kypke, Raphael, etc.—καρποφορεῖ, beareth fruit, intransitive. The following nouns, χόρτον, στάχυν, are not the object of the verb, but in apposition with καρπὸν (καρπὸν φέρει) or governed by φέρει, understood (φέρει, quod ex καρποφορεῖ petendum, Fritzsche).—πλήρης σίτος, this change to the nominative (the reading of BD) is a tribute to the importance of the final stage towards which the stages of blade and ear are but preparatory steps = then is the full ear. Full = ripe, perfect, hence the combination of the two words in such phrases as πλήρη καὶ τέλεια τᾶγαθὰ quoted by Kypke from Philo. The specification of the three stages shows that gradual growth is the point of the parable (Schanz).—Ver. 29. παραδοῖ (παρυδώω), when the fruit yields itself, or permits (by being ripe). The latter sense (for which classical usage can be cited) is preferred by most recent commentators.

Vv. 30-32. The Mustard Seed (Mt. xiii. 31-32, Lk. xiii. 18, 19).—Ver. 30. πῶς . . . θῶμεν (vide above). This introductory question, especially as given in the text των ἐστὶ τῶν ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς· 32. καὶ ὅταν σπαρῆ, ἀναβαίνει, καὶ γίνεται πάντων τῶν λαχάνων μείζων,<sup>1</sup> καὶ ποιεῖ κλάδους μεγάλους, ὥστε δύνασθαι ὑπὸ τὴν σκιὰν αὐτοῦ τὰ πετεινὰ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ κατασκηνοῦν.” 33. Καὶ τοιαύταις παραβολαῖς πολλαῖς ἐλάλει αὐτοῖς τὸν λόγον, καθὼς ἠδύναντο ἀκούειν· 34. χωρὶς δὲ παραβολῆς οὐκ ἐλάλει αὐτοῖς· κατ’ ἰδίαν δὲ τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ<sup>2</sup> ἔπελυε πάντα. d cf. Acts xix. 39

35. ΚΑΙ λέγει αὐτοῖς ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ ὀψίας γενομένης, “ Δι-

<sup>1</sup> μείζων παντων των λαχ. in  $\aleph$ BCL 33. D has the same order with μείζων.

<sup>2</sup> τοις ιδιοις μαθ. in  $\aleph$ BCLΔ.

of W.H., is very graphic = how shall we liken the Kingdom of God, or in (under) what parable shall we place it? The form of expression implies that something has been said before creating a need for figurative embodiment, something pointing to the insignificance of the beginnings of the Kingdom. The two previous parables satisfy this requirement = the word fruitful only in a few, and even in them only after a time. What is the best emblem of this state of things?—Ver. 31. ὡς κόκκῳ: ὡς stands for ὁμοιώσωμεν = let us liken it to a grain, etc.; κόκκον would depend on θῶμεν.—ὅς ὅταν σπαρῆ . . . καὶ ὅταν σπαρῆ: the construction of this passage as given in critical texts is very halting, offering a very tempting opportunity for emendation to the scribes who in the T. R. have given us a very smooth readable text (vide A. V.). Literally it runs thus: “which when it is sown upon the earth, being the least of all the seeds upon the earth—and when it is sown,” etc. The R. V. improves this rugged sentence somewhat by substituting “yet” for “and” in last clause. It is hardly worth while attempting to construe the passage. Enough that we see what is meant. In the twice used ὅταν σπαρῆ, the emphasis in the first instance lies on ὅταν, in the second on σπαρῆ (Bengel, Meyer). By attending to this we get the sense: which being the least of all seeds when it is sown or at the time of sowing, yet when it is sown, after sowing, springs up, etc.—μικρότερον δὲν is neuter by attraction of σπερμάτων, though κόκκῳ going before is masculine.—Ver. 32. μείζων π. τ. λαχάνων, the greatest of all the herbs, still only an herb; no word of a tree here as in Matthew and Luke, though comparatively tree-like in size, making great boughs (κλάδους μεγάλους), great relatively to its kind, not to forest trees. Mark’s version here is evidently the more original.

Vv. 33, 34. Conclusion of the parable collection (Mt. xiii. 34, 35).—Ver. 33. τοιαύταις π. π., with such parables, many of them, He was speaking to them the word, implying that the three—sower; blade, ear and full corn; mustard seed—are given as samples of the utterances from the boat, all of one type, about seed representing the word, and expressing Christ’s feelings of disappointment yet of hope regarding His ministry. Many is to be taken cum grano.—καθὼς ἠδύναντο ἀκούειν = as they were able to understand, as in 1 Cor. xiv. 2, implying that parables were employed to make truth plain (De Wette).—Ver. 34. χωρὶς παραβολῆς, etc., without a parable He was not wont to speak to the people, not merely that day, but at any time.—ἔπελυε, etc., He was in the habit of interpreting all things (viz., the parables in private to His own disciples, the Twelve, cf. ἐπιλύσεις, 2 Peter i. 20). This does not necessarily imply that the multitude understood nothing, but only that Jesus, by further talk, made the disciples understand better. Yet on the whole it must be admitted that in his account of Christ’s parabolic teaching Mark seems to vacillate between two opposite views of the function of parables, one that they were used to make spiritual truths plain to popular intelligence, the other that they were riddles, themselves very much needing explanation, and fitted, even intended, to hide truth. This second view might be suggested and fostered by the fact that some of the parables express recondite spiritual truths.

Vv. 35-41. Crossing the lake (Mt. viii. 18, 23-27, Lk. viii. 22-25).—ἐν ἐκείνῃ τ. ἡ., on that day, the day of the parable ἐλθωμεν εἰς τὸ πέραν." 36. Καὶ ἀφέντες τὸν ὄχλον, παραλαμβάνουσιν αὐτὸν ὡς ἦν ἐν τῷ πλοίῳ· <sup>ο</sup>καὶ ἄλλα <sup>ο</sup>δὲ <sup>1</sup>πλοιαρία <sup>2</sup>ἦν

 μετ' αὐτοῦ. 37. καὶ γίνεται λαίλαψ ἀνέμου μεγάλη <sup>3</sup>· τὰ δὲ <sup>4</sup>κύματα
 ἐπέβαλλεν εἰς τὸ πλοῖον, ὥστε αὐτὸ ἤδη γεμίσεσθαι. <sup>5</sup> 38. καὶ ἦν αὐτὸς <sup>6</sup> ἐπὶ <sup>7</sup> τῇ πρύμνῃ ἐπὶ τὸ <sup>8</sup> προσκεφάλαιον καθεύδων· καὶ
 διεγείρουσιν <sup>8</sup> αὐτόν, καὶ λέγουσιν αὐτῷ, "Διδάσκαλε, οὐ <sup>9</sup> μελεῖ σοι ὅτι ἀπολλύμεθα;" 39. Καὶ διεγερθεὶς ἐπετίμησε τῷ ἀνέμῳ, καὶ εἶπε τῇ θαλάσῃ, "Σιώπα, πεφίμωσο." Καὶ ἐκόπασεν ὁ ἄνεμος, καὶ ἐγένετο γαλήνη μεγάλη. 40. καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, "Τί <sup>1</sup>δειλοί ἐστε οὕτω; πῶς οὐκ <sup>9</sup> ἔχετε πίστιν;" 41. Καὶ ἐφοβήθησαν φόβον μέγαν, καὶ ἔλεγον πρὸς ἀλλήλους, "Τίς ἄρα οὗτός ἐστιν, ὅτι καὶ ὁ ἄνεμος καὶ ἡ θάλασσα ὑπακούουσιν <sup>10</sup> αὐτῷ;"

<sup>1</sup> NBCLA omit δε, found in D; no other instance of καὶ . . . δε in Mk.

<sup>2</sup> πλοια in NABCDΔΣ. <sup>3</sup> μεγαλη ανεμου in BDLΔ.

<sup>4</sup> και τα for τα δε in NBCDLΔ.

<sup>5</sup> ὥστε ἤδη γεμίσεσθαι το πλοιον in N<sup>a</sup>BCDLΔ: rugged style, but none the less likely to be true.

<sup>6</sup> αυτος ην in N<sup>a</sup>BCLΔ.

<sup>7</sup> εν in NABCDLΔ.

<sup>8</sup> εγειρουσιν in N<sup>a</sup>BCΔ.

<sup>9</sup> ουπω in NBDLΔ (W.H.).

<sup>10</sup> υπακουει in BL (W.H.). So N<sup>a</sup>CA, but with αυτω before verb. Vide below.

discourse, the more to be noted that Mark does not usually trouble himself about temporal connection.—διέλωμεν, let us cross over, spoken to the Twelve, who are in the boat with Jesus.—Ver. 36. This verse describes the manner in which Christ's wish was carried out—it was in effect a flight along the only line of retreat, the shore being besieged by the crowd = leaving (ἀφέντες, not dismissing) the crowd they carry Him off (avehunt, Grotius) as He was in the ship (ὡς ἦν = ὡς εἶχεν) sine apparatu (Bengel) and sine morā; but there were also other boats with Him, i.e., with His boat. This last fact, peculiar to Mark, is added to show that even seawards escape was difficult. Some of the people had got into boats to be nearer the Speaker. The δὲ after ἄλλα, though doubtful, helps to bring out the sense. This is another of Mark's realisms.—Ver. 37. γίνεται λαίλαψ: cf. Jonah i. 4, ἐγένετο κλύδων μέγας.—ἐπέβαλλεν, were dashing (intransitive) against and into (εἰς) the ship.—γεμίσεσθαι, so that already (ἤδη) the ship was getting full.—Ver. 38. τὸ προσκεφάλαιον, the pillow, a part of the ship, as indicated by the article (Bengel); no soft luxurious pillow, probably of wood (Theophy., Euthy.); "the leathern cushion of the steersman" (Maclear, Camb. N. T.);

the low bench at the stern on which the steersman sometimes sits, and the captain sometimes rests his head to sleep (Van Lennep, Bible Lands, p. 62).—Ver. 39. Observe the poetic parallelism in this verse: wind and sea separately addressed, and the corresponding effects separately specified: lulled wind, calmed sea. The evangelist realises the dramatic character of the situation.—σιώπα, πεφίμωσο, silence! hush! laconic, majestic, probably the very words.—ἐκόπασεν, ceased, as if tired blowing, from κόπος (vide at Mt. xiv. 32).—Ver. 40. τί δειλοί, etc., duality of expression again. Matthew gives the second phrase, Luke the gist of both.—Ver. 41. ἐφοβήθησαν φ. μ.: nearly the same phrase as in Jonah i. 16.—τίς ἄρα οὗτός, who then is this? One would have thought the disciples had been prepared by this time for anything. Matthew indeed has οἱ ἄνθρωποι, suggestive of other than disciples, as if such surprise in them were incongruous. But their emotional condition, arising out of the dangerous situation, must be taken into account. For the rest Jesus was always giving them surprises; His mind and character had so many sides.—ὑπακούει, singular, the wind and the sea thought of separately, each a wild lawless element, not given to obeying: even the wind, even the sea, obeys Him!

V. 1. ΚΑΙ ἦλθον εἰς τὸ πέραν τῆς θαλάσσης, εἰς τὴν χώραν τῶν Γαδαρηνῶν.<sup>1</sup> 2. καὶ ἐξεληθόντι αὐτῷ<sup>2</sup> ἐκ τοῦ πλοίου, εὐθέως ἀπήντησεν<sup>3</sup> αὐτῷ ἐκ τῶν μνημείων ἄνθρωπος ἐν πνεύματι ἀκαθάρτῳ, 3. ὃς τὴν *κατοίκησιν εἶχεν ἐν τοῖς μνημείοις<sup>4</sup>· καὶ οὔτε ἀλύσεισιν οὐδεὶς<sup>5</sup> ἠδύνατο αὐτὸν δῆσαι, 4. διὰ τὸ αὐτὸν πολλακίς πέδαις καὶ ἀλύσεισιν<sup>b</sup> δεδέσθαι, καὶ *δισπαῖσθαι ὑπ' αὐτοῦ τὰς ἀλύσεις, καὶ τὰς πέδας συντετριφῆθαι, καὶ οὐδεὶς αὐτὸν ἴσχυε<sup>6</sup> *δαμάσαι· 5. καὶ διαπαντὸς νυκτὸς καὶ ἡμέρας ἐν τοῖς ὄρεσι καὶ ἐν τοῖς μνήμασιν<sup>7</sup> ἦν κρᾶζων<sup>d</sup> καὶ<sup>d</sup> κατακόπτων ἑαυτὸν λίθοις. 6. Ἰδὼν δὲ<sup>8</sup> τὸν Ἰησοῦν ἀπὸ

<sup>1</sup> Γερασηνῶν in  $\aleph$ BD it. vg. (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> ἐξεληθοντος αὐτου in  $\aleph$ BCLΔ (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> ὑπήντησεν in  $\aleph$ BCDLΔ; B omits εὐθως.

<sup>4</sup> μνημασι in  $\aleph$ ABCLΔΣ.

<sup>5</sup> οὐδε ἀλυσει ουκετι ουδεις in BCL; for οὐδε and ουκετι ουδεις the consensus is greater (+ $\aleph$ ΔΔ).

<sup>6</sup> ἴσχυεν αὐτον in many uncials.

<sup>7</sup> ἐν τοις μν. καὶ ἐν τοις ὄρ. in the best copies.

<sup>8</sup> καὶ ἰδων in  $\aleph$ BCLΔ.

CHAPTER V. THE GERASENE DEMONIAIC. THE DAUGHTER OF JAIRUS. THE WOMAN WITH AN ISSUE. This group of incidents is given in the same order in all three synoptists, but in Matthew not in immediate sequence.—Vv. 1-20. The Gerasene Demoniac (Mt. viii. 28-34, Lk. viii. 26-39).—Ver. 1. εἰς τὴν χώραν τ. Γερασηνῶν: on the proper name to the place vide at the parallel place in Mt.—Ver. 2. ἐξελ. αὐτοῦ . . . ὑπήντησεν αὐτῷ; note the correction of style in Luke. Mark's incorrectness is to be preferred as emphasising the fact that the meeting with the demoniac took place immediately after leaving the boat. Just on that account the εὐθὺς before ὑπήντησεν (omitted in B) is unnecessary.—ἐκ τ. μνημείων, from the tombs, as in Mt., ἐκ τῆς πόλεως in Lk.; the former doubtless the fact. Luke's phrase probably means that he belonged to the city, not necessarily implying that he came from it just then (vide Lk. viii. 27, last clause).—Vv. 3-5 elaborately describe the man's condition, as if the evangelist or rather his informant (Peter) were fascinated by the subject; not a case of idle word-painting, but of realistic description from vivid, almost morbid, recollection. Holtzmann (H. C.) refers to Is. lxx. 4, 5, as if to suggest that some elements of the picture—dwelling in tombs, eating swine's flesh—were taken thence.—τὴν κατ., the, i.e. his dwelling, implying though not emphasising constant habit (perpetuum, Fritzsche), Lk., "for a long time".—οὐδέ, οὐκέτι, οὐδεὶς: energetic accumulation of negatives, quite in the spirit of the Greek language. At this point the sentence breaks away from the relative construction as if in sympathy with the untamable wildness of the demoniac.—Ver. 4 tells how they had often tried to bind the madman, feet (πέδαις) and hands (ἀλύσει, with chains, for the hands here, in contrast to πέδαις, chains for the feet; usually it means chains in general).—συντετριφῆθαι: the use of a distinct verb in reference to the fetters suggests that they were of different material, either cords (Meyer) or wooden (Schanz), and that we should render συντετ., not "broken in pieces" (A.V.), but rubbed through as if by incessant friction.—Ver. 5. As the previous verse depicts the demoniac strength, so this the utter misery of the poor sufferer.—διὰ παντὸς νυκ. κ. ἡμέρ., incessantly night time and day time, even during night when men gladly get under roof (Weiss, Mc-Evang.) and when sleep makes trouble cease for most: no sleep for this wretch, or quiet resting-place.—ἐν τ. μνήμασι κ. ἐ. τ. ὄρεσι, in tombs or on mountains, in cave or out in the open, there was but one occupation for him: not rest or sleep, but ceaseless outcry and self-laceration (κρᾶζων, κατακόπτων ἑαυτ. λίθοις).

Vv. 6-13. Meeting with Jesus. This desperate case will test Christ's power to heal. Madness, as wild and untamable as the wind or the sea. What is going to happen?—Ver. 6. ἀπὸ μακρόθεν, from

μα κρόθεν, ἔδραμε καὶ προσεκύνησεν αὐτῷ,<sup>1</sup> 7. καὶ κράξας φωνῇ μεγάλη εἶπε,<sup>2</sup> "Τί μοι καὶ σοί, Ἰησοῦ, υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ τοῦ ὑψίστου; ὀρκίζω σε τὸν Θεόν, μὴ με βασανίσῃς." 8. ἔλεγε γὰρ αὐτῷ,
 "Ἐξελθε, τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἀκάθαρτον ἐκ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου." 9. Καὶ ἐπηρώτα αὐτὸν, "Τί σοι ὄνομα<sup>3</sup>;" Καὶ ἀπεκρίθη, λέγων, "Λεγεῶν<sup>4</sup>
 ὄνομά μοι,<sup>5</sup> ὅτι πολλοὶ ἔσμεν." 10. Καὶ παρεκάλει αὐτὸν πολλὰ, ἵνα μὴ αὐτοὺς ἀποστείλῃ<sup>6</sup> ἔξω τῆς χώρας. 11. ἦν δὲ ἐκεῖ πρὸς τὰ ὄρη<sup>7</sup> ἀγέλη χοίρων μεγάλη βοσκομένη. 12. καὶ παρεκάλεσαν αὐτὸν πάντες οἱ δαίμονες<sup>8</sup> λέγοντες, "Πέμψον ἡμᾶς εἰς τοὺς χοίρους, ἵνα εἰς αὐτοὺς εἰσέλθωμεν." 13. Καὶ ἐπέτρεψεν αὐτοῖς εὐθὺς ὁ Ἰησοῦς.<sup>9</sup> καὶ ἐξελθόντα τὰ πνεύματα τὰ ἀκάθαρτα εἰσῆλθον εἰς τοὺς χοίρους· καὶ ὤρμησεν ἡ ἀγέλη κατὰ τοῦ κρημνοῦ εἰς τὴν θάλασσαν· ἦσαν δὲ<sup>10</sup>

<sup>1</sup> αὐτον in ΞBCLΔ instead of the more usual αὐτω of T.R.

<sup>2</sup> λεγει in ΞABCLΔΣ.

<sup>3</sup> ὄνομα σοι in most uncials. D has σοι ον. (so in Lk.).

<sup>4</sup> καὶ λεγει αὐτω Λεγιων in ΞBCLΔ (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> BD add εστιν.

<sup>6</sup> αὐτα αποσ. in BCD. D has αὐτους.

<sup>7</sup> τω ορει in all uncials.

<sup>8</sup> παντες οι δαιμ. omit ΞBCLΔ (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>9</sup> ΞBCLΔ omit εὐθὺς ο. l.

<sup>10</sup> ΞBCDLΔ omit ἦσαν δε.

afar, a relative expression, a favourite pleonasm in Mk. (xiv. 54, xv. 40).— προσεκύνησεν: worshipful attitude, as of one who feels already the charm or spell of Him before whom he kneels; already there is a presentiment and commencement of cure, though not yet welcome.—Ver. 7. τ. θ. τοῦ ὑψίστου; Mt. has τοῦ θεοῦ only. Luke gives the full expression—the Son of God Most High.
 Which is the original? Weiss (Meyer) says Mt.'s, Mk. adding τ. ὑψ. to prepare for the appeal to One higher even than Jesus, in ὀρκίζω following. But why should not the demoniac himself do that?
 —ὀρκίζω: in classics to make swear, in N. T. (here and in Acts xix. 13) to adjure with double accusative; not good Greek according to Phryn.; ὀρκώω the right word.—μὴ με βασανίσῃς: no πρὸ καιροῦ as in Mt., the reference apparently to the present torment of demoniac or demon, or both; either shrinking from cure felt to be impending.— Ver. 8. ἔλεγεν γὰρ, for He was about to say: not yet said, but evident from Christ's manner and look that it was on His tongue; the conative imperfect (Weiss).—Ver. 9. τί σοι ὄνομα; instead of saying at once what He had meant to say, Jesus adopts a roundabout method of dealing with the case, and asks the demoniac his name, as if to bring him into composure.—Λεγιών:

 from the Roman legion not a rare sight in that region, emblem of irresistible power and of a multitude organised into unity; the name already naturalised into Greek and Aramaean. The use of it by the demoniac, like the immediate recognition of Jesus as a God-like person, reveals a sensitive, fine-strung mind wrecked by insanity.—Ver. 10. παρεκά-λει: he, Legion, in the name of the demons, beseeches earnestly (πολλὰ) that He would not send them (αὐτὰ) out of the region (χώρας). Decapolis, beloved by demons, suggests Grotius, because full of Hellenising apostate Jews, teste Joseph. (A. J., xvii., 11).—Ver. 11. ἐκεῖ, there, near by. Cf. Mt. viii. 30.—πρὸς τῷ ὄρει; on the mountain side.—Ver. 12.
 πέμψον: send us into the swine; no chance of permission to enter into men; no expectation either of the ensuing catastrophe.—Ver. 13. καὶ ἐπέτρεψεν:
 permission, not command, to enter; in
 Mt. not even that, simply a peremptory:
 Depart! Vide notes there.—εἰσῆλθον:
 an inference from the sequel; neither exit nor entrance could be seen. There was doubtless a coincidence between the cure and the catastrophe.—ὡς δισχίλιοι:
 about 2000, an estimate of the herds possibly exaggerated.—ἐπνίγοντο (πνίγω, to choke), were drowned, used in this

ὡς δισχιλιοὶ καὶ ἐπνίγοντο ἐν τῇ θαλάσῃ. 14. Οἱ δὲ βόσκοιτες τοὺς χοίρους<sup>1</sup> ἔφυγον, καὶ ἀνήγγειλαν<sup>2</sup> εἰς τὴν πόλιν καὶ εἰς τοὺς ἀγρούς. καὶ ἐξῆλθον<sup>2</sup> ἰδεῖν τί ἐστι τὸ γεγονός· 15. καὶ ἔρχονται πρὸς τὸν Ἰησοῦν, καὶ θεωροῦσι τὸν δαιμονιζόμενον καθήμενον καὶ<sup>3</sup> ἱματισμένον καὶ σφρονοῦντα, τὸν ἐσχηκότα τὸν λεγεῶνα· καὶ ἐφοβήθησαν· 16. καὶ διηγήσαντο αὐτοῖς οἱ ἰδόντες, πῶς ἐγένετο τῷ δαιμονιζομένῳ, καὶ περὶ τῶν χοίρων. 17. καὶ ἤρξαντο παρακαλεῖν αὐτὸν ἀπελθεῖν ἀπὸ τῶν ὀρίων αὐτῶν. 18. Καὶ ἐμβάντος<sup>4</sup> αὐτοῦ εἰς τὸ πλοῖον, παρεκάλει αὐτὸν ὁ δαιμονισθεὶς, ἵνα ᾗ μετ' αὐτοῦ.<sup>5</sup> 19. ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς<sup>6</sup> οὐκ ἀφῆκεν αὐτόν, ἀλλὰ λέγει αὐτῷ, “Ὑπαγε εἰς τὸν οἶκόν σου πρὸς τοὺς σοῦς, καὶ ἀνάγγειλον<sup>7</sup> αὐτοῖς ὅσα σοὶ ὁ Κύριος<sup>8</sup>

<sup>1</sup> καὶ οἱ βοσ. αυτους in ΞBCDLΔ.

<sup>2</sup> απηγ. and ηλθον in ΞBL (CD have απηγ.).

<sup>3</sup> καὶ omitted in ΞBDLΔ.

<sup>4</sup> εμβαινοντος in ΞABCDLΔΣ 33.

<sup>5</sup> μετ αυτου η in ΞABCLΔ.

<sup>6</sup> For ο δε I. the same authorities have simply καὶ.

<sup>7</sup> απαγ. in ΞBCΔ.

<sup>8</sup> ο κυριος σοι in BCΔ.

sense in Joseph., A. J., x., 7, 5, regarding Jeremiah in the dungeon.

Vv. 14-20. Sequel of the story.—Ver. 14. εἰς τὴν πόλιν, etc.: the herds of course ran in breathless panic-stricken haste to report the tragedy in the city and in the neighbouring farms (ἀγρούς).—καὶ ἦλθον, etc.: and the people in town and country as naturally went to see what had happened. Their road brings them straight to Jesus (ver. 15), and they see there a sight which astonishes them, the well-known and dreaded demoniac completely altered in manner and aspect: sitting (καθήμενον) quiet, not restless; clothed (ἱματισμένον here and in Lk. viii. 35), implying previous nakedness, which is expressly noted by Lk. (viii. 27), sane (σφρονοῦντα), implying previous madness. For this sense of the verb vide 2 Cor. v. 13. Some take the second and third participle as subordinate to the first, but they may be viewed as co-ordinate, denoting three distinct, equally outstanding, characteristics: “sedentem, vestitum, sanae mentis, cum antea fuisset sine quiete, vestibus, rationis usu” (Bengel)—all this had happened to the man who had had the Legion! (τὸν ἐσχ. τ. λεγιῶνα)—ἐσχηκότα, perfect in sense of pluperfect. Burton, § 156.—ἐφοβήθησαν: they were afraid, of the sane man, as much as they had been of the insane, i.e., of the power which had produced the change.—Ver. 16. The eyewitnesses in further explanations to their employers now connect the two events together—the cure and the catastrophe—not representing the one as cause of the other, but simply as happening close to each other. The owners draw a natural inference: cure cause of catastrophe, and (ver. 17) request Jesus, as a dangerous person, to retire.—ἤρξαντο, began to request, pointing to transition from vague awe in presence of a great change to desire to be rid of Him whom they believed to be the cause both of it and of the loss of their swine. Fritzsche takes ἤρξαντο as meaning that Jesus did not need much pressure, but withdrew on the first hint of their wish.—Ver. 18. ἐμβαινόντος, embarking, the same day? Jesus had probably intended to stay some days on the eastern shore as on the hill (iii. 13), to let the crowd disperse.—ἵνα μετ' αὐτοῦ ᾗ: an object clause after verb of exhorting with ἵνα, and subjunctive instead of infinitive as often in N. T., that he might be with Him (recalling iii. 14). The man desired to become a regular disciple. Victor of Ant., Theophy., Grotius, and partly Schanz think his motive was fear lest the demons might return.—Ver. 19. Jesus refuses, and, contrary to His usual practice, bids the healed one go and spread the news, as a kind of missionary to Decapolis, as the Twelve were to Galilee. The first apostle of the heathen (Holtz. (H. C.) after Volkmar). Jesus determined that those who would not have Himself should have His repreἐποίησε,<sup>1</sup> καὶ ἠλέησέ σε." 20. Καὶ ἀπῆλθε καὶ ἤρξατο κηρύσσειν ἐν τῇ Δεκαπόλει, ὅσα ἐποίησεν αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς· καὶ πάντες ἐθαύμαζον.

21. ΚΑΙ διαπεράσαντος τοῦ Ἰησοῦ ἐν τῷ πλοίῳ πάλιν εἰς τὸ πέραν, συνήχθη ὄχλος πολὺς ἐπ' αὐτόν, καὶ ἦν παρὰ τὴν θάλασσαν. 22. Καὶ ἰδοῦ,<sup>2</sup> ἔρχεται εἰς τῶν ἀρχισυναγῶγων, ὀνόματι Ἰάειρος, καὶ ἰδὼν αὐτόν, πίπτει πρὸς τοὺς πόδας αὐτοῦ· 23. καὶ παρεκάλει<sup>3</sup> αὐτόν πολλά, λέγων, "Ὅτι τὸ θυγάτριόν μου ἐσχάτως ἔχει· ἵνα ἐλθὼν ἐπιθῆς αὐτῇ τὰς χεῖρας,<sup>4</sup> ὅπως<sup>5</sup> σωθῆ καὶ ζήσεται."<sup>6</sup> 24. Καὶ ἀπῆλθε μετ' αὐτοῦ· καὶ ἠκολούθει αὐτῷ ὄχλος πολὺς, καὶ συνέθλιβον αὐτόν.

f again
vii. 25.

g Lk. xv. 13.

Acts xxi.

24. 2 Cor.

xii. 15.

Jas. iv. 3.

25. Καὶ γυνὴ τις<sup>6</sup> οὖσα ἐν ῥύσει αἵματος ἔτη δώδεκα,<sup>7</sup> 26. καὶ πολλὰ παθοῦσα ὑπὸ πολλῶν ἰατρῶν, καὶ ἑδαπνήσασα τὰ παρ' αὐτῆς<sup>8</sup>

<sup>1</sup> πεποιηκεν in  $\Sigma$ ABCL $\Sigma$ .

<sup>2</sup> Omit ἰδου  $\Sigma$ BDDL $\Delta$ .

<sup>3</sup> παρακαλει in  $\Sigma$ ACL (Tisch., W.H., text). παρακαλει in B $\Delta$  (W.H. margin).

<sup>4</sup> τας χειρας αυτη in  $\Sigma$ BCL $\Delta$ .

<sup>5</sup> ινα σωθη και ζηση in  $\Sigma$ BCDL $\Delta$  (ζησεται is from Mt.).

<sup>6</sup> Omit τις  $\Sigma$ ABCL $\Delta$  (found in D $\Sigma$ ).

<sup>7</sup> δωδεκα ετη in  $\Sigma$ BCL $\Delta$ .

<sup>8</sup> αυτης in BL $\Sigma$  (W.H. text), εαυτης in  $\Sigma$ C $\Delta$  (Tisch., W.H., margin).

sentative.—πεποίηκεν, perfect, the effect abiding: hath done for me, as you see.—ἠλέησέν σε: pitied thee at the time of cure. ὅσα may be understood before ἠλ. = and how, etc., or καὶ ἠλ. may be a Hebraising way of speaking for ἐλεήσας σε (Grotius).—Κυρίως: the subject to the two verbs = God, as in O. T. Sept.—Ver. 20. ἐν τῇ Δεκαπόλει: he took a wide range; implying probably that he was known throughout the ten cities as the famous madman of Gerasa. What was the effect of his mission in that Greek world? Momentary wonder at least (ἐθαύμαζον), perhaps not much more.

Vv. 21-43. The daughter of Jairus and the woman with bloody issue (Mt. ix. 18-26, Lk. viii. 40-56).—Ver. 21. ὄχλος πολὺς: the inescapable crowd, in no hurry to disperse, gathers again about Jesus, on His return to the western shore.—ἐπ' αὐτόν: not merely to, but after Him, the great centre of attraction (cf. πρὸς α., ii. 13, iv. 1).—παρὰ τ. θ., by the sea (here and there); how soon after the arrival the incident happened not indicated (cf. Mt. ix. 18 for sequence and situation), nor is the motive of the narrative. Weiss suggests that the Jairus story is given as another instance of unreceptivity, ver. 40 (Meyer).—Ver. 22. εἰς τ. ἄ.: might imply a plurality of synagogues, each having its chief ruler. But in Acts xiii. 14, 15, one syn. has its ἀρχισυναγωγῶν.—Ver. 23. θυγάτριόν μου: an instance of Mk.'s love of diminutives, again in vii. 25.—ἐσχάτως ἔχει, is extremely ill, at death's door (in Mt. dead), stronger than κακῶς ἔχει; a late Greek phrase (examples in Elsner, Wetstein, Kypke, etc.), disapproved by Phryn. (Lobeck, p. 389).—ἵνα ἐλθὼν ἐπιθῆς: either used as an imperative (cf. 1 Tim. i. 3, ἵνα παραγγείλης), or dependent on some verb understood, e.g., δεόμεθα σου (Palairot), ἤκω (Fritzsche); better παρακαλῶ σε, the echo of παρεκάλει going before (Grotius). Similarly Euthy. Zig.).

Vv. 25-34. The woman with an issue.—Ver. 25. ἐν ῥύσει ἄ. = αἰμορροῦσα of Mt.: in or with a flux of blood. So in Lk. also.—Ver. 26. Details about the case, similarly in Lk., not in Mt.: either they expand or Mt. abbreviates.—πολλὰ παθοῦσα: no wonder, remarks Lightfoot, in view of the endless prescriptions for such a case, of which he gives samples (Hor. Heb.); physicians of the empiric or prescientific type.—τὰ παρ' αὐτῆς, her means, cf. οἱ παρ' αὐτοῦ, iii. 21.—μηδὲν ὄφελ: nothing profited, the subjective negative, μηδὲν, implies disappointed expectation.—Ver. 27. ἀκούσασα to simplify the construction

πάντα, καὶ μηδὲν ὠφεληθεῖσα, ἀλλὰ μάλλον εἰς τὸ χεῖρον ἔλθοῦσα, 27. ἀκούσασα<sup>1</sup> περὶ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, ἔλθοῦσα ἐν τῷ ὄχλῳ ὀπισθεν, ἦψατο τοῦ ἱματίου αὐτοῦ· 28. ἔλεγε γάρ, “Ὅτι κὰν τῶν ἱματίων αὐτοῦ ἄψωμαι,<sup>2</sup> σωθήσομαι.” 29. Καὶ εὐθέως ἐξηράνθη ἡ πηγὴ τοῦ αἵματος αὐτῆς, καὶ ἔγνω τῷ σώματι ὅτι ἴαται ἀπὸ τῆς μάστιγος. <sup>h cf. John i. 40 (μηνει).</sup> 30. καὶ εὐθέως ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐπιγνοὺς ἐν ἑαυτῷ τὴν ἐξ αὐτοῦ δύναμιν ἐξελθοῦσαν, ἐπιστραφεὶς ἐν τῷ ὄχλῳ, ἔλεγε, “Τίς μου ἦψατο τῶν ἱματίων;” 31. Καὶ ἔλεγον αὐτῷ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ, “Βλέπεις τὸν ὄχλον συνθλίβοντά σε, καὶ λέγεις, Τίς μου ἦψατο;” 32. Καὶ περιεβλέπετο ἰδεῖν τὴν τοῦτο ποιήσασαν. 33. ἡ δὲ γυνὴ φοβηθεῖσα καὶ τρέμουσα, εἰδυῖα ὁ γέγονεν ἐπ’<sup>3</sup> αὐτῇ, ἦλθε καὶ προσέπεσεν αὐτῷ, καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ πᾶσαν τὴν ἀλήθειαν. 34. ὁ δὲ εἶπεν αὐτῇ, “Θύγατερ,<sup>4</sup> ἡ πίστις σου σέσωκέ σε· ὕπαγε εἰς εἰρήνην, καὶ ἴσθι

<sup>1</sup> τα after ακ. in  $\aleph$ BCD 33 (Tisch., W.H. See below).

<sup>2</sup> ὅτι εἰαν ἀψωμαι κὰν τ. ι. in  $\aleph$ BCLΔ (Tisch., W.H.). The reading in T.R. is a simplification.

<sup>3</sup>  $\aleph$ BCDL omit επ (in ΑΣ al.). Δ has εν.

<sup>4</sup> θυγατηρ in BD (W.H.).

of this long sentence (vv. 25, 26, 27) we may, with Fritzsche, connect this participle with γυνή, ver. 25, and treat all between as a parenthesis = a certain woman (whose case was, etc.) having heard, etc.—τὰ περὶ τ. ι. The importance of the τὰ ( $\aleph$ \*BC\*Δ. W.H.) here is that with it the expression means not merely that the woman had heard of the return of Jesus from the east side, but that she had for the first time heard of Christ's healing ministry in general. She must have been a stranger from a distance, e.g., from Caesarea Philippi, her home, according to Eusebius (Hist. Eccl., vii., 18), her house identifiable with a statue reproducing the gospel incident before the door; possibly a heathen, but more probably, from her behaviour, a Jewess—stealing a cure by touch when touch by one in her state was forbidden (Lev. xv. 19-27).—Ver. 29. ἐξηράνθη ἡ πηγὴ: perhaps this means no more than Lk.'s statement that the flux was stopped, but the expression seems chosen to signify a complete permanent cure—not merely the stream but the fountain dried.—ἔγνω τ. σ.: she was conscious that the flow had ceased (ἔγνω διὰ τοῦ σώματος μηκέτι ῥαινομένου τοῖς σταλαγμοῖς, Euthy. Zig.).—Ver. 30. ἐπιγνοὺς τὴν . . . δύναμιν ἐξελθοῦσαν, conscious of the going forth of the healing virtue; ἐξελθ. is the substantive participle as object of the verb ἐπιγνοὺς. The statement as given by Mk. (and Lk.) implies that the cure was not wrought by the will of Jesus. But it may nevertheless have been so. Jesus may have felt the touch, divined its meaning, and consented to the effect. Vide on Mt., ad loc. —τίς μου ἦψατο τῶν ἱματίων: who touched me on my clothes? This verb here, as usual, takes genitive both of person and thing (Buttmann's Grammar, N. T., p. 167).—Ver. 31. τὸν ὄχ. συνθλίβοντά σε, the crowd squeezing Thee, as in ver. 24. The simple verb in iii. 9. The compound implies a greater crowd, or a more eager pressure around Jesus. How exciting and fatiguing that rude popularity for Him!—Ver. 32. περιεβλέπετο: Jesus, knowing well the difference between touch and touch, regardless of what the disciples had plausibly said, kept looking around in quest of the person who had touched Him meaningfully.—τὴν τ. ποιήσασαν: feminine, a woman's touch. Did Jesus know that, or is it the evangelist choosing the gender in accordance with the now known fact? (Meyer and Weiss). The former possible, without preternatural knowledge, through extreme sensitiveness.—Ver. 33. φοβ. καὶ τρέμ., fearing and trembling, the two states closely connected and often combined (2 Cor. vii. 15, Eph. vi. 5, Phil. ii. 12).—εἰδυῖα, etc., explains her emotion: she knew what had happened to her, and thought what a dreadful thing it would be to have the surreptitiously obtained

ὕγιής ἀπὸ τῆς μάστιγός σου.” 35. “Ἐτι αὐτοῦ λαλοῦντος, ἔρχονται ἀπὸ τοῦ ἀρχισυναγώγου, λέγοντες, “Ὅτι ἡ θυγάτηρ σου ἀπέθανε· τί ἔτι σκύλλεις τὸν διδάσκαλον;” 36. Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς εὐθέως<sup>1</sup> ἀκούσας<sup>2</sup> τὸν λόγον λαλούμενον λέγει τῷ ἀρχισυναγώγῳ, “Μὴ φοβοῦ, μόνον ἴπιστευε.” 37. Καὶ οὐκ ἀφήκεν οὐδένα αὐτῷ<sup>3</sup> συνακολουθῆσαι, εἰ μὴ Πέτρον<sup>4</sup> καὶ Ἰάκωβον καὶ Ἰωάννην τὸν ἀδελφὸν Ἰακώβου. 38. καὶ ἔρχεται<sup>5</sup> εἰς τὸν οἶκον τοῦ ἀρχισυναγώγου, καὶ θεωρεῖ θόρυβον,<sup>6</sup> κλαίοντας καὶ ἄλαλάζοντας πολλὰ. 39. καὶ εἰσελθὼν λέγει αὐτοῖς, “Τί ἄθυροβεῖσθε καὶ κλαίετε; τὸ παιδίον οὐκ ἀπέθανεν, ἀλλὰ καθεύδει.” 40. Καὶ κατεγέλων αὐτοῦ. ὁ δὲ<sup>7</sup> ἐκβαλὼν ἅπαντας,<sup>8</sup> παραλαμβάνει τὸν πατέρα τοῦ παιδίου καὶ τὴν μητέρα καὶ τοὺς μετ’ αὐτοῦ, καὶ εἰσπορεύεται ὅπου

<sup>1</sup> Omit εὐθεως in BDLA.

<sup>2</sup> παρακουσας in BBLA, changed into ακουσας because not understood.

<sup>3</sup> μετ αυτον in NBCLA.

<sup>4</sup> τον before Π. in NBCLA, omitted to conform with λακ. Ιωαν.

<sup>5</sup> ερχονται in NBABCD, changed into ερχεται to agree with θεωρει (LΣ al.).

<sup>6</sup> και before κλαιοντας in many uncials. D omits.

<sup>7</sup> αυτος δε in NBCLDLA 33. <sup>8</sup> παντας in NBABCLΔΣ al.

benefit recalled by an offended benefactor disapproving her secrecy and her bold disregard of the ceremonial law.—πᾶσαν τὴν ἀλήθειαν, the whole truth, which would include not only what she had just done, but her excuse for doing it—the pitiful tale of chronic misery. From that tale impressively told, heard by disciples, and not easily to be forgotten, the particulars in ver. 26 were in all probability derived.—Ver. 34. The woman had already heard the fame of Jesus (ver. 27). From what Jesus said to her she would for the first time get some idea of His exquisite sympathy, delicately expressed in the very first word: θυγάτηρ, daughter, to a mature woman, probably not much, if at all, younger than Himself! He speaks not as man to woman, but as father to child.

Note how vivid is Mark's story compared with the meagre colourless version of Mt. I A lively impressionable eyewitness, like Peter, evidently behind it.

Vv. 35-43. The story of Jairus' daughter resumed.—Ver. 35. ἀπὸ τ. ἀρχισ., from the ruler of the synagogue, i.e., from his house, as in A.V. (ἀπὸ τῆς οἰκίας τ. σ., Euthy.). The ruler is supposed to be with Jesus all the time.—Ver. 36. παρακουσας: might mean to disregard, as in Mt. xviii. 17 (with genitive). So Meyer; but here probably it means overhearing a word not spoken directly to Him. The two senses are quite compatible. Jesus might overhear what was said and disregard its import, i.e., act contrary to the implied suggestion that nothing could now be done in the case. The latter He certainly did.—πίστευε, present, continue in a believing mood, even in presence of death.—Ver. 37. συνακολουθῆσαι: here with μετά, in xiv. 51, and Lk. xxiii. 49 with dative.—τὸν Πέτρον, etc., Peter, James, and John; earliest trace of preference within the disciple-circle. Not in Mt., but followed by Lk. The three chosen to be witnesses of a specially remarkable event. Perhaps the number of disciples was restricted to three not to crowd the house.—Ver. 38. θεωρεῖ: what was going on within the house appealed to both eye and ear; here the scene is described from the spectacular side—a multitude of people seen making a confused din (θόρυβον), in which sounds of weeping and howling without restraint (πολλά) are distinguishable.—καὶ after θόρυβον is exegetic, and κλαίοντας and ἀλαλάζοντας special features under it as a general. Flute playing (Mt. ix. 23) not referred to.—Ver. 40. κατεγέλων: this the point of the story for the evangelist, thinks Weiss, hence related after the demoniac—common link, the unbelief of

ἦν τὸ παιδίον ἀνακειμένον.<sup>1</sup> 41. καὶ κρατήσας τῆς χειρὸς τοῦ παιδίου, λέγει αὐτῇ, “Ταλιθά, κοῦμι<sup>2</sup>.” ὃ ἔστι μεθερμηνευόμενον, “Τὸ κοράσιον, (σοὶ λέγω) ἔγειραι.”<sup>3</sup> 42. Καὶ εὐθέως ἀνέστη τὸ κοράσιον καὶ περιεπάτει, ἦν γὰρ ἑτῶν δώδεκα· καὶ ἐξέστησαν<sup>4</sup> ἐκὸσάσει μεγάλη. 43. καὶ διεστείλατο αὐτοῖς πολλά, ἵνα μηδεὶς γυνῶ<sup>5</sup> τοῦτο· καὶ εἶπε δοθῆναι αὐτῇ φαγεῖν.

VI. 1. ΚΑΙ ἐξῆλθεν ἐκεῖθεν, καὶ ἦλθεν<sup>6</sup> εἰς τὴν πατρίδα αὐτοῦ· καὶ ἀκολουθοῦσιν αὐτῷ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ· 2. καὶ γενομένου σαββάτου, ἦρξατο ἐν τῇ συναγωγῇ διδάσκειν<sup>7</sup> καὶ πολλοὶ<sup>8</sup> ἀκούοντες ἐξεπλήσσοντο, λέγοντες, “Πόθεν τούτω ταῦτα; καὶ τίς ἢ σοφία ἢ δοθεῖσα αὐτῷ,<sup>9</sup> ὅτι καὶ δυνάμεις τοιαῦται διὰ τῶν χειρῶν αὐτοῦ

<sup>1</sup> ΞBDLΔ omit ἀνακειμένον, an explanatory gloss.

<sup>2</sup> κοῦμι in ΞBCLΣ 33. κοῦμι in ΔΔ, which Weiss thinks the true reading against Tisch., Trg., W.H.

<sup>3</sup> εγειρει in most uncials.

<sup>4</sup> Add εὐθὺς after ἐξέστησαν ΞBCLΔ 33.

<sup>5</sup> γνοι in ABDL (Tisch., W.H.). γνω in ΞCΔΣ.

<sup>6</sup> ερχεται in ΞBCLΔ, changed into ἦλθεν to conform to ἐξῆλθεν.

<sup>7</sup> διδασ. ἐν τῇ συν. in ΞBCDLΔ.

<sup>8</sup> οἱ πολλοὶ in BL (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>9</sup> τούτω in ΞBCLΔ, changed into αὐτῷ to improve the style. The two τούτω life-like.

the people. But surely in this case incredulity was very excusable!—τὸν πατέρα, etc.: father, mother, and the three disciples taken into the sick chamber, the former as parents, the latter as witnesses.—Ver. 41. Ταλιθά, κοῦμι, maiden, rise! first instance in which the words of Jesus, as spoken in Aramaic, are given. Jesus may have been a bilingual, sometimes using Greek, sometimes Syriac. He would use the vernacular on a pathetic occasion like this. The word Ταλιθά, feminine of περιεπάτει, etc.: the diminutive κοράσιον might suggest the idea of a mere child, therefore, after stating that she walked about, it is added that she was twelve years old. In Mk. only.—Ver. 43. διεστείλατο: that the girl had recovered could not be hid, but that she had been brought back from death might be. Jesus wished this, not desiring that expectations of such acts should be awakened.—δοθῆναι φαγεῖν: she could walk and eat; not only alive, but well: “graviter aegroti vix solent cibum sumere,” Grotius.—εἶπεν here takes the infinitive after it, not, as often, ἵνα with subjunctive.

Teli (תִּלְיָה), is found in the Hebrew only in the plural (תִּלְיָהוּ).—Ver. 42.

CHAPTER VI. AT NAZARETH. MISSION OF THE TWELVE. HEROD AND JOHN. FEEDING OF THE THOUSANDS. SEA INCIDENT. The first two of the miscellaneous group of narratives contained in this chapter (vv. 1-13) are regarded by some (Weiss, Schanz, etc.) as forming the conclusion of a division of the Gospel beginning at iii. 7, having for its general heading: The disciple-circle versus the unreceptive multitude. Such analysis of the Gospels into distinct masses is useful provided it be not overdone.

Vv. 1-6a. Jesus at Nazareth (Mt. xiii. 53-58, cf. Lk. iv. 16-30).—Ver. 1. ἐξῆλθεν ἐκεῖθεν. It is not said, but it is very probable, that this was another of Christ's attempts to escape from the crowd into a scene of comparative quiet and rest (the hill, iii. 13, the eastern shore, v. 1, Nazareth, vi. 1). Mt. gives this incident at the close of the parable collection; Lk. at the beginning of the Galilean ministry. Mk.'s connection is the most historical, Lk.'s is obviously an anticipation. It is the same incident in all three Gospels.—πατρίδα: vide notes on Mt., ad loc.—οἱ μαθηταὶ α. Mt. omits this.—Ver. 2. ἦρξατο διδάσκειν, etc.: Jesus did not go to Nazareth for the purpose of preaching, rather for rest; but that He should preach was inevit-

γίνονται<sup>1</sup>; 3. οὐχ οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ τέκτων, ὁ υἱὸς Μαρίας,<sup>2</sup> ἀδελφὸς δὲ<sup>3</sup> Ἰακώβου καὶ Ἰωσή<sup>4</sup> καὶ Ἰούδα καὶ Σίμωνος; καὶ οὐκ εἰσὶν αἱ ἀδελφαὶ αὐτοῦ ὡς πρὸς ἡμᾶς;” Καὶ ἐσκανδαλίζοντο ἐν αὐτῷ.

4. ἔλεγε δὲ<sup>5</sup> αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Ὅτι οὐκ ἔστι προφήτης ἄτιμος, εἰ μὴ ἐν τῇ πατρίδι αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἐν τοῖς συγγενέσι<sup>6</sup> καὶ ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ αὐτοῦ.”<sup>6</sup> 5. Καὶ οὐκ ἠδύνατο ἐκεῖ οὐδεμίαν δύναμιν ποιῆσαι,<sup>7</sup> εἰ μὴ ὀλίγοις ἀρρώστοις ἐπιθεῖς τὰς χεῖρας, ἐθεράπευσε. 6. καὶ

<sup>1</sup> Ch. iii. 34 ἐθαύμαζε<sup>8</sup> διὰ τὴν ἀπιστίαν αὐτῶν· καὶ περιῆγε τὰς κόμας * κύκλω ref. διδάσκων.

<sup>1</sup> For ὅτι . . . γίνονται should stand καὶ αἱ δυνάμεις τοῖ. δια τ. χ. γινομεναι as in NB (W.H.). The crude construction suits the mood of the speakers.

<sup>2</sup> NBCLΔ before Μαρ. have της, omitted to assimilate to following names.

<sup>3</sup> καὶ ἀδελ. in NBCLΔ. <sup>4</sup> Ἰωσήτος in BDLΔ 33. <sup>5</sup> καὶ ἔλεγεν in NBCLΔ 33.

<sup>6</sup> συγγενευσιν αὐτου in BLΣ (Tisch., W.H.). <sup>7</sup> ποιῆσαι οὐδ. δυν. in NBCLΔ.

<sup>8</sup> θαυμασεν in NB (Tisch., W.H., text). T.R. as in CDL (W.H. margin).

able; therefore, the Sabbath coming round, He appeared in the synagogue, and spoke.—πῶθεν τούτῳ ταῦτα: laconic; comprehensive, vague question, covering the discourse just heard and all that had been reported to them about their townsman, with the one word ταῦτα: such speech, such wisdom (τίς ἢ σοφία), such powers (δυνάμεις, not wrought there), in such a well-known person (τούτῳ).—Ver. 3. ὁ τέκτων: avoided by Mt., who says the carpenter's son: one of Mk.'s realisms. The ploughs and yokes of Justin M. (c. Trypho., 88) and the apocryphal Gospels pass beyond realism into vulgarity.—ἐσκανδαλίζοντο: what they had heard awakened admiration, but the external facts of the speaker's connections and early history stifled incipient faith; vide notes on Mt.—Ver. 4. ἐν τοῖς συγγενέουσιν α., among his kinsmen. This omitted in Mt., ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ α. covering it.—Ver. 5. οὐκ ἠδύνατο, etc., He was not able to do any mighty work, which is qualified by the added clause, that He placed His hands on a few ailing persons (ἀρρώστοις); quite minor cures, not to be compared with those reported in the previous chapter. For this statement Mt. substitutes: He did not there many mighty works.—Ver. 6. ἐθαύμασεν, etc. Jesus marvelled at the faith of the centurion. Nazareth supplied the opposite ground for astonishment. There Jesus found an amount of stupid unreceptivity for which His experience in Decapolis and elsewhere had not prepared Him. It was the ne plus ultra in that line. This wonder Mt.

omits, merely noting the unbelief as cause of the non-performance of miracles. We are to conceive of it as bringing about this result, not by frustrating attempts at healing, but by not giving Jesus an opportunity. The people of Nazareth were so consistently unbelieving that they would not even bring their sick to Him to be healed (Klostermann), and, as Euthy. Zig. remarks, it was not fitting that Jesus should benefit them against their will (οὐκ ἔδει βιάσασθαι ἐργεῖν αὐτούς).

Vv. 6b-13. Mission of the Twelve (Mt. x. 1-15, Lk. ix. 1-6).—Ver. 6b may either be connected with the foregoing narrative, when it will mean that Jesus, rejected by the Nazareans, made a teaching tour among the villages around (Fritzsche, Meyer), or it may be taken as an introduction to the following narrative = Jesus resumes the rôle of a wandering preacher in Galilee (i. 38, 39) and associates with Himself in the work His disciples (Schanz, Weiss, Klostermann, etc.). This brief statement in Mark: and He went round about the villages in a circle teaching, answers to Matt. ix. 35-38, where the motive of the mission of the Twelve is more fully explained.—Ver. 7. ἤρξατο, etc.: Jesus calling to Him (προσκαλεῖται, vide iii. 13) the Twelve began at length to do what He had intended from the first (Weiss), viz., to send them forth as missionaries (ἀποστέλλειν).—δύο δύο, two (and) two, Hebraic for κατὰ ἢ ἀνὰ δύο; two together, not one by one, a humane arrangement.—ἐίδου, imperfect, as

7. ΚΑΙ προσκαλείται τοὺς δώδεκα, καὶ ἤρξατο αὐτοὺς ἀποστέλλειν ὁ δύο δύο, καὶ ἐδίδου αὐτοῖς ἐξουσίαν τῶν πνευμάτων τῶν ἀκαθάρτων. <sup>b</sup> here only 8. καὶ παρήγγειλεν αὐτοῖς, ἵνα μὴ δὲν αἴρωσιν εἰς ὁδόν, εἰ μὴ ῥάβδον <sup>in N.T.</sup> μόνον· μὴ πήραν, μὴ ἄρτον,<sup>1</sup> μὴ εἰς τὴν ζώνην ὁ χαλκόν· 9. ἀλλ' <sup>(Gen. vi</sup> <sup>19, 20).</sup>
<sup>c</sup> ὑποδεδεμένους ὁ σανδάλια· καὶ “μὴ ἐνδύσησθε<sup>2</sup> δύο χιτῶνας.” <sup>d</sup> Acts xii. 8.
<sup>e</sup> Eph. vi. 15.
 10. Καὶ ἔλεγεν αὐτοῖς, “Ὅπου ἂν εἰσέλθητε εἰς οἰκίαν, ἐκεῖ μένετε <sup>e</sup> Acts xii. 8 ἕως ἂν ἐξέλθητε ἐκεῖθεν. 11. καὶ ὅσοι<sup>3</sup> ἂν μὴ δέξωνται<sup>3</sup> ὑμᾶς, <sup>f</sup> Judith x.
 μὴδὲ ἀκούσωσιν ὑμῶν, ἐκπορευόμενοι ἐκεῖθεν, ἐκτινάξατε τὸν ἄχου<sup>4</sup> <sup>4; xvi. 9).</sup> τὸν ὑποκάτω τῶν ποδῶν ὑμῶν, εἰς μαρτύριον αὐτοῖς. ἀμὴν λέγω <sup>f</sup> Rev. xviii.
 ὑμῖν, ἀνεκτότερον ἔσται Σοδόμοις ἢ Γομόρροις ἐν ἡμέρᾳ κρίσεως, ἢ <sup>19 (=dust).</sup> τῇ πόλει ἐκείνῃ.”<sup>4</sup> 12. Καὶ ἐξελθόντες ἐκήρυσσον<sup>5</sup> ἵνα μετανοήσωσι<sup>6</sup>. 13. καὶ δαιμόνια πολλὰ ἐξέβαλλον, καὶ ἤλειφον ἐλαίῳ πολλοὺς ἀρρώστους καὶ ἐθεράπευον.

<sup>1</sup> μὴ ἄρτον μὴ πήραν in ΞBCLD. The order of T.R. conforms to Lk. (so in D).

<sup>2</sup> ἐνδυσσασθαι is the reading of W.H. (text), on slight authority. LΣ have ἐνδεδυσθαι. The T.R. is supported by ΞACDΔ, and is adopted by Tisch., Trg. (text), Weiss (W.H. margin).

<sup>3</sup> ὅσων τοπος μὴ δεξιῆται in ΞBLΔ (Tisch., W.H.). The T.R. is an adaptation to ἀκουσῶσιν in next clause, which refers to the people in the place.

<sup>4</sup> From ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν to ἐκεῖνη is an importation from Mt. not found in ΞBCDLΔ.

<sup>5</sup> ἐκέρυξαν in ΞBCDLΔ. The imperfect (T.R.) is an assimilation to ἐξέβαλλον in ver. 13.

<sup>6</sup> μετανοῶσιν in BDL (Tisch., W.H.). μετανοήσωσι (ΞCΔ) sympathises with ἐκέρυξαν.

specifying an accompaniment of the mission, not pointing to separate empowerment of each pair.—ἐξουσίαν τ. π. τ. ἁ., power over unclean spirits, alone mentioned by Mark, cf. Matthew and Luke.—Ver. 8. εἰ μὴ ῥάβδον μόνον: vide in Matthew, ad loc.—χαλκόν: no mention of gold and silver, brass the only money the poor missionaries were likely to handle.—Ver. 9. ἀλλὰ . . . σανδάλια, but shod with sandals.—μὴδὲ ὑποδήματα, says Matthew, reconcilable either by distinguishing between sandals and shoes (vide on Matthew), or by understanding μὴδὲ before ὑποδεδεμένους (Victor Ant.).—δύο χιτῶνας: In Mark the prohibition is not to wear (ἐνδύσησθε) two tunics, in Matthew and Luke not to possess a spare one. The sentence in vv. 8, 9 presents a curious instance of varying construction: first ἵνα with the subjunctive after παρήγγειλεν (ver. 8), then ὑποδεδεμένους, implying an infinitive with accusative (πορεύεσθαι understood), then finally there is a transition from indirect to direct narration in μὴ ἐνδύσησθε.—Ver. 10. ἐκεῖ, ἐκεῖθεν, there, in the house; thence, from the village.—Ver. 11. καὶ ὅς ἂν τ. . . ὑμῶν: another instance of inconsequent construction beginning with a relative clause and passing into a conditional one = and whatever place does not receive you, if (ἂν understood) they, its people, do not listen to you (so Schanz and Weiss in Meyer).—ὑποκάτω, the dust that is under your feet, instead of ἐκ and ἀπὸ in Matthew and Luke. The dust of their roads adhering to your feet, shake it off and leave it behind you. Vv. 12, 13 report the carrying out of the mission by the Twelve through preaching and healing.—ἵνα μετανοῶσιν: the burden of their preaching was, Repent. Luke has the more evangelic term, εὐαγγελιζόμενοι. The other aspect of their ministry is summed up in the expulsion of many demons, and the cure of many suffering from minor ailments, ἀρρώστους (cf. ver. 5). In Mark's account the powers of the Twelve appear much more restricted than in Matthew (cf. x. 8). The use of oil in healing (ἐλαίῳ) is to be noted. Some have regarded this as a mark of late date (Baur). Others (Weiss, Schanz) view it as a primitive

g 1 Cor. III. 14. Καὶ ἤκουσεν ὁ βασιλεὺς Ἡρώδης, (φανερὸν γὰρ ἐγένετο τὸ 13; xiv.
 20. 19th. ὄνομα αὐτοῦ,) καὶ ἔλεγε,<sup>1</sup> "Ὅτι Ἰωάννης ὁ βαπτίζων ἐκ νεκρῶν
 h 13.
 h 13; Mt ἠγέρθη,<sup>2</sup> καὶ διὰ τοῦτο ἐνεργούσιν αἱ δυνάμεις ἐν αὐτῷ." 15. Ἄλλοι<sup>3</sup>
 εiv. 2. ἔλεγον, "Ὅτι Ἠλίας ἐστίν." ἄλλοι δὲ ἔλεγον, "Ὅτι προφήτης ἐστίν, ἢ ὡς εἰς τῶν προφητῶν." 16. Ἀκούσας δὲ ὁ Ἡρώδης εἶπεν,<sup>4</sup>
 "Ὅτι ὃν ἐγὼ ἀπεκεφάλισα Ἰωάννην, οὗτός<sup>5</sup> ἐστίν· αὐτὸς ἠγέρθη ἐκ νεκρῶν."<sup>7</sup> 17. Αὐτὸς γὰρ ὁ Ἡρώδης ἀποστείλας ἐκράτησε τὸν Ἰωάννην, καὶ ἔδισεν αὐτὸν ἐν τῇ<sup>8</sup> φυλακῇ, διὰ Ἡρωδιάδα τὴν γυναῖκα Φιλίππου τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ αὐτοῦ, ὅτι αὐτὴν ἐγάμησεν.

<sup>1</sup> So in ΣΑΚΛΔΣ (Tisch., W.H., margin). Vide below.

<sup>2</sup> εγηγέρται ἐκ νεκρῶν in ΣBDΛ 33.

<sup>3</sup> Many uncials add δε.

<sup>4</sup> ΣBCL omit ἐστίν η (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> ἔλεγεν in ΣBCL 33.

<sup>6</sup> οτι omit ΣBDL 33.

<sup>7</sup> For ουτος . . . ἐκ νεκ. ΣBLΔ have simply ουτος ηγερθη.

<sup>8</sup> τη is found only in minusc.

practice (vide James v. 14). Many conjectural opinions have been expressed as to the function or significance of the oil. According to Lightfoot and Schöttgen it was much used at the time by physicians.

The instructions to the Twelve present an interesting problem in criticism and comparative exegesis. It is not improbable that two versions of these existed and have been drawn upon by the synoptists, one in the Logia of Matthew, reproduced, Weiss thinks, substantially in Lk. x. (mission of Seventy), the other in Mk. vi., used (Weiss) in Lk. ix. 1-6. Matthew, according to the same critic, mixes the two. Similarly Holtzmann, who, however, differs from Weiss in thinking the two versions entirely independent. Weiss reconstructs the original version of the Logia thus:—

1. Mt. ix. 38 = Lk. x. 2, prayer for labourers.

2. Lk. x. 3 = go forth, I send you as lambs among wolves.

3. Mt. x. 5, 6, go not to Samaria, but to Israel only.

4. Lk. x. 4-11, detailed instructions. Vv. 14-16. Herod and Jesus (Mt. xiv. 1, 2, Lk. ix. 7-9).—Ver. 14. ἤκουσεν: Herod heard, what? Christ's name, τὸ ὄ. α. (φανερὸν γὰρ ἐγέν., a parenthesis)? Or all that is stated in vv. 14, 15, court opinion about Jesus (from φανερὸν τὸ προφητῶν, a parenthesis)? Both views have been held, but the simplest view is that Herod heard of the doings of the Twelve, though it is difficult to believe that the report of their mission was the first tidings he had received of the great work of Jesus, especially in view of the understanding between the Pharisees and Herodians mentioned in iii. 6. In the reports which reached Herod the Twelve were merged in their Master. He was the hero of the whole Galilean movement. Such is the import of the statement that His name had become known.—βασιλεὺς: strictly, Herod was only a tetrarch (Matthew and Luke), but it was natural for Mark writing for the Roman world to use this title, as it was applied freely in Rome to all eastern rulers.—ἔλεγεν, he said, i.e., Herod. ἔλεγον, the reading of BD, and adopted by W.H., puts the saying into the mouth of the court people. Matthew has taken it the former way, Luke the latter. The theory that Jesus was John risen looks more like the creation of a troubled conscience than the suggestion of light-minded courtiers, unless indeed it was thrown out by them as a jest, and yet it appears to be the aim of the evangelist first to report the opinions of others and then to give the king's, emphatically endorsing one of the hypotheses.—ἔγηγέρται, is risen, and is now alive and active, the latter the point emphasised.—ἐνεργούσιν αἱ δε.: vide notes on Matthew.—Ver. 15. Ἡλίας, Elias redivivus, with extraordinary power and mission.—προφήτης, etc., a prophet like one of the old prophets, not any of them redivivus. Luke understands it in the latter sense.—Ver. 16. Ἰωάννην: the accusative incorporated with the relative clause by attraction both in position and in construction; vide Winer, § xxiv. 2, and Viger, p. 33. The king's statement is very emphatic = the man whom I beheaded, John, he is risen (that is what it all means).

18. ἔλεγε γὰρ ὁ Ἰωάννης τῷ Ἡρώδῃ, “Ὅτι οὐκ ἔξεστί σοι ἔχειν τὴν γυναῖκα τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ σου.” 19. Ἡ δὲ Ἡρωδιάς ἐνείχεν ἰ Lk. xi. 53. αὐτῷ, καὶ ἤθελεν αὐτὸν ἀποκτείνει· καὶ οὐκ ἠδύνατο. 20. ὁ γὰρ Ἡρώδης ἐφοβεῖτο τὸν Ἰωάννην, εἰδὼς αὐτὸν ἄνδρα δίκαιον καὶ ἅγιον, καὶ συνετήρει αὐτόν· καὶ ἀκούσας αὐτοῦ, πολλὰ ἐποίηε,<sup>1</sup> καὶ ἠδέως αὐτοῦ ἤκουε. 21. καὶ γενομένης ἡμέρας εὐκαιροῦ, ὅτε Ἡρώδης τοῖς γενεσίοις αὐτοῦ δεῖπνον ἐποίηε<sup>2</sup> τοῖς ἰμεγιστάσιν αὐτοῦ καὶ τοῖς<sup>1</sup> Rev. vi. 15: xviii. 23.

<sup>1</sup> ἠπορεῖ in ΞBL. Memph. vers. (R.V., Tisch., Trg., marg., W.H., Ws.). ἐποιεῖ (T.R.) in ACDAΠΣΦ, etc. Lat. and Syr. verss.

<sup>2</sup> ἐποίησεν in ΞBCDLA.

Vv. 17-29. Story of Herod and the Baptist (Mt. xiv. 3-12). Herod's endorsement of the theory that Jesus is John redivivus gives a convenient opportunity for reporting here post eventum the Baptist's fate. The report is given in aorists which need not be translated as pluperfects (as in A. V. and R. V.).—Ver. 17. αὐτὸς γὰρ ὁ Ἡ., for the same Herod, who made the speech just reported, etc.—τὴν γυναῖκα Φιλίππου: some have supposed that the mistake is here made of taking Herodias for the wife of Philip the tetrarch, who in reality was husband of her daughter Salome (so Holtz. in H. C.). Herodias had previously been the wife of a rich man in Jerusalem, step-brother of Herod Antipas, referred to by Josephus (Ant. J., xviii., 5, 4) by the name of Herod, the family name. He may, of course, have borne another name, such as Philip. Even if there be a slip it is a matter of small moment compared to the moral interest of the gruesome story.—Ver. 19. ἡ δὲ Ἡρ.: the murderous mood is by Mark ascribed to Herodias; in her it would certainly be strongest and unchecked by any other feeling. In Herod, if the mood was there, it was accompanied by worthier impulses (vide on Matthew).—ἐνείχεν, had a grudge (χόλον understood, so Fritzsche al.) against him (αὐτῷ, dative of disadvantage); or, kept in mind what John had said, treasured up against him, with fixed hate and purpose of revenge.—καὶ οὐκ ἠδύνατο, and was not able, to compass her end for a while.—Ver. 20 gives the reason.—ἐφοβεῖτο, feared, a mixture of reverence and superstitious dread towards the prophet and man of God.—συνετήρει, not merely observed him (A. V.)—this, too neutral and colourless—kept him safe (R. V.) from her fixed malice often manifested but not likely to have its way with him in ordinary circumstances.—ἀκούσας πολλὰ implies frequent meetings between the Baptist and the king, either at Machaerus or at Tiberias.—ἠπόρει, the true reading, not only on critical grounds (attested by ΞBL), but also on psychological, corresponding exactly to the character of the man—a δίψυχος ἄνθρωπος—drawn two ways, by respect for goodness on the one hand, by evil passions on the other. He was at a loss what to do in the matter of his wife's well-known purpose, shiftless (ἀπορεῖν, to be without resources); half sympathised with her wish, yet could not be brought to the point.—ἠδέως α. ἤκουεν, ever heard him with pleasure; every new hearing exorcising the vindictive demon, even the slightest sympathy with it, for a time.

Vv. 21-29. The fatal day.—Ver. 21. εὐκαιροῦ, a day convenient for the long cherished purpose of Herodias; so regarded by her as well as by the evangelist. She had a chance then, if ever, and might hope that by wine, love, and the assistance of obsequious guests, her irresolute husband would at last be brought to the point (Grotius). The word occurs again in the N. T., Heb. iv. 16, εὐκαιρον βοήθειαν = seasonable succour.—μεγιστάσιν (μεγιστᾶνες from μέγιστος), magnates. A word belonging to Macedonian Greek, condemned by Phryn. (p. 196: μέγα δυναμένοι the right expression), frequent in Sept. With these magnates, the civil authorities, are named the chief military men (χιλιάρχοις) and the socially important persons of Galilee (πρώτοις)—an imposing gathering on Herod's birthday.—Ver. 22. ἤρσεν, it, the dancing, pleased Herod χιλιάρχους καὶ τοῖς πρώτοις τῆς Γαλιλαίας, 22. καὶ εἰσελθούσης τῆς θυγατρὸς αὐτῆς τῆς<sup>1</sup> Ἑρωδιάδος, καὶ ἀρχησαμένης, καὶ ἀρεσάσης<sup>2</sup> τῷ Ἑρώδῃ καὶ τοῖς συνανακειμένοις, εἶπεν ὁ βασιλεὺς<sup>3</sup> τῷ κορασίῳ, “Αἰτήσόν με ὅ ἐάν θέλῃς, καὶ δώσω σοί.”<sup>4</sup> 23. καὶ ὤμοσεν αὐτῇ, “Ὅτι ὅ ἐάν<sup>4</sup> με αἰτήσῃς, δώσω σοί, ἕως ἡμίσεος τῆς βασιλείας μου.” 24. Ἡ δὲ<sup>5</sup> ἐξελθούσα εἶπε τῇ μητρὶ αὐτῆς, “Τί αἰτήσομαι<sup>6</sup> ;” Ἡ δὲ εἶπε, “Τὴν κεφαλὴν Ἰωάννου τοῦ Βαπτιστοῦ.”<sup>7</sup> 25. Καὶ <sup>k</sup> Rom. xii. 8. <sup>2</sup> Cor. vii. 11, 12. viii. 7, 8. 16. Heb. vi. 11. 2. Pet. i. 5. Jude 3. εἰσελθούσα εὐθέως μετὰ<sup>k</sup> σπουδῆς πρὸς τὸν βασιλεῖα, ἠτήσατο, λέγουσα, “Θέλω ἵνα μοι δῶς ἐξ αὐτῆς<sup>8</sup> ἐπὶ πίνακι τὴν κεφαλὴν Ἰωάννου τοῦ Βαπτιστοῦ.” 26. Καὶ περίλυπος γενόμενος ὁ βασιλεὺς, διὰ τοὺς ὄρκους καὶ τοὺς συνανακειμένους<sup>9</sup> οὐκ ἠθέλησεν αὐτὴν ἀθετῆσαι.<sup>10</sup> 27. καὶ εὐθέως ἀποστείλας ὁ βασιλεὺς σπεκουλάτωρα<sup>11</sup> ἐπέταξεν ἐνεχθῆναι<sup>12</sup> τὴν κεφαλὴν αὐτοῦ. ὁ δὲ<sup>13</sup> ἀπελθὼν ἀπεκεφάλισεν αὐτὸν ἐν τῇ φυλακῇ, 28. καὶ ἤνεγκε τὴν κεφαλὴν αὐτοῦ ἐπὶ πίνακι, καὶ ἔδωκεν αὐτὴν τῷ κορασίῳ· καὶ τὸ κοράσιον ἔδωκεν

<sup>1</sup> For αὐτῆς τῆς ΣBDΛΔ have αὐτου (omitting τῆς), adopted by W.H. contrary, Weiss thinks, to all history, all grammar, and the context (vide in Meyer).

<sup>2</sup> For καὶ ἀρεσ. ΣBCL 33 have ηρεσεν.

<sup>3</sup> ο δε βασιλ. ειπεν in ΣBCLΔ 33.

<sup>4</sup> ΒΔ have ο τι εαν, the most probable reading (W.H. text).

<sup>5</sup> For η δε ΣBLΔ 33 have και.

<sup>6</sup> αιτησωμαι in ΣABCDGLΔ 33.

<sup>7</sup> βαπτιζοντος in ΣBLΔ.

<sup>8</sup> εξαυτης δως μοι in ΣBCLΔ.

<sup>9</sup> ανακειμενους in BCLΔ.

<sup>10</sup> αθετ. αυτην in ΣBCLΔ.

<sup>11</sup> σπεκουλατορα in ΣABL αλ.

<sup>12</sup> ενεγκα in ΣBCΔ (T.R. in DL).

<sup>13</sup> For ο δε BCLΔ have και.

and his guests.—τ. κορασίῳ, to the girl, as in v. 41-2, not necessarily a child; the word was used familiarly like the Scotch word “lassie”; disapproved by Phryn., p. 73.—αἰτήσόν με . . . ὤμοσεν: promise first, followed by oath after a little interval, during which the girl naturally hesitated what to ask.—Ver. 23. ἡμίσεος, genitive of ἡμισυς, like ἡμίση (τὰ, plural), a late form = the half, of my kingdom: maudlin amorous generosity.—Ver. 24. She goes out to ask advice of her mother, implying that she had not previously got instructions as Matthew’s account suggests.—Ver. 25. εὐθὺς μετὰ σπουδῆς, without delay and with quick step, as of one whose heart was in the business. There had been no reluctance then on the girl’s part, no need for much educating to bring her to the point; vide remarks on προβιβασθεῖσα in Mt. xiv. 8. Her mother’s child.—ἐξαυτῆς (supply ὄρας), on the spot, at once; request proffered with a cool pert impudence almost out-doing the mother.—Ver. 26. περίλυπος γενόμενος: a concessive clause, καίπερ understood = and the king, though exceedingly sorry, yet, etc.—ὄρκους: there might be more oaths than one (vide on Matthew), but the plural was sometimes used for a single oath. Schanz cites instances from Aeschylus and Xenophon.—ἀθετῆσαι α., to slight her, by treating the oath and promise as a joke; a late word, used, in reference to persons, in the sense of breaking faith with (here only). Kypke renders the word here: “noluit fidem illi datam fallere,” citing instances from Diod., Polyb., and Sept.—Ver. 27. σπεκουλάτορα = speculator in Latin, literally a watcher, a military official of the empire who acted partly as courier, partly as a police officer, partly as an executioner; illustrative citations in Wetstein. The word found its way into the Jewish language (here only).—Ver. 29 relates how the disciples of John buried the carcass of their master.—ἐν μνημείῳ, in a tomb. The phrase recalls αὐτὴν τῇ μητρὶ αὐτῆς. 29. Καὶ ἀκούσαντες οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ ἦλθον, καὶ ἦσαν τὸ πῶμα αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἔθηκαν αὐτὸ ἐν τῷ<sup>1</sup> μνημείῳ.

30. Καὶ συνάγονται οἱ ἀπόστολοι πρὸς τὸν Ἰησοῦν, καὶ ἀπήγγειλαν αὐτῷ πάντα, καὶ<sup>2</sup> ὅσα ἐποίησαν καὶ ὅσα ἐδίδαξαν. 31. καὶ εἶπεν<sup>3</sup> αὐτοῖς, “ Δεῦτε ὑμεῖς αὐτοὶ κατ’ ἰδίαν εἰς ἔρημον τόπον, καὶ ἀναπαύεσθε<sup>4</sup> ὀλίγον.” Ἦσαν γὰρ οἱ ἐρχόμενοι καὶ οἱ ὑπάγοντες πολλοί, καὶ οὐδὲ φαγεῖν ἠὲκαίρου.<sup>5</sup> 32. καὶ ἀπῆλθον εἰς ἔρημον τόπον τῷ πλοίῳ<sup>6</sup> κατ’ ἰδίαν. 33. Καὶ εἶδον αὐτοὺς ὑπάγοντας οἱ ὄχλοι,<sup>7</sup> καὶ ἐπέγνωσαν αὐτὸν<sup>8</sup> πολλοί· καὶ πεζῆ ἀπὸ πασῶν τῶν πόλεων<sup>1</sup> συνέδραμον ἐκεῖ, καὶ<sup>2</sup> προῆλθον αὐτούς, καὶ συνηλθον πρὸς<sup>3</sup> 47.

<sup>1</sup> Omit τῷ most uncials (D has it).

<sup>2</sup> Omit καὶ ἤBCDLΔΣ.

<sup>3</sup> λεγεί in ἤBCLΔ 33.

<sup>4</sup> ἀναπαυσασθε in ἤBCΔ.

<sup>5</sup> εὐκαιροῦν in most uncials.

<sup>6</sup> τῷ πλ. εἰς ἐρ. τοπον in ἤBLΔ.

<sup>7</sup> Omit οἱ ὄχ. ἤABDLΔΣ al.

<sup>8</sup> BD have ἐγνώσαν and without an object (αὐτον or αὐτους).

to mind the burial of Jesus. Did the evangelist wish to suggest for the reflection of his readers a parallel between the fate of the Baptist and that of Christ? (So Klostermann).

Vv. 30-33. Return of the Twelve (Mt. xiv. 13, Lk. ix. 10, 11).—Ver. 30 transfers us from the past date of the horrible deed just related to the time when the fame of Jesus and His disciples recalled the deed of guilt to Herod's mind.—συνάγονται οἱ ἀπόστολοι πρὸς τὸν Ἰησοῦν, the apostles (here only, and not in the technical sense of after days, but = the men sent out on the Galilean mission, the missioners) gather to Jesus. Where? after how long? and what has Jesus been doing the while? No answer is possible. These are gaps in the evangelic history.—πάντα ὅσα ἐπ.: suggests that they had great things to tell, though vv. 12, 13 create very moderate expectations. The repetition of ὅσα before ἐδίδαξαν = how much they had taught (“quanta docuerant,” Fritzsche), may surprise. The teaching element could not be extensive in the range of topics. Yet, if it took the form of personal narrative concerning Jesus, it might be copious enough, and really the principal feature of the mission. Vide notes on Mt., chap. x.—Ver. 31. ὑμεῖς αὐτοὶ, either: you yourselves, vos ipsi, without the crowd (Meyer, Schanz), or, better: you the same men who have been hard at work and need rest (Weiss in Meyer, Holtz., H. C.). This sympathy of Jesus with the Twelve reflects His own craving for rest which He often unsuccessfully strove to obtain.—ἀναπαύεσθε, aorist—only a breathing space in a life of toil.—οἱ ἐρ. καὶ οἱ ὑπάγ. Many coming and going: a constant stream of people on some errand; no sooner done with one party than another presented itself—no leisure.—οὐδὲ φαγεῖν εὐκαιροῦν: no leisure (cf. εὐκαιρος, ver. 21), even to eat; imperfect, implying that it was not a solitary occurrence. What was the business on hand? Probably a political movement in Christ's favour with which the Twelve sympathised. Vide John vi. 15.—Ver. 32. τῷ πλοίῳ. The boat which stood ready for service (iii. 9).—κατ’ ἰδίαν, privately, i.e., with Jesus only in the boat, and without other boats accompanying. As to the reason for this withdrawal into privacy cf. Mk.'s account with Mt.'s (xiv. 13), who connects with the report of John's death. Beyond doubt, Mk.'s is the correct account. The excursion was an attempt to escape from the crowd and from dangerous illusions; again without success.—Ver. 33 explains why.—εἶδον, etc., they (the people) saw them departing.—ἐπέγνωσαν (or ἔγνωσαν, BD) is better without an object (αὐτοὺς or αὐτὸν) = they knew, not who they were, but what they were after, where they were going, doubtless from the course they were steering.—πεζῆ (from πεζός, adjective, ὀδῶ, understood), on foot, by land round the end of the lake.—συνέδραμον, they ran together, excited and exciting, each town on the way contributing its rill to the growing stream of eager human beings; what a picture! The

αὐτόν.<sup>1</sup> 34. καὶ ἐξεληθὼν εἶδεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς<sup>2</sup> πολὺν ὄχλον, καὶ ἐσπλαγχνίσθη ἐπ' αὐτοῖς,<sup>3</sup> ὅτι ἦσαν ὡς πρόβατα μὴ ἔχοντα ποιμένα· καὶ ἤρξατο διδάσκειν αὐτοὺς πολλά. 35. Καὶ ἦδη ὥρας πολλῆς γενομένης, προσελθόντες αὐτῷ<sup>4</sup> οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ λέγουσιν,<sup>5</sup> "Ὅτι ἔρημός ἐστιν ὁ τόπος, καὶ ἦδη ὥρα πολλή· 36. ἀπόλυσον αὐτοὺς, ἵνα ἀπελθόντες εἰς τοὺς κύκλῳ ἀγροὺς καὶ κώμας, ἀγοράσωσιν ἑαυτοῖς ἄρτους<sup>6</sup>· τί γὰρ φάγωσιν οὐκ ἔχουσιν."<sup>5</sup> 37. Ὁ δὲ ἀποκριθεὶς εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, "Δότε αὐτοῖς ὑμεῖς φαγεῖν." Καὶ λέγουσιν αὐτῷ, "Ἀπελθόντες ἀγοράσωμεν διακοσίῳν δηναρίων<sup>6</sup> ἄρτους, καὶ δώμεν<sup>7</sup> αὐτοῖς φαγεῖν." 38. Ὁ δὲ λέγει αὐτοῖς, "Πόσους ἄρτους ἔχετε; ὑπάγετε καὶ<sup>8</sup> ἴδετε." Καὶ γνόντες λέγουσι, "Πέντε, καὶ δύο ἰχθύας." 39. Καὶ ἐπέταξεν αὐτοῖς ἀνακλίνειν<sup>9</sup> πάντας συμπόσια συμπόσια ἐπὶ τῷ χλωρῷ χόρτῳ. 40. καὶ ἀνέπεσον πρασιαὶ πρασιαί, ἀνὰ<sup>10</sup> ἑκατὸν καὶ ἀνὰ<sup>10</sup> πενήτηντα. 41. καὶ λαβὼν τοὺς πέντε ἄρτους καὶ τοὺς δύο ἰχθύας, ἀναβλέψας εἰς τὸν οὐρανόν, εὐλόγησε· καὶ κατέκλασε τοὺς ἄρτους, καὶ ἐδίδου τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ· ἵνα παραθῶσιν<sup>12</sup> αὐτοῖς· καὶ τοὺς δύο ἰχθύας ἐμέρισε πᾶσι· 42. καὶ ἔφαγον πάντες, καὶ ἔχορτάσθησαν· 43. καὶ ἦσαν κλασμάτων δώδεκα κοφίνους πλήρεις,<sup>13</sup>

<sup>1</sup> NBLΔ omit καὶ συνήλθον προς αὐτον (Tisch., W.H.). <sup>2</sup> Omit ο Ι. NAB al. pl.

<sup>3</sup> ἐπ αὐτους in NBD. <sup>4</sup> In BΔ, omitted in NΔ. <sup>5</sup> ελεγον in NBLΔ.

<sup>6</sup> For αρτους . . . εχουσιν NBLΔ have simply τι φαγωσιν (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>6</sup> δην. διακ. in NABLD.

<sup>7</sup> δωσωμεν in NBD. -ομεν LD (W.H.).

<sup>8</sup> καὶ omit NBDL 33.

<sup>9</sup> ανακλιθηναι in NB. ανακλιναι DLΔ.

<sup>10</sup> κατα in NBD (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>11</sup> αὐτου omit NBLΔ.

<sup>12</sup> παρατιθωσιν in NBLΔ.

<sup>13</sup> B has κλασματα δ. κοφινων πληρωματα (W.H.).

ultimate result, a congregation of 5000. This the climax of popularity, and, from the fourth Gospel we learn, its crisis (chap. vi.).—προῆλθον, "outran" (A. V.), anticipated = φθάειν in classics.

Vv. 34-44. The feeding (Mt. xiv. 14-21, Lk. ix. 11-17).—Ver. 34. ἤρξατο διδάσκειν, He began to teach, constrained by pity (ἐσπλαγχνίσθη), though weary of toil and of popularity. To teach; Mt. says to heal. There could be few, if any, sick in a crowd that had come in such a hurry.—Ver. 35. ὥρας πολλῆς, it being late in the day.—πολύς was extensively used by the Greeks in all sorts of connections, time included; examples in Kypke and Hermann's Viger, p. 137 f. The phrase recurs in last clause of this verse (ὥρα πολλή).—Ver. 37. δηναρ. διακ. ἄρτους, loaves of (purchasable for) 200 denarii; the sum probably suggested by what the Twelve knew they were in possession of at the time = seven pounds in the purse of the Jesus-circle

(Grotius, Holtz., H. C.).—Ver. 39. συμπόσια συμ. Hebraistic for ἀνά συμ. (cf. δύο δύο, ver. 7) = in dining companies.—ἐπὶ τῷ χλωρῷ χόρτῳ, on the green grass; a reedy, marshy place near the mouth of the Jordan at the north end of the lake. Vide Stanley's description (Sinai and Palestine).—Ver. 40. πρασιαὶ πρασιαὶ = ἀνά πρασίας, in garden flower plots, or squares, picturesque in fact and in description, bespeaking an eye-witness of an impressionable nature like Peter.—Ver. 43. καὶ ἦραν, etc., and they took up, as fragments (κλάσματα, BL), the fillings (πληρώματα) of twelve baskets.—καὶ ἀπὸ τῶν ἰχθύων, and of the fishes, either over and above what was in the twelve baskets (Fritzsche), or some fragments of the fishes included in them (Meyer).—Ver. 44. πεντακισχίλιοι ἄνδρες, 5000 men: one loaf for 1000! Mt. adds: χωρὶς γυναικῶν καὶ παιδίων, women and children not counted. Of these, in the circumstances, there would

καὶ ἀπὸ τῶν ἰχθύων. 44. καὶ ἦσαν οἱ φαγόντες τοὺς ἄρτους ὡσεὶ<sup>1</sup> πεντακισχίλιοι ἄνδρες. 45. Καὶ εὐθέως ἠνάγκασε τοὺς μαθητὰς αὐτοῦ ἐμβῆναι εἰς τὸ πλοῖον, καὶ προάγειν εἰς τὸ πέραν πρὸς Βηθσαϊδάν, ἕως αὐτὸς ἀπολύσῃ<sup>2</sup> τὸν ὄχλον. 46. καὶ ἄποταξά-<sup>3</sup> Lk. ix. 61: xiv. 33. Acts xviii 18. μενος αὐτοῖς, ἀπῆλθεν εἰς τὸ ὄρος προσεύξασθαι. 47. Καὶ ὄψιας γενομένης, ἦν τὸ πλοῖον ἐν μέσῳ τῆς θαλάσσης, καὶ αὐτὸς μόνος ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς. 48. Καὶ εἶδεν<sup>3</sup> αὐτοὺς βασανιζομένους ἐν τῷ ἐλαύνειν· ἦν γὰρ ὁ ἄνεμος ἐναντίος αὐτοῖς. καὶ<sup>3</sup> περὶ τετάρτην φυλακὴν τῆς νυκτὸς ἔρχεται πρὸς αὐτοὺς, περιπατῶν ἐπὶ τῆς θαλάσσης· καὶ ἤθελε παρελθεῖν αὐτούς. 49. οἱ δὲ ἰδόντες αὐτὸν περιπατοῦντα ἐπὶ τῆς θαλάσσης,<sup>4</sup> ἔδοξαν φάντασμα εἶναι,<sup>5</sup> καὶ ἀνέκραξαν· 50. πάντες γὰρ αὐτὸν εἶδον, καὶ ἔταράχθησαν. καὶ εὐθέως<sup>6</sup> ἐλάλησε μετ' αὐτῶν, καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς, “Θαρσεῖτε· ἐγὼ εἰμι, μὴ φοβεῖσθε.” 51. Καὶ ἀνέβη πρὸς αὐτοὺς εἰς τὸ πλοῖον, καὶ ἐκόπασεν ὁ ἄνεμος· καὶ λίαν ἐκ περισσοῦ<sup>7</sup> ἐν ἑαυτοῖς ἐξίσταντο, καὶ

<sup>1</sup> ἝBDLΔ omit ὡσει.

<sup>2</sup> ἀπολυει in ἝBL. ἀπολυση is from Mt.

<sup>3</sup> ἰδων in ἝBDLΔ, which (D excepted) also omit καὶ before περὶ τετάρτην φυλακην. εἶδεν καὶ is a simplification of the construction.

<sup>4</sup> ἐπι τ. θ. περιπ. in ἝBLΔ 33.

<sup>5</sup> ὅτι φάντασμα ἐστὶν in ἝBLΔ 33 (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>6</sup> ο δε ευθυσ in ἝBLΔ.

<sup>7</sup> ἝBLΔ omit ἐκ περισσοῦ (W.H.). It suits the situation and may have fallen out by oversight, or been omitted as superfluous, though really not so.

be few, therefore probably not referred to by Mk.

Vv. 45-52. Another sea-anecdote (Mt. xiv. 22-33). Luke drops out here and does not join his brother evangelists till we come to viii. 27.—Ver. 45. εὐθέως: no time to lose; it was getting late.—ἠνάγκασε, vide on Mt.—εἰς τὸ πέραν: we are apt to take this as a matter of course as = to the other (western) side of the lake, and consequently to assume that πρὸς Βηθσαϊδάν points to a Bethsaida there, distinct from Bethsaida Julias (John i. 44). But the expression εἰς τ. π. may mean from the south end of the plain El Batiha, on the eastern side, to the north end towards Bethsaida Julias, the rendezvous for the night. In that case the contrary wind which overtook the disciples would be the prevailing wind from the north-east, driving them in an opposite direction away from Bethsaida towards the western shore. This is the view advocated by Furrer. Vide Zeitschrift des Palästina-Vereins, B. ii. (1879). Holtz., H. C., thinks that either this view must be adopted or the true reading in the clause referring to B.

must be that represented in some Latin copies: “trans fretum a Bedsaida,” C. Veron.; “a Bethsaida,” C. Monac.—Ver. 46. ἀποταξάμενος, having dismissed them, i.e., the multitude; late Greek condemned by Phryn., p. 23 (ἐκφυλον πάνυ).—Ver. 48. ἐν τῷ ἐλαύνειν, in propelling (the ship with oars).—περὶ τετ. φυλ., about the fourth watch, between three and six in the morning, towards dawn.—ἤθελε παρελθεῖν, He wished to pass them—“praeterire eos,” Vul.; it appeared so to them.—Ver. 50. Not quite an instance of Mark’s habit of iteration: explains how they came to think it was a phantasm. All saw what looked like Jesus, yet they could not believe it was He, a real man, walking on the water; therefore they took fright and rushed to the conclusion: a spectre!—Ver. 51. ἐκόπασεν, as in iv. 39—λίαν ἐκ περισσοῦ, very exceedingly, a double superlative, a most likely combination for Mark, though ἐκ περ. is wanting in some important MSS. and omitted in W.H. Cf. ὑπερεκπερισσοῦ in Eph. iii. 20.—Ver. 52 reflects on the astonishment of the Twelve as blameworthy in view of

ἐθαύμαζον.<sup>1</sup> 52. οὐ γὰρ συνῆκαν ἐπὶ τοῖς ἄρτοις· ἦν γὰρ ἡ καρδία
 οὐ αὐτῶν<sup>2</sup> ὁ πεπωρωμένη.
 53. ΚΑΙ διαπεράσαντες ἦλθον ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν<sup>3</sup> Γεννησαρέτ,<sup>4</sup> καὶ προσωρμίσθησαν. 54. καὶ ἐξεληθόντων αὐτῶν ἐκ τοῦ πλοίου, εὐθέως ἐπιγνόντες αὐτόν, 55. περιδραμόντες<sup>5</sup> ὅλην τὴν περίχωρον<sup>6</sup> ἐκείνην, ἤρξαντο ἐπὶ τοῖς κραββάτοις τοὺς κακῶς ἔχοντας<sup>7</sup> περιφέρειν, ὅπου ἤκουον ὅτι ἐκεῖ<sup>7</sup> ἐστι. 56. καὶ ὅπου ἂν εἰσεπορεύετο εἰς κώμας ἢ<sup>8</sup> πόλεις ἢ<sup>8</sup> ἀγρούς, ἐν ταῖς ἀγοραῖς ἐτίθουν<sup>9</sup> τοὺς ἀσθενούτας, καὶ παρεκάλουν αὐτόν, ἵνα κἂν τοῦ κρασπέδου τοῦ ἱματίου αὐτοῦ ἀψῶνται· καὶ ὅσοι ἂν ἤπτοντο<sup>10</sup> αὐτοῦ, ἐσώζοντο.

<sup>1</sup> NBLΔ omit καὶ θαυμαζον, which is superfluous.

<sup>2</sup> For ἡν γὰρ . . . αὐτων NBLΔ have ἀλλ ἡν, etc., and ANBΣ αὐτων ἡ καρ.

<sup>3</sup> ἐπὶ τ. γ. ἦλθον in NBLΔ 33.

<sup>4</sup> εἰς before Γεν. in NBLΔ 33.

<sup>5</sup> περιεδραμον in NBLΔ 33 (with καὶ before ἤρξαντο).

<sup>6</sup> χωραν in NBLΔ 33.

<sup>7</sup> ἐκεῖ omit NBLΔ.

<sup>8</sup> εἰς before πόλεις and ἀγρους in NBLΔ.

<sup>9</sup> ἐτίθεισαν in NBLΔ.

<sup>10</sup> ἤψαντο in NBLΔ 33 ab.

the recent feeding of the multitude. One might rather have expected a reference to the stilling of the storm in crossing to Decapolis. But that seems to have appeared a small matter compared with walking on the sea. The evangelist seems anxious to show how much the Twelve needed the instruction to which in the sequel Jesus gives Himself more and more.

Vv. 53-56. The landing (Mt. xiv. 34-36).—Ver. 53. προσωρμίσθησαν (πρὸς ὄρμιν from ὄρμος), they came to anchor, or landed on the beach; here only in N. T.—Ver. 55. ἐπὶ τοῖς κραββάτοις, upon their beds, vide ii. 4.—περιφέρειν, to carry about from place to place. If they did not find Jesus at one place, they were not discouraged, but carried their sick to another place where He was likely to be. Their energy, not less than the word κραββάτοις, recalls the story in ii. 1-12.—ὅπου ἤκουον ὅτι ἐστίν, not: wherever He was=ὅπου ἦν, but: wherever they were told He was; ἐστίν, present, from the point of view of those who gave the information in indirect discourse. Vide on this, Burton, M. and T., § 351.—Ver. 56. κώμας, πόλεις, ἀγρούς: point probably to a wider sphere of activity than the plain of Gennesaret. This was practically the close of the healing ministry, in which the expectation and faith of the people were wound up to the highest pitch.

CHAPTER VII. WASHING OF HANDS. SYROPHENICIAN WOMAN. A DEAF-MUTE HEALED.—Vv. 1-23. Concerning ceremonial ablutions (Mt. xv. 1-20).—Ver. 1. καὶ connects what follows very loosely with what goes before: not temporal sequence but contrast between phenomenal popularity and hostility of the religious leaders of the people, in the view of the evangelist.—τινὲς τῶν γραμμ., etc., some of the scribes who had come from Jerusalem, cf. iii. 22, and remarks there.—Ver. 2. καὶ ἰδόντες: the sentence beginning with these words properly runs on to the end of ver. 5, but the construction of so long a sentence overtakes the grammatical skill of the writer, so it is broken off unfinished after the long explanatory clause about Jewish customs, vv. 3-4—a kind of parenthesis—and a new sentence begun at ver. 5=and seeing, etc. (for the Pharisees, etc.), and the Pharisees and scribes ask; instead of: they ask, etc. The sense plain enough, though grammar crude.—τινὰς τ. μαθ., some of the disciples, not all. When? On their evangelistic tour? (Weiss; Holtz., H. C.) We have here, as in i. 24, a case of attraction=seeing some that they eat (ὅτι ἐσθίουσι, W.H.), for seeing that some eat (ὅτι τινὲς ἐσ.).—ἀνίπτους, unwashed, added to explain for Gentile readers the technical term κοιναῖς=profane (cf. Rom. xiv. 14).—Vv. 3-4. Ex-

VII. 1. ΚΑΙ συνάγονται πρὸς αὐτὸν οἱ Φαρισαῖοι, καὶ τινες τῶν γραμματέων, ἔλθόντες ἀπὸ Ἱεροσολύμων· 2. καὶ ἰδόντες τινὰς τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ *κοινὰς<sup>1</sup> χερσὶ, τοῦτ' ἔστιν ἀνίπτους, ἐσθίουσας<sup>1 a</sup> ἄρτους<sup>2</sup> ἐμέμψαντο<sup>3</sup>. 3. (οἱ γὰρ Φαρισαῖοι καὶ πάντες οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, ἐὰν μὴ<sup>b</sup> πυγμῇ νίψωνται τὰς χεῖρας, οὐκ ἐσθίουσι, κρατοῦντες τὴν παράδοσιν τῶν πρεσβυτέρων· 4. καὶ ἀπὸ ἀγορᾶς, ἐὰν μὴ<sup>b</sup> βαπτίσωνται,<sup>4</sup> οὐκ ἐσθίουσι· καὶ ἄλλα πολλὰ ἔστιν ἃ παρέλαβον κρατεῖν, ἃ βαπτισμοὺς ποτηρίων καὶ ξεστῶν καὶ χαλκίων καὶ κλινῶν<sup>5</sup>·) 5. ἔπειτα<sup>6</sup> ἐπερωτῶσιν αὐτὸν οἱ Φαρισαῖοι καὶ οἱ γραμματεῖς, ε<sup>d</sup> “Διατί οἱ μαθηταὶ σου οὐ * περιπατοῦσι<sup>7</sup> κατὰ τὴν παράδοσιν τῶν πρεσβυτέρων, ἀλλὰ ἀνίπτους<sup>8</sup> χερσὶν ἐσθίουσι τὸν ἄρτον;” 6. Ὁ δὲ ἀποκριθεὶς<sup>9</sup> εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Ὅτι καλῶς προεφήτευσεν Ἡσαΐας περὶ ἡμῶν τῶν ὑποκριτῶν, ὡς γέγραπται, ‘Οὗτος ὁ λαὸς τοῖς χεῖλεσί μ

<sup>1</sup> οτι before κοινὰς with ἐσθίουσι in NBLA 33 (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> τους before ἄρτους in NBDLNΔΣ.

<sup>3</sup> Omit ἐμέμψαντο NABLA. It was doubtless introduced to help the construction.

<sup>4</sup> NB have ραντίζονται (W.H. text).

<sup>5</sup> καὶ κλινῶν is omitted in NBLA (W.H. marg.), but found in D. It might fall out by similar ending, and was hardly likely to be added as a gloss.

<sup>6</sup> καὶ in NBDL 33.

<sup>7</sup> ου περι. οι μαθ. σου in NBLA (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>8</sup> κοινὰς in NBD for ἀνίπτους, which seems an explanatory substitute.

<sup>9</sup> Omitted in NBLA 33, also οτι before καλῶς.

planatory statement about Jewish customs, not in Mt.—πάντες οἱ Ἰουδ.: the Pharisees, the thorough-going virtuosi in religion, were a limited number; but in this and other respects the Jews generally followed ancient custom. The expression reminds us of the Fourth Gospel in its manner of referring to the people of Israel—the Jews—as foreigners. Mark speaks from the Gentile point of view.—πυγμῇ, with the fist, the Vulgate has here crebro, answering to πυκνά, a reading found in N. Most recent interpreters interpret πυγμῇ as meaning that they rubbed hard the palm of one hand with the other closed, so as to make sure that the part which touched food should be clean. (So Beza.) For other interpretations vide Lightfoot, Bengel, and Meyer.—Ver. 4. ἀπ' ἀγορᾶς, from market (coming understood=ὅταν ἔλθωσι in D), a common ellipsis, examples in Raphael, Kypke, and Bos, Ell. Gr., p. 98.—ραντίζονται (NB), they sprinkle. The reading, βαπτίζονται (T.R.), may be interpreted either as dipping of the hands (mersionem manuum, Lightfoot, Wetstein), or, bathing of the whole body. (Meyer. “The statement proceeds by way of climax: before eating they wash the hands always. When they come from market they take a bath before eating.”)—ποτηρίων, ξεστῶν, χαλκίων: the evangelist explains how the Jews not only cleansed their own persons, but also all sorts of household utensils—altogether a serious business, that of preserving ceremonial purity. The two first articles, cups and jugs, would be of wood; earthen vessels when defiled had to be broken (Lev. xv. 12). The second word, ξεστῶν, is a Latinism = sextus or sextarius, a Roman measure = 1½ English pints; here used without reference to contents = urceus in Vulg.—χαλκίων = vessels of brass. The καὶ κλινῶν, added in some MSS., will mean couches for meals on which diseased persons may have lain (lepers, etc.).—Ver. 5. At last we come to the point, the complaint of the jealous guardians of Jewish custom, as handed down from the elders (κατὰ τὴν παράδοσιν τ. π.), against the disciples of Jesus, and indirectly against Jesus Himself—διατί οὐ περιπατοῦσι κατὰ: for this Mt. substitutes δ. παραβαίνουσι.

Vv. 6-13. The reply of Jesus. It con-τιμῆ, ἣ δὲ καρδία αὐτῶν πόρρω ἀπέχει ἀπ' ἐμοῦ. 7. μάτην δὲ σέβονται με, διδάσκοντες διδασκαλίας, ἐντάλματα ἀνθρώπων.' 8. Ἀφέντες γὰρ<sup>1</sup> τὴν ἐντολὴν τοῦ Θεοῦ, κρατεῖτε τὴν παράδοσιν τῶν ἀνθρώπων, βαπτισμοὺς ξεστῶν καὶ ποτηρίων, καὶ ἄλλα παρόμοια τοιαῦτα πολλὰ ποιεῖτε."<sup>2</sup> 9. Καὶ ἔλεγεν αὐτοῖς, "Καλῶς ἄθετεῖτε τὴν ἐντολὴν τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἵνα τὴν παράδοσιν ὑμῶν τηρήσητε. 10. Μωσῆς γὰρ εἶπε, 'Τίμα τὸν πατέρα σου καὶ τὴν μητέρα σου·' καί, 'ὁ κακολογῶν πατέρα ἢ μητέρα θανάτῳ τελευτάτῳ.' 11. Ὑμεῖς δὲ λέγετε, 'Ἐὰν εἴπῃ ἄνθρωπος τῷ πατρὶ ἢ τῇ μητρὶ, Κορβᾶν, (ὃ ἔστι. δῶρον.) ὃ ἔὰν ἐξ ἐμοῦ ὠφελῆθῃς.' 12. καὶ<sup>3</sup> οὐκέτι ἀφίετε αὐτὸν οὐδὲν ποιῆσαι τῷ πατρὶ αὐτοῦ<sup>4</sup> ἢ τῇ μητρὶ αὐτοῦ,<sup>4</sup> 13. ἀκουοῦντες τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ τῇ παραδόσει ὑμῶν ἢ παρεδώκατε· καὶ παρόμοια τοιαῦτα πολλὰ ποιεῖτε."<sup>5</sup> 14. Καὶ προσκαλεσάμενος πάντα<sup>5</sup> τὸν ὄχλον, ἔλεγεν αὐτοῖς, "Ἀκούτέ<sup>6</sup> μου πάντες, καὶ συνίετε.<sup>6</sup> 15. οὐδὲν ἔστιν ἐξωθεν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου εἰσπορευόμενον εἰς αὐτόν, ὃ δύναται

<sup>1</sup> γαρ omitted in ℣BLA.

<sup>2</sup> All after ἀνθρώπων is omitted in ℣BLA, and is obviously a gloss taken from ver. 4.

<sup>3</sup> Omit καὶ ℣BDA.

<sup>4</sup> ℣BDL omit αὐτου in both places.

<sup>5</sup> παλιν instead of πάντα (substituted for a word not understood) in ℣BDLA, Vulg. Cop.

<sup>6</sup> ἀκουσατε in BDL and συνετε in BLA. The presents in T.R. are from Mt.

sists of a prophetic citation and a counter-charge, given by Mt. in an inverted order. Commentators, according to their bias, differ as to which of the two versions is secondary.—Ver. 6. καλῶς: twice used in Mk. (ver. 9), here = appositely, in ver. 9 ironically = bravely, finely. The citation from Isaiah is given in identical terms in the two accounts.—Ver. 8. At this point Mk.'s account seems secondary as compared with Mt.'s. This verse contains Christ's comment on the prophetic oracle, then, ver. 9, He goes on to say the same thing over again.—Ver. 10. Μωσῆς, Moses; God in Mt., the same thing in Jewish esteem.—Ver. 11. Κορβᾶν: Mk. gives first the Hebrew word, then its Greek equivalent.—Ver. 12. Here again the construction limps; it would have been in order if there had been no λέγετε after ὑμεῖς at beginning of ver. 11 = but ye, when a man says, etc., do not allow him, etc.—Ver. 13. ἢ παρεδώκατε, which ye have delivered. The receivers are also transmitters of the tradition, adding their quota to the weight of authority.—παρόμοια τοιαῦτα πολλὰ: many such similar things, a rhetorically redundant phrase (such, similar) expressive of contempt. Cf. Col. ii. 21. Heb. ix. 10.

Vv. 14-16. The people taken into the discussion.—προσκαλεσάμενος: the people must have retired a little into the background, out of respect for the Jerusalem magnates.—ἀκούσατέ μου, etc., hear me all ye, and understand; a more pointed appeal than Mt.'s: hear and understand.—Ver. 15. This saying is called a parable in ver. 17, and Weiss contends that it must be taken strictly as such, i.e., as meaning that it is not foods going into the body through the mouth that defile ceremonially, but corrupt matters issuing from the body (as in leprosy). Holtzmann, H. C., concurs. Schanz dissents on the ground that on this view the connection with unclean hands is done away with, and a quite foreign thought introduced. Mt., it is clear, has not so understood the saying (xv. 11), and while he also calls it a parable (ver. 15) he evidently means thereby an obscure, enigmatical saying, needing explanation. Why assume that Mk. means anything more? True, he makes Jesus say, not that which cometh

αὐτὸν κοινῶσαι<sup>1</sup>. ἀλλὰ τὰ ἐκπορευόμενα ἀπ' αὐτοῦ, ἐκεῖνά<sup>2</sup> ἔστι τὰ κοινοῦντα τὸν ἄνθρωπον. 16. εἴ τις ἔχει ὧτα ἀκούειν, ἀκουέτω.<sup>3</sup>

17. Καὶ ὅτε εἰσῆλθεν εἰς οἶκον ἀπὸ τοῦ ὄχλου, ἔπηρώτων αὐτὸν οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ περὶ τῆς παραβολῆς.<sup>4</sup> 18. καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς,

“Οὕτω καὶ ὑμεῖς ἄσυνετοὶ ἔστε; οὐ νοεῖτε ὅτι πᾶν τὸ ἔξωθεν εἰσπορευόμενον εἰς τὸν ἄνθρωπον οὐ δύναται αὐτὸν κοινῶσαι; 19. ὅτι οὐκ εἰσπορεύεται αὐτοῦ εἰς τὴν καρδίαν, ἀλλ' εἰς τὴν κοιλίαν· καὶ εἰς τὸν ἀφεδρῶνα ἐκπορεύεται, καθαρίζον<sup>5</sup> πάντα τὰ βρώματα.” 20. Ἔλεγε δέ, “Ὅτι τὸ ἐκ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἐκπορευόμενον, ἐκεῖνο κοινοῖ τὸν ἄνθρωπον. 21. ἔσωθεν γὰρ ἐκ τῆς καρδίας τῶν ἀνθρώπων οἱ διαλογισμοὶ οἱ κακοὶ ἐκπορεύονται, μοιχεῖαι, πορνεῖαι, φόνοι, 22. κλοπαί,<sup>6</sup> πλεονεξίαι, πονηρίαι, δόλος, ἀσελγεια, ὀφθαλμὸς πονηρός, βλασφημία, ὑπερηφανία, ἀφροσύνη. 23. πάντα ταῦτα τὰ πονηρὰ ἔσωθεν ἐκπορεύεται, καὶ κοινοῖ τὸν ἄνθρωπον.”

<sup>1</sup> κοινῶσαι αὐτὸν in  $\aleph$ LD (B το κοινουν α.).

<sup>2</sup> τα εκ του ανθ. εκπορ. in  $\aleph$ BDLD 33, and εκείνα omitted in  $\aleph$ BLD.

<sup>3</sup> Omit whole verse  $\aleph$ BDL. It is probably a gloss.

<sup>4</sup> τὴν παραβολὴν for περὶ τῆς π. in  $\aleph$ BDLD 33.

<sup>5</sup> καθαρῶν in  $\aleph$ ABLD al., Orig. (modern editions).

<sup>6</sup> πορνεῖαι, κλοπαί, φονοί, μοιχεῖαι in  $\aleph$ BLD.

out of the mouth, but the things which come out of the man. But if He had meant the impure matters issuing from the body, would He not have said ἐκ τοῦ σώματος, so as to make His meaning unmistakable? On the whole, the most probable view is that even in ver. 15 the thought of Jesus moves in the moral sphere, and that the meaning is: the only defilement worth serious consideration is that caused by the evil which comes out of the heart (ver. 21).

Vv. 17-23. Conversation with the disciples.—εἰς οἶκον ἀπὸ τοῦ ὄχλου = alone, apart from the crowd, at home, wherever the home, pro tem., might be. Whatever was said or done in public became habitually a subject of conversation between Jesus and the Twelve, and therefore of course this remarkable saying.—Ver. 18. Here, as in vi. 52, Mk. takes pains to make prominent the stupidity and consequent need of instruction of the Twelve.—οὕτω καὶ ὑ., etc.: are ye, too, so unintelligent as not to understand what I have said; that that which goeth into the man from without cannot defile?—Ver. 19. ὅτι οὐκ . . . εἰς τὴν καρδίαν: this negative statement is not in Mt. The contrast makes the point clearer. The idea throughout is that ethical defilement is alone of importance, all other defilement, whether the subject of Mosaic ceremonial legislation or of scribe tradition, a trivial affair. Jesus here is a critic of Moses as well as of the scribes, and introduces a religious revolution.—καθαρίζων (not -ον) is accepted generally as the true reading, but how is it to be construed? as the nominative absolute referring to ἀφεδρῶνα, giving the sense: evacuation purges the body from all matter it cannot assimilate? So most recent commentators. Or ought we not to terminate the words of Jesus at ἐκπορεύεται with a mark of interrogation, and take what follows as a comment of the evangelist? = ἐκπορεύεται; καθαρίζων, etc.: this He said, purging all meats; making all meats clean, abolishing the ceremonial distinctions of the Levitical law. This view was adopted by Origen and Chrysostom, and is vigorously defended by Field, Otium Nor., ad loc., and favoured by the Spk., Commentary. Weizsäcker adopts it in his translation: “So sprach er alle Speisen rein”.—Ver. 20. ἔλεγε δέ: the use of this phrase here favours the view that καθαρίζων, etc., is an interpolated remark of the evangelist (Field).—Ver.

24. Καὶ ἐκεῖθεν<sup>1</sup> ἀναστὰς ἀπῆλθεν εἰς τὰ μεθόρια<sup>2</sup> Τύρου καὶ Σιδῶνος.<sup>3</sup> καὶ εἰσελθὼν εἰς τὴν<sup>4</sup> οἰκίαν, οὐδένα ἤθελε γνῶναι, καὶ ἰ. Lk. viii. 47. οὐκ ἤδυνήθη<sup>5</sup> λαθεῖν. 25. ἀκούσασα γὰρ<sup>6</sup> γυνὴ περὶ αὐτοῦ, ἧς Acts xxvi. 20. 2 Pet. iii. 5, with part. Heb. xiii. 2. εἶχε τὸ θυγάτριον αὐτῆς πνεῦμα ἀκάθαρτον, ἔλθοῦσα<sup>7</sup> προσέπεσε j with προσ and accus. here only. πρὸς τοὺς πόδας αὐτοῦ. 26. ἦν δὲ ἡ γυνὴ<sup>7</sup> Ἑλληνίς, Συροφόνισσα<sup>8</sup> τῷ γένει· καὶ ἠρώτα αὐτὸν ἵνα τὸ δαιμόνιον ἐκβάλλῃ<sup>9</sup> ἐκ τῆς θυγατρὸς αὐτῆς. 27. ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν<sup>10</sup> αὐτῇ, “Ἄφες πρῶτον

<sup>1</sup> ἐκεῖθεν δε in ℣BLA.

<sup>2</sup> μεθορια is an interpretative harmonising (Mt. xv. 22) substitute for ορια in ℣BDLA (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> DLA omit καὶ Σ. (Tisch.), found in ℣B (W.H. bracket).

<sup>4</sup> Omit τὴν ℣ABLA, etc.

<sup>5</sup> ἠδυνασθη in ℣B (Tisch., W.H.). -ἦθη DA (Trg., R.V.).

<sup>6</sup> ἀλλ' εὐθὺς before ἀκουσασα instead of γὰρ in ℣BLA 33.

<sup>7</sup> ἡ δε γυνὴ ἦν in ℣BDLA 33.

<sup>8</sup> Συροφονικισσα in B and many other uncials = Συρα Φοινικισσα.

<sup>9</sup> ἐκβαλῃ in ℣ABDLAΣ al.

<sup>10</sup> For ο δε ι. εἶπεν ℣BLA 33 have καὶ ελεγεν.

21. An enumeration of the things which come out of the man, from the heart; first six plurals, πορνείαι, etc.; then six singulars, δόλος, etc. (ver. 22).—Ver. 23. Concluding reflection: all these bad things come out from within and defile the man. Commonplace now, what a startling originality then!

Vv. 24-30. The Syrophenician woman (Mt. xv. 21-28).—ἐκεῖθεν δὲ ἀναστὰς points to a change from the comparatively stationary life by the shores of the lake to a period of wandering in unwonted scenes. Cf. x. 1, where ἀναστὰς is used in reference to the final departure from Galilee to the south. The δὲ, instead of the more usual καὶ, emphasises this change.—εἰς τὰ ὄρια T., not towards (Fritzsche), but into the borders of Tyre. There can be no doubt that in Mk.'s narrative Jesus crosses into heathen territory (cf. ver. 31). In view of the several unsuccessful attempts made by Jesus to escape from the crowd into quiet and leisure, so carefully indicated by Mk., this almost goes without saying. Failing within Jewish territory, He is forced to go without, in hope to get some uninterrupted leisure for confidential intercourse with the Twelve, rendered all the more urgent by scenes like that just considered, which too plainly show that His time will be short.—εἰς οἰκίαν, into a house; considering Christ's desire for privacy, more likely to be that of a heathen stranger (Weiss) than that of a friend (Meyer, Keil).—οὐδένα ἤθελε γνῶναι, He wished no one to know (He was there); to know no one (Fritzsche), comes to the same thing; desires to be private, not weary of well-doing, but anxious to do other work hitherto much hindered.—οὐκ ἠδυνάσθη λαθεῖν, He was not able to escape notice; not even here!—Ver. 25. εὐθὺς: does not imply that the woman heard of Christ's arrival as soon as it happened, but that, after hearing, she lost no time in coming = as soon as she heard. Yet sorrow, like the demoniacs, was quick to learn of His presence.—θυγάτριον: another of Mk.'s diminutives.—Ver. 26. Ἑλληνίς, Σύρα, Φοινικισσα, a Greek in religion, a Syrian in tongue, a Phenician in race (Euthy. Zig.). The two last epithets combined into one (Συροφ.) would describe her as a Syrophenician as distinct from a Phenician of Carthage. Mk. is careful to define the nationality and religion of the woman to throw light on the sequel.—Ver. 27. ἄφες πρῶτον, etc.: a milder word than that in Mt. (ver. 26); it is here a mere question of order: first Jews, then Gentiles, St. Paul's programme, Rom. i. 16. In Mt. we read, οὐκ ἔστι καλὸν, it is not right, seemly, to take the children's bread and to throw it to the dogs. Mk. also has this word, but in a subordinate place, and simply as a reason for the prior claim of the children.

χορτασθῆναι τὰ τέκνα· οὐ γὰρ καλόν ἐστι<sup>1</sup> λαβεῖν τὸν ἄρτον τῶν τέκνων, καὶ βαλεῖν τοῖς κυναρίοις.”<sup>2</sup> 28. Ἡ δὲ ἀπεκρίθη καὶ λέγει αὐτῷ, “Ναί, κύριε· καὶ γὰρ<sup>3</sup> τὰ κυνάρια ὑποκάτω τῆς τραπέζης ἐσθίει<sup>4</sup> ἀπὸ τῶν ψιχίων τῶν παιδίων.” 29. Καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῇ, “Διὰ τοῦτον τὸν λόγον, ὅπαγε· ἐξελήλυθε τὸ δαιμόνιον ἐκ τῆς θυγατρὸς σου.”<sup>5</sup> 30. Καὶ ἀπελθοῦσα εἰς τὸν οἶκόν αὐτῆς, εὔρε τὸ δαιμόνιον ἐξεληλυθός, καὶ τὴν θυγατέρα βεβλημένην ἐπὶ τῆς κλίνης.<sup>6</sup>

31. ΚΑΙ Πάλιν ἐξελθὼν ἐκ τῶν ὀρίων Τύρου καὶ<sup>7</sup> Σιδῶνος, ἦλθε πρὸς<sup>8</sup> τὴν θάλασσαν τῆς Γαλιλαίας, ἀνὰ μέσον τῶν ὀρίων Δεκαπόλεως. 32. καὶ φέρουσιν αὐτῷ κωφὸν μογιλάον,<sup>7</sup> καὶ παρακαλοῦσιν αὐτὸν

<sup>1</sup> ἐστὶ καλον in  $\aleph$ BDL $\Delta$  and βαλειν after τοις κυν. in  $\aleph$ B.

<sup>2</sup> γαρ omitted in  $\aleph$ BD 33. It comes from Mt.

<sup>3</sup> ἐσθιει a grammatical correction for ἐσθιουσιν in  $\aleph$ BDL $\Delta$  al.

<sup>4</sup>  $\aleph$ B L $\Delta$  have το δαιμ. after εκ της θυγ. σου.

<sup>5</sup>  $\aleph$ B L $\Delta$  invert the order of the facts, το δαιμ. ἐξελ. at the end. The order in T.R. is due to the feeling that it was more natural: cure first, quiet resting in bed following. For τ. θυγ. βεβλημενην  $\aleph$ B L $\Delta$  33 have το παιδιον βεβλημενον (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>6</sup> ἦλθε δια Σιδωνος εἰς in  $\aleph$ BDL $\Delta$ .

<sup>7</sup>  $\aleph$ B D $\Delta$  have και before μογιλαλον.

We note also that Mk., usually so full in his narratives compared with Mt., omits the intercession of the Twelve with Christ's reply (Mt. vv. 23, 24). Yet Mk.'s, "first the children," is really equivalent to "I am not sent," etc. The former implies: "your turn will come"; the latter: "to minister to you is not my vocation". This word, preserved in Mt., becomes less harsh when looked at in the light of Christ's desire for quiet, not mentioned in Mt. Jesus made the most of the fact that His commission was to Jews. It has been thought that, in comparison with Mt., Mk.'s report of Christ's words is secondary, adapted purposely to Gentile readers. Probably that is the case, but, on the other hand, he gives us a far clearer view of the extent and aim of the excursion to the North, concerning which Mt. has, and gives, no adequate conception.—Ver. 28. ἀπεκρίθη, aorist, hitherto imperfect. We come now to what Mk. deems the main point of the story, the woman's striking word.—ὑποκάτω τ. τραπ., the dogs under the table, waiting for morsels, a realistic touch.—τῶν ψιχίων τ. π., not merely the crumbs which by chance fall from the table, but morsels surreptitiously dropt by the children ("qui panem saepe prodigunt," Beng.) to their pets. Household dogs, part of the family, loved by the children; hard and fast line of separation impossible.—Ver. 29. διὰ τ. τ. λόγον, for this word, which showed the quick wit of the faith which Mt. specifies as the reason of the exception made in her favour.—Ver. 30. βεβλημένον: the emphasis lies on this word rather than on παιδιον (Bengel), as expressing the condition in which the mother found her daughter: lying quietly ("in lecto molliter cubantem sine ullâ jactatione," Grotius).

It is probable that this interesting incident cannot be fully understood without taking into consideration circumstances not mentioned in the narratives, and which, therefore, it does not fall to the expositor to refer to. On this vide my book, With Open Face, chap. vii.

Vv. 31-37. Cure of a deaf-mute, peculiar to Mk. Mt. has, instead, a renewal of the healing ministry on an extensive scale, the thing Jesus desired to avoid (xv. 29-31).—Ver. 31. After the instructive episode Jesus continued His journey, going northwards through (διὰ, vide critical notes) Sidon, then making a circuit so as to arrive through Decapolis at the Sea of Galilee. The route is not more definitely indicated; perhaps it was along the highway over the Lebanon range to Damascus; it may conceivably have touched that ancient city, which, according to Pliny (H. N., v., 16), was included in Decapolis (vide Holtz., H. C., and Schürer, Div., ii., vol. i., p. 95).—Ver. 32. μογιλάον, speaking with difficulty; but here for ἵνα ἐπιθῆ αὐτῷ τὴν χεῖρα. 33. καὶ ἀπολαβόμενος αὐτὸν ἀπὸ τοῦ κ Ch. viii.

2. John ὄχλου κατ' ἴδιαν, ἔβαλε τοὺς δακτύλους αὐτοῦ εἰς τὰ ὦτα αὐτοῦ,
ix. 6.
1 Lk. vii. 1. καὶ <sup>κ</sup> πτύσας ἤψατο τῆς γλώσσης αὐτοῦ, 34. καὶ ἀναβλέψας εἰς Acts xvii.
20. Heb. τὸν οὐρανόν, ἐστέναξε, καὶ λέγει αὐτῷ, “Ἐφφαθά,” ὃ ἐστι, “Δια-
v. 11 (pl.
= organs νοίχθητι.” 35. Καὶ εὐθὺς<sup>1</sup> διηγοίχθησαν<sup>2</sup> αὐτοῦ αἱ <sup>1</sup> ἀκοαί· καὶ of hearing).
m cf. the ἐλύθη ὁ δεσμὸς τῆς γλώσσης αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἐλάλει ὀρθῶς. 36. καὶ
verb in
Rom. v. 20 διεστέλλατο αὐτοῖς ἵνα μηδενὶ εἴπωσιν<sup>3</sup>. ὅσον δὲ αὐτὸς<sup>4</sup> αὐτοῖς and υπερκ-in 1 Thess. διεστέλλετο, μᾶλλον περισσότερον ἐκήρυσσον· 37. καὶ <sup>μ</sup> ὑπερπερισ-
v. 13.
n const. Ch. σῶς ἐξεπλήσσοντο, λέγοντες, “Καλῶς πάντα πεποιήκε· καὶ τοὺς
i. 17. Acts
iii. 12. κωφοὺς <sup>π</sup> ποιεῖ ἀκούειν, καὶ τοὺς <sup>δ</sup> ἀλάλους λαλεῖν.”

<sup>1</sup> εὐθὺς is omitted here in  $\aleph$ BDL 33 and inserted before ἐλυθη in  $\aleph$ I.Δ; wanting here also in BD it. (W.H. omit both).

<sup>2</sup> ηγοιγησαν in  $\aleph$ BDA. T.R. assimilates to ver. 34. <sup>3</sup> λεγωσιν in  $\aleph$ B L 33.

<sup>4</sup>  $\aleph$ B L Δ omit αὐτος and insert an αὐτοι before μᾶλλον (Tisch., W.H.). The T.R. is an attempt at improving the style.

<sup>5</sup> τοὺς omit  $\aleph$ B L Δ 33.

dumb. Cf. ἀλάλους, ver. 37, used in Sept., Is. xxxv. 6, for  $\text{דָּבְדָב}$ , dumb, here only in N.T.—Ver. 33. ἀπολαβόμενος, etc., withdrawing him from the crowd apart. Many reasons have been assigned for this procedure. The true reason, doubtless, is that Jesus did not wish to be drawn into a new ministry of healing on a large scale (Weiss, Schanz).—ἔβαλε τοὺς δακτύλους, etc.: one finger of the right hand into one ear, another of the left hand into the other, on account of the narrowness and depth of the hearing faculty, that He might touch it (διὰ τὸ στενὸν καὶ βαθὺ τῆς ἀκοῆς ἵνα θίξῃ ταύτης, Euthy. Zig.). Deafness is first dealt with; it was the primary evil.—πτύσας, spitting; on what, the tongue of the dumb man as on the eyes of the blind (viii. 23)? So Meyer. Or on His own finger, with which He then touched the tongue? So Weiss, Schanz, Kloster., Holtz. (H. C.), Keil. Mk. leaves us here to our own conjectures, as also in reference to the import of these singular acts of Jesus. Probably they were meant to rouse interest and aid faith in the dull soul of the sufferer. (Vide Trench, Notes on the Miracles.)

Ver. 34. ἀναβλέψας, ἐστέναξε: Jesus looked up in prayer, and sighed or groaned in sympathy. In this case a number of acts, bodily and mental, are specified. Were these peculiar to it, or do we here get a glimpse into Christ's modus operandi in many unrecorded cases? On the latter view one can understand the exhausting nature of the healing ministry. It meant a great mental strain.—ἐφφαθά, an Aramaic word = as Mk. explains, διανοίχθητι; doubtless the word actually spoken = Be opened, in reference to the ears, though the loosing of the tongue was part of the result ensuing.—Ver. 35. αἱ ἀκοαί, literally, the hearings, here the instruments of hearing, the ears. So often in classics.—ἐλάλει ὀρθῶς, he began to speak in a proper or ordinary manner, implying that in his dumb condition he had been able only to make inarticulate sounds.—Ver. 36. μᾶλλον περισσότερον, a double comparative, forcibly rendered in A.V., “So much the more, a great deal”. Cf. 2 Cor. vii. 13. This use of μᾶλλον to strengthen comparatives is found in classics, instances in Raphael, Annon., ad loc., and Hermann's Viger, p. 719.—Ver. 37. ὑπερπερισσῶς, superabundantly, a double superlative; here only.—καλῶς π. πεποιήκε, He hath done all things well. This looks like a reflection on past as well as present; the story of the demoniac, e.g. Observe the ποιεῖ, present, in next clause, referring to the cure just effected. It happened in Decapolis, and we seem to see the inhabitants of that region exhibiting a nobler mood than in chap. v. 17. Of course, there were no swine lost on this occasion. Their astonishment at the miracle may seem extravagant, but it must be remembered that they have had little experience of Christ's healing work; their own fault.

VIII. 1. Ἐν ἐκείναις ταῖς ἡμέραις, παμπόλλου<sup>1</sup> ὄχλου ὄντος, καὶ μὴ ἐχόντων τί φάγωσι, προσκαλεσάμενος ὁ Ἰησοῦς<sup>2</sup> τοὺς μαθητὰς αὐτοῦ λέγει αὐτοῖς, 2. “Σπλαγχνίζομαι ἐπὶ τὸν ὄχλον· ὅτι ἦδη ἡμέρας<sup>3</sup> τρεῖς προσμένουσί μοι, καὶ οὐκ ἔχουσι τί φάγωσι· 3. καὶ ἐὰν ἀπολύσω αὐτοὺς νήστευσι εἰς οἶκον αὐτῶν, ἐκλυθήσονται ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ· τινὲς γὰρ αὐτῶν μακρόθεν ἦκασι.”<sup>4</sup> 4. Καὶ ἀπεκρίθησαν αὐτῷ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ, “Πόθεν<sup>5</sup> τούτους δυνησεται τις ὡδε χορτάσαι ἄρτων ἐπ’ ἐρημίας;” 5. Καὶ ἐπηρώτα<sup>6</sup> αὐτοὺς, “Πόσους ἔχετε ἄρτους;” Οἱ δὲ εἶπον, “Ἑπτὰ.” 6. Καὶ παρήγγειλε<sup>7</sup> τῷ ὄχλῳ ἀναπεσεῖν ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς· καὶ λαβὼν τοὺς ἑπτὰ ἄρτους, εὐχαριστήσας ἔκλασε καὶ ἐδίδου τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ, ἵνα παραθῶσι<sup>8</sup> καὶ παρέθηκαν τῷ

<sup>1</sup> πάλιν πολλου in ΨBDLΔΣ 33. παμπόλλου is a conjectural emendation suggested by the fact of a great crowd, and perplexity caused by πάλιν here as in vii. 14.

<sup>2</sup> ΨABDLΔΣ 33 it. vulg. cop. omit ο Ἰησους, also ΨDLΔΣ omit αὐτου after μαθητας.

<sup>3</sup> ημερας = a grammatical correction for ημεραι (ΨL, etc.), or ημεραις τρισιν in B.

<sup>4</sup> For τινες γαρ . . . ηκασι read και τινες (ΨBLΔ) αυτων απο μακροθεν (ΨBDLΔ), εισιν (BLΔ).

<sup>5</sup> οτι before ποθεν in BLΔ.

<sup>7</sup> παραγγελλει in ΨBDLΔ.

<sup>6</sup> ηρωτα in ΨBLΔ.

<sup>8</sup> παρατιθωσιν in ΨBCLΔ 33.

CHAPTER VIII. SECOND FEEDING. SIGN FROM HEAVEN. CURE AT BETHSAIDA. CAESAREA PHILIPPI.—Vv. 1-10. Second feeding (Mt. xv. 32-39).—Ver. 1. ἐν ἐκείναις ταῖς ἡμέραις: a vague phrase, used only once again in this Gospel (i. 9, in reference to Jesus going from Nazareth to be baptised), indicating inability to assign to the following incident a precise historical place. Cf. Mt. iii. 1 for similar vague use of the expression.—πάλιν πολλοῦ ὄ. ὄ. This well-attested reading is another indication of the evangelist's helplessness as to historical connection: there being again a great crowd. Why? where? not indicated, and we are not entitled to assert that the scene of the event was Decapolis, and the occasion the healing of the deaf-mute. The story is in the air, and this is one of the facts that have to be reckoned with by defenders of the reality of the second feeding against those who maintain that it is only a literary duplicate of the first, due to the circumstance that the Petrine version of it differed in some particulars from that in the Logia of Matthew. On this subject I do not dogmatise, but I cannot pretend to be insensible to the difficulties connected with it.—ὄχλου, a great crowd

again. How often the crowd figures in the evangetic story! It is the one monotonous feature in narratives of thrilling interest.—Ver. 2. Vide on Mt. xv. 32.—Ver. 3. ἐκλυθήσονται, they will faint. This verb is used in N. T. in middle or passive in the sense of being faint or weary in body or mind (Gal. vi. 9, Heb. xii. 3).—καὶ τινες . . . εἰσίν, and some of them are from a distance, peculiar to Mark. The meaning is that such, even if in vigour at starting, would be exhausted before reaching their destination. But could they not get food by the way?—Ver. 4. πόθεν, whence? This adverb was used by the Greeks, in speaking of food, in reference to the source of supply.—πόθεν φάγητε = “unde cibum petaturi sitis”. Examples in Kypke, Raphel, Palaiet.—ἐπ’ ἐρημίας, in a desert. The scene of the first feeding is a desert place also (chap. vi. 32). But in that case food was purchasable within a reasonable distance; not so here.—Ver. 6. Compare the meagre statement here with the picturesque description in vi. 38-40. The evangelist seems to lack interest in the twice-told tale. Ver. 7. ἰχθύδια: another of Mark's diminutives, but Matthew has it also (xv. 34), copied ὄχλῳ. 7. καὶ εἶχον ἰχθύδια ὀλίγα· καὶ εὐλογήσας εἶπε παραθεῖναι καὶ αὐτά.<sup>1</sup> 8. ἔφαγον δέ,<sup>2</sup> καὶ ἔχορτάσθησαν· καὶ ἦσαν περισσεύματα κλασμάτων, ἑπτὰ σφυρίδας. 9. ἦσαν δὲ οἱ φαγόντες<sup>3</sup> ὡς τετρακισχίλιοι· καὶ ἀπέλυσεν αὐτούς.

10. Καὶ εὐθέως ἐμβὰς εἰς τὸ πλοῖον μετὰ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ ἦλθεν εἰς τὰ μέρη Δαλμανουθά. 11. καὶ ἐξῆλθον οἱ Φαρισαῖοι, καὶ ἤρξαντο συζητεῖν αὐτῷ, ζητοῦντες παρ' αὐτοῦ σημεῖον ἀπὸ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, πειράζοντες αὐτόν. 12. καὶ ἀναστενάξας τῷ πνεύματι αὐτοῦ λέγει, "Τί ἡ γενεὰ αὕτη σημεῖον ἐπιζητεῖ<sup>4</sup>; ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν,<sup>5</sup> εἰ δοθήσεται τῇ γενεᾷ ταύτῃ σημεῖον." 13. Καὶ ἀφείς αὐτούς, ἐμβὰς πάλιν<sup>6</sup> εἰς τὸ πλοῖον,<sup>6</sup> ἀπῆλθεν εἰς τὸ πέραν.

14. Καὶ ἐπελάθοντο λαβεῖν ἄρτους, καὶ εἰ μὴ ἓνα ἄρτον οὐκ εἶχον μεθ' ἑαυτῶν ἐν τῷ πλοίῳ. 15. καὶ διεστέλλετο αὐτοῖς, λέγων,

<sup>1</sup> Read καὶ εὐλογησας αὐτα εἶπεν καὶ ταυτα παρατιθεναι as in W.H.

<sup>2</sup> καὶ εφαγον in ΞBCDLΔ.

<sup>3</sup> Omit οἱ φαγ. ΞBLΔ 33.

<sup>4</sup> ζητει σημειον in ΞBCDLΔ 33.

<sup>5</sup> BL omit ὑμιν (W.H. put in margin).

<sup>6</sup> Read παλιν εμβας, and omit εἰς το πλ. (ΞBCLΔ, Tisch., W.H.).

probably from Mark. In these two places only.—Ver. 8. περισσεύματα κλασμάτων, the remainders of the broken pieces. Matthew uses the singular neuter, τὸ περισσεύον, in both feedings.—σφυρίδας: in both accounts of second feeding, κοφίνους in both accounts of first (κόφινοι in Luke). On the difference in meaning, vide notes on Mt. xv. 37.—Ver. 10. Here as in case of first feeding there is a crossing of the lake immediately after (εὐθύς, which has an obvious reason in first case). This time Jesus and the Twelve enter the boat together, at least in Mark's narrative (μετὰ τῶν μαθητῶν).—Δαλμανουθά, in Matthew Μαγαδάν; both alike unknown: another of the features in this narrative which give a handle to critical doubt. Some place it on the western shore in the plain of Gennesaret (Furrer, "On the site of Khan Minyeh lay once Dalmanutha," Wanderungen, p. 369); others to the south-east of the lake near the junction of the Yarmuk with the Jordan (Delhemiyeh, Robinson, B. R., iii. 264). Weiss (in Meyer) adopts this view. Holtzmann (H. C.), while leaning to the former alternative, leaves the matter doubtful.

Vv. 11-12. Pharisees seek a sign (Mt. xvi. 1-4).—Ver. 11. ἐξῆλθον οἱ Φ., the Pharisees went out, from their seat in the Holy Land into the heathen Decapolis, otherwise carefully shunned, in their zeal against Jesus. So Weiss (in Meyer).—Ver. 12. ἀναστενάξας, fetching a deep sigh, here only in N. T.; in Sept., Lament. i. 4, Sirach. xxv. 18, etc.—τῷ πνεύματι α., in His spirit. The sigh physical, its cause spiritual—a sense of irreconcilable enmity, invincible unbelief, and coming doom.—εἰ δοθήσεται, if there shall be given = there shall not (οὐ) be given: a Hebraistic form of emphatic negative assertion. The suppressed apodosis is: may I die, or God punish me. Other instances in Heb. iii. 11, iv. 3, 5. In Mark there is an absolute refusal of a sign. In Matthew the refusal is qualified by offer of Jonah. But that was an absolute refusal of signs in their sense.

Vv. 13-21. Warning against evil leavens (Mt. xvi. 4b-12).—Ver. 13. εἰς τὸ πέραν, to the other side; which, east or west? Here again opinion is divided. The reference to Bethsaida, ver. 22, might be expected to decide, but then there is the dispute about the two Bethsaidas; Bethsaida Julias, and Bethsaida on the western shore. These points are among the obscurities of the Synoptical narratives which we are reluctantly compelled to leave in twilight.—Ver. 14. εἰ μὴ ἓνα ἄρτον: a curiously exact reminiscence where so much else that seems to us more important is left vague. But it shows that we have to do with reality, for the suggestion of the Tübingen critics that it is a mere bit of word painting is not credible. The one loaf seems to witness to a Christ-like

“Ὁρᾶτε, βλέπετε ἀπὸ τῆς ζύμης τῶν Φαρισαίων καὶ τῆς ζύμης Ἡρώδου.” 16. Καὶ διελογίζοντο πρὸς ἀλλήλους, λέγοντες,<sup>1</sup> “Ὅτι ἄρτους οὐκ ἔχομεν.”<sup>2</sup> 17. Καὶ γνοὺς ὁ Ἰησοῦς<sup>3</sup> λέγει αὐτοῖς, “Τί διαλογίζεσθε, ὅτι ἄρτους οὐκ ἔχετε; οὐπω νοεῖτε, οὐδὲ συνίετε; ἔτι<sup>4</sup> πεπωρωμένην ἔχετε τὴν καρδίαν ὑμῶν; 18. ὀφθαλμοὺς ἔχοντες οὐ βλέπετε; καὶ ὦτα ἔχοντες οὐκ ἀκούετε; καὶ οὐ μνημονεύετε; 19. ὅτε τοὺς πέντε ἄρτους ἔκλασα εἰς τοὺς πεντακισχιλίους, πόσους κοφίλους πλήρεις κλασμάτων<sup>5</sup> ἤρατε;” Λέγουσιν αὐτῷ, “Δώδεκα.” 20. “Ὅτε δὲ τοὺς ἑπτὰ εἰς τοὺς τετρακισχιλίους, πόσων σπυρίδων πληρώματα κλασμάτων ἤρατε;” Οἱ δὲ εἶπον,<sup>6</sup> “Ἑπτὰ.” 21. Καὶ ἔλεγεν αὐτοῖς, “Πῶς οὐ<sup>7</sup> συνίετε;”

22. ΚΑΙ ἔρχεται<sup>8</sup> εἰς Βηθσαϊδάν· καὶ φέρουσιν αὐτῷ τυφλόν, καὶ παρακαλοῦσιν αὐτὸν ἵνα αὐτοῦ ἄψηται. 23. καὶ ἐπιλαβόμενος τῆς

<sup>1</sup> Omit λέγοντες (an explanatory word) ἤBD.

<sup>2</sup> B has εχουσιν, adopted by Trg. (text), W.H. Ws., Tisch., and R.V. retain εχομεν.

<sup>3</sup> Omit ο I. BA.

<sup>4</sup> ἤBCDLΔΣ omit etc.

<sup>5</sup> κλασμάτων πλήρεις in ἤBCLΔ 33.

<sup>6</sup> και λεγουσιν in ἤBCLΔ.

<sup>7</sup> B has πως ου νοειτε. πως ου is to be preferred to ουπω (ἤCCLΔ) or πως ουτω (D), as expressive of vexation. Tisch. and W.H. adopt ουπω.

<sup>8</sup> ερχονται in BCDLΔ. The sing. (T.R.) is an adaptation to αυτω.

easymindedness as to food in the disciple-circle. Let to-morrow look after itself!—Ver. 15. ἀπὸ τῆς ζύμης, etc.: two leavens, one of Pharisees, another of Herod, yet placed together because morally akin and coincident in practical outcome. vide notes on Mt. xvi. 1-6.—Ver. 16. πρὸς ἀλλήλους. Mt. has ἐν ἑαυτοῖς. The mind of Jesus was profoundly preoccupied with the ominous demand of the sign-seekers, and the disciples might talk quietly to each other unnoticed by Him.—Ver. 17. γνοὺς: He does notice, however, and administers a sharp rebuke for their preoccupation with mere temporalities, as if there were nothing higher to be thought of than bread.—πεπωρωμένην, in a hardened state; the word stands in an emphatic position. For the time the Twelve are wayside hearers, with hearts like a beaten path, into which the higher truths cannot sink so as to germinate.—Ver. 18 repeats in reference to the Twelve the hard saying uttered concerning the multitude on the day of the parables (iv. 12). In vv. 19, 20 Jesus puts the Twelve through their catechism in reference to the recent feedings, and then in ver. 21 (according to reading in B) asks in the tone of a disappointed

Master: How do you not understand? If we may emphasise the imperfect tense of ἔλεγεν, He said this over and over again, half speaking to them, half to Himself; another of Mk.'s realistic features. All this shows how much the Twelve needed special instruction, and it is obviously Mk.'s aim to make this prominent. Desire for leisure to attend to their instruction is in his narrative the key to the excursions in the direction of Tyre and Sidon and to Caesarea Philippi.

Vv. 22-26. A blind man cured at Bethsaida, peculiar to Mk.—Ver. 22. Βηθσαϊδάν. If there were two Bethsaidas, which of the two? If only one of course it was Bethsaida Julias. But against this has been cited the term κώμη twice applied to the town (vv. 23, 26), which, however, may be regarded as satisfactorily explained by the remark: it had been a village, and was first made a town by Philip, who enlarged and beautified it and called it Julias in honour of the daughter of Augustus (Joseph., B. J., ii., 9, 1, etc.). So Meyer and others.—Ver. 23. ἔξω τῆς κώμης, outside the village, for the same reason as in vii. 33, to avoid creating a run on Him for cures. Therefore Jesus becomes

χειρὸς τοῦ τυφλοῦ, ἐξήγαγεν<sup>1</sup> αὐτὸν ἔξω τῆς κώμης· καὶ πτύσας εἰς τὰ ὄμματα αὐτοῦ, ἐπιθεῖς τὰς χεῖρας αὐτῷ, ἐπηρώτα αὐτὸν εἶ τι βλέπει.<sup>2</sup> 24. καὶ ἀναβλέψας ἔλεγε, “Βλέπω τοὺς ἀνθρώπους, ὅτι ὡς δένδρα ὀρῶ περιπατοῦντας.” 25. Εἶτα πάλιν ἐπέθηκε<sup>3</sup> τὰς χεῖρας ἐπὶ τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἐποίησεν αὐτὸν ἀναβλέψαι<sup>4</sup>. καὶ ἀποκατεστάθη,<sup>5</sup> καὶ ἐνέβλεψε<sup>6</sup> τηλαυγῶς<sup>7</sup> ἅπαντας.<sup>8</sup> 26. καὶ ἀπέστειλεν αὐτὸν εἰς τὸν<sup>9</sup> οἶκον αὐτοῦ, λέγων, “Μηδὲ εἰς τὴν κώμην εἰσελθῆς, μηδὲ εἴπῃς τινὶ ἐν τῇ κώμῃ.”<sup>10</sup>

27. Καὶ ἐξῆλθεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ εἰς τὰς κώμας Καισαρείας τῆς Φιλίππου· καὶ ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ ἐπηρώτα τοὺς μαθητὰς αὐτοῦ, λέγων αὐτοῖς, “Τίνα με λέγουσιν οἱ ἄνθρωποι εἶναι;”

<sup>1</sup> ἐξηγεκεν in  $\aleph$ BCL 33, replaced in T.R. by a more common word.

<sup>2</sup> βλέπεις in BCDA (W.H. text) more expressive than βλέπει ( $\aleph$ L, Tisch.).

<sup>3</sup> εθηκεν in BL (W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> For the explanatory gloss καὶ ἐπ. ἀ. ἀναβλεψαὶ  $\aleph$ BCLD cop. have καὶ διέβλεψεν

<sup>5</sup> ἀπεκατεστη in  $\aleph$ BCLD (B αποκ.).

<sup>6</sup> ἐνεβλεπεν (imp.) BLΔ.

<sup>7</sup>  $\aleph$ CCLD have δηλαυγῶς (Tisch.). τηλ. in BD (W.H. text, δηλ. margin).

<sup>8</sup> ἅπαντα in  $\aleph$ BCDLA.

<sup>9</sup> Omit τον many uncials.

<sup>10</sup> All after εἰσελθῆς omit  $\aleph$ BL.

conductor of the blind man Himself, though he doubtless had one (Weiss-Meyer).—πτύσας, spitting, in this case certainly on the diseased parts. Spittle was regarded as a means of cure by the ancients. Holtzmann (H. C.) cites the story of Vespasian in Alexandria narrated by Tacitus (Hist., iv., 81). The prince was asked to sprinkle the eyes of a blind man “oris excremento”.—εἶ τι βλέπεις, do you, possibly, see anything? εἰ with a direct question, vide Winer, lvii., 2.—Ver. 24. ἀναβλέψας: the narrative contains three compounds of βλέπω (ἀνά, διά, ἐν); the first denotes looking up in the tentative manner of blind men, the second looking through (a mist as it were) so as to see clearly, the third looking into so as to see distinctly, as one sees the exact outlines of a near object (cf. Mk. xiv. 67).—ὡς δένδρα, as trees, so indistinct was vision as yet; yet not trees, but men because moving (“non arbores, quia ambulans,” Bengel). He knew what a man is like, therefore he had once seen, not born blind.—Ver. 25. A second touch brings better vision, so that διέβλεψεν, and he was now restored to full use of his eyes; the result being permanent perfect vision—ἐνέβλεπεν, imperfect.—διέβλεψεν points to the first act of distinct seeing.—τηλαυγῶς (τῆλε, αὐγῇ here only), shining from afar. He saw distant objects distinctly as if they were near; did not need to go near them to see them.—Ver. 26. εἰς οἶκον, home.—μηδὲ, etc., go not into the village; to avoid creating a sensation. It has been suggested that the gradual restoration of sight in this case was meant to symbolise the slowness of the Twelve in attaining spiritual insight. They got their eyes opened very gradually like the blind man of Bethsaida. So Klostermann.

Vv. 27-ix. 1. At Caesarea Philippi (Mt. xvi. 13-28, Lk. ix. 18-27).—Ver. 27. καὶ ἐξῆλθεν: the καὶ connects very loosely with what goes before, but presumably ἐξῆλθεν refers to Bethsaida. They leave it and go northwards towards Caesarea Philippi, up the Jordan valley, a distance of some twenty-five or thirty miles.—ὁ Ἰησοῦς: that Jesus is here expressly named is a hint that something very important is to be narrated, and the mention of the disciples along with Him indicates that it closely concerns them.—εἰς τὰς κώμας Κ. τ. Φ., to the villages of Caesarea Philippi, not to Caesarea Philippi itself. Mt. has τὰ μέρη. Apparently they did not enter the city itself. Jesus seems to have avoided the towns in which the Herodian passion for ambitious architecture was displayed. Besides at this time He

28. Οἱ δὲ ἀπεκρίθησαν,<sup>1</sup> “Ἰωάννην<sup>2</sup> τὸν Βαπτιστὴν· καὶ ἄλλοι Ἠλίαν· ἄλλοι δὲ ἓνα<sup>3</sup> τῶν προφητῶν.” 29. Καὶ αὐτὸς λέγει αὐτοῖς,<sup>4</sup> “Ὑμεῖς δὲ τίνα με λέγετε εἶναι;” Ἀποκριθεὶς δὲ<sup>5</sup> ὁ Πέτρος λέγει αὐτῷ, “Σὺ εἶ ὁ Χριστός.” 30. Καὶ ἐπετίμησεν αὐτοῖς, ἵνα μηδεὶν λέγωσι περὶ αὐτοῦ.

31. ΚΑΙ ἤρξατο διδάσκειν αὐτούς, ὅτι δεῖ τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου πολλὰ παθεῖν, καὶ ἀποδοκιμασθῆναι ἀπὸ<sup>6</sup> τῶν πρεσβυτέρων καὶ ἀρχιερέων καὶ γραμματέων, καὶ ἀποκτανθῆναι, καὶ μετὰ τρεῖς ἡμέρας ἀναστῆναι· 32. καὶ παρρησίᾳ τὸν λόγον ἐλάλει. Καὶ

<sup>1</sup> εἶπαν αὐτῷ λέγοντες in  $\aleph$ BCLΔ (D has απεκ. αὐτῷ λεγ.).

<sup>2</sup> οτι before I. in  $\aleph$ B.

<sup>3</sup> For ενα  $\aleph$ BCL have οτι εις.

<sup>4</sup> ερηρωτα αυτους in  $\aleph$ BCDLΔ.

<sup>5</sup> Omit δε BL (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>6</sup> υπο in  $\aleph$ BCDL; with των before αρχ. ( $\aleph$ BCD), and before γραμ. ( $\aleph$ BCDL).

desired solitude.—ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ, on the way, probably when the city of Caesarea Philippi came into view. Vide on Mt. xvi. 13. But conversation leading up to the critical subject might begin as soon as they had got clear of Bethsaida. No time to be lost now that the Master had got the Twelve by themselves. Or was the Master, very silent on that journey, preparing His own mind for what was coming?—ἐπηρώτα, imperfect, because subordinate to the reply of the disciples, the main thing.—τίνα με, etc.: on the form of the question vide on Mt. xvi. 13.—Ver. 28. οἱ δὲ εἶπαν α. λέγοντες, they said, saying; tautology, somewhat like the vulgar English idiom: He said, says he; fixing attention on what is said.—Ἰωάννην τ. Β.: the accusative depending on λέγουσιν οἱ ἄνθρωποι σε εἶναι understood. This infinitive construction passes into direct speech in the last clause: ὅτι εἰς (εἶ) τ. προφητῶν. The opinions reported are much the same as in vi. 14, 15.—Ver. 29. ὑμεῖς δὲ, etc.: a very pointed question given by all the Synoptists in the same terms. The reply, on the other hand, is different in each. Vide on Mt. xvi. 16.—ἀποκριθεὶς λέγει: we have here an aorist participle of identical action with a finite verb in the present tense. It usually goes with the aorist (cf. Mt. xvi. 17, ἀποκριθεὶς εἶπεν).—Ver. 30. ἐπετίμησεν. He threatened them, spoke in a tone of menace, as if anticipating foolish talk—περὶ αὐτοῦ—about Him, i.e., about His being the Christ, as in Mt. The prohibition might have a double reference: to the people, to prevent the spread of crude ideas as to the Messiahship of Jesus; to the disciples, that they might keep the new faith to themselves till it took deep root in their own souls. Recall Carlyle's counsel to young men: if thou hast an idea keep it to thyself, for as soon as thou hast spoken it it is dead to thee (Stump Orator, in Latter Day Pamphlets).

Vv. 31—33. First announcement of the Passion.—Ver. 31. καὶ: Mt. has the more emphatic ἀπὸ τότε, indicating that then began an entirely new way of speaking as to the coming fate of Jesus.—διδάσκειν, to teach, more appropriate is Mt.'s word, δεικνύειν, to show. It was a solemn intimation rather than instruction that was given.—δεῖ, it must be; in all three evangelists. It points to the inevitableness of the event, not to the rationale of it. On that subject Jesus gave in the first place no instruction.—πολλὰ παθεῖν: where not indicated, as in Mt.—ἀποδοκιμασθῆναι: an expressive word taken from Ps. cxviii. 22, fitly indicating the precise share of the religious authorities in the coming tragedy. Their part was solemnly to disapprove of the claimant to Messiahship. All else was the natural sequel of their act of rejection.—τῶν πρ., τῶν ἀρ., τῶν γρ.: the article before each of the three classes named, saddling each with its separate responsibility.—Ver. 32. παρρησίᾳ: He spoke the word plainly, unmistakably. This remark was rendered almost necessary by the choice of the word διδάσκειν in ver. 31. Mt.'s δεικνύειν implies παρρησίᾳ. This word (from πᾶς, ῥῆσις) in ordinary Greek usage means frank, unreserved speech, as opposed to partial or total silence. Here, προσλαβόμενος αὐτὸν ὁ Πέτρος<sup>1</sup> ἤρξατο ἐπιτιμᾶν αὐτῷ. 33. ὁ δὲ ἐπιστραφεὶς, καὶ ἰδὼν τοὺς μαθητὰς αὐτοῦ, ἐπετίμησε τῷ<sup>2</sup> Πέτρῳ, λέγων,<sup>3</sup> “Ὑπαγε ὀπίσω μου, Σατανᾶ· ὅτι οὐ φρονεῖς τὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἀλλὰ τὰ τῶν ἀνθρώπων.”

34. Καὶ προσκαλεσάμενος τὸν ὄχλον σὺν τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ, εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Ὅστις<sup>4</sup> θέλει ὀπίσω μου ἐλθεῖν, ἀπαρνησάσθω ἑαυτόν, καὶ ἀράτω τὸν σταυρὸν αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἀκολουθείτω μοι.

35. ὃς γὰρ ἂν θέλη τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ σῶσαι, ἀπολέσει αὐτήν. ὃς δ' ἂν ἀπολέσῃ<sup>5</sup> τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ ἔνεκεν ἐμοῦ καὶ τοῦ εὐαγγελίου, οὗτος<sup>6</sup> σώσει αὐτήν. 36. τί γὰρ ὠφελήσει<sup>7</sup> ἄνθρωπον, ἐὰν κερδήσῃ<sup>8</sup> τὸν κόσμον ὅλον, καὶ ζημιωθῇ<sup>8</sup> τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ;

37. ἢ τί δώσει ἄνθρωπος<sup>9</sup> ἀντάλλαγμα τῆς ψυχῆς αὐτοῦ; 38. ὃς γὰρ ἂν ἐπιαισχυνθῇ με καὶ τοὺς ἐμοὺς λόγους ἐν τῇ γενεᾷ ταύτῃ τῇ μοιχαλίδι καὶ ἀμαρτωλῷ, καὶ ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἐκαισχυνθήσεται αὐτόν, ὅταν ἔλθῃ ἐν τῇ δόξῃ τοῦ πατρὸς αὐτοῦ μετὰ τῶν ἀγγέλων τῶν ἁγίων.”

o Lk. ix. 6
Rom. i. 16.
2 Tim. i.
8, 16.

<sup>1</sup> ο Π. αυτον in BL.

<sup>3</sup> Omit τω ἘBCL.

<sup>3</sup> και λεγει in ἘBCLΔ.

<sup>4</sup> ει τις in ἘBCDLΔ (W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> απολεσει in ἘBCΔ al.; a mechanical conformation to the preceding απολεσει, thinks Weiss. Tisch. and W.H. adopt it.

<sup>6</sup> ουτος (from Lk.) omit ἘABCΔLΔ verss. <sup>7</sup> ωφελει in ἘBL.

<sup>8</sup> κηρδηση, ζημιωθη come from Mt.; read κηρδησαι, ζημιωθηναι with ἘBL (Tisch., W.H.), of course omitting εαν.

<sup>9</sup> η τι δωσει αν. is another conformation to Mt., read τι γαρ δοι α. with ἘB (Tisch., W.H.).

as in John xi, 14, xvi. 25, 29, it means plain speech as opposed to hints or veiled allusions, such as Jesus had previously given; as in Mk. ii. 20 (bridegroom taken away). In this sense St. Paul (2 Cor. iii. 12) claims παρρησία for the Christian ministry in contrast to the mystery connected with the legal dispensation as symbolised by the veil of Moses. The term was adopted into the Rabbinical vocabulary, and used to signify unveiled speech as opposed to metaphorical or parabolic speech (Wünsche, Beiträge, ad loc.).—προσλαβόμενος ὁ Π.: what Peter said is not given, Mk's aim being simply to show that Jesus had so spoken that misunderstanding of what He said was impossible. That the news should be unwelcome is regarded as a matter of course.—Ver. 33. ἐπιστραφεὶς: the compound instead of the simple verb in Mt., which Mk. does not use.—ἰδὼν τ. μαθ.: the rebuke is administered for the benefit of all, not merely to put down Peter. This resistance to the cross must be grappled with at once and decisively. What Peter said, all felt. In Mk.'s report of the rebuke the words σκάνδαλον εἰ ἐμοῦ are omitted. On the saying vide in Mt.

Vv. 34-38. First lesson on the cross.—Ver. 34. τὸν ὄχλον, the crowd. Even here! A surprise; is it not a mistake? So appears to think Weiss, who (in Meyer) accounts for the reference to a crowd by supposing that the words of Mt. x. 38 are in his mind, which are given in Lk. xiv. 25 as spoken to a crowd, probably because they were so given in his source. Jesus certainly desired to be private at this time, and in the neighbourhood of Caesarea Philippi ought to have succeeded.—Ver. 35. τοῦ εὐαγγελίου: for my sake and the Gospel's, an addition of Mk.'s, possibly a gloss.—σώσει, instead of the more enigmatical εὕρησει of Mt.—Ver. 38 reproduces the logion in Mt. x. 33 concerning being ashamed of Jesus, which does not find a place here in Mt.'s version. In Mt.'s form it is the outward ostensible act of

IX. 1. Καὶ ἔλεγεν αὐτοῖς, “Ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι εἰς τινὲς τῶν ὧδ<sup>1</sup> ἔσθηκότων, οἵτινες οὐ μὴ γεύσωνται θανάτου, ἕως ἂν ἴδωσι τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐληλυθυῖαν ἐν δυνάμει.”

2. Καὶ μεθ’ ἡμέρας ἕξ παραλαμβάνει ὁ Ἰησοῦς τὸν Πέτρον καὶ τὸν Ἰάκωβον καὶ τὸν Ἰωάννην, καὶ ἀναφέρει αὐτοὺς εἰς ὄρος ὑψηλὸν κατ’ ἰδίαν μόνους· καὶ μετεμορφώθη ἔμπροσθεν αὐτῶν, 3. καὶ τὰ ἱμάτια αὐτοῦ ἐγένετο<sup>2</sup> στίλβοντα, λευκὰ λίαν ὡς χιῶν,<sup>3</sup> ὅσα γναφεὺς ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς οὐ δύναται<sup>4</sup> λευκᾶναι. 4. καὶ ὤφθη αὐτοῖς Ἠλίας σὺν Μωσεῖ, καὶ ἦσαν συλλαλοῦντες τῷ Ἰησοῦ. 5. καὶ ἀποκριθεὶς ὁ Πέτρος λέγει τῷ Ἰησοῦ, “Ῥαββί, καλὸν ἐστὶν ἡμᾶς ὧδε εἶναι· καὶ ποιήσωμεν σκηνὰς τρεῖς,<sup>5</sup> σοὶ μίαν, καὶ Μωσεῖ μίαν, καὶ Ἠλίᾳ

<sup>1</sup> ὧδε των in BD; των ὧδε a correction of style.

<sup>2</sup> ἤBCD al. pl. have ἐγενετο as in T.R., which nevertheless is probably a correction of ἐγενοντο in DL to suit the neut. pl. nom.

<sup>3</sup> ὡς χιων is a gloss (Mt. xxviii. 3); not in ἤBCLΔ.

<sup>4</sup> οὕτως follows in ἤBCLΔ, omitted as superfluous in T.R.

<sup>5</sup> τρεῖς σκηνας in ἤBCLΔ 33.

denial that is animadverted on; here the feeling of shame, which is its cause—ix. 1.—καὶ ἔλεγεν αὐτοῖς: with this phrase Mk. makes a new start, and turns the close of the Caesarea Philippi conversation into an introduction to the following narrative concerning the transfiguration, apparently suggesting that in the latter event the words found their fulfilment. This impression, if it existed, does not bind the interpreter.—ἀμὴν, introducing a solemn statement.—ἕως ἂν ἴδωσιν, etc.: the promised vision is differently described in the three accounts, as thus:—

Till they see: the Son of Man coming in His Kingdom (Mt.).

Till they see: the Kingdom of God come (ἐληλυθυῖαν) in power (Mk.).

Till they see: the Kingdom of God (Lk.).

CHAPTER IX. THE TRANSFIGURATION. THE EPILEPTIC. SECOND ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE PASSION. RETURN TO CAPERNAUM AND CONVERSATION THERE.

—Vv. 2-13. The transfiguration (Mt. xvii. 1-13, Lk. ix. 28-36).—Ver. 2. ἀναφέρει with accusative of person = to lead, a usage unknown to the Greeks. So in Mt.; Lk. avoids the expression.—κατ’ ἰδίαν μόνους, apart alone, a pleonasm, yet μόνους, in Mk. only, is not superfluous. It emphasises the κατ’ ἰδίαν, and expresses the passion for solitude. Strictly, it refers only to the three disciples as opposed to the nine, but it really reflects the feeling of Jesus, His desire to be alone with three select companions for a season.—Ver. 3. στίλβοντα, glittering; here only in N. T., common in classics; in Sept. of bright brass (Ezra viii. 27); “flashing sword” (R. V., Nahum iii. 3); sunshine on shields (1 Macc. vi. 39).—λευκὰ λίαν, white very. All the evangelists become descriptive. Mk., as was to be expected, goes beyond the two others.—ὡς χιῶν (T.R.) is a tempting addition, especially if Hermon was the scene, but it so adequately expresses the highest degree of whiteness, that alongside of it λίαν and the following words, ὅσα, etc., would have been superfluous.—γναφεὺς, a fuller, here only in N. T. (ἀγνάφον in ii. 21).—ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, suggesting a contrast between what fullers on this earth can do in the way of whitening cloth, and the heaven-wrought brightness of Christ’s garments (Schanz).—Ver. 4. Ἠλίας σὺν M.: Elijah first, not as the more important, but because of his special significance in connection with Messiah’s advent, which was the subject of subsequent conversation (ver. 9 ff.).—Ver. 5. Ῥαββί, Rabbi: each evangelist has a different word here.—καλόν, etc. On this vide notes in Mt.—ποιήσωμεν: let us make, not let me make as in Mt. (vide notes there).—σοὶ μίαν καὶ Μωσεῖ, etc.: Moses now comes before Elijah.—Ver. 6. τί ἀποκριθῆ, what he should answer—to the vision; he did not know

μίαν." 6. Οὐ γὰρ ἤδει τί λαλήσῃ<sup>1</sup>· ἦσαν γὰρ ἔκφοβοι.<sup>2</sup> 7. καὶ ἐγένετο νεφέλη<sup>3</sup> ἐπισκιάζουσα αὐτοῖς· καὶ ἦλθε<sup>3</sup> φωνὴ ἐκ τῆς νεφέλης, λέγουσα,<sup>4</sup> "Οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ υἱός μου ὁ ἀγαπητός· αὐτοῦ ἀκούετε."<sup>5</sup> 8. Καὶ ἐξάπινα περιβλεψάμενοι, οὐκέτι οὐδένα εἶδον, ἀλλὰ τὸν Ἰησοῦν μόνον μεθ' ἐαυτῶν. 9. Καταβαινόντων δὲ<sup>6</sup> αὐτῶν ἀπὸ<sup>7</sup> τοῦ ὄρους, διεστέλλατο αὐτοῖς ἵνα μηδενὶ διηγήσωνται ἃ εἶδον,<sup>8</sup> εἰ μὴ ὅταν ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἐκ νεκρῶν ἀναστῆ. 10. καὶ τὸν λόγον ἐκράτησαν πρὸς ἑαυτοῦς, συζητοῦντες τί ἐστι τό, ἐκ νεκρῶν ἀναστῆναι. 11. Καὶ ἐπηρώτων αὐτόν, λέγοντες, "Ὅτι λέγουσιν οἱ γραμματεῖς, ὅτι Ἥλιαν δεῖ ἔλθειν πρῶτον;" 12. Ὁ δὲ ἀποκριθεὶς,

<sup>1</sup> ἀποκριθῆ in SBCLΔ 33.

<sup>2</sup> For ἦσαν γὰρ ἐκ. SBCLΔ have ἐκφοβοὶ γὰρ ἐγενοντο.

<sup>3</sup> ἐγενετο again in SBCLΔ; ἦλθε a correction of style.

<sup>4</sup> SBCL al. omit λέγουσα (from parall.).

<sup>5</sup> ἀκούετε αὐτου in SBCLΔ 33.

<sup>6</sup> καὶ καταβ. in SBCLΔ 33.

<sup>7</sup> BD 33 have ἐκ.

<sup>8</sup> α εἶδον before διηγ. in SBCLΔ.

what else to make of it than that Moses and Elijah had come to stay. This is probably an apologetic remark added by the evangelist to the original narrative. Lk. reproduces it in a somewhat altered form.—ἐκφοβοὶ: they were frightened out of their wits (again in Heb. xii. 21); explains the stupidity of Peter. The fear created by the sudden preternatural sight made him talk nonsense. Mt. makes the fear follow the Divine voice.—Ver. 7. καὶ ἐγένετο, before νεφέλη, and again before φωνή, in each place instead of Mt.'s ἰδοῦ; in both cases pointing to something remarkable: an overshadowing cloud, and a mysterious voice from the cloud.—Ver. 8. ἐξάπινα, suddenly, a form belonging to late Greek = ἐξαπίνης = ἐξαίφνης: here only in N. T.; several times in Sept. Kypke cites examples from the Psalms of Solomon and Jamblichus. The word here qualifies not περιβλεψάμενοι, but the change in the state of things which they discovered (εἶδον) on looking around.—οὐκέτι οὐδένα ἀλλά, etc.; no longer any one except (ἀλλὰ=εἰ μὴ after a negative).—τὸν Ἰησοῦν, etc.: Jesus alone with themselves: the whole celestial vision gone as quickly as it came.

Vv. 9-13. Conversation during the descent, not given in Lk.—Ver. 10. τὸν λόγον ἐκράτησαν, they kept the word; i. e., if the verb be taken in the sense of vii. 3, 4, 8, gave heed to the Master's prohibition of speech concerning what had just happened, at least till after the resurrection—strictly complied with His wish. If we connect πρὸς ἑαυτοῦς with ἐκράτ., the meaning will be: they kept the saying to (with) themselves (A. V.), or rather, taking λόγον in the sense of "thing," they kept the matter—what had happened—to themselves: did not speak about it. The sense is the same in effect, but the latter is perhaps the better connection of words, as if πρὸς ἐ. were intended to go with συζητοῦντες it would more naturally have come after it.—τί ἐστι τό, etc.: the reference to the resurrection in the prohibition of the Master puzzled and troubled the three disciples: resurrection—His own, and soon, in our time; but that implies death; whereof, indeed, He lately spoke to us, but how hard to receive! Peter's resistance, sympathised with by his brethren, not yet overcome. They speak of it to one another, though not again to the Master.—Ver. 11. ὅτι λέγουσιν, etc.: this may be taken as an indirect or suggested rather than expressed question, ὅτι being recitative, as in ii. 16 = the Pharisees and scribes say, etc.,—how about that? (Weiss in Meyer), or, writing not ὅτι but ὅ, τι (neuter of ὅστις), as an instance of the use of this pronoun as an interrogative in a direct question (Meyer, Schanz, vide also Burton, M. and T., § 349). De Wette takes ὅτι = τί ὅτι after Beza and Grotius (who calls it one of Mk.'s Hebraisms).—Ver. 12. The construction of this sentence also is somewhat puzzling. After Ἥλιος

εἶπεν<sup>1</sup> αὐτοῖς, “Ἡλίας μὲν ἔλθων πρῶτον, ἀποκαριστᾶ<sup>2</sup> πάντα· καὶ πῶς γέγραπται ἐπὶ τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, ἵνα πολλὰ πάθῃ καὶ ἐξουδενωθῇ.<sup>3</sup> 13. ἀλλὰ λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι καὶ Ἡλίας ἐλήλυθε, καὶ ἐποίησαν αὐτῷ ὅσα ἠθέλησαν,<sup>4</sup> καθὼς γέγραπται ἐπ’ αὐτόν.”

14. Καὶ ἔλθων<sup>5</sup> πρὸς τοὺς μαθητάς, εἶδεν<sup>5</sup> ὄχλον πολὺν περὶ αὐτούς, καὶ γραμματεῖς συζητοῦντας αὐτοῖς.<sup>6</sup> 15. καὶ εὐθέως πᾶς ὁ ὄχλος ἰδὼν<sup>7</sup> αὐτόν, ἐξεθαμβήθη,<sup>7</sup> καὶ προστρέχοντες ἠσπάζοντο αὐτόν. 16. καὶ ἐπρωτότησε τοὺς γραμματεῖς,<sup>8</sup> “Τί συζητεῖτε πρὸς

<sup>1</sup> For ἀποκ. εἶπεν  $\aleph$ BCLΔ have simply εφη.

<sup>2</sup> ἀποκαθιστάνει in ALΔ (-τισ- in B, W.H., -τασ- in D).

<sup>3</sup> Vide below.

<sup>4</sup> ἠθελον in  $\aleph$ BCDL.

<sup>5</sup> ελθοντες, ειδον in  $\aleph$ BLΔ.

<sup>6</sup> προς αυτους in  $\aleph$ BCILΔ.

<sup>7</sup> ιδοντες, εξεθαμβηθησαν in  $\aleph$ BCILΔ (εθαμβησαν in D). <sup>8</sup>  $\aleph$ BDLΔ have αυτους.

comes μὲν in the best MSS., raising expectation of a δὲ in the apodosis, instead of which we have καὶ (πῶς γέγραπται). Examples of such substitution occur in classic authors; concerning which Klotz, Devar., p. 659, remarks: when καὶ, τέ, or the like are put for δὲ after μὲν, it is not properly a case of construction, but rather: “quaedam quasi legitima orationis ἀνακολουθία”. Perhaps we are at a loss from merely reading the words instead of hearing them spoken with a pause between first and second half of sentence, thus: Elias, indeed, coming first, restoreth all things (so teach the scribes)—and how stands it written about the Son of Man?—that He should suffer many things and be set at nought! The aim is to awaken thought in the mind of the disciples by putting together things incongruous. All things to be restored in preparation for Messiah; Messiah Himself to suffer and be set at nought: what then can the real function and fate of Elijah the restorer be? Who is Elijah?—ἐξουδενηθῆ: this form, found in BD and adopted by W.H., is rare. The verb occurs in three forms—ἐξουδενέω, ἐξουδενώω (T.R.), ἐξουθενέω; the latter two in more common use. The word in any form is late Greek. Vide Grimm's Lexicon, and Lobeck, Phryn., p. 181 (from ἐξ, οὐδέν or οὐθέν = to treat as nought).—Ver. 13 contains Christ's own view of Elijah's coming, which differs both from that of the scribes and from that of the disciples, who found it realised in the vision on the hill.—καθὼς γέγραπται ἐπ’ αὐτόν: the reference is to the persecution of Elijah by Jezebel, the obvious intention being to suggest the identification of the expected prophet with the Baptist. All pointing to one conclusion—suffering the appointed lot of the faithful servants of God in this evil world: Elijah, John, Jesus. That, the lesson Jesus wished by all means to inculcate: the δεῖ πολλὰ παθεῖν, now, and henceforth, to the end.

Vv. 14-29. The epileptic boy (Mt. xvii. 14-21, Lk. ix. 37-43). The story is told in Mark with much greater fullness than in the parallels.—Ver. 14. ὄχλον πολὺν: the great crowd and the fact that the disciples at the foot of the hill, the nine, had been asked to heal the sufferer, are in favour of the view that the scene of the transfiguration was less remote than Hermon from the familiar theatre of the healing ministry of Jesus and His disciples.—γραμματεῖς συζητοῦντας π. α., scribes wrangling with them, the nine. This is peculiar to Mark, but the situation is easily conceivable: the disciples have tried to heal the boy and failed (ver. 18); the scribes, delighted with the failure, taunt them with it, and suggest by way of explanation the waning power of the Master, whose name they had vainly attempted to conjure with. The baffled nine make the best defence they can, or perhaps listen in silence.—Ver. 15. ἐξεθαμβήθησαν, were utterly amazed, used by Mark only in N. T., here, and in xiv. 33 and xvi. 5 in connections which demand a very strong sense. What was there in common in the three situations: the returned Master, the agony in the garden, and the appearance of the angel at the resurrection? A surprise; which, whether sorrowful or joyful, always gives a certain emotional shock. The Master

αυτούς;" 17. Καὶ ἀποκριθεὶς<sup>1</sup> εἰς ἐκ τοῦ ὄχλου, εἶπε,<sup>1</sup> " Διδάσκαλε, ἤνεγκα τὸν υἱόν μου πρὸς σε, ἔχοντα πνεῦμα ἄλλalon. 18. καὶ ὅπου ἂν αὐτὸν καταλάβῃ, ῥήσσει αὐτόν· καὶ ὁ ἀφρίζει, καὶ ἄτριξε τοὺς ὀδόντας αὐτοῦ,<sup>2</sup> καὶ ἔξηραίνεται· καὶ εἶπον τοῖς μαθηταῖς σου ἵνα αὐτὸ ἐκβάλωσι, καὶ οὐκ ἴσχυσαν." 19. Ὁ δὲ ἀποκριθεὶς αὐτῷ,<sup>3</sup> λέγει, " ὦ γενεὰ ἄπιστος, ἕως πότε πρὸς ὑμᾶς ἔσομαι; ἕως πότε ἀνεξομαι ὑμῶν; φέρετε αὐτὸν πρὸς με." 20. Καὶ ἤνεγκαν αὐτὸν πρὸς αὐτόν· καὶ ἰδὼν αὐτόν, εὐθέως τὸ πνεῦμα ἐσπάραξεν<sup>4</sup> αὐτόν· καὶ πεσὼν ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, ἐκυλίετο ἀφρίζων. 21. Καὶ ἐπηρώτησε τὸν πατέρα αὐτοῦ, " Πόσος χρόνος ἐστίν, ὡς τοῦτο γέγονεν αὐτῷ;" Ὁ δὲ εἶπε, " Παιδιόθεν.<sup>5</sup> 22. καὶ πολλάκις αὐτόν καὶ εἰς πῦρ<sup>6</sup> ἔβαλε καὶ εἰς ὕδατα, ἵνα ἀπολέσῃ αὐτόν· ἀλλ' εἶ τι δύνασαι.<sup>7</sup>

<sup>1</sup> ἀπεκριθη αὐτῷ without εἶπε in ΞBDLΔ 33.

<sup>2</sup> Omit αὐτοῦ ΞBCDLΔ 33.

<sup>4</sup> το πν. ευθυς συνεσπαραξεν in ΞBCLΔ 33.

<sup>6</sup> αὐτοῦ after καὶ εἰς πῦρ in ΞBCLΔ.

<sup>3</sup> αὐτοῖς in ΞABDLΔ 33.

<sup>5</sup> ἐκ παιδ. in ΞBCILΔ 33.

<sup>7</sup> δυνα in ΞBDILΔ.

reappears, when He is not looked for, when He is needed, and when His name is being taken in vain, perhaps not without a certain sympathy on the part of the volatile crowd not accustomed hitherto to miscarriage of attempts at healing when the name of Jesus was invoked. In that case their feeling would be a compound of confusion and gladness—ashamed and yet delighted to see Him, both betrayed in their manner.—Ver. 16. ἐπηρώτησεν αὐτούς, He asked them, i. e., the people who in numbers ran to meet Him. Jesus had noticed, as He drew near, that there was a dispute going on in which the disciples were concerned, and not knowing the composition of the crowd, He proceeds on the assumption that they had all a share in it = the crowd as a whole versus the nine.—Ver. 17. The father of the sick boy answers for the company, explaining the situation, laying the main stress of course on the deplorable condition of his child.—πρὸς σε, to thee, not aware that Jesus was absent.—πνεῦμα ἄλλalon, a dumb spirit; the boy dumb, and therefore by inference the spirit.—Ver. 18. ὅπου ἂν α. καταλάβῃ, wherever it happens to seize him. The possession (ἔχοντα, ver. 17) is conceived of as intermittent; "the way of the spirit inferred from the characteristic phenomena of the disease" (The Miraculous Element in the Gospels, p. 181). Then follows a graphic description of the ensuing symptoms: spasms (ῥήσσει, a late form of ῥήγγνμι), foaming (ἀφρίζει from ἀφρός: he, the boy, foameth), grinding of the teeth (ρίζει τ. ὀδ.), then the final stage of motionless stupor graphically described as withering (ξηραίνεται), for which Euthy. gives as an equivalent ἀναισθητεῖ, and Weizsäcker "und wird starr".

Ver. 19. The complaint of Jesus, vide on Matthew.—Observe the πρὸς ὑμᾶς instead of Matthew's μεθ' ὑμῶν. = how long shall I be in relations with you, have to do with you?—Ver. 20. ἰδὼν may be taken as referring to the boy (Schanz), in which case we should have an anacolouthistic nominative for the accusative, the writer having in view to express his meaning in passives (ἐκυλίετο); or to the spirit (πνεῦμα) by a construction ad sensum = the spirit seeing Jesus made a last attack (Weiss in Meyer, et al.). This is most in keeping with the mode of conceiving the matter natural to the evangelist. The visible fact was a fresh fit, and the explanation, from the possession point of view, that the spirit, seeing Jesus, and knowing that his power was at an end, made a final assault.—Ver. 21. ὡς: a particle of time, here as frequently in Luke and John = since, or when.—ἐκ παιδιόθεν, ἐκ redundant, similar to ἀπὸ μακρόθεν (v. 6).—Ver. 22. εἶ τι δύνη, if Thou canst do anything (A. and R. Vv.), or better, if anyhow Thou canst help. The father speaks under the impression that the case, as he has just described it, is one of peculiar difficulty; therefore while the leper said

βοήθησον ἡμῖν, σπλαγχνισθεὶς ἐφ' ἡμᾶς." 23. Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν αὐτῷ, "Τό, εἰ δύνασαι πιστεῦσαι,<sup>1</sup> πάντα δυνατὰ τῷ πιστεύοντι." 24. Καὶ εὐθέως κράξας ὁ πατήρ τοῦ παιδίου, μετὰ δακρῶν<sup>2</sup> ἔλεγε, "Πιστεύω, Κύριε,<sup>4</sup> βοήθει μου τῇ ἀπιστίᾳ." 25. Ἰδὼν δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς ὅτι ἐπισυντρέχει ὄχλος, ἐπέτιμήσε τῷ πνεύματι τῷ ἀκαθάρτῳ, λέγων αὐτῷ, "Τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἄλαλον καὶ κωφόν,<sup>5</sup> ἐγὼ σοι ἐπιτάσσω,<sup>5</sup> ἔξελθε ἐξ αὐτοῦ, καὶ μηκέτι εἰσέλθῃς εἰς αὐτόν." 26. Καὶ κράξαν, καὶ πολλὰ σπαραξάν αὐτόν,<sup>6</sup> ἐξῆλθε· καὶ ἐγένετο ὡσεὶ νεκρός, ὥστε πολλοὺς<sup>7</sup> λέγειν ὅτι ἀπέθανεν. 27. ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς κρατήσας αὐτὸν τῆς χειρός,<sup>8</sup> ἤγειρεν αὐτόν· καὶ ἀνέστη.

28. Καὶ εἰσελθόντα αὐτόν<sup>9</sup> εἰς οἶκον, οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ ἐπρωτῶν αὐτόν κατ' ἰδίαν,<sup>9</sup> "Ὅτι ἡμεῖς οὐκ ἠδυνήθημεν ἐκβαλεῖν αὐτό;" 29. Καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, "Τοῦτο τὸ γένος ἐν οὐδενὶ δύναται ἐξελθεῖν, εἰ μὴ ἐν προσευχῇ καὶ νηστείᾳ."<sup>10</sup>

<sup>1</sup> εἰ δυνατὴ without πιστεῦσαι (a gloss) in ΞBDA (CL δυνασαι without πισ.).

<sup>2</sup> Omit και BLD.

<sup>3</sup> Omit μετα δακ. ΞBCLA (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> Omit Κυριε ΞBCDL.

<sup>5</sup> το πνευμα after κωφον, and σοι after επιτασσω in ΞBCLA 33.

<sup>6</sup> ΞBCDL have κραξας, σπαραξας, and omit αυτον.

<sup>7</sup> τους πολ. in ΞABLA 33.

<sup>8</sup> της χειρος αυτου in ΞBDLA.

<sup>9</sup> εισελθοντος αυτου in ΞBCDLA, also κατ ιδιαν before επρωτων.

<sup>10</sup> ΞB omit και νηστεια, which comes from Mt. (T.R.).

"if Thou wilt," he says "if Thou canst". With reference to the form δύνῃ, Phryn. says that it is right after ἐάν, but that at the beginning of a sentence δύνασαι must be used (p. 359).—Ver. 23. τὸ εἰ δύνῃ, nominative absolute: as to the "if Thou canst".—πάντα δυν., all, in antithesis to the τι of the father.—Ver. 24. κράξας: eager, fear-stricken cry; making the most of his little faith, to ensure the benefit, and adding a prayer for increase of faith (βοήθει, etc.) with the idea that it would help to make the cure complete. The father's love at least was above suspicion. Meyer and Weiss render "help me even if unbelieving," arguing that the other, more common rendering is at variance with the meaning of βοήθησον in ver. 22.

Vv. 25-29. The cure.—ἐπισυντρέχει (ἄπ. λεγ.) indicates that the crowd was constantly increasing, so becoming a new crowd (ὄχλος without art.); natural in the circumstances. Jesus seeing this proceeds to cure without further delay. The spirit is now described as unclean and, with reference to the boy's symptoms, both dumb and deaf.—μηκέτι εἰσέλθῃς, enter not again. This was the essential point in a case of intermittent possession. The spirit went out at the end of each attack, but returned again.—Ver. 26 describes a final fit, apparently worse than the preceding. It was evidently an aggravated type of epilepsy, fit following on fit and producing utter exhaustion. Mark's elaborate description seems to embody the recollections of one on whom the case had made a great impression.—Ver. 28. εἰς οἶκον: into a house, when or whose not indicated, the one point of interest to the evangelist is that Jesus is now alone with His disciples.—ὅτι, recitative, here as in ver. 11, introduces a suggested question: we were not able to cast it out—why?—Ver. 29. τοῦτο τὸ γένος, etc.: This is one of the texts which very soon became misunderstood, the ascetic addition, καὶ νηστεία, being at once a proof and a cause of misunderstanding. The traditional idea has been that Jesus here prescribes a certain discipline by which the exorcist could gain power to cope successfully with the most obstinate cases of possession, a course of prayer and fasting. This idea continues to dominate the mind even when the ascetic addition to the text has come to be regarded as doubtful; witness this

30. ΚΑΙ ἐκεῖθεν ἐξεληθόντες παρεπορεύοντο<sup>1</sup> διὰ τῆς Γαλιλαίας· καὶ οὐκ ἤθελεν ἵνα τις γνῶ.<sup>2</sup> 31. ἐδίδασκε γὰρ τοὺς μαθητὰς αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἔλεγεν αὐτοῖς, “Ὅτι ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου παραδίδοται εἰς χεῖρας ἀνθρώπων, καὶ ἀποκτενοῦσιν αὐτόν· καὶ ἀποκτανθεὶς, τῇ τρίτῃ ἡμέρᾳ<sup>3</sup> ἀναστήσεται.” 32. Οἱ δὲ ἠγνόνουν τὸ ῥῆμα, καὶ ἐφοβοῦντο αὐτὸν ἐπερωτήσαι.

33. Καὶ ἦλθεν<sup>4</sup> εἰς Καπερναοὺμ· καὶ ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ γενόμενος, ἐπῆρῶτα αὐτοῦς, “Τί ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ πρὸς ἑαυτοῦς<sup>5</sup> διελογίζεσθε;”

<sup>1</sup> BD have επορευοντο (W.H. text), παρεπ. in  $\aleph$ CLA (Tisch.).

<sup>2</sup> γνοι in  $\aleph$ BCDL.

<sup>3</sup> μετα τρεις ημερας in  $\aleph$ BCDLA.

<sup>4</sup> So in CLA, ηλθον in  $\aleph$ B (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> Omit προς εαν.  $\aleph$ BCDL.

remark: “The authorisation, however (for omitting καὶ νησ.), is not sufficient. But even if it were overwhelming, fasting would, in its essence, be implied” (Morison on Mark). What Jesus said doubtless was: “This kind can go out in (on the ground of) nothing except prayer,” and His meaning that there was no hope of success except through a believing (of course faith is implied) appeal to the almighty power of God. It was a thought of the same kind as that in Mt. xix. 26 (Mk. x. 27): the impossible for man is possible for God. Of course in the view of Christ, prayer, faith (vide Mt. xvii. 20), both in healer and in healed, was needful in all cases, but He recognised that there were certain aggravated types of disease (the present, one of them) in which the sense of dependence and trust was very specially required. In the case of the epileptic boy this had been lacking both in the father and in the disciples. Neither he nor they were hopeful of cure.

Vv. 30-32. Second announcement of the Passion (Mt. xvii. 22, 23, Lk. ix. 43-45).—Ver. 30. καὶ ἐκεῖθεν ἐξεληθόντες, going forth from thence, i.e., from the scene of the last cure, wherever that was: it might be north or south of their destination (Capernaum)—Caesarea Philippi or Tabor.—παρεπορεύοντο, they passed along without tarrying anywhere. Some take the παρὰ in the compound verb to mean, went along by-ways, to avoid publicity: “diverticulo ibant, non via regia,” Grotius. It is certainly true that Jesus had become so well known in Galilee that it would be difficult for Him on the thoroughfares to escape recognition as He wished (οὐκ ἤθελεν ἵνα τις γνῶ).—Ver. 31. ἐδίδασκε γὰρ, etc.: gives the reason for this wish. It was the reason for the whole of the recent wandering outside Galilee: the desire to instruct the Twelve, and especially to prepare them for the approaching crisis.—καὶ ἔλεγεν introduces the gist or main theme of these instructions. The words following: ὅτι ὁ υἱὸς, etc., are more than an announcement made in so many words once for all: they are rather the text of Christ's whole talk with His disciples as they went along. He was so saying (ἔλεγεν, imperfect) all the time, in effect.—παραδίδοται, is betrayed, present; it is as good as done. The betrayal is the new feature in the second announcement.—Ver. 32. ἠγνόνουν: they had heard the statement before, and had not forgotten the fact, and their Master had spoken too explicitly for them to be in any doubt as to His meaning. What they were ignorant of was the why, the δαί. With all He had said, Jesus had not yet been able to make that plain. They will never know till the Passion has become a fact accomplished.—ῥῆμα, a solemn name for the utterance (vide Mt. iv. 4)= the oracular, prophetic, and withal weird, mysterious word of doom.—ἐφοβοῦντο, they feared to ask, they did not wish to understand, they would live on in hope that their Master was under a hallucination; true to human nature.

Vv. 33-50. The Twelve at school (Mt. xviii. 1-10, Lk. ix. 46-50, etc.).—Ver. 33. Καπερναοὺμ: home? This statement, more than anything else in Mk., gives the impression that Capernaum was a kind of home for Jesus.—ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ, in the house, opposed to ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ, but probably pointing to a particular house in which Jesus was wont to stay.—τί . . . διελογίζεσθε, what were ye discussing? Jesus did not always walk beside His disciples (vide x. 32). He went before,

34. Οἱ δὲ ἐσιώπων· πρὸς ἀλλήλους γὰρ <sup>ε</sup> διελέχθησαν ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ, <sup>κ</sup> here in Gospels. τὶς μείζων. 35. καὶ καθίσας <sup>h</sup> ἐφώνησε τοὺς δώδεκα, καὶ λέγει Several times in αὐτοῖς, “Εἴ τις θέλει πρῶτος εἶναι, ἔσται πάντων ἔσχατος, καὶ Acts and in Heb. πάντων διάκονος.” 36. Καὶ λαβὼν παιδίον, ἔστησεν αὐτὸ ἐν μέσῳ xii. 5. αὐτῶν· καὶ <sup>1</sup> ἐναγκαλισάμενος αὐτό, εἶπεν αὐτοῖς· 37. “Ὅς ἐὰν <sup>1</sup> ἐν <sup>h</sup> vide at Mt. xx. 32 τῶν τοιούτων παιδίων δέξηται ἐπὶ τῷ ὀνόματί μου, ἐμὲ δέχεται· καὶ <sup>j</sup> Ch. v. 16. ὅς ἐὰν <sup>1</sup> ἐμὲ δέξηται,<sup>2</sup> οὐκ ἐμὲ δέχεται, ἀλλὰ τὸν ἀποστειλαντά με.”
38. Ἀπεκρίθη δὲ <sup>3</sup> αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰωάννης, λέγων,<sup>8</sup> “Διδάσκαλε, εἰδόμεν
τινα τῷ ὀνόματί <sup>4</sup> σου ἐκβάλλοντα δαιμόνια, ὅς οὐκ ἀκολουθεῖ ἡμῖν <sup>δ</sup>·
καὶ ἐκωλύσαμεν <sup>6</sup> αὐτόν, ὅτι οὐκ ἀκολουθεῖ <sup>6</sup> ἡμῖν.” 39. Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς
εἶπε, “Μὴ κωλύετε αὐτόν· οὐδεὶς γάρ ἐστιν ὅς ποιήσει δύναμιν ἐπὶ τῷ ὀνόματί μου, καὶ δυνήσεται ταχὺ κακολογήσαί με. 40. ὅς γὰρ

<sup>1</sup> BDLΔ have an in both places, NC in the first place.

<sup>2</sup> So in CDΔΣ al. NBL have δεχεται (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> For απεκ. δε NBD have εφη and omit λεγων.

<sup>4</sup> With en prefixed in NBCDLΔΣ.

<sup>5</sup> This clause ος . . . ημιν is omitted in NBCLΔ, and treated as doubtful by modern editors. It may have been omitted to avoid redundancy (vide last clause, στι ουκ, etc.). But such redundancy is characteristic of Mk.

<sup>6</sup> εκωλυομεν in NBDLΔ, and ηκολουθει in NBCLΔ.

thinking His deep thoughts, they followed thinking their vain thoughts. The Master had noticed that something unusual was going on, divined what it was, and now asks.—Ver. 34. ἐσιώπων, they kept silent, ashamed to tell.—Ver. 35. καὶ καθίσας, etc.: every word here betokens a deliberate attempt to school the disciples in humility. The Master takes His seat (καθίσας), calls His scholars with a magisterial tone (ἐφώνησεν, for various senses in which used, vide references, Mt. xx. 32)—the Twelve (τοὺς δ.), called to an important vocation, and needing thorough discipline to be of service in it.—εἴ τις θέλει, etc.: the direct answer to the question under discussion—who the greatest? = greatness comes by humility (ἔσχατος), and service (διάκονος).—Ver. 36. The child, produced at the outset in Mt., is now brought on the scene (λαβὼν), not, however, as a model (that in x. 15), but as an object of kind treatment.—ἐναγκαλισάμενος: in Mk. only = taking it into His arms, to symbolise how all that the child represents should be treated.—Ver. 37. δέξεται in the first member of the sentence, δέχεται in the second; the former (aorist subjunctive with ἂν), the more regular in a clause expressing future possibility. Winer, xlii. 3b (a). The second member of the sentence is not in the corresponding place in Mt., but is given in Mt. x. 40. Vv. 38-41. A reminiscence (Lk. ix. 49-50). Probably an incident of the Galilean mission, introduced without connecting particle, therefore (Weiss) connection purely topical; suggested (Holtz., H. C.) to the evangelist by the expression ἐπὶ τ. ὀνόματί μου in ver. 37, answering to ἐν τ. ὀ. σ. in ver. 38.—ἐκβάλλοντα δ.: exorcists usually conjured with some name, Abraham, Solomon; this one used the name of Jesus, implying some measure of faith in His worth and power.—ἐκωλύομεν, imperfect, taken by most as implying repeated interdicts, but it may be the conative imperfect = we tried to prevent him.—οὐκ ἠκολουθεῖ, he did not follow us; the reason for the prohibition. The aloofness of the exorcist is represented as still continuing in the words ὅς οὐκ ἀκολουθεῖ (T. R.).—Ver. 39. Jesus disallows the interdict for a reason that goes deeper than the purely external one of the disciples = not of our company? well, but with us at heart.—δυνήσεται ταχὺ: points to moral impossibility; use of Christ's name in exorcism incompatible with hostile or inappreciative thought and speech of Him.—ταχὺ softens the assertion: not soon; he may do it, but

οὐκ ἔστι καθ' ἑμῶν,<sup>1</sup> ὑπὲρ ἑμῶν<sup>1</sup> ἔστιν. 41. ὃς γὰρ ἂν ποτίσῃ ἡμᾶς ποτήριον ὕδατος ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί μου,<sup>2</sup> ὅτι Χριστοῦ ἔστε, ἀμὴν λέγω ἡμῖν, οὐ μὴ ἀπολέσῃ<sup>3</sup> τὸν μισθὸν αὐτοῦ. 42. Καὶ ὃς ἂν σκανδαλίσῃ ἓνα τῶν μικρῶν<sup>4</sup> τῶν πιστευόντων εἰς ἐμέ,<sup>5</sup> καλὸν ἔστιν αὐτῷ μάλλον, εἰ<sup>1</sup> <sup>1</sup>περίκειται λίθος μυλικὸς<sup>6</sup> περὶ τὸν τράχηλον αὐτοῦ, καὶ βέβληται εἰς τὴν θάλασσαν. 43. Καὶ ἔὰν σκανδαλίξῃ<sup>7</sup> σε ἡ χεὶρ σου, ἀπόκοψον αὐτήν· καλὸν σοι ἔστί<sup>8</sup> κυλλὸν εἰς τὴν ζωὴν εἰσελθεῖν,<sup>9</sup> ἢ τὰς δύο χεῖρας ἔχοντα ἀπελθεῖν εἰς τὴν γέενναν, εἰς τὸ πῦρ τὸ ἄσβεστον, 44. ὅπου ὁ σκώληξ αὐτῶν οὐ τελευτᾷ, καὶ τὸ πῦρ οὐ σβέννυται.<sup>10</sup> 45. καὶ ἔὰν ὁ πούς σου σκανδαλίξῃ σε, ἀπόκοψον αὐτόν· καλὸν ἔστί σοι<sup>11</sup> εἰσελθεῖν εἰς τὴν ζωὴν χωλόν, ἢ τοὺς δύο πόδας ἔχοντα βληθῆναι εἰς τὴν γέενναν, εἰς τὸ πῦρ τὸ ἄσβεστον,<sup>12</sup> 46. ὅπου ὁ σκώληξ αὐτῶν οὐ τελευτᾷ, καὶ τὸ πῦρ οὐ σβέννυται.<sup>10</sup> 47. καὶ ἔὰν ὁ ὀφθαλμὸς σου σκανδαλίξῃ σε, ἔκβαλε αὐτόν· καλὸν σοι ἔστί<sup>13</sup> μονόφθαλμον εἰσελθεῖν εἰς τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἢ δύο ὀφθαλμοὺς ἔχοντα βληθῆναι εἰς τὴν γέενναν τοῦ πυρός,<sup>14</sup> 48. ὅπου ὁ

<sup>1</sup> ἡμων in both places in ΞBCD.

<sup>2</sup> εν ονοματι simply in BCLΣ (W.H.), εν ον. μου in ΞΔΑ (Tisch.).

<sup>3</sup> οτι before ου μη in ΞBCDLΔ.

<sup>4</sup> τουτων after μικρων in ΞBCDLΔ.

<sup>5</sup> εις εμε may come from Mt., though it is in ΞBLΣ; wanting in ΞΔ (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>6</sup> μυλος ονικος in ΞBCDLΔ may be a conforming to Mt., but T.R. more probably conforms to Lk.

<sup>7</sup> σκανδαλιση in ΞBLΔ.

<sup>8</sup> εστιν σε in ΞBCLΔ.

<sup>9</sup> εισελθειν before εις in ΞBCDLΔ.

<sup>10</sup> Ver. 44 is wanting in ΞBCLΔ, some minusc. and verss., also ver. 46 (Tisch., W.H. om.).

<sup>11</sup> σε in ΞABCLΔ.

<sup>12</sup> Omit εις το . . . ασβεστον ΞBCLΔ.

<sup>13</sup> σε εστιν in ΞB.

<sup>14</sup> του πυρος omit ΞBDLΔ (BL omit την before γεενναν).

it will mean a change of mind, and disuse of my name.—Ver. 40. The counterpart truth to that in Mt. x. 30. Both truths, and easily harmonised. It is in both cases a question of tendency; a little sympathy inclines to grow to more, so also with a lack of sympathy. Vide on Mt. xii. 30.—Ver. 41 = Mt. x. 42, but a later secondary form of the saying: ποτήριον ὕδατος for π. ψυχροῦ, and ὅτι Χριστοῦ ἔστί instead of εἰς ὄν. μαθητοῦ.

Vv. 42-48. After the episode of the exorcist the narrative returns to the discourse broken off at ver. 38. From receiving little children and all they represent, Jesus passes to speak of the sin of causing them to stumble.—Ver. 42. καλόν, etc.: well for him; rather = better. Each evangelist has his own word here: Mt. συμφέρει, Lk. (xvii. 2) λυσιτελεῖ; but Mk., according to the best attested reading, has the strong phrase μύλος ὀνικὸς in common with Mt. He is content, however, with the expression "in the sea," instead of Mt.'s "in the deep part of the sea," the faithful reproduction, probably, of what Jesus actually said.—Ver. 43. The offender of the little ones is still more an offender against himself, hence the discourse by an easy transition passes to counsels against such folly. In Mk.'s version these are given in a most particular way, hand, foot and eye being each used separately to illustrate the common admonition. In Mt. hand and foot are combined. In the third illustration εἰς τὴν ζωὴν is replaced by εἰς τ. βασιλείαν τ. θ. The refrain: "where the worm, etc.," is repeated in T. R. with solemn effect after each example, but the best MSS. have it only after the third, vv 44, 46 being thus omitted (R. V.).

σκόληξ αὐτῶν οὐ τελευτᾷ, καὶ τὸ πῦρ οὐ σβέννυται. 49. Πᾶς γὰρ
 πυρὶ ἀλισθησεται, καὶ πᾶσα θυσία ἀλὶ ἀλισθησεται.<sup>1</sup> 50. καλὸν τὸ
 ἄλας· ἐὰν δὲ τὸ ἄλας ἄναλον γένηται, ἐν τίνι αὐτὸ ἔαρτύσετε; k Lk. xiv.
 ἔχετε ἐν ἑαυτοῖς ἄλας,<sup>2</sup> καὶ εἰρηνεύετε ἐν ἀλλήλοις.” 34. Col.
 iv. 6.

<sup>1</sup> This last clause is omitted in  $\aleph$ B $\Delta$ , many minusc. (Tisch., W.H., vide below).

<sup>2</sup> ἄλα in  $\aleph$ ABD $\Delta$ .

Vv. 49-50. Salting inevitable and indispensable. These verses appear only in Mk. as part of this discourse. The logion in ver. 50 corresponds to Mt. v. 13, Lk. xiv. 34-35.—Ver. 49 is a crux interpretum, and has given rise to great diversity of interpretation (vide Meyer, ad loc.). Three questions may be asked. (1) What is the correct form of the saying? (2) Was it spoken at this time by Jesus? (3) If it was, how is it to be connected with the previous context? As to (1) some important MSS. ( $\aleph$ B $\Delta$  and the new Syr. Sin.) omit the second half of the sentence, retaining only “every one shall be salted with fire”. D and some copies of the old Lat. omit the first part and retain the second. W. and H. retain only part 1. Weiss and Schanz think that the text must be taken in its entirety, and that part 2 fell out by homoeoteleuton, or was omitted because of its difficulty. Holtzmann, H. C., is inclined to favour the reading of D. It is difficult to decide between these alternatives, though I personally lean to the first of the three, not only because of the weighty textual testimony, but, as against D, on account of the startling character of the thought, salted with fire, its very boldness witnessing for its authenticity. As to (2) I think it highly probable that such thoughts as vv. 49-50 contain were spoken at this time by Jesus. The two thoughts, salting inevitable and salting indispensable, were thoroughly apposite to the situation: a master teaching men in danger of moral shipwreck through evil passion, and unless reformed sure to prove unfit for the work to which they were destined. I cannot therefore agree with Holtzmann (H. C.) that Mk., misled by the word  $\pi\upsilon\rho$  in ver. 48, has brought in here a logion spoken at some other time. As to (3) I see no necessity to regard γὰρ, ver. 49, as binding us down to a close exclusive connection with ver. 48, requiring us to interpret ver. 49a thus: every one that does not cut off the offending member shall be salted by the fire of hell; itself quenchless, and not destroying its victim, as it is the nature of ordinary fire to do, but rather preserving him for eternal torment, like salt. Thus viewed, ver. 49a is a mere comment on the words οὐ σβέννυται. The saying should rather be taken in connection with the whole course of thought in vv. 43-48, in which case it will bear this sense: “every one must be salted somehow, either with the unquenchable fire of gehenna, or with the fire of severe self-discipline. Wise is he who chooses the latter alternative.” If we ignore the connection with ver. 48, and restrict πᾶς to the disciple-circle, this alternative rendering will be avoided, and the idea will be: every man who is to come to any good, will, must, be salted with fire. In that case, however, it is difficult to account for the unusual combination of salt and fire, whose functions are so opposed. 49b is of quite subordinate importance, merely at best a parabolic aid to thought. Grotius and others divide the sacrifices into two classes answering to the two forms of salting: burnt offerings typifying those consumed in hell, peace offerings those preserved by self-discipline.—Ver. 50 sets forth the other great truth: salting in the form of self-discipline indispensable.—καλὸν τὸ ἄλας, an excellent thing is salt; a most seasonable truth just then. What follows seems less so, as it stands in Mk.’s text. As spoken by Jesus, if we may assume that it was spoken on this occasion, it might come in quite naturally. The three thoughts in this verse: salt good, care must be taken that it lose not its virtue, have salt in yourselves, may be merely themes packed together in a single sentence, on which Jesus discoursed at length.—ἀναλον, ἄπ. λεγ. in N. T., used in later Greek; μωρανθῆ in Mt. and Lk.—ἔχετε ἐν ἑαυτοῖς ἄλα, have salt in yourselves. In the two former clauses disciples are thought of, as in Mt. v. 13, as themselves salt for the world. Here they are viewed as the subject of the salting process. They must be salted in order to be salt to the world, their

X. 1. ΚΑΚΕΙΘΕΝ<sup>1</sup> ἀναστὰς ἔρχεται εἰς τὰ ὄρια τῆς Ἰουδαίας, διὰ τοῦ<sup>2</sup> πέραν τοῦ Ἰορδάνου· καὶ συμπορεύονται πάλιν ὄχλοι πρὸς αὐτόν· καὶ ὡς εἴωθει, πάλιν ἐδίδασκεν αὐτούς. 2. Καὶ προσελθόντες οἱ<sup>3</sup> Φαρισαῖοι ἐπηρώτησαν<sup>3</sup> αὐτόν, εἰ ἔξεστιν ἀνδρὶ γυναῖκα ἀπολῦσαι, πειράζοντες αὐτόν. 3. ὁ δὲ ἀποκριθεὶς εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Τί ὑμῖν ἐνετείλατο Μωσῆς;” 4. Οἱ δὲ εἶπον, “Μωσῆς ἐπέτρεψε<sup>4</sup> βιβλίον ἀποστασίου γράψαι, καὶ ἀπολῦσαι.” 5. Καὶ ἀποκριθεὶς ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν<sup>5</sup> αὐτοῖς, “Πρὸς τὴν σκληροκαρδίαν ὑμῶν ἔγραψεν ὑμῖν τὴν

<sup>1</sup> καὶ ἐκειθεν in ΞBCDΔ.

<sup>2</sup> καὶ instead of δια του in ΞBCL; περαν without καὶ in DΔ. The καὶ caused trouble to scribes, some omitted it after Mt., some substituted δια του as in T.R.

<sup>3</sup> BLD omit οἱ (added here as usual), and ΞBCDΔ have the imperfect ἐπηρωτων instead of the aorist so often substituted for it in T.R. (again in ver. 10).

<sup>4</sup> ἐπετρεψεν M. in ΞBDLΔ.

<sup>5</sup> For καὶ . . . εἶπεν read with ΞBCLΔ ο δε Ι. εἶπεν.

ulterior vocation. Meantime a more immediate effect of their being salted is pointed out in the closing words.—εἰρηνεύετε ἐν ἀλλήλοις: be at peace with one another; which they were not. The cause of dispeace was ambition. The salting would consist in getting rid of that evil spirit at whatever cost.—εἰρηνεύετε: a Pauline word, remarks Holtz. (H. C.). True, but why not also a word of Jesus? certainly very apposite to the occasion.

Note.—Salting of disciples imports suffering pain, but is not to be confounded with the cross-bearing of faithful disciples (viii. 34). The former is the discipline of self-denial necessary to make a man a follower of Christ worthy of the name. The latter is the tribulation that comes on all who follow closely in the footsteps of Christ. The one is needful to make us holy, the other overtakes us when and because we are holy.

CHAPTER X. MARRIAGE QUESTION. LITTLE CHILDREN. QUEST AFTER ETERNAL LIFE. TWO SONS OF ZEBEDEE. BARTIMAEUS.—Ver. 1. The departure from Galilee (Mt. xix. 1).—ἐκεῖθεν ἀναστὰς, as in vii. 24, q.v.; there, of a departure from Galilee which was followed by a return (ix. 33), here, of a final departure, so far as we know. Beza finds in the expression a Hebraism—to sit is to remain in a place, to rise is to depart from it. Kypke renders, et inde discedens, and gives classic examples of the usage.—εἰς τὰ ὄρια τ. Ἰ. καὶ πέραν, etc., into the borders of Judaea and of Peraea; how reached not indicated. The reading of T. R. διὰ τοῦ πέραν τ. Ἰ. gives the route. Vide on Mt., ad loc., where the

καὶ (of ΞBCL) is omitted.—συμπορεύονται πάλιν, crowds again gather.—ὄχλοι, plural; here only, with reference to the different places passed through.—ὡς εἴωθει, as He was wont; remarked ὄν, because the habit had been suspended for a season during which the whole attention of Jesus had been devoted to the Twelve. That continues to be the case mainly still. In every incident the Master has an eye to the lesson for the disciples. And the evangelist takes pains to make the lesson prominent. Possibly his incidents are selected and grouped with that in view: marriage, children, money, etc. (so Weiss in Meyer).—ἐδίδασκεν, He continued teaching, so also in vi. 34. In both places Mt. (xiv. 14, xix. 2) speaks of healing. Yet Mk.'s Gospel is a gospel of acts, Mt.'s of words. Each is careful to make prominent, in general notices, what he comparatively neglects in detail.

Vv. 2-12. The question of divorce (Mt. xix. 3-12).—ἀπολῦσαι: the question is put absolutely, the qualifying clause κατὰ πᾶσαν αἰτίαν in Mt. being omitted. Thus put the question presupposes knowledge of Christ's high doctrine as to marriage, and is an attempt to bring Him into collision with the Mosaic law, as absolutely interdicting what it allowed.—Ver. 3. τί ὑμῖν ἐνετείλατο M.: here Jesus has in view not what Moses allowed in Deut. xxiv. 1, but what he in Genesis enjoined as the ideal state of things (Moses from the Jewish point of view author of the Pentateuch and all its legislation). They naturally supposed He had in view the former (ver. 4).—Ver. 5

ἐντολήν ταύτην· 6. ἀπὸ δὲ ἀρχῆς κτίσεως, ἄρσεν καὶ θήλυ ἐποίησεν αὐτοὺς ὁ Θεός.<sup>1</sup> 7. ἔνεκεν τούτου καταλείψει ἄνθρωπος τὸν πατέρα αὐτοῦ καὶ τὴν μητέρα· καὶ προσκολληθήσεται πρὸς τὴν γυναῖκα αὐτοῦ,<sup>2</sup> 8. καὶ ἔσονται οἱ δύο εἰς σάρκα μίαν· ὥστε οὐκέτι εἰσὶ δύο, ἀλλὰ μία σὰρξ. 9. ὁ οὖν ὁ Θεὸς συνέzeugen, ἄνθρωπος μὴ χωριζέτω.” 10. Καὶ ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ<sup>3</sup> πάλιν οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ περὶ τοῦ αὐτοῦ ἐπηρώτησαν<sup>4</sup> αὐτόν. 11. καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς, “Ὁς ἐὰν ἀπολύσῃ τὴν γυναῖκα αὐτοῦ καὶ γαμήσῃ ἄλλην, μοιχᾶται ἐπ’ αὐτήν· 12. καὶ ἐὰν γυνὴ<sup>5</sup> ἀπολύσῃ τὸν ἄνδρα αὐτῆς καὶ<sup>6</sup> γαμηθῇ ἄλλω,<sup>7</sup> μοιχᾶται. 13. Καὶ προσέφερον αὐτῷ παιδία, ἵνα ἄψηται αὐτῶν· οἱ δὲ μαθηταὶ ἐπετίμων τοῖς προσφέρουσιν.<sup>8</sup> 14. ἰδὼν δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἠγανάκτησε, καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Ἄφετε τὰ παιδία ἔρχεσθαι πρὸς με, καὶ<sup>7</sup> μὴ κωλύετε αὐτά· τῶν γὰρ τοιούτων ἐστὶν ἡ βασιλεία τοῦ

<sup>1</sup> Omit ο θεος N<sup>2</sup>BCLΔ. D has ο θ., and omits αὐτους (W.H. omit ο θ. and bracket αὐτους).

<sup>2</sup> καὶ προσκ. . . . αὐτου, omitted in N<sup>2</sup>B, is probably an addition from Mt. or Sept.

<sup>3</sup> εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν in N<sup>2</sup>BDLΔ.

<sup>4</sup> οἱ μαθ. περὶ τούτου ἐπηρωτων in N (τουτων) BCLΔ (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> For γυνη απ. N<sup>2</sup>BCLΔ have αὐτη ἀπολυσασα without και, and for γαμηθη ἄλλω, γαμηση ἄλλον (so also D: Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>6</sup> N<sup>2</sup>BCLΔ have αὐτων before ἀψηται, ἐπετιμσαν for ἐπιτιμων, and αὐτοις for τοις προσφέρουσι (W.H.).

<sup>7</sup> BΔΣ omit και, which comes from parall., and weakens the force of the words. Vide below.

Both evangelists, while varying considerably in their reports, carefully preserve this important logion as to legislation conditioned by the sklerokardia.—ταύτην: at the end, with emphasis; this particular command in contradiction to the great original one.—Ver. 6: “But from the beginning of the creation (it runs) ‘male and female made He them,’” ἄρσεν καὶ, etc., being a quotation from Sept. (Gen. i. 27), vv. 7, 8 being another (vide Gen. ii. 24), with Christ’s comment in the last clause of ver. 8 and in ver. 9 appended. On the import of the words vide in Mt., ad loc.—Vv. 10-12 report as spoken to the Twelve in the house (as opposed to the way in which the Pharisees are supposed to have encountered Jesus) what in Mt.’s version appears as the last word to the interrogants (ver. 9). Two variations are noticeable: (1) the absence of the qualifying clause εἰ μὴ ἐπὶ πορνείᾳ, and (2) the addition of a clause (ver. 12) stating the law in its bearing on the woman = if she put away her husband and marry another, she is an adulteress.

In the former case Mk. probably reports correctly what Christ said; in the latter he has added a gloss so as to make Christ’s teaching a guide for his Gentile readers. Jewish women could not divorce their husbands. The ἐπ’ αὐτήν at the end of ver. 11 may mean either against, to the prejudice of, her (the first wife), or with her (the second). The former view is taken by the leading modern exegetes, the latter by Victor Ant., Euthy., Theophy., and, among moderns, Ewald and Bleek.

Vv. 13-16. Suffer the children (Mt. xix. 13-15, Lk. xviii. 15-17).—Ver. 13. παιδία as in Mt. Lk. has βρέφη = infants carried in arms. Note the use of the compound προσέφερον; elsewhere the simple verb. The word is commonly used of sacrifices, and suggests here the idea of dedication.—ἄψηται, touch, merely, as if that alone were enough to bless; prayer mentioned in Mt.—τοις προσφέρουσιν (T. R.), probably interprets the αὐτοῖς (W.H.) after ἐπετίμσαν.—Ver. 14. ἠγανάκτησε, “was moved with indignation” (R. V.) is too strong,

Θεοῦ· 15. ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅς ἐάν μὴ δέξηται τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ ὡς παιδίον, οὐ μὴ εἰσέλθῃ εἰς αὐτήν.” 16. Καὶ ἐναγκαλισάμενος αὐτά, τιθεὶς τὰς χεῖρας ἐπ’ αὐτά, ἠϋλόγει αὐτά.<sup>1</sup>

17. Καὶ ἐκπορευομένου αὐτοῦ εἰς ὁδόν, προσδραμῶν εἰς καὶ γονυπετήσας αὐτὸν ἐπηρώτα αὐτόν, “Διδάσκαλε ἀγαθέ, τί ποιήσω ἵνα ζωὴν αἰώνιον κληρονομήσω;” 18. Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν αὐτῷ, “Τί με λέγεις ἀγαθόν; οὐδεὶς ἀγαθός, εἰ μὴ εἰς, ὁ Θεός. 19. τὰς ἐντολὰς οἶδας, Μὴ μοιχεύσης· μὴ φονεύσης<sup>2</sup>· μὴ κλέψῃς· μὴ ψευδομαρτυρήσης· μὴ ἀποστερήσης· τίμα τὸν πατέρα σου καὶ τὴν μητέρα.” 20. Ὁ δὲ ἀποκριθεὶς εἶπεν<sup>3</sup> αὐτῷ, “Διδάσκαλε, ταῦτα

a cf. Ch. xiv. 67. Lk. xx. 17; xxii. 61. * αὐτῷ ἠγάπησεν αὐτόν, καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, “Ἐν σοὶ<sup>4</sup> ὑστερεῖ· ὑπαγε, ὅσα ἔχει πώλησον, καὶ δὸς τοῖς<sup>5</sup> πτωχοῖς, καὶ ἔξεις θησαυρὸν ἐν

<sup>1</sup> Instead of τιθεὶς . . . ἠυλογοι αὐτα NSBCLD have κατευλογοι τιθεὶς τας χεῖρας επ. αὐτα (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> μὴ φονευσης before μὴ μοιχευσης in BCD (W.H. text).

<sup>3</sup> For ο δε αποκ. ειπεν NSBCD have ο δε εφη.

<sup>4</sup> σε in NSBCD.

<sup>5</sup> BD al. omit τοις (W.H. in brackets).

“was much displeased” (A. V.) is better, “was annoyed” is better still (“ward unwilling,” Weizsäcker).—μὴ κωλύετε, καὶ of T. R. before μη is much better left out: suffer them to come; do not hinder them; an expressive asyndeton. This saying is the main point in the story for the evangelist, hence the imperfects in ver. 13. It is another lesson for the still spiritually crude disciples.—Ver. 15 answers to Mt. xviii. 3. As Jesus gave several lessons on humility and kindred virtues, in Capernaum, here, and on the way to Jericho (x. 35 f.), it is not to be wondered at if the sayings spoken in the several lessons got somewhat mixed in the tradition. It does not greatly matter when they were uttered. The thing to be thankful for is their preservation.—Ver. 16. ἐναγκαλισάμενος, as in ix. 36. Jesus took each child in His arms, one by one, and blessed it: κατευλόγει, imperfect. The process would last a while, but Jesus would not soon weary in such work. The compound verb κατευλόγει (NSBCL, etc.), here only, has intensive force like καταφιλέω in Mt. xxvi. 49 (vide notes there and Macler in C. G. T.).

Vv. 17-27. Quest after eternal life (Mt. xix. 16-30, Lk. xviii. 18-30).—Ver. 17. ἐκπορευομένου α. εἰς ὁδόν: the incident to be related happens as Jesus is coming out from some house into the highway, at what precise point on the journey Mk. neither knows nor cares. The didactic significance of the story alone concerns him.—διδάσκαλε ἀγαθέ: that the epithet ἀγαθός was really used by the man is highly probable. Vide on Mt.—Ver. 18. τί με λέγεις ἀγαθόν: on the import of this question vide notes on Mt.—Ver. 19. The commandments of the second table enumerated are expressed by subjunctives with μὴ, instead of future indicatives with οὐ. While Mt. has the supernumerary, “love thy neighbour,” Mk. has μὴ ἀποστερήσης, which probably has in view the humane law in Deut. xxiv. 14, 15, against oppressing or withholding wages from a hired servant; a more specific form of the precept: love thy neighbour as thyself, and a most apposite reminder of duty as addressed to a wealthy man, doubtless an extensive employer of labour. It should be rung in the ears of all would-be Christians, in similar social position, in our time: defraud not, underpay not.—Ver. 21. ἠγάπησεν α.: on the import of the statement in reference to the man vide on Mt. Jesus loved this man. Grotius remarks: Jesus loved not virtues only, but seeds of virtues (“et semina virtutum”). Field (Otium Nor.) renders “caressed”. Bengel takes ἐμβλέψας ἠγάπησεν as a ἐν διὰ δυοῖν, and renders, amanter aspexit = lovingly regarded him—ἐν σε ὑστερεῖ. In Mk. Jesus, not the inquirer, remarks on the

οὐρανῷ· καὶ δεῦρο, ἀκολουθεὶ μοι, ἄρας τὸν σταυρόν.”<sup>1</sup> 22. Ὁ δὲ στυγνάσας ἐπὶ τῷ λόγῳ ἀπῆλθε λυπούμενος· ἦν γὰρ ἔχων κτήματα πολλά. 23. Καὶ περιβλεψάμενος ὁ Ἰησοῦς λέγει τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ, “Πῶς δυσκόλως οἱ τὰ χρήματα ἔχοντες εἰς τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ εἰσελεύσονται.” 24. Οἱ δὲ μαθηταὶ ἐθαμβοῦντο ἐπὶ τοῖς λόγοις αὐτοῦ. Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς πάλιν ἀποκριθεὶς λέγει αὐτοῖς, “Τέκνα, πῶς <sup>b</sup>δύσκολόν ἐστι τοὺς πεποιθότας ἐπὶ τοῖς χρήμασιν<sup>2</sup> εἰς τὴν <sup>b</sup>here only βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ εἰσελθεῖν. 25. εὐκοπώτερόν ἐστι κάμηλον διὰ τῆς<sup>3</sup> τρυμαλιᾶς τῆς<sup>3</sup> ῥαφίδος εἰσελθεῖν,<sup>4</sup> ἢ πλοῦσιον εἰς τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ εἰσελθεῖν.” 26. Οἱ δὲ περισσῶς ἐξεπλήσσαντο, λέγοντες πρὸς ἑαυτούς,<sup>5</sup> “Καὶ τίς δύναται σωθῆναι;” 27. Ἐμβλέψας δὲ<sup>6</sup> αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς λέγει, “Παρὰ ἀνθρώποις ἀδύνατον, ἀλλ’ οὐ παρὰ τῷ<sup>7</sup> Θεῷ· πάντα γὰρ δυνατὰ ἐστι<sup>8</sup> παρὰ

<sup>1</sup> αραις τ. σ. is a gloss from Ch. viii. 34, omitted in ℵBCDΔ.

<sup>2</sup> τους πεπ. . . . χρημασιν is a gloss wanting in ℵBD; vide below. Omission by similar ending (Alford) is abstractly possible.

<sup>3</sup> της is found in B in both places (W.H. margin), but omitted in many uncials.

<sup>4</sup> διελθειν in some copies (W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> αυτον in ℵBCDΔ.

<sup>6</sup> Omit δε ℵBCDΔ.

<sup>7</sup> Omit τω ℵBCDΔ. B omits the second τω at end of sentence (W.H. in brackets).

<sup>8</sup> εστι omitted in ℵBC al.; more expressive without.

lack; in Mt. the reverse is the fact: the man is conscious of his defect, an important point in his spiritual condition.—δεῦρο, etc.: from the invitation to join the disciple band Weiss (Meyer) infers that the incident must have happened before the circle of the Twelve was complete. He may have been meant to take the place of the traitor. The last clause in T. R. about the cross is an obvious gloss by a scribe dominated by religious commonplaces.—Ver. 22. στυγνάσας: in Mt. xvi. 3, of the sky, here, of the face, λυπούμενος, following, referring to the mind: with sad face and heavy heart.

Vv. 23-27. The moral of the story given for the benefit of the disciples, περιβλεψάμενος (iii. 5, 34), looking around, to see what impression the incident had made on the Twelve.—πῶς = ἀληθῶς, Euthy.—πῶς δυσ., with what difficulty!—τὰ χρήματα, wealth collectively held by the rich class (Meyer).—Ver. 24. ἐθαμβοῦντο, were confounded.—πάλιν ἀποκριθεὶς prepares us for repetition with unmitigated severity, rather than toning down, which is what we have in T. R., through the added words, τοὺς πεποιθότας ἐπὶ τοῖς χρήμασιν, suggesting an idea more worthy of a scribe than of Jesus; for it is not merely difficult but impossible for one trusting in riches to enter the Kingdom. Yet this is one of the places where the Sin. Syriac agrees with the T. R.—Ver. 25. In this proverbial saying the evangelists vary in expression in reference to the needle and the needle-eye, though one might have looked for stereotyped phraseology in a proverb. The fact points to different Greek renderings of a saying originally given in a Semitic tongue.—τρυμαλιᾶς, from τρύω, to rub through, so as to make a hole. According to Furrer, proverbs about the camel and the needle-eye, to express the impossible, are still current among the Arabs. E.g., “hypocrites go into paradise as easily as a camel through a needle-eye”; “He asks of people that they conduct a camel through a needle-eye” (Wanderungen, p. 339).—Ver. 26. The disciples, amazed, ask: καὶ τίς δύναται σωθῆναι; τίς ἄρα, etc., in Mt. The καὶ resumes what has been said, and draws from it an inference meant to call its truth in question (Holtz., H. C.) = who, in that case, can be saved?—Ver. 27. This saying is given diversely in the three parallels; most pithily in Mt., and perhaps nearest to the original. For the meaning vide on Mt.

Vv. 28-31. Peter's question (Mt. xix.

τῷ Θεῷ.” 28. Καὶ ἤρξατο ὁ Πέτρος λέγειν<sup>1</sup> αὐτῷ, “Ἰδοῦ, ἡμεῖς ἀφήκαμεν πάντα, καὶ ἠκολουθήσαμεν<sup>2</sup> σοι.” 29. Ἀποκριθεὶς δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν,<sup>3</sup> “Ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, οὐδεὶς ἐστίν, ὃς ἀφήκεν οἰκίαν, ἢ ἀδελφούς, ἢ ἀδελφάς, ἢ πατέρα, ἢ μητέρα,<sup>4</sup> ἢ γυναῖκα,<sup>5</sup> ἢ τέκνα, ἢ ἀγρούς, ἕνεκεν ἐμοῦ καὶ<sup>6</sup> τοῦ εὐαγγελίου, 30. εἰ μὴ λάβῃ c Rom. iii. ἑκατονταπλᾶσιονα νῦν ἐν τῷ °καιρῷ τούτῳ, οἰκίας καὶ ἀδελφούς 26; viii. 18. καὶ ἀδελφάς καὶ μητέρας<sup>7</sup> καὶ τέκνα καὶ ἀγρούς, μετὰ διωγμῶν, καὶ ἐν τῷ αἰῶνι τῷ ἐρχομένῳ ζωὴν αἰώνιον. 31. πολλοὶ δὲ ἔσονται πρῶτοι ἔσχατοι, καὶ οἱ ἔσχατοι πρῶτοι.”

32. ἮΣΑΝ δὲ ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ ἀναβαίνοντες εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα· καὶ ἦν προάγων αὐτοὺς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ ἔθαμβοῦντο, καὶ<sup>8</sup> ἀκολουθοῦντες ἐφοβοῦντο. καὶ παραλαβὴν πάλιν τοὺς δώδεκα, ἤρξατο αὐτοῖς λέγειν τὰ μέλλοντα αὐτῷ συμβαίνειν· 33. “Ὅτι, ἰδοῦ, ἀναβαίνομεν εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα, καὶ ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου παραδοθήσεται τοῖς ἀρχιερεῦσι καὶ τοῖς γραμματεῦσι, καὶ κατακρινούσιν αὐτὸν θανάτῳ,

<sup>1</sup> λέγειν before ο Π. and without και before ηρξ. in ΞBCD.

<sup>2</sup> ηκολουθηκαμεν in BCD.

<sup>3</sup> For αποκ. . . . ειπεν ΞBD cop. have εφη ο Ι.

<sup>4</sup> μητερα η πατερα in BCD.

<sup>5</sup> ΞBDD omit η γυναικα, which probably comes from Lk.

<sup>6</sup> και ενεκεν in ΞCDD (W.H. in brackets).

<sup>7</sup> So in BΔ, but Ξ<sup>a</sup>CD have μητερα, a correction (W.H. margin).

<sup>8</sup> οι δε in ΞBCLΔ; not understood, therefore και substituted in late uncials.

27-30, Lk. xviii. 28-30).—Ver. 28 introduces the episode without any connecting word such as τότε in Mt. Ἰδοῦ betrays self-consciousness, also the following ἡμεῖς. Yet, with all his self-consciousness, Peter, in Mk.'s account, has not courage to finish his question, stopping short with the statement of fact on which it is based = behold! we have left all and followed Thee?—ἀφήκαμεν, aorist, refers to an act done once for all, ἠκολουθήκαμεν, to an abiding condition.—Ver. 29. Jesus, seeing Peter's meaning, proceeds to give, first, a generous answer, then a word of warning. In the enumeration of persons and things forsaken, “wife” is omitted in important MSS. (W.H.). The omission is true to the delicate feeling of Jesus. It may have to be done, but He would rather not say it.—τοῦ εὐαγγελίου: a gloss to suit apostolic times and circumstances.—Ver. 30. νῦν: the present time the sphere of compensation; ἑκατονταπλᾶσιονα (Lk. viii. 8): the measure characteristically liberal; μετὰ διωγμῶν: the natural qualification, seeing it is in this world that the moral compensation takes place, yet not diminishing the value of the compensation, rather enhancing it, as a relish; a foreshadowing this, perhaps a transcript, of apostolic experience.—Ver. 31. On this apothegm vide on Mt.

Vv. 32-34. Third prediction of the Passion (Mt. xx. 17-19, Lk. xviii. 31-34).—Ver. 32. εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα, to Jerusalem! The fact that they were at last on the march for the Holy City is mentioned to explain the mood and manner of Jesus.—προάγων: Jesus in advance, all the rest following at a respectful distance.—ἔθαμβοῦντο: the astonishment of the Twelve and the fear of others (οἱ ἀκολ. ἐφοβοῦντο) were not due to the fact that Jesus had, against their wish, chosen to go to Jerusalem in spite of apprehended danger (Weiss). These feelings must have been awakened by the manner of Jesus, as of one labouring under strong emotion. Only so can we account for the fear of the crowd, who were not, like the Twelve, acquainted with Christ's forebodings of death. Memory and expectation were both active at that

καὶ παραδώσουσιν αὐτὸν τοῖς ἔθνεσι, 34. καὶ ἐμπαίξουσιν αὐτῷ, καὶ μαστιγώσουσιν αὐτόν, καὶ ἐμπτύσουσιν αὐτῷ,<sup>1</sup> καὶ ἀποκτενοῦσιν αὐτόν· καὶ τῇ τρίτῃ ἡμέρᾳ<sup>2</sup> ἀναστήσεται.”

35. Καὶ<sup>3</sup> προσπορεύονται αὐτῷ Ἰάκωβος καὶ Ἰωάννης οἱ υἱοὶ<sup>d</sup> here only Ζεβεδαίου, λέγοντες,<sup>3</sup> “Διδάσκαλε, θέλομεν ἵνα ὁ ἐὰν αἰτήσωμεν,<sup>4</sup> ποιήσης ἡμῖν.” 36. Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Τί θέλετε ποιήσαι με<sup>5</sup> ὑμῖν;” 37. Οἱ δὲ εἶπον αὐτῷ, “Δὸς ἡμῖν, ἵνα εἰς ἐκ δεξιῶν σου<sup>6</sup> καὶ εἰς ἐξ εὐωνύμων σου<sup>7</sup> καθίσωμεν ἐν τῇ δόξῃ σου.” 38. Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Οὐκ οἶδατε τί αἰτεῖσθε. δύνασθε πιεῖν τὸ ποτήριον ὃ ἐγὼ πίνω, καὶ<sup>8</sup> τὸ βάπτισμα ὃ ἐγὼ βαπτίζομαι, βαπτισθῆναι;” 39. Οἱ δὲ εἶπον αὐτῷ, “Δυνάμεθα.” Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Τὸ μὲν<sup>9</sup> ποτήριον ὃ ἐγὼ πίνω, πίεσθε· καὶ τὸ βάπτισμα ὃ ἐγὼ βαπτίζομαι, βαπτισθήσεσθε· 40. τὸ δὲ καθίσει ἐκ δεξιῶν μου καὶ ἐξ εὐωνύμων μου,<sup>10</sup> οὐκ ἔστιν ἐμὸν δοῦναι, ἀλλ’ οἷς ἠτοίμασται.” 41. Καὶ ἀκούσαντες οἱ δέκα ἤρξαντο ἀγανακτεῖν

<sup>1</sup> ἐμπτυσουσιν in first place, μαστιγ. second, in  $\aleph$ BCLΔ.

<sup>2</sup> μετα τρεῖς ἡμέρας in  $\aleph$ BCDLΔ.

<sup>3</sup>  $\aleph$ BCDLΔ add αὐτῷ.

<sup>4</sup>  $\aleph$ ABCLΔ add σε.

<sup>5</sup> For ποιήσαι με B has με ποιήσω. CD correct by omitting με, A1ΔΣ by changing into infinitive with accusative as in T.R.

<sup>6</sup> σου ἐκ δεξιῶν in  $\aleph$ BCLΔ.

<sup>7</sup> ἐξ ἀριστερῶν (without σου) in BLΔ.

<sup>8</sup> ἠ in  $\aleph$ BCDLΔ.

<sup>9</sup> μὲν wanting in  $\aleph$ BCLΔ. T.R. is a grammatical correction.

<sup>10</sup> ἠ for καὶ, and μου after εὐων. omitted, in  $\aleph$ BDLΔ. Besides these ACΣ al. omit second μου.

moment, producing together a high-strung state of mind: Peraea, John, baptism in the Jordan, at the beginning; Jerusalem, the priests, the cross, at the end! Filled with the varied feelings excited by these sacred recollections and tragic anticipations, He walks alone by preference, step and gesture revealing what is working within and inspiring awe—“muthig und entschlossen,” Schanz; with “majesty and heroism,” Morison; “tanto animo tantâque alacritate,” Elsner; “more intrepiditatis,” Grotius. This picture of Jesus in advance on the way to Jerusalem is one of Mk.’s realisms.—Ver. 33. ὅτι ἰδοὺ, etc.: the third prediction has for its specialties delivery to the Gentiles (τοῖς ἔθνεσι), and an exact specification of the indignities to be endured: mocking, spitting, scourging. Jesus had been thinking of these things before He spoke of them; hence the excitement of His manner.

Vv. 35-45. The sons of Zebedee (Mt.

xx. 20-28), showing the comic side of the drama.—Ver. 35. In Mk., James and John speak for themselves: Διδάσκαλε θέλομεν, etc. In Mt. the mother speaks for them.—Ver. 36. τί θέλετέ με ποιήσω: this reading of B is accredited by its very grammatical peculiarity, two constructions being confused together; an accusative (με) followed, not as we expect by the infinitive, ποιήσαι (T. R.), but by the subj. delib., ποιήσω.—Ver. 38. τὸ βάπτισμα: in Mk. there is a double symbolism for the Passion, a cup and a baptism; in Mt.’s true text only the former. The cup is an Old Testament emblem; the baptism not so obviously, yet it may rest on Ps. xlii. 7. lxi. 2, cxxiv. 4-5. The conception of Christian baptism as baptism into death is Pauline (Rom. vi.).—Ver. 40. ἠτοίμασται stands alone in Mk. without the reference to the Father, which is in Mt.—Ver. 42. οἱ δοκοῦντες ἄρχειν, those who pass for, are esteemed as, rulers: “quos gentes habent et agnoscunt” (Beza); “qui

περὶ Ἰακώβου καὶ Ἰωάννου. 42. ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς προσκαλεσάμενος αὐτοὺς<sup>1</sup> λέγει αὐτοῖς, “Οἴδατε ὅτι οἱ δοκοῦντες ἄρχειν τῶν ἐθνῶν κατακυριεύουσιν αὐτῶν· καὶ οἱ μεγάλοι αὐτῶν κατεξουσιάζουσιν αὐτῶν. 43. οὐχ οὕτω δὲ ἔσται<sup>2</sup> ἐν ὑμῖν· ἀλλ’ ὅς ἐάν θέλῃ γενέσθαι μέγας<sup>3</sup> ἐν ὑμῖν, ἔσται διάκονος ὑμῶν<sup>4</sup>. 44. καὶ ὅς ἐάν θέλῃ ὑμῶν γενέσθαι<sup>4</sup> πρῶτος, ἔσται πάντων δοῦλος· 45. καὶ γὰρ ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου οὐκ ἤλθε διακονηθῆναι, ἀλλὰ διακονῆσαι, καὶ δοῦναι τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ λύτρον ἀντὶ πολλῶν.”

46. Καὶ ἔρχονται εἰς Ἰεριχῶ καὶ ἐκπορευομένου αὐτοῦ ἀπὸ Ἰεριχῶ, καὶ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ, καὶ ὄχλου ἱκανοῦ, υἱὸς<sup>5</sup> Τιμαίου Βαρτίμαιος ὁ τυφλὸς ἐκάθητο παρὰ τὴν ὁδὸν προσαιτῶν.<sup>5</sup> 47. καὶ ἀκούσας ὅτι Ἰησοῦς ὁ Ναζωραῖός<sup>6</sup> ἔστιν, ἤρξατο κρᾶζειν καὶ λέγειν, “Ὁ υἱὸς<sup>7</sup> Δαβίδ, Ἰησοῦ, ἐλέησόν με.” 48. Καὶ ἐπετίμων αὐτῷ πολλοί, ἵνα σιωπήσῃ· ὁ δὲ πολλῶ μᾶλλον ἔκραζεν, “Υἱὲ Δαβίδ, ἐλέησόν με.” 49. Καὶ στὰς ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν αὐτὸν φωνηθῆναι<sup>8</sup>· καὶ φωνοῦσι τὸν τυφλόν, λέγοντες αὐτῷ, “Θάρσει· ἔγειραι,<sup>9</sup> φωνεῖ σε.” 50. Ὁ δὲ ἀποβαλὼν τὸ ἱμάτιον αὐτοῦ ἀναστὰς<sup>10</sup> ἦλθε πρὸς τὸν Ἰησοῦν·

<sup>1</sup> καὶ προσκαλ. αὐτοὺς ο I. in ΞBCDLA. <sup>2</sup> ἔστιν in ΞBCDLA Lat. vet. Vulg

<sup>3</sup> μέγας γεν. in ΞBCLA, also ὑμῶν διακ. <sup>4</sup> ἐν ὑμῖν εἶναι in ΞBCLA.

<sup>5</sup> For υἱὸς . . . προσαιτῶν ΞBLA have ο υἱὸς T. B. τυφλὸς προσαιτῆς εκαθ. παρα τὴν ὁδὸν (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>6</sup> Ναζαρηνοῦ in BLA. B places ἔστιν after Ἰησοῦς.

<sup>7</sup> υἱε (for ο υ.) in ΞBCLΣ.

<sup>8</sup> φωνήσατε αὐτὸν in ΞBCLA changed in T.R. into the more commonplace αὐτὸν φωνηθῆναι.

<sup>9</sup> ἐγειρε in ΞABCDLΔΣ.

<sup>10</sup> A tame substitute for ἀναπηδησας in ΞBDLA, so characteristic of Mk.

honorem habent imperandi” (Grotius). Some, e.g., Palaiet, regard δοκοῦντες as redundant, and take the phrase in Mk. as = Mt.’s οἱ ἄρχοντες. Kypke resolves it into οἱ ἐκ δόγματός τινος ἄρχοντες = “qui constituti sunt ut imperent”.—Ver. 43. ἔστιν (W.H.), is; the “is” not of actual fact, but of the ideal state of things.—Ver. 45. Vide on Mt.

Vv. 46-52. Bartimaeus (Mt. xx. 29-34, Lk. xviii. 35-43).—Ver. 46. ἔρχονται, historical present for effect. Fericho an important place, and of more interest to the narrator; the last stage on the journey before arriving at Ferusalem (Weiss in Meyer).—ἐκπορευομένου α.: Jesus mentioned apart as the principal person, or as still going before, the disciples and the crowd mentioned also, as they have their part to play in the sequel, πορευομένων understood.—ὄχ. ἱκανοῦ: not implying that the crowd was of very moderate dimensions, but = a large crowd, as we say colloquially “pretty good” when we mean “very good”. This use of ἱκανός probably belonged to the colloquial Greek of the period. Vide Kennedy, Sources of N. T. Greek, p. 79.—ὁ υἱὸς T. B. Mk. knows the name, and gives both name, Bartimaeus, and interpretation, son of Timaeus.—Ver. 47. υἱὲ Δαβίδ: this in all three narratives, the popular name for Messiah.—Ver. 49. φωνήσατε, φωνοῦσι, φωνεῖ; no attempt to avoid monotony out of regard to style. It is the appropriate word all through, to call in a loud voice, audible at a distance, in the open air (vide ix. 35).—θάρσει, ἐγειρε, φωνεῖ, courage, rise, He calls you; pithy, no superfluous words, just how they would speak.—Ver. 50. Graphic description of the beggar’s eager response—mantle thrown off, jumping to his feet, he

51. καὶ ἀποκριθεὶς λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς,<sup>1</sup> “Τί θέλεις ποιήσω σοί<sup>2</sup> ;” Ὁ δὲ τυφλὸς εἶπεν αὐτῷ, “Ῥαββονί, ἵνα ἀναβλέψω.” 52. Ὁ δὲ<sup>3</sup> Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν αὐτῷ, “Ὑπαγε· ἡ πίστις σου σέσωκέν σε.” καὶ εὐθέως ἀνέβλεψε, καὶ ἠκολούθει τῷ Ἰησοῦ<sup>4</sup> ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ.

XI. 1. ΚΑΙ ὅτε ἐγγίζουσιν εἰς Ἱερουσαλήμ,<sup>5</sup> εἰς Βηθφαγὴ καὶ Βηθανίαν<sup>6</sup> πρὸς τὸ ὄρος τῶν Ἐλαιῶν, ἀποστέλλει δύο τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ, 2. καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς, “Ὑπάγετε εἰς τὴν κώμην τὴν κατέναντι ὑμῶν· καὶ εὐθέως εἰσπορευόμενοι εἰς αὐτὴν εὐρήσετε πῶλον δεδεμένον, ἐφ’ ὃν οὐδεὶς<sup>7</sup> ἀνθρώπων κεκάθικε<sup>8</sup>. λύσαντες αὐτὸν ἀγάγετε.<sup>9</sup> 3. καὶ ἐάν τις ὑμῖν εἴπῃ, τί ποιεῖτε τοῦτο; εἶπατε, Ὅτι<sup>10</sup> ὁ κύριος

<sup>1</sup> αὐτῷ ο ἰ. εἶπεν in ΞBCDLΔ.

<sup>2</sup> τι σοι θέλεις ποιήσω in ΞBCLΔ, obviously preferable to the smooth reading in T.R.

<sup>3</sup> καὶ ο ἰ. in BLD cop. (W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> αὐτῷ for τῷ ἰ. in ΞABCDDLΔ al. Lat. vet. Vulg.

<sup>5</sup> Ἱερουσαλήμ is not used in Mk. The true form here is Ἱεροσόλυμα as in ΞBCDΠΑΣ.

<sup>6</sup> D vet. Lat. Vulg. have simply καὶ εἰς Βηθανίαν which Tisch. adopts. The reading in T.R. is supported by ΞABCLΔΣ al.

<sup>7</sup> Add οὐπῶ, following οὐδεὶς in BLD; after ἀνθρώπων in ΞC, before οὐδεὶς in KΠΣ (W.H. order 1, Tisch. 2).

<sup>8</sup> ἐκάθισεν in ΞBCLΔ.

<sup>9</sup> λύσατε α. καὶ φέρετε in ΞBCLΔ. The T.R. conforms to Lk.

<sup>10</sup> Omit οτι with BΔ vet. Lat.

comes, runs, to Jesus. Though blind he needs no guide (Lk. provides him with one); led by his ear.—Ver. 51. τί σοι θέλεις, etc.: what do you want: alms or sight?—Ῥαββονί: more respectful than Rabbi (here and in John xx. 16).—ἵνα ἀναβλέψω: sight, of course, who would think of asking an alms of One who could open blind eyes!

CHAPTER XI. ENTRY INTO JERUSALEM. OTHER INCIDENTS. VV. 1-11. The solemn entry (Mt. xxi. 1-11; Lk. xix. 29-44).—Ver. 1. It is first stated generally that they approach Jerusalem, then Bethphage and Bethany are named to define more exactly the whereabouts. Both villages named; partly because close together, partly because, while Bethphage was the larger and better known place, and therefore might have stood alone as an indication of locality, Bethany was the place where the colt was to be got.—Ver. 2. κατέναντι ὑ., opposite you. This adverb (from κατά ἔναντι) is not found in Greek authors, but occurs frequently in Sept.—ἐφ’ ὃν οὐδεὶς οὐπ. ἀν. ἐκάθισεν: this point, that the colt had never been used, would seem of vital importance afterward, from the Christian point of view, and one cannot wonder that it took a sure place in the tradition, as evinced by the narrative in Mk. followed by Lk. But it is permissible to regard this as an expansion of what Jesus actually said. The idea underlying is that for sacred purposes only unused animals may be employed (vide Numb. xix. 2, 1 Sam. vi. 7).—λύσατε, φέρετε: aorist and present; the former denoting a momentary act, the latter a process.—Ver. 3. ὁ κύριος α. χ. ἔχει, the Master hath need of him. Vide on this at Mt. xxi. 3.—καὶ εὐθέως, etc., and straightway He returneth him (the colt) again.—πάλιν, a well-attested reading, clearly implies this meaning, i.e., that Jesus bids His disciples promise the owner that He will return the colt without delay, after He has had His use of it. So without hesitation Weiss (in Meyer) and Holtzmann (H. C.). Meyer thinks this a paltry thing for Christ to say, and rejects πάλιν as an addition due to misunderstanding. Biassed by

αὐτοῦ χρειάν ἔχει· καὶ εὐθέως αὐτὸν ἀποστελεῖ<sup>1</sup> ὧδε.” 4. Ἀπῆλθον δέ,<sup>2</sup> καὶ εὔρον τὸν<sup>3</sup> πῶλον δεδεμένον πρὸς τὴν<sup>3</sup> θύραν ἔξω ἐπὶ τοῦ ἀμφοδου, καὶ λύουσιν αὐτόν. 5. καὶ τινες τῶν ἐκεῖ ἐστηκότων ἔλεγον αὐτοῖς, “Τί ποιεῖτε λύοντες τὸν πῶλον;” 6. Οἱ δὲ εἶπον αὐτοῖς καθὼς ἐνετείλατο<sup>4</sup> ὁ Ἰησοῦς· καὶ ἀφήκαν αὐτούς. 7. καὶ ἤγαγον<sup>5</sup> τὸν πῶλον πρὸς τὸν Ἰησοῦν, καὶ ἐπέβαλον<sup>6</sup> αὐτῷ τὰ ἱμάτια αὐτῶν, καὶ ἐκάθισεν ἐπ’ αὐτῷ.<sup>7</sup> 8. πολλοὶ δὲ<sup>8</sup> τὰ ἱμάτια αὐτῶν ἔστρωσαν εἰς τὴν ὁδόν· ἄλλοι δὲ στοιβάδας<sup>9</sup> ἔκοπτον<sup>10</sup> ἐκ τῶν δένδρων, καὶ ἐστρώννουν εἰς τὴν ὁδόν.<sup>10</sup> 9. καὶ οἱ προάγοντες καὶ οἱ ἀκολουθοῦντες ἔκραζον, λέγοντες,<sup>11</sup> “Ὠσαννά· εὐλογημένος ὁ

<sup>1</sup> ἀποστελλει in very many uncials. The most important various reading is παλιν after ἀποστελλει in  $\aleph$ BC\*DLA al. Orig.; doubtless a true reading, though omitted for harmonistic reasons in many copies. B places αὐτον last, ἀποσ. παλιν α. (W.H. marg.).

<sup>2</sup> καὶ ἀπῆλθον in  $\aleph$ BLA.

<sup>3</sup> BDL omit τον before πῶλον ( $\aleph$ CD have it, Tisch.), and BLD omit την before θυραν (in  $\aleph$ CD, Tisch.).

<sup>4</sup> εἶπεν in  $\aleph$ BCLA.

<sup>5</sup> φερουσιν instead of ἤγαγον (from parall.) in  $\aleph$ BLA.

<sup>6</sup> ἐπιβαλλουσι in  $\aleph$ BCDLA for ἐπέβαλον, which conforms to ἤγαγον.

<sup>7</sup> ἐπ αὐτον in  $\aleph$ BCDLA.

<sup>8</sup> καὶ πολλοὶ in  $\aleph$ BCLA.

<sup>9</sup> στιβάδας in most uncials ( $\aleph$ BDLA, etc.).

<sup>10</sup> For ἐκοπτον . . . οδον (cf. Mt.)  $\aleph$ BLA have simply κοψαντες ἐκ των ἀγρων.

<sup>11</sup> Omit λέγοντες  $\aleph$ BCLA.

the same sense of decorum—"below the dignity of the occasion and of the Speaker"—the Speaker's Comm. cherishes doubt as to παλιν, sheltering itself behind the facts that, while the MSS. which insert "again" are generally more remarkable for omissions than additions, yet in this instance they lack the support of ancient versions and early Fathers. I do not feel the force of the argument from decorum. It judges Christ's action by a conventional standard. Why should not Jesus instruct His disciples to say "it will be returned without delay" as an inducement to lend it? Dignity! How much will have to go if that is to be the test of historicity! There was not only dignity but humiliation in the manner of entering Jerusalem: the need for the colt, the use of it, the fact that it had to be borrowed all enter as elements in the lowly state of the Son of Man. On the whole subject vide notes on Mt. This is another of Mk.'s realisms, which Mt.'s version obliterates. Field (Otium Nor.), often bold in his interpretations, here succumbs to the decorum argument, and is biased by it against the reading παλιν contained in so many important MSS. (vide above).—Ver. 4. ἀμφοδου (ἀμφοδον and -ος from ἀμφί and ὁδός, here only in N. T.), the road round the farmyard. In Jer. xvii. 27, Sept., it seems to denote some part of a town: "the palaces of Jerusalem" (R. V.).—Vv. 5-6. Mk. tells the story very circumstantially: how the people of the place challenged their action; how they repeated the message of Jesus; and the satisfactory result. Mt. (xxi. 6) is much more summary.—Ver. 8. στιβάδας (στιβάς from στρίβω, to tread, hence anything trodden, such as straw, reeds, leaves, etc.; here only in N. T.); "layers of leaves," R. V., margin; or layers of branches (κλάδους, Mt.) obtained, as Mk. explains, by cutting from the fields (κόψαντες ἐκ τ. ἀγρῶν).—στοιβάς (στοιβάδας, T. R.) is probably a corrupt form of στιβάς. Hesychius defines στιβάς as a bed of rods and green grass and leaves (ἀπὸ ῥάβδων καὶ χλωρῶν χόρτων στρώσις, καὶ φύλλων).—Ver. 9. οἱ προάγοντες, those going before; pro-

ἐρχόμενος ἐν ὀνόματι Κυρίου. 10. εὐλογημένη ἡ ἐρχομένη βασιλεία ἐν ὀνόματι Κυρίου<sup>1</sup> τοῦ πατρὸς ἡμῶν Δαβίδ· Ὁσαννὰ ἐν τοῖς ὑψίστοις." 11. Καὶ εἰσῆλθεν εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα ὁ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ<sup>2</sup> εἰς τὸ ἱερόν· καὶ περιβλεψάμενος πάντα, ὀψίας<sup>3</sup> ἤδη οὔσης τῆς ὥρας, ἐξῆλθεν εἰς Βηθανίαν μετὰ τῶν δώδεκα.

12. Καὶ τῇ ἑπαύριον ἐξεληθόντων αὐτῶν ἀπὸ Βηθανίας, ἐπέειπασε· 13. καὶ ἰδὼν συκὴν μακρόθεν,<sup>4</sup> ἔχουσαν φύλλα, ἦλθεν εἰ ἄρα εὐρήσει τι<sup>5</sup> ἐν αὐτῇ· καὶ ἔλθων ἐπ' αὐτήν, οὐδὲν εὗρεν εἰ μὴ φύλλα· οὐ<sup>6</sup> γὰρ ἦν καιρὸς<sup>6</sup> σύκων. 14. καὶ ἀποκριθεὶς ὁ Ἰησοῦς<sup>7</sup> εἶπεν αὐτῇ, "Μηκέτι ἐκ σοῦ εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα<sup>8</sup> μηδεὶς καρπὸν φάγοι." Καὶ ἤκουον

<sup>1</sup> Omit this second ἐν ον. K. with ΞBCDLΔ. <sup>2</sup> Omit ο ἰ. καὶ with ΞBCDLΔ.

<sup>3</sup> ΞCΛΔ, Orig., have οψε (Tisch., W.H., text, brackets), but BD and other uncials have οψίας. B omits τῆς ὥρας.

<sup>4</sup> ἀπο μακ. in many uncials (ΞBD, etc.).

<sup>5</sup> τι εὐρήσει in ΞBCLΔ.

<sup>6</sup> ο γὰρ καιρος ουκ ην in ΞBCLΔ cop. syt.

<sup>7</sup> ο ἰ. omit ΞBCDLΔ; also in ver. 15.

<sup>8</sup> εἰς τον αιωνα before εκ σου in ΞBCDLΔ.

bably people who had gone out from the city to meet the procession.—Ver. 11. εἰσῆλθεν, etc.: the procession now drops out of view and attention is fixed on the movements of Jesus. He enters Jerusalem, and especially the temple, and surveys all (περιβλεψάμενος πάντα) with keenly observant eye, on the outlook, like St. Paul at Athens, not for the picturesque, but for the moral and religious element. He noted the traffic going on within the sacred precincts, though He postponed action till the morrow. Holtzmann (H. C.) thinks that the περιβλεψάμενος πάντα implies that Jesus was a stranger to Jerusalem. But, as Weiss remarks (in Meyer), Mk. cannot have meant to suggest that, even if Jesus had never visited Jerusalem since the beginning of the public ministry.

Vv. 12-14. The fig tree on the way (Mt. xxi. 18-19).—Ver. 12 tells how Jesus coming from Bethany, where He had passed the night with the Twelve, felt hunger. This is surprising, considering that He probably spent the night in the house of hospitable friends. Had the sights in the temple killed sleep and appetite, so that He left Bethany without taking any food?—Ver. 13. εἰ ἄρα, if in the circumstances; leaves there, creating expectation.—εὐρήσει: future indicative; subjunctive, more regular.—ὁ γὰρ καιρὸς, etc., for it was not the season of figs. This in Mk. only. The proper season was June for the first-ripe figs. One may wonder, then, how Jesus could have any expectations. But had He? Victor Ant. and Euthy. viewed the hunger as feigned. It is more reasonable to suppose that the hope of finding figs on the tree was, if not feigned, at least extremely faint. He might have a shrewd guess how the fact was, and yet go up to the tree as one who had a right to expect figs where there was a rich foliage, with intent to utilise it for a parable, if He could not find fruit on it. In those last days the prophetic mood was on Jesus in a high degree, and His action would be only very partially understood by the Twelve.—Ver. 14. φάγοι: the optative of wishing with μὴ (μηκέτι), as in classic Greek (Burton, M. T., § 476). The optative is comparatively rare in the N. T.—ἤκουον: the disciples heard (what He said); they were not inobedient. His manner would arrest attention. The remark prepares for what is reported in ver. 20; hence the imperfect.

Vv. 15-19. Cleansing of the temple (Mt. xxi. 12-17, Lk. xix. 45-48). The state of things Jesus saw in the temple yesterday has been in His mind ever since: through the night watches in Bethany; in the morning, killing appetite; on the way, the key to His enigmatical behaviour towards the fig tree.—Ver. 15. εἰς τὸ ἱερόν, into the temple, that is, the forecourt, the court of the Gentiles.—τοὺς π. καὶ τοὺς ἄ., the sellers and the οὐ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ. 15. Καὶ ἔρχονται εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα· καὶ εἰσελθὼν ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἰς τὸ ἱερόν ἤρξατο ἐκβάλλειν τοὺς πωλοῦντας καὶ ἀγοράζοντας<sup>1</sup> ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ· καὶ τὰς τραπέζας τῶν κολλυβιστῶν, καὶ τὰς καθέδρας τῶν πωλοῦντων τὰς περιστερὰς κατέστρεψε· 16. καὶ οὐκ ἤφιεν ἵνα τις διενέγκῃ σκευὸς διὰ τοῦ ἱεροῦ. 17. καὶ ἐδίδασκε, λέγων<sup>2</sup> αὐτοῖς, “Οὐ γέγραπται, “Ὅτι ὁ οἶκός μου οἶκος προσευχῆς κληθήσεται πᾶσι τοῖς ἔθνεσιν”; ὑμεῖς δὲ ἐποιήσατε<sup>3</sup> αὐτὸν σπηλαιὸν ληστῶν.” 18. Καὶ ἤκουσαν οἱ γραμματεῖς καὶ οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς,<sup>4</sup> καὶ ἐζήτουν πῶς αὐτὸν ἀπολέσουσιν<sup>5</sup>· ἐφοβοῦντο γὰρ αὐτόν, ὅτι πᾶς<sup>6</sup> ὁ ὄχλος ἐξεπλήσιστο ἐπὶ τῇ διδαχῇ αὐτοῦ.

19. Καὶ ὅτε<sup>7</sup> ὀψὲ ἐγένετο, ἐξεπορεύετο<sup>8</sup> ἔξω τῆς πόλεως. 20. Καὶ πρῶτ<sup>9</sup> παραπορευόμενοι,<sup>9</sup> εἶδον τὴν συκὴν ἐξηραμμένην ἐκ ῥιζῶν.

21. καὶ ἀναμνησθεῖς ὁ Πέτρος λέγει αὐτῷ, “Ῥαββί, ἴδε, ἡ συκὴ ἦν

<sup>1</sup> τους before αγορ. in  $\aleph$ BCL al.

<sup>2</sup> For λεγων  $\aleph$ BCLD have καὶ ελεγε. B omits αυτοις.

<sup>3</sup> πεποιηκατε in BLD (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> αρχ. before γραμ. in  $\aleph$ BCDLA al.

<sup>5</sup> απολεσωσιν in  $\aleph$ ABCDL, etc.

<sup>6</sup> πας γαρ in  $\aleph$ BCD.

<sup>7</sup> οταν in  $\aleph$ BCLD 33.

<sup>8</sup> BΔ have εξεπορευοντο (W.H., text, brackets).

<sup>9</sup> παραπ. πρωι in  $\aleph$ BCDLA 33.

buyers: article before both (not so in Mt.), both put in the pillory as alike evil in their practice.—Ver. 16. ἤφιεν: vide i. 34. The statement that Jesus did not allow any one to carry anything (σκευός, Lk. viii. 16) through the temple court is peculiar to Mk. It does not point to any attempt at violent prohibition, but simply to His feeling as to the sacredness of the place. He could not bear to see the temple court made a bypath or short cut, not to speak of the graver abominations of the mercenary traffic He had sternly interrupted. In this feeling Jesus was at one with the Rabbis, at least in their theory. “What reverence is due to the temple? That no one go into the mountain of the house (the court of the Gentiles) with his staff, shoes, purse, or dust on his feet. Let no one make a crossing through it, or degrade it into a place of spitting” (Babyl. Jevamoth, in Lightfoot, ad loc.).—Ver. 17. ἐδίδασκε covers more than what He said just then, pointing to a course of teaching (cf. ver. 18 and Lk. xix. 47). Here again we note that while Mt. speaks of a healing ministry in the temple (xxi. 14) Mk. gives prominence to teaching. Yet Mt. gives a far fuller report of the words spoken by Jesus during the last week.—πᾶσι τοῖς ἔθνεσιν, to all the Gentiles, as in Is. lvi.

7, omitted in the parallels; very suitable in view of the fact that the traffic went on in the court of the Gentiles. A foreshadowing of Christian universalism.—πεποιήκατε, ye have made it and it now is.—Ver. 18. πῶς, the purpose to get rid of Jesus fixed, but the how puzzling because of the esteem in which He was held.—Ver. 19. ὅταν (ὅτε, T.R.) implies repetition of the action. We have here ἄν with the indicative instead of the optative without ἄν as in the classics. Field (Ot. Nor.) regards ὅταν ὀψὲ ἐγένετο as a solecism due probably to Mk. himself (as in iii. 11, ὅταν ἐθεώρουν), and holds that the connection in Mk.'s narrative is decidedly in favour of a single action instead of, as in Lk., a daily practice.

Vv. 20-25. The withered fig tree and relative conversation (Mk. xxi. 20-22).—Ver. 20. παραπορευόμενοι, passing by the fig tree (on the way to Jerusalem next morning).—πρῶτ<sup>9</sup>: the position of this word after παραπ., instead of before as in T.R., is important. It gives it emphasis as suggesting that it was in the clear morning light that they noticed the state of the tree. It might have been in the same condition the previous evening, but it would be dark when they passed the spot.—Ver. 21. ἀναμνησθεῖς, remembering (what the Master had said the previous morning).—ὁ Πέτρος:

κατηράσω ἐξήρανται.” 22. Καὶ ἀποκριθεὶς Ἰησοῦς λέγει αὐτοῖς, “Ἐχετε πίστιν Θεοῦ. 23. ἀμὴν γὰρ<sup>1</sup> λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι ὅς ἂν εἴπῃ τῷ ὄρει τούτῳ, Ἄρθητι, καὶ βλήθητι εἰς τὴν θάλασσαν, καὶ μὴ διακριθῇ ἐν τῇ καρδίᾳ αὐτοῦ, ἀλλὰ πιστεύσῃ ὅτι ἂ λέγει<sup>2</sup> γίνεται· ἔσται αὐτῷ ὁ ἐὰν εἴπῃ.<sup>3</sup> 24. διὰ τοῦτο λέγω ὑμῖν, Πάντα ὅσα ἂν προσευχόμενοι<sup>4</sup> αἰτεῖσθε, πιστεύετε ὅτι λαμβάνετε,<sup>5</sup> καὶ ἔσται ὑμῖν. 25. Καὶ ὅταν στήκητε<sup>6</sup> προσευχόμενοι, ἀφίετε εἴ τι ἔχετε κατὰ τινος· ἴνα καὶ ὁ πατὴρ ὑμῶν ὁ ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς ἀφῇ ὑμῖν τὰ παραπτώματα ὑμῶν. 26. εἰ δὲ ὑμεῖς οὐκ ἀφίετε, οὐδὲ ὁ πατὴρ ὑμῶν ὁ ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς ἀφήσει τὰ παραπτώματα ὑμῶν.”<sup>7</sup>

27. ΚΑΙ ἔρχονται πάλιν εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα· καὶ ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ περιπατοῦντος αὐτοῦ, ἔρχονται πρὸς αὐτὸν οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ γραμματεῖς καὶ οἱ πρεσβύτεροι, 28. καὶ λέγουσιν<sup>8</sup> αὐτῷ, “Ἐν ποίᾳ ἐξουσίᾳ ταῦτα ποιεῖς; καὶ<sup>9</sup> τίς σοι τὴν ἐξουσίαν ταύτην ἔδωκεν,<sup>10</sup> ἵνα ταῦτα

<sup>1</sup> γὰρ omitted in ΞBD.

<sup>2</sup> For πιστεύσῃ ὅτι ἂ λέγει ΞBLΔ have πιστεύῃ ὅτι ὁ λαλεῖ (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> Omit ὁ εἰν εἴπῃ ΞBCDLΔ.

<sup>4</sup> For ὅσα ἂν προσευχομενοι ΞBCDLΔ have ὅσα προσευχεσθε καὶ (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> ελαβετε in ΞBCLΔ. T.R. is a correction.

<sup>6</sup> στηκετε in CDL (Tisch., W.H.), but B has στηκητε.

<sup>7</sup> Ver. 26 is omitted in ΞBLΔ (Tisch., W.H.). Weiss thinks it has fallen out by similar ending.

<sup>8</sup> ΞBCLΔ have ελεγον. λεγουσι conforms to ερχονται in ver. 27.

<sup>9</sup> η in ΞBLΔ. <sup>10</sup> ἔδωκεν before την εξ. τ. in ΞBCLΔ.

spokesman as usual; the disciples generally in Mt.—Ver. 22. ἔχετε πίστιν, have faith. The thoughts of Jesus here take a turn in a different direction to what we should have expected. We look for explanations as to the real meaning of an apparently unreasonable action, the cursing of a fig tree. Instead, He turns aside to the subject of the faith necessary to perform miraculous actions. Can it be that the tradition is at fault here, connecting genuine words of the Master about faith and prayer with a comparatively unsuitable occasion? Certainly much of what is given here is found in other connections—ver. 23 in Mt. xvii. 20, Lk. xvii. 6; ver. 24 in Mt. vii. 7, Lk. xi. 9; ver. 25 in Mt. xviii. 35; of course in somewhat altered form. Mk. seems here to make room for some important words of our Lord, as if to compensate for neglect of the didache which he knew to be an important feature in His ministry, doing this, however, as Meyer remarks, by way of thoughtful redaction, not by mere random insertion.—πίστιν Θεοῦ, faith in God, genitive objective as in Rom. iii. 22 and Heb. vi. 2 (βαπτισμῶν διδαχὴν).—Ver. 24. ἐλάβετε: this reading (ΞBCLΔ) Fritzsche pronounces absurd. But its very difficulty as compared with λαμβάνετε (T.R.) guarantees its genuineness. And it is not unintelligible if, with Meyer, we take the aorist as referring to the divine purpose, or even as the aorist of immediate consequence, as in John xv. 6 (ἐβλήθη). So De Wette, vide Winer, sec. xl. 5 b.

Vv. 27-33. By what authority? (Mt. xxi. 23-27, Lk. xx. 1-8).—Ver. 27. πάλιν, again, for the third time: on the day of arrival, on the day of the temple cleansing, and on this day, the event of which is the questioning as to authority.—περιπατοῦντος αὐτοῦ, while He is walking about, genitive absolute, instead of accusative governed by πρὸς; probably simply descriptive (Schanz) and not implying anything offensive in manner—walking as if He were Lord of the place (Kloster.); nor, on the other hand, meant

ποιῆς;” 29. Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς ἀποκριθεὶς<sup>1</sup> εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Ἐπερωτήσω ὑμᾶς κἀγὼ<sup>2</sup> ἓνα λόγον, καὶ ἀποκρίθητέ μοι, καὶ ἔρω ὑμῖν ἐν ποίᾳ ἐξουσίᾳ ταῦτα ποιῶ. 30. Τὸ βάπτισμα Ἰωάννου<sup>3</sup> ἐξ οὐρανοῦ ἢν, ἢ ἐξ ἀνθρώπων; ἀποκρίθητέ μοι.” 31. Καὶ ἐλογίζοντο<sup>4</sup> πρὸς ἑαυτούς, λέγοντες, “Ἐὰν εἴπωμεν, Ἐξ οὐρανοῦ, ἔρει, Διὰ τί οὖν οὐκ ἐπιστεύσατε αὐτῷ; 32. ἀλλ’ ἐὰν<sup>5</sup> εἴπωμεν, Ἐξ ἀνθρώπων,” ἐφοβούντο τὸν λαόν,<sup>6</sup> ἅπαντες γὰρ εἶχον τὸν Ἰωάννην, ὅτι ὄντως<sup>7</sup> προφήτης ἦν. 33. καὶ ἀποκριθέντες λέγουσι τῷ Ἰησοῦ,<sup>8</sup> “Οὐκ οἶδαμεν.” Καὶ ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἀποκριθεὶς<sup>9</sup> λέγει αὐτοῖς, “Οὐδὲ ἐγὼ λέγω ὑμῖν ἐν ποίᾳ ἐξουσίᾳ ταῦτα ποιῶ.”

XII. 1. ΚΑΙ ἤρξατο αὐτοῖς ἐν παραβολαῖς λέγειν,<sup>10</sup> “Ἀμπελῶνα ἐφύτευσεν ἄνθρωπος, καὶ περιέθηκε φρυγμόν, καὶ ὤρυξεν ὑπολήνιον, καὶ ψικοδόμησε πύργον, καὶ ἐξέδετο<sup>11</sup> αὐτὸν γεωργοῖς, καὶ ἀπέδημησε. 2. καὶ ἀπέστειλε πρὸς τοὺς γεωργοὺς τῷ καιρῷ δοῦλον, ἵνα παρὰ

<sup>1</sup> Omit ἀποκριθεὶς ὧBCLΔ 33.

<sup>2</sup> καγὼ (from parall.) omitted in BCLΔ.

<sup>3</sup> το before I. in ὧBCDLΔ 33.

<sup>4</sup> διελογίζοντο in BCDLΔ.

<sup>5</sup> Omit εἰν ὧABCLΔ. Vide below.

<sup>6</sup> οχλον in ὧBC (W.H.).

<sup>7</sup> ὄντως οτι in BCL.

<sup>8</sup> τῷ I. λεγουσι in ὧBCLΔ 33.

<sup>9</sup> Omit ἀποκριθεὶς ὧBCLΔ 33.

<sup>10</sup> λαλεῖν in ὧBLΔ.

<sup>11</sup> ἐξέδετο in ὧABCL, changed into the more correct ἐξεδετο (T.R.).

to convey the idea that Jesus was giving no fresh cause of offence, simply walking about (Weiss).—Ver. 28. ἵνα ταῦτα ποιῆς: ἵνα with subjunctive after ἐξουσίαν instead of infinitive found in ii. 10, iii. 15.—Ver. 29. The grammatical structure of this sentence, compared with that in Mt. xxi. 24, is crude—καὶ ἀποκρίθητέ μοι instead of ὃν ἐὰν εἴπητέ μοι. It is colloquial grammar, the easy-going grammar of popular conversation.—ἓνα λόγον, vide at Mt. xxi. 24.—Ver. 30. ἀποκρίθητέ μοι, answer me; spoken in the confident tone of one who knows they cannot and will not try.—Vv. 31-32 give their inward thoughts as divined by Jesus. Their spoken answer was a simple οὐκ οἶδαμεν (ver. 33).—Ver. 32. ἀλλὰ εἴπωμεν, ἐξ ἀνθρώπων; = but suppose we say, from men?—ἐφοβούντο τὸν ὄχλον. Here Mk. thinks for them instead of letting them think for themselves as in Mt. (ver. 26, φοβούμεθα) = —they were afraid of the multitude.—ἅπαντες γὰρ, etc.: here again the construction is somewhat crude—Ἰωάννην by attraction, object of the verb εἶχον instead of the subject of ἦν, and ὄντως by trajection separated from the verb it qualifies, ἦν, giving this sense: for all held John truly that he was a prophet = for all held that John was indeed a prophet.

CHAPTER XII. A PARABLE AND SUNDRY CAPTIOUS QUESTIONS.—Vv. 1-12. Parable of the wicked vine-dressers (Mt. xxi. 33-46, Lk. xx. 9-19).—Ver. 1. ἐν παραβολαῖς: the plural may be used simply because there are more parables than one even in Mk., the main one and that of the Rejected Stone (vv. 10, 11), but it is more probably generic = in parabolic style (Meyer, Schanz, Holtz., H. C.). Jesus resumed (ἤρξατο) this style because the circumstances called forth the parabolic mood, that of one “whose heart is chilled, and whose spirit is saddened by a sense of loneliness, and who, retiring within himself, by a process of reflection, frames for his thoughts forms which half conceal, half reveal them”—The Parabolic Teaching of Christ, p. 20.—ἀμπελῶνα: a vineyard, the theme suitably named first.—ἄμπελος is the usual word in Greek authors, but Kypke cites some instances of ἀμπελῶν in late authors.—ὑπολήνιον (here only), the under vat of a wine press, into which the juices trampled out in the ληνὸς flowed.—ἐξέδετο (W.H.), a defective form, as if from δίδω. Cf. ἀπέδετο, Heb. xii. 16.—Ver. 2. τῷ καιρῷ: at

τῶν γεωργῶν λάβῃ ἀπὸ τοῦ καρποῦ<sup>1</sup> τοῦ ἀμπελῶνος· 3. οἱ δὲ<sup>2</sup> λαβόντες αὐτὸν ἔδειραν, καὶ ἀπέστειλαν κενόν. 4. καὶ πάλιν ἀπέστειλε πρὸς αὐτοὺς ἄλλον δοῦλον· κάκεινον λιθοβολήσαντες<sup>3</sup> ἐκεφαλαίωσαν, καὶ ἀπέστειλαν ἠτιμωμένον.<sup>4</sup> 5. καὶ πάλιν<sup>4</sup> ἄλλον ἀπέστειλε· κάκεινον ἀπέκτειναν· καὶ πολλοὺς ἄλλους, τοὺς<sup>5</sup> μὲν δέροντες, τοὺς<sup>5</sup> δὲ ἀποκτείνοντες. 6. ἔτι<sup>6</sup> οὖν ἓνα υἷον ἔχων ἀγαπητὸν αὐτοῦ, ἀπέστειλε καὶ αὐτὸν πρὸς αὐτοὺς ἔσχατον,<sup>6</sup> λέγων, "Ὅτι ἐντραπήσονται τὸν υἷόν μου. 7. ἐκεῖνοι δὲ οἱ γεωργοὶ εἶπον πρὸς ἑαυτούς,<sup>7</sup> "Ὅτι οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ κληρονόμος· δεῦτε, ἀποκτείνωμεν αὐτόν, καὶ ἡμῶν ἔσται ἡ κληρονομία. 8. καὶ λαβόντες αὐτὸν ἀπέκτειναν, καὶ ἐξέβαλον<sup>8</sup> ἔξω τοῦ ἀμπελῶνος. 9. τί οὖν<sup>9</sup> ποιήσει ὁ κύριος τοῦ ἀμπελῶνος; ἐλεύσεται καὶ ἀπολέσει τοὺς γεωργοὺς, καὶ δώσει τὸν ἀμπελῶνα ἄλλοις. 10. Οὐδὲ τὴν γραφὴν ταύτην ἀνέγνωτε; 'λίθον, ὃν ἀπεδοκίμασαν οἱ οἰκοδομοῦντες, οὗτος ἐγενήθη εἰς κεφαλὴν γωνίας. 11. παρὰ Κυρίου ἐγένετο αὕτη, καὶ ἔστι

<sup>1</sup> των καρπων in ΣBCLΔ 33.

<sup>2</sup> και for οι δε in ΣBDLΔ 33.

<sup>3</sup> ΣBDLΔ 33 omit λιθοβολησαντες; ΣBL have κεφαλαιωσαν; and for και απεστειλαν ητιμωμενον, ΣBL have και ητιμασαν (so also DA, but with varying spelling of verb). λιθοβολησαντες comes from Mt.

<sup>4</sup> Omit παλιν ΣBCDLΔ 33.

<sup>5</sup> ους in both places ΣBLΔ. D has ους in first, αλλους in second place.

<sup>6</sup> For ετι ουν . . . εσχατον read ετι ενα ειχεν υιον αγαπ. απεστειλεν αυτον εσχατον προς αυτους with ΣBLΔ.

<sup>7</sup> προς εαυ. ειπαν in ΣBCLΔ 33.

<sup>8</sup> ΣBC place αυτον after απεκτειναν and insert another αυτον after εξεβαλον.

<sup>9</sup> Omit ουν BL cop.

the season of fruit, or at the time agreed on; the two practically coincident.—δοῦλον: a servant, one at a time, three in succession, then many grouped together, and finally the son. In Mt. first one set of servants are sent, then a larger number, then the son.—ἀπὸ τῶν καρπῶν: a part of the fruits, rent paid in kind, a share of the crop.—Ver. 4. ἐκεφαλῖ (αί, T.R.) ὠσαν: ought to mean, summed up (κεφάλαιον, Heb. viii. 1 = the crown of what has been spoken), but generally taken to mean "smote on the head" ("in capite vulneraverunt," Vulg.). A "veritable solecism," Meyer ("Mk. confounded κεφαλαίω with κεφαλῖω"). Field says: "We can only conjecture that the evangelist adopted ἐκεφαλαίωσαν, a known word in an unknown sense, in preference to ἐκεφάλωσαν, of which both sound and sense were unknown".—Ver. 5. πολλοὺς ἄλλους, many others. The construction is very loose. We naturally think of

πολ. ἄλ. as depending on ἀπέστειλε = he sent many others, and possibly that was really what the evangelist had in his mind, though the following participles, δέροντες ἀποκτείνοντες, suggest a verb, having for its subject the agents these participles refer to = they maltreated many others, beating some and killing some. So most recent writers. Vide Buttman, N. T. G., p. 293. Elsner suggests ἀπεσταλμένους after πολλ. ἄλλ. = and many others, sent, they either beat or slew.—Ver. 8. Mk. says: the son and heir they killed and cast out of the vineyard. Mt. and Lk. more naturally, as it seems: they cast out and killed. We must understand Mk. to mean cast out dead (Meyer, Weiss, Schanz), or with Grotius we must take καὶ ἐξέβαλον as = ἐκβληθέντα.—Ver. 11. παρὰ κυρίου, etc., from or through the Lord it (the rejected stone) became this very thing (αὕτη), viz., the head of the corner—κεφαλὴ γωνίας.—Ver. 12. καὶ ἐφοβή-

Θαυμαστή ἐν ὀφθαλμοῖς ἡμῶν.” 12. Καὶ ἐξήτουν αὐτὸν κρατῆσαι, καὶ ἐφοβήθησαν τὸν ὄχλον· ἔγνωσαν γὰρ ὅτι πρὸς αὐτοὺς τὴν παραβολὴν εἶπε· καὶ ἀφείτετε αὐτὸν ἀπῆλθον.

13. Καὶ ἀποστέλλουσι πρὸς αὐτὸν τινὰς τῶν Φαρισαίων καὶ τῶν Ἑρωδιανῶν, ἵνα αὐτὸν ἀγρεύσωσι λόγῳ. 14. οἱ δὲ<sup>1</sup> ἐλθόντες λέγουσιν αὐτῷ, “Διδάσκαλε, οἶδαμεν ὅτι ἀληθὴς εἶ, καὶ οὐ μέλει σοι περὶ οὐδενός· οὐ γὰρ βλέπεις εἰς πρόσωπον ἀνθρώπων, ἀλλ’ ἐπ’ ἀληθείας τὴν ὁδὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ διδάσκεις. ἔξῃσι κῆνσον Καίσαρι δοῦναι<sup>2</sup> ἢ οὐ; 15. δῶμεν, ἢ μὴ δῶμεν;” Ὁ δὲ εἰδὼς αὐτῶν τὴν ὑπόκρισιν εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Τί με πειράζετε; φέρετέ μοι δηνάριον, ἵνα ἴδω.” 16. Οἱ δὲ ἤνεγκαν. Καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς, “Τίνος ἢ εἰκῶν αὕτη καὶ ἢ ἐπιγραφῆ;” Οἱ δὲ εἶπον αὐτῷ, “Καίσαρος.” 17. Καὶ ἀποκριθεὶς ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν αὐτοῖς,<sup>3</sup> “Ἀποδοτε τὰ Καίσαρος<sup>4</sup> Καίσαρι, καὶ τὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ τῷ Θεῷ.” Καὶ ἐθαύμασαν<sup>5</sup> ἐπ’ αὐτῷ. 18. Καὶ ἔρχονται Σαδδουκαῖοι πρὸς αὐτὸν, οὔτινες λέγουσιν

<sup>1</sup> καὶ for οἱ δε in ΞBCDLΔ 33.

<sup>2</sup> δοῦναι before κησον in ΞBCLΔ. For κησον D has επικαιφαλιον.

<sup>3</sup> For καὶ αποκ. . . αυτοῖς B has simply ο δε I. εἶπεν.

<sup>4</sup> τὰ Κ. αποδοτε Κ. in ΞBCLΔ. T.R. conforms to Mt.

<sup>5</sup> ἐξεθαυμαζον in ΞB. T.R. = Mt.

θησαν: καὶ is to all intents adversative here, though grammarians deny that it is ever so used (vide Winer, sec. liii. 3 b) = they sought to lay hold of Him, but they feared the people.—ἔγνωσαν refers to the Sanhedrists (Weiss, Holtz.), not to the ὄχλος (Meyer). It gives a reason at once for their desire to lay hold of Jesus, and for their fear of the people. They must be careful so to act as not to appear to take the parable to themselves, while they really did so.

Vv. 13-17. Tribute to Caesar (Mt. xxii. 15-22, Lk. xx. 20-26).—Ver. 13. τινὰς: according to Mt. the representatives of the Pharisees were disciples, not masters; a cunning device in itself. Vide on Mt. xxii. 16.—ἀγρεύσωσι (here only in N.T.), that they might hunt or catch Him, like a wild animal. Mt.'s expression, παγιδεύσωσι, equally graphic. Lk. avoids both.—λόγῳ: either, their question, or His reply; the one involves the other.—Ver. 14. The flattering speech is differently and more logically (Schanz) given in Mt. Vide notes there on the virtues specif.ed.—ἔξῃστιν, etc.: the question now put, and in two forms in Mk. First, as in Mt., is it lawful, etc.; second, in the added words, δῶμεν ἢ μὴ δῶμεν; These have been distinguished as the theoretical and the practical form of the question respectively (Meyer, Weiss, Schanz), but there is no real difference. Yet it is not idle repetition. The second question gives urgency to the matter: They speak as men who press for an answer for their guidance (Holtz., H. C.).—Ver. 15. δηνάριον: instead of Mt.'s νόμισμα τοῦ κῆνσον; as a matter of fact the denarius was the coin of the tribute.—ἵνα ἴδω, that I may see: as if He needed to study the matter, a touch of humour. The question was already settled by the existence of a coin with Caesar's image on it. This verb and the next, ἤνεγκαν, are without object; laconic style.—Ver. 17. Christ's reply is given here very tersely = the things of Caesar render to Caesar, and those of God to God.—ἐξεθαύμαζον: the compound, in place of Mt.'s simple verb, suggests the idea of excessive astonishment, though we must always allow for the tendency in late Greek to use compounds. Here only in N. T., occasionally in Sept.

Vv. 18-27. The resurrection question (Mt. xxii. 23-33, Lk. xx. 27-30).—Ver. 19. The case is awkwardly stated here as compared with Mt., though Lk. retains the awkwardness = if the brother of any

ἀνάστασιν μὴ εἶναι· καὶ ἐπηρώτησαν<sup>1</sup> αὐτόν. λέγοντες, 19. “Διδάσκαλε. Μωσῆς ἔγραψεν ἡμῖν, ὅτι ἐάν τις ἀδελφὸς ἀποθάνῃ, καὶ καταλίπῃ γυναῖκα, καὶ τέκνα μὴ ἀφῆ,<sup>2</sup> ἵνα λάβῃ ὁ ἀδελφὸς αὐτοῦ τὴν γυναῖκα αὐτοῦ,<sup>3</sup> καὶ ἐξαναστήσῃ σπέρμα τῷ ἀδελφῷ αὐτοῦ· 20. ἑπτὰ ἀδελφοὶ ἦσαν· καὶ ὁ πρῶτος ἔλαβε γυναῖκα, καὶ ἀποθνήσκων οὐκ ἀφῆκε σπέρμα· 21. καὶ ὁ δεύτερος ἔλαβεν αὐτήν, καὶ ἀπέθανε, καὶ οὐδὲ αὐτὸς ἀφῆκε σπέρμα<sup>4</sup>· καὶ ὁ τρίτος ὡσαύτως· 22. καὶ<sup>5</sup> ἔλαβον αὐτήν οἱ ἑπτὰ, καὶ οὐκ ἀφῆκαν σπέρμα.<sup>6</sup> ἔσχατῆ<sup>7</sup> πάντων ἀπέθανε καὶ ἡ γυνή.<sup>8</sup> 23. ἐν τῇ οὖν<sup>7</sup> ἀναστάσει, ὅταν ἀναστῶσι,<sup>8</sup> τίνας αὐτῶν ἔσται γυνή; οἱ γὰρ ἑπτὰ ἔσχον αὐτήν γυναῖκα.” 24. Καὶ ἀποκριθεὶς ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν αὐτοῖς,<sup>9</sup> “Οὐ διὰ τοῦτο πλανᾶσθε, μὴ εἰδότες τὰς γραφάς, μηδὲ τὴν δύναμιν τοῦ Θεοῦ; 25. ὅταν γὰρ ἐκ νεκρῶν ἀναστῶσι, οὔτε γαμοῦσι, οὔτε γαμίσκονται,<sup>10</sup> ἀλλ’ εἰσὶν ὡς ἄγγελοι οἱ ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς. 26. περὶ δὲ τῶν νεκρῶν, ὅτι ἐγείρονται, οὐκ ἀνέγνωτε ἐν τῇ βίβλῳ Μωσέως, ἐπὶ τῆς<sup>11</sup> βάτου, ὡς<sup>12</sup> εἶπεν αὐτῷ ὁ Θεός, λέγων, ‘Ἐγὼ ὁ Θεὸς Ἀβραάμ, καὶ

<sup>1</sup> ἐπηρωτων in ΞBCDLΔ 33. T.R. = parall.

<sup>2</sup> μη ἀφη τεκνον in BLΔ.

<sup>3</sup> Omit αὐτου ΞBCLΔ.

<sup>4</sup> For και ουδε . . . σπέρμα ΞBCLΔ 33 have μη καταλιπον σ.

<sup>5</sup> For και ελαβον . . . σπέρμα ΞBCLΔ 33 have και οι επτα ουκ αφηκαν σπέρμα.

<sup>6</sup> For εσχατη . . . γυνη read with ΞBCLΔ 33 εσχατον και η γυνη απεθανεν.

<sup>7</sup> Omit ουν ΞBCLΔ.

<sup>8</sup> The oldest uncials omit οταν ἀναστῶσι, which may, as Weiss suggests, have fallen off by similar ending (ἀναστασει) (Tisch. inserts, W.H. omit).

<sup>9</sup> For και . . . αὐτοῖς read εφη αὐτοῖς ο I. with ΞBCLΔ 33.

<sup>10</sup> γαμίζονται in ΞBCLΔ (γαμίζουσι D).

<sup>11</sup> του in ΞABCLΔ al. της in D (= Lk.).

<sup>12</sup> πως in ΞBCLΔ. ως in D, al.

one die, and leave a wife, and leave not children, let his (the brother's) brother take his wife and raise up seed to his brother. Mk. avoids the word ἐπιγαμβρεύσει (in Mt.).—Ver. 20: abrupt statement of the case, without connecting particle, and ἑπτὰ placed first for emphasis = seven brothers there were (in a case supposed, or pretendedly real, παρ' ἡμῖν, Mt.).—Ver. 23. τίνας αὐτῶν, etc., of which of them shall she be the wife? (γυνή, without the article, vide notes on Mt.).—Ver. 24. οὐ πλανᾶσθε, do ye not err? not weaker but stronger than a positive assertion: “pro vehementi affirmatione,” Grotius.—διὰ τοῦτο usually refers to something going before, and it may do so here, pointing to their question as involving ignorant presuppositions regarding the future state, an ignorance due, in turn, to ignorance of Scripture teaching and the power of God. But it is more natural to connect it with the following clause, as in cases when the expression precedes ὅτι, ἵνα, ὅταν, etc., for μὴ εἰδότες is = ὅτι οὐκ οἶδατε. So De Wette and others, vide Winer, sec. xxiii. 5.—Ver. 26. ἐν τῇ βίβλῳ M.: a general reference to the Pentateuch, the following phrase, ἐπὶ τοῦ βάτου, supplying a more definite reference to the exact place in the book, the section relating to the bush. “At the bush,” i.e., Ex. iii., similarly reference might be made to Ex. xv., by the title: “at the song of Moses”.—βάτος is masculine here according to the best reading; feminine in Lk. xx. 37. The feminine is Hellenistic, the masculine Attic. Vide Thayer's Grimm. The word occurs in Aristo-

δ<sup>1</sup> Θεὸς Ἰσαάκ, καὶ δ<sup>1</sup> Θεὸς Ἰακώβ<sup>2</sup>; 27. Οὐκ ἔστιν δ<sup>2</sup> Θεὸς νεκρῶν, ἀλλὰ Θεὸς<sup>3</sup> ζώντων· ὑμεῖς οὖν<sup>4</sup> πολὺ πλανᾶσθε.”

28. Καὶ προσελθὼν εἰς τῶν γραμματέων, ἀκούσας αὐτῶν συζητούντων, εἶδώς ὅτι καλῶς αὐτοῖς ἀπεκρίθη,<sup>5</sup> ἐπηρώτησεν αὐτόν, “Ποία ἐστὶ πρώτη πασῶν ἐντολή<sup>6</sup> ;” 29. Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς ἀπεκρίθη αὐτῷ,<sup>7</sup> “Ὅτι πρώτη πασῶν τῶν ἐντολῶν,<sup>8</sup> “Ἄκουε, Ἰσραὴλ· Κύριος ὁ Θεὸς ἡμῶν Κύριος εἰς ἐστί. 30. καὶ ἀγαπήσεις Κύριον τὸν Θεόν σου ἐξ ὅλης τῆς καρδίας σου καὶ ἐξ ὅλης τῆς ψυχῆς σου, καὶ ἐξ ὅλης τῆς διανοίας σου, καὶ ἐξ ὅλης τῆς ἰσχύος σου.” αὕτη πρώτη ἐντολή.<sup>9</sup> 31. καὶ δευτέρα ὁμοία αὕτη,<sup>10</sup> “Ἀγαπήσεις τὸν πλησίον σου ὡς σεαυτόν.”

<sup>1</sup> BD omit the article in these two places.

<sup>2</sup> BDLA omit α. which has been introduced through θεος being taken as subject.

<sup>3</sup> Omit θεος ΞBCDΔΣ.

<sup>4</sup> ΞBCLΔ K cop. omit ὑμεῖς οὖν. Vide below.

<sup>5</sup> ἀπεκρίθη αὐτοῖς in ΞBCLΔ 33.

<sup>6</sup> ἐντολή πρώτη παντῶν in ΞBCLΔ. T.R. is a grammatical correction.

<sup>7</sup> ἀπεκρίθη ο Ι. in ΞBLΔ 33.

<sup>8</sup> For ὅτι . . . ἐντολῶν read with ΞBLΔ ὅτι πρώτη ἐστί.

<sup>9</sup> Omit αὕτη π. εν. (a gloss from ver. 28) with ΞBLΔ.

<sup>10</sup> For καὶ . . . αὕτη BLA have simply δευτέρα αὕτη (Tisch., W.H.).

phanes and in the N. T.; possibly colloquial (Kennedy, Sources of N.T.G., p. 78).—Ver. 27. πολὺ πλανᾶσθε, much ye err. This new and final assertion of ignorance is very impressive; severe, but kindly; much weakened by adding ὑμεῖς οὖν.

Vv. 28-34. The great commandment (Mt. xxii. 34-40). The permanent value of this section lies in the answer of Jesus to the question put to Him, which is substantially the same in both Mt. and Mk. The accounts vary in regard to the motive of the questioner. In Mt. he comes to tempt, in Mk. in hope of getting confirmation in a new way of thinking on the subject, similar to that of the man in quest of eternal life—that which put the ethical above the ritual. No anxious attempt should be made to remove the discrepancy.—Ver. 28. προσελθὼν, ἀκούσας, εἶδώς: the second and third of these three participles may be viewed as the ground of the first = one of the scribes, having heard them disputing, and being conscious that He (Jesus) answered them well, approached and asked Him, etc.—ποία, what sort of; it is a question, not of an individual commandment, but of characteristic quality. The questioner, as conceived by Mk., probably had in view the distinction between ritual and ethical, or positive and moral. The prevalent tendency was to attach special importance to the positive, and to find the great matters of the law in circumcision, Sabbath-keeping, the rules respecting phylacteries, etc. (Lightfoot). The opposite tendency, to emphasise the ethical, was not unrepresented, especially in the school of Hillel, which taught that the love of our neighbour is the kernel of the law. The questioner, as he appears in Mk., leant to this side.—Ver. 29. ἄκουε, Ἰσραὴλ, etc.: this monotheistic preface to the great commandment is not given by Mt. Possibly Mk. has added it by way of making the quotation complete, but more probably Jesus Himself quoted it to suggest that duty, like God, was one, in opposition to the prevailing habit of viewing duty as consisting in isolated precepts. Mt. compensates for the omission by preserving the reflection: “On these two commandments hangeth the whole law and the prophets”. In Mk. the bond of unity is God; in Mt. love.—Ver. 30. Heart, soul, mind, strength (ισχύος); in Mt.: heart, soul, mind; in Lk. (x. 27): heart, soul, strength, mind; in Deut. (vi. 4): heart, soul, strength (δυνάμεως); all varied ways of saying “to the uttermost degree” = “all that is within”;

Μείζων τούτων ἄλλη ἐντολή οὐκ ἔστι.” 32. Καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ ὁ γραμματεὺς, “Καλῶς, διδάσκαλε, ἐπ’ ἀληθείας εἶπας, ὅτι εἰς ἐστὶ Θεός,<sup>1</sup> καὶ οὐκ ἔστιν ἄλλος πλὴν αὐτοῦ. 33. καὶ τὸ ἀγαπᾶν αὐτὸν ἐξ ὅλης τῆς καρδίας, καὶ ἐξ ὅλης τῆς συνέσεως, καὶ ἐξ ὅλης τῆς ψυχῆς,<sup>2</sup> καὶ ἐξ ὅλης τῆς ἰσχύος, καὶ τὸ ἀγαπᾶν τὸν πλησίον ὡς ἑαυτόν, πλεόν<sup>3</sup> ἐστὶ πάντων τῶν ὀλοκαυτωμάτων καὶ τῶν θυσιῶν.” 34. Καὶ ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἰδὼν αὐτόν, ὅτι νουεχῶς ἀπεκρίθη, εἶπεν αὐτῷ, “Οὐ μακρὰν εἶ ἀπὸ τῆς βασιλείας τοῦ Θεοῦ.” Καὶ οὐδεὶς οὐκέτι ἐτόλμα αὐτὸν ἐπερωτῆσαι.

35. Καὶ ἀποκριθεὶς ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἔλεγε, διδάσκων ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, “Πῶς λέγουσιν οἱ γραμματεῖς, ὅτι ὁ Χριστὸς υἱὸς ἐστὶ Δαβίδ<sup>4</sup>; 36. αὐτὸς γὰρ<sup>5</sup> Δαβὶδ εἶπεν ἐν τῷ Πνεύματι τῷ Ἁγίῳ, ‘Εἶπεν ὁ Κύριος τῷ κυρίῳ μου, Κάθου<sup>6</sup> ἐκ δεξιῶν μου, ἕως ἂν θῶ τοὺς ἐχθρούς σου ὑποπόδιον<sup>7</sup> τῶν ποδῶν σου.’ 37. Αὐτὸς οὖν<sup>8</sup> Δαβὶδ λέγει αὐτὸν κύριον· καὶ πόθεν υἱὸς αὐτοῦ ἐστὶ<sup>9</sup>;” Καὶ ὁ πολὺς ὄχλος ἤκουεν αὐτοῦ ἠδέως.

<sup>1</sup> Ἡ ABLΔΣ αλ. omit θεος.

<sup>2</sup> Omit this clause imported from ver. 30, and found in ADΣ αλ.

<sup>3</sup> περισσοτερον in Ἡ BLD 33.

<sup>4</sup> Δαβιδ before ἐστιν in Ἡ BDL.

<sup>5</sup> Ἡ BLD omit γαρ.

<sup>6</sup> καθισον in B (Trg., W.H., marg.).

<sup>7</sup> υποκατω in BD sah. cop.

<sup>8</sup> Ἡ BLD omit ουν.

<sup>9</sup> αουτου ἐστιν υιος in BL.

and with the full potency of that “all”.—Ver. 32. καλῶς, ἐπ’ ἀληθείας: to be taken together = well indeed!—εἰς ἐστὶν: He is one (God understood, supplied in T.R.).—Ver. 33: the manner of loving God is stated by the scribe in yet another form of language: heart, understanding (συνέσεως), might.—περισσότερόν ἐστιν, etc., is more, far, than all the burnt offerings and the sacrifices (meat offerings) = the whole Levitical ritual. There is a ring of conviction in the words. The varied expression of the law of love to God (συνέσεως) also bears witness to sincerity and independent thought.—ὀλοκαυτωμάτων (ὀλοκαυτώ, from ὄλος, καίω), here and in Heb. x. 6, from Sept., for  $\text{יהוה}$ .—Ver.

34. νουεχῶς, intelligently, as one who had a mind (of his own), and really thought what he said, a refreshing thing to meet with at any time, and especially there and then. Here only in N.T. = νουεχόντως in classics.—οὐ μακρὰν, not far; near by insight into its nature (the ethical supreme), and in spirit—a sincere thinker.—οὐδεὶς οὐκέτι, etc.: questioning given up because seen to be vain, always ending either in the confusion or in the acquiescence of questioners (cf. Lk. xx. 40).

Vv. 35-37. David's Son and David's Lord (Mt. xxii. 41-46, Lk. xx. 41-44). On the aim and import of this counter-question vide notes on Mt.—Ver. 35. ἀποκριθεὶς, διδάσκων ἔ. τ. ἰ.: these two participles describe the circumstances under which the question was asked—addressed to silenced and disheartened opponents, and forming a part of the public instruction Jesus had been giving in the temple; a large body of people present.—Ver. 36. αὐτὸς Δ. Over against the dogma of the scribes, stated in ver. 35 as something well known (in Mt. Jesus asks for their opinion on the topic), is set the declaration of David himself, introduced without connecting particle. David, who ought to know better than the scribes.—ἐν τῷ π. τ. ἁ.: especially when speaking, as they would all admit, by inspiration.—εἶπεν, etc.: the quotation as given in T.R. exactly reproduces the Sept. The omission of ὁ before Κύριος in BD turns the latter into a proper name of God.—κάθου (κάθισον in B) is a late or “popular” form of the

38. Καὶ ἔλεγεν αὐτοῖς ἐν τῇ διδαχῇ αὐτοῦ,<sup>1</sup> "Βλέπετε ἀπὸ τῶν γραμματέων, τῶν θελότων ἐν στολαῖς περιπατεῖν, καὶ ἀσπασμούς ἐν ταῖς ἀγοραῖς, 39. καὶ πρωτοκαθεδρίας ἐν ταῖς συναγωγαῖς, καὶ πρωτοκλισίας ἐν τοῖς δείπνοις· 40. οἱ κατεσθίοντες<sup>2</sup> τὰς οἰκίας τῶν χηρῶν, καὶ προφάσει μακρὰ προσευχόμενοι· οὗτοι λήψονται περισσότερον κρίμα."

41. Καὶ καθίσας ὁ Ἰησοῦς<sup>3</sup> κατέναντι<sup>4</sup> τοῦ γαιζοφυλακίου ἐθεώρει πῶς ὁ ὄχλος βάλλει χαλκὸν εἰς τὸ γαιζοφυλάκιον. καὶ πολλοὶ

<sup>1</sup> ἐν τῇ διδ. αὐτοῦ ελεγεν ἐν BBLΔ 33.

<sup>2</sup> B has κατεσθοντες.

<sup>3</sup> BBLΔ cop. omit ο ι.

<sup>4</sup> So in BBLΔΔΣ (Tisch., W.H., text, brackets). απεναντι ἐν B (W.H. marg.).

present imperative of κάθημαι.—Ver. 37. καὶ ὁ πολὺς ὄχλος, etc.: this remark about the large crowd which had been witness to these encounters, as it stands in our N. T. at end of ver. 37, seems to refer merely to the closing scene of the conflict. Probably the evangelist meant the reflection to apply to the whole = the masses enjoyed Christ's victory over the classes, who one after the other measured their wits against His. The remark is true to the life. The people gladly hear one who speaks felicitously, refutes easily, and escapes dexterously from the hands of designing men. (ὡς ἡδέως διαλεγόμενου, καὶ εὐχερῶς αὐτοῦ ἀνατρέποντος, καὶ ὡς αὐτὸς ἀπηλλαγμένος τῆς βασκανίας—Euthy. Zig.)

Vv. 38-40. Warning against the influence of the scribes (Lk. xx. 45-47). As if encouraged by the manifest sympathy of the crowd, Jesus proceeds to warn them against the baleful influence of their religious guides.—Ver. 38. ἐν τῇ διδαχῇ α.: this expression alone suffices to show that what Mk. here gives is but a fragment of a larger discourse of the same type—an anti-scribal manifesto. Here again the evangelist bears faithful witness to a great body of διδαχῇ he does not record. Mt. xxiii. shows how much he omits at this point.—ἔλεγεν: the imperfect here may be taken as suggesting that what follows is but a sample = He was saying things like this.—βλέπετε ἀπὸ ἐν viii. 15.—θελότων, desiring, not so much claiming as their privilege (Meyer) as taking a childish pleasure in = φιλοῦντων, Lk. xx. 46.—ἐν στολαῖς, in long robes, worn by persons of rank and distinction ("gravitatis index," Grotius), possibly worn specially long by the scribes that the tassels attached might trail on the ground.

So Wünsche, ad loc. Vide picture of Pharisee in his robes in Lund, Heiligthümer.—περιπατεῖν: infinitive, depending on θελότων followed by accusatives, ἀσπασμούς, etc., depending on same word; oratio variata, vide Mt. xxiii. 6.—Ver. 40. οἱ κατεσθίοντες: this verse is probably still to be regarded as a continuation of the description of the scribes commencing with τῶν θελότων, only the writer has lost the sense of the original construction, and instead of the genitive puts the nominative, so giving to what follows the force of an independent sentence (so Weiss). Grotius, Meyer, and Schanz take ver. 40 as a really independent sentence. Lk. set the precedent for this; for, apparently having Mk.'s text before him, he turns οἱ κατεσθίοντες into οἱ κατεσθίονσι. Holtzmann, H. C., is undecided between the two views. As to the sense, two facts are stated about the scribes: they devoured the houses, the property of widows, and they made long (μακρὰ, vide on Lk. xx. 47) prayers in the homes of, and presumably for, these widows.—προφάσει: the real aim to get money, the long seemingly fervent prayers a blind to hide this aim. It is not necessary to suppose that the money-getting and the praying were connected by regular contract (so apparently Fritzsche, and Weiss in Meyer). For πρόσφαις cf. Phil. i. 18 and especially 1 Thess. ii. 5.—οὗτοι λήψονται, etc.: this remark applies specially to the conduct just described: catching widows' substance with the bait of prayer, which Jesus characteristically pronounces exceptionally damnable in view of its sleek hypocrisy and low greed. The appending of this reflection favours the view that ver. 40 is after all an independent sentence. In it and the two preceding πλούσιοι ἔβαλλον πολλά· 42. καὶ ἔλθοῦσα μία χήρα πτωχὴ ἔβαλε λεπτὰ δύο, ὃ ἐστὶ κοδράντης. 43. καὶ προσκαλεσάμενος τοὺς μαθητὰς αὐτοῦ, λέγει<sup>1</sup> αὐτοῖς, “Ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι ἡ χήρα αὕτη ἢ πτωχὴ πλείον πάντων βέβληκε τῶν βαλόντων<sup>2</sup> εἰς τὸ γαζοφυλάκιον. 44. πάντες γὰρ ἐκ τοῦ περισσεύοντος αὐτοῖς ἔβαλον· αὕτη δὲ ἐκ τῆς ὑστερήσεως αὐτῆς πάντα ὅσα εἶχεν ἔβαλεν, ὅλον τὸν βίον αὐτῆς.”

<sup>1</sup> εἶπεν in ΞABDLΔΣ.

<sup>2</sup> For βεβλήκε, ABDLΔΣ 33 have εβαλεν, and for βαλοντων ΞABDLΔΣ have βαλλοντων. Tisch. reads βεβληκεν τ. βαλλ., W.H. εβαλεν τ. βαλλ.

we have a very slight yet vivid picture of Pharisaic piety in its vanity, avarice, and hypocrisy.

Vv. 41-44. The widow's offering (Lk. xxi. 1-4). This charming story comes in with dramatic effect, after the repulsive picture of the greedy praying scribe. The reference to the widows victimised by the hypocrites may have suggested it to the evangelist's mind. It bears the unmistakable stamp of an authentic reminiscence, and one can imagine what comfort it would bring to the poor, who constituted the bulk of the early Gentile Church (Schanz).—Ver. 41. καθίσας : Jesus, a close and keen observer of all that went on (xi. 11), sits down at a spot convenient for noticing the people casting their contributions into the temple treasury.—γαζοφυλάκιον (γάζα, Persian, φυλακὴ = θησαυροφυλάκιον, Hesychius). Commentators are agreed in thinking that the reference is to the treasury in the court of the women, consisting of thirteen brazen trumpet-shaped receptacles, each destined for its distinctive gifts, indicated by an inscription, so many for the temple tribute, and money gifts for sacrifice; others for incense, wood, etc.; all the gifts having reference to the service carried on. The gifts were people's offerings, generally moderate in amount: “the Peter's pence of the Jews” (Holtzmann, H. C.).—χαλκὸν may be meant for money in general, copper representing all sorts (Fritzsche, Grotius, etc.); but there seems to be no good reason why we should not take it strictly as denoting contributions in copper, the ordinary, if not exclusive, money gifts (Meyer; Holtzmann, H. C.).—πολλοὶ πλούσιοι, etc., many rich were casting in much: Jesus was near enough to see that, also to notice exactly what the widow gave. Among the rich givers might be some of the praying scribes who had imposed on widows by their show of piety, suggesting reflections on where wealthy givers get the money they bestow for pious purposes. That is not a matter of indifference to the Kingdom of God, whatever it may be to beneficiaries.—Ver. 42. μία χ. π., one poverty-stricken widow. With what intense interest Jesus would watch her movements, after His eye fell on her! How much will she give?—λεπτὰ δύο, “two mites”; minute, of course, but two: she might have kept one of them (Bengel).—λεπτόν, so called from its smallness; smallest of brass coins—significant of deep poverty; two given, of a willing mind.—Ver. 43. ἡ πτωχὴ, emphatic—the poverty-stricken; manifest from her dress and wasted look.—Ver. 44.—ἐκ τῆς ὑστερήσεως, from her state of want, cf. on Lk.—ὑστερήσις, here and in Phil. iv. 11.—πάντα ὅσα: this not visible to the eye; divined by the mind, but firmly believed to be true, as appears from the repetition of the statement in another form.—ὅλον τὸν βίον, her whole means of life. For the use of βίος in this sense vide Lk. viii. 43, xv. 12, 30; similarly in classics.

Though it has nothing to do with strict exegesis, I am tempted to give here a prayer by that felicitous interpreter and devout monk, Euthymius Zigabenus, based on this beautiful Gospel story: “May my soul become a widow casting out the devil to which it is joined and subject, and casting into the treasury of God two lepta, the body and the mind; the one made light (λεπτυνθέντα) by temperance, the other by humility”.

CHAPTER XIII. THE APOCALYPTIC DISCOURSE. This is the solitary instance in which the second evangelist has given at length a discourse of Jesus. The fulness with which the apocalyptic discourse is recorded is all the more striking, when contrasted with the very meagre reproduction of the anti-pharisaic discourse (xii. 38-40). The exception made in its favour was doubtless due to

XIII. 1. ΚΑΙ ἐκπορευομένου αὐτοῦ ἐκ τοῦ ἱεροῦ, λέγει αὐτῷ εἰς τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ, “Διδάσκαλε, ἴδε, ποταποὶ λίθοι καὶ ποταπαὶ οἰκοδομαί.” 2. Καὶ ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἀποκριθεὶς<sup>1</sup> εἶπεν αὐτῷ, “Βλέπεις ταύτας τὰς μεγάλας οἰκοδομάς; οὐ μὴ ἀφεθῆ<sup>2</sup> λίθος ἐπὶ λίθῳ,<sup>3</sup> ὃς οὐ μὴ καταλυθῆ.” 3. Καὶ καθήμενου αὐτοῦ εἰς τὸ ὄρος τῶν Ἐλαιῶν κατέναντι τοῦ ἱεροῦ, ἐπηρώτων<sup>4</sup> αὐτὸν κατ’ ἰδίαν Πέτρος καὶ Ἰάκωβος καὶ Ἰωάννης καὶ Ἀνδρέας, 4. “Εἰπέ<sup>5</sup> ἡμῖν, πότε ταῦτα ἔσται; καὶ τί τὸ σημεῖον ὅταν μέλλῃ πάντα ταῦτα συντελεῖσθαι<sup>6</sup>,” 5. Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς ἀποκριθεὶς αὐτοῖς ἤρξατο λέγειν,<sup>7</sup> “Βλέπετε μὴ τις ὑμᾶς πλανήσῃ. 6. πολλοὶ γὰρ<sup>8</sup> ἐλεύσονται ἐπὶ τῷ ὀνόματί μου,

<sup>1</sup> Omit ἀποκριθεὶς with  $\aleph$ BL 33.

<sup>2</sup> Add ὡδε with  $\aleph$ BDL $\Delta$ S (W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> λίθον in  $\aleph$ BL $\Delta$  33 (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> ἐπηρώτα in  $\aleph$ BL 33 (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> εἶπον in  $\aleph$ BDL 33.

<sup>6</sup> ταῦτα συντελ. πάντα in  $\aleph$ BL.

<sup>7</sup>  $\aleph$ BL 33 have ἤρξατο λέγειν αὐτοῖς without ἀποκριθεὶς (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>8</sup> Omit γὰρ  $\aleph$ BL.

Mk.'s estimate of its interest and value for his first readers. Perhaps he was influenced in part by the fascinations of prediction. The real interest of the discourse and the key to its interpretation are to be found, as pointed out in the notes on the corresponding chapter in Mt., in its ethical aim—"to forewarn and forearm the representatives of a new faith, so that they might not lose their heads or their hearts in an evil perplexing time": notes on Mt. For a full exposition of the discourse in the light of this aim readers are referred to these notes.

Vv. 1-4. The introduction (Mt. xxiv. 1-3; Lk. xxi. 5-7).—Ver. 1. εἰς τ. μαθητῶν, one of the disciples; the disciples generally in Mt.; who, not said, nor for what motive; probably to divert the Master from gloomy thoughts.—ποταποὶ λίθοι, etc.: what stones and what buildings! the former remarkable for size, as described by Josephus (Antiq., xv., II, 3); the latter for beauty. On ποταπός vide at Mt. viii. 27.—Ver. 2. βλέπεις: a question, do you see? to fix attention on an object concerning which a startling statement is to be made.—μεγάλας, great buildings, acknowledging the justness of the admiration and pointing to a feature which might seem incompatible with the statement following: that vast strong pile surely proof against destruction!—Ver. 3. εἰς τὸ ὄρος: implying previous motion towards, before sitting down on the Mount of Olives.—κατέναντι τ. ἱ., opposite the temple, with the admired buildings in full view; this graphic touch in Mk. only.

—ἐπηρώτα ( $\aleph$ BL), singular: Peter in view as the chief speaker, though accompanied by other three; imperfect, as subordinate to ἤρξατο in ver. 5 explaining the occasion of the discourse Jesus then began to deliver.—ὁ Πέτρος, etc.: the well-known three, and a fourth—Andrew; a selection found only here. Were these all the disciples with Jesus, all who went with Him to Bethany in the evenings, the rest remaining in Jerusalem? The two pairs of brothers were the first called to discipleship (Mk. i. 16-20). This reminiscence points to internal relations in the disciple-circle imperfectly known to us.—κατ’ ἰδίαν, apart, i.e., from the rest of the disciples. Mt. has the same phrase, though he assumes all the disciples to be present, which is suggestive of literary dependence.—Ver. 4. The question of the four has exclusive reference to the predicted destruction of the sacred buildings. In Mt. three questions are mixed together: vide notes there.

Vv. 5-8. Signs prelude of the end (Mt. xxiv. 4-8, Lk. xxi. 8-11). Jerusalem's judgment-day not to come till certain things have happened: advent of false Messiahs, rise of wars.—βλέπετε, take heed that no one deceive you; the ethical key-note struck at once; the aim of the whole discourse to help disciples to keep heads cool, and hearts brave in a perilous evil time (vide on Mt.).—Ver. 6. ἐγώ εἰμι, I am (He, the Christ). In what sense to be understood vide on Mt. The Messianic hope misconceived was the ruin of the Jewish people.—Ver. 7

λέγοντες, ὅτι ἐγὼ εἰμι· καὶ πολλοὺς πλανήσουσιν. 7. ὅταν δὲ ἀκούσητε πολέμους καὶ ἀκοὰς πολέμων, μὴ θροεῖσθε· δεῖ γὰρ<sup>1</sup> γενέσθαι· ἀλλ' οὕτω τὸ τέλος. 8. Ἐγερθήσεται γὰρ ἔθνος ἐπὶ ἔθνος, καὶ βασιλεία ἐπὶ βασιλείαν· καὶ<sup>2</sup> ἔσονται σεισμοὶ κατὰ τόπους, καὶ<sup>2</sup> ἔσονται λιμοὶ καὶ ταραχαί.<sup>3</sup> ἀρχαί<sup>4</sup> ὠδίνων ταῦτα. 9. Βλέπετε δὲ ὑμεῖς ἑαυτοὺς. παραδώσουσι γὰρ<sup>5</sup> ὑμᾶς εἰς συνέδρια, καὶ εἰς συναγωγὰς δαρήσεσθε, καὶ ἐπὶ ἡγεμόνων καὶ βασιλέων σταθήσεσθε ἕνεκεν ἐμοῦ, εἰς μαρτύριον αὐτοῖς· 10. καὶ εἰς πάντα τὰ ἔθνη δεῖ πρῶτον<sup>6</sup> κηρυχθῆναι τὸ εὐαγγέλιον. 11. ὅταν δὲ ἀγάγωσιν<sup>7</sup> ὑμᾶς παραδιδόντες, μὴ προμεριμνᾶτε τί λαλήσητε, μηδὲ μελετᾶτε<sup>8</sup> ἀλλ' ὃ ἐὰν δοθῇ ὑμῖν ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ὥρᾳ, τοῦτο λαλεῖτε· οὐ γὰρ ἔστε ὑμεῖς οἱ λαλοῦντες, ἀλλὰ τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ Ἅγιον. 12. παραδώσει δὲ<sup>9</sup> ἀδελφὸς ἀδελφὸν εἰς θάνατον, καὶ πατὴρ τέκνον·

<sup>1</sup> ΞB sah. cop. omit γαρ. Vide below.

<sup>2</sup> ΞBDL omit the first καὶ and BL the second. Vide below.

<sup>3</sup> ΞBDL vet. Lat. vulg. cop. omit καὶ ταραχαί (so Trg., Tisch., W.H.), but these words may have fallen out by similar ending (αρχαί, so Weiss).

<sup>4</sup> αρχη in ΞBDLΔ (Trg., Tisch., W.H.), which may be an assimilation to Mt. αρχαί in AEFΓΧΓΣ al. (Weiss).

<sup>5</sup> Omit γαρ BL cop.

<sup>6</sup> πρῶτον δεῖ in ΞBD. LΔ = T.R.

<sup>7</sup> καὶ ὅταν ἀγῶσιν in ΞBDL.

<sup>8</sup> ΞBDL omit μηδὲ μελετᾶτε.

<sup>9</sup> καὶ παραδώσει in ΞBDL.

πολέμους: first pseudo-Messiahs preaching national independence; then, naturally, as a second σημεῖον, wars, actual or threatened (ἀκοὰς πολ.).—μὴ θροεῖσθε: good counsel, cheerful in tone, laconic in expression = be not scared; they must happen; but the end not yet. The disconnected style, no γὰρ after δεῖ (ΞB), suits the emotional prophetic mood.—τὸ τέλος, the crisis of Jerusalem.—Ver. 8. ἔσονται σεισμοί, etc., there will be earthquakes in places; there will be famines. Here again the briefest reading without connecting particles (καὶ, καὶ) is to be preferred, as suiting the abrupt style congenial to the prophetic mood. The καὶ ταραχαί after λιμοὶ may have fallen out of ΞBDL by homoeoteleuton (ἀρχαί following immediately after), but after earthquakes and famines disturbances seems an anticlimax.

Ver. 9-13. Third sign, drawn from apostolic experiences (Mt. xxiv. 9-13, Lk. xxi. 12-19). On the hypothesis that this is an interpolation into the discourse, having no organic connection with it, vide on Mt. The contents of this section, especially in Mk.'s version, correspond closely to Mt. x. 17-22. But the question, in which of the two discourses the logion has the more historical setting, is not thereby settled. Some utterance of the sort was certainly germane to the present situation.—Ver. 9. βλέπετε, etc.: not meant to strike a depressing note, but to suggest that the most interesting omens should be found in their own experiences as the Apostles of the faith, which, however full of tribulation, would yet be, on the whole, victorious.—παραδώσουσι, etc.: the tribulations are not disguised, but the blunt statement only lends emphasis to the declaration in ver. 10 that, notwithstanding, the Gospel must (δεῖ) and shall be proclaimed on a wide scale.—εἰς συναγωγὰς δαρήσεσθε: the εἰς here is pregnant = you, delivered to the synagogues, shall be maltreated. Bengel renders: "in synagogas inter verbera agemini" = ye shall be driven into the synagogues with clubs. So Nösgen.—Ver. 11 gives counsel for Apostles placed at the bar of kings and rulers. They are not to be anxious beforehand (προμεριμνᾶτε, here only in N.T.) even as to what they shall say, not to speak of what shall happen to them as the result of the trial. Their apologia will be given to them. They will not be the καὶ ἐπαναστήσονται τέκνα ἐπὶ γονεῖς, καὶ θανατώσουσιν αὐτούς·

13. καὶ ἔσεσθε μισούμενοι ὑπὸ πάντων διὰ τὸ ὄνομά μου· ὁ δὲ ὑπομείνας εἰς τέλος, οὗτος σωθήσεται.

14. “Ὅταν δὲ ἴδητε τὸ βδέλυγμα τῆς ἐρημώσεως, τὸ ῥηθὲν ὑπὸ Δανιὴλ τοῦ προφήτου,<sup>1</sup> ἔστος<sup>2</sup> ὅπου οὐ δεῖ· (ὁ ἀναγινώσκων νοεῖτω·)
τότε οἱ ἐν τῇ Ἰουδαίᾳ φευγέτωσαν εἰς τὰ ὄρη· 15. ὁ δὲ<sup>3</sup> ἐπὶ τοῦ δώματος μὴ καταβάτω εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν,<sup>4</sup> μηδὲ εἰσελθῆτω ἄραι τι<sup>5</sup> ἐκ τῆς οἰκίας αὐτοῦ· 16. καὶ ὁ εἰς τὸν ἀγρὸν ὧν<sup>6</sup> μὴ ἐπιστρεψάτω εἰς τὰ ὀπίσω, ἄραι τὸ ἱμάτιον αὐτοῦ. 17. οὐαὶ δὲ ταῖς ἐν γαστρὶ ἔχούσαις καὶ ταῖς θηλαζούσαις ἐν ἐκείναις ταῖς ἡμέραις.
18. προσεύχεσθε δὲ ἵνα μὴ γένηται ἡ φυγὴ ὑμῶν<sup>7</sup> χειμῶνος.
19. ἔσονται γὰρ αἱ ἡμέραι ἐκεῖναι θλίψεις, οἷα οὐ γέγονε τοιαύτη ἀπ’ ἀρχῆς κτίσεως ἧς<sup>8</sup> ἔκτισεν ὁ Θεός, ἕως τοῦ νῦν, καὶ οὐ μὴ

<sup>1</sup> ὧ BDL omit το ρηθεν . . . προφητου, which comes from Mt.

<sup>2</sup> εστηκοτα in ὧBL (vide below).

<sup>3</sup> B sah. cop. omit δε. More expressive without.

<sup>4</sup> ὧBL omit εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν, a gloss.

<sup>5</sup> τι ἀραι in BL.

<sup>6</sup> ὧBDLA omit ὧν.

<sup>7</sup> ὧBDL omit ἡ φυγὴ ὑμῶν. More impressive without. What meant obvious. Vide below.

<sup>8</sup> ἧν in ὧBCL.

real speakers (οὐ γὰρ ἔστε ὑμεῖς οἱ λαλοῦντες), but the Holy Spirit. Lk. has “I” here: Christ = the Holy Ghost.
This comforting word is wanting in Mt., and whether it was really spoken at this time must remain uncertain. Mt. describes with more detail the internal troubles of the Christian community—mutual treachery, false prophets (within, not without, like the false Messiahs of ver. 5), lawlessness, chilling of early enthusiasm—all implying the lapse of a considerable time, and all to happen before the end of Jerusalem. (Vv. 10-12.)
For all this Mk. gives only the brief statement in ver. 12.—Ver. 13 answers in its first part to Mt. xxiv. 9b, and in its second to Mt. xxiv. 13.

Vv. 14-23. The Jewish catastrophe
(Mt. xxiv. 15-25, Lk. xxi. 20-24).—Ver.
14. τὸ βδέλυγμα τ. ἐ. The horror is the Roman army, and it is a horror because of the desolation it brings. Vide on Mt.
The reference to Daniel in T.R. is imported from Mt.—ἐστηκότα, the reading in the best texts, masculine, though referring to βδέλυγμα, because the horror consists of soldiers (Schanz) or their general. (Cf. ὁ κατέχων, 2 Thess. ii. 7.)
—ὅπου οὐ δεῖ, where it ought not, instead of ἐν τόπῳ ἀγίῳ in Mt.—a graceful circumlocution betraying the Jewish Christian writing for heathen Christians, abstaining from making claims that might be misunderstood for his native country by calling it the “holy land” (Schanz).—ὁ ἀναγινώσκων ν. The reference here cannot be to Daniel, which is not mentioned in Mk., but either to the Gospel itself or to a separate document which it embodies—a Jewish or Jewish-Christian Apocalypse (vide on Mt.). The words may be taken as a direction to the reader in synagogue or church to explain further the meaning to hearers, it being a matter of vital practical concern. Vide Weizsäcker, Das

Apos. Zeit., p. 362.—Ver. 15. δώματος, he who is on the roof. Vide at Mt. x. 27.
The main point to be noted in Mk.’s version of the directions for the crisis as compared with Mt.’s (q.v.) is the omission of the words μηδὲ σαββάτω, probably out of regard to Gentile readers.—
Ver. 18. ἵνα μὴ γένηται, that it may not be; what not said, φυγὴ (T.R.)
being omitted in best texts = the nameless horror which makes flight imperative, the awful crisis of Israel.—Ver. 19.
ἔσονται γὰρ αἱ ἡμέραι, etc., for (not in those days, but) those days (themselves) shall be a tribulation. So we speak of γένηται. 20. καὶ εἰ μὴ Κύριος ἐκολόβωσε<sup>1</sup> τὰς ἡμέρας, οὐκ ἂν ἐσώθη πᾶσα σὰρξ· ἀλλὰ διὰ τοὺς ἐκλεκτοὺς οὓς ἐξελέξατο, ἐκολόβωσε τὰς ἡμέρας. 21. Καὶ τότε ἔάν τις ὑμῖν εἴπῃ, Ἰδοῦ,<sup>2</sup> ὦδε ὁ Χριστός, ἢ ἰδοῦ,<sup>2</sup> ἐκεῖ, μὴ πιστεύσητε.<sup>3</sup> 22. ἐγερθήσονται γὰρ ψευδόχριστοι καὶ ψευδοπροφήται, καὶ δώσουσι<sup>4</sup> σημεῖα καὶ τέρατα, πρὸς τὸ ἀποπλανᾶν, εἰ δυνατόν, καὶ<sup>5</sup> τοὺς ἐκλεκτούς. 23. ὑμεῖς δὲ βλέπετε· ἰδοῦ,<sup>6</sup> προεῖρηκα ὑμῖν πάντα. 24. Ἄλλ' ἐν ἐκείναις ταῖς ἡμέραις, μετὰ τὴν θλίψιν ἐκείνην, ὁ ἥλιος σκοτισθήσεται, καὶ ἡ σελήνη οὐ δώσει τὸ φέγγος αὐτῆς, 25. καὶ οἱ ἀστέρες τοῦ οὐρανοῦ ἔσονται ἐκπίπτοντες,<sup>7</sup> καὶ αἱ δυνάμεις αἱ ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς σαλευθήσονται. 26. καὶ τότε ὄψονται τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἐρχόμενον ἐν νεφέλαις μετὰ δυνάμεως πολλῆς καὶ δόξης. 27. καὶ τότε ἀποστελεῖ τοὺς ἀγγέλους αὐτοῦ,<sup>8</sup> καὶ ἐπισυνάξει τοὺς ἐκλεκτοὺς αὐτοῦ<sup>8</sup> ἐκ τῶν τεσσάρων ἀνέμων, ἀπ' ἄκρου γῆς ἕως ἄκρου οὐρανοῦ.

<sup>1</sup> εκολ. K. in ΞBL.

<sup>2</sup> ΞBL have ἰδε both times; for η before second ἰδε B has καὶ, which has been changed into η (as in Mt.) in DΔΣ al.; omitted in ΞL (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> πιστετετε in ΞABCDLΔ.

<sup>4</sup> δωσουσι in ΞABCLΣ al. ποιησουσι in D (Tisch.).

<sup>5</sup> Omit καὶ ΞBD (from Mt.).

<sup>6</sup> Omit ἰδου BL cop. aeth. (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>7</sup> εσονται εκ τ. ουρ. πιπτοντες ΞBC (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>8</sup> Omit first αυτου BDL (Tisch., W.H.), DL second, which is found in ΞBCΔ. Tisch. omits both. W.H. have second in brackets, omitting first.

“evil days,” and in Scotland of the “killing times”.—οἷα οὐ γέγονεν, etc.: a strong statement claiming for the crisis of Israel a unique place of tragic distinction in the whole calamitous experience of the human race, past and to come.—οἷα τοιαύτη, pleonastic, cf. 1 Cor. xv. 48, 2 Cor. x. 11.—Ver. 20. The merciful shortening of the days, out of regard to the elect, is here directly ascribed to God. Mt. uses the passive construction, where vide as to the idea of shortening and the reason.—τοὺς ἐκλεκτοὺς οὓς ἐξελέξατο, the elect whom He elected, recalling “the creation which God created” in ver. 19; but more than a mere literary idiosyncrasy, emphasising the fact that the elect are God’s elect, whom He loves and will care for, and whose intercessions for others He will hear.—Ver. 22. ψευδόχριστοι, ψευδοπροφήται, false Christs, and false prophets; again, as in ver. 6, here as there without, not within, the Church; political Messiahs, in ver. 6 spoken of as the prime cause of all the calamities, here as at the last hour promising deliverance therefrom.—πρὸς τὸ ἀποπλανᾶν, with a view to mislead; the compound verb occurs again in 1 Tim. vi. 10, in passive.—Ver. 23. ὑμεῖς δὲ, etc., now you look out! I have told you all things beforehand; forewarned, forearmed.

Vv. 24-31. The coming of the Son of Man (Mt. xxiv. 29-35, Lk. xxi. 25-33).—Ver. 24. ἀλλὰ, opposes to the false Christs who are not to be believed in, the coming of the true Christ.—ἐν ἐκείναις τ. ἡμέραις, in those days, for Mt.’s εὐθὺς, a vaguer phrase, yet making the parusia synchronise with the thlipsis.—Ver. 25. οἱ ἀστέρες, etc., the stars shall be in process of falling (one after the other)—ἔσονται with πίπτοντες instead of πεσούνται in Mt.—αἱ δυνάμεις, etc.: the powers in heaven = the powers of heaven (Mt.) = the host of heaven (Is. xxxiv. 4), a synonym for the stars.—Ver. 26. τὸν υἱὸν τ. ἀ.: the Son of Man, not the sign of, etc., as in Mt.:

28. "Ἀπὸ δὲ τῆς συκῆς μάθετε τὴν παραβολὴν· ὅταν αὐτῆς ἦδη ὁ κλάδος<sup>1</sup> ἀπαλὸς γένηται, καὶ ἐκφυῖ τὰ φύλλα, γινώσκετε ὅτι ἐγγύς τὸ θέρος ἐστίν· 29. οὕτω καὶ ὑμεῖς, ὅταν ταῦτα ἴδητε<sup>2</sup> γινόμενα, γινώσκετε ὅτι ἐγγύς ἐστὶν ἐπὶ θύραις. 30. Ἄμην λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι οὐ μὴ παρελθῇ ἡ γενεὰ αὕτη, μέχρις οὗ πάντα ταῦτα<sup>3</sup> γένηται. 31. ὁ οὐρανὸς καὶ ἡ γῆ παρελεύσονται<sup>4</sup>. οἱ δὲ λόγοι μου οὐ μὴ παρέλθωσι.<sup>4</sup>

32. "Περὶ δὲ τῆς ἡμέρας ἐκείνης καὶ<sup>5</sup> τῆς ὥρας, οὐδεὶς οἶδεν, οὐδὲ οἱ ἄγγελοι οἱ<sup>6</sup> ἐν οὐρανῷ, οὐδὲ ὁ υἱός, εἰ μὴ ὁ πατήρ.

33. "Βλέπετε, ἀγρυπνεῖτε καὶ προσεύχεσθε,<sup>7</sup> οὐκ οἴδατε γὰρ πότε ὁ καιρὸς ἐστίν. 34. ὡς ἄνθρωπος ἀπόδημος ἀφείς τὴν οἰκίαν αὐτοῦ, καὶ δοῦς τοῖς δούλοις αὐτοῦ τὴν ἐξουσίαν, καὶ<sup>8</sup> ἐκάστῳ τὸ ἔργον

<sup>1</sup> The order of the words varies in MSS. ΞABCDL have ἦδη ο κλ. αὐτης (W.H.; Tisch., as in T.R.).

<sup>2</sup> ἴδητε ταυτα in ΞABCL.

<sup>3</sup> ταυτα παντα in ΞBCLΔ.

<sup>4</sup> παρελευσονται in ΞBD; sing. in ΛΔΣ (from Mt.); for παρελθωσι in second clause (ACD = Mt.) ΞBL have παρελευσονται; BD omit μη, which does not elsewhere occur in Mk. with ου and fut. indic. (Tisch., W.H. = B in both clauses).

<sup>5</sup> η in ΞBCLΔΣ. ΞD have και.

<sup>6</sup> ΞDL omit οι after αγ. CD have it. B reads αγγελος (W.H. marg.).

<sup>7</sup> BD omit και προσευχεσθε; a gloss.

<sup>8</sup> ΞBCDL omit και, a connecting particle added by scribes.

Christ His own sign, vide on Mt.—Ver. 27. ἀπ' ἄκρου γῆς, etc. (cf. expression in Mt.), from the extremity of the earth to the extremity of heaven. The earth is conceived as a flat surface, and the idea is—from one end of the earth to the other, where it touches the heavens. But they touch at both ends, so that Mt.'s expression is the more accurate. Either from one end of the earth to the other end of the earth, or from one end of the heaven to, etc.—Ver. 28. Parable of the fig tree, as in Mt.—ἐκφυῖ: this verb without accent might either be present subjunctive active of ἐκφύω = ἐκφύη = it putteth forth its leaves; or 2nd aorist subjunctive intransitive = ἐκφυῖ, from ἐξεφύη, later form of 2nd aorist indicative instead of ἐξέφυον = the leaves shoot out. The former is preferred by most commentators.

Vv. 32-37. Concluding exhortation (Mt. xxiv. 36).—Ver. 32. The words ὁ υἱὸς are an undoubted reading in Mk., and there can be little doubt they form a part of the true text in Mt. also. As to the import of the solemn declaration of nescience Jesus here makes, I need only refer to what has been said on the corresponding text in Mt. It is not a disclaimer of knowledge as to the precise day, month, or year of what it is certain will happen within the then present generation, but rather an intimation that all statements (that regarding the generation included) as to the time of the parusia must be taken in a qualified sense. Jesus had, I still feel, two ways of speaking on the subject, one for comfort (it will be soon), and one for caution (it may not be so soon as even I think or you expect).—Ver. 33. ἀγρυπνεῖτε: watch, be sleepless (a pr.v. and ὑπνος).—οὐκ οἴδατε, etc., ye know not the time or season (καιρὸς) of the parusia. If even the Son knows not, still less His disciples; therefore let them watch.—Ver. 34. Enforcement of the exhortation to watch by a brief parable. At this point each of the synoptical evangelists goes his own way. In Mt. Jesus presses home the lesson by historical and prophetic pictures of the surprises brought by unexpected crises; in Lk. by general statements; in Mk. by a comparison which seems to be the germ of the parable in Mt. xxv. 14-3.—ἄνθρωπος ἀπόδημος (here only), a travelling man, cf. ἀνθ. ἔμπορος, a merchant man, in Mt. xiii. 45.—ἀφείς, .οὺς: these participles

αὐτοῦ, καὶ τῷ θυρωρῷ ἐνετείλατο ἵνα γρηγορῇ. 35. γρηγορεῖτε οὖν· οὐκ οἴδατε γὰρ πότε ὁ κύριος τῆς οἰκίας ἔρχεται, ὅψέ, ἢ μεσονυκτίου,<sup>1</sup> ἢ ἀλεκτοροφωνίας, ἢ πρωί· 36. μὴ ἐλθῶν ἐξαίφνης εὖρη ὑμᾶς καθεύδοντας. 37. ἃ<sup>2</sup> δὲ ὑμῖν λέγω, πᾶσι λέγω, Γρηγορεῖτε.

<sup>1</sup> μεσονυκτίον in  $\aleph$ BCLA. T.R. (-ου) conforms to the following genitive

<sup>2</sup> α in  $\aleph$ BCLA.

specify the circumstances under which the command to the porter, the main point, was given; it was when the master was leaving, and when he gave to all his servants his parting instructions.—τὴν ἐξουσίαν, his (the master's) authority, distributed among the servants when he could no longer exercise it himself.—τὸ ἔργον α., to each one his work, in apposition with ἐξουσίαν. In the master's absence each man became his own master; put upon his honour, the seat of the ἐξουσία, and prescribing careful performance of the ἔργον entrusted to each.—καὶ τ. θυρωρῷ, also, among the rest, and very specially, to the porter (he gave instructions). The καὶ here is emphatic, as if it had been καὶ δὴ καὶ.—ἵνα γρηγορῇ, that he should watch: note that in this parable the function of watching becomes the business of one—the porter. Each servant has his appropriate task; the porter's is to watch. Yet in the moral sphere watching is the common duty of all, the temper in which all are to discharge their functions. All have to be porters, waiting at the gate, ready to open it to the returning master. Hence the closing exhortation in ver. 37. What I say to you, the four disciples (ver. 3), I say to all: watch. This had to be added, because it was not said or suggested by the parable; a defect which makes it doubtful whether we have here a logion of Jesus in authentic form, and which may account for its omission by Lk.—Ver. 35. ὅψέ ἢ, etc.: the night divided, Roman fashion, into four watches: 6-9, 9-12, 12-3, 3-6. Before the exile the Jews divided the night into three parts.—μεσονυκτίον: vide at Lk. xi. 5 on this word, found also in Acts xvi. 25, xx. 7.—ἀλεκτοροφωνία is a ἄπαξ λεγ. in N. T.—Ver. 36. ἐξαίφνης, suddenly, here in Lk. ii. 13, and four times in Acts.—καθεύδοντας: this applies to all the servants, not merely to the porter; therefore all must watch as well as work. In the case of a master absent on a journey, the servants cannot know even the day, not to speak of the hour or watch of the night, as they could in the cases supposed in Lk. xii. 36, Mt. xxv. 1. Therefore they must keep awake not merely one night, but many nights, an incongruity which again suggests that we have not here an original utterance of Jesus, but a composite logion with elements borrowed from several parables.

CHAPTER XIV. THE PASSION HISTORY.—Vv. 1-2. Introduction (Mt. xxvi. 1-5, Lk. xxii. 1-2).—Ver. 1. ἦν δὲ τὸ π.: the first hint that the visit of Jesus to Jerusalem took place at passover season.—τὸ πάσχα καὶ τὰ ἄζυμα: full name of the feast, which consisted of the passover proper beginning on the 14th Nisan, and the seven days of unleavened bread. Mt. and Lk. give each only one of the designations; Mt. the former, Lk. the latter. Mk.'s dual designation a manifest combination of Mt. and Lk., say the followers of Griesbach.—μετὰ δύο ἡμέρας, indicates the point of time at which the Sanhedrists began seriously to consider how they could safely get rid of Jesus. Mt. turns this into an announcement by Jesus. Lk. generalises the precise note of time into a statement that the feast was approaching (ἤγγιζεν).

—ἐν δόλῳ, in or with craft. ἐν =  $\text{?}$  in Heb. Mt. has simply δόλῳ, the dative instr.—Ver. 2. ἔλεγον γάρ is a more difficult reading than ἔλ. δὲ of Mt., hence the correction in T.R. The γάρ presupposes that the murder of Jesus during the feast was from the first regarded as out of the question, and the clause following partly makes that fact explicit, partly assigns a reason for it. They wanted to compass His death, but they were in a difficulty, for they felt and said to one another: it may not be on the feast, lest there be a popular disturbance.—μήποτε ἔσται: the fut. ind. instead of the more usual subjunctive after μήποτε (cf. Col. ii. 8, Heb. iii. 12), implying the almost certain occurrence

XIV. 1. ἮΝ δὲ τὸ πάσχα καὶ τὰ ἄζυμα μετὰ δύο ἡμέρας· καὶ ἐζήτουν οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ γραμματεῖς, πῶς αὐτὸν ἐν δόλω κρατήσαντες ἀποκτείνωσιν· 2. ἔλεγον δέ,<sup>1</sup> “Μὴ ἐν τῇ ἑορτῇ, μήποτε θόρυβος ἔσται<sup>2</sup> τοῦ λαοῦ.” 3. Καὶ ὄντος αὐτοῦ ἐν Βηθανίᾳ, ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ Σίμωνος τοῦ λεπροῦ, κατακειμένου αὐτοῦ, ἦλθε γυνὴ ἔχουσα ἀλάβαστρον μύρου νάρδου πιστικῆς πολυτελοῦς· καὶ<sup>3</sup> συντρίψασα τὸ<sup>4</sup> ἀλάβαστρον, κατέχευεν αὐτοῦ κατὰ<sup>5</sup> τῆς κεφαλῆς. 4. ἦσαν δὲ τινες ἀγανακτοῦντες πρὸς ἑαυτοῦς, καὶ λέγοντες.<sup>6</sup> “Εἰς τί ἡ ἀπόβλητα

<sup>1</sup> γαρ in ΞBCDL; δε in T.R. is from Mt.

<sup>2</sup> ἔσται θορυβος in ΞBCDL.

<sup>3</sup> Omit καὶ ΞBL cop.

<sup>4</sup> The article is found in all the genders; το in GM cursives; τον in ΞADΣ and many other uncials (Tisch.); την in BCLΔ (Trg., W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> ΞBCLΔ omit κατὰ (introduced because usual).

<sup>6</sup> ΞBCL omit καὶ λέγοντες, which may come from Mt.

of a θόρυβος if an attempt were made on the life of Jesus during the feast. This shows how highly the Sanhedrists estimated the influence of Jesus.

Vv. 3-9. The anointing in Bethany (Mt. xxvi. 6-13).—Ver. 3. ὄντος αὐτοῦ, κατακειμένου αὐτοῦ: two genitive absolute clauses whereof Weiss makes critical use (Marcus-Evang.); in which Schanz sees simply an instance of Mk.'s helplessness in style. The first indicates generally the time and place, the second the position of Jesus (at table) when the woman approached Him (ἦλθεν).—ἀλάβαστρον. Vide in Mt.—πιστικῆς: a puzzling word recurring in the fourth Gospel (xii. 3). It has been variously explained. (1) As one of Mk.'s Latinisms = spicatus, turned into πιστικός like Sextarius into ξέστης (Mk. vii. 4). In favour of this view is the Vulgate nardi spicati reproduced in “spikenard” (spiked-nard), A. V., and it has been adopted by Wetstein, Grotius, Rosenmüller, etc. (2) As meaning liquid, potable, from πῶ, πιπίσκω, Fritzsche and others. (3) As derived from the name of a place whence the ointment was obtained, Augustine; also Bengel: “Pista urbs Indorum in regione Cabul; quæ ex regione pleraque aromata jam tum petebantur”. But he adds: “Ex nomine proprio potius formaretur πισταῖος”. (4) As = πιστός, trusty, genuine, to distinguish it from spurious imitations which abounded (Pliny, H. N., xii., 26). Instances of the use of the word in this sense are cited from Greek authors, e.g., from Artemidorus, ii., 32: πιστικὴ γυνή καὶ οἰκουρὸς (vide Beza and Kypke). The choice lies between (1) and (4);

most modern commentators (following Theophy. and Euthy.) adopt the latter. The following account of nard from Tristram's Natural History of the Bible is interesting: “An Indian product procured from the Nardostachys Jatamansi, growing on the Himalaya Mountains in Nepaul and Bhotan. It was well known to the Greeks and Romans, and is mentioned by classic authors as derived from the hills on the banks of the Ganges. One peculiarity of the plant which is mentioned by old writers aids in its identification, viz., that it has many hairy spikes shooting from one root. These shaggy stems are caused by the root leaves shooting up from the ground and surrounding the stalk. It is from this part of the plant that the perfume is procured and prepared simply by drying it.”—πολυτελοῦς (1 Tim. ii. 9, 1 Pet. iii. 4), dear; hence the temptation to produce cheap counterfeits.—συντρίψασα: she broke the narrow-necked vase that the contents might be poured out quickly, not drop by drop, and perhaps that the vessel used for so sacred a purpose might never be employed again (Kloster., Weiss, Schanz, etc.).—Ver. 4. τινές, certain persons; who, not indicated; Mt. says the disciples, John singles out Judas.—τοῦ μύρου γέγονεν: these words omitted in Mt. Observe the repetition in ver. 5, τοῦτο τὸ μύρον (BCL, etc.). Mt. simply has τοῦτο (so here in T.R.). Mt. more elegant in style, but Mk. truer to life = “To what purpose this waste of the myrrh? For this myrrh might, etc.”—the style of men speaking under emotion.—Ver. 5. ἐπάνω, etc., for above three hundred pence. The cardinal αὕτη τοῦ μύρου γέγονεν; 5. ἡδύνατο γὰρ τοῦτο<sup>1</sup> πραθῆναι ἐπάνω τριακοσίων δηναρίων,<sup>2</sup> καὶ δοθῆναι τοῖς πτωχοῖς·” καὶ ἐνεβριμῶντο αὐτῇ. 6. Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν, “Ἀφετε αὐτὴν· τί αὐτῇ κόπους παρέχετε; καλὸν ἔργον εἰργάσατο εἰς ἐμέ.<sup>3</sup> 7. πάντοτε γὰρ τοὺς πτωχοὺς ἔχετε μεθ’ ἑαυτῶν, καὶ ὅταν θέλητε, δύνασθε αὐτοὺς<sup>4</sup> εὖ ποιῆσαι· ἐμὲ δὲ οὐ πάντοτε ἔχετε. 8. ὃ εἶχεν αὐτῆς,<sup>5</sup> ἐποίησε· προέλαβε μυρίσαι μου τὸ σῶμα<sup>6</sup> εἰς τὸν ἐνταφιασμόν. 9. ἀμὴν<sup>7</sup> λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅπου ἂν κηρυχθῆ τὸ εὐαγγέλιον τοῦτο<sup>8</sup> εἰς ὅλον τὸν κόσμον, καὶ ὃ ἐποίησεν αὕτη λαληθήσεται εἰς μνημόσυνον αὐτῆς.” 10. Καὶ ὁ Ἰούδας ὁ Ἰσκαριώτης, εἰς<sup>9</sup> τῶν δώδεκα, ἀπῆλθε πρὸς τοὺς ἀρχιερεῖς, ἵνα παραδῶ αὐτὸν<sup>10</sup> αὐτοῖς. 11. Οἱ δὲ ἀκούσαντες ἐχάρησαν, καὶ ἐπηγγείλαντο αὐτῷ ἀργύριον δοῦναι· καὶ ἐζήτει πῶς εὐκαίρως<sup>11</sup> αὐτὸν παραδῶ.<sup>11</sup>

a 2 Tim.
iv. 1.

<sup>1</sup> τοῦτο το μυρον ABCLΔ al. Vide below.

<sup>2</sup> δην. τριακ. in ΞCDL (Tisch.). T.R. as in ABΔΣ al. (W.H. marg.).

<sup>3</sup> εν εμοι in ΞABCDLΔΣ al. (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> αυτοις with παντοτε following in BL sah. cop. (W.H. with παν. in brackets).

Ξ omits both (Tisch.). αυτοις in AΣ al.

<sup>5</sup> εσχεν in ΞABCDLΔΣ al.; omit αυτη ΞBL cursives.

<sup>6</sup> το σωμα μου in ΞBDLΣ (W.H.).

<sup>7</sup> δε after αμην in ΞBDLΔ al.

<sup>8</sup> ΞBDL omit τουτο, inserted, as δε is omitted, after Mt.

<sup>9</sup> For ο Ι. ο Ισ. εις ΞBCD have Ι. Ισ., and ΞBCL ο εις.

<sup>10</sup> αυτον παραδοι in B (D προδοι). ΞBCLΔ also place αυτον first.

<sup>11</sup> παραδοι in BD; αυτον before ευκαιρως in ΞABCLΔ.

number is here in the genitive of price after πραθῆναι. In 1 Cor. xv. 6 ἐπάνω is followed by a dative depending on ᾧφθῆ.—Ver. 6. ἐν ἐμοί, in me (cf. Mt. xvii. 12), for the more usual εἰς ἐμέ (in Mt., and imported into Mk. in T.R.).—Ver. 7. καὶ ὅταν θέλητε, etc., and when ye wish ye can do them a kindness; a thought implied in the previous clause (the poor ye have always), and probably an expansion by Mk. (cf. Mt.), yet not superfluous: suggesting the thought that expenditure in one direction does not disqualify for beneficent acts in another. The willing-minded will always have enough for all purposes.—Ver. 8. ὃ εἶσχεν (suppl. ποιεῖν), what she had to do she did; the reference being not to the measure of her power (wealth) but to her opportunity: she did what lay to her hand, and could only be done then.—προέλαβε μυρίσαι, she anticipated the anointing; the latter verb here only, the former in 1 Cor. xi. 21, Gal. vi. 1.—ἐνταφιασμόν: the noun answering to the verb in Mt., here and in John and in one place in the classics.—Ver. 9. εἰς ὅλον τ. κ. for ἐν ο., etc., in Mt.; a constr. praeg., the idea of going to all parts of the world with the gospel being understood.

Vv. 10-11. Judas offers to betray his Master (Mt. xxvi. 14-16, Lk. xxii. 3-6).—Ver. 11. ἐχάρησαν, they rejoiced; when one of the twelve companions of Jesus unexpectedly turned up ready to deliver his Master into their hands. A most vivid feature omitted by Mt. in his summarising way. Well might they rejoice, as but for this windfall they might have been totally at a loss how to compass their end.—ἐπηγγείλαντο, they promised to pay, did not actually pay on the spot, as Mt.'s statement implies (ἔστησαν, ver. 15).—ἐζήτει, cf. ἐζήτουν, ver. 1, in reference to the Sanhedrists. They were seeking means of getting rid of Jesus; Judas was now on the outlook for a chance of betraying Him into their hands.—εὐκαίρως here and in 2 Tim. iv. 1, the

12. ΚΑΙ τῇ πρώτῃ ἡμέρᾳ τῶν ἀζύμων, ὅτε τὸ πάσχα ἔθουον, λέγουσιν αὐτῷ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ, “Ποῦ θέλεις ἀπελθόντες ἐτοιμάσωμεν ἵνα φάγης τὸ πάσχα;” 13. Καὶ ἀποστέλλει δύο τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ, καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς, “Υπάγετε εἰς τὴν πόλιν· καὶ ἀπαντήσῃ ἐμῖν ἄνθρωπος κεράμιον ὕδατος βαστάζων· ἀκολουθήσατε αὐτῷ, 14. καὶ ὅπου ἔαν εἰσέλθῃ, εἶπατε τῷ οἰκοδεσπότη, “Ὅτι ὁ διδάσκαλος λέγει, Ποῦ ἐστὶ τὸ κατάλυμα,<sup>1</sup> ὅπου τὸ πάσχα μετὰ τῶν μαθητῶν μου φάγω; 15. καὶ αὐτὸς ἐμῖν δείξει ἀνώγειον<sup>2</sup> μέγα ἐστρωμένον ἑτοιμον· ἐκεῖ<sup>3</sup> ἐτοιμάσατε ἡμῖν.” 16. Καὶ ἐξῆλθον οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ,<sup>4</sup> καὶ ἦλθον εἰς τὴν πόλιν, καὶ εὔρον καθὼς εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, καὶ ἡτοίμασαν τὸ πάσχα.

17. Καὶ ὀψίας γενομένης ἔρχεται μετὰ τῶν δώδεκα· 18. καὶ ἀνακειμένων αὐτῶν καὶ ἐσθίωντων, εἶπεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς,<sup>5</sup> “Ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι εἰς ἐξ ὧν παραδώσει με, ὁ ἐσθίων<sup>6</sup> μετ’ ἐμοῦ.” 19. Οἱ δὲ<sup>7</sup> ἤρξαντο λυπεῖσθαι, καὶ λέγειν αὐτῷ εἰς καθ’ εἰς, “Μὴ τι ἐγώ;”

<sup>1</sup> μου after καταλυμα in ΞBCDLΔΣ. Vide below.

<sup>2</sup> αναγαιον in ΞABCDL al.

<sup>3</sup> και before εκει in ΞBCDL.

<sup>4</sup> Omit αυτου ΞBLΔ.

<sup>5</sup> ο ι. ειπεν in ΞBCL.

<sup>6</sup> B has των εσθιοντων (W.H. marg.).

<sup>7</sup> οι δε omitted in ΞBL cop.

adjective and verb in Mk. vi. 21, 31, the noun in Mt. xxvi. 16.

Vv. 12-16. Arrangements for paschal feast (Mt. xxvi. 17-19, Lk. xxii. 7-13). Mk. is much more circumstantial in this section than Mt., his apparent aim being to explain how Judas did not find his opportunity at the paschal supper, the place of celebration being carefully concealed beforehand.—Ver. 12. τῇ π. ἡμέρᾳ τ. ἀ. ὅτε τ. πάσχα ἔθουον: again a double note of time, the second clause indicating precisely that by the first day is meant the 14th Nisan. Schanz, following the Greek Fathers, takes πρώτη in the first clause as = προτέρα, yielding the same sense as πρὸ τ. ἑορ. τ. πάσχα in John xiii. 1.—ποῦ θέλεις;: the disciples would ask this question in good time, say in the forenoon of the 14th.—Ver. 13. δύο: more exact than Mt.; of course all the disciples would not be sent on such an errand. Lk. names the two.—ὑπάγετε, etc.: the instructions in Mk. are sufficient to guide the messengers. Mt.’s πρὸς τὸν δείνα is manifestly too vague, and could not have been spoken by Jesus.—ἄνθρωπος: water-carrying was generally the occupation of women; hence a man performing the office would be more noticeable.—κεράμιον (neuter of adjective κεράμιος, earthen), an earthen pitcher, here and in

Lk. xxii. 10.—Ver. 14. τὸ κατάλυμά μου, my guest chamber. This μου of the best texts is interesting as suggesting a previous understanding between Jesus and the householder. It is not necessary to import the miraculous into the narrative.—Ver. 15. ἀνάγαιον (ἀνά, γαῖα = γῆ), a room above the earth, an upper room.—μέγα, large, enough for the company.—ἐστρωμένον, furnished with table-cushions.—ἑτοιμον, perhaps a synonym for ἐστρωμένον = furnished, all ready; possibly pointing to the removal of leaven (C.G.T.).

Vv. 17-21. The presence of a traitor announced (Mt. xxvi. 20-25, Lk. xxii. 21-23).—Ver. 17. ἔρχεται: after sunset He cometh to the place appointed for the feast, presumably after the two who had been sent to make arrangements had rejoined the company.—Ver. 18. ὁ ἐσθίων μετ’ ἐμοῦ: this clause, omitted in Mt., is designed to indicate, not the culprit, but the gravity of his offence = one of you, one who eats bread with me, a table companion.—Ver. 19. εἰς κατὰ εἰς, one by one = εἰς ἕκαστος in Mt.; κατὰ is used adverbially, and hence is followed by εἰς instead of ἕνα. For other instances of this usage of late Greek vide John viii. 9, Rom. xii. 5, and cf. Winer, § xxxvii. 3.—Ver. 20. To the anxious questioning of the disciples Mk

Καὶ ἄλλος, “Μὴ τι ἐγώ<sup>1</sup> ;” 20. Ὁ δὲ ἀποκριθεὶς<sup>2</sup> εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Εἰς ἐκ<sup>3</sup> τῶν δώδεκα, ὁ ἐμβαπτόμενος μετ’ ἐμοῦ εἰς τὸ τρυβλίον.<sup>4</sup> 21. ὁ μὲν υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ὑπάγει, καθὼς γέγραπται περὶ αὐτοῦ<sup>5</sup>· οὐαὶ δὲ τῷ ἀνθρώπῳ ἐκείνῳ, δι’ οὗ ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου παραδίδοται· καλὸν ἦν<sup>6</sup> αὐτῷ, εἰ οὐκ ἐγεννήθη ὁ ἄνθρωπος ἐκεῖνος.”

22. Καὶ ἐσθιόντων αὐτῶν, λαβὼν ὁ Ἰησοῦς<sup>7</sup> ἄρτον εὐλογήσας ἔκλασε, καὶ ἔδωκεν αὐτοῖς, καὶ εἶπε, “Λάβετε, φάγετε.<sup>8</sup> τοῦτό ἐστι τὸ σῶμά μου.” 23. Καὶ λαβὼν τὸ<sup>9</sup> ποτήριον εὐχαριστήσας ἔδωκεν αὐτοῖς· καὶ ἔπιον ἐξ αὐτοῦ πάντες· 24. καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Τοῦτό ἐστι τὸ αἷμά μου, τὸ τῆς καινῆς διαθήκης,<sup>10</sup> τὸ περὶ πολλῶν ἐκχυνόμενον.<sup>11</sup> 25. ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι οὐκέτι οὐ μὴ πίνω ἐκ τοῦ γεννήματος τῆς ἀμπέλου, ἕως τῆς ἡμέρας ἐκείνης, ὅταν αὐτὸ πίνω καινὸν ἐν τῇ βασιλείᾳ τοῦ Θεοῦ.”

<sup>1</sup> καὶ ἄλλος μὴ τι ἐγώ (ADΣ al.) omitted in BCLPΔ, possibly by similar ending (omit Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> Omitted in ΞBCDL; a mere mechanical expletive.

<sup>3</sup> ΞBCL sah. cop. omit ἐκ (it comes from ver. 18).

<sup>4</sup> BC have το ἐν τρυβ. (W.H. brackets: ἐν).

<sup>5</sup> ὅτι introduces this clause (ο μὲν υἱος, etc.) in ΞBL sah. cop.

<sup>6</sup> BL sah. omit ἦν.

<sup>7</sup> BD omit ο Ι. (from Mt.).

<sup>8</sup> φάγετε only in later uncials (Tisch., W.H., omit).

<sup>9</sup> ΞBCDLΔΣ omit το (from Lk.).

<sup>10</sup> For το τ. καινης δ. ΞBCL have της διαθ. (D omits καινης).

<sup>11</sup> ΞBCDLΔ have εκχυνόμενον ὑπερ πολλων. T.R. from Mt.

makes Jesus reply: one of the Twelve; he who dips with me in the dish. A repetition of the original declaration with variations: the Twelve for you, and dipping in the dish for eating; the former bringing out the gravity of the fact, the Twelve chosen to be Apostles of the faith, one of them the traitor of its Author; the latter narrowing the circle within which the traitor is to be found. Twelve ate with Jesus, only three or four would dip with Him.—ἐμβαπτόμενος, middle, dipping with his own hand: “haec vis medii verbi,” Bengel.—Ver. 21. ὅτι, assigns a reason for the fact just stated. To fulfil Scripture (Ps. xli. 9) the Son of Man must go from the earth through betrayal by an intimate. This verse contains an instance in Mk. of the construction μέν δὲ (again in ver. 38 and in xvi. 19, 20).—καλὸν αὐτῷ, good for him, without the ἦν as in Mt. For the construction vide on Mt. and Burton, M. and T. in N. T., § 248.—ὁ ἄνθρωπος ἐκεῖνος: this repetition (vide τῷ ἄ. ἐκ. above) gives a tragic solemnity to the utterance = good for him, if he had not been born, that man!

Cf. Mk. ii. 20, “days will come, etc., and then shall they fast, in that day”.

Vv. 22-25. The Lord's Supper (Mt. xxvi. 26-29, Lk. xxii. 19-20), vide notes on Mt.'s account, to which Mk.'s closely corresponds.—Ver. 22. ἐσθιόντων α., while they were eating, as in ver. 18; a very general indication of time. This and the announcement of the betrayal are for Mt. and Mk. the two memorabilia of the paschal feast of Jesus with His disciples, and all they know is that they happened during feast-time.—λάβετε, take, without φάγετε, as in Mt.; the more laconic expression likely to be the original. “Take” implies “eat”.—Ver. 23. καὶ ἔπιον, etc., and they drank of it, all. In Mt.'s account Jesus bids them drink, as He had previously bidden them eat. Mk.'s version strikes one as the more primitive; Mt.'s as influenced by liturgical usage.—Ver. 24. καὶ εἶπεν: while they drank the cup (not after they had drunk it, De Wette: nor before they began to drink, as Mt.'s narrative by itself would suggest), Jesus explained to them the symbolic import of

26. Καὶ ὑμῆσαντες ἐξῆλθον εἰς τὸ ὄρος τῶν Ἑλαιῶν. 27. καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Ὅτι πάντες σκανδαλισθήσεσθε ἐν ἡμέρῃ ἐν τῇ νυκτὶ ταύτῃ<sup>1</sup>· ὅτι γέγραπται, ‘Πατάξω τὸν ποιμένα, καὶ διασκορπισθήσεται τὰ πρόβατα.’<sup>2</sup> 28. Ἀλλὰ μετὰ τὸ ἐγεροθῆναί με, προάξω ὑμᾶς εἰς τὴν Γαλιλαίαν.” 29. Ὁ δὲ Πέτρος ἔφη αὐτῷ, “Καὶ εἰ<sup>3</sup> πάντες σκανδαλισθήσονται, ἀλλ’ οὐκ ἐγώ.” 30. Καὶ λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Ἀμὴν λέγω σοι, ὅτι<sup>4</sup> σήμερον ἐν τῇ νυκτὶ ταύτῃ,<sup>5</sup> πρὶν ἢ δις ἀλέκτορα φωνῆσαι, τρίς ἀπαρνήσῃ με.”<sup>6</sup> 31. Ὁ δὲ ἐκ περισσοῦ ἔλεγε μᾶλλον,<sup>7</sup> “Ἐάν με δέῃ συναποθανεῖν σοι, οὐ μὴ σε ἀπαρνήσομαι.” Ὡσαύτως δὲ<sup>8</sup> καὶ πάντες ἔλεγον.

32. ΚΑΙ ἔρχονται εἰς χωρίον οὗ τὸ ὄνομα Γεθσημανῆ· καὶ λέγει τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ, “Καθίσατε ὧδε, ἕως προσεύξωμαι.” 33. Καὶ

<sup>1</sup> ὩBCDLΔ al. omit en emoi . . . ταυτη, which comes from Mt.

<sup>2</sup> τα προβ. διασκορπ. in ὩBCDL; διασκορπισθησονται in ὩBCDLΔΣ.

<sup>3</sup> ει και in ὩBCGL (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> Add συ ABLΣ al., omitted in ὩCDA (Tisch., W.H., adopt; vide below).

<sup>5</sup> ταυτη τ. ν., without en, in ὩBCDL (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>6</sup> με before apar. in ὩBCDA (T.R. = Mt.).

<sup>7</sup> εκπερισσως in ὩBCD; ελαλει in ὩBDL; omit μαλλον ὩBCDL.

<sup>8</sup> B omits δε (W.H. brackets).

the cup. The important point in Mk.'s account of the words, as compared with Mt.'s, is the omission of the expression, εις ἀφεσιν ἁμαρτιῶν.

Vv. 26-31. On the way to Gethsemane (Mt. xxvi. 30-35, Lk. xxii. 39).—Ver. 26, exactly as in Mt. xxvi. 30, states that after singing the paschal hymn the company went forth towards the Mount of Olives.—Ver. 27. πάντες σκανδαλισθήσεσθε, ye all shall be made to stumble; absolutely, without the addition of ἐν ἡμέρῃ ἐν τῇ νυκτὶ ταύτῃ imported into the text from Mt. in T.R. It was a startling announcement in broad general terms that the disciple-circle was about to experience a moral breakdown. The announcement was made not by way of reproach, but rather as a preface to a more cheering prophecy of an early reunion.—Ver. 28. ἀλλὰ μ.: stronger than Mt.'s μ. δὲ=ye shall be offended, but (be of good cheer) after my resurrection I will go before you, as your Shepherd (προάξω ὑμᾶς) into Galilee.—Ver. 29. It is the former part of the Master's speech that lays hold of Peter's mind; hence he promptly proceeds to make protestations of fidelity.—ει καὶ, etc.: even if (as is likely) all the rest shall be offended (the future, because the case put is conceived to be probable), ye certainly (ἀλλ' strongly opposing what follows to what goes before; vide Klotz, p. 93, on the force of ἀλλὰ in the apodosis of a conditional proposition) not I.—Ver. 30. To this over-confident ἀλλ' οὐκ ἐγώ of the disciple, the Master returns a very pointed and peremptory reply: I tell thee that thou (σύ emphatic) to-day (σήμερον), on this night (more precise indication of time), before the cock crow twice (still more precise indication of time), shall deny me, not once, but again and again and again (τρίς).—Ver. 31. ἐκπερισσῶς, abundantly in matter and manner, with vehemence and iteration; a ἄπαξ λεγ.—ἐλάλει, kept saying: that he would not deny his Master even if he had to die for it.—Ὡσαύτως, a stronger word than Mt.'s ὁμοίως= in the same way, and probably in the same words. But the words of the others were simply a faint echo of Peter's vehement and copious talk. They feebly said once (ἔλεγον = εἶπον) what he said strongly again and again (ἐλάλει).

Vv. 32-42. In Gethsemane (Mt. xxvi. 36-46, Lk. xxii. 40-46).—Ver. 33. ἤρξατο, introduces the description of our Lord's awful experience in the garden.—ἐκθαμβεῖσθαι, to be amazed; in Mk. only, first in ix. 15, where see remarks on its meaning. Though Jesus had long παραλαμβάνει τὸν Πέτρον καὶ τὸν Ἰάκωβον καὶ Ἰωάννην<sup>1</sup> μεθ' αὐτοῦ.<sup>2</sup> Καὶ ἤρξατο ἐκθαμβεῖσθαι καὶ ἀδημονεῖν. 34. καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς, "Περίλυπός ἐστιν ἡ ψυχὴ μου ἕως θανάτου· μέναιτε ὧδε καὶ γρηγορεῖτε." 35. Καὶ προελθὼν<sup>3</sup> μικρόν, ἔπεσεν<sup>4</sup> ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, καὶ προσηύχετο, ἵνα, εἰ δυνατόν ἐστι, παρέλθῃ ἀπ' αὐτοῦ ἡ ὥρα. 36. καὶ ἔλεγεν, "Ἄββᾶ, ὁ πατήρ, πάντα δυνατά σοι. παρένεγκε τὸ ποτήριον ἀπ' ἐμοῦ τοῦτο<sup>5</sup>· ἀλλ' οὐ τί ἐγὼ θέλω, ἀλλὰ τί σύ." 37. Καὶ ἔρχεται καὶ εὕρισκε αὐτοὺς καθεύδοντας; καὶ λέγει τῷ Πέτρῳ, "Σίμων, καθεύδεις; οὐκ ἴσχυσας μίαν ὥραν γρηγορῆσαι; 38. γρηγορεῖτε καὶ προσεύχεσθε, ἵνα μὴ εἰσέλθῃτε<sup>6</sup> εἰς πειρασμόν. τὸ μὲν πνεῦμα πρόθυμον, ἡ δὲ σὰρξ ἀσθενής." 39. Καὶ πάλιν ἀπελθὼν προσηύξατο, τὸν αὐτὸν λόγον εἰπών. 40. καὶ ὑποστρέψας εὗρεν αὐτοὺς πάλιν<sup>7</sup> καθεύδοντας· ἦσαν γὰρ οἱ ὀφθαλμοὶ αὐτῶν βεβαρημένοι,<sup>8</sup> καὶ οὐκ ᾔδεισαν τί αὐτῷ ἀποκριθῶσι.<sup>9</sup>

<sup>1</sup> B has τὸν before each name (W.H.). Many MSS. have the article only with Πέτρον.

<sup>2</sup> μετ' αὐτοῦ in ΞBCD.

<sup>3</sup> CDLΔ have προσελθὼν, but προελθὼν, found in ΞB al., seems to be the word needed. προσελθὼν is a frequent mistake of the scribes.

<sup>4</sup> ἐπιπτεν in ΞBL (ἐπεσεν from Mt.).

<sup>5</sup> τοῦτο απ. εμου in ΞABCLΔΣ al.

<sup>6</sup> ελθῃτε in ΞB (Tisch., W.H.). Weiss rejects the omission of εἰς before ελθ.; a very frequent mistake in the old MSS.

<sup>7</sup> For υποστρέψας . . . πάλιν (ACA, Tisch.) ΞBL have πάλιν ελθων ευρεν αὐτους (W.H.). D the same, omitting πάλιν.

<sup>8</sup> αὐτῶν before οἱ οφ. in ΞBCLΔ, and καταβαρυνόμενοι in ABLΔ; καταβαρυνόμενοι in D.

<sup>9</sup> αποκ. before αὐτῷ ΞABCDL.

known, and had often with realistic plainness spoken of, what was to befall Him, yet the vivid sense of what it all meant came upon His soul at this hour, as a sudden appalling revelation. The other two words used by Mk. to describe Christ's state of mind (ἀδημονεῖν, περίλυπος) occur in Mt. also.—Ver. 35. ἐπιπτεν (ΞBL, ἔπεσεν T.R. as in Mt.), imperfect: He fell again and again on the ground. It was a protracted desperate struggle.—καὶ προσηύχετο ἵνα: Mk. first indicates the gist of Christ's prayers (=that if possible the hour might pass from Him), then reports what Jesus said (ver. 36). In the prayer of Jesus the experience dreaded is called the cup, as in Mt. The Hour and the Cup—both alike solemn, suggestive names.—Ver. 36. Ἄββᾶ ὁ πατήρ: in the parallels simply pater. In the Apostolic Church the use of the double appellation among Gentile Christians was common (vide Rom. viii. 15, Gal. iv. 6), Ἄββᾶ having become a proper name and πατήρ being added as its interpretation=God our Father. Mk. imparts into the prayer of our Lord this apostolic usage. Jesus doubtless would use only one of the names, probably the Aramaic.—παρένεγκε τ. π. τ., remove this cup; equivalent to παρέλθῃ in ver. 35 (Lk. xxii. 42).—ἀλλ' οὐ, etc.; "but not what (τί for δ) I will, but what Thou"; elliptical but clear and expressive: γενήσεται or γενέσθαι δεῖ (not γενέσθω which would demand μὴ before θέλω) is understood (vide Holtzmann, H. C., and Weiss in Meyer).—Ver. 37. τῷ Πέτρῳ: to the disciple who had been so confident of his loyalty, but also from whom Jesus expected most in the way of sympathy.—Σίμων: the old, not the new, disciple, name; ominous.—Ver. 38. This exhortation to watch and pray is given in almost identical terms in Mt. and Mk. It looks like a secondary version of what our Lord actually said.—Ver. 39. Mk., like Mt., divides

41. Καὶ ἔρχεται τὸ τρίτον, καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς, "Καθεύδετε τὸ<sup>1</sup> λοιπὸν καὶ ἀναπαύεσθε. ἀπέχει· ἦλθεν ἡ ὥρα· ἰδοὺ, παραδίδοται ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου εἰς τὰς χεῖρας τῶν ἁμαρτωλῶν. 42. ἐγείρεσθε, ἄγωμεν· ἰδοὺ, ὁ παραδιδούς με ἤγγικε."

43. Καὶ εὐθέως, ἔτι αὐτοῦ λαλοῦντος, παραγίνεται Ἰούδας, εἰς ὧν<sup>2</sup> τῶν δώδεκα, καὶ μετ' αὐτοῦ ὄχλος πολὺς<sup>3</sup> μετὰ μαχαίρων καὶ

<sup>b</sup> Ch. xv. 10, John xi. 57 (omission of augment: usual in N. T.). ξύλων, παρὰ τῶν ἀρχιερέων καὶ τῶν γραμματέων καὶ τῶν πρεσβυτέρων. 44. "δεδώκει δὲ ὁ παραδιδούς αὐτὸν σύσσημον αὐτοῖς, λέγων, "Ὅν ἂν φιλήσω, αὐτός ἐστι· κρατήσατε αὐτόν, καὶ ἀπαγάγετε<sup>4</sup> ἀσφαλῶς," 45. Καὶ ἐλθὼν, εὐθέως προσελθὼν αὐτῷ λέγει, "Ραββί, ραββί<sup>5</sup>."

<sup>1</sup> το is found in ΞΒΔΞ; omitted in CDL (Tisch. retains, W.H. in brackets).

<sup>2</sup> Omit ὧν ΞABCDLΞ.

<sup>3</sup> ΞBL omit πολὺς found in CDA (comes from Mt.).

<sup>4</sup> ἀπαγετε in ΞBDL.

<sup>5</sup> Ραββει once only in ΞBCDLA.

he agony into three acts, but he reports the words spoken by Jesus in prayer only in the first. Mt. gives the prayer of Jesus in the second act, as well as in the first, generalising in the third, where he repeats the formula here used by Mk.: τὸν αὐτὸν λόγον εἰπὼν.—Ver. 40. καταβαρυνόμενοι, "their eyes were very heavy"; R. V., weighed down with irresistible sleep.—καταβαρύνω, here and occasionally in the Sept., = the more usual καταβαρέω (from the simple verb βαρέω comes βεβαρημένοι in T.R.).—καὶ οὐκ ᾔδεισαν, etc.: this remark recalls the experience of the same three on the hill of transfiguration (cf. ix. 6). But in the earlier instance the reference is to the stupidity produced by sleep, here probably to shame on account of unseasonable sleep. They felt that they ought to have kept awake during their Master's hour of trial, and knew not how to excuse themselves.—Ver. 41. ἀπέχει, "it is enough," A. V. = sufficit in Vulgate; one of the puzzling words in Mk.'s vocabulary to which many meanings have been given. Beza, in doubt as to Jerome's interpretation, was satisfied at last by a quotation from Anacreon coming into his mind, in which the poet, giving instructions to a painter for the portrait of his mistress, concludes: ἀπέχει. βλέπω γὰρ αὐτὴν· τάχα, κηρέ, καὶ λαλήσεις="Enough! the girl herself I view: so like, 'twill soon be speaking, too". Elsner and Raphael follow Beza. Kypke dissents and renders: ἀπέχει, ἦλθεν ἡ ὥρα, as if it were ἦλθε καὶ ἄπ. ἡ ὥ. = the hour (of my passion) is come and calls you and me away from this scene. Most modern commentators accept the rendering, "it is enough". Vide an interesting note in Field's Otium Nor. The meaning is: I have conquered in the struggle; I need your sympathy no longer; you may sleep now if you will.

Vv. 43-52. The apprehension (Mt. xxvi. 47-56, Lk. xxii. 47-53).—Ver. 43. εὐθὺς, etc. (ἰδοὺ in Mt.), straightway, even while He is speaking, appears Judas, who is carefully defined by surname and position as one of the Twelve. At what point of time the traitor left the company on his nefarious errand is not indicated. According to Weiss (in Meyer) the evangelist conceives of Judas as going with the rest to Gethsemane and stealing away from the nine, after the three had been taken apart, having now satisfied himself as to the Master's whereabouts.—παρὰ τ. ἀρχ., etc.: παρὰ goes along with παραγίνεται, and implies that Judas and those with him had an official commission from the authorities, the three classes of whom are carefully specified.—Ver. 44. δεδώκει: the pluperfect, but without augment, vide Winer, § xii. 9.—σύσσημον (neuter of adjective σύσσημος: σύν, σῆμα): a sign previously agreed on (σημεῖον in Mt.), a late word severely condemned by Phrynichus, p. 418, here only in N. T. In Sept. for Ⲕ an "ensign" (Is. v. 26).

—ἀσφαλῶς may mean either: lead Him away with an easy mind (He will not attempt escape), or: lead, etc., cautiously, carefully—He may slip out of your hands as He has done before (Lk. iv. 30). Judas was just the kind of man to have καὶ κατεφίλησεν αὐτόν. 46. Οἱ δὲ ἐπέβαλον ἐπ' αὐτὸν τὰς χεῖρας αὐτῶν,<sup>1</sup> καὶ ἐκράτησαν αὐτόν.

47. Εἷς δὲ τις<sup>2</sup> τῶν παρεστηκότων σπασάμενος τὴν μάχαιραν ἔπαισε τὸν δούλον τοῦ ἀρχιερέως, καὶ ἀφείλεν αὐτοῦ τὸ ὄτιον.<sup>3</sup>

48. Καὶ ἀποκριθεὶς ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Ὡς ἐπὶ ληστήν ἐξήλθετε μετὰ μαχαιρῶν καὶ ξύλων, συλλαβεῖν με; 49. καθ' ἡμέραν ἤμην πρὸς ὑμᾶς ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ διδάσκων, καὶ οὐκ ἐκρατήσατέ με· ἀλλ' ἵνα πληρωθῶσιν αἱ γραφαί.” 50. Καὶ ἀφέντες αὐτὸν πάντες ἔφυγον.<sup>4</sup>

51. Καὶ εἷς τις νεανίσκος<sup>5</sup> ἠκολούθει<sup>6</sup> αὐτῷ, περιβεβλημένος σινδῶνα ἐπὶ γυμνοῦ. καὶ κρατοῦσιν αὐτὸν οἱ νεανίσκοι.<sup>7</sup> 52. ὁ δὲ καταλιπὼν τὴν σινδῶνα γυμνὸς ἔφυγεν ἀπ' αὐτῶν.<sup>8</sup>

<sup>1</sup> For ἐπ αὐτον τ. χ. αὐτων BDL have simply τας χεiras αυτω, the most probable reading.

<sup>2</sup> εις δε without τις in ΞAL (W.H. have τις bracketed); BCΔ have τις.

<sup>3</sup> ωταριον in ΞBD; ωτιον in CLΔ (probably from Mt.).

<sup>4</sup> εφυγον παντες in ΞBCLΔ, preferable reading. Vide below.

<sup>5</sup> Instead of εις τις νεαν. (AΔΣ al.) ΞBCL have νεαν. τις.

<sup>6</sup> συνηκ. in ΞBCL. D = T.R. Δ συνηκολουθησεν.

<sup>7</sup> ΞBCDLΔ omit οι νεαν.

<sup>8</sup> ΞBCL omit απ αυτων (a gloss found in AΔΔΣ al.).

a superstitious dread of Christ's preternatural power.—Ver. 45. ἐλθὼν εὐθὺς προσελθὼν = arrived on the spot he without delay approaches Jesus; no hesitation, promptly and adroitly done.—Ραββί: without Mt.'s χαῖρε, and only once spoken (twice in T.R.), the fervour of false love finding expression in the kiss (κατεφίλησεν, vide notes on Mt.) rather than in words.

Vv. 47-52. Attempt at rescue.—Ver. 47. εἷς τ. παρ., one of those standing by, i.e., one of the three, Peter according to the fourth gospel (xviii. 10).—τὴν μάχ., the sword = his sword, as if each disciple was armed; vide on Mt.—ὠτάριον = ὠτίον, T.R., diminutive of οὖς; the use of diminutives for the members of the body was common in popular speech. Vide Lobek, Phryn., p. 211.—Ver. 48. On this and the following verse vide notes on Mt.—Ver. 49. ἵνα πληρωθῶσιν αἱ γ.: this may be a case of ἵνα with the subjunctive used as an imperative = let the Scriptures be fulfilled. Cf. 2 Cor. viii. 7, last clause, and consult Winer, § xliii. 5 d.—Ver. 50. καὶ ἀφέντες, etc., and deserting Him fled all (πάντες last, vide above): the nine with the three, the three not less than the nine—all alike panic-stricken.—Ver. 51 introduces a little anecdote peculiar to Mk., the story of an unknown friend, not one of the Twelve, who had joined the company, and did not fly with the rest.—συνηκολούθει α., was following Jesus; when He was being led away, and after the disciples had fled.—περιβεβλημένος σινδῶνα ἐπὶ γυμνοῦ: this suggests that the youth, on hearing some sudden report, rose out of his bed and rushed out in his night-shirt, or, being absolutely naked, hurriedly threw about his body a loose cotton or linen sheet. The statement that on being laid hold of he cast off the garment favours the latter alternative.—Ver. 52. γυμνὸς ἔφ., fled naked, in the literal sense, whereon Bengel remarks: “on a night not without a moon; fear conquers shame in great danger”. (A few years ago a young wife chased a thief, who had been stealing her wedding presents, through the streets of Glasgow, in the early hours of the morning, in her night-gown; not without success. Her husband modestly stayed behind to put on his clothes.)—Who was this young man? Mk. the evangelist, say many, arguing: the story was of no interest to any one but the hero of it, therefore the hero was the teller of the tale. A good argument, unless a motive can be assigned for the insertion of the narrative other than merely personal interest. Schanz suggests a desire to exhibit in a concrete instance the danger of the situation, and the ferocity of the enemies of Jesus. On the whole one feels inclined to acquiesce in the judgment of Hahn, quoted by Holtz., H. C., that in this curious incident we have "the monogram of the painter (Mk.) in a dark corner of the picture". Brandt, however (Die Ev. Gesch., p. 28), dissents from this view.

53. ΚΑΙ ἀπήγαγον τὸν Ἰησοῦν πρὸς τὸν ἀρχιερέα· καὶ συνέρχονται αὐτῷ<sup>1</sup> πάντες οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ πρεσβύτεροι καὶ οἱ γραμματεῖς. 54. Καὶ ὁ Πέτρος ἀπὸ μακρόθεν ἠκολούθησεν αὐτῷ ἕως ἔσω εἰς τὴν αὐλὴν τοῦ ἀρχιερέως· καὶ ἦν συγκαθήμενος μετὰ τῶν ὑπηρετῶν, καὶ θερμαινόμενος πρὸς τὸ φῶς. 55. Οἱ δὲ ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ ὄλον τὸ συνέδριον ἐζήτουν κατὰ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ μαρτυρίαν, εἰς τὸ θανατώσαι αὐτόν· καὶ οὐχ εὑρίσκον. 56. πολλοὶ γὰρ ἐψευδομαρτύρουν κατ' αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἴσαι αἱ μαρτυρίαι οὐκ ἦσαν. 57. καὶ τινες ἀναστάντες ἐψευδομαρτύρουν κατ' αὐτοῦ, λέγοντες, 58. "Ὅτι ἡμεῖς ἠκούσαμεν αὐτοῦ λέγοντος, "Ὅτι ἐγὼ καταλύσω τὸν ναὸν τούτου τὸν χειροποίητον, καὶ διὰ τριῶν ἡμερῶν ἄλλον ἀχειροποίητον οἰκοδομήσω." 59. Καὶ

<sup>1</sup> ἩDLA omit αὐτῷ, found in BΣ al. pler. (W.H. marg.).

Vv. 53-65. Before Caiaphas (Mt. xxvi. 57-68, Lk. xxii. 54, 66-71).—Ver. 53. συνέρχονται α. πάντες, etc.: again all the three orders of the Sanhedrists are named, who have been summoned to meet about the time the party sent to apprehend Jesus might be expected to arrive.—Ver. 54. ὁ Πέτρος: the story of Peter's denial begins here, and, after being suspended by the account of the trial, is resumed at ver. 66.—ἀπὸ μακρόθεν, from afar (ἀπὸ redundant here as elsewhere), fearful, yet drawn on by love and curiosity.—ἕως ἔσω εἰς: a redundant but expressive combination, suggesting the idea of one stealthily feeling his way into the court of the palace, venturing further and further in, and gaining courage with each step (vide Weiss, Mk.-Evan., p. 470).—θερμαινόμενος: nights cold even at Easter in Palestine; a fire in the court welcome in the early hours of morning, when something unusual was going on. "However hot it may be in the daytime, the nights in spring are almost always cold"—Furrer, Wanderungen, p. 241.—πρὸς τὸ φῶς, at the fire; here called light, because it was there to give light as well as heat. Elsner and Raphael cite instances of the use of φῶς for fire from Xenophon. Hesychius gives πῦρ as one of its meanings.

Vv. 55-65. The trial and condemnation.—Ver. 55. μαρτυρίαν: Mt. has ψευδομαρτυρίαν, justly so characterised, because the Sanhedrists wanted evidence for a foregone conclusion: evidence that would justify a sentence of death.—Ver. 56. ἴσαι, equal, to the same effect, as the testimonies of true witnesses would, of course, be. Grotius takes the word as meaning, not equal to one another, but equal to the demands of weighty evidence and justifying condemnation. Elsner agrees, arguing from the use of the word again, in reference to the evidence about the temple logion of Jesus. These witnesses, he holds, are not represented as making conflicting statements, but simply as making statements not sufficiently weighty—not equal to the occasion. There is some force in this.—Ver. 57. τινες, some, for which Mt. has the more definite δύο, the smallest number necessary to establish a matter.—Ver. 58. ὅτι, etc.: Mk.'s version of the testimony borne by the witnesses differs in important respects from that of Mt.; viz., by the insertion of the words τὸν χειροποίητον and ἄλλον ἀχειροποίητον. Mt.'s form doubtless comes nearest to what the witnesses actually said. Mk.'s puts into their mouths, to a certain extent, the sense in which he and his fellow-Christians understood Christ's saying, viz., as a prophecy that the material temple would be superseded by a spiritual temple = the community of believers in Jesus. If they had really spoken, as here reported, the falsehood would have lain rather in the animus of their statement than in its meaning: the animus of men who regarded it as impious to speak of the temple of God being destroyed, as contemptuous to οὐδὲ οὕτως ἴση ἦν ἡ μαρτυρία αὐτῶν. 60. Καὶ ἀναστὰς ὁ ἀρχιερεὺς εἰς τὸ<sup>1</sup> μέσον ἐπηρώτησε τὸν Ἰησοῦν, λέγων, “Οὐκ ἀποκρίνη οὐδέν; τί οὗτοί σου καταμαρτυροῦσιν;” 61. Ὁ δὲ ἐσιώπα, καὶ οὐδὲν ἀπεκρίνατο.<sup>2</sup> Πάλιν ὁ ἀρχιερεὺς ἐπηρώτα αὐτόν, καὶ λέγει αὐτῷ, “Σὺ εἶ ὁ Χριστός, ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ εὐλογητοῦ;” 62. Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν, “Ἐγὼ εἰμι. καὶ ὄψεσθε τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου καθήμενον ἐκ δεξιῶν<sup>3</sup> τῆς δυνάμεως, καὶ ἐρχόμενον μετὰ τῶν νεφελῶν τοῦ οὐρανοῦ.” 63. Ὁ δὲ ἀρχιερεὺς διαρρήξας τοὺς χιτῶνας αὐτοῦ λέγει, “Τί ἐτι χρεῖαν ἔχομεν μαρτύρων; 64. ἤκούσατε τῆς βλασφημίας· τί ὑμῖν φαίνεται;” Οἱ δὲ πάντες κατέκριναν αὐτὸν εἶναι ἔνοχον<sup>4</sup> θανάτου. 65. Καὶ ἤρξαντό τινες ἐμπτύειν αὐτῷ, καὶ περικαλύπτειν τὸ πρόσωπον αὐτοῦ,<sup>5</sup> καὶ κολαφίζειν αὐτόν, καὶ λέγειν αὐτῷ, “Προφήτευσον.” καὶ οἱ ὑπηρέται ῥαπίσμασιν αὐτὸν ἔβαλλον.<sup>6</sup>

66. Καὶ ὄντος τοῦ Πέτρου ἐν τῇ αὐλῇ κάτω,<sup>7</sup> ἔρχεται μία τῶν

<sup>1</sup> ἔξ ABCI. ΔΣ al. pl. omit το found in D.

<sup>2</sup> For οὐδεν απεκ. (ADΔΣ al.) ἔξ BCL 33 sah. cop. have οὐκ απεκ. οὐδεν.

<sup>3</sup> εκ δεξ. καθ. in ἔξ BCDI. ΔΣ al.

<sup>4</sup> ἐνοχον ειναι in ἔξ BCL Δ 33.

<sup>5</sup> αυτου το προσ. in ἔξ BCL Δ 33.

<sup>6</sup> ελαβον in ἔξ ABCI. Δ. εβαλλον substituted in later MSS. for a word not understood.

<sup>7</sup> κατω εν τ. αυλ. in ἔξ BCL. DI omit κατω.

characterise it as hand-made, and as blasphemous to suggest that another could take its place.—Ver. 60. εἰς μέσον: a graphic feature in Mk., suggesting that the high priest arose from his seat and advanced into the semi-circle of the council towards Jesus—the action of an irritated, baffled man.—οὐκ ἀποκρίνη: on the high priest's question vide notes on Mt.—Ver. 61. ἐσιώπα καὶ, etc.: one of Mk.'s dualisms, yet not idle repetition = He maintained the silence He had observed up to that point (imperfect), and He answered nothing to the high priest's pointed question (aorist).—πάλιν: the high priest makes another attempt to draw Jesus into some self-condemning utterance, this time successfully.—τοῦ εὐλογητοῦ, the Blessed One, here only, absolutely, as a name for God. Usually, an epithet attached to Κύριος (Wünsche, Beiträge).—Ver. 62. Ἐγὼ εἰμι. On Christ's reply to the high priest affirming the Messianic claim, vide notes on Mt.—Ver. 63. τοὺς χιτῶνας, his tunics, or undergarments, of which persons in good position wore two.—Ver. 64. τί ὑμῖν φαίνεται, what appears to you to be the appropriate penalty of such blasphemous speech? = τί ὑμῖν δοκεῖ in Mt. Nösgen denies the equivalence, and renders Mk.'s peculiar phrase: what lies for you on the hand, what is now your duty? with appeal to Xenophon, Anab., v., 7, 3.—Ver. 65. τινες: presumably Sanhedrists.—περικαλύπτειν: Mt. says nothing of this, but he as well as Mk. represents them as asking Jesus to prophesy. Mt.'s version implies that Jesus was struck from behind, Mk.'s in front.—οἱ ὑπηρέται: following the example of their masters.—ῥαπίσμασιν αὐτὸν ἔλαβον, received Him with slaps of the open hand: a phrase recalling the Latin, accipere aliquem verberibus.

Vv. 66-72. Peter's denial (Mt. xxvi. 69-75, Lk. xxii. 54-62).—Ver. 66. κάτω ἐ. τ. α., below in the court, implying that the trial of Jesus had taken place in a chamber on a higher level.—ἔρχεται μία, etc., cometh one of the maids of the high priest—a servant in his palace, on some errand that night when all things were out of their usual course. That a maid should be astir and on duty at that unseasonable hour was itself a sign that something extraordinary was going on.—Ver. 67. Ἰδοῦσα: Peter, sitting at the fire, catches her eye, and she sees at once

παιδίσκῶν τοῦ ἀρχιερέως, 67. καὶ ἰδοῦσα τὸν Πέτρον θερμαινόμενον, ἐμβλέψασα αὐτῷ λέγει, “Καὶ σὺ μετὰ τοῦ Ναζαρηνοῦ Ἰησοῦ ἦσθα.”<sup>1</sup> 68. Ὁ δὲ ἠρνήσατο, λέγων, “Οὐκ<sup>2</sup> οἶδα, οὐδὲ<sup>3</sup> ἐπίσταμαι τί σὺ λέγεις.” Καὶ ἐξηλθεν ἕξω εἰς τὸ προαύλιον· καὶ ἄλεκτωρ ἐφώνησε.<sup>4</sup> 69. Καὶ ἡ παιδίσκη ἰδοῦσα αὐτὸν πάλιν ἤρξατο<sup>5</sup> λέγειν τοῖς παρεστηκόσιν,<sup>6</sup> “Ὅτι οὗτος ἐξ αὐτῶν ἐστίν.” 70. Ὁ δὲ πάλιν ἠρνεῖτο. Καὶ μετὰ μικρὸν πάλιν οἱ παρεστῶτες ἔλεγον τῷ Πέτρῳ, “Ἀληθῶς

<sup>1</sup> ἦσθα before I. with του prefixed in BCL. The readings vary much here, but that of BCL (Tisch., W.H., Weiss) is the most like Mk.'s graphic style. Vide below.

<sup>2</sup> οὔτε οὔτε in  $\aleph$ B $\Delta$ L.

<sup>3</sup> συ τι in  $\aleph$ BCL $\Delta$  $\Sigma$  33, altered by the scribes into the smoother τι συ.

<sup>4</sup> καὶ αλεκτωρ ἐφώνησεν omitted in  $\aleph$ BL; found in CDIA al. Vide below.

<sup>5</sup> ἤρξατο πάλιν in  $\aleph$ CLA (Tisch., W.H., text). B omits, and for λέγειν following has εἶπεν (W.H. marg.).

<sup>6</sup> παρεστῶσιν in  $\aleph$ BCILA

that he is a stranger. Going closer to him, and looking sharply into his face in the dim fire-light (ἐμβλέψασα), she comes at once to her conclusion.—καὶ σὺ, etc., thou also wert with the Nazarene—that Jesus; spoken in a contemptuous manner, a faithful echo of the tone of her superiors. The girl had probably seen Peter in Christ's company in the streets of Jerusalem, or in the temple during the last few days, and doubtless she had heard disparaging remarks about the Galilean prophet in the palace.—Ver. 68. οὔτε οἶδα, etc., I neither know nor understand, ἴθου, what thou sayest.—οὔτε-οὔτε connect closely the two verbs as expressing inability to comprehend what she means. The unusual emphatic position of σὺ (σὺ τί λέγεις, smoothed down into τί σὺ λ. in T.R.) admirably reflects affected astonishment.—ἐξηλθεν: he slunk away from the fire into the forecourt—προαύλιον, here only in N. T.—καὶ ἄλεκτωρ ἐφώνησε: these words, omitted in  $\aleph$ BL, are of very dubious authenticity. Weiss and Holtzmann think they were inserted by copyists under the impression that the words of Jesus to Peter, ver. 30, meant that the cock was to crow twice in close succession, whereas the δις referred to the second time of cock-crowing, the beginning of the second watch after midnight. Schanz, while regarding this explanation of δις as unnatural, admits that it is difficult to understand how this first crow did not remind Peter of the Lord's warning word.—Ver. 69. ἡ παιδίσκη: the article naturally suggests that it is the same maid, and probably but for harmonistic interests there would have been no doubt on the subject. Yet the fact that Mt. makes it another obliges us to ask whether Mk.'s expression necessarily means the same person. Grotius, whom Rosenmüller follows, says ἡ may here, as occasionally elsewhere = τις. Of more weight is the suggestion that it means the maid on duty in that particular place, the forecourt (Schanz and Klostermann; the remarks of the latter specially worthy of notice). On first thoughts one might deem πάλιν decisive as to identity, but (1) it is wanting in B, and (2) its most probable position is just before λέγειν, and the meaning, that Peter was a second time spoken to (or at) on the subject of his connection with Jesus, not that the same person spoke in both cases. On the whole a certain element of doubt remains, which cannot be eliminated by exegetical considerations. In favour of one maid is the consideration that two able to recognise Peter is more unlikely than one. Yet the two might be together when they saw Peter previously, or the one might point him out to the other that night. In Mt.'s narrative the standers-by seem also to have independent knowledge of Peter. In Mk. the maid gives them information. On the whole, Mk., as was to be expected, gives the clearer picture of the scene.—τοῖς παρεστῶσιν, to those standing by; pointing to Peter, and speaking so that he could hear.—Ver. 70. Now, it is the bystanders who persecute Peter with the charge of being a disciple.—ἀληθῶς: they are quite sure of it, for two reasons:

ἐξ αὐτῶν εἶ· καὶ γὰρ Γαλιλαῖος εἶ, καὶ ἡ λαλία σου ὁμοιάζει.”<sup>1</sup>
 71. Ὁ δὲ ἤρξατο ἀναθεματίζειν καὶ ὀμνύειν,<sup>2</sup> “Ὅτι οὐκ οἶδα τὸν ἄνθρωπον τοῦτον, ὃν λέγετε.” 72. Καὶ<sup>3</sup> ἐκ δευτέρου ἀλέκτωρ ἐφώνησε. Καὶ ἀεμνήσθη ὁ Πέτρος τοῦ ῥήματος οὗ<sup>4</sup> εἶπεν αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Ὅτι πρὶν ἀλέκτορα φωνῆσαι δὶς,<sup>5</sup> ἀπαρήσῃ με τρίς.”<sup>6</sup>
 καὶ ἐπιβαλὼν<sup>6</sup> ἔκλαιε.

<sup>1</sup> καὶ ἡ λαλ. σ. ὁμοιάζει is imported from Mt.; omitted in ΞBCDL (Tisch., W.H., Weiss).

<sup>2</sup> ὀμνύει in BL al. (ὀμνύειν in Mt.).

<sup>3</sup> καὶ in ΞBLD followed by εὐθὺς omitted in ACNXd, etc., which insert καὶ ἀλεκ. ἐφώνησε in ver. 68.

<sup>4</sup> το ῥημα ὡς in ΞABCLD, corrected into the more usual τοῦ ῥηματος in some copies.

<sup>5</sup> B places δὶς before φωνῆσαι, and ΞBCLD have τρίς μὲ ἀπαρήσῃ instead of the order in T.R.

<sup>6</sup> For ἐπιβαλὼν ἐκλαιε D has ἤρξατο κλαίειν, and is followed by Latin, Egyptian, and Syriac verss., including Syr. Sin.

(1) the maid's confidence not specified but implied in the καὶ γὰρ, which introduces an additional reason; (2) Γαλιλαῖος εἶ = you are (by your speech) a Galilean. The addition in some MSS., καὶ ἡ λαλία σ., etc., explanatory of the term Galilean, would be quite in Mk.'s manner, but the best authorities omit it.—Ver. 71. ἀναθεματίζειν: used absolutely, to call down curses on himself in case he was telling lies. Mt. has καταθ., which is probably a contraction from καταναθ. (in T.R.).—Ver. 72. εὐθὺς: omitted in the MSS. which insert a first cock-crow in ver. 68, as implying that this was the first crow at that hour, as in Mt.—ἐκ δευτέρου (omitted in ΞL because apparently implying a first cock-crow during the denial, which they omit) must be understood with Weiss as referring to the second time of cock-crowing (three in the morning), the first being at midnight.—ἐπιβαλὼν: another puzzle in Mk.'s vocabulary; very variously interpreted. Most modern interpreters adopt the rendering in the A. V. and R. V., “when he thought thereon” (ἐπιβαλὼν τὸν νοῦν). Weizsäcker: “er bedachte es und weinte”. Theophylact took ἐπιβ = ἐπικαλυψάμενος τὴν κεφαλὴν, having covered his head (that he might weep unrestrainedly), a rendering which Fritzsche and Field (Otium Nor.) decidedly support. Field remarks: “it may have been a trivial or colloquial word, such as would have stirred the bile of a Phrynichus or a Thomas Magister, who would have inserted it in their Index Expurgatorius, with a caution: ἐπιβαλὼν μὴ λέγε ἀλλὰ ἐγκαλυψάμενος ἢ ἐπικαλυψάμενος”. Brandt (Die Ev. Gesch., p. 31), adopting a suggestion by Holwerda, thinks the original word may have been ἐκβαλὼν = going out, or flinging himself out. Klostermann ingeniously suggests: “stopped suddenly in his course of denial, like a man, running headlong, knocking suddenly against an obstacle in his way”. The choice seems to lie between the renderings: “thinking thereon” and “covering his head”.

CHAPTER XV. THE PASSION HISTORY CONTINUED.—Vv. 1-5. Before Pilate (Mt. xxvii. 1-14, Lk. xxiii. 1-10).—Ver. 1. εὐθὺς, πρῶτ, without delay, quam primum, in the morning watch, which might mean any time between three and six, but probably signifies after sunrise.—συμβούλιον will mean either a consultation or the result, the resolution come to, according as we adopt the reading: ποιήσαντες (T.R. = BΔ) or ἐτοιμάσαντες (ΞCL).—καὶ ὅλον τὸ συνέδριον: the καὶ simply identifies = even the whole Sanhedrim, and does not imply that, besides the three classes previously mentioned, some others were present (e.g., στρατηγὸς τοῦ ἱεροῦ: Lk. xxii. 52). This added clause signifies that it was a very important meeting, as, in view of its aim, to prepare the case for Pilate, it obviously was. The Sanhedrists had accomplished nothing till they had got the matter put in such a form that they might hope to prevail with the procurator, with whom lay the jus gladii, to do their wicked will, and

XV. 1. ΚΑΙ εὐθέως ἐπὶ τὸ πρῶτ<sup>1</sup> συμβούλιον ποιήσαίτες<sup>2</sup> οἱ ἄρχιερεῖς μετὰ τῶν πεσβυτέρων καὶ γραμματέων, καὶ ὄλον τὸ συνέδριον, δῆσαντες τὸν Ἰησοῦν ἀπήνεγκαν καὶ παρέδωκαν τῷ<sup>3</sup> Πιλάτῳ. 2. καὶ ἐπηρώτησεν αὐτὸν ὁ Πιλάτος, “Σὺ εἶ ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων;” Ὁ δὲ ἀποκριθεὶς εἶπεν αὐτῷ, “Σὺ λέγεις.” 3. Καὶ κατηγοροῦν αὐτοῦ οἱ ἄρχιερεῖς πολλά· 4. ὁ δὲ Πιλάτος πάλιν ἐπηρώτησεν<sup>4</sup> αὐτόν, λέγων,<sup>5</sup> “Οὐκ ἀποκρίνη οὐδέν; Ἴδε, πόσα σου καταμαρτυροῦσιν<sup>6</sup>.” 5. Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς οὐκέτι οὐδὲν ἀπεκρίθη, ὥστε θαυμάζειν τὸν Πιλάτον.

6. Κατὰ δὲ ἑορτὴν ἀπέλευεν αὐτοῖς ἓνα δέσμιον, ὃνπερ ἤτοῦντο.<sup>7</sup>

7. ἦν δὲ ὁ λεγόμενος Βαραββᾶς μετὰ τῶν συστσιαστῶν<sup>8</sup> δεδεμένος,

<sup>1</sup> πρῶτι without ἐπι το in  $\aleph$ BCDL.

<sup>2</sup> So in BΔΣ al.  $\aleph$ CL have ετοιμασαντες (Tisch., W.H., margin).

<sup>3</sup> Omit τῷ  $\aleph$ BCDL.

<sup>4</sup> ἐπηρωτα in B 33 (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>5</sup>  $\aleph$  omits λεγων (Tisch., W.H., in brackets).

<sup>6</sup> κατηγοροουσιν in  $\aleph$ BCD (Tisch., W.H.). καταμαρ. in T.R. is from Mt.

<sup>7</sup> ὃν παρητοῦντο in  $\aleph$ AB (Tisch., Trg., marg., W.H.). ὃνπερ (T.R.) is found nowhere else in the N.T. Vide below.

<sup>8</sup> στασιαστων in  $\aleph$ BCD. Weiss thinks the συσ- (T.R.) has been omitted per incuriam in these MSS.

of course that Jesus claimed to be the Christ would not serve that purpose. Vide notes on Mt.—Πιλάτῳ: without the article in best MSS. on this the first mention; with, in subsequent reference. Mk. does not think it necessary to say who or what Pilate was, not even mentioning, as Mt., that he was the governor.—Ver. 2. σὺ εἶ ὁ β. Pilate's question reveals the secret of the morning meeting. The crafty Sanhedrists put a political construction on the confession of Jesus. The Christ, therefore a pretender to the throne of Israel. Vide on Mt.—Ver. 3. πολλά: either an adverb = much, or the accusative after κατηγοροῦν. As to the matter of these accusations vide on Mt. But to what end, when Jesus had confessed that He was King; giving Himself away, so to speak? The Sanhedrists must have seen from Pilate's manner, a smile on his face perhaps, that he did not take the confession seriously. For the reason of this vide on Mt.—Ver. 4. πόσα, answering to πολλά in ver. 3, might mean “how grave,” Thayer's Grimm, but probably = how many, as in vi. 38, viii. 5, 19.—Ver. 5. ὥστε θαυμ. τ. Π. Mt. adds λαν. The governor had never seen a prisoner like this before. He does not believe him to be a political pretender, but he sees that He is a remarkable man, and feels that he must proceed cautiously, groping his way amid the parties and passions of this strange people.

Vv. 6-15. Jesus or Barabbas? (Mt. xxvii. 15-26, Lk. xxiii. 16-25).—Ver. 6. ἀπέλευεν, imperfect = Mt.'s εἰώθει ἀπολύειν, pointing to a practice of the governor at passover season; on which vide on Mt.—ὃνπερ ἤτοῦντο, “whomsoever they desired,” A. V. The R. V. adopts the reading preferred by W.H., ὃν παρητοῦντο, and translates “whom they asked of him”. It is difficult to decide between the two readings, as the περ might easily be changed into παρ, and vice versa. In favour of the T.R. is the fact that παρητοῦντο ordinarily in N. T., as in the classics, means to refuse, and also that ὃνπερ very strongly emphasises the finality of the popular choice—they might ask the release of any one, no matter whom—such is the force of περ; it would be granted. On these grounds Field (Otium Nor.) decides for the T.R.—Ver. 7. στασιαστῶν (συστασ., T.R.): this word (here only in N. T.) contains an interesting hint as to the nature of the offence committed by Barabbas and his associates. They were no mere band of brigands (Ἀηστῆς: John xviii. 40), but men engaged in an insurrection, probably of a political character, rising out οἵτινες ἐν τῇ στάσει φόνον πεποιήκεισαν. 8. καὶ ἀναβοήσας<sup>1</sup> ὁ ὄχλος ἤρξατο αἰτεῖσθαι, καθὼς αἰεὶ<sup>2</sup> ἐποίει αὐτοῖς. 9. ὁ δὲ Πιλάτος ἀπεκρίθη αὐτοῖς, λέγων, “Θέλετε ἀπολύσω ὑμῖν τὸν βασιλέα τῶν Ἰουδαίων;” 10. Ἐγίνωσκε γὰρ ὅτι διὰ φθόνον παραδεδώκεισαν αὐτὸν οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς.<sup>3</sup> 11. οἱ δὲ ἀρχιερεῖς ἀνέσεισαν τὸν ὄχλον, ἵνα μᾶλλον τὸν Βαραββᾶν ἀπολύσῃ αὐτοῖς. 12. ὁ δὲ Πιλάτος ἀποκριθεὶς πάλιν εἶπεν<sup>4</sup> αὐτοῖς, “Τί οὖν θέλετε<sup>5</sup> ποιήσω ὃν<sup>6</sup> λέγετε βασιλέα<sup>7</sup> τῶν Ἰουδαίων;” 13. Οἱ δὲ πάλιν ἔκραξαν, “Σταύρωσον αὐτόν.”

<sup>1</sup> αναβας in  $\aleph$ BD sah. cop. (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> αει wanting in  $\aleph$ BD sah. cop. (Tisch. and W.H. omit).

<sup>3</sup> B omits οἱ αρχ. (W.H. in brackets).

<sup>4</sup> For αποκ. παλ. ειπεν  $\aleph$ BC have παλ. αποκ. ελεγεν.

<sup>5</sup> θελετε, found in D, is omitted in  $\aleph$ BCD 33. Tisch. retains, W.H. omit.

<sup>6</sup> B omits ον (W.H. in brackets). Vide below.

<sup>7</sup> τον before βασ. in  $\aleph$ ABCD.

of the restless desire of many for independence, and in connection with that guilty of murder (φόνον), at least some of them (οἵτινες), Barabbas included.—τῇ στάσει: the article refers back to στασιαστῶν=the insurrectionists implied in there being insurrectionists. Mk. therefore does not refer to the insurrection as known to his readers. Perhaps he knew nothing about it himself, nor do we.—Ver. 8. ἀναβας, etc.: Mk. assigns the initiative to the people. So Lk.; Mt. and John to Pilate. The difference is not important to the course of the history. The custom existing, this incident was bound to come about somehow. Nor does it greatly affect the question as to the attitude of Pilate. In either case he was simply feeling his way. The custom gave him a chance of feeling the popular pulse, a most important point for a ruler of his opportunist type.—καθὼς, here=that which.—Ver. 9. θέλετε, etc.: Pilate makes the tentative suggestion that the favoured person should be Jesus; whom he designates “King of the Jews,” to see how the people would take a title which the Sanhedrists regarded as a mortal offence.—Ver. 10. ἐγίνωσκεν, it gradually dawned upon him. Pilate would see the animus of the Sanhedrists in their many accusations (ver. 3), from which it would appear that Christ’s real offence was His great influence with the people. Hence the attempt to play off the one party against the other: the people against the priests.—Ver. 11. ἀνέσεισαν, the aorist implies that the priests stirred up the people with success, to the effect that their request to Pilate was in favour of Barabbas. One may wonder how they so easily gained their purpose. But Barabbas, as described by Mk., represented a popular passion, which was stronger than any sympathy they might have for so unworlily a character as Jesus—the passion for political liberty. The priests would know how to play on that feeling. What unprincipled characters they were! They accuse Jesus to Pilate of political ambition, and they recommend Barabbas to the people for the same reason. But a “holy” end sanctifies the means! On the contrast between Jesus and Barabbas vide Klostermann.—Ver. 12. It is presupposed that the people have intimated their preference for Barabbas perhaps by the cry: not Jesus, but Barabbas. Hence Pilate proceeds to ask: “what, then, am I to do with Him whom ye call (λέγετε) the King of the Jews?” That whom ye call was very astute. It ought to bring out the real feeling of the people, as from the next verse we learn that it did.—Ver. 13. πάλιν: they had intimated their will already by a popular shout=Barabbas, not Jesus; now they intimate their feeling about Jesus by a second shout with the unmistakable ring of reprobation in it: CRUCIFY HIM! That is what Pilate’s ὃν λέγετε has brought out. It has been taken as an insult. The sense is the same if, with B, we omit ὃν. Pilate’s question then=what then shall I do, tell me, to the King of the Jews? The sting lies in the

14. Ὁ δὲ Πιλάτος ἔλεγεν αὐτοῖς, "Τί γὰρ κακὸν ἐποίησεν<sup>1</sup>;" Οἱ δὲ περισσοτέρως<sup>2</sup> ἔκραξαν, "Σταύρωσον αὐτόν." 15. Ὁ δὲ Πιλάτος βουλόμενος τῷ ὄχλῳ τὸ ἱκανὸν ποιῆσαι, ἀπέλυσεν αὐτοῖς τὸν Βαραββᾶν· καὶ παρέδωκε τὸν Ἰησοῦν, φραγελλώσας, ἵνα σταυρωθῇ.

16. Οἱ δὲ στρατιῶται ἀπήγαγον αὐτὸν ἔσω τῆς αὐλῆς, ὃ ἔστι πραιτώριον, καὶ συγκαλοῦσιν ὄλην τὴν σπείραν, 17. καὶ ἐνδύουσιν<sup>3</sup> αὐτὸν πορφύραν, καὶ περιτιθέασιν αὐτῷ πλέξαντες ἀκάνθινον στέφανον, 18. καὶ ἤρξαντο ἀσπάζεσθαι αὐτόν, "Χαῖρε, βασιλεῦ τῶν Ἰουδαίων." 19. καὶ ἔτυπτον αὐτοῦ τὴν κεφαλὴν καλάμῳ, καὶ ἐνέπτυν αὐτῷ, καὶ τιθέντες τὰ γόνατα προσεκύνουν αὐτῷ. 20. Καὶ ὅτε ἐνέπαιξαν αὐτῷ, ἐξέδυσαν αὐτὸν τὴν πορφύραν, καὶ ἐνέδυσαν αὐτόν τὰ ἱμάτια τὰ ἴδια<sup>4</sup>. καὶ ἐξάγουσιν αὐτόν, ἵνα σταυρώσωσιν αὐτόν. 21. καὶ ἀγγαρεύουσι παράγοντά τινα Σίμωνα Κυρηναῖον, ἐρχόμενον ἀπ' ἀγροῦ, τὸν πατέρα Ἀλεξάνδρου καὶ Ρούφου, ἵνα ἄρῃ τὸν σταυρὸν αὐτοῦ.

22. ΚΑΙ φέρουσιν αὐτὸν ἐπὶ Γολγοθᾶ<sup>5</sup> τόπον, ὃ ἔστι μεθερμηνεύ.

<sup>1</sup> εποι. κακον in BCD.

<sup>2</sup> περισσως in ΞABCDΔ. Vide below.

<sup>3</sup> ενδιδυσκουσιν in ΞBCDΔ. Vide below.

<sup>4</sup> For τα ἴδια BCD have αυτου (W.H.); Ξ reads τα ἴδια ἱματια αυτου (Tisch.).

<sup>5</sup> τον Γολγοθαν in ΞBLΔΣ.

title.—Ver. 14. This final speech of Pilate presents a subtle combination of honesty and craft. He says what he really thinks: that Jesus is innocent, and he makes sure that the people really mean to stand to what they have said.—περισσῶς, beyond measure: the positive here is stronger than the comparative περισσοτέρως (T.R.), and it is far better attested.—Ver. 15. Pilate was now quite sure what the people wished, and so, as an opportunist, he let them have their way.—τὸ ἱκανὸν ποιῆσαι: to satisfy (here only in N. T.)=satisfacere in Vulg., perhaps a Latinism (vide Grotius), but found in later Greek (vide Raphael and Elsnér).—φραγελλώσας: certainly a Latinism, from flagellare.

Vv. 16-20. Mocked by the soldiers (Mt. xxvii. 27-31).—Ver. 16. The soldiers in charge of the prisoner conduct Him into the barracks (ἔσω τῆς αὐλῆς, ὃ ἔστιν πραιτώριον = into the court, that is, the praetorium—Weizsäcker), and call together their comrades to have some sport.—ὄλην τὴν σπείραν: "a popular exaggeration" (Sevin); at most 200 men.—Ver. 17. ἐνδιδύσκουσιν for ἐνδύουσιν, T.R.: a rare word, not in classics, found in Sept. and Joseph. (and in Lk. viii. 27, xvi. 19), and because rare, the more probable reading.—πορφύραν, a purple garment, for Mt.'s χλαμύδα κοκκίνην = "scarlet robe".—ἀκάνθινον σ.: here and in John xix. 5.

Vv. 21-26. The crucifixion (Mt. xxvii. 32-37, Lk. xxiii. 26, 33-38).—Ver. 21. ἀγγαρεύουσιν: on this word vide on Mt. v. 41.—ἀπ' ἀγροῦ: this detail in Mk. and Lk. has been taken as an unintentional hint that the crucifixion took place a day earlier than the synoptical statements imply. Coming from the country, i.e., from his work. But even Holtzmann, H. C., disallows the inference: "as if nine in the morning were evening after work time, and εἰς ἀγρὸν in Mk. xvi. 12 meant ploughing or reaping".—Ἀλεξ., Ρούφ.: these names imply interest in the persons referred to within the circle of Mk.'s first readers, presumably well-known Christians. Rufus in Rom. xvi. 13? Alexander in Acts xix. 33?—Ver. 22. φέρουσιν α., they carry Him: "ferunt, non modo ducunt," Bengel. It would appear that Jesus was so weak through the strain of the last few days, and the scourging, μενον,<sup>1</sup> Κρανίου τόπος. 23. Καὶ ἐδίδουσαν αὐτῷ πιεῖν<sup>2</sup> ἐσμυρτισμένον οἶνον· ὁ δὲ<sup>3</sup> οὐκ ἔλαβε. 24. Καὶ σταυρώσαντες<sup>4</sup> αὐτόν, διεμέριζον<sup>5</sup> τὰ ἱμάτια αὐτοῦ, βάλλοντες κλῆρον ἐπ' αὐτά, τίς τί ἄρῃ. 25. ἦν δὲ ὥρα τρίτη, καὶ ἐσταύρωσαν αὐτόν. 26. Καὶ ἦν ἡ ἐπιγραφή τῆς αἰτίας αὐτοῦ ἐπιγεγραμμένη, “Ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων.” 27. Καὶ σὺν αὐτῷ σταυροῦσι δύο ληστές, ἓνα ἐκ δεξιῶν καὶ ἓνα ἐξ εὐωνύμων αὐτοῦ. 28. καὶ ἐπληρώθη ἡ γραφή ἡ λέγουσα, ‘Καὶ μετὰ ἀνόμων ἐλογίσθη.’<sup>6</sup> 29. Καὶ οἱ παραπορευόμενοι ἐβλασφήμουν αὐτόν, κινούμεντες τὰς κεφαλὰς αὐτῶν, καὶ λέγοντες, “Οὐά, ὁ καταλύων τὸν ναόν, καὶ ἐν τρισὶν ἡμέραις οἰκοδομῶν,<sup>7</sup> 30. σῶσον σεαυτόν, καὶ κατάβα<sup>8</sup> ἀπὸ τοῦ σταυροῦ.” 31. Ὁμοίως δὲ<sup>9</sup> καὶ οἱ ἄρχιερεῖς ἐμπαίζοντες πρὸς ἀλλήλους μετὰ τῶν γραμματέων ἔλεγον, “Ἄλλους ἔσωσεν, ἑαυτὸν οὐ δύναται σῶσαι. 32. ὁ Χριστὸς ὁ βασιλεὺς τοῦ<sup>10</sup> Ἰσραὴλ καταβάτω νῦν ἀπὸ τοῦ σταυροῦ, ἵνα ἴδωμεν καὶ πιστεῦσάμεν.”

<sup>1</sup> μεθερμηνευομενος in ΞΒΣ.

<sup>2</sup> ΞΒCΛA omit πιεῖν.

<sup>3</sup> ος δε in ΞB 33.

<sup>4</sup> For the participle BL have σταυρουσιν αυτον και.

<sup>5</sup> For διεμεριζον (in minusc. only) read διαμεριζονται.

<sup>6</sup> ΞABCD sah. omit this verse, which is interpolated from Lk. xxii. 37.

<sup>7</sup> οικοδομων before τρι. ημ. in BDL. εν is wanting in D and other uncials (Tisch. omits, W.H. brackets).

<sup>8</sup> For και καταβα ΞBDLA have καταβας.

<sup>9</sup> δε omitted in ΞBCLΔ al. verss. <sup>10</sup> ΞBDLA omit του before Ισραηλ.

that He was unable to walk, not to speak of carrying His cross. He had to be borne as the sick were borne to Him [Mk. i. 32].—Ver. 23. ἐδίδουσαν: the conative imperfect = they tried to give, offered.—ἐσμυρτισμένον οἶνον, wine drugged with myrrh, here only in N. T. Cf. Mt.'s account.—οὐκ ἔλαβεν: Mt. says Jesus tasted the drink. He would not take it because He knew that it was meant to stupefy.—Ver. 24. τίς τί ἄρῃ, who should receive what; two questions pithily condensed into one, another example in Lk. xix. 15, vide Winer, § lxxvi., 5, 3.—Ver. 25. ὥρα τρίτη, the third hour = nine o'clock as we reckon; raising a harmonistic problem when compared with John xix. 14. Grotius comments: “id est, jam audita erat tuba horae tertiae, quod dici solebat donec caneret tuba horae sextae” (they called it the third hour till the sixth was sounded).—καὶ = when, Hebraistic, but also not without example in classics in similar connections: the fact stated connected with its time by a simple καὶ; instances in Meyer.—Ver. 26. ἐπιγραφή ἐπιγεγραμμένη: awkwardly expressed; Mt. and Lk. have phrases which look like corrections of style.—ὁ βασ. τῶν Ἰουδ.: the simplest form of the inscription.

Vv. 29-32. Taunts of spectators (Mt. xxvii. 39-44, Lk. xxiii. 35, 37, 39).—Ver. 29. οὐά = Latin, vah, expressing here ironical admiration: “admirandi vim cum ironia habet,” Bengel. Raphael remarks that this word was not given in the Greek Lexicons, but that it is not therefore to be regarded as a Latinism peculiar to Mk., but rather as a word which had been adopted and used by the later Greeks, e.g., Arrian. Here only in N. T.—Ver. 30. καταβας (καὶ κατάβα, T.R.), etc., save Thyself, having descended, etc., or by descending = descend and so save Thyself.—Ver. 31. οἱ ἄρχιερεῖς: both in Mt. and in Mk. the priests lead in the unhallowed chuckling, scribes and elders (Mt.) being mentioned only subordinately (μετὰ, etc.).—πρὸς ἀλλήλους: a common fear gives place to a common sportiveness in this unholy brotherhood, now that the cause of their fear is removed.—Ver. 32. ἵνα ἴδωμεν<sup>1</sup> that we may see (in the descent from the cross) an unmistakable sign from heaven of Messiahship, and so believe in Thee.—

Καὶ οἱ συνεσταυρωμένοι<sup>1</sup> αὐτῷ ἀνείδιζον αὐτόν. 33. Γενομένης δὲ<sup>2</sup> ὥρας ἑκτης, σκότος ἐγένετο ἐφ' ὅλην τὴν γῆν, ἕως ὥρας ἑνάτης. 34. καὶ τῇ ὥρᾳ τῇ ἑνάτῃ<sup>3</sup> ἐβύησεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς φωνῇ μεγάλη, λέγων,<sup>4</sup> "Ἐλωὶ, Ἐλωὶ, λαμμᾶ σαβαχθανί<sup>5</sup>;" ὁ ἔστι μεθερμηνευόμενος, "Ὁ Θεὸς μου, ὁ Θεὸς μου, εἰς τί με ἐγκατέλιπες<sup>6</sup>;" 35. Καὶ τινὲς τῶν παρεστηκότων<sup>7</sup> ἀκούσαντες ἔλεγον, "Ἰδοῦ,<sup>8</sup> Ἥλιαν φωνεῖ." 36. Δραμῶν δὲ εἰς,<sup>9</sup> καὶ<sup>10</sup> γεμίσας σπόγγον ὄξους, περιθεῖς τε<sup>11</sup> καλάμῳ, ἐπότιζεν αὐτόν, λέγων, "Ἄφετε, ἴδωμεν εἰ ἔρχεται Ἥλιος καθελεῖν αὐτόν."

37. Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς ἀφείς φωνὴν μεγάλην ἐξέπνευσε. 38. καὶ τὸ καταπέτασμα τοῦ ναοῦ ἐσχίσθη εἰς δύο, ἀπὸ ἄνωθεν ἕως κάτω.

<sup>1</sup> συν after συνεσταυρωμένοι in  $\mathfrak{NBL}$ .

<sup>2</sup> και γεν. in  $\mathfrak{NBDDLA}$  33.

<sup>3</sup> τῇ ἐνατῇ ὥρᾳ in  $\mathfrak{NBDDL}$ .

<sup>4</sup> Omit λεγων  $\mathfrak{NBDDL}$ .

<sup>5</sup> The spelling of the words λαμ. σαβ. varies much in the MSS.

<sup>6</sup> με after εγκατελ. in  $\mathfrak{NBL}$ .

<sup>7</sup> B has ἐστηκότων.

<sup>8</sup> ἴδε in  $\mathfrak{NBLA}$  33.

<sup>9</sup> τις in  $\mathfrak{NBLA}$ .

<sup>10</sup> BL omit και.

<sup>11</sup>  $\mathfrak{NBDDL}$  33 omit τε (W.H. read Δραμῶν δε τις γεμ. σ. ο. περιθεῖς καλ.).

οἱ συνεσταυρωμένοι, the co-crucified. Mk., like Mt., knows nothing of the conversion of one of the robbers reported by Lk. How different these fellow-sufferers in spirit from the co-crucified in St. Paul's sense (Rom. vi. 6, Gal. ii. 20)!

Vv. 33-36. Darkness without and within (Mt. xxvii. 45-49, Lk. xxiii. 44-46).—Ver. 33. γενομένης, ἐγένετο: another awkwardness of style variously amended in Mt. and Lk.—σκότος: on this darkness vide on Mt. Furrer (Wanderungen, pp. 175-6) suggests as its cause a storm of hot wind from the south-east, such as sometimes comes in the last weeks of spring. "The heavens are overcast with a deep gray, the sun loses his brightness, and at last disappears. Over the darkened land rages the storm, so that the country, in the morning like a flower-carpet, in the evening appears a waste. . . . On the saddest day in human history swept such a storm at noon over Jerusalem, adding to the terrors of the crucifixion."—Ver. 34. ἐλωὶ, ἐλωὶ: the Aramaic form of the words spoken by Jesus, Mt. giving the Hebrew equivalent. On this cry of desertion vide remarks on the parallel place in Mt.—ὁ Θεὸς μου, ὁ Θε. μ.: as in Sept. Mt. gives the vocative.—εἰς τί, for what end? ἴνα τί in Mt. and Sept.—Ver. 35. Ἥλιαν: the name of Elijah might be suggested by either form of the name of God—Eli or Eloī. Who the τινες were that made the poor pun is doubtful, most probably heartless fellow-countrymen who only affected to misunderstand.—Ver. 36. δραμῶν δὲ: if the wits were heartless mockers, then δὲ will imply that this person who offered the sufferer a sponge saturated with rosca (vide Mt.) was a friendly person touched by compassion. For the credit of human nature one is very willing to be convinced of this.—ἐπότιζεν might, like ἐδίδουν (ver. 23), be viewed as a conative imperfect = offered Him a drink, but John's narrative indicates that Jesus accepted the drink (xix. 30).—λέγων refers to the man who brought the drink. In Mt. it is others who speak (xxvii. 49), and the sense of what was said varies accordingly—ἄφες in Mt. naturally, though not necessarily, means: stop, don't give Him the drink (vide on Mt.)—ἄφετε in Mk., spoken by the man to the bystanders, means naturally: allow me (to give Him the drink), the idea being that thereby the life of the sufferer would be prolonged, and so as it were give time for Elijah to come (ἴδωμεν εἰ ἔρ. Ἡ.) to work an effectual deliverance by taking Him down from the cross (καθελεῖν α.).—εἰ ἔρ.: εἰ with the present indicative instead of the more usual ἐὰν with subjunctive in a future supposition with probability (vide Burton, M. and T. in N. T., § 251).

Vv. 37-41. Death and its accompaniments (Mt. xxvii. 50-56, Lk. xxiii. 46-49).—

39. ἴδων δὲ ὁ κεντυρίων ὁ παρεστηκὼς ἐξ ἐναντίας αὐτοῦ, ὅτι οὕτω κράξας<sup>1</sup> ἐξέπνευσε, εἶπεν, “ Ἀληθῶς ὁ ἄνθρωπος οὗτος<sup>2</sup> υἱὸς ἦν θεοῦ.” 40. Ἦσαν δὲ καὶ γυναῖκες ἀπὸ μακρόθεν θεωροῦσαι, ἐν αἷς ἦν<sup>3</sup> καὶ Μαρία ἡ Μαγδαληνὴ, καὶ Μαρία ἡ τοῦ<sup>4</sup> Ἰακώβου τοῦ μικροῦ καὶ Ἰωσή<sup>5</sup> μήτηρ, καὶ Σαλώμη, 41. αἱ αἰεὶ,<sup>6</sup> ὅτε ἦν ἐν τῇ Γαλιλαίᾳ, ἠκολούθουν αὐτῷ, καὶ διηκόνουν αὐτῷ, καὶ ἄλλαι πολλαὶ αἱ συναναβάσαι αὐτῷ εἰς Ἱερουσόλυμα.

42. Καὶ ἤδη ὀψίας γενομένης, ἐπεὶ ἦν παρασκευή, ὃ ἔστι προσάβ-

<sup>1</sup> BL cop. omit κράξας, found in ACΔΣ al.

<sup>2</sup> The order of the words varies: οὗτος ο ἀνθ. in BDLΔ 33 (Tisch., W.H.); υἱος ἦν θ. in AC al. (Tisch.); υἱος θ. ἦν in BLΔ (W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> ἦν (from Mt.) omitted in BL.

<sup>4</sup> BCΔΣ omit του.

<sup>5</sup> Ἰωσητος in BDLΔ.

<sup>6</sup> B 33 omit καί; ACLΔ omit αἱ. Perhaps both omissions are due to similar ending.

Ver. 37. φωνὴν μεγάλην: a second great voice uttered by Jesus (vide ver. 34), the fact indicated in Mt. by the word πάλιν. At this point would come in John's τετέλεσται (xix. 30).—ἐξέπνευσε, breathed out His life, expired; aorist, the main fact, to which the incident of the drink (ἐπότιζεν, imperfect) is subordinate; used absolutely, here (and in Lk. xxiii. 46), as often in the classics. Bengel remarks: “spirare conducit corpori, expirare spiritui”.—Ver. 38. The fact of the rending of the veil stated as in Mt., with omission of Mt.'s favourite ἰδοὺ, and the introduction of another of Mk.'s characteristic pleonasms, ἀπ' ἄνωθεν.—Ver. 39. κεντυρίων, a Latinism = centurio, for which Mt. and Lk. give the Greek ἑκατόνταρχος.—ἐξ ἐναντίας (χώρας), right opposite Jesus, so that he could hear and see all distinctly. The thing that chiefly impressed him, according to Mk., was the manner of His death.—οὕτως ἐξέπνευσε = with a loud voice, as if life were still strong, and so much sooner than usual, as of one who, needing no Elijah to aid Him, could at will set Himself free from misery. This was a natural impression on the centurion's part, and patristic interpreters endorse it as true and important. Victor Ant. says that the loud voice showed that Jesus died κατ' ἐξουσίαν, and Theophylact applies to the ἐξέπνευσε the epithet δεσποτικῶς. But it may be questioned whether this view is in accord either with fact or with sound theology. What of the φέρουσι in ver. 22? And is there not something docetic in self-rescue from the pangs of the cross, instead of leaving the tragic experience to run its natural course? Mt.'s explanation of the wonder of the centurion, by the external events—earthquake, etc.—is, by comparison, secondary. Schanz characterises Mk.'s account as “schöner psychologisch” (psychologically finer).—Ver. 40. On the faithful women who looked on from afar, vide on Mt. Mk. singles out for special mention the same three as Mt.: Mary of Magdala, Mary the mother of James and Joses, and the mother of Zebedee's children. Mk. distinguishes James, the brother of Joses, as τοῦ μικροῦ = either the little in stature (Meyer and Weiss), or the less in age, the younger (Schanz). Mk. refers to the mother of Zebedee's children by her own name, Salome. Neither evangelist mentions Mary, the mother of Jesus.—Ver. 41. This interesting reference to service rendered to Jesus in Galilee, given here by Mk. only, applies to the three named, hence the honourable mention of them. Mt. substitutes service on the way from Galilee to Jerusalem rendered by all—evidently a secondary account.—ἄλλαι πολλαί, others, many; also worthy of honour, but of an inferior order compared with the three. They made the journey from Galilee to Jerusalem with Jesus.

Vv. 42-47. Burial (Mt. xxvii. 57-66, Lk. xxiii. 50-56).—Ver. 42. ἤδη; omitted by Mt., but important, as indicating that the business Joseph had on hand—that of obtaining and using permission to take down and bury the body of Jesus—must

βατον, 43. ἦλθεν<sup>1</sup> Ἰωσήφ ὁ ἀπὸ Ἀριμαθαίας, εὐσχήμων βουλευτής, ὃς καὶ αὐτὸς ἦν προσδεχόμενος τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ· τολμήσας εἰσήλθε πρὸς<sup>2</sup> Πιλάτον, καὶ ᾗτήσατο τὸ σῶμα τοῦ Ἰησοῦ. 44. ὁ δὲ Πιλάτος ἐθαύμασεν<sup>3</sup> εἰ ἤδη τέθνηκε· καὶ προσκαλεσάμενος τὸν κεντυρίωνα, ἐπρωήτησεν αὐτὸν εἰ πάλαι<sup>4</sup> ἀπέθανε· 45. καὶ γοῦς ἀπὸ τοῦ κεντυρίωνος, ἐδωρήσατο τὸ σῶμα<sup>5</sup> τῷ Ἰωσήφ. 46. καὶ ἀγοράσας σινδόνα, καὶ<sup>6</sup> καθελὼν αὐτόν, ἐνείλησε τῇ σινδόνι, καὶ κατέθηκεν<sup>7</sup> αὐτὸν ἐν μνημείῳ,<sup>8</sup> ὃ ἦν λελατομημένον ἐκ πέτρας· καὶ προσεκύλισε λίθον ἐπὶ τὴν θύραν τοῦ μνημείου. 47. ἡ δὲ Μαρία ἡ Μαγδαληνὴ καὶ Μαρία Ἰωσὴ<sup>9</sup> ἐθεώρουν ποῦ τίθεται.<sup>10</sup>

<sup>1</sup> ελθων in  $\aleph$ ABCLD, etc., ηλθεν in D.

<sup>2</sup> προς τον in  $\aleph$ BLD 33.

<sup>3</sup>  $\aleph$ D have θαυμαζεν (Tisch.), aor. (T.R.) in BCLD (W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> παλαι in  $\aleph$ CL (Tisch.), ηδη in BD (W.H. text, παλαι marg.).

<sup>5</sup> πτωμα in  $\aleph$ BDL; changed into σωμα from a feeling of decorum.

<sup>6</sup>  $\aleph$ BDL cop. omit και, added as a connecting particle.

<sup>7</sup> εθηκεν in  $\aleph$ BDL (W.H.).

<sup>8</sup>  $\aleph$ B have μνηματι, instead of μνημειω in CDLD. Tisch. and W.H. adopt reading of  $\aleph$ B.

<sup>9</sup> η before Ιωσ. in BCA; Ιωσητος in BLD.

<sup>10</sup> τεθειται in BCDLD 33.

be gone about without delay. It was already the afternoon of the day before the Sabbath, προσάββατον, called παρασκευή (here and in the parallels in this technical sense). It must, therefore, be done at once, or it could not be done till Sabbath was past.—Ver. 43. εὐσχήμων: Mt. has πλούσιος; vide there for remarks on the two epithets.—βουλευτής, a councillor, not in the provincial town, Arimathaea, which would have been mentioned, but in the grand council in Jerusalem.—καὶ αὐτὸς: not in contrast to the Sanhedrists generally (Weiss), but in company with the women previously named (Schanz); he, like them, was an expectant of the Kingdom of God.—τολμήσας: a graphic word, in Mk. only, giving a vivid idea of the situation. Objections to be feared on Pilate's part on score of time—dead so soon? possibly surly indifference to the decencies of burial in the case of a crucified person, risk of offence to the religious leaders in Jerusalem by sympathy shown to the obnoxious One, even in death. Therefore to be rendered: "taking courage, went in unto Pilate" (vide Field, Ol. Nor., ad loc.).—Ver. 44. Omitted by Mt., whose narrative throughout is colourless compared with Mk.'s.—εἰ τέθνηκε: εἰ = ὅτι, after a verb of wonder (vide Burton, M. and T., § 277, and Winer, § lx., 6).—εἰ ἀπέθανε: τέθνηκε has reference to the present of the speaker, ἀπέθανε to the moment of death.—πάλαι: opposed to ἄρτι, and not implying a considerable time before, but only bare priority to the present. Pilate's question to the centurion was, did He die before now? = is He actually dead?—Ver. 45. Satisfied on the point Pilate freely gives (ἐδωρήσατο) the carcase (πτῶμα,  $\aleph$ BDL, corrected from feelings of reverence into σῶμα in many MSS.).—Ver. 46. ἀγοράσας, having purchased linen; therefore purchases could be made. This word, and the reason given for Joseph's haste (ver. 42), have, not without a show of reason, been regarded as unintentional evidence in favour of the Johannine Chronology of the Passion. So Meyer, Weiss, and Holtzmann.—καθελὼν: καθαίρειν was the technical term for taking down from the cross. Proofs in Elsner, Raphael, Kypke, and Loesner.—ἐνείλησεν: here only in N. T.—ἐν μνημείῳ (μνηματι,  $\aleph$ B): no indication in Mk. as in Mt. that it was new, and Joseph's own.—Ver. 47. τέθειται: from the perfect Meyer and Weiss infer that the women were not present at the burial, but simply approached and took note where Jesus lay after burial. Schanz dissents, and refers to the καὶ before ὅτε in ver. 41 in some MSS., as proving that they had come to render the last office to Jesus.

XVI. 1. ΚΑΙ διαγενομένου τοῦ σαββάτου, Μαρία ἡ Μαγδαληνὴ καὶ Μαρία ἡ τοῦ Ἰακώβου καὶ Σαλώμη ἠγόρασαν ἀρώματα, ἵνα ἐλθοῦσαι ἀλείψωσιν αὐτόν. 2. καὶ λίαν πρῶτῃ τῆς μῆσ<sup>1</sup> σαββάτων ἔρχονται ἐπὶ τὸ μνημεῖον,<sup>2</sup> ἀνατείλαντος<sup>3</sup> τοῦ ἡλίου. 3. καὶ ἔλεγον πρὸς ἑαυτάς, “Τίς ἀποκυλίσει ἡμῖν τὸν λίθον ἐκ τῆς θύρας τοῦ μνημείου;” 4. Καὶ ἀναβλέψασαι θεωροῦσιν ὅτι ἀποκεκλισται<sup>4</sup> ὁ λίθος· ἦν γὰρ μέγας σφόδρα. 5. καὶ εἰσελθοῦσαι<sup>5</sup> εἰς τὸ μνημεῖον, εἶδον νεανίσκον καθήμενον ἐν τοῖς δεξιοῖς, περιβεβλημένον στολὴν λευκὴν· καὶ ἐξεθαμβήθησαν. 6. ὁ δὲ λέγει αὐταῖς, “Μὴ ἐκθαμβεῖσθε. Ἰησοῦν ζητεῖτε τὸν Ναζαρητὸν τὸν ἐσταυρωμένον·

<sup>1</sup> τη μια in NSBLA 33 (B omits τη, W.H. brackets).

<sup>2</sup> So in BDLA (W.H.). NC have μνημα (Tisch.).

<sup>3</sup> ανατελλοντος in D (W.H. marg.).

<sup>4</sup> ανακεκλισται in NSBL. αποκεκ. conforms to ver. 3.

<sup>5</sup> ελθοῦσαι in B (W.H. marg.).

CHAPTER XVI. THE RESURRECTION. Vv. 1-8. The open grave (Mt. xxviii 1-10, Lk. xxiv. 1-12).—Ver. 1. διαγενομένου τοῦ σαββάτου, the Sabbath being past; similar use of διαγ- in Acts xxv. 13, xxvii. 9, and in late Greek authors; examples in Elsner, Wetstein, Raphael, e.g., διαγενομένων πάλιν ἐτῶν δέκα, Polyb., Hist., ii., 19.—ἠγόρασαν ἀρ., purchased spices; wherewith, mingled with oil, more perfectly to anoint the body of the Lord Jesus. The aorist implies that this purchase was made on the first day of the week. Lk. (xxiii. 56) points to the previous Friday evening. Harmonists (Grotius, e.g.) reconcile by taking ἠγόρ. as a pluperfect. “After sunset there was a lively trade done among the Jews, because no purchase could be made on Sabbath” (Schanz).—Ver. 2. λίαν πρῶτῃ, very early in the morning, suggesting a time hardly consistent with the qualifying clause: ἀνατείλαντος τοῦ ἡλίου=when the sun was risen, which again does not harmonise with the “deep dawn” of Lk. and the “yet dark” of John. Mk.’s aim apparently is to emphasise the fact that what he is going to relate happened in broad daylight; Lk.’s to point out that the pious women were at their loving work as early on the Sunday morning as possible.—Ver. 3. ἔλεγον πρὸς ἑαυτάς: as they went to the sepulchre, they kept saying to each other (ad invicem, Vulg., πρὸς ἀλλήλας, Euthy.).—τίς ἀποκυλίσει: their only solicitude was about the stone at the sepulchre’s mouth; no thought of the guards in Mk.’s account. The pious women thought not of angelic help. Men had rolled the stone forward and could roll it back, but it was beyond woman’s strength.—Ver. 4. ἀναβλέψασαι, looking up, as they approached the tomb; suggestive of heavy hearts and downcast eyes, on the way thither.—ἦν γὰρ μέγας σφόδρα: this clause seems out of place here, and it has been suggested that it should be inserted after μνημεῖον in ver. 3, as explaining the women’s solicitude about the removal of the stone. As it stands, the clause explains how the women could see, even at a distance, that the stone had already been removed. It was a sufficiently large object. How the stone was rolled away is not said.

Vv. 5-8. The women enter into the tomb through the open door, and experience a greater surprise.—νεανίσκον, a young man. In Mt.’s account it is an angel, and his position is not within the tomb, as here, but sitting on the stone without. Lk. has two men in shining apparel.—στολὴν λευκὴν, in a white long robe, implying what is not said, that the youth is an angel. No such robe worn by young men on earth.—Ver. 6. μὴ ἐκθαμβεῖσθε, “be not affrighted” (as they had been by the unexpected sight of a man, and wearing heavenly apparel); no ὑμεῖς after the verb here, as in Mt. after φοβεῖσθε, where there is an implied contrast between the women and the guards (vide on Mt.).—Ἰησοῦν, etc., Jesus ye seek, the Nazarene, the crucified. Observe the objective, far-off style of description, befitting a visitor from ἠγέρθη, οὐκ ἔστιν ὧδε· ἴδε, ὁ τόπος ὅπου ἔθηκαν αὐτόν. 7. ἀλλ' ὑπάγετε, εἶπατε τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ καὶ τῷ Πέτρῳ, ὅτι προάγει ὑμᾶς εἰς τὴν Γαλιλαίαν· ἐκεῖ αὐτὸν ὄψεσθε, καθὼς εἶπεν ὑμῖν." S. καὶ ἐξελθοῦσαι ταχὺ<sup>1</sup> ἔφυγον ἀπὸ τοῦ μνημείου· εἶχε δὲ<sup>2</sup> αὐτὰς τρόμος καὶ ἔκστασις· καὶ οὐδενὶ οὐδὲν εἶπον, ἐφοβοῦντο γάρ.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>1</sup> ΞABCDLΔΣ omit ταχὺ (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> γάρ for δε in ΞBD vet. Lat. cop. syr. verss (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> On verses 9-20, in relation to the Gospel, vide below.

another world.—ἠγέρθη, etc. : note the abrupt disconnected style : risen, not here, see (ἴδε) the place (empty) where they laid Him. The empty grave, the visible fact ; resurrection, the inference ; when, how, a mystery (ἀδελον, Euthy.).—Ver. 7. ἀλλὰ, but ; change in tone and topic ; gazing longer into the empty grave would serve no purpose : there is something to be done—go, spread the news ! Cf. John xiv. 31 : But . . . arise, let us go hence!—καὶ τῷ Πέτρῳ, and to Peter in particular : why ? to the disciple who denied his Master ? so the older interpreters—to Peter, with all his faults, the most important man in the disciple band ? so most recent interpreters : ut dix Apostolici coetus, Grotius.—ᾗτι, recit., introducing the very message of the angel. The message recalls the words of Jesus before His death (chap. xiv. 28).—ἐκεῖ, there, pointing to Galilee as the main scene of the reappearing of Jesus to His disciples, creating expectation of a narrative by the evangelist of an appearance there, which, however, is not forthcoming.—Ver. 8. ἐξελθοῦσαι, going out—of the sepulchre into which they had entered (ver. 5).—ἔφυγον, they fled, from the scene of such surprises. The angel's words had failed to calm them ; the event altogether too much for them.—τρόμος καὶ ἔκστασις, trembling, caused by fear, and stupor, as of one out of his wits.—τρόμος = "tremor corporis" : ἔκστασις = "stupor animi," Bengel.—οὐδενὶ οὐδὲν εἶπον : an unqualified statement as it stands here, no "on the way," such as harmonists supply : "obvio scilicet," Grotius.—ἐφοβοῦντο γάρ gives the reason of this reticence so unnatural in women : they were in a state of fear. When the fear went off, or events happened which made the disciples independent of their testimony, their mouths would doubtless be opened.

So ends the authentic Gospel of Mark, without any account of appearances of the risen Jesus in Galilee or anywhere else. The one thing it records is the empty grave, and an undelivered message sent through three women to the disciples, promising a reunion in Galilee. Strange that a story of such thrilling interest should terminate so abruptly and unsatisfactorily. Was there originally a continuation, unhappily lost, containing, e.g., an account of a meeting of the Risen One in Galilee with His followers ? Or was the evangelist prevented by some unknown circumstances from carrying into effect an intention to bring his story to a suitable close ? We cannot tell. All we know (for the light thrown on the question by criticism, represented, e.g., by Tischendorf, Nov. Test., G. Ed., viii., vol. i., pp. 403-407 ; Hahn, Gesch. des N. Kanons, ii., p. 910 ff. ; Westcott and Hort, Introduction, Appendix, pp. 29-51, approaches certainty) is that vv. 9-20 of Mk. xvi. in our N. T. are not to be taken as the fulfilment of any such intention by the author of the second Gospel. The external evidence strongly points this way. The section is wanting in ΞB and in Syr. Sin. Jerome states (Ep. cxx., quaest. 3) that it was wanting in nearly all Greek copies ("omnibus Graecis libris pene"), and the testimony of Eusebius is to the same effect. The internal evidence of style confirms the impression made by the external : characteristic words of Mk. wanting, words not elsewhere found in the Gospel occurring (e.g., θεεάθη, v. 11), the narrative a meagre, colourless summary, a composition based on the narratives of the other Gospels, signs ascribed to believers, some of which wear an apocryphal aspect (vide ver. 18). Some, in spite of such considerations, still regard these verses as an integral part of Mk.'s work, but for many the question of present interest is : what account is to be given of them, viewed as an indubitable addendum by another hand ? Who wrote this conclusion, when, and with what end in view? We wait for the final answers to these questions, but important contributions have recently been made towards a solution of the problem. In an Armenian codex of the Gospels, written in 986 A.D., the close of Mk. (vv. 9-20), separated by a space from what goes before to show that it is distinct, has written above it: "Of the Presbyter Aristion," as if to suggest that he is the author of what follows. (Vide Expositor, October, 1893. Aristion, the Author of the last Twelve Verses of Mark, by F. C. Conybeare, M.A.) More recently Dr. Rohrbach has taken up this fact into his interesting discussion on the subject already referred to (vide on Mt. xxviii. 9, 10), and appreciated its significance in connection with the preparation of a four-gospel Canon by certain Presbyters of Asia Minor in the early part of the second century. His hypothesis is that in preparing this Canon the Presbyters felt it necessary to bring the Gospels into accord, especially in reference to the resurrection, that in their preaching all might say the same thing on that vital topic. In performing this delicate task, the fourth Gospel was taken as the standard, and all the other Gospels were to a certain extent altered in their resurrection sections to bring them into line with its account. In Mt. and Lk. the change made was slight, simply the insertion in the former of two verses (xxviii. 9, 10), and in the latter of one (xxiv. 12). In Mk., on the other hand, it amounted to the removal of the original ending, and the substitution for it of a piece taken from a writing by Aristion the Presbyter, mentioned by Papias. The effect of the changes, if not their aim, was to take from Peter the honour of being the first to see the risen Lord, and from Galilee that of being the exclusive theatre of the Christophanies. It is supposed that the original ending of Mk. altogether ignored the Jerusalem appearances, and represented Jesus, in accordance with the statement of St. Paul (1 Cor. xv. 5), as showing Himself (in Galilee) first to Peter, then to the Twelve. The inference is based partly on Mk. xvi. 7, and partly on the relative section of the Gospel of Peter, which, following pretty closely Mk.'s account as far as ver. 8, goes on to tell how the Twelve found their way sad of heart to their old homes, and resumed their old occupations. In all this Rohrbach, a pupil of Harnack's, is simply working out a hint thrown out by his master in his Dogmengeschichte, vol. i., p. 346, 3 Ausg. It would be premature to accept the theory as proved, but it is certainly entitled to careful consideration, as tending to throw some light on an obscure chapter in the early history of the Gospels, and on the ending of the canonical Gospel of Mark in particular.

9. Ἀναστὰς δὲ πρῶτῃ πρώτῃ σαββάτου ἐφάνη πρῶτον Μαρία τῇ Μαγδαληνῇ, ἀφ' ἧς<sup>1</sup> ἐκβεβλήκει ἑπτὰ δαιμόνια. 10. ἐκείνη πορευθεῖσα ἀπήγγειλε τοῖς μετ' αὐτοῦ γενομένοις, πενθοῦσι καὶ κλαίουσι 11. κάκεινοι ἀκούσαντες ὅτι ζῆ καὶ ἐθεάθη ὑπ' αὐτῆς

<sup>1</sup> παρ ἧς in CDL 33 (W.H.).

Vv. 9-20 may be divided into three parts corresponding more or less to sections in John, Luke, and Matthew, and not improbably based on these; vv. 9-11, answering to John xx. 14-18; vv. 12-14, answering to Lk. xxiv. 13-35; vv. 15-18, answering to Mt. xxviii. 19. Vv. 19, 20 wind up with a brief reference to the ascension and the subsequent apostolic activity of the disciples.

Vv. 9-11. ἀναστὰς δὲ refers to Jesus, who, however, is not once named in the whole section. This fact with the δὲ favours the hypothesis that the section is a fragment of a larger writing.—πρῶτῃ πρώτῃ σαβ.: whether these words are to be connected with ἀναστὰς, indicating the time of the resurrection; or with ἐφάνη, indicating the time of the first appearance, cannot be decided (vide Meyer).—πρῶτον Μαρία τ. Μ., first to Mary of Magdala, as in John (xx. 14).—παρ' ἧς, etc.: this bit of information, taken from Lk. viii. 2, is added as if this woman were a stranger never mentioned before in this Gospel, a sure sign of another hand.—ἐφάνη, in this verse = appeared to, does not elsewhere occur in this sense.—Ver. 10. ἐκείνη, she, without emphasis, not elsewhere so used.—πορευθεῖσα: the simple verb πορεύεσθαι, three times used in this section (vv. 12, 15), does not occur anywhere else in this Gospel.—τοῖς μετ' αὐτοῦ γενομένοις: the reference is not to the disciples in the stricter sense who are called the Eleven (ver. 14), but to the friends of Jesus generally, an ex-ἠπίστησαν. 12. Μετὰ δὲ ταῦτα δυσὶν ἐξ αὐτῶν περιπατοῦσιν ἐφανερώθη ἐν ἑτέρᾳ μορφῇ, πορευομένοις εἰς ἀγρόν. 13. κἀκεῖνοι ἀπελθόντες ἀπήγγειλαν τοῖς λοιποῖς· οὐδὲ ἐκείνοις ἐπίστευσαν. 14. Ὑστερον<sup>1</sup> ἀνακειμένοις αὐτοῖς τοῖς ἑνδεκα ἐφανερώθη, καὶ ὠνείδισε τὴν ἀπιστίαν αὐτῶν καὶ σκληροκαρδίαν, ὅτι τοῖς θεασαμένοις αὐτὸν ἐγγηγερμένοι<sup>2</sup> οὐκ ἐπίστευσαν. 15. Καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, "Πορευθέντες εἰς τὸν κόσμον ἅπαντα, κηρύξατε τὸ εὐαγγέλιον πάσῃ τῇ κτίσει. 16. ὁ πιστεύσας καὶ βαπτισθεὶς σωθήσεται· ὁ δὲ ἀπιστήσας κατακριθήσεται. 17. σημεῖα δὲ τοῖς πιστεύουσι ταῦτα παρακολουθήσει<sup>3</sup>. ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί μου δαιμόνια ἐκβαλοῦσι· γλώσσαις λαλήσουσι καιναῖς<sup>4</sup>. 18. ὄφεις ἄρουσι· κἄν θανάσιμόν τι πῖωσιν, οὐ μὴ αὐτοὺς βλάψει<sup>5</sup>. ἐπὶ ἄρρώστους χεῖρας ἐπιθήσουσι, καὶ καλῶς ἔξουσιν."

<sup>1</sup> ADΣ al. add δε after υστερον.

<sup>2</sup> ACD add εκ νεκρων after εγγηγερμενον (W.H. brackets).

<sup>3</sup> ακολουθησει ταυτα in CL (W.H. text; as in T.R. margin).

<sup>4</sup> CLΔ omit καιναις, and have in this place και εν ταις χερσιν (W.H. text, brackets, with καιναις in margin).

<sup>5</sup> βλαψη in ACLΔ al. (Tisch., W.H. T.R. only in minusc.).

pression not elsewhere occurring in any of the Gospels.—Ver. 11. ἐθεάθη, was seen. This verb, used again in ver. 14, is foreign to Mk., as is also ἀπιστεῖν, also twice used here (ἠπίστησαν, ver. 11; ἀπιστήσας, ver. 16).

Vv. 12-14. μετὰ δὲ ταῦτα, afterwards (only here in Mk.); vaguely introducing a second appearance in the neighbourhood of Jerusalem.—δυσὶν ἐξ αὐτῶν, to two of the friends of Jesus previously referred to, not of the Eleven. Cf. with Lk. xxiv. 13. It is not only the same fact, but the narrative here seems borrowed from Lk.—ἐν ἑτέρᾳ μορφῇ, in a different form. Serving no purpose here, because the fact it accounts for, the non-recognition of Jesus by the two disciples (Lk. xxiv. 16), is not mentioned.—εἰς ἀγρόν: for εἰς κώμην in Lk. The use of φανεροῦσθαι in the sense of being manifested to, in ver. 12, is peculiar to this section (again in ver. 14).—Ver. 14. ὕστερον, at a later time; vague indication, here only. It is difficult to identify this appearance with any one mentioned in the other Gospels. What follows in ver. 15, containing the final commission, seems to point to the farewell appearance in Galilee (Mt. xxviii. 16), but the ἀνακειμένοις (ver. 14) takes us to the scene related in Lk. xxiv. 36-43, though more than the Eleven were present on that occasion. The suggestion has been made (Meyer, Weiss, etc.) that the account here blends together features taken from various appearances. The main points for the narrator are that Jesus did appear to the Eleven, and that He found them in an unbelieving mood.

Vv. 15-18. The Commission (Mt. xxviii. 18-20).—εἰς τὸν κόσμον ἅπαντα, added to Mt.'s πορευθέντες.—κηρύξατε τ. εὐ.: this more specific and evangelic phrase replaces Mt.'s μαθητεύσατε, and πάσῃ τῇ κτίσει gives more emphatic expression to the universal destination of the Gospel than Mt.'s πάντα τὰ ἔθνη.—Ver. 16 is a poor equivalent for Mt.'s reference to baptism, insisting as it does, in an ecclesiastical spirit, on the necessity of baptism rather than on its significance as an expression of the Christian faith in God the Father, Son, and Spirit. Jesus may not have spoken as Mt. reports, but the words put into His mouth by the first evangelist are far more worthy of the Lord than those here ascribed to Him.—Ver. 17. Here also we find a great lapse from the high level of Mt.'s version of the farewell words of Jesus: signs, physical charisms, and thaumaturgic powers, taking the place of the spiritual presence of the exalted Lord. Casting out devils represents the evangelic miracles; speaking with tongues those of the apostolic age; taking up venomous serpents and drinking deadly poison seem to introduce us into the twilight of apocryphal story. Healing of the sick by laying on of hands brings us back to apostolic times. θανάσιμον is a ἄπ. λεγ.

19. Ὁ μὲν οὖν Κύριος,<sup>1</sup> μετὰ τὸ λαλήσαι αὐτοῖς, ἀνελήφθη εἰς τὸν οὐρανόν, καὶ ἐκάθισεν ἐκ δεξιῶν τοῦ Θεοῦ· 20. ἐκεῖνοι δὲ ἐξελθόντες ἐκήρυξαν πανταχοῦ, τοῦ Κυρίου συνεργοῦντος, καὶ τὸν λόγον βεβαιούντος διὰ τῶν ἐπακολουθούντων σημείων. Ἀμήν.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup> CLΔ have Ἰησοῦς after Κυριος (W.H. brackets).

<sup>2</sup> Ἀμήν is found in CLΔ among other uncials (W.H. marg.).

Vv. 19, 20. The story ends with a brief notice of the ascension of the Lord Jesus on the one hand (μὲν), and of the apostolic activity of the Eleven on the other (δὲ). Lk., who means to tell the story of the acts of the Apostles at length, contents himself with reporting that the Eleven returned from Bethany, his scene of parting, to Jerusalem, not with sadness but with joy, there to worship and wait.

ΤΟ ΚΑΤΑ ΛΟΥΚΑΝ

ΑΙΤΙΟΝ ΕΥΑΓΓΕΛΙΟΝ.

Ι. 1. ἘΠΕΙΔΗΠΕΡ πολλοὶ ἐπεχείρησαν ἀνατάξασθαι διήγησιν περὶ τῶν πεπληροφορημένων ἐν ἡμῖν πραγμάτων, 2. καθὼς παρέ-

CHAPTER I. THE EARLY HISTORY. Vv. 1-4. The preface.—Ver. 1. ἐπειδ-ήπερ: three particles, ἐπεί, δὲ, περ, blended into one word, implying that the fact to be stated is well known (δὲ), important (περ), and important as a reason for the undertaking on hand (ἐπεί) = seeing, as is well known. Hahn thinks the word before us is merely a temporal not a causal particle, and that Luke means only to say that he is not the first to take such a task on hand. But why mention this unless because it entered somehow into his motives for writing? It might do so in various ways: as revealing a widespread impulse to preserve in writing the evangelic memorabilia, stimulating him to do the same; as meeting an extensive demand for such writings on the part of Christians, which appealed to him also; as showing by the number of such writings that no one of them adequately met the demand, or performed the task in a final manner, and that therefore one more attempt was not superfluous. Ἐπειδήπερ, a good Greek word, occurs here only in N. T.—πολλοί: not an exaggeration, but to be taken strictly as implying extensive activity in the production of rudimentary "Gospels". The older exegetes understood the word as referring to heretical or apocryphal gospels, of course by way of censure. This view is abandoned by recent commentators, for whom the question of interest rather is: were Mt.'s Logia and Mk.'s Gospel among the earlier contributions which Lk. had in his eye? This question cannot be decided by exegesis, and answers vary according to the critical theories of those who discuss the topic. All that need be said here is that there is no apparent urgent reason for excluding Mt. and Mk. from the crowd of early essayists.—ἐπεχείρησαν, took in hand; here and in Acts ix. 29, xix. 13. It is a vox ambigua, and might or might not imply blame = attempted and did not succeed, or attempted and accomplished their task. It is not probable that emphatic blame is intended. On the other hand, it is not likely that ἐπεχ. is a mere expletive, and that ἐπεχ. ἀνατάξασθαι is simply = ἀνετάξαντο, as, after Casaubon, Palairot, Raphel, etc., maintained. The verb contains a gentle hint that in some respects finality had not yet been reached, which might be said with all due respect even of Mt.'s Logia and Mk.'s Gospel.—ἀνατάξασθαι διήγησιν; to set forth in order a narrative; the expression points to a connected series of narratives arranged in some order (τάξις), topical or chronological, rather than to isolated narratives, the meaning put on διήγησις by Schleiermacher. Both verb and noun occur here only in N. T.—περὶ . . . πραγμάτων indicates the subject of these narratives. The leading term in this phrase is πεπληροφορημένων, about the meaning of which interpreters are much divided. The radical idea of πληροφορέω (πλήρης, φέρω) is to bring or make full. The special sense will depend on the matter in reference to which the fulness takes place. It might be in the region of fact, in which case the word under consideration would mean "become a completed series," and the whole phrase "concerning events which now lie before us as a complete whole". This view is adopted by an increasing number of modern commentators (vide R. V.). Or the fulness may be in conviction, in which case the word would mean "most δοσαν ἡμῖν οἱ ἀπ' ἀρχῆς αὐτόπται καὶ ὑπῆρέται γερόμενοι τοῦ λόγου, 3. ἔδοξε κάμοι, ἂ παρηκολουθηκότι ἄνωθεν πᾶσιν ἀκριβῶς, cf. i. Tim. iv. 6; 2 Tim. iii. 10.

surely believed" (A. V.). This sense of complete conviction occurs several times in N. T. (Rom. iv. 21, Heb. vi. 11, x. 22), but with reference to persons not to things. A very large number of interpreters, ancient and modern, take the word here in this sense ("bei uns beglaubigten," Weizsäcker). Holtz., H. C., gives both without deciding between them ("vollgeglauten oder vollbrachten"). Neither meaning seems quite what is wanted. The first is too vague, and does not indicate what the subject-matter is. The second is explicit enough as to that = the matters which form the subject of Christian belief; but one hardly expects these matters to be represented as the subject of sure belief by one whose very aim in writing is to give further certainty concerning them (ἀσφάλειαν, ver. 4). What if the sphere of the fulness be knowledge, and the meaning of the clause: "concerning the things which have become widely known among us Christians"? Then it would be plain enough what was referred to. Then also the phrase would point out the natural effect of the many evangelic narratives—the universal diffusion of a fair acquaintance with the leading facts of Christ's life. But have we any instance of such use of the word?—πληροφορία is used in reference to understanding and knowledge in Col. ii. 2. Then in modern Greek πληροφορῶ means to inform, and as the word is mainly Hellenistic in usage, and may belong to the popular speech preserved throughout the centuries, τῶν πεπλ. may mean, "those things of which information has been given" (Geldart, The Modern Greek Language, p. 186), or those things generally known among Christians as such.

Ver. 2. καθὼς implies that the basis of these many written narratives was the παράδοσις of the Apostles, which, by contrast, and by the usual meaning of the word, would be mainly though not necessarily exclusively oral (might include, e.g., the Logia of Mt.).—οἱ . . . τοῦ λόγου describes the Apostles, the ultimate source of information, as men "who had become, or been made, eye-witnesses and ministers of the word". Both αὐτόπται. and ὑπῆρ. may be connected with τοῦ λόγου, understood to mean the burden of apostolic preaching

= the facts of Christ's earthly history. Eye-witnesses of the facts from the beginning (ἀπ' ἀρχῆς), therefore competent to state them with authority; servants of the word including the facts (= "all that Jesus began both to do and to teach"), whose very business it was to relate words and facts, and who therefore did it with some measure of fulness. Note that the ἡμῖν after παρέδωσαν implies that Lk. belonged to the second generation (Meyer, Schanz). Hahn infers from the ἡμῖν in ver. 1 that Lk. was himself an eye-witness of Christ's public ministry, at least in its later stage.

Ver. 3. ἔδοξε κάμοι: modestly introducing the writer's purpose. He puts himself on a level with the πολλοί, and makes no pretensions to superiority, except in so far as coming after them, and more comprehensive inquiries give him naturally an advantage which makes his work not superfluous.—παρηκολουθηκότι ἄν. π.: having followed (in my inquiries) all things from the beginning, i.e., not of the public life of Jesus (ἀπ' ἀρχῆς, ver. 2), but of His life in this world. The sequel shows that the starting point was the birth of John. This process of research was probably gone into antecedent to the formation of his plan, and one of the reasons for its adoption (Meyer, also Grimm, Das Proömium des Lukasevangelium in Fahrbücher f. deutsche Theologie, 1871, p. 48. Likewise Calvin: omnibus exacte pervestigatis), not merely undertaken after the plan had been formed (Hahn).—ἀκριβῶς, καθεξῆς σ. γρ. explain how he desired to carry out his plan: he wishes to be exact, and to write in an orderly manner (καθεξῆς here only in N. T., ἐφεξῆς in earlier Greek). Chronological order aimed at (whether successfully or not) according to many (Meyer, Godet, Weiss, Hahn). Schanz maintains that the chronological aim applies only to the great turning points of the history, and not to all details; a very reasonable view. These two adverbs, ἀκρ., καθ., may imply a gentle criticism of the work of predecessors. Observe the historical spirit implied in all Lk. tells about his literary plan and methods: inquiry, accuracy, order, aimed at at least; vouchers desired for all statements. Lk. is no religious romancer, who will invent at will, and say anything that καθεξῆς σοι γράψαι, κράτιστε Θεόφιλε, 4. ἵνα ἐπιγνώσῃς περὶ ὧν κατηχήθης λόγων τὴν ἀσφάλειαν.

5. ἘΓΕΝΕΤΟ ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις Ἡρώδου τοῦ<sup>1</sup> βασιλέως τῆς Ἰουδαίας ἱερεὺς τις ὀνόματι Ζαχαρίας, ἐξ ἑφημερίας Ἀβιά· καὶ ἡ γυνὴ αὐτοῦ<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup> ἜBLΞ omit του.

<sup>2</sup> For η γυνή αὐτου ἜBCDXE 33 have γυνή αὐτω (Tisch., W.H.). L has η γ. αὐτω.

suits his purpose. It is quite compatible with this historic spirit that Lk. should be influenced in his narrations by religious feelings of decorum and reverence, and by regard to the edification of his first readers. That his treatment of materials bearing on the characters of Jesus and the Apostles reveals many traces of such influence will become apparent in the course of the exposition.—κράτιστε Θεόφιλε. The work is to be written for an individual who may perhaps have played the part of patronus libri, and paid the expenses of its production. The epithet κράτιστε may imply high official position (Acts xxiii. 26, xxvi. 25). On this see Grotius. Grimm thinks it expresses only love and friendship.

Ver. 4. Indicates the practical aim: to give certainty in regard to matters of Christian belief.—περὶ ὧν κ. λόγων: an attraction, to be thus resolved: περὶ τῶν λόγων οὓς κατηχήθης. λόγων is best taken = matters (πραγμάτων, ver. 1), histories (Weizsäcker), not doctrines. Doubtless this is a Hebraistic sense, but that is no objection, for after all Lk. is a Hellenist and no pure Greek, and even in this preface, whose pure Greek has been so often praised, he is a Hellenist to a large extent. (So Hahn, Einleitung, p. 6.) The subject of instruction for young Christians in those early years was the teaching, the acts, and the experience of Jesus: their "catechism" historic not doctrinal.—κατηχήθης: is this word used here in a technical sense = formally and systematically instructed, or in the general sense of "have been informed more or less correctly"? (So Kypke.) The former is more probable. The verb (from κατὰ, ἠχέω) is mainly Hellenistic in usage, rare in profane authors, not found in O. T. The N. T. usage, confined to Lk. and Paul, points to regular instruction (vide Rom. ii. 18).

This preface gives a lively picture of the intense, universal interest felt by the early Church in the story of the Lord Jesus: Apostles constantly telling what they had seen and heard; many of their hearers taking notes of what they said for the benefit of themselves and others; through these gospelets acquaintance with the evangelic history circulating among believers, creating a thirst for more and yet more; imposing on such a man as Luke the task of preparing a Gospel as full, correct, and well arranged as possible through the use of all available means—previous writings or oral testimony of surviving eye-witnesses.

Vv. 5-25. The birth of the Baptist announced. From the long prefatory sentence, constructed according to the rules of Greek syntax, and with some pretensions to classic purity of style, we pass abruptly to the Protevangelium, the prelude to the birth of Christ, consisting of the remainder of this chapter, written in Greek which is Hebraistic in phrase and structure, and Jewish in its tone of piety. The evangelist here seems to have at command an Aramaic, Jewish-Christian source, which he, as a faithful collector of evangelic memorabilia, allows to speak for itself, with here and there an editorial touch.

Vv. 5-7. The parents of John.—ἐγένετο, there was, or there lived.—ἐν ταῖς ἡ., etc.: in the days, the reign, of Herod, king of Judaea. Herod died 750 A.C., and the Christian era begins with 753 A.C. This date is too late by three or four years.—ἐξ ἑφημερίας Ἀβιά: ἑφημερία (a noun formed from ἐφημέριος -ον, daily, lasting for a day), not in profane authors, here and in ver. 8 in N. T., in Sept., in Chron. and Nehemiah, = (1) a service lasting for a day, or for days—a week; (2) a class of priests performing that service. The priests were divided into twenty-four classes, the organisation dating according to the tradition in Chronicles (1 Chron. xxiv.) from the time of David. The order of Abia was the eighth (1 Chron. xxiv. 10). Josephus (Ant., vii., 14, 7) uses ἑφημερίας and πατρία to denote a class. On the priesthood and the temple worship and the daily service, consult Schürer's History, Div. ii., vol. i., pp. 207-298.—γυνή: a daughter of Aaron; John descended ἐκ τῶν θυγατέρων Ἀαρών, καὶ τὸ ὄνομα αὐτῆς Ἑλισάβετ. 6. ἦσαν δὲ δίκαιοι ἀμφοτέροι ἐνώπιον<sup>1</sup> τοῦ Θεοῦ, πορευόμενοι ἐν πάσαις ταῖς ἐντολαῖς καὶ δικαιοῦμασι τοῦ Κυρίου ἀμεμπτοι. 7. καὶ οὐκ ἦν αὐτοῖς τέκνον, καθότι ἡ Ἑλισάβετ ἦν<sup>2</sup> στείρα, καὶ ἀμφοτέροι προβεβηκότες ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις αὐτῶν ἦσαν. 8. Ἐγένετο δὲ ἐν τῷ ἱερατεῦειν αὐτὸν ἐν τῇ τάξει τῆς ἐφημερίας αὐτοῦ ἔναντι τοῦ Θεοῦ, 9. <sup>b</sup>κατὰ τὸ <sup>b</sup>ἔθος τῆς <sup>c</sup>ἱερατείας, <sup>d</sup>ἔλαχε τοῦ <sup>e</sup>θυμιάσαι <sup>b</sup>again in ii. 42; xxii. 39. εἰσελθὼν εἰς τὸν ναὸν τοῦ Κυρίου. 10. καὶ πᾶν τὸ πλῆθος τοῦ λαοῦ ἦν<sup>3</sup> προσευχόμενον ἔξω τῇ ὥρᾳ τοῦ θυμιάματος. 11. ὤφθη δὲ αὐτῷ ἄγγελος Κυρίου, ἑστὼς ἐκ δεξιῶν τοῦ θυσιαστηρίου τοῦ θυμιάματος. 12. καὶ ἐταράχθη Ζαχαρίας ἰδὼν, καὶ φόβος ἐπέπεσεν ἐπ' αὐτόν. 13. Εἶπε δὲ πρὸς αὐτὸν ὁ ἄγγελος, "Μὴ φοβοῦ, Ζαχαρία· διότι εἰσηκούσθη ἡ δέησις σου, καὶ ἡ γυνή σου Ἑλισάβετ γεννήσει from priestly parents on both sides.—Ver. 6. δίκαιοι: an O. T. term, and expressing an O. T. idea of piety and goodness, as unfolded in the following clause, which is Hebrew in speech as in sentiment: walking in all the commandments and ordinances (equivalent terms, not to be distinguished, with Calvin, Bengel, and Godet, as moral and ceremonial) blameless (relatively to human judgment).—Ver. 7. καὶ οὐκ ἦν, etc.: childless, a calamity from the Jewish point of view, and also a fact hard to reconcile with the character of the pair, for the Lord loveth the righteous, and, according to O. T. views, He showed His love by granting prosperity, and, among other blessings, children (Ps. cxviii.).—καθότι: a good Attic word: in Lk.'s writings only in N. T. = seeing, inasmuch as.—προβεβηκότες ἐν τ. ἡμ.: "advanced in days," Hebraistic for the classic "advanced in age" (τὴν ἡλικίαν) or years (τοῖς ἔτεσιν): childless, and now no hope of children.

<sup>1</sup> ἝBC have ἐναντιον; ἐνωπιον in DLΔ.

<sup>2</sup> ἦν before η ΕΛ. in ἝBDLΔΞ (Tisch., W.H.). B 69 omit η (W.H. brackets).

<sup>3</sup> ἦν του λαου in ἝBLΔ (Tisch., W.H.).

Vv. 8-10. Hope preternaturally revived.—ἐν τῷ ἱερατεῦειν: Zechariah was serving his week in due course, and it fell to his lot on a certain day to perform the very special service of burning incense in the holy place. A great occasion in a priest's life, as it might never come to him but once (priests said to be as many as 20,000 in our Lord's time). "The most memorable day in the life of Zechariah" (Farrar, C. G. T.).—Ver. 9. κατὰ τὸ ἔθος is to be connected with ἔλαχε: casting lots, the customary manner of settling who was to have the honour.—εἰσελθὼν is to be connected with θυμιάσαι, not with ἔλαχε. The meaning is that entering the sanctuary was the necessary preliminary to offering incense: in one sense a superfluous remark (Hahn), yet worth making in view of the sacredness of the place. A great affair to get entrance into the ναός.—Ver. 10. πλῆθος: there might be a crowd within the temple precincts at the hour of prayer any day of the week, not merely on Sabbath or on a feast day ("dies solennis, et fortasse sabbatum," Bengel).

Vv. 11-17. A celestial visitant.—Ver. 11. ὤφθη: the appearance very particularly described, the very position of the angel indicated: on the right side of the altar of incense; the south side, the propitious side say some, the place of honour say others. The altar of incense is called, with reference to its function, θυμιατήριον in Heb. ix. 3.—Ver. 12. ἐταράχθη describes the state of mind generally = perturbed, φόβος specifically. Yet why afraid, seeing in this case, as always, the objective appearance answers to the inward state of mind? This fear of the divine belongs to O. T. piety.—Ver. 13. δέησις: all prayed at that hour, therefore of course the officiating priest. The prayer of Zechariah was very special—δέησις implies this as compared with προσευχή, vide Trench, Synonyms—and very realistic: for offspring. Beneath the dignity of the occasion, say some υἰόν σοι, καὶ καλέσεις τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ Ἰωάννην. 14. καὶ ἔσται χαρὰ σοι καὶ ἀγαλλίασις, καὶ πολλοὶ ἐπὶ τῇ γεννήσει<sup>1</sup> αὐτοῦ χαρήσονται. 15. ἔσται γὰρ μέγας ἐνώπιον τοῦ<sup>2</sup> Κυρίου· καὶ οἶνον καὶ σίκερα οὐ μὴ πίῃ, καὶ Πνεύματος Ἁγίου πλησθήσεται ἔτι ἐκ κοιλίας μητρὸς αὐτοῦ. 16. καὶ πολλοὺς τῶν υἰῶν Ἰσραὴλ ἐπιστρέψει ἐπὶ Κύριον τὸν Θεὸν αὐτῶν· 17. καὶ αὐτὸς προελεύσεται<sup>3</sup> ἐνώπιον αὐτοῦ ἐν πνεύματι καὶ δυνάμει Ἡλίου,<sup>4</sup> ἐπιστρέψαι καρδίας πατέρων ἐπὶ τέκνα, καὶ ἀπειθεῖς ἐν φρονήσει δικαίων, ἐτοιμάσαι Κυρίῳ λαὸν κατεσκευασμένον.” 18. Καὶ εἶπε Ζαχαρίας πρὸς τὸν ἄγγελον, “Κατὰ τί γνῶσομαι τοῦτο; ἐγὼ γάρ εἰμι πρεσβύτης, καὶ ἡ γυνή μου προβεβηκυῖα ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις αὐτῆς.” 19. Καὶ ἀποκριθεὶς ὁ ἄγγελος εἶπεν αὐτῷ, “Ἐγὼ εἰμι Γαβριὴλ ὁ παρεστηκὼς ἐνώπιον τοῦ Θεοῦ· καὶ ἀπεστάλην λαλῆσαι πρὸς σε, καὶ εὐαγγελίσασθαί σοι ταῦτα. 20. καὶ ἰδοῦ, ἔσθι σιωπῶν καὶ μὴ δυνάμενος λαλῆσαι, ἄχρι

<sup>1</sup> γενεσει in most uncials.

<sup>2</sup> ἩACL 33 omit του (Tisch.). BDA have it (W.H. in marg.).

<sup>3</sup> προσελευσεται in BCL (W.H. marg.), probably an unintentional error.

<sup>4</sup> Ηλια in ἩBL.

interpreters; a very superficial criticism. True to human nature and to O. T. piety, and not unacceptable to God. That the prayer was for offspring appears from the angelic message, objective and subjective corresponding.—γεννήσει, shall bear; originally to beget.—Ἰωάννην: the name already mentioned to inspire faith in the reality of the promise: meaning, God is gracious.—Ver. 14. χαρὰ, ἀγαλλίασις, a joy, an exultation; joy in higher, highest degree: joy over a son late born, and such a son as he will turn out to be.—πολλοὶ: a joy not merely to parents as a child, but to many as a man.—Ver. 15. μέγας, a great man before the Lord; not merely in God's sight = true greatness, but indicating the sphere or type of greatness: in the region of ethics and religion.—καὶ οἶνον, etc., points to the external badge of the moral and religious greatness: abstinence as a mark of consecration and separation—a devotee.—σίκερα =  $\text{רָצִי}$  (not Greek), strong drink, extracted from any kind of fruit but grapes (here only in N. T.).—Πνεύματος Ἁγίου: in opposition to wine and strong drink, as in Eph. v. 18. But the conception of the Holy Spirit, formed from the Johannine type of piety, is very different from that of St. Paul, or suggested by the life of our Lord.—Ver. 16 describes the function of the Baptist.—ἐπιστρέψει: repentance, conversion, his great aim and watchword.—Ver. 17. προελεύσεται ἐν α.: not a reference to John's function as forerunner of Messiah, but simply a description of his prophetic character. He shall go before God (and men) = be, in his career, an Elijah in spirit and power, and function; described in terms recalling Malachi iv. 6.

Vv. 18-20. Zechariah doubts. The angel's dazzling promise of a son, and even of a son with such a career, might be but a reflection of Zechariah's own secret desire and hope; yet when his day-dream is objectified it seems too good and great to be true. This also is true to human nature, which alternates between high hope and deep despair, according as faith or sense has the upper hand.—Ver. 19. ἀποκριθεὶς: the very natural scepticism of Zechariah is treated as a fault.—Γαβριὴλ: the naming of angels is characteristic of the later stage of Judaism (vide Daniel viii. 16, x. 21).—Ver. 20. σιωπῶν καὶ μὴ δ. λ., silent and not able to speak; a temporary dumbness the sign asked, a slight penalty; not arbitrary, however, rather the almost natural effect of his state of mind—a kind of prolonged stupefaction resulting from a promise too great to be believed, yet pointing to a boon passionately desired.—ἀνθ' ὧν: a phrase of Lk. =  $\text{רָצִי לְפָנָיו}$ , because. (Also in 2 Thess. ii. 10.)

ἣς ἡμέρας γένηται ταῦτα· ἀνθ' ὧν οὐκ ἐπίστευσας τοῖς λόγοις μου, οἵτινες πληρωθήσονται εἰς τὸν καιρὸν αὐτῶν.” 21. Καὶ ἦν ὁ λαὸς προσδοκῶν τὸν Ζαχαρίαν· καὶ ἐθαύμαζον ἐν τῷ χρονίζειν αὐτὸν ἐν τῷ ναῷ.<sup>1</sup> 22. ἐξελθὼν δὲ οὐκ ἠδύνατο λαλῆσαι αὐτοῖς· καὶ ἐπέγνωσαν ὅτι ὄπτασίαν ἑώρακεν ἐν τῷ ναῷ· καὶ αὐτὸς ἦν διανεύων αὐτοῖς, καὶ διέμενε κωφός. 23. καὶ ἐγένετο ὡς ἐπλήσθησαν αἱ ἡμέραι τῆς λειτουργίας αὐτοῦ, ἀπῆλθεν εἰς τὸν οἶκον αὐτοῦ. f 2 Cor. ix 12. Phil ii. 17-30. Heb. viii 6; ix. 21.

24. Μετὰ δὲ ταύτας τὰς ἡμέρας συνέλαβεν Ἐλισάβετ ἡ γυνὴ αὐτοῦ, καὶ περιέκρυβεν ἑαυτὴν μῆνας πέντε, λέγουσα, 25. “Ὅτι οὕτω μοι πεποιήκεν ὁ<sup>2</sup> Κύριος ἐν ἡμέραις, αἷς ἐπέιδεν ἀφελεῖν τὸ<sup>2</sup> ὄνειδος μου ἐν ἀνθρώποις.”

26. Ἐν δὲ τῷ μηνὶ τῷ ἕκτῳ ἀπεστάλη ὁ ἄγγελος Γαβριὴλ ὑπὸ<sup>3</sup> τοῦ Θεοῦ εἰς πόλιν τῆς Γαλιλαίας, ἧ ὄνομα Ναζαρέτ, 27. πρὸς παρθένον μεμνηστευμένην<sup>4</sup> ἀνδρί, ᾧ ὄνομα Ἰωσήφ, ἐξ οἴκου Δαβὶδ· καὶ τὸ ὄνομα τῆς παρθένου Μαριάμ. 28. καὶ εἰσελθὼν ὁ ἄγγελος<sup>5</sup> πρὸς αὐτὴν εἶπε, “Χαῖρε, κεχαριτωμένη· ὁ Κύριος μετὰ σοῦ,

<sup>1</sup> αὐτον after εν τω ν. in BLΞ (W.H.). Order as in T.R. in ΞACDA nl. (Tisch.).

<sup>2</sup> ΞCDL 33 omit ο (Tisch., W.H., text, ο in marg.). BA have it. ΞBDL 1 omit το before ονειδος.

<sup>3</sup> απο in ΞBL 1, 69.

<sup>4</sup> ἐμνηστ. in ΞABL.

<sup>5</sup> BLΞ 1, 131, cop. omit ο αγγελος (W.H.).

Vv. 21-22. The people without.—προσδοκῶν, waiting; they had to wait. The priest was an unusually long time within, something uncommon must have happened. The thought likely to occur was that God had slain the priest as unworthy. The Levitical religion a religion of distance from God and of fear. So viewed in the Epistle to the Hebrews. Illustrative quotations from Talmud in Wünsche, Beiträge, p. 413.—Ver. 22. ὄπτασίαν: from his dazed look they inferred that the priest had seen a vision (chap. xxiv. 23, 2 Cor. xii. 1).—διανεύων: making signs all he could do; he could not bless them, e.g., if that was part of his duty for the day, or explain his absence (here only).

Vv. 23-25. Returns home. The week of service over, Zechariah went back to his own house.—λειτουργίας: in Biblical Greek used in reference to priestly service; elsewhere of public service rendered by a citizen at his own expense or of any sort of service.—Ver. 24. περιέκρυβεν: hid herself entirely (περὶ), here only; ἔκρυβον: a late form of 2nd aorist. Why, not said, nor whether her husband told her what had happened to him.—μῆνας πέντε: after which another remarkable event happened. Whether she appeared openly thereafter is not indicated. Possibly not (J. Weiss).—ἐπέιδεν: here and in Acts iv. 29 = took care, the object being ἀφελεῖν τὸ ὄν. μ. = to remove my reproach: keenly felt by a Jewish woman. ἐν is understood before αἷς (Bornemann, Scholia).

Vv. 26-38. The announcement to Mary.—Ver. 26. Ναζαρέτ: the original home of Joseph and Mary, not merely the adopted home as we might infer from Mt. ii. 23.—Ver. 27. ἐξ οἴκου Δ.: Mary, Joseph, or both? Impossible to be sure, though the repetition of παρθένου in next clause (instead of αὐτῆς) favours the reference to Joseph.—Ver. 28. χαῖρε, κεχαριτωμένη: ave plena gratiâ, Vulg., on which Farrar (C. G. T.) comments: “not gratiâ plena, but gratiâ cumulata”; much graced or favoured by God.—χαριτώω is Hellenistic, and is found, besides here, only in Eph. i. 6 in N. T.—ὁ Κύριος μετὰ σοῦ, the Lord (Jehovah) is or be with thee, ἐστί or ἔστω understood; the two renderings come practically to the same thing.—Ver. 29. διεπαράχθη: assuming that ἰδοῦσα (T.R.) is no part of the true text, Godet thinks that Mary saw nothing, εὐλογημένη σὺ ἐν γυναιξίν."<sup>1</sup> 29. Ἡ δὲ ἰδοῦσα διεταράχθη ἐπὶ τῷ λόγῳ αὐτοῦ,<sup>2</sup> καὶ διελογίζετο ποταπὸς εἶη ὁ ἀσπασμὸς οὗτος. 30. Καὶ εἶπεν ὁ ἄγγελος αὐτῇ, "Μὴ φοβοῦ, Μαριάμ· εὖρες γὰρ χάριν παρὰ τῷ Θεῷ. 31. καὶ ἰδοῦ, συλλήψῃ ἐν γαστρί, καὶ τέξῃ υἷόν, καὶ καλέσεις τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ Ἰησοῦν. 32. οὗτός ἐσται μέγας, καὶ υἱὸς ὑψίστου κληθήσεται· καὶ δώσει αὐτῷ Κύριος ὁ Θεὸς τὸν θρόνον Δαβὶδ τοῦ πατρὸς αὐτοῦ, 33. καὶ βασιλεύσει ἐπὶ τὸν οἶκον Ἰακώβ εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας, καὶ τῆς βασιλείας αὐτοῦ οὐκ ἔσται τέλος." 34. Εἶπε δὲ Μαριάμ πρὸς τὸν ἄγγελον, "Πῶς ἔσται τοῦτο, ἐπεὶ ἄνδρα οὐ γινώσκω;" 35. Καὶ ἀποκριθεὶς ὁ ἄγγελος εἶπεν αὐτῇ, "Πνεῦμα Ἅγιον ἐπελεύσεται ἐπὶ σέ, καὶ δύναμις ὑψίστου ἐπισκιάσει and that it was only the word of the angel that disturbed her. It is certainly the latter that is specified as the cause of trouble. The salutation troubled her because she felt that it meant something important, the precise nature of which (ποταπὸς) did not appear. And yet on the principle that in supernatural experiences the subjective and the objective correspond, she must have had a guess.—Ver. 31. Ἰησοῦν: no interpretation of the name here as in Mt. i. 21; a common Jewish name, not necessarily implying Messianic functions. There may have been ordinary family reasons for its use.—Ver. 32 foreshadows the future of the child.—μέγας, applied also to John, ver. 15.—κληθήσεται, shall be called = shall be.—τὸν θρόνον Δ. τ. πατρὸς α.: the Messiah is here conceived in the spirit of Jewish expectation: a son of David, and destined to restore his kingdom.—Ver. 34: Mary's perplexity, how a mother and yet a virgin! J. Weiss points out that this perplexity on the part of a betrothed woman is surprising. Why not assume, as a matter of course, that the announcement had reference to a child to be born as the fruit of marriage with the man to whom she was betrothed? "These words betray the standpoint of Lk., who knows what is coming (ver. 35)." J. Weiss in Meyer.—Ver. 35. Πνεῦμα Ἅγιον: without the article because a proper name = the well-known Holy Spirit, say some (Meyer, Farrar), but more probably because the purpose is not to indicate the person by whom, etc., but the kind of influence: spirit as opposed to flesh, holy in the sense of separation from all fleshly defilement (Hofmann, J. Weiss, Hahn).—δύναμις ὑψίστου: the power of the Most High, also without article, an equivalent for π. ἄ., and more definite indication of the cause, the power of God. Note the use of ὑψιστος as the name of God in ver. 32, here, and in ver. 76. Feine (Vorkanonische Überlieferung des Lukas, p. 17) includes ὁ ὑψιστος, ὁ δυνατός (i. 49), ὁ δεσπότης (ii. 29), ὁ κύριος (i. 6, 9, 11, etc.), all designations of God, among the instances of a Hebraistic vocabulary characteristic of chaps. i. and ii. The first epithet recurs in vi. 35 in the expression "sons of the Highest," applied to those who live heroically, where Mt. has "children of your Father in heaven".—ἐπελεύσεται, ἐπισκιάσει: two synonyms delicately selected to express the divine substitute for sexual intercourse. Observe the parallelism here: "sign of the exaltation of feeling. The language becomes a chant," Godet. Some find poetry throughout these two first chapters of Lk. "These songs . . . doubtless represent reflection upon these events by Christian poets, who put in the mouths of the angels, the mothers and the fathers, the poems which they composed" (Briggs, The Messiah of the Gospels, p. 42. Even the address of Gabriel to Zechariah in the temple, i. 13-17, is, he thinks, such a poem).—τὸ γεννώμενον ἅγιον, the holy thing—holy product of a holy agency—which is being, or about to be, generated = the embryo, therefore appropriately neuter.—υἱὸς Θεοῦ, Son of God; not merely because holy, but because brought into

<sup>1</sup> εὐλογημ. . . γυναιξίν comes from ver. 42; wanting in ΞBL.

<sup>2</sup> For ἰδοῦσα . . . αὐτοῦ ΞBDL have ἐπι τ. λ. διεταραχθη (Tisch., W.H.).

σοι· διὸ καὶ τὸ γεννώμενον ἅγιον κληθήσεται Υἱὸς Θεοῦ. 36. καὶ ἰδοῦ, Ἐλισάβητ ἡ συγγενὴς<sup>1</sup> σου, καὶ αὐτὴ συνεληφύτα<sup>2</sup> υἱὸν ἐν γήρᾳ<sup>3</sup> αὐτῆς· καὶ οὗτος μὴν ἕκτος ἐστὶν αὐτῇ τῇ καλουμένῃ στείρα· 37. ὅτι οὐκ ἀδυνατήσῃ παρὰ τῷ Θεῷ<sup>4</sup> πᾶν ῥήμα.” 38. Εἶπε δὲ Μαριάμ, “Ἰδοῦ, ἡ δούλη Κυρίου· γένοιτό μοι κατὰ τὸ ῥήμά σου.” Καὶ ἀπῆλθεν ἀπ’ αὐτῆς ὁ ἄγγελος.

39. Ἀναστᾶσα δὲ Μαριάμ ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις ταύταις ἐπορεύθη εἰς τὴν ὄρεινὴν μετὰ σπουδῆς, εἰς πόλιν Ἰούδα, 40. καὶ εἰσῆλθεν εἰς τὸν οἶκον Ζαχαρίου, καὶ ἠσπάσατο τὴν Ἐλισάβητ. 41. καὶ ἐγένετο ὡς ἤκουσεν ἡ Ἐλισάβητ τὸν ἀσπασμὸν τῆς Μαρίας,<sup>5</sup> ἐσκίρτησε τὸ βρέφος ἐν τῇ κοιλίᾳ αὐτῆς· καὶ ἐπλήσθη Πνεύματος Ἁγίου ἡ

<sup>1</sup> συγγενίς in  $\aleph$ BDLΔ al. (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> συνεληφεν in  $\aleph$ BLΞ (W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> γηρει in all uncials.

<sup>4</sup> τοῦ Θεοῦ in  $\aleph$ BDLΞ.

<sup>5</sup> τὸν ἀσπ. τῆς Μ. ἡ ΕΛ. in  $\aleph$ BCDLΞ and some cursives.

being by the power of the Highest.—Ver. 36. καὶ ἰδοῦ, introducing a reference to Elizabeth's case to help Mary's faith.—συγγενίς, late form for συγγενής (T.R.), a blood relation, but of what degree not indicated, suggesting that Mary perhaps belonged to the tribe of Levi.—γήρει: Ionic form of dative for γῆρα (T.R.). Hellenistic Greek was an eclectic language, drawing from all dialects as from the poets, turning their poetic expressions to the uses of prose.—καλουμένη: Elizabeth is described as one who is still being called barren, though six months gone in pregnancy, because people have had no means of knowing her state.—Ver. 37. ἀδυνατήσῃ: the verb means, in classic Greek, to be weak, of persons. In Sept. and N. T. (here and in Mt. xvii. 20) it means to be impossible, of things. Commentators differ as to whether we should render: no word of God shall be weak, inoperative, or no thing, with, on the part of, God, shall be impossible.—ῥήμα = רַב־דָּבָר may be rendered either word or thing. The reading παρὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ (BDL) seems to demand the former of the two translations. Field, Otium Nor., discusses this passage. Adopting the above reading, and adhering to the sense of ἀδυνατ. in reference to things, he translates: “for from God no word (or no thing) shall be impossible”.

Some recent critics find in this section two different views of the birth of Jesus, one implying natural paternity, the other supernatural causality, the former being the view in the original document, the other introduced by the evangelist, the former Jewish in its tendency of thought, the latter heathen-Christian. The subject is discussed by Hillmann in Jahrb. für prot. Theol., 1891, and Usener, Religionsgeschichtliche Untersuchungen, 1888. J. Weiss, in his ed. of Meyer, p. 303, note, seems inclined to favour this view, and to see in vv. 31-33 the one version, and in vv. 34, 35 the other, due to Lk. Against this view vide Feine, Vork. Überlief.

Vv. 39-45. Mary visits Elizabeth.—Ver. 39. ἐν τ. ἡ. ταύταις in these (not those = ἐκείναις, A. V.) days = at the time of the angelic visit.—μετὰ σπουδῆς: no time lost, a most natural visit from one woman with a high hope, to another, a friend, in a similar state of mind.—εἰς τὴν ὄρεινὴν (χώρην, again ver. 65): into the hill country, referring to the southern hill country of Judah, Benjamin and Ephraim. Galilee had a hill country too. The expression has been supposed to point to the origin of Lk.'s document in Judaea (Hillmann).—εἰς πόλιν Ἰούδα, to a city of Judah, not particularly named. Reland (Palæstina) conjectures that we should read Futta, the name of a priestly city mentioned twice in Joshua (xv. 55, xxi. 16).—Ver. 41. ἐσκίρτησε: commentators discuss the connection between the maternal excitement and the quickening of the child—which was cause and which effect. Let this and all other questions in reference to the movement denoted be passed over in respectful silence.—Ver. 42. ἀνεφώνησεν: here only in N. T. The verb, with the following words, κραυγῇ

Ἐλισάβετ, 42. καὶ ἀνεφώνησε φωνῇ<sup>1</sup> μεγάλη, καὶ εἶπεν, “Εὐλογη-
μένη σὺ ἐν γυναίξί, καὶ εὐλογημένος ὁ καρπὸς τῆς κοιλίας σου.
43. καὶ πόθεν μοι τοῦτο, ἵνα ἔλθῃ ἡ μήτηρ τοῦ Κυρίου μου πρὸς με<sup>2</sup>; 44. ἰδοὺ γάρ, ὡς ἐγένετο ἡ φωνὴ τοῦ ἀσπασμοῦ σου εἰς τὰ ὦτά μου, ἐσκίρτησεν ἐν ἀγαλλιάσει τὸ βρέφος ἐν τῇ κοιλίᾳ μου.
45. καὶ μακαρία ἡ πιστεύσασα, ὅτι ἔσται ἡ τελείωσις τοῖς λελαλημένοις αὐτῇ παρὰ Κυρίου.”

cf. Heb.
vii. 11.

use in
Mt. xxiii.
5.

46. Καὶ εἶπε Μαριάμ, “<sup>h</sup>Μεγαλύνει ἡ ψυχὴ μου τὸν Κύριον,
47. καὶ ἠγαλλίασε τὸ πνεῦμά μου ἐπὶ τῷ Θεῷ τῷ σωτήρῳ μου·
48. ὅτι ἐπέβλεψεν ἐπὶ τὴν ταπεινώσιν τῆς δούλης αὐτοῦ. ἰδοὺ γάρ, ἀπὸ τοῦ νῦν μακαριοῦσί με πᾶσαι αἱ γενεαί· 49. ὅτι ἐποίησέ μοι μεγαλεῖα<sup>3</sup> ὁ δυνατός, καὶ ἅγιον τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ· 50. καὶ τὸ ἄλως αὐτοῦ εἰς γενεὰς γενεῶν<sup>4</sup> τοῖς φοβουμένοις αὐτόν. 51. ἐποί-ωε κράτος ἐν βραχίονι αὐτοῦ· διεσκόρπισεν ὑπερηφάνους διανοία καρδίας αὐτῶν. 52. καθεῖλε δυνάστας ἀπὸ θρόνων, καὶ ὕψωσε ταπεινοὺς. 53. πεινώντας ἐνέπλησεν ἀγαθῶν, καὶ πλουτοῦντας

<sup>1</sup> κραυγῆ in BLΞ (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> εμε in ΞB.

<sup>3</sup> μεγαλα in ΞBDL (Tisch., W.H.). μεγαλεια (CΔΞ*al.*) occurs in Acts ii. 11.

<sup>4</sup> εἰς γενεὰς καὶ γενεὰς in BCLΞ (Tisch., W.H.).

μεγάλη, point to an unrestrained utterance under the influence of irrepressible feeling, thoroughly true to feminine nature: “blessed thou among women (a Hebrew superlative), and blessed the fruit of thy womb,” poetic parallelism again, answering to the exalted state of feeling. The reference to the Holy Spirit (in ver. 41) implies that Elizabeth spoke by prophetic inspiration.—Ver. 43. ἵνα ἔλθῃ: subjunctive instead of infin. with art., the beginning of a tendency, which ended in the substitution of va with the subjunctive for the infinitive in modern Greek.—Ver. 44. γάρ: implies that from the movement of her child Elizabeth inferred that the mother of the Lord stood before her.—Ver. 45. μακαρία, here, as elsewhere, points to rare and high felicity connected with heroic moods and achievements.—ὅτι, because or that, which? great conflict of opinion among commentators. The former sense would make ὅτι give the reason for calling Mary blessed = blessed because the things she hopes for will surely come to pass. The latter makes ὅτι indicate the object of faith = blessed she who believes that what God has said will come to pass, with possible allusion to her own husband’s failure in faith.

Vv. 46-56. Mary’s song.—μεγαλύνει:

magnificat, Vulg., whence the ecclesiastical name for this hymn, which has close affinities with the song of Hanna in 1 Sam. ii. 1-10; variously regarded by critics: by some, e.g., Godet and Hahn, as an extemporised utterance under inspiration by Mary, by others as a remnant of old Jewish-Christian Hymnology (J. Weiss, etc.), by others still as a purely Jewish Psalm, lacking distinctively Christian features (Hillmann). There are certainly difficulties connected with the first view, e.g., the conventional phraseology and the presence of elements which do not seem to fit the special situation.—ψυχῆ, πνεῦμα: synonyms in parallel clauses.—Ver. 48. This verse and the two preceding form the first of four strophes, into which the song naturally divides. The first strophe expresses simply the singer’s gladness. The second (vv. 49-50) states its cause. The third (vv. 51-53) describes in gnomic acorists the moral order of the world, for the establishment of which God ever works in His holy and wise Providence, overturning the conventional order, scattering the proud, upsetting thrones, and exalting them of low degree, filling the hungry, and sending the rich away empty. It is this third part of the hymn which on first view seems least in keeping with the occasion. And yet on a ἔξαπέστειλε κενούς. 54. ἀντελάβετο Ἰσραὴλ παίδος αὐτοῦ, μνησθῆναι ἐλέους, 55. καθὼς ἐλάλησε πρὸς τοὺς πατέρας ἡμῶν, τῷ Ἀβραὰμ καὶ τῷ σπέρματι αὐτοῦ εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα." 56. Ἔμεινε δὲ Μαριάμ σὺν αὐτῇ ὡσεὶ<sup>1</sup> μῆνας τρεῖς· καὶ ὑπέστρεψεν εἰς τὸν οἶκον αὐτῆς.

57. Τῇ δὲ Ἐλισάβητ ἐπλήσθη ὁ χρόνος τοῦ τεκεῖν αὐτήν, καὶ ἐγέννησεν υἱόν· 58. καὶ ἤκουσαν οἱ περίοικοι καὶ οἱ συγγενεῖς αὐτῆς, ὅτι ἐμεγάλυνε Κύριος τὸ ἔλεος αὐτοῦ μετ' αὐτῆς, καὶ συνέχαιρον αὐτῇ. 59. Καὶ ἐγένετο ἐν τῇ ὀγδόῃ ἡμέρᾳ,<sup>2</sup> ἦλθον περιτεμεῖν τὸ παιδίον· καὶ ἐκάλουν αὐτὸ ἐπὶ τῷ ὀνόματι τοῦ πατρὸς αὐτοῦ Ζαχαρίαν. 60. καὶ ἀποκριθεῖσα ἡ μήτηρ αὐτοῦ εἶπεν, "Οὐχί, ἀλλὰ κληθήσεται Ἰωάννης." 61. Καὶ εἶπον πρὸς αὐτήν, "Ὅτι οὐδεὶς ἔστιν ἐν τῇ συγγενείᾳ<sup>3</sup> σου, ὃς καλεῖται τῷ ὀνόματι τούτῳ." 62. Ἐγένεον δὲ τῷ πατρὶ αὐτοῦ, τὸ τί ἂν θέλοι καλεῖσθαι αὐτόν.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>1</sup> ὡς in  $\aleph$ BL $\Xi$  1.

<sup>2</sup> εκ της συγγενειας in  $\aleph$ ABCL $\Delta\Xi$  33.

<sup>3</sup> τη ημερα τη ογδοη in  $\aleph$ BCDL $\Xi$  33.

<sup>4</sup> αυτο in  $\aleph$ BD 33 (Tisch., W.H.).

large view this strophe exactly describes the constant tendency of Christ's influence in the world: to turn things upside down, reverse judgments, and alter positions. The last strophe (vv. 54, 55) sets forth the birth about to happen as a deed of divine grace to Israel.—Ver. 54. ἀντελάβετο: laid hold of with a view to help, as in Isaiah xli. 3, 9, Acts xx. 35, 1 Tim. vi. 2. Cf. ἐπιλαμβάνεται, Heb. ii. 16.—μνησθῆναι ἐλέους, καθὼς ἐλάλησεν: what is about to happen is presented as fulfilling a promise made to the Fathers long, long ago, but not forgotten by God, to whom 1000 years, so far as remembering and being interested in promises are concerned, are as one day.—τῷ Ἀβραὰμ καὶ ρ. σ. α. The construction is a little doubtful, and has been differently understood. It is perhaps simplest to take Αβ., etc., as the dative of advantage = :o remember mercy for the benefit of Abraham and his seed. The passage is an echo of Micah vii. 20.

Ver. 56. Mary returns to her home.—ἔμεινε: the time of Mary's sojourn with her kinswoman is given as "about three months". This would bring her departure near to the time of Elizabeth's confinement. Did she remain till the event was over? That is left doubtful.

Vv. 57-66. Birth of John.—Ver. 57. ἐπλήσθη, was fulfilled, the time for giving birth arrived in due course of nature.—Ver. 58. περίοικοι (περὶ, οἶκος), dwellers around, neighbours, here only in

N. T., several times in Sept. Named first because nearest; some of the relatives would be farther away and would arrive later. This gathering of neighbours and kinsfolk (συγγενεῖς) presents a "gracious tableau of Israelite life," Godet.—μετ' αὐτῆς: a Hebraism = πρὸς αὐτήν.—συνέχαιρον α., they congratulated her: congratulabantur ei, Vulg.; or, better, they rejoiced with her (ver. 14).—Ver. 59. ἦλθον, on the eighth, the legal day, they came, to circumcise the child; i.e., those who were concerned in the function—the person who performed the operation, and the relatives of the family.—ἐκάλουν may be the imperfect of repeated action = they took for granted by repeated expressions that the name was to be Zechariah, or the conative imperfect indicating a wish which was frustrated.—Ver. 60. Ἰωάννης, John; presumably the mother had learned this from the father, by writing on a tablet as on the present occasion. The older commentators (Meyer also) supposed a Divine revelation.—Ver. 61. συγγενεῖας, kinsmanship. In Lk. only in N. T. Cf. Acts vii. 3, 14.—Ver. 62. ἐγένεον (here only in N. T.): they made signs, which seems to imply that Zechariah is supposed to be deaf as well as dumb. Various suggestions have been made to evade this conclusion; e.g., that men are very apt to treat a dumb person as if he were also deaf (Bengel, De Wette, Godet); that they communicated by signs instead of by

63. καὶ αἰτήσας πινακίδιον ἔγραψε, λέγων, “Ἰωάννης ἐστὶ τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ.” καὶ ἐθαύμασαν πάντες. 64. Ἀνεώχθη δὲ τὸ στόμα αὐτοῦ παραχρῆμα καὶ ἡ γλῶσσα αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἐλάλει εὐλογῶν τὸν Θεόν. 65. Καὶ ἐγένετο ἐπὶ πάντας φόβος τοὺς περιουκούντας αὐτούς· καὶ ἐν ὅλῃ τῇ ὄρει τῆς Ἰουδαίας διελαλεῖτο πάντα τὰ ῥήματα ταῦτα. 66. καὶ ἔθετο πάντες οἱ ἀκούσαντες ἐν τῇ καρδίᾳ αὐτῶν, λέγοντες, “Τί ἄρα τὸ παιδίον τοῦτο ἔσται;” Καὶ<sup>1</sup> χεὶρ Κυρίου ἦν μετ’ αὐτοῦ. 67. Καὶ Ζαχαρίας ὁ πατὴρ αὐτοῦ ἐπλήσθη Πνεύματος Ἁγίου, καὶ προσέφητευσεν,<sup>2</sup> λέγων, 68. “Εὐλογητὸς Κύριος ὁ Θεὸς τοῦ Ἰσραὴλ, ἵ Ch. ii. 38. ὅτι ἐπεσκέψατο καὶ ἐποίησε<sup>1</sup> λύτρωσιν τῷ λαῷ αὐτοῦ· 69. καὶ Heb. ix. 12. ἦγειρε κέρας σωτηρίας ἡμῖν, ἐν τῷ<sup>3</sup> οἴκῳ Δαβὶδ τοῦ<sup>3</sup> παιδὸς αὐτοῦ· 70. (καθὼς ἐλάλησε διὰ στόματος τῶν ἁγίων τῶν<sup>2</sup> ἀπ’ αἰῶνος προφη-

<sup>1</sup> καὶ γὰρ in  $\aleph$ BCDL (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> ἐπροφ. in  $\aleph$ ABCL 1, 33.

<sup>3</sup> Omit τῷ  $\aleph$ BCDL 33: also του before παιδος  $\aleph$ BDL; also των after αγίων  $\aleph$ NBLΔ 33.

speech to spare the feelings of Elizabeth, whose judgment was being appealed from (Meyer); that a sign was all that was needed, Zechariah having heard all that was said (Bleek, J. Weiss, Hahn).—τὸ before the clause following—τί ἄν θέλοι, viewed as a substantive, is very appropriate in a case where the question was not spoken but signalled.—ἄν θέλοι: the optative with ἄν, implies diverse possibilities; found in Lk.'s writings only in N. T.—Ver. 63. πινακίδιον (dim. from πίναξ), here only in N. T.: a little tablet probably covered with wax, used like a slate; pugillarem in Vulg.—λέγων is used here, Hebrew fashion = to the effect.—ἔγραψε λέγων: hypallage pro γράφων ἔλεγε (Pricaeus) = he said by writing.—ἐθαύμασαν: they wondered, at this consent of the parents in giving a strange name, and felt there must be something under it—an omen.—Ver. 64. στόμα, γλῶσσα: both connected with ἀνεώχθη, though the idea of opening is applicable only to the former—a case of zeugma. The return of speech a second marvel or rather a third: (1) a child of old parents; (2) the singular name; (3) the recovery of speech, much marked, and commented on among the denizens of the hill country of Judah (διελαλεῖτο).—φόβος, not terror, but religious awe in presence of the supernatural—characteristic of all simple people.—Ver. 66. τί ἄρα, etc.: what, in view of all these unusual circumstances, will this child come to? A most natural question. They felt sure all things portended an uncommon future for this child: “omina principiis inesse solent”.—καὶ γὰρ, etc.: a reflection of the evangelist justifying the wistful questioning of the hill folk = they might well ask, for indeed the hand of the Lord was with him.

Vv. 67-79. The song of Zechariah, called from the first word of it in the Vulgate the Benedictus. It is usually divided into five strophes, but it is more obviously divisible into two main parts, vv. 67-75, vv. 76-79. (Briggs, The Messiah of the Gospels, calls these divisions strophes, thus recognising only two.) Hillmann (Fahrh. f. prot. Theol., 1891) regards the first part as a purely Jewish Psalm, having no reference to the birth of the Baptist; furnished with a preface, ver. 67, and an epilogue referring to the Baptist as the forerunner of Jesus by the evangelist. J. Weiss (in Meyer) seems to accept this conclusion, only suggesting that the second part (vv. 76-79) might be in the source used by Lk., appended to the Psalm by the Jewish-Christian redactor.

Ver. 67. ἐπροφήτευσεν, prophesied, when? At the circumcision, one naturally assumes. Hahn, however, connects the prophesying with the immediately preceding words concerning the hand of the Lord being with the boy. That is, Zechariah prophesied when it began to appear that his son was to have a remarkable career.—Ver. 68. ἐπεσκέψατο, visited graciously (vide on Mt. xxv. 36), occasionally used in Sept. in the sense of judicial visitation (Ps. lxxxix. 33). Note the use of the aorist here, which runs through vv. 68-75, in vv. 76-79

τῶν αὐτοῦ·) 71. σωτηρίαν ἐξ ἐχθρῶν ἡμῶν, καὶ ἐκ χειρὸς πάντων τῶν μισούντων ἡμᾶς· 72. ποιῆσαι ἔλεος μετὰ τῶν πατέρων ἡμῶν, καὶ μνησθῆναι διαθήκης ἀγίας αὐτοῦ, 73. ὄρκον ὃν ὤμοσε πρὸς Ἀβραὰμ τὸν πατέρα ἡμῶν, 74. τοῦ δοῦναι ἡμῖν, ἀφόβως, ἐκ χειρὸς τῶν ἐχθρῶν ἡμῶν<sup>1</sup> ῥυσθέντας, λατρεύειν αὐτῷ 75. ἐν ὁσιότητι καὶ δικαιοσύνῃ ἐνώπιον αὐτοῦ πάσας τὰς ἡμέρας τῆς ζωῆς<sup>2</sup> ἡμῶν. 76. Καὶ σύ,<sup>3</sup> παιδίον, προφήτης ὑψίστου κληθήσῃ· <sup>1</sup>προπορεύσῃ <sup>2</sup>here and in Acts vii. 40. γὰρ πρὸ προσώπου<sup>4</sup> Κυρίου, ἐτοιμάσαι ὁδοὺς αὐτοῦ· 77. τοῦ δοῦναι γνῶσιν σωτηρίας τῷ λαῷ αὐτοῦ ἐν ἀφέσει ἁμαρτιῶν αὐτῶν, 78. διὰ σπλάγχνα ἐλέους Θεοῦ ἡμῶν, ἐν οἷς ἐπεσκέψατο<sup>5</sup> ἡμᾶς ἀνατολῇ ἐξ ὕψους, 79. ἐπιφᾶναι τοῖς ἐν σκότει καὶ σκιᾷ θανάτου καθημένοις·

<sup>1</sup> ἐκ χειροσ ἐχθρων in ΞBDL 33.

<sup>2</sup> πασαισ ταισ ημεραισ in BL and της ζωης omitted in ΞBCDL al.

<sup>3</sup> και συ δε in ΞBCDL 33 (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> For προ προσωπου ΞB Orig. have ενωπιον (W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> ΞBL have επισκεψεται (W.H.).

futures occur. The object of ἐπεσκέψατο is latent in τῷ λαῷ (τὸν λαόν, cf. vii. 16; λαός applied to Israel as the chosen people, ἔθνος to the other nations).—Ver. 69. κέρασ σ. = βασιλείαν, because kings were anointed with a horn of oil, or = δύναμιν, because in their horn all horned animals have their power (Euthy. Zig.); a thoroughly Hebrew symbol.—ἐν οἴκῳ Δ., pointing to a descendant of David, who has wrought signal deliverance for Israel.—Ver. 70. ἀγίων: a predicate applied in reverence to the prophets, as to the apostles in Eph. iii. 5.—Ver. 71. σωτηρίαν, in apposition with κέρασ σ., resuming and developing the thought interrupted by ver. 70, which is parenthetical.—ἐχθρῶν, τῶν μισούντων: not to be anxiously distinguished; poetic synonyms.—Ver. 72. ποιῆσαι: in effect epeexegetical of salvation, though formally indicating the aim of the salvation.—μετὰ τ. π., as in ver. 58, to make mercy with, for to show mercy to.—ἀγίας, holy, applied to another of Israel's sacred inheritances: the covenant.—Ver. 73. ὄρκον for ὄρκου, depending on μνησθῆναι, a case of inverse attraction, the noun by the relative (ὃν, object of ὤμοσεν) instead of the relative by the noun. Cf. Lk. xx. 17. Examples from Greek authors in Bornemann, Scholia.—Ver. 75. ὁσιότητι: the Godward, religious aspect of conduct (Eph. iv. 24).—δικαιοσύνη: the manward, ethical aspect.

Vv. 76-79. From the general thanksgiving for Divine mercy the song turns to the special cause of gladness afforded by the birth of John.—σύ, παιδίον: this address supposes the Baptist to be still a child, and all that is said of him is a prophetic forecast of the future, in literary form.—ὑψίστου: once more, for God. In the circle which produced this hymn, and these early records, the idea of Divine transcendency characteristic of later Judaism seems to have prevailed.—Ver. 77. τοῦ δοῦναι, the infinitive of purpose, to be connected with προπορεύσῃ in ver. 76 = John will go before the Lord (Jehovah), with the view of giving the knowledge of salvation in the forgiveness of sins. This is a very general description of John's ministry, hardly differentiating it from that of Christ. The knowledge of salvation in forgiveness is salvation = Christ's gift.—Ver. 78. διὰ σπλάγχνα, etc., on account of, etc., indicating the fountain-head of salvation—the mercy of God, described in Hebrew phrase as the bowels of mercy of our God.—ἐπισκεψεται: the future (aorist in T.R.), though in few MSS. (ΞBL), is doubtless the true reading. In the second great strophe the verbs are all future, and describe what is to be.—ἀνατολή: happily rendered "dayspring" in A. V. The reference is undoubtedly to a light, star, or sun, not to a branch from Jesse's stem, as it might be so far as usage in Sept. is concerned (vide Jer. xxiii. 5, Zechar. iii. 8, vi. 12), for its function is ἐπιφᾶναι, to appear as a light to those in darkness (σκότει).—σκιᾷ θανάτου: vide on Mt. iv. 16.

τοῦ κατευθῆναι τοὺς πόδας ἡμῶν εἰς ὁδὸν εἰρήνης." 80. Τὸ δὲ παιδίον ἠῤῥανε καὶ ἐκραταιοῦτο πνεύματι· καὶ ἦν ἐν ταῖς ἐρήμοις, ἕως ἡμέρας <sup>k</sup> ἀναδείξεως αὐτοῦ πρὸς τὸν Ἰσραήλ.

k here only
in N. T.
Sir. xliii.
6.

II. I. ἜΓΕΝΕΤΟ δὲ ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις ἐκείναις, ἐξῆλλθε δόγμα παρὰ Καίσαρος Αὐγούστου, ἀπογράφεσθαι πᾶσαν τὴν οἰκουμένην· 2. αὕτη

The Benedictus is steeped in O. T. language; "an anthology from Psalms and Prophets," Holtz., H. C.

Ver. 80. Conclusion: being a summary statement on John's history from childhood to manhood.—πνεύματι: the growing strength of John's spirit, the development of a remarkable moral individuality, the main point in the view of the evangelist.—ἐν ταῖς ἐρήμοις, in the desert places: not far to go from his home to find them; visits to them frequent in early boyhood; constant abode when youth had passed into manhood; love of solitude grown into a passion. Meet foster-mother for one who is to be the censor of his time. Essenes not far off, but no indication of contact, either outwardly or inwardly, with them.

CHAPTER II. THE BIRTH AND BOYHOOD OF JESUS.—V. 1-5. Joseph and Mary go up to Bethlehem. In these verses Luke makes a historical statement, which one might have been inclined to regard as an illustration of the ἀκρίβεια (i. 1), at which he aimed, as well as of his desire, in the spirit of Pauline universalism, to connect the birth of Jesus with the general history of the world. In the former respect the experience of the exegete is very disappointing. The passage has given rise to a host of questions which have been discussed, with bewildering conflict of opinion, in an extensive critical and apologetic literature. The difficulty is not so much as to the meaning of the evangelist's words, but rather as to their truth. As, however, the apologetic and the exegetical interests have been very much mixed up in the discussions, it may be well at the outset to indicate briefly the chief objections that have been taken to the passage on the score of historicity. On the face of it, Lk.'s statement is that the Roman Emperor at the time of Christ's birth ordered a universal census, that this order was carried out by Quirinius, governor of Syria, and that the execution of it was the occasion of Joseph and Mary going to Bethlehem. To this it has been objected:—

I. Apart from the Gospel, history knows nothing of a general imperial census in the time of Augustus.

2. There could have been no Roman census in Palestine during the time of Herod the Great, a rex socius.

3. Such a census at such a time could not have been carried out by Quirinius, for he was not governor in Syria then, nor till ten years later, when he did make a census which gave rise to a revolt under Judas of Galilee.

4. Under a Roman census it would not have been necessary for Joseph to go to Bethlehem, or for Mary to accompany him.—With these objections in our view we proceed with the exposition, noting their influence, as we go along, on the details of interpretation.

Ver. 1. ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις ἐκείναις: the days of Herod (i. 5), and of the events related in the previous chapter: the birth of John, etc.—δόγμα (δοκέω) = δεδογμένον, an opinion as of philosophers; here a decree, as in Acts xvii. 7.—ἀπογράφεσθαι (here and in Heb. xii. 23): the decree concerned enrolment or registration of the population (the verb might be either middle or passive—enrol itself, or be enrolled; the latter the more probable). For what purpose—taxation, or general statistical objects—not indicated, and not to be taken for granted as in the rendering "taxed" in A. V., but the former most probably intended. The hypothesis that the registration had reference to statistics meets objections 1 and 2, because Augustus did make or complete a descriptio orbis of that sort, and such a census would give no offence to the Jews or their king. Vide Hahn, ad loc. The Greek word for taxing is ἀποτίμησις.—πᾶσαν τὴν οἰκουμένην: the whole habitable world, orbis terrarum = the Roman empire, not merely the provinces (Italy excluded), or Palestine, as has been suggested in an apologetic interest to get rid of the difficulties connected with a universal census. The usual meaning of the phrase, and the reference to Augustus as the source of the order, favour the larger sense. Augustus reigned from 30 B.C. to 14 A.D.

Ver. 2. This verse looks like a parenἡ<sup>1</sup> ἀπογραφὴ πρώτη ἐγένετο<sup>2</sup> ἡγεμονεύοντος τῆς Συρίας Κυρηνίου. 3. καὶ ἐπορεύοντο πάντες ἀπογράφεσθαι, ἕκαστος εἰς τὴν ἰδίαν<sup>3</sup> πόλιν. 4. Ἀνέβη δὲ καὶ Ἰωσήφ ἀπὸ τῆς Γαλιλαίας, ἐκ πόλεως Ναζαρέτ, εἰς τὴν Ἰουδαίαν, εἰς πόλιν Δαβίδ, ἣτις καλεῖται Βηθλεέμ, διὰ τὸ εἶναι αὐτὸν ἐξ οἴκου καὶ πατριᾶς Δαβίδ, 5. ἀπογράψασθαι σὺν Μαρίας τῇ μεμνηστευμένη<sup>4</sup> αὐτῷ γυναικί,<sup>5</sup> οὓση ἐγκύω.

<sup>1</sup> η omitted in  $\aleph$ BD 131; found in CLΔ (om. Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> εγεν. before πρώτη in  $\aleph$ D Orig. lat. (Tisch.). An exegetical device to meet a difficulty, thinks J. Weiss. As in T.R. ABCLΔ (W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> εαυτου in  $\aleph$ BCDLE (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> ἐμνηστ. in  $\aleph$ BCDLE.

<sup>5</sup> Omit γυναικι  $\aleph$ BCDLE 1, 131 (Tisch., W.H.).

thetical explanation, and is actually bracketed in W.H. One could almost wish it had been omitted, or that there were reason to believe, as has been suggested by several writers, that it is a gloss that has found its way into the text, and that Lk. is not responsible for it—so much trouble has it given to commentators. Text and sense have alike been disputed.—αυτη has been taken as αὐτή = self, not αὐτή = illa, the same, to make room for a distinction between the decree and its execution or completion ten years after by Quirinius, so meeting difficulty No. 3. This device is now generally discarded. πρώτη has been taken as = προτέρα, meaning: this census took place before Quirinius was governor, a possible but very improbable rendering, not to say that one fails to see the object of such a statement. The true text is αὐτη ἀπογ. πρώτη ἐγέν., and the meaning: that census took place, as a first, when, etc. But why as a first? Because, reply many, there was a second, under the same Quirinius, ten years later, known to Lk. (Acts v. 37), disastrous in its consequence, and which he was anxious his readers should not confound with this one (so Hahn and others).—ἡγεμονεύοντος: this raises a question of fact. Was Quirinius governor then? He was, admittedly, governor of Syria ten years later, when he made the census referred to in Acts v. 37. Either there is a mistake here, or Quirinius was governor twice (so A. W. Zumpt, strenuously supported by Farrar, C. G. T., ad loc.), or at least present in Syria, at the time of Christ's birth, in some capacity, say as a commissioner in connection with the census.

Ver. 3. πάντες: not all throughout the world, but all in Palestine—the execution of the decree there being what the evangelist is interested in.—εἰς τὴν ἰδίαν πόλιν (or εαυτοῦ π., W.H.). Does this mean to the city of his people, or to the city of his abode? If the former, what a stir in Palestine, or in the world if πάντες be taken widely! A regular "Völkerwanderung" (Holtzmann in H. C.). Sensible of this, some (Hahn, e.g.) take the reference to be to the place of residence (Wohnort not Stammort), implying that Bethlehem was for Lk. as for Mt. Joseph's home, and that they merely happened to have been living in Nazareth just before. But ver. 7 implies that Joseph and Mary had no house in Bethlehem. Feine quotes, with a certain amount of approval, the view of Schneller (Kennt du das Land) that Joseph was not a carpenter but a mason, and that Bethlehem was therefore his natural home, being the headquarters of that craft then as now. On this view, Joseph had simply been in Nazareth building a house, not at home, but away from home for a time as an artisan.

Vv. 4, 5. Joseph and Mary and Nazareth are here referred to, as if they had not been mentioned before (i. 26, 27), implying that Lk. is here using an independent document (Holtz., H. C.).—ἀπὸ τ. Γαλ., ἐκ πόλ.: used with classical accuracy: ἀπὸ = direction from, ἐκ from within (C. G. T.).—ἐξ οἴκου καὶ πατριᾶς, "of the house and family," R. V.—οἴκοι, πατριαί, φυλαί represent a series of widening circles.—ἀπογράψασθαι, to be enrolled. If Bethlehem was Joseph's home, he would have gone to Bethlehem sooner or later in any case. Because of the census he went just then (Hahn).—σὺν Μαρίας, coming after ἀπογράψ., naturally suggests that she had to be enrolled too. Was this necessary? Even if not, reasons might be suggested for

6. Ἐγένετο δὲ ἐν τῷ εἶναι αὐτοὺς ἐκεῖ, ἐπλήσθησαν αἱ ἡμέραι τοῦ τεκεῖν αὐτήν. 7. καὶ ἔτεκε τὸν υἱὸν αὐτῆς τὸν πρωτότοκον, καὶ ἔσπαργάνωσεν αὐτόν, καὶ ἀνέκλινεν αὐτὸν ἐν τῇ<sup>1</sup> φάτῃ· διότι οὐκ ἦν αὐτοῖς τόπος ἐν τῷ καταλύματι.

8. Καὶ ποιμένες ἦσαν ἐν τῇ χώρᾳ τῇ αὐτῇ ἀγραιοῦντες καὶ φυλάσσοντες φυλακὰς τῆς νυκτὸς ἐπὶ τὴν ποιμνὴν αὐτῶν. 9. καὶ ἰδοὺ,<sup>2</sup> ἄγγελος Κυρίου ἐπέστη αὐτοῖς, καὶ δόξα Κυρίου περιέλαμψεν αὐτούς· καὶ ἐφοβήθησαν φόβον μέγαν. 10. καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς ὁ ἄγγελος, “Μὴ φοβείσθε· ἰδοὺ γάρ, εὐαγγελίζομαι ὑμῖν χαρὰν μεγάλην, ἣτις ἔσται παντὶ τῷ λαῷ· 11. ὅτι ἐτέχθη ὑμῖν σήμερον σωτήρ, ὃς ἔστι Χριστὸς Κύριος, ἐν πόλει Δαβὶδ. 12. καὶ τοῦτο ὑμῖν τὸ<sup>3</sup> σημεῖον· εὐρήσετε βρέφος ἔσπαργανωμένον, κείμενον ἐν τῇ<sup>4</sup> φάτῃ.” 13. Καὶ ἐξαίφνης ἐγένετο σὺν τῷ ἀγγέλῳ πλήθος

<sup>1</sup> Omit τῇ ἘABDLΞ.

<sup>2</sup> ἘBLΞ omit ἰδου.

<sup>3</sup> το is omitted in BΞ 130 (W.H. relegate to margin).

<sup>4</sup> For κείμενον ἐν τῇ φάτῃ ἘD 68 read simply ἐν φάτῃ (Tisch.). BLΞ I, 33 al. have καὶ κείμενον (W.H.). Most MSS. omit τῇ before φάτ.

her going with her husband: her condition, the intention to settle there as their real home, she an heiress, etc.—ἰγκύω (here only in N. T.), preparing for what follows.

With reference to the foregoing statement, it is generally agreed that a census of some kind must have taken place. Meyer and Weiss, following Schleiermacher and Olshausen, think that the event was something internal to Judaea, and concerned the revision of family genealogical registers, and that Lk. was misled into transforming this petty transaction into an affair of world-historical significance. This is not satisfactory. It would be much more satisfactory if it could be shown that Lk.'s historic framing of the birth of Jesus is strictly accurate. But most satisfactory of all is it to know that such a demonstration, however desirable, is not vital to faith.

Vv. 6, 7. The birth.—ἐπλήσθησαν αἱ ἡ., as in i. 57. In this case, as in that of John, the natural course was run.—ἔσπαργάνωσεν (here and ver. 12), ἀνέκλινεν: the narrative runs as if Mary did these things herself, whence the patristic inference of painless birth.—φάτῃ, in a manger (in a stall, Grotius, et al.).—καταλύματι, in the inn, not probably a πανδοχεῖον (x. 34), with a host, but simply a khan, an enclosure with open recesses. The meaning may be, not that there was absolutely no room for Joseph and Mary there, but that the place was too crowded for a birth, and that therefore they retired to a stall or cave, where there was room for the mother, and a crib for the babe (vide ch. xxii. 11).

Vv. 8-13. The shepherds and the angels.—Ver. 8. ποιμένες, shepherds, without article; no connection between them and the birthplace.—ἀγραιοῦντες (ἀγρός, αὐλή, here only), bivouacking, passing the night in the open air; implying naturally a mild time of the year between March and November. In winter the flocks were in fold.—Ver. 9. ἐπέστη, used elsewhere by Lk. in reference to angelic appearances, eighteen times in his writings in all = stood beside; one more than their number, suddenly.—περιέλαμψεν: here and in Acts xxvi. 13, only, in N. T. = shone around.—ἐφοβήθησαν, they feared greatly; yet they were not utterly unprepared, their thoughts had been of a Divine gracious visitation—waiting for the consolation of Israel; subjective and objective corresponding.—Ver. 10. εὐαγγελίζομαι, etc., I bring good news in the form of a great joy (cf. i. 19).—παντὶ τῷ λαῷ, not merely to you, but to the whole people (of Israel, vide i. 68).—Ver. 11.—σωτήρ: a word occurring (with σωτηρία) often in Lk. and in St. Paul, not often elsewhere in N. T.—Κύριος: also often in Lk.'s Gospel, where the other evangelists use Jesus. The angel uses the dialect of the apostolic age.—Ver. 12. σημεῖον, the

στρατιᾶς οὐρανόυ,<sup>1</sup> αἰνούντων τὸν Θεόν, καὶ λεγόντων, 14. “Δόξα ἐν ὑψίστοις Θεῷ, καὶ ἐπὶ γῆς εἰρήνη· ἐν ἀνθρώποις εὐδοκία.”<sup>2</sup> 15. Καὶ ἐγένετο, ὡς ἀπήλθον ἀπ’ αὐτῶν εἰς τὸν οὐρανὸν οἱ ἄγγελοι, καὶ οἱ ἄνθρωποι οἱ ποιμένες<sup>3</sup> εἶπον<sup>4</sup> πρὸς ἀλλήλους, “Διέλθωμεν δὴ ἕως Βηθλεέμ, καὶ ἴδωμεν τὸ ῥῆμα τοῦτο τὸ γεγονός, ὃ ὁ Κύριος ἐγνώρισεν ἡμῖν.” 16. Καὶ ἦλθον σπεύσαντες, καὶ ἀνεύρουσιν τὴν τε Μαριάμ καὶ τὸν Ἰωσήφ, καὶ τὸ βρέφος κείμενον ἐν τῇ φάτνῃ. 17. ἰδόντες δὲ διεγνώρισαν<sup>5</sup> περὶ τοῦ ῥήματος τοῦ λαληθέντος αὐτοῖς περὶ τοῦ παιδίου τούτου. 18. καὶ πάντες οἱ ἀκούσαντες

<sup>1</sup> οὐρανοῦ in BD (Trg., W.H., margin).

<sup>2</sup> The documents are divided between εὐδοκία and εὐδοκίας. Most recent editors favour the latter, following  $\aleph$ ABD, vet. Lat. Vulg., Iren. lat., Orig. lat. W.H. place εὐδοκίας in text and εὐδοκία in margin.

<sup>3</sup>  $\aleph$ BL $\Xi$  1 omit οἱ ἄνθρωποι found in ADA al. pler. Tisch., W.H., om. J. Weiss suggests that οἱ ποιμένες is an ancient gloss which in one branch of the tradition crept into the text, in another displaced οἱ ἀνθ.

<sup>4</sup> ἐλαλοῦν in  $\aleph$ B.

<sup>5</sup> ἐγνώρισαν in  $\aleph$ BDL $\Xi$ .

sign just that which might, but for fore-warning, have been a stumbling block: the Saviour and Lord lying in a crib, in a cattle stall, or cave! So Hahn, but Godet and Schanz take “sign” merely in the sense of means of identification.

Ver. 14. The angels' song.—If we regard the announcement of the angel to the shepherds (vv. 10-12) as a song, then we may view the gloria in excelsis as a refrain sung by a celestial choir (πλήθος στρατιᾶς οὐρανόυ, ver. 13). With the reading εὐδοκίας, the refrain is in two lines:—

1. “Glory to God in the highest.”
2. “And on earth peace among men, in whom He is well pleased.”
εἰρήνη in 2 answering to δόξα in 1; ἐπὶ γῆς to ἐν ὑψίστοις; ἀνθρώποις to Θεῷ. With the reading εὐδοκία (T.R.), it falls into three:—

1. Glory to God in the highest.
2. And on earth peace (between man and man).

3. Good will (of God) among men.
ἐν ὑψίστοις, in the highest places, proper abode of Him who is repeatedly in these early chapters called “the Highest”. The thought in 1 echoes a sentiment in the Psalter of Solomon (18, 11), μέγας ὁ Θεὸς ἡμῶν καὶ ἐνδοξος ἐν ὑψίστοις.—εὐδοκίας is a gen. of quality, limiting ἀνθρώποις=those men who are the objects of the Divine εὐδοκία. They may or may not be all men, but the intention is not to assert that God’s good pleasure rests on all. J. Weiss in Meyer says = τοῖς ἐκλεκτοῖς.

Vv. 15-20. The shepherds go to Bethlehem.—διέλθωμεν δὴ, come! let us go. The force of δὴ, a highly emotional particle (the second time we have met with it, vide at Mt. xiii. 23), can hardly be expressed in English. The rendering in A. V. (and R. V.), “Let us now go,” based on the assumption that δὴ has affinity with ἦδη, is very tame, giving no idea of the mental excitement of the shepherds, and the demonstrative energy with which they communicated to each other, comrade-fashion, the idea which had seized their minds. “The δὴ gives a pressing character to the invitation,” Godet. Similarly Hahn = “agedum, wohlan, doch”. Cf. δὴ in Acts xiii. 2. The διὰ in διέλθωμεν suggests the idea of passing through the fields.—ἕως (conjunction used as a preposition) may imply that it was a considerable distance to Bethlehem (Schanz).—ῥῆμα, here = “thing” rather than “word”.—Ver. 16. σπεύσαντες, hastening; movement answering to mood revealed by δὴ.—τὴν τε Μαριάμ, etc., mother, father, child, recognised in this order, all united together in one group by τε. The position of the babe, in the manger, noted as corresponding to the angelic announcement; hence in ver. 17 the statement that the shepherds recognised the correspondence.—Vv. 18, 19. The shepherds of course told what they had seen in Bethlehem, and how they had been led to go there, and these verses state the effect produced by their story.

ἐθαύμασαν περὶ τῶν λαληθέντων ὑπὸ τῶν ποιμένων πρὸς αὐτούς. 19. ἡ δὲ Μαριάμ πάντα συνετήρει τὰ ῥήματα ταῦτα, συμβάλλουσα ἐν τῇ καρδίᾳ αὐτῆς. 20. καὶ ἐπέστρεψαν<sup>1</sup> οἱ ποιμένες, δοξάζοντες καὶ αἰνοῦντες τὸν Θεὸν ἐπὶ πᾶσιν οἷς ἤκουσαν καὶ εἶδον, καθὼς ἐλαλήθη πρὸς αὐτούς.

21. ΚΑΙ ὅτε ἐπλήσθησαν ἡμέραι ὀκτὼ τοῦ περιτεμεῖν τὸ παιδίον,<sup>2</sup> καὶ ἐκλήθη τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ Ἰησοῦς, τὸ κληθὲν ὑπὸ τοῦ ἀγγέλου πρὸ τοῦ συλληφθῆναι αὐτὸν ἐν τῇ κοιλίᾳ.

22. ΚΑΙ ὅτε ἐπλήσθησαν αἱ ἡμέραι τοῦ καθαρισμοῦ αὐτῶν, κατὰ τὸν νόμον Μωσέως, ἀνήγαγον αὐτὸν εἰς Ἱερουσόλυμα, παραστήσαι τῷ Κυρίῳ, 23. καθὼς γέγραπται ἐν νόμῳ Κυρίου, ‘Ὅτι πᾶν ἄρσεν διανοίγον μήτραν ἅγιον τῷ Κυρίῳ κληθήσεται.’ 24. καὶ τοῦ δοῦναι

<sup>a</sup> here only
in N. T.
<sup>b</sup> here only
in N. T.

θυσίαν, κατὰ τὸ εἰρημένον ἐν νόμῳ<sup>3</sup> Κυρίου, ‘Ζεύγος<sup>4</sup> ἀ τρυγόνων ἢ δύο<sup>5</sup> βοσσοῦς<sup>6</sup> περιστερῶν.’

<sup>1</sup> ὑπεστρεψαν in all uncials.

<sup>2</sup> αὐτον in ΞΑΒΛΔΞ al. (Tisch., W.H.). D has το παιδιον.

<sup>3</sup> τω before νομω in ΞBDL.

<sup>4</sup> βοσσοῦς in ΞB; νεοσσοῦς in ADLΔ.

All wondered, but Mary thought on all the wonderful things that had happened to herself and to the shepherds; keeping them well in mind (συνετήρει), and putting them together (συμβάλλουσα, conferens, Vulg.), so as to see what they all meant. The wonder of the many was a transient emotion (aorist); this recollecting and brooding of Mary was an abiding habit (συνετήρει, imperfect).

Vv. 21-24. Circumcision and presentation in the temple.—Ver. 21. ἐπλήσθησαν, as in i. 57, ii. 6, and again in ii. 22; in the first two places the reference is to the course of nature, in the second two to the course prescribed by the law.—τοῦ περιτεμεῖν, the genitive not so much of purpose (Meyer, J. Weiss), but of more exact definition (Schanz; vide Burton, M. and T., § 400, on the use of τοῦ with infinitive to limit nouns).—καὶ ἐκλήθη: the καὶ may be taken as “also” = He was circumcised (understood), and at the same time His name was called Jesus, or as introducing the apodosis: and = then (so Godet and Hahn). It might have been dispensed with (superflui, Grotius).—Ver. 22. κατὰ τὸν νόμον M. The law relating to women after confinement is contained in Leviticus xii.—ἀνήγαγον: at the close of these forty days of purification His parents took Jesus up to Jerusalem from Bethlehem. The Greek form of the name for Jerusalem, Ἱερουσόλυμα, occurs here and in a few other places in Lk. Ἱερουσαλήμ is the more common form.—παραστήσαι, a word used by Lk. and St. Paul (Rom. xii. 1), in the sense of dedication. This act was performed in accordance with the legal conception that the first-born belonged to God, His priestly servants before the institution of the Levitical order (Num. viii. 18, 19). J. Weiss suggests that the narrative is modelled on the story of the dedication of Samuel (1 Sam. i. 21-28).—Ver. 23. γέγραπται: the reference is to Ex. xiii. 2, and the statement implies that every first-born male child, as belonging to God, must be ransomed (Ex. xxxiv. 19, Num. xviii. 15, 16).—Ver. 24. τοῦ δοῦναι: parallel to παραστήσαι, indicating another of the purposes connected with the visit to Jerusalem. The mother went to offer her gift of thanksgiving after the days of purification were ended.—τὸ εἰρημένον, in Lev. xii., where alternative offerings are specified: a lamb, and a turtle dove or a young pigeon; and in case of the poor two turtle doves, or two young pigeons, the one for a burnt offering, the other for a sin offering. Mary brought the poor woman's offering. The question has been asked, why any purification in this case? and the fact has been adduced in proof that the original docu-

25. Καὶ ἰδοῦ, ἦν ἄνθρωπος<sup>1</sup> ἐν Ἱερουσαλὴμ, ᾧ ὄνομα Συμεών, καὶ ὁ ἄνθρωπος οὗτος δίκαιος καὶ εὐλαβής, προσδεχόμενος παρά-<sup>c</sup> κλησιν τοῦ Ἰσραὴλ, καὶ Πνεῦμα Ἅγιον ἦν<sup>2</sup> ἐπ' αὐτόν. 26. καὶ ἦν αὐτῷ κεκρηματισμένον ὑπὸ τοῦ Πνεύματος τοῦ Ἁγίου, μὴ<sup>d</sup> ἰδεῖν<sup>d</sup> ἄθνατον πρὶν ἢ<sup>3</sup> ἴδῃ τὸν Χριστὸν Κυρίου. 27. Καὶ ἦλθεν ἐν τῷ Πνεύματι εἰς τὸ ἱερόν· καὶ ἐν τῷ εἰσαγαγεῖν τοὺς γονεῖς τὸ παιδίον Ἰησοῦν, τοῦ ποιῆσαι αὐτοὺς κατὰ τὸ εἰθισμένον τοῦ νόμου περὶ αὐτοῦ, 28. καὶ αὐτὸς ἐδέξατο αὐτὸ εἰς τὰς ἀγκάλας αὐτοῦ,<sup>4</sup> καὶ εὐλόγησε τὸν Θεόν, καὶ εἶπε, 29. “Νῦν ἀπολύεις τὸν δούλόν σου, δέσποτα, κατὰ τὸ ῥήμά σου, ἐν εἰρήνῃ· 30. ὅτι εἶδον οἱ ὀφθαλμοί μου τὸ

<sup>1</sup> ἄνθρωπος before ἦν in  $\aleph$ B (Tisch., W.H.). ἦν av. in ADLΔ (not to be summarily rejected, J. Weiss).

<sup>2</sup> ἦν before ἅγιον in  $\aleph$ BLΔ al., e. T.R. = D.

<sup>3</sup> πρὶν ἦ in ADΔ; πρὶν av in BF 36 (W.H. bracket ἦ and read πρὶν av); πρὶν ἦ av in L 33 (Tisch.).

<sup>4</sup>  $\aleph$ BL omit αὐτον (Tisch., W.H.).

ment used by Lk. knew nothing of the virgin birth.—γονεῖς, ver. 27, has been used for the same purpose (vide Hillmann, Jahrb. f. pr. Theol., 1891).

Vv. 25-28. Simeon.—Συμεών, introduced as a stranger (ἄνθρωπος ἦν). The legendary spirit which loves definite particulars about celebrities of Scripture has tried to fill up the blank. The father of Gamaliel the son of Hillel, one of the seventy translators of the Hebrew Bible, are among the suggestions. A bracketed passage in Euthy. Zig. says, in reference to the latter suggestion, that Simeon alone of the company objected to the rendering of Isaiah vii. 14: “the virgin shall conceive,” and that an angel told him he should live to take the virgin’s son into his arms.—δίκαιος καὶ εὐλαβής. The evangelist is careful to make known what this man was, while giving no indication who he was (“who they were no man knows, what they were all men know,” inscription on a tombstone in a soldiers’ graveyard in Virginia), just and God-fearing, a saint of the O. T. type.—προσδεχόμενος παράκλησιν τ. ἰ.: an earnest believer in the Messianic hope, and fervently desiring its early fulfilment. Its fulfilment would be Israel’s consolation. The Messianic hope, the ideal of a good time coming, was the child of present sorrow—sin and misery prevalent, all things out of joint. The keynote of this view is struck in Is. xl. i.: “comfort ye”—παρκαλεῖτε. The Rabbis called Messiah the Comforter, Menahem. Cf. προσδεχ.

λύτρωσιν in ver. 38.—Ver. 26. ἦν κεκρηματισμένον, it had been revealed (for the verb vide Mt. ii. 12), how long before not indicated.—μὴ ἰδεῖν: we have here an instance of the aorist infinitive referring to what is future in relation to the principal verb. In such a case the aorist is really timeless, as it can be in dependent moods, vide Burton, M. and T., § 114.—πρὶν ἢ ἂν ἴδῃ: πρὶν here and in Acts xxv. 16 with a finite verb, usually with the infinitive, vide Mt. i. 18, xxvi. 34.—Ver. 27. ἐν τῷ Πνεύματι: observe the frequent reference to the Spirit in connection with Simeon, vide vv. 25 and 26.—εἰθισμένον (ἐθίζω), here only in N. T.: according to the established custom of the law.—Ver. 28. καὶ, as in ver. 21, before ἐκλήθη, introducing the apodosis “then” in A. V. and R. V.—αὐτὸς, not necessarily emphatic (Keil, Farrar), vide i. 22.

Vv. 29-32. Nunc dimittis.—Ver. 29. νῦν, now, at last, of a hope long cherished by one who is full of years, and content to die.—ἀπολύεις, Thou releasest me, present for the future, death near, and welcome.—δούλον, δέσποτα: slave, master; terms appropriate at all times to express the relation between God and men, yet savouring of legal piety.—ἐν εἰρήνῃ, in peace; he has had enough of life and its service, and the purpose of life has been fulfilled by the crowning mercy of a sight of the Christ: death will be as a sleep to a labouring man.—Ver. 30 gives the reason for this tranquil attitude towards death.—τὸ

σωτήριόν σου, 31. ὁ ἡτοίμασας κατὰ πρόσωπον πάντων τῶν λαῶν·
32. φῶς εἰς ἀποκάλυψιν ἔθνων, καὶ δόξαν λαοῦ σου Ἰσραήλ.”
33. Καὶ ἦν Ἰωσήφ καὶ ἡ μήτηρ αὐτοῦ<sup>1</sup> θαυμάζοντες ἐπὶ τοῖς λαλουμένοις περὶ αὐτοῦ. 34. καὶ εὐλόγησεν αὐτοὺς Συμεών, καὶ

e Phil. i. 16. εἶπε πρὸς Μαρίας τὴν μητέρα αὐτοῦ, “Ἰδοὺ, οὗτος * κείται εἰς i Thess.
iii. 3. πῶσιν καὶ ἀνάστασιν πολλῶν ἐν τῷ Ἰσραήλ, καὶ εἰς σημεῖον ἀντιλεγόμενον· 35. (καὶ σοῦ δὲ<sup>2</sup> αὐτῆς τὴν ψυχὴν διελεύσεται ῥομφαία.) ὅπως ἂν ἀποκαλυφθῶσιν ἐκ πολλῶν καρδιῶν διαλο-γισμοί.”

f Rev. ii. 20. 36. Καὶ ἦν Ἄννα ἑ προφῆτις, θυγάτηρ Φανοῦιλ, ἐκ φυλῆς Ἀσῆρ·
αὕτη προβεβηκυῖα ἐν ἡμέραις πολλαῖς, ζήσασα ἔτη μετὰ ἀνδρὸς<sup>3</sup>

<sup>1</sup> For ἦν . . . θαυμ. read ἦν ὁ πατήρ αὐτοῦ καὶ ἡ μήτηρ θαυμ. with ΞBDL 1, 131. ΞL retain second αὐτοῦ. The substitution of Ἰωσήφ for ὁ πατήρ explains itself.

<sup>2</sup> δε omitted in BLΞ. <sup>3</sup> μετὰ ἀνδρὸς before ετη in ΞBLΔ 13, 33, 69, 131.

σωτήριον = τὴν σωτηρίαν, often in Sept.
—Ver. 31. πάντων τῶν λαῶν: all peoples concerned in the salvation, at least as spectators.—Ver. 32. φῶς εἰς ἔ.
ἔ.: the Gentiles are to be more than spectators, even sharers in the salvation, which is represented under the twofold aspect of a light and a glory.—φῶς and δόξαν may be taken in apposition with ὁ as objects of ἡτοίμασας: salvation prepared or provided in the form of a light for the Gentiles, and a glory for Israel. Universalism here, but not of the pronounced type of Lk. (Holtz., H. C.), rather such as is found even in
O. T. prophets.—Ver. 33. ἦν: the construction is peculiar, the verb singular, and the participle, forming with it a periphrastic imperfect, plural = was the father, and was the mother, together wondering. Vide Winer, § 58, p.
651. The writer thinks of the two parents first as isolated and then as united in their wonder.—Ver. 34.
εὐλόγησεν: “the less is blessed of the better”. Age, however humble, may bless youth. Jacob blessed Pharaoh.—
κείται, is appointed—εἰς πῶσιν, etc.:
generally, this child will influence His time in a decided manner, and to opposite effects, and with painful consequences to Himself; a forecast not necessarily beyond prophetic ken, based on insight into the career of epoch-making men. It is so more or less always. The blessing of being father or mother of such a child is great, but not unmixed with sorrow.—
Ver. 35. καὶ σοῦ, singles out the mother for a special share in the sorrow connected with the tragic career of one destined to be much spoken against (ἀντιλεγόμενον); this inevitable because of a mother's intense love. Mary's sorrow is compared vividly to a sword (ῥομφαία here and in Rev. i. 16, and in Sept., Zech. xiii. 7) passing through her soul. It is a figure strong enough to cover the bitterest experiences of the Mater Dolorosa, but it does not necessarily imply prevision of the cross.

There is therefore no reason, on this account at least, for the suggestion that ver. 35a is an editorial addition to his source by the evangelist (J. Weiss).—
ὅπως introduces a final clause which can hardly refer to the immediately preceding statement about the sword piercing Mary's soul, but must rather indicate the purpose and result of the whole future career of the child, whereof the mother's sorrow is to be an incidental effect. The connection is: κείται εἰς πτ., etc. . . . ὅπως ἂν ἀποκαλ.
The general result, and one of the Divine aims, will be the revelation of men's inmost thoughts, showing, e.g., that the reputedly godly were not really godly.
Observe the ἂν in this pure final clause.
It does not affect the meaning. Godet says that it indicates without doubt that the manifestation of hidden thoughts will take place every time occasion presents itself, in contact with the Saviour.

Vv. 36-38. Anna.—Another aged saint of the O. T. type comes on the stage speaking thankful prophetic words concerning the Holy Child.—Ver. 36.
ἦν: either there was there, aderat (Meyer, Godet, Weizsäcker), or there was, there ἐπτά ἀπὸ τῆς ἁ παρθενίας αὐτῆς· 37. καὶ αὕτη χήρα ὡς<sup>1</sup> ἐτῶν <sup>h</sup> ἔδωκε here only

 ὀδογηκοιτατεσσάρων, ἢ οὐκ ἀφίστατο ἀπὸ<sup>2</sup> τοῦ ἱεροῦ, νηστεύειαι in N. T.
 καὶ δεήσσει ἡ λατρεύουσα νύκτα καὶ ἡμέραν· 38. καὶ αὕτη<sup>3</sup> αὕτη<sup>h</sup> Acts xxvi.
 τῇ ὥρᾳ ἐπιστάσα ἀνωμολογεῖτο τῷ Κυρίῳ,<sup>4</sup> καὶ ἐλάλει περὶ αὐτοῦ 7. Hel.
 πᾶσι τοῖς προδεχομένοις λύτρωσιν ἐν<sup>5</sup> Ἱερουσαλήμ. 39. Καὶ ὡς ix. 9; x. 2
 ἐτέλεσαν ἅπαντα τὰ<sup>6</sup> κατὰ τὸν νόμον Κυρίου, ὑπέστρεψαν<sup>7</sup> εἰς τὴν (absol.)
 Γαλιλαίαν, εἰς τὴν πόλιν αὐτῶν<sup>8</sup> Ναζαρέτ. 40. Τὸ δὲ παιδίον ἡῤῥεψε, καὶ ἐκραταιοῦτο πνεύματι,<sup>9</sup> πληρούμενον σοφίας<sup>10</sup>. καὶ χάρις Θεοῦ ἦν ἐπ' αὐτό.

<sup>1</sup> εως in ΞABLEΞ 33.

<sup>2</sup> BDL omit ἀπο (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> ΞABDLΞ 33 al. omit this αὕτη (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> θεω in ΞBDLΞ.

<sup>5</sup> ΞBE minusc. omit ἐν (Tisch., W.H.) found in DLA al.

<sup>6</sup> πάντα and without τα in ΞL (Tisch.); πάντα with τα in BE (W.H.); ἅπαντα without τα in D.

<sup>7</sup> ἐπεστρεψαν in ΞBE. νπεσ. conforms to the common usage in Lk.

<sup>8</sup> For εἰς τ. π. αὐτων ΞBD have εἰς π. εαυτων.

<sup>9</sup> ΞBDL omit πνευματι.

<sup>10</sup> σοφια in BL 33 (W.H.). T.R.=ΞDA (Tisch.).

lived (De Wette, J. Weiss, Schanz, Hahn).—Ἄννα = אַנְנָה, 1 Sam. i. 20 (Ἄννα in Sept.) = grace. Of this woman some particulars are given, e.g., her father and her tribe, which makes the absence of such details in Simeon's case more noteworthy. The two placed side by side give an aspect of historicity to the narrative.—αὕτη (or αὐτή, the sense much the same) introduces some further details in a loosely constructed sentence, which looks like biographic notes, with verbs left out = she advanced in years, having lived with a husband, seven years from virginity, the same a widow till eighty-four years—all which may be regarded, if we will, as a parenthesis, followed by a relative clause containing a statement of more importance, describing her way of life = who departed not from the temple, serving (God) by fasts and prayers, night and day.—Ver. 37. ὡς: either a widow for eighty-four years (Godet), or, as most think, a widow till the eighty-fourth year of her life. The former rendering would make her very old: married, say, at sixteen, seven years a wife, eighty-four years a widow = 107; not impossible, and borne out by the πολλαῖς after ἡμέραις (ver. 36, advanced in days—many).—νηστεύειαι: the fasting might be due to poverty, or on system, which would suggest a Judaistic type of piety.—νύκτα κ. ἡ.: did she sleep within the temple precincts?—Ver. 38. The T.R. has yet another αὕτη here (the third), before αὐτή, which really seems wanted as nominative to the verb following, but which one can imagine scribes omitting to relieve the heaviness and monotony of the style.—ἀνωμολογεῖτο (here only in N. T.): perhaps no stress should be laid on the preposition ἀντι, as the compound verb occurs in the sense of the simple verb in Sept. (Ps. lxxix. 13). The suggestion of an antiphony between Anna and Simeon (Godet; vicissim, Bengel) is tempting = began in turn to give thanks. The ἀντι may refer to spectators = began to praise God openly before all (Hahn). The subject of her praise of course was Jesus (περὶ αὐτοῦ), and its burden that He was the Saviour.—ἐλάλει points to an activity not confined to a single utterance; she spoke again and again on the theme to all receptive spirits. The omission of ἐν before Ἱερ. in ΞB, etc., gives us a peculiar designation for the circle to whom the prophetess addressed herself = those waiting for the redemption of Jerusalem (instead of Israel in ver. 25). Yet Isaiah xl. 2—"speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem"—makes such a turn of thought intelligible. And there might be discerning ones who knew that there was no place more needing redemption than that holy, unholy city.

Vv. 39, 40. Return to Nazareth.—πόλιν ἑαυτῶν, their own city, certainly

41. ΚΑΙ ἐπορεύοντο οἱ γονεῖς αὐτοῦ κατ' ἔτος εἰς Ἱερουσαλήμ τῇ ἑορτῇ τοῦ πάσχα. 42. καὶ ὅτε ἐγένετο ἐτῶν δώδεκα, ἀναβάντων<sup>1</sup> αὐτῶν εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα<sup>2</sup> κατὰ τὸ ἔθος τῆς ἑορτῆς, 43. καὶ τελειωσάντων τὰς ἡμέρας, ἐν τῷ ὑποστρέφειν αὐτοὺς, ὑπέμεινεν Ἰησοῦς ὁ παῖς ἐν Ἱερουσαλήμ· καὶ οὐκ ἔγνω Ἰωσήφ καὶ ἡ μήτηρ<sup>3</sup> αὐτοῦ. 44. νομίσαντες δὲ αὐτὸν ἐν τῇ συνοδίᾳ εἶναι,<sup>4</sup> ἤλθον ἡμέρας ὀδόν, καὶ ἀνεζήτησαν αὐτὸν ἐν τοῖς συγγενέσι καὶ ἐν<sup>5</sup> τοῖς γνωστοῖς· 45. καὶ μὴ εὐρόντες αὐτόν,<sup>6</sup> ὑπέστρεψαν εἰς Ἱερουσαλήμ, ζητοῦντες<sup>7</sup> αὐτόν. 46. Καὶ ἐγένετο μεθ' ἡμέρας τρεῖς, εὔρον αὐτὸν ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, καθεζόμενον ἐν μέσῳ τῶν διδασκάλων, καὶ ἀκούοντα αὐτῶν, καὶ

<sup>1</sup> ἀναβαινοντων in NABL 33 al.

<sup>2</sup> NBDL omit εἰς ἰ., an explanatory addition.

<sup>3</sup> For εγνω ἰ. καὶ ἡ μ. NBDL 1, 33 al. have εγνωσαν οἱ γονεῖς.

<sup>4</sup> εἶναι before εν τη συν. in NBDL 1, 33.

<sup>5</sup> B 33 omit this εν (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>6</sup> Omit αυτον NBCDL.

<sup>7</sup> αναζ. in BCDL.

suggesting that Nazareth, not Bethlehem, had been the true home of Joseph and Mary.—Ver. 40. ἤξανε καὶ ἐκραταιοῦτο, grew, and waxed strong, both in reference to the physical nature.—πνεύματι in T.R. is borrowed from i. 80; a healthy, vigorous child, an important thing to note in reference to Jesus.—πληρούμενον: present participle, not = plenus, Vulg., full, but in course of being filled with wisdom—mind as well as body subject to the law of growth.—χάρις: a great word of St. Paul's, also more used by Lk. than by either of the other two synoptists (vide i. 30, iv. 22, vi. 32, 33, 34); here to be taken broadly = favour, good pleasure. The child Jesus dear to God, and the object of His paternal care.

Vv. 41-52. When twelve years old. Lk. here relates one solitary, significant incident from the early years of Jesus, as if to say: from this, learn all. The one story shows the wish to collect anecdotes of those silent years. There would have been more had the evangelist had more to tell. The paucity of information favours the historicity of the tradition.—Ver. 41. κατ' ἔτος: law-observing people, piously observant of the annual feasts, especially that of the passover.—Ver. 42. ἐτῶν δώδεκα: this mention of the age of Jesus is meant to suggest, though it is not directly stated, that this year He went up to Jerusalem with His parents; ἀναβαινόντων includes Him. At twelve a Jewish boy became a son of the law, with the responsibility of a man, putting on the phylacteries which reminded of the obligation to keep the law (vide Wünsche, Beiträge, ad loc.).—Ver. 43. τελειωσάντων τ. ἡ. This naturally means that they stayed all the time of the feast, seven days. This was not absolutely incumbent; some went home after the first two days, but such people as Joseph and Mary would do their duty thoroughly.—ὑπέμεινεν, tarried behind, not so much intentionally (Hahn) as by involuntary preoccupation—His nature rather than His will the cause (Acts xvii. 14).—Ver. 44. ἐν τῇ συνοδίᾳ, in the company journeying together (σύν, ὀδός, here only in N. T.), a journeying together, then those who so journey. A company would be made up of people from the same neighbourhood, well acquainted with one another.—ἡμέρας ὀδόν, a day's journey. It is quite conceivable how they should have gone on so long without missing the boy, without much or any blame to the parents; not negligence, but human infirmity at worst.—συγγενέσι, γνωστοῖς: kinsfolk and acquaintances. Had there been less acquaintance and intimacy there had been less risk of losing the child. Friends take up each other's attention, and members of the same family do not stick so close together, and the absence of one excites no surprise.—Ver. 45. ἀναζητοῦντες: the present participle, expressing the purpose of the journey back to Jerusalem, where (not on the road) the search took place (cf. Acts xi. 25). The ἀνά here (as in ἀνεζήτησαν, ver. 44) implies careful, anxious search.—Ver. 46. ἡμέρας τρεῖς, three days, measured from ἐπερωτῶντα αὐτοὺς. 47. ἐξίσταντο δὲ πάντες οἱ ἀκούοντες αὐτοῦ, ἐπὶ τῇ συνέσει καὶ ταῖς ἀποκρίσεσιν αὐτοῦ. 48. Καὶ ἰδόντες αὐτὸν, ἐξεπλάγησαν· καὶ πρὸς αὐτὸν ἡ μήτηρ αὐτοῦ εἶπε,<sup>1</sup> “Τέκνον, τί ἐποίησας ἡμῖν οὕτως; ἰδοὺ, ὁ πατήρ σου καγὼ ὀδυνώμενοι ἐζητοῦμέν<sup>2</sup> σε.” 49. Καὶ εἶπε πρὸς αὐτοὺς, “Τί ὅτι ἐζητεῖτέ με; οὐκ ᾔδειτε ὅτι ἐν τοῖς τοῦ πατρὸς μου δεῖ εἶναι με;” 50. Καὶ αὐτοὶ οὐ συνῆκαν τὸ ῥῆμα ὃ ἐλάλησεν αὐτοῖς. 51. Καὶ κατέβη μετ’ αὐτῶν, καὶ ἦλθεν εἰς Ναζαρέτ καὶ ἦν ὑποτασσόμενος αὐτοῖς. καὶ ἡ μήτηρ αὐτοῦ διετήρει πάντα τὰ ῥήματα ταῦτα<sup>3</sup> ἐν τῇ καρδίᾳ αὐτῆς. 52. καὶ Ἰησοῦς<sup>4</sup> προέκοπτε σοφία<sup>4</sup> καὶ ἡλικία, καὶ χάριτι παρὰ Θεῶ καὶ ἀνθρώποις.

<sup>i</sup> Rom. xiii
12. Gal. i
14. 2 Tim.
ii. 16; iii. 9

<sup>1</sup> εἶπεν before πρὸς αὐτον in BCDL.

<sup>2</sup> B has ζητοῦμεν (W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> NBD omit ταῦτα (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> ἐν τῇ σ. in NL (Tisch.); τῇ without ἐν in B (W.H.).

the time they had last seen Him, not implying three days' search in Jerusalem. The place where they had lodged and the temple would be among the first places visited in the search.—ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ: probably in a chamber in the temple court used for teaching and kindred purposes. Some think it was in a synagogue beside the temple.—Ver. 46. καθεζόμενον, sitting; therefore, it has been inferred, as a teacher, not as a scholar, among (ἐν μέσῳ) the doctors, for scholars stood, teachers only sitting. An unwelcome conclusion, to which, happily, we are not shut up by the evidence, the posture-role on which it rests being more than doubtful (vide Vitringa, Synag., p. 167).—ἐπερωτῶντα: nothing unusual, and nothing unbecoming a thoughtful boy.—Ver. 47. ἐξίσταντο, were amazed, not at His position among the doctors, or at His asking questions, but at the intelligence (συνέσει) shown in His answers to the questions of the teachers; something of the rare insight and felicity which astonished all in after years appearing in these boyish replies.—Ver. 48. ἰδόντες refers to the parents. This astonishment points to some contrast between a previous quiet, reserved manner of Jesus and His present bearing; sudden flashing out of the inner life.—ἡ μήτηρ: the mother spoke, naturally; a woman, and the mother's heart more keenly touched. This apart from the peculiar relation referred to in Bengel's major erat necessitudo matris.—Ver. 49. ἐν τοῖς τοῦ πατρὸς μου, in the things of my Father (“about my Father's business,” A. V.); therefore in the place or house of my Father (R. V.); the former may be the verbal translation, but the latter is the real meaning Jesus wished to suggest. In this latter rendering patristic and modern interpreters in the main concur. Note the new name for God compared with the “Highest” and the “Despotes” in the foregoing narrative. The dawn of a new era is here.—Ver. 50. οὐ συνῆκαν, they did not understand; no wonder! Even we do not yet fully understand.—Ver. 51. κατέβη, He went down with them, gentle, affectionate, habitually obedient (ὑποτασσόμενος), yet far away in thought, and solitary.—διετήρει: she did not forget, though she did not understand.—Ver. 52. προέκοπτε, steadily grew, used intransitively in later Greek.—ἐν τῇ σοφίᾳ καὶ ἡλικίᾳ, in wisdom and (also as, the one the measure of the other) in stature, both growths alike real. Real in body, apparent in the mind: growth in manifestation of the wisdom within, complete from the first—such is the docetic gloss of ecclesiastical interpreters, making the childhood of Jesus a monstrum, and His humanity a phantom.—χάριτι π. Θε. καὶ ἀ., in favour with God and men: beloved of all; no division even among men while the new wisdom and the new religion lay a slumbering germ in the soul of the heaven-born boy.

CHAPTER III. THE MINISTRY OF THE NEW ERA OPENS. Having related the beginnings of the lives of the two prophets of the new time (chapters i. and ii.), the evangelist now introduces us to the beginnings of their prophetic ministries, or rather to the ministry of

<sup>a</sup> here only in N. T. III. 1. Ἐν ἔτει δὲ πεντεκαδεκάτῳ τῆς ἡγεμονίας Τιβερίου
<sup>b</sup> Ch. ii. 2. Καίσαρος, ἡγεμονεύοντος Ποντίου Πιλάτου τῆς Ἰουδαίας, καὶ
 τετραρχοῦντος<sup>1</sup> τῆς Γαλιλαίας Ἡρώδου, Φιλίππου δὲ τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ
 αὐτοῦ τετραρχοῦντος τῆς Ἰτουραίας καὶ Τραχωνίτιδος χώρας, καὶ

<sup>1</sup> The spelling of this word varies in MSS. B has it as in T. R.  $\aleph$  C τετραρχουντος (ter), which Tisch. and W. H. adopt.

John as the prelude to the evangelic drama. In regard to the ministry of Jesus he gives us merely the date of its beginning (iii. 23), attaching thereto a genealogy of Jesus. Bengel has well expressed the significance of this chapter by the words: Hic quasi scena N. T. panditur.

Vv. 1-2. General historic setting of the beginnings. For Mt.'s vague "in those days" (iii. 1), which leaves us entirely in the dark at what date and age Jesus entered on His prophetic career, Lk. gives a group of dates connecting his theme with the general history of the world and of Palestine; the universalistic spirit here, as in ii. 1, 2, apparent. This spirit constitutes the permanent ethical interest of what may seem otherwise dry details: for ordinary readers of the Gospel little more than a collection of names, personal and geographical. Worthy of note also, as against those who think Lk. was to a large extent a free inventor, is the indication here given of the historical spirit, the desire to know the real facts (i. 3). The historic data, six in all, define the date of John's ministry with reference to the reigning Roman emperor, and the civil and ecclesiastical rulers of Palestine.

Ver. 1. ἐν ἔτει, etc., in the fifteenth year of the reign of Tiberius as Caesar. This seems a very definite date, rendering all the other particulars, so far as fixing time is concerned, comparatively superfluous. But uncertainty comes in in connection with the question: is the fifteenth year to be reckoned from the death of Augustus (19 Aug., 767 A. U. C.), when Tiberius became sole emperor, or from the beginning of the regency of Tiberius, two years earlier? The former mode of calculation would give us 28 or 29 A. D. as the date of John's ministry and Christ's baptism, making Jesus then thirty-two years old; the latter, 26 A. D., making Jesus then thirty years old, agreeing with iii. 23. The former mode of dating would be more in accordance with the practice of Roman historians and Josephus; the latter lends itself to apologetic and harmonistic interests, and therefore is preferred by many (e. g., Farrar and Hahn).—Ποντίου Πιλάτου. Pilate was governor of the Roman province of Judæa from 26 A. D. to 36 A. D., the fifth in the series of governors. His proper title was ἐπιτροπος (hence the reading of D: ἐπιτροπευοντος π. π.); usually ἡγεμῶν in Gospels. He owes his place here in the historic framework to the part he played in the last scenes of our Lord's life. Along with him are named next two joint rulers of other parts of Palestine, belonging to the Herod family; brought in, though of no great importance for dating purposes, because they, too, figure occasionally in the Gospel story.—τετραρχοῦντος, acting as tetrarch. The verb means primarily: ruling over a fourth part, then by an easy transition acting as a tributary prince.—Γαλιλαίας: about twenty-five miles long and broad, divided into lower (southern) Galilee and upper (northern). With Galilee was joined for purposes of government Peraea.—Ἡρώδου, Herod Antipas, murderer of the Baptist, and having secular authority over Jesus as his subject.—Φιλίππου, Herod Philip, brother of Antipas, whose name reappears in the new name of Paneas, rebuilt or adorned by him, Caesarea Philippi.—τῆς Ἰτουραίας καὶ Τραχωνίτιδος χώρας: so Lk. designates the territory ruled over by Philip. The words might be rendered: the Ituraean and Trachonitic territory, implying the identity of Ituraea and Trachonitis (as in Eusebius. For a defence of this view, vide article by Professor Ramsay in Expositor, February, 1894); or, as in A. V., of Ituraea and of the region of Trachonitis. The former was a mountainous region to the south of Mount Hermon, inhabited by a hardy race, skilled in the use of the bow; the latter (the rough country) = the modern El-Lejah, the kingdom of Og in ancient times, was a basaltic region south of Damascus, and east of Golan. It is probable that only a fragment of Ituraea belonged to Philip, the region around

Λυσανίου τῆς Ἀβιλινῆς τετραρχοῦντος, 2. ἐπ' ἀρχιερέων<sup>1</sup> Ἄννα καὶ Καϊάφα, ἐγένετο ῥῆμα Θεοῦ ἐπὶ Ἰωάννην τὸν τοῦ<sup>2</sup> Ζαχαρίου υἱὸν ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ· 3. καὶ ἦλθεν εἰς πᾶσαν τὴν<sup>3</sup> περίχωρον τοῦ Ἰορδάνου, κηρύσσων βάπτισμα μετανοίας εἰς ἄφεςιν ἁμαρτιῶν· 4. ὡς ἐγγραπταί ἐν βίβλῳ λόγων Ἡσαΐου τοῦ προφήτου, λέγοντος,<sup>4</sup> Ἐφωγὴ βοῶντος ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ, Ἐτοιμάσατε τὴν ὁδὸν Κυρίου· εὐθείας ποιεῖτε τὰς

<sup>1</sup> ἀρχιερεως in most uncials; pl. in minusc. only. <sup>2</sup> Omit του most uncials.

<sup>3</sup> τὴν is in  $\aleph$ CDD al. (Tisch.); wanting in ABL (W.H.).

<sup>4</sup>  $\aleph$ BDLΔ I, 118, it. vulg. omit λεγοντος.

Paneas. On the other hand, according to Josephus, his territories embraced more than the regions named by Lk.: Batanaea, Auranitis, Gaulonitis, and some parts about Jamnia (various places in Ant. and B. J.).—Λυσανίου, etc. This last item in Lk.'s dating apparatus is the most perplexing, whether regard be had to relevancy or to accuracy. To what end this reference to a non-Jewish prince, and this outlying territory between the Lebanon ranges? What concern has it with the evangelic history, or of what use is it for indicating the place of the latter in the world's history? By way of answer to this question, Farrar (C. G. T.) suggests that the district of Abilene (Abila the capital) is probably mentioned here "because it subsequently formed part of the Jewish territory, having been assigned by Caligula to his favourite, Herod Agrippa I., in A.D. 36". As to the accuracy: it so happens that there was a Lysanias, who ruled over Chalcis and Abilene sixty years before the time of which Lk. writes, who probably bore the title tetrarch. Does Lk., misled by the title, think of that Lysanias as a contemporary of Herod Antipas and Herod Philip, or was there another of the name really their contemporary, whom the evangelist has in his view? Certain inscriptions cited by historical experts make the latter hypothesis probable. Schürer (The Jewish People, Div. I., vol. ii., Appendix I, on the History of Chalcis, Iudaea, and Abilene, p. 338) has no doubt on the point, and says: "the evangelist, Lk., is thoroughly correct when he assumes that in the fifteenth year of Tiberias there was a Lysanias tetrarch of Abilene".

Ver. 2. ἐπὶ ἀρχιερέως Ἄννα καὶ Καϊάφα, under the high priesthood of Annas and Caiaphas. The use of the singular ἀρχιερέως in connection with two names is peculiar, whence doubtless the correction into the easier ἀρχιερέων (T. R.); and the combination of two men as holding the office at the same time, is likewise somewhat puzzling. As Caiaphas was the actual high priest at the time, one would have expected his name to have stood, if not alone, at least first = under Caiaphas, the actual high priest, and the ex-high priest, Annas, still an influential senior. One can only suppose that among the caste of high priests past and present (there had been three between Annas and Caiaphas) Annas was so outstanding that it came natural to name him first. Annas had been deposed arbitrarily by the Roman governor, and this may have increased his influence among his own people. His period of office was A.D. 7-14, that of Caiaphas A.D. 17-35.—ἐγένετο ῥῆμα, etc., came the word of God to John; this the great spiritual event, so carefully dated, after the manner of the O. T. in narrating the beginning of the career of a Hebrew prophet (vide, e.g., Jer. i. 1). But the date is common to the ministry of John and that of Jesus, who is supposed to have begun His work shortly after the Baptist.—ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ. From next verse it may be gathered that the desert here means the whole valley of the Jordan, El-Ghor.

Vv. 3-6. John's ministry.—Ver. 3. ἦλθεν. In Mt. and Mk. the people come from all quarters to John. Here John goes to the people in an itinerant ministry. The latter may apply to the early stage of his ministry. He might move about till he had attracted attention, then settle at a place convenient for baptism, and trust to the impression produced to draw the people to him.—κηρύσσων, etc.: here Lk. follows Mk. verbatim, and like him, as distinct from Mt., connects John's baptism with the forgiveness of sins, so making it in effect Christian.—Ver. 4. βίβλῳ λόγων: Lk. has his own way of τρίβους αὐτοῦ. 5. πᾶσα φάραγξ πληρωθήσεται, καὶ πᾶν ὄρος καὶ

 c Ch. xxiii. <sup>30.</sup> (Is. xl. 4.) <sup>1</sup> βουνὸς ταπεινωθήσεται· καὶ ἔσται τὰ σκολιὰ εἰς εὐθείαν,<sup>1</sup> καὶ αἱ
 τραχεῖαι εἰς ὁδοὺς λείας. 6. καὶ ὄψεται πᾶσα σὰρξ τὸ σωτήριον τοῦ Θεοῦ. 7. Ἔλεγεν οὖν τοῖς ἐκπορευομένοις ὄχλοις βαπτισθῆναι ὑπ' αὐτοῦ, "Γεννήματα ἐχιδνῶν, τίς ὑπέδειξεν ὑμῖν φυγεῖν ἀπὸ τῆς μελλούσης ὀργῆς; 8. ποιήσατε οὖν καρποὺς ἀξίους<sup>2</sup> τῆς μετανόιας· καὶ μὴ ἄρρησθε λέγειν ἐν ἑαυτοῖς, Πατέρα ἔχομεν τὸν Ἀβραάμ· λέγω γὰρ ὑμῖν, ὅτι δύναται ὁ Θεὸς ἐκ τῶν λίθων τούτων ἐγεῖραι τέκνα τῷ Ἀβραάμ. 9. ἦδη δὲ καὶ ἡ ἀξίγη πρὸς τὴν ρίζαν τῶν δένδρων κεῖται· πᾶν οὖν δένδρον μὴ ποιῶν καρπὸν καλὸν ἐκκόπ-τεται καὶ εἰς πῦρ βάλλεται."

10. Καὶ ἐπρωτῶν αὐτὸν οἱ ὄχλοι, λέγοντες, "Τί οὖν ποιήσομεν<sup>3</sup>;"

II. Ἀποκριθεὶς δὲ λέγει<sup>4</sup> αὐτοῖς, "Ὁ ἔχων δύο χιτῶνας μεταδώτω

<sup>1</sup> εὐθείας in BDE. T.R. = ΞCLA many verss.

<sup>2</sup> αξίους καρπους in B. Orig. (W.H. marg.). Most uncials as in T.R. (Tisch.).

<sup>3</sup> ποιησωμεν in most uncials (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> ελεγεν in ΞBCL I, 33, 69 a1.

introducing the prophetic citation ("in the book of the words"), as he also follows his own course as to the words quoted. Whereas Mt. and Mk. are content to cite just so much as suffices to set forth the general idea of preparing the way of the Lord, Lk. quotes in continuation the words which describe pictorially the process of preparation (ver. 5), also those which describe the grand result: all mankind experiencing the saving grace of God (ver. 6). The universalistic bias appears here again.—Ver. 5. φάραγξ, a ravine, here only in N. T.—εἰς εὐθείας, the crooked places shall be (become) straight (ways, ὁδοὺς, understood)—αἱ τραχεῖαι (ὁδοὶ), the rough ways shall become smooth.

Vv. 7-9. John's preaching (cf. Mt. iii. 7-10).—Lk. gives no account of John's aspect and mode of life, leaving that to be inferred from i. 80. On the other hand he enters into more detail in regard to the drift of his preaching. These verses contain Lk.'s version of the Baptist's censure of his time.—Ver. 7. ἐκπορευομένοις ὄχλοις: what Mt. represents as addressed specially to the Pharisees and Sadducees, Lk. less appropriately gives as spoken to the general crowd. Note that here, as in the other synoptists, the crowd comes to John, though in ver. 3 John goes to them.—γεννήματα ἐχιδνῶν: on this figure vide Mt. Lk.'s report of the Baptist's severe words corresponds closely to Mt.'s, suggesting the use of a common source, if not of Mt. himself. The points of variation are unimportant.—Ver. 8. καρποὺς: instead of καρπὸν, perhaps to answer to the various types of reform specified in the sequel.—ἄρρησθε instead of δόξητε (vide on Mt.), on which Bengel's comment is: "omnem excusationis etiam conatum praecidit". While the words they are forbidden to say are the same in both accounts, perhaps the raising up children to Abraham has a wider range of meaning for the Pauline Lk. than for Mt.: sons from even the Pagan world.

Vv. 10-14. Class counsels, peculiar to Lk. Two samples of John's counsels to classes are here given, prefaced by a counsel applicable to all classes. The classes selected to illustrate the Baptist's social preaching are the much tempted ones: publicans and soldiers.—Ver. 10. ἐπρωτῶν, imperfect. Such questions would be frequent, naturally suggested by the general exhortations to repentance. The preacher would probably give special illustrative counsels without being asked. Those here reported are meant to be characteristic.—ποιήσωμεν: subj. delib.—Ver. 11. δύο χιτῶνες: two, one to spare, not necessarily two on the person, one enough; severely simple ideas of life. The χιτῶν was the under garment, vide on Mt. v. 40.—βρώματα: the plural should perhaps not be emphasised as if implying variety and

τῷ μὴ ἔχοντι· καὶ ὁ ἔχων βρώματα ὁμοίως ποιείτω.” 12. Ἦλθον δὲ καὶ τελῶναι βαπτισθῆναι, καὶ εἶπον πρὸς αὐτόν, “Διδάσκαλε, τί ποιήσομεν<sup>1</sup>,” 13. Ὁ δὲ εἶπε πρὸς αὐτούς, “Μηδὲν πλέον παρὰ τὸ διατεταγμένον ὑμῖν<sup>d</sup> πράσσετε.” 14. Ἐπηρώτων δὲ αὐτόν καὶ ἅ Ch. xix
στρατευόμενοι, λέγοντες, “Καὶ ἡμεῖς τί ποιήσομεν<sup>2</sup>,” Καὶ εἶπε<sup>23</sup>
πρὸς αὐτούς,<sup>8</sup> “Μηδένα διασείσητε, μηδὲ ὁσυκοφαντήσητε· καὶ = Ch. xix. 8 ἀρκεῖσθε τοῖς ὀψωνίοις ὑμῶν.”

15. Προσδοκῶντος δὲ τοῦ λαοῦ, καὶ διαλογιζομένων πάντων ἐν ταῖς καρδίαις αὐτῶν περὶ τοῦ Ἰωάννου, μήποτε αὐτὸς εἴη ὁ Χριστός, 16. ἀπεκρίνατο ὁ Ἰωάννης ἅπασι λέγων,<sup>4</sup> “Ἐγὼ μὲν ὕδατι βαπτίζω ὑμᾶς· ἔρχεται δὲ ὁ ἰσχυρότερός μου, οὗ οὐκ εἰμὶ ἰκανὸς λῦσαι τὸν ἰμάντα τῶν ὑποδημάτων αὐτοῦ· αὐτὸς ὑμᾶς βαπτίσει ἐν Πνεύματι

f Rom. vi.
23. 1 Cor
ix. 7. 2
Cor. xi. 8

<sup>1</sup> Again ποιήσωμεν in most uncials; also in ver. 14.

<sup>2</sup> τί ποι. καὶ ἡμεῖς in ΞBCLΞ I, 69.

<sup>3</sup> αυτοῖς for πρὸς αυτοῖς in BDLΞ 33 (W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> ΞBL have λεγων ἅπασι ο ἰ. (Tisch., W.H.).

abundance (τὰ περισσεύοντα, Grotius). The counsel is: let him that hath food give to him that hath none, so inculcating a generous, humane spirit. Here the teaching of John, as reported by Lk., touches that of Jesus, and is evangelical not legal in spirit.—Ver. 13. μηδὲν πλέον παρὰ: this mode of expressing comparison (usual in mod. Grk.) is common to Lk. and the Ep. to Heb. (i. 4, etc.), and has been used in support of the view that Lk. wrote Heb. “Non improbabili videtur mihi eorum opinio qui Lucae eam Ep. adjudicant,” Pricaeus.—πράσσετε, make, in a sinister sense, exact, exigite, Beza. Kypke quotes Julius Pollux on the vices of the publicans, one being παιροσπράττων, nimium exigens, and remarks that this word could not be better explained than by the phrase in Lk., πρᾶττων π. π. τὸ διατ.—Ver. 14. στρατευόμενοι, “soldiers on service.” R. V. margin. So also Farrar. But Field disputes this rendering. “The advice seems rather to point to soldiers at home, mixing among their fellow-citizens, than to those who were on the march in an enemy’s country” (Os. Nor.). Schürer, whom J. Weiss follows, thinks they would be heathen.—διασείσητε: the verb (here only) means literally to shake much, here = to extort money by intimidation = concertio in law Latin. This military vice would be practised on the poor.—συκοφαντήσητε: literally to inform on those who exported figs from Athens; here = to obtain money by acting as informers (against the rich).—ὀψωνίοις (ὄψων, ὠνέομαι): a late Greek word, primarily anything eaten with bread, specially fish, “kitchen”; salary paid in kind; then generally wages. Vide Rom. vi. 23, where the idea is, the “kitchen,” the best thing sin has to give is death.

Vv. 15-17. Art thou the Christ? (Mt. iii. 11, 12, Mk. i. 7, 8).—Ver. 15. προσδοκῶντος: in Mt. and Mk. John introduces the subject of the Messiah of his own accord: in Lk. in answer to popular expectation and conjecture; an intrinsically probable account, vide on Mt.—μήποτε, etc., whether perhaps he might not himself be the Christ; expresses very happily the popular state of mind.—Ver. 16. ἅπασι: might suggest frequent replies to various parties, uniform in tenor; but against this is the aorist ἀπεκρίνατο, which suggests a single answer given once for all, to a full assembly, a formal solemn public declaration. On the Baptist’s statement in this and the following verse, vide on Mt.—ἐν Πνεύματι Ἁγίῳ καὶ πυρὶ: against the idea of many commentators that the Holy Spirit and fire represent opposite effects on opposite classes—saving and punitive—Godet and Hahn press the omission of ἐν before πυρὶ, and take Πνεῦμα and πῦρ to be kindred = fire the emblem of the Spirit as a purifier. They are right as to the affinity but not as to the function. The function in both cases is judicial. John refers to the Holy Wind and Fire of Judgment

Ἄγιω καὶ πυρί· 17. οὐ τὸ πτόον ἐν τῇ χειρὶ αὐτοῦ, καὶ διακαθαριεῖ<sup>1</sup> τὴν ἄλωνα αὐτοῦ· καὶ συναξει<sup>1</sup> τὸν σίτον εἰς τὴν ἀποθήκην αὐτοῦ, τὸ δὲ ἄχυρον κατακαύσει πυρὶ ἀσβέστω.” 18. Πολλὰ μὲν οὖν καὶ ἕτερα παρακαλῶν εὐηγγελίζετο τὸν λαόν. 19. Ὁ δὲ Ἡρώδης ὁ τετράρχης, ἐλεγχόμενος ὑπ’ αὐτοῦ περὶ Ἡρωδιάδος τῆς γυναικὸς Φιλίππου<sup>2</sup> τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ αὐτοῦ, καὶ περὶ πάντων ὧν ἐποίησε ποιηρῶν
 g Acta 22vi. ὁ Ἡρώδης, 20. προσέθηκε καὶ τοῦτο ἐπὶ πάσι, καὶ<sup>3</sup> κατέκλεισε τὸν
 10. Ἰωάννην ἐν τῇ<sup>4</sup> φυλακῇ.

21. Ἐγένετο δὲ ἐν τῷ βαπτισθῆναι ἅπαντα τὸν λαόν, καὶ Ἰησοῦ βαπτισθέντος καὶ προσευχομένου, ἀνεωχθῆναι τὸν οὐρανόν, 22. καὶ καταβῆναι τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ Ἅγιον σωματικῶ εἶδει ὡσεὶ<sup>5</sup> περιστερῶν ἐπ’ αὐτόν, καὶ φωνὴν ἐξ οὐρανοῦ γενέσθαι, λέγουσαν,<sup>6</sup> “Σὺ εἶ ὁ υἱὸς μου ὁ ἀγαπητός, ἐν σοὶ ἠδόκησα.” 23. Καὶ αὐτὸς ἦν ὁ<sup>7</sup> Ἰησοῦς

<sup>1</sup> For καὶ διακ. (from Mt.) ΞB have διακαθαραί, also συναγαγεῖν for συναξει.

<sup>2</sup> Omit Φιλίππου ΞBDLΔΞ al.

<sup>3</sup> Omit this καὶ ΞBDE b, e (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> Omit τῇ ΞBDLE.

<sup>5</sup> ὡς in ΞBDL 33.

<sup>6</sup> Omit λεγ. (expletive) with ΞBDL verss.

<sup>7</sup> ΞBL 33 omit ο.

It is, however, not impossible that Lk. read an evangelic sense into John's words.

Vv. 18-20. Close of the Baptist's ministry and life. Lk. gives here all he means to say about John, condensing into a single sentence the full narratives of Mt. and Mk. as to his end.—Ver. 18. πολλὰ μὲν οὖν καὶ ἕτερα, “many things, too, different from these” (Farrar, who refers to John i. 29, 34, iii. 27-36, as illustrating the kind of utterances meant). The εὐηγγελίζετο following seems to justify emphasising ἕτερα, as pointing to a more evangelic type of utterance than those about the axe and the fan, and the wrath to come. But it may be questioned whether by such a representation the real John of history is not to a certain extent unconsciously idealised and Christianised.—μὲν οὖν: the οὖν may be taken as summarising and concluding the narrative about John and μὲν as answering to δὲ in ver. 19 = John was carrying on a useful evangelic ministry, out it was cut short; or μενοῦν may be taken as one word, emphasising πολλὰ καὶ ἕτερα, and preparing for transition to what follows (Hahn).—Ver. 19. Ἡρώδης: the tetrarch named in ver. 1.—περὶ πάντων, implying that John's rebuke was not confined to the sin with Herodias. Probably not, but it was what John said on that score that cost him his head.—Ver. 20. ἐπὶ πάσι, added this also to all his misdeeds, and above all the crowning iniquity, and yet Lk. forbears to mention the damning sin of Herod, the beheading of the Baptist, contenting himself with noting the imprisonment. He either assumes knowledge of the horrid tale, or shrinks from it as too gruesome.—κατέκλεισε: instead of the infinitive; the paratactic style savours of Hebrew, and suggests a Hebrew source (Godet).

Vv. 21-22. The baptism of Jesus (Mt. iii. 13-17, Mk. i. 9-11).—ἐν τῷ βαπτισθῆναι: the aorist ought to imply that the bulk of the people had already been baptised before Jesus appeared on the scene, i.e., that John's ministry was drawing to its close (so De Wette; but vide Burton, M. and T., p. 51, § 109, on the effect of ἐν).—καὶ ἰ. βαπτισθέντος: so Lk. refers to the baptism of Jesus, in a participial clause, his aim not to report the fact, but what happened after it. On the different ways in which the synoptists deal with this incident, vide on Mt.—προσευχομένου: peculiar to Lk., who makes Jesus pray at all crises of His career; here specially noteworthy in connection with the theophany following: Jesus in a state of mind answering to the preternatural phenomena; subjective and objective corresponding.—σωματικῶ εἶδει, in bodily form, peculiar to Lk., and transforming a vision into an external event.—Σὺ εἶ: the voice, as in Mk., addressed to Jesus, and in the same terms.

ὡσεὶ ἐτῶν τριάκοντα ἀρχόμενος,<sup>1</sup> ὢν, ὡς ἐνομιζέτο, υἱὸς<sup>2</sup> Ἰωσήφ, τοῦ Ἠλίου, 24. τοῦ Ματθαίου, τοῦ Λευῖ, τοῦ Μελχί, τοῦ Ἰαννά, τοῦ Ἰωσήφ, 25. τοῦ Ματθαίου, τοῦ Ἀμώς, τοῦ Ναούμ, τοῦ Ἑσλί, τοῦ Ναγγαί, 26. τοῦ Μαδῶ, τοῦ Ματθαίου, τοῦ Σεμεί, τοῦ Ἰωσήφ, τοῦ Ἰούδα, 27. τοῦ Ἰωαννά, τοῦ Ῥησά, τοῦ Ζοροβάβελ, τοῦ Σαλαθιήλ, τοῦ Νηρί, 28. τοῦ Μελχί, τοῦ Ἀδδί, τοῦ Κωσάμ, τοῦ Ἐλμωδάμ, τοῦ Ἡρ, 29. τοῦ Ἰωσή, τοῦ Ἐλιέξερ, τοῦ Ἰωρείμ, τοῦ Ματθαίου, τοῦ Λευῖ,

<sup>1</sup> ἀρχόμενος before ὡσεὶ ε. τ. in NBL I, 33, 131, etc. The order of T.R. = that of ADΔ al.

<sup>2</sup> υἱος ὡς ἐνομ. in NBL I, 131 al.

<sup>3</sup> The spelling of many of the names in this genealogy varies in the MSS. As these variations are of little importance I let the names stand as in T.R. without remark, referring the curious to W.H. or Tisch.

Vv. 23-38. The age of Jesus when He began His ministry, and His genealogy.

—Ver. 23. καὶ αὐτὸς, etc., and He, Jesus, was about thirty years of age when He began. The evangelist's aim obviously is to state the age at which Jesus commenced His public career.—ἀρχόμενος is used in a pregnant sense, beginning = making His beginning in that which is to be the theme of the history. There is a mental reference to ἀπ' ἀρχῆς in the preface, i. 1; cf. Acts i. 1; "all that Jesus began (ἤρξατο) both to do and to teach".—ὡσεὶ, about, nearly, implying that the date is only approximate. It cannot be used as a fixed datum for chronological purposes, nor should any importance be attached to the number thirty as the proper age at which such a career should begin. That at that age the Levites began full service, Joseph stood before Pharaoh, and David began to reign are facts, but of no significance (vide Farrar in C. G. T.). God's prophets appear when they get the inward call, and that may come at any time, at twenty, thirty, or forty. Inspiration is not bound by rule, custom, or tradition.

Vv. 24-38. The genealogy. One is surprised to find in Lk. a genealogy at all, until we reflect on his preface with its professed desire for accuracy and thoroughness, and observe the careful manner in which he dates the beginning of John's ministry. One is further surprised to find here a genealogy so utterly different from that of Mt. Did Lk. not know it, or was he dissatisfied with it? Leaving these questions on one side, we can only suppose that the evangelist in the course of his inquiries came upon this genealogy of the Saviour and resolved to give it as a contribution towards defining the fleshly relationships of Jesus, supplying here and there an editorial touch. Whether this genealogy be of Jewish-Christian, or of Pauline-Christian origin is a question on which opinion differs.

Ver. 24. ὢν, being, introducing the genealogical list, which ascends from son to father, instead of, as in Mt., descending from father to son, therefore beginning at the end and going backwards.—ὡς ἐνομιζέτο: presumably an editorial note to guard the virgin birth. Some regard this expression with Ἰωσήφ following, as a parenthesis, making the genealogy in its original form run being son of Eli, etc., so that the sense, when the parenthesis is inserted, becomes: being son (as was supposed of Joseph but really) of Eli, etc., Eli being the father of Mary, and the genealogy being that of the mother of Jesus (Godet and others). This is ingenious but not satisfactory. As has been remarked by Hahn, if that had been Lk.'s meaning it would have been very easy for him to have made it clear by inserting ὄντως δὲ before τοῦ Ἠλίου. We must therefore rest in the view that this genealogy, like that of Mt., is Joseph's, not Mary's, as it could not fail to be if Jews were concerned in its compilation.

Vv. 24-31. From Joseph back to David. Compared with the corresponding section of Mt.'s genealogy these differences are apparent: (1) in both sub-divisions of the section (David to captivity, captivity to Christ) there are considerably more names (20, 14), a fact intelligible enough in genealogies through different lines; (2) they start from different sons of David (Nathan,

30. τοῦ Συμεών, τοῦ Ἰούδα, τοῦ Ἰωσήφ, τοῦ Ἰωνάν, τοῦ Ἐλιακίμ,
 31. τοῦ Μελεᾶ, τοῦ Μαϊνάν, τοῦ Ματθαθά, τοῦ Ναθάν, τοῦ Δαβίδ,
 32. τοῦ Ἰεσσαί, τοῦ Ὠβήδ, τοῦ Βοόξ, τοῦ Σαλμών, τοῦ Ναασσών,
 33. τοῦ Ἀμιναδάβ, τοῦ Ἀράμ, τοῦ Ἐσρώμ, τοῦ Φαρές, τοῦ Ἰούδα,
 34. τοῦ Ἰακώβ, τοῦ Ἰσαάκ, τοῦ Ἀβραάμ, τοῦ Θάρα, τοῦ Ναχώρ,
 35. τοῦ Σαρούχ, τοῦ Ῥαγαῦ, τοῦ Φαλέκ, τοῦ Ἔβερ, τοῦ Σαλά, 36. τοῦ Καϊνάν, τοῦ Ἀρφαζάδ, τοῦ Σήμ, τοῦ Νῶε, τοῦ Λάμεχ, 37. τοῦ Μαθου σάλα, τοῦ Ἐνώχ, τοῦ Ἰαρέδ, τοῦ Μαλακεὴλ, τοῦ Καϊνάν, 38. τοῦ Ἐνῶς, τοῦ Σήθ, τοῦ Ἀδάμ, τοῦ Θεοῦ.

Solomon); (3) they come together at the captivity in Shealtiel and Zerubbabel; (4) after running in separate streams from that point onwards they meet again in Joseph, who in the one is the son of Eli, in the other the son of Jacob. The puzzle is to understand how two genealogical streams so distinct in their entire course should meet at these two points. The earlier coincidence is accounted for by harmonists by the hypothesis of adoption (Jeconiah adopts Shealtiel, Shealtiel adopts Zerubbabel), the later by the hypothesis of a Levirate marriage. Vide Excursus ii. in Farrar's work on Luke (C. G. T.). These solutions satisfy some. Others maintain that they do not meet the difficulties, and that we must be content to see in the two catalogues genealogical attempts which cannot be harmonised, or at least have not yet been.

Vv. 32-34a. From David back to Abraham. The lists of Mt. and Lk. in this part correspond, both being taken, as far as Pharez, from Ruth iv. 18-22.

Vv. 34b-38. From Abraham to Adam. Peculiar to Lk., taken from Gen. xi. 12-26, v. 7-32, as given in the Sept., whence Canaan in ver. 36 (instead of חַבְשָׁן in Gen. xi. 12, in Heb.). It is probable that this part of the genealogy has been added by Lk., and that his interest in it is twofold: (1) universalistic: revealed by running back the genealogy of Jesus to Adam, the father of the human race; (2) the desire to give emphasis to the Divine origin of Jesus, revealed by the final link in the chain: Adam (son) of God. Adam's sonship is conceived of as something unique, inasmuch as, like Jesus, he owed his being, not to a human parent, but to the immediate causality of God. By this extension of the genealogy beyond Abraham, and even beyond Adam up to God, the evangelist has deprived it of all vital significance for the original purpose of such tables: to vindicate the Messianic claims of Jesus by showing Him to be the son of David. The Davidic sonship, it is true, remains, but it cannot be vital to the Messiahship of One who is, in the sense of the Gospel, Son of God. It becomes like the moon when the sun is shining. Lk. was probably aware of this.

This genealogy contains none of those features (references to women, etc.) which lend ethical interest to Mt.'s.

CHAPTER IV. THE TEMPTATION AND BEGINNINGS OF THE MINISTRY.—Vv. 1-13. The Temptation (Mt. iv. 1-11, Mk. i. 12-13). Lk.'s account of the temptation resembles Mt.'s so closely as to suggest a common source. Yet there are points of difference of which a not improbable explanation is editorial solicitude to prevent wrong impressions, and ensure edification in connection with perusal of a narrative relating to a delicate subject: the temptation of the Holy Jesus by the unholy adversary. This solicitude might of course have stamped itself on the source Lk. uses, but it seems preferable to ascribe it to himself.

Ver. 1. δέ: introducing a new theme, closely connected, however, with the baptism, as appears from ἀπὸ τοῦ Ἰορδάνου, the genealogy being treated as a parenthesis.—πλήρης Πνεύματος Ἁ., full of the Spirit, who descended upon Him at the Jordan, and conceived of as abiding on Him and in Him. This phrase is adopted by Lk. to exclude the possibility of evil thoughts in Jesus: no room for them; first example of such editorial solicitude.—ὑπέστρεψεν ἄ. τ. ἴ. Hahn takes this as meaning that Jesus left the Jordan with the intention of returning immediately to Galilee, so that His retirement into the desert was the result of a change of purpose brought about by the influence of the Spirit.

IV. 1. ἸΗΣΟΥΣ δὲ Πνεύματος Ἁγίου πλήρης<sup>1</sup> ὑπέστρεψεν ἀπὸ τοῦ Ἰορδάνου· καὶ ἦγετο ἐν τῷ Πνεύματι εἰς τὴν ἔρημον<sup>2</sup> 2. ἡμέρας τεσσαράκοντα πειραζόμενος ὑπὸ τοῦ διαβόλου. καὶ οὐκ ἔφαγεν οὐδὲν ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις ἐκείναις· καὶ συντελεσθεισῶν αὐτῶν, ὕστερον<sup>3</sup> ἐπέινασε. 3. καὶ εἶπεν<sup>4</sup> αὐτῷ ὁ διάβολος, “Εἰ υἱὸς εἶ τοῦ Θεοῦ, εἰπὲ τῷ λίθῳ τούτῳ ἵνα γένηται ἄρτος.” 4. Καὶ ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς πρὸς αὐτόν, λέγων,<sup>5</sup> “Γέγραπται, “Ὅτι οὐκ ἐπ’ ἄρτῳ μόνῳ ζήσεται ὁ ἄνθρωπος, ἀλλ’ ἐπὶ παντὶ ῥήματι Θεοῦ.”<sup>6</sup> 5. Καὶ ἀναγαγὼν αὐτὸν ὁ διάβολος εἰς ὄρος ὑψηλὸν<sup>7</sup> ἔδειξεν αὐτῷ πάσας τὰς βασιλείας τῆς οἰκουμένης ἐν στιγμῇ χρόνου· 6. καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ ὁ διάβολος, “Σοὶ δώσω τὴν ἐξουσίαν ταύτην ἅπασαν καὶ τὴν δόξαν αὐτῶν· ὅτι

<sup>1</sup> πλήρης before Πν. Αγ. in  $\aleph$ BDL $\Xi$  1, 33 verss. (Tisch., Trg., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> ἐν τῇ ἐρημῳ in  $\aleph$ BDL vet. Lat. (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup>  $\aleph$ BDL vet. Lat. omit.

<sup>4</sup> εἶπεν δε in  $\aleph$ BDL 1, 33.

<sup>5</sup>  $\aleph$ NBL omit λεγων

<sup>6</sup> ἀλλ . . . θεου omitted in  $\aleph$ NBL sah. cop. (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>7</sup> ο διαβ. . . . υψηλον omitted in  $\aleph$ BDL 1 al. (from Mt.).

The words do not in themselves convey this sense, and the idea is intrinsically unlikely. Retirement for reflection after the baptism was likely to be the first impulse of Jesus. Vide on Mt.—ἦγετο: imperfect, implying a continuous process.—ἐν τῷ Πν., in the spirit, suggesting voluntary movement, and excluding the idea of compulsory action of the Spirit on an unwilling subject that might be suggested by the phrases of Mt. and Mk. Vide notes there.—ἐν τῇ ἐρ.: this reading is more suitable to the continued movement implied in ἦγετο than εἰς τὴν ἐ. of T.R.—Ver. 2. ἡμέρας τεσσ.: this is to be taken along with ἦγετο. Jesus wandered about in the desert all that time; the wandering the external index of the absorbing meditation within (Godet).—πειραζόμενος: Lk. refers to the temptation participially, as a mere incident of that forty days' experience, in marked contrast to Mt., who represents temptation as the aim of the retirement (πειρασθῆναι); again guarding against wrong impressions, yet at the same time true to the fact. The present tense of the participle implies that temptation, though incidental, was continuous, going on with increasing intensity all the time.—οὐκ ἔφαγεν οὐδὲν implies absolute abstinence, suggestive of intense preoccupation. There was nothing there to eat, but also no inclination on the part of Jesus.

Vv. 3-4. First temptation.—τῷ λίθῳ τ.: possibly the stone bore a certain resemblance to a loaf. Vide Farrar's note (C. G. T.), in which reference is made to Stanley's account (Sinai and Palestine, p. 154) of "Elijah's melons" found on Mount Carmel, as a sample of the crystallisations found in limestone formations.—Ver. 4. καὶ ἀπεκρίθη, etc.: the answer of Jesus as given by Lk., according to the reading of  $\aleph$ NBL, was limited to the first part of the oracle: man shall not live by bread only; naturally suggesting a contrast between physical bread and the higher food of the soul on which Jesus had been feeding (J. Weiss in Meyer).

Vv. 5-8. Second temptation. Mt.'s third.—καὶ ἀναγαγὼν, without the added εἰς ὄρος ὑψ. of T.R., is an expression Lk. might very well use to obviate the objection: where is the mountain so high that from its summit you could see the whole earth? He might prefer to leave the matter vague = taking Him up who knows how high!—τῆς οἰκουμένης: for Mt.'s τοῦ κόσμου, as in ii. 1.—ἐν στιγμῇ χ., in a point or moment of time (στιγμῇ from στίζω, to prick, whence στίγματα, Gal. vi. 17, here only in N. T.).—Ver. 6. ἐξουσίαν, authority. Vide Acts i. 7, 8, where this word and δύναμις occur, the one signifying authority, the other spiritual power.—ὅτι ἐμοί, etc.: this clause, not in Mt., is probably another instance of Lk.'s editorial solicitude; added to guard against the notion of a rival God with independent possessions and power ἐμοὶ παραδέδοται, καὶ ὧ ἐὰν θέλω δίδωμι αὐτήν· 7. σὺ οὖν ἐὰν προσκυνήσῃς ἐνώπιόν μου, ἔσται σου πάντα.”<sup>1</sup> 8. Καὶ ἀποκριθεὶς αὐτῷ εἶπεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Ὑπαγε ὀπίσω μου, Σαταναῶ<sup>2</sup> γέγραπται γάρ,<sup>3</sup> ‘Προσκυνήσεις Κύριον τὸν Θεόν σου,<sup>4</sup> καὶ αὐτῷ μόνῳ λατρεύσεις.’” 9. Καὶ ἤγαγεν<sup>5</sup> αὐτὸν εἰς Ἱερουσαλήμ, καὶ ἔστησεν αὐτὸν ἐπὶ τὸ πτερύγιον τοῦ ἱεροῦ, καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, “Εἰ ὁ<sup>6</sup> υἱὸς εἶ τοῦ Θεοῦ, βάλε σεαυτὸν ἐντεῦθεν κάτω· 10. γέγραπται γάρ, ‘Ὅτι τοῖς ἀγγέλοις αὐτοῦ ἐντελεῖται περὶ σοῦ, τοῦ διαφυλάξαι σε· 11. καὶ ὅτι ἐπὶ χειρῶν ἀρουσί σε, μήποτε προσκόψῃς πρὸς λίθον τὸν πόδα σου.’” 12. Καὶ ἀποκριθεὶς εἶπεν αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Ὅτι εἴρηται, ‘Οὐκ ἐκπειράσεις Κύριον τὸν Θεόν σου.’” 13. Καὶ συντελέσας πάντα πειρασμὸν ὁ διάβολος ἀπέστη ἀπ’ αὐτοῦ ἄχρι καιροῦ.

14. ΚΑΙ ὑπέστρεψεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐν τῇ δυνάμει τοῦ Πνεύματος εἰς τὴν Γαλιλαίαν· καὶ φήμη ἐξῆλθε καθ’ ὅλης τῆς περιχώρου περὶ αὐτοῦ. 15. καὶ αὐτὸς ἐδίδασκεν ἐν ταῖς συναγωγαῖς αὐτῶν, δοξαζόμενος.

<sup>1</sup> πᾶσα in ΣABDLAΞ.

<sup>2</sup> ὑπαγε . . . Σατ. omitted in ΣBDLΞ 1, 33 al. (from Mt.).

<sup>3</sup> γάρ omitted by the same authorities.

<sup>4</sup> ΣBDL al. have Κυρ. τον θ. σ. προσκ. (W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> ἤγαγεν δε in ΣBLE, which also omit αὐτον after ἐστησεν.

<sup>6</sup> Omit ο ΣABDLAΞ.

From the Jewish point of view, it is true, Satan might quite well say this (J. Weiss-Meyer).—Ver. 7. σὺ, emphatic; Satan hopes that Jesus has been dazzled by the splendid prospect and promise: Θοῦ—all Thine (ἔσται σου πᾶσα).—Ver. 8. ὑπαγε Σαταναῶ is no part of the true text, imported from Mt.; suitable there, not here, as another temptation follows.

Vv. 9-13. Third temptation. Mt.'s second.—Ἱερουσαλήμ, instead of Mt.'s ἀγίαν πόλιν.—ἐντεῦθεν, added by Lk., helping to bring out the situation, suggesting the plunge down from the giddy height.—Vv. 10 and 11 give Satan's quotation much as in Mt., with τοῦ διαφυλάξαι σε added from the Psalm.—Ver. 12 gives Christ's reply exactly as in Mt. The nature of this reply probably explains the inversion of the order of the second and third temptations in Lk. The evangelist judged it fitting that this should be the last word, construing it as an interdict against tempting Jesus the Lord. Lk.'s version of the temptation is characterised throughout by careful restriction of the devil's power (vide vv. 1 and 6). The inversion of the last two temptations is due to the same cause. The old idea of Schleiermacher that the way to Jerusalem lay over the mountains is paltry. It is to be noted that Mt.'s connecting particles (τότε, πάλιν) imply sequence more than Lk.'s (καὶ, δέ). On the general import of the temptation vide on Mt.—Ver. 13. πάντα π., every kind of temptation.—ἄχρι καιροῦ: implying that the same sort of temptations recurred in the experience of Jesus.

Vv. 14-15. Return to Galilee (cf. Mk. i. 14, 28, 39).—Ver. 14. ὑπέστρεψεν, as in ver. 1, frequently used by Lk.—ἐν τῇ δυνάμει τ. Π., in the power of the Spirit; still as full of the Spirit as at the baptism. Spiritual power not weakened by temptation, rather strengthened: post victoriam corroboratus, Bengel.—φήμη (here and in Mt. ix. 26), report, caused by the exercise of the δύναμις, implying a ministry of which no details are here given (so Schanz, Godet, J. Weiss, etc.). Meyer thinks of the fame of the Man who had been baptised with remarkable accompaniments; Hahn of the altered transfigured appearance of Jesus.—Ver. 15. ἐδίδασκεν: summary reference to Christ's preaching ministry in the Galilean synagogues.—αὐτῶν refers to Γαλιλαίαν, ver. 14, and means the

μενος ὑπὸ πάντων. 16. καὶ ἦλθεν εἰς τὴν Ναζαρέτ,<sup>1</sup> οὗ ἦν τεθραμμένος<sup>2</sup>. καὶ εἰσήλθε κατὰ τὸ εἰωθὸς αὐτῷ, ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ τῶν σαββάτων, εἰς τὴν συναγωγὴν, καὶ ἀνέστη ἀναγνῶναι. 17. καὶ ἐπεδόθη αὐτῷ βιβλίον Ἡσαίου τοῦ προφήτου<sup>3</sup>. καὶ ἀναπτύξας<sup>4</sup> τὸ βιβλίον, εὗρε τὸν<sup>5</sup> τόπον οὗ ἦν γεγραμμένον, 18. 'Πνεῦμα Κυρίου ἐπ' ἐμέ· οὐ ἔνεκεν ἔχρισέ με εὐαγγελίζεσθαι<sup>6</sup> πτωχοῖς, ἀπέσταλκέ με ἰάσασθαι τοὺς συντετριμμένους τὴν καρδίαν<sup>7</sup> κηρύξαι αἰχμαλώτοις ἄφεςιν, καὶ τυφλοῖς ἀνάβλεψιν· ἀποστεῖλαι τεθραυσμένους ἐν ἀφέσει·

<sup>1</sup> εἰς Ναζαρ. without την ἸΒDLΞ.

<sup>2</sup> ἸLΞ minusc. have ανατεθ. (Tisch., W.H., marg.).

<sup>3</sup> του προφ. Ισ. in ἸBLΞ 33, 69.

<sup>4</sup> So in ἸDA al. (Tisch.); ανοιξας in BLΞ 33 (W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> Omit τον ἸLΞ 33 (W.H. bracket).

<sup>6</sup> ευαγγελισασθαι in ἸBDLΔΞ al. T.R. in minusc.

<sup>7</sup> ιασασθαι . . . καρδιαν omit ἸBDLΞ 13, 33, 69 (Tisch., Trg., W.H.).

Galileans; construction ad sensum.—δοξαζόμενος: equally summary statement of the result—general admiration. Lk. is hurrying on to the following story, which, though not the first incident in the Galilean ministry (vv. 14 and 15 imply the contrary), is the first he wishes to narrate in detail. He wishes it to serve as the frontispiece of his Gospel, as if to say: ex primo disce omnia. The historic interest in exact sequence is here subordinated to the religious interest in impressive presentation; quite legitimate, due warning being given.

Vv. 16-30. Jesus in Nazareth (Mt. xiii. 53-58, Mk. vi. 1-6a). Though Lk. uses an editorial discretion in the placing of this beautiful story, there need be no suspicion as to the historicity of its main features. The visit of Jesus to His native town, which had a secure place in the common tradition, would be sure to interest Lk. and create desire for further information, which might readily be obtainable from surviving Nazareans, who had been present, even from the brethren of Jesus. We may therefore seek in this frontispiece (Programmstück, J. Weiss) authentic reminiscences of a synagogue address of Jesus.

Vv. 16-21. κατὰ τὸ εἰωθὸς: the reference most probably is, not to the custom of Jesus as a boy during His private life, but to what He had been doing since He began His ministry. He used the synagogue as one of His chief opportunities. (So J. Weiss and Hahn against Bengel, Meyer, Godet, etc.) That Jesus attended the synagogue as a boy and youth goes without saying.—ἀνέστη, stood up, the usual attitude in reading ("both sitting and standing were allowed at the reading of the Book of Esther," Schürer, Div. II., vol. ii., p. 79); either as requested by the president or of His own accord, as a now well-known teacher.—Ver. 17. Ἡσαίου: the second lesson, Haphitarah, was from the prophets; the first, Parashah, from the Law, which was foremost in Rabbinical esteem. Not so in the mind of Jesus. The prophets had the first place in His thoughts, though without prejudice to the Law. No more congenial book than Isaiah (second part especially) could have been placed in His hand. Within the Law He seems to have specially loved Deuteronomy, prophetic in spirit (vide the temptation).—εὗρε τόπον: by choice, or in due course, uncertain which; does not greatly matter. The choice would be characteristic, the order of the day providential as giving Jesus just the text He would delight to speak from. The Law was read continuously, the prophets by free selection (Holtz., H. C.).—Vv. 18, 19 contain the text, Isaiah lxi. 1, 2, free reproduction of the Sept., which freely reproduces the Hebrew, which probably was first read, then turned into Aramaean, then preached on by Jesus, that day. It may have been read from an Aramaean version. Most notable in the quotation is the point at which it stops. In Isaiah after the "acceptable year" comes the "day of vengeance". The clause referring to

19. κηρύξαι ἐναυτὸν Κυρίου δεκτόν.' 20. Καὶ πτύξας τὸ βιβλίον, ἀποδοὺς τῷ ὑπηρέτῃ, ἐκάθισε· καὶ πάντων ἐν τῇ συναγωγῇ οἱ ὀφθαλμοὶ<sup>1</sup> ἦσαν ἀτενίζοντες αὐτῷ. 21. ἤρξατο δὲ λέγειν πρὸς αὐτούς, "Ὅτι σήμερον πεπλήρωται ἡ γραφὴ αὕτη ἐν τοῖς ὠσὶν ὑμῶν." 22. Καὶ πάντες ἐμαρτύρουν αὐτῷ, καὶ ἐθαύμαζον ἐπὶ τοῖς λόγοις τῆς χάριτος, τοῖς ἐκπορευομένοις ἐκ τοῦ στόματος αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἔλεγον, "Οὐχ οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ υἱὸς Ἰωσήφ;" 23. Καὶ εἶπε πρὸς αὐτούς, "Πάντως ἐρεῖτέ μοι τὴν παραβολὴν ταύτην, Ἰατρέ, θεράπευσον σεαυτὸν· ὅσα ἠκούσαμεν γενόμενα ἐν τῇ Καπερναούμ,<sup>3</sup> ποιήσον καὶ ὧδε ἐν τῇ πατρίδι σου." 24. Εἶπε δέ, "Ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι οὐδεὶς προφήτης δεκτός ἐστιν

<sup>1</sup> οἱ οφ. before ἐν τῇ συν. in  $\aleph$ BL 33 (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> ουχι υιος εστιν l. ουτος in  $\aleph$ BL (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> εἰς τὴν K. in  $\aleph$ B; DL εἰς K. without τὴν.

the latter is omitted.—ἀποστείλαι τεθραυσμένους ἐν ἀφέσει (ver. 19) is imported (by Lk. probably) from Is. lviii. 6, the aim being to make the text in all respects a programme for the ministry of Jesus.
Along with that, in the mind of the evangelist, goes the translation of all the categories named—poor, broken-hearted, captives, blind, bruised—from the political to the spiritual sphere. Legitimately, for that was involved in the declaration that the prophecy was fulfilled in Jesus.—Ver. 20. πτύξας, folding, ἀναπτύξας in ver. 17 (T.R.) = unfolding.—ὑπηρέτῃ, the officer of the synagogue; cf. the use of the word in Acts xiii. 5.—ἀτενίζοντες, looking attentively (ἀτενής, intent, from α and τείνω), often in Acts, vide, e.g., xiii. 9.—
Ver. 21. ἤρξατο: we may take what follows either as the gist of the discourse, the theme (De Wette, Godet, Hahn), or as the very words of the opening sentence (Grotius, Bengel, Meyer, Farrar). Such a direct arresting announcement would be true to the manner of Jesus.

Vv. 22-30. The sequel.—Ver. 22. ἐμαρ-τύρουν α., bore witness to Him, not = δοξαζόμενος in ver. 15; the confession was extorted from them by Christ's unde-niable power.—ἐθαύμαζον, not, admired, but, were surprised at (Hahn).—λόγοις τῆς χάριτος, words of grace. Most take χάρις here not in the Pauline sense, but as denoting attractiveness in speech (German, Anmuth), suavitas sermonis (Kypke, with examples from Greek authors, while admitting that χάριτος may be an objective genitive, "sermo de rebus suavis et laetis"). In view of the text on which Jesus preached, and the fact that the Nazareth incident occupies the place of a frontispiece in the Gospel, the religious Pauline sense of χάρις is probably the right one = words about the grace of God whereby the prophetic oracle read was fulfilled. J. Weiss (in Meyer), while taking χάρις = grace of manner, admits that Lk. may have meant it in the other sense, as in Acts xiv. 3, xx. 24. Words of grace, about grace: such was Christ's speech, then and always—that is Lk.'s idea.—οὐχι υἱός, etc.: this fact, familiarity, neutral-ised the effect of all, grace of manner and the gracious message. Cf. Mt. xiii.

55, Mk. vi. 3.—Ver. 23. πάντως, doubtless, of course—παραβολὴν = Hebrew mashal, including proverbs as well as what we call "parables". A proverb in this case.—Ἰατρέ, etc.: the verbal meaning is plain, the point of the parable not so plain, though what follows seems to indicate it distinctly enough = do here, among us, what you have, as we hear, done in Capernaum. This would not exactly amount to a physician healing himself. We must be content with the general idea: every sensible benefactor begins in his immediate surroundings. There is probably a touch of scepticism in the words = we will not believe the reports of your great deeds, unless you do such things here (Hahn). For similar proverbs in other tongues, vide Grotius and Wetstein.
The reference to things done in Caper-naum implies an antecedent ministry there.—Ver. 24. Ἀμὴν: solemnly in-ἐν τῇ πατρίδι αὐτοῦ. 25. ἐπὶ ἀληθείας δὲ λέγω ὑμῖν, πολλαὶ χῆραι ἦσαν ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις Ἡλίου ἐν τῷ Ἰσραὴλ, ὅτε ἐκλείσθη ὁ οὐρανὸς ἐπὶ<sup>1</sup> ἔτη τρία καὶ μῆνας ἕξ, ὡς ἐγένετο λιμὸς μέγας ἐπὶ πᾶσαν τὴν γῆν· 26. καὶ πρὸς οὐδεμίαν αὐτῶν ἐπέμφθη Ἡλίας, εἰ μὴ εἰς Σάρεπτα τῆς Σιδῶνος<sup>2</sup> πρὸς γυναῖκα χήραν. 27. καὶ πολλοὶ λεπροὶ ἦσαν ἐπὶ Ἐλισσαίου τοῦ προφήτου ἐν τῷ Ἰσραὴλ<sup>3</sup>. καὶ οὐδεὶς αὐτῶν ἐκαθαρίσθη, εἰ μὴ Νεεμὰν ὁ Σύρος.” 28. Καὶ ἐπλήσθησαν πάντες θυμοῦ ἐν τῇ συναγωγῇ, ἀκούοντες ταῦτα, 29. καὶ ἀναστάντες ἐξέβαλον αὐτὸν ἔξω τῆς πόλεως, καὶ ἤγαγον αὐτὸν ἕως τῆς<sup>4</sup> ὄφρους τοῦ ὄρους, ἐφ’ οὗ ἡ πόλις αὐτῶν ὑψοκόμετο,<sup>5</sup> εἰς τὸ<sup>6</sup> κατακρημνίσαι αὐτόν· 30. αὐτὸς δὲ διελθὼν διὰ μέσου αὐτῶν<sup>7</sup> ἠπορεύετο.

here only
in N. T.

31. ΚΑΙ κατῆλθεν εἰς Καπερναοὺμ πόλιν τῆς Γαλιλαίας· καὶ ἦν

<sup>1</sup> ἐπι, found in  $\aleph$ CLD al. (Tisch.), is wanting in BD (W.H. text, ἐπι marg.).

<sup>2</sup> Σιδωνίας in  $\aleph$ BCDL 1, 13, 69, 131 al.

<sup>3</sup> ἐν τῷ Ἰσ. before ἐπι ΕΛ. in  $\aleph$ BCDL 1, 13, 33, 69 al.

<sup>4</sup> Omit τῆς  $\aleph$ ABCLD al.

<sup>5</sup> ὑψοκόμετο αὐτῶν in  $\aleph$ BDL 33, altered into the more usual order in T.R.

<sup>6</sup> ὡστε for εἰς το in  $\aleph$ BDL 33 (Tisch., W.H.).

roducing another proverb given in Mt. and Mk. (xiii. 57, vi. 4) in slightly varied form.—δεκτός (vide ver. 19, also Acts x. 35), acceptable, a Pauline word (2 Cor. vi. 2, Phil. iv. 18).—Ver. 25. This verse begins, like ver. 24, with a solemn asseveration. It contains the proper answer to ver. 23. It has been suggested (J. Weiss) that vv. 22 and 24 have been interpolated from Mk. vi. 1-6 in the source Lk. here used.—ἔτη τρία κ. μ. ἕξ, three years and six months. The reference is to 1 Kings xvii. 1, xviii. 1, where three years are mentioned. The recurrence of the same number, three and a half years, in James v. 17 seems to point to a traditional estimate of the period of drought, three and a half, the half of seven, the number symbolic of misfortune (Daniel xii. 7).—Ver. 26. Σάρεπτα, a village lying between Tyre and Sidon = modern Surafend.—Ver. 27. ὁ Σύρος. Naaman and the widow of Sarepta both Gentiles: these references savouring of universalism were welcome to Lk., but there is no reason to suspect that he put them into Christ's mouth. Jesus might have so spoken (vide Mt. viii. 11).—Vv. 28-29. Unsympathetic from the first, the Nazareans, stung by these O. T. references, become indignant. Pagans, not to speak of Capernaum people, better than we: away with Him!

out of the synagogue, nay, out of the town (ἔξω τῆς πόλεως).—ἕως ὄφρους τ. δ., etc., to the eyebrow (supercilium, here only in N. T.) of the hill on which the city was built, implying an elevated point but not necessarily the highest ridge. Kypke remarks: “non summum montis cacumen, sed minor aliquis tumulus sive clivus intelligitur, qui cum monte cohaeret, metaphora a superciliis oculorum desumta, quae in fronte quidem eminent, ipso tamen vertice inferiora sunt”. Nazareth now lies in a cup, built close up to the hill surrounding. Perhaps then it went further up.—ὡστε (εἰς τὸ, T.R.) with infinitive indicating intention and tendency, happily not result.—Ver. 30. αὐτὸς δὲ, but He, emphatic, suggesting a contrast: they infuriated, He calm and self-possessed.—διελθὼν: no miracle intended, but only the marvel of the power always exerted by a tranquil spirit and firm will over human passions.

Vv. 31-37. In Capernaum; the demoniac (Mk. i. 21-28).—κατῆλθεν εἰς Κ. He went down from Nazareth, not from heaven, as suggested in Marcion's Gospel, which began here: “Anno quinto-decimo principatus Tiberiani Deum descendisse in civitatem Galilaeae Capharnaum,” Tertull. c. Marc. iv. 7.—πόλιν τ. Γ.: circumstantially described διδάσκων αὐτοὺς ἐν τοῖς σάββασι. 32. καὶ ἐξεπλήσσοντο ἐπὶ τῇ διδαχῇ αὐτοῦ, ὅτι ἐν ἐξουσίᾳ ἦν ὁ λόγος αὐτοῦ. 33. Καὶ ἐν τῇ συναγωγῇ ἦν ἄνθρωπος ἔχων πνεῦμα δαιμονίου ἀκαθάρτου, καὶ ἀνέκραξε φωνῇ μεγάλῃ. 34. λέγων.<sup>1</sup> "Ἐα, τί ἡμῖν καὶ σοί, Ἰησοῦ Ναζαρηνέ; ἤλθες ἀπολέσαι ἡμᾶς; οἶδά σε τίς εἶ, ὁ ἅγιος τοῦ Θεοῦ." 35. Καὶ ἐπετίμησεν αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, λέγων, "Φιμώθητι, καὶ ἐξελθε ἐξ<sup>2</sup> αὐτοῦ." Καὶ ῥίψαν αὐτὸν τὸ δαιμόνιον εἰς τὸ μέσον ἐξῆλθεν ἀπ' αὐτοῦ, μηδὲν βλάψαν αὐτόν. 36. καὶ ἐγένετο <sup>b</sup>θάμβος ἐπὶ πάντας, καὶ συνελάλουν πρὸς ἀλλήλους, λέγοντες, "Τίς ὁ λόγος οὗτος, ὅτι ἐν ἐξουσίᾳ καὶ δυνάμει ἐπιτάσσει τοῖς ἀκαθάρτοις πνεύμασι, καὶ ἐξέρχονται;" 37. Καὶ ἐξεπορεύετο ἤχος περὶ αὐτοῦ εἰς πάντα τόπον τῆς περιχώρου.

38. Ἀναστὰς δὲ ἐκ<sup>3</sup> τῆς συναγωγῆς, εἰσῆλθεν εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν Σίμωνος· ἡ<sup>4</sup> πενθερὰ δὲ τοῦ Σίμωνος ἦν συνεχομένη πυρετῷ μεγάλῳ· καὶ ἠρώτησαν αὐτὸν περὶ αὐτῆς. 39. καὶ ἐπιστὰς ἐπάνω αὐτῆς, ἐπετίμησε τῷ πυρετῷ, καὶ ἀφῆκεν αὐτήν· παραχρῆμα δὲ ἀναστάσα διηκόνει αὐτοῖς.

40. Δύνοντος δὲ τοῦ ἡλίου, πάντες ὅσοι εἶχον ἀσθενοῦντας νόσους

<sup>1</sup> Omit λεγων ἝBLΞ cop. Orig.

<sup>2</sup> απ in ἝBDLΞ minusc.

<sup>3</sup> απο in ἝBCDLΞ 33 al.

<sup>4</sup> Omit η ἝABDLΞ.

as it is the first mention in Lk.'s own narrative. Yet the description is vague, as if by one far off, for readers in the same position. No mention here of the lake (vide v. 1).—Ver. 32. ἐν ἐξουσίᾳ: no reference to the scribes by way of contrast, as in Mk., whereby the characterisation loses much of its point.—Ver. 33. φωνῇ μεγάλῃ, added by Lk.: in Lk.'s narratives of cures two tendencies appear—(1) to magnify the power displayed, and (2) to emphasise the benevolence. Neither of these is conspicuous in this narrative, though this phrase and ῥίψαν, and μηδὲν βλάψαν αὐτόν in ver. 35, look in the direction of (1).—Ver. 34. εἶα: here only (not genuine in Mk., T.R.) in N. T. = ha! Vulg., sine as if from εἶν; a cry of horror.—Ναζαρηνέ: Lk. usually writes Ναζωραῖε. The use of this form here suggests that he has Mk.'s account lying before him.—Ver. 35. μηδὲν before βλάψαν implies expectation of a contrary result.—Ver. 36. ὁ λόγος οὗτος refers either to the commanding word of Jesus, followed by such astounding results ("quid est hoc verbum?" Vulg.), or = what is this thing? what a surprising affair! ("quid hoc rei est?" Beza, and after him Grotius, De Wette, etc.). In either case Lk.'s version at this point is altogether secondary and colourless as compared with Mk.'s, q. v.—Ver. 37. ἤχος (ἀκοή, Mk.), a sound, report; again in xxi. 25, Acts ii. 2 = ἤχώ in classics.

Vv. 38, 39. Peter's mother-in-law (Mt. viii. 14, 15, Mk. i. 29-31).—Σίμωνος: another anticipation. In Mk. the call of Peter and others to discipleship has been previously narrated. One wonders that Lk. does not follow his example in view of his preface, where the apostles are called eye-witnesses, ἀπ' ἀρχῆς.—ἦν συνεχομένη, etc.: Lk.'s desire to magnify the power comes clearly out here. "The analytic imperfect implies that the fever was chronic, and the verb that it was severe," Farrar (C. G. T.). Then he calls it a great fever: whether using a technical term (fevers classed by physicians as great and small), as many think, or otherwise, as some incline to believe (Hahn, Godet, etc.), in either case taking pains to exclude the idea of a minor feverish attack.—Ver. 39. παραχρῆμα, immediately, another word having the same aim: cured at once, and perfectly; able to serve.

Vv. 40, 41. Sabbath evening cures (Mt. viii. 16, 17, Mk. i. 32-34).—δύνοντος τ. ἡ.: Lk. selects the more important part of Mk.'s dual definition of time.

ποικίλαις ἤγαγον αὐτοὺς πρὸς αὐτόν· ὁ δὲ ἐνὶ ἐκάστῳ αὐτῶν τὰς χεῖρας ἐπιθείς<sup>1</sup> ἐθεράπευσεν<sup>2</sup> αὐτούς. 41. ἐξήρχετο<sup>3</sup> δὲ καὶ δαιμόνια ἀπὸ πολλῶν, κράζοντα<sup>4</sup> καὶ λέγοντα, “Ὅτι σὺ εἶ ὁ Χριστὸς<sup>5</sup> ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ.” Καὶ ἐπιτιμῶν οὐκ εἶα αὐτὰ λαλεῖν, ὅτι ᾗδεισαν τὸν Χριστὸν αὐτὸν εἶναι. 42. Γενομένης δὲ ἡμέρας ἐξεληθῶν ἐπορεύθη εἰς ἔρημον τόπον, καὶ οἱ ὄχλοι ἐζήτησαν<sup>6</sup> αὐτόν, καὶ ἦλθον ἕως αὐτοῦ, καὶ κατείχον αὐτὸν τοῦ μὴ πορεύεσθαι ἀπ’ αὐτῶν. 43. ὁ δὲ εἶπε πρὸς αὐτούς, “Ὅτι καὶ ταῖς ἐτέραις πόλεσιν εὐαγγελίσασθαι με δεῖ τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ· ὅτι εἰς<sup>7</sup> τοῦτο ἀπέσταλμαι,”<sup>8</sup> 44. Καὶ ἦν κηρύσσων ἐν ταῖς συναγωγαῖς<sup>9</sup> τῆς Γαλιλαίας.

<sup>1</sup> ἐπιτιθείς in BDΞ al. (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> ἐθεραπευεν in BD (Tisch., W.H., text).

<sup>3</sup> ἐξήρχοντο in ΞCX 1, 33 (Tisch., W.H., marg.). BD have the sing. (W.H. text)

<sup>4</sup> So in many MSS. (ΞBCL, etc.). DΔ al. κραυγαζοντα (Tisch.).

<sup>5</sup> Omit ο Χριστος ΞBCDLΞ 33 (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>6</sup> ἐπεζητουν in very many uncials (ΞBCDL, etc.).

<sup>7</sup> ἐπι in ΞBL.

<sup>8</sup> ἀπεσταλην in ΞBCDL 33 (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>9</sup> εἰς τὰς συναγωγὰς in ΞBD.

With sunset the Sabbath closed. δύνοντος is present participle of the late form δύνω = δύω.—ἐνὶ ἐκάστῳ: laying His hands on each one, a touch peculiar to Lk., pointing, Godet thinks, to a separate source at Lk.'s command; much more certainly to Lk.'s desire to make prominent the benevolent sympathy of Jesus. Jesus did not heal en masse, but one by one, tender sympathy going out from Him in each case. Intrinsicly probable, and worth noting. This trait in Lk. is in its own way as valuable as Mt.'s citation from Isaiah (viii. 17), and serves the same purpose.—Ver. 41. λέγοντα ὅτι, etc.: Lk. alone notes that the demons, in leaving their victims, bore witness in a despairing cry to the Divine Sonship of Jesus. God's power in this Man, our power doomed. Again a tribute to the miraculous might of Jesus.

Vv. 42-44. Withdrawal from Capernaum (Mk. i. 35-39).—γενομένης ἡμέρας, when it was day, i.e., when people were up and could see Jesus' movements, and accordingly followed Him. In Mk. Jesus departed very early before dawn, when all would be in bed; a kind of flight.—οἱ ὄχλοι: in Mk. Simon and those with him, other disciples. But of disciples Lk. as yet knows nothing.—

ἕως αὐτοῦ, to the place where He was. From the direction in which they had seen Him depart they had no difficulty in finding Him.—κατείχον, they held Him back, from doing what He seemed inclined to do, i.e., from leaving them, with some of their sick still unhealed.—Ver. 43. ὅτι καὶ: the purpose of Jesus is the same in Lk. as in Mk., but differently expressed, in fuller, more developed terms, to preach the good news of the Kingdom of God. Of course all must hear the news; they could not gainsay that.—ἀπεστάλην, I was sent, referring to His Divine mission; in place of Mk.'s ἐξήλθον, referring to the purpose of Jesus in leaving Capernaum. Lk.'s version, compared with Mk.'s, is secondary, and in a different tone. Mk.'s realism is replaced by decorum: what it is fitting to make Jesus do and say. Flight eliminated, and a reference to His Divine mission substituted for an apology for flight. Vide notes on Mk.

CHAPTER V. THE CALL OF PETER. THE LEPER. THE PALSIED MAN. THE CALL OF LEVI. FASTING.—Vv. 1-11. The call of Peter. This narrative, brought in later than the corresponding one in Mk., assumes larger dimensions and an altered character. Peter comes to the front, and the other three named a here only in same sense in

N. T. Cf.
Acts
xxvii. 20.

V. 1. ἜΓΕΝΕΤΟ Δὲ ἐν τῷ τὸν ὄχλον * ἐπικεῖσθαι αὐτῷ τοῦ<sup>1</sup> ἀκούειν τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ αὐτὸς ἦν ἐστῶς παρὰ τὴν λίμνην Γενησαρέτ· 2. καὶ εἶδε δύο πλοῖα<sup>2</sup> ἐστῶτα παρὰ τὴν λίμνην· οἱ δὲ ἀλιεῖς ἀποβάντες ἀπ' αὐτῶν<sup>3</sup> ἀπέπλυναν<sup>4</sup> τὰ δίκτυα. 3. ἐμβὰς δὲ
εἰς ἐν τῶν πλοίων, ὃ ἦν τοῦ<sup>5</sup> Σίμωνος, ἠρώτησεν αὐτὸν ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς ἐπαναγαγεῖν ὀλίγον· καὶ καθίσας<sup>6</sup> ἐδίδασκεν ἐκ τοῦ πλοίου<sup>7</sup> τοὺς ὄχλους. 4. Ὡς δὲ ἐπαύσατο λαλῶν, εἶπε πρὸς τὸν Σίμονα, “Ἐπανάγαγε εἰς τὸ<sup>8</sup> βάθος, καὶ χαλάσατε τὰ δίκτυα ὑμῶν εἰς ἄγρην.” 5. Καὶ ἀποκριθεὶς ὁ<sup>9</sup> Σίμων εἶπεν αὐτῷ,<sup>9</sup> “Ἐπιστάτα, δι' ἄλλης τῆς<sup>10</sup> νυκτὸς κοπιᾶσαντες οὐδὲν ἐλάβομεν· ἐπὶ δὲ τῷ ῥήματι

b here only
in same sense in
N. T.

<sup>1</sup> καὶ for του in ΞABL 1, 131.

<sup>2</sup> B has πλοια δυο (W.H. text). ΞCL 33 al. min. have πλοιαρια (Tisch., W.H., marg.).

<sup>3</sup> απ αυτων αποβαντες in BCDL 33.

<sup>4</sup> επλυναν (-ον) in ΞBCDL.

<sup>5</sup> Omit του ΞBDL.

<sup>6</sup> καθισας δε in ΞBL.

<sup>7</sup> εκ τ. πλ. εδιδασκεν in B (W.H.). ΞD have εν τ. πλ., also before εδιδ. (Tisch.).

<sup>8</sup> Omit ο BLD.

<sup>9</sup> Omit αυτω ΞB, e, cop.

<sup>10</sup> Omit της ΞABL 33.

in Mk., James, John and Andrew, retire into the shade; the last-named, indeed, does not appear in the picture at all. This, doubtless, reflects the relative positions of the four disciples in the public eye in the writer's time, and in the circle for which he wrote. The interest gathered mainly about Peter; Christian people wanted to be told about him, specially about how he became a disciple. That interest had been felt before Lk. wrote, hence the tradition about his call grew ever richer in contents, till it became a lengthy, edifying story. Lk. gives it as he found it. Some think he mixes up the call with the later story told in John xxi. 1-8, and not a few critics find in his account a symbolic representation of Peter's apostolic experience as narrated in the book of Acts. Such mixture and symbolism, if present, had probably found their way into the history before it came into Lk.'s hands. He gives it bonâ fide as the narrative of a real occurrence, which it may quite well be.

Vv. 1-7. ἐπικεῖσθαι. In Mt. and Mk. (iv. 18, i. 16) the call of the four disciples took place when Jesus was walking alone. Here Jesus is surrounded by a crowd who pressed upon Him.—καὶ ἀκούειν, etc., and were hearing the word of God. The crowd, and their eagerness to hear the word of God (phraseology here secondary), serve in the narrative to explain the need of disciples (so Schanz and Hahn).—παρὰ τὴν λίμνην Γ. The position of Jesus in speaking to the crowd was on the margin of the lake; called by Lk. alone λίμνη.—Ver. 2. ἐστῶτα: two boats standing by the lake, not necessarily drawn up on shore, but close to land, so that one on shore could enter them. They had just come in from the fishing, and were without occupants, their owners having come on shore to clean their nets.—Ver. 3. ἐμβὰς: this action of Jesus would be noticed of course, and would bring the owner to His side. It was Simon's boat, the man whose mother-in-law, in Lk.'s narrative, had been healed of fever.—ἐπαναγαγεῖν, to put out to sea, here and in ver. 4 and Mt. xxi. 18 only.—ὀλίγον: just far enough to give command of the audience.—ἐδίδασκεν: this teaching from a boat took place again on the day of the parables (Mt. xiii. 2, Mk. iv. 1). But that feature does not appear in the corresponding narrative of Lk. (viii. 4). Did Peter's call attract that feature from the later occasion in the tradition which Lk. followed?—Ver. 4. εἰς τὸ βάθος, into the deep sea, naturally to be found in the centre, inside the shelving bottom stretching inwards from the shore.—χαλάσατε, plural, after ἐπανάγαγε, singular; the latter addressed to Peter as the master, the former denoting an act in which all in the boat would assist. Bornemann (Scholia) gives instances of similar usage in classics.—ἄγρην, here and in ver. 9 only, in N. T.; in the first place may be used actively = for taking, in the second, passively = for a take. But the latter sense might suit both places. If so used here the word implies a promise (Hahn).—Ver. 5. ἐπιστάτα: Lk.'s name for Jesus as Master, six times; a Greek term for Gentile readers instead of Rabbi = (1) Master, then (2) Teacher, "qui enim magistri doctrinae erant, ii magistri simul vitae esse solebant," Kypke.—ἐπὶ τῷ ῥήματί σου, at Thy word or bidding. Success was doubly improbable: it was day, and in deep water; fish were got at night, and near shore. The order, contrary to probability, tempts to symbolic interpretation: the deep sea the Gentile world; Peter's indirect objection symbol of his reluctance to enter on the Gentile mission, overcome by a special revelation (Acts x.). So Holtz., H. C.—Ver. 6. διερρήσσετο began to break, or were on the point of breaking; on the symbolic theory = the threatened rupture of unity though the success of the Gentile mission (Acts xv.).—Ver. 7. κατένευσαν, they made signs, beckoned, here only in N. T. (ἐνένευον, i. 62); too far to speak perhaps, but fishers would be accustomed to communicate by signs to preserve needful stillness (Schanz).—συλλαβέσθαι αὐτοῖς: this verb with dative occurs in Phil. iv. 3 = to help one.—ὥστε, with infinitive = tendency here, not result.—βυθίζεσθαι, to sink in the deep (βυθός), here only in O. or N. T. in reference to a ship; in 1 Tim. vi. 9 in reference to rich men.

σου χαλάσω τὸ δίκτυον.”<sup>1</sup> 6. Καὶ τοῦτο ποιήσαντες, συνέκλεισαν ἰχθύων πλῆθος<sup>2</sup> πολὺ· διερρήγνυτο δὲ τὸ δίκτυον<sup>3</sup> αὐτῶν, 7. καὶ κατένευσαν τοῖς *μετόχοις τοῖς<sup>4</sup> ἐν τῷ ἐτέρῳ πλοίῳ, τοῦ ἐλθόντας here and several times in Heb. (i. 9 etc.). συλλαβέσθαι αὐτοῖς· καὶ ἦλθον, καὶ ἐπλησαν ἀμφοτέρα τὰ πλοῖα, ὥστε βυθίζεσθαι αὐτά. 8. ἰδὼν δὲ Σίμων Πέτρος προσέπεσε τοῖς γόνασι τοῦ<sup>5</sup> Ἰησοῦ, λέγων, “Ἐξέλθε ἀπ’ ἐμοῦ, ὅτι ἀνὴρ ἀμαρτωλὸς εἰμι, Κύριε.” 9. Θάμβος γὰρ περιέσχεν αὐτὸν καὶ πάντας τοὺς σὺν αὐτῷ, ἐπὶ τῇ ἄγρᾳ τῶν ἰχθύων ἧ<sup>6</sup> συνέλαβον· 10. ὁμοίως δὲ καὶ Ἰάκωβον καὶ Ἰωάννην, υἱοὺς Ζεβεδαίου, οἱ ἦσαν κοινωτοὶ τῷ Σίμωνι. Καὶ εἶπε πρὸς τὸν Σίμωνα ὁ<sup>7</sup> Ἰησοῦς, “Μὴ φοβοῦ· ἀπὸ τοῦ νῦν ἀνθρώπους ἔσῃ ζωγρῶν.” 11. Καὶ καταγαγόντες τὰ πλοῖα ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν, ἀφέντες ἅπαντα, ἠκολούθησαν αὐτῷ.

<sup>1</sup> τα δικτυα in  $\aleph$ BDL.<sup>2</sup> πλῆθος ἰχθυων in  $\aleph$ ABCL. T. R. = D.<sup>3</sup>  $\aleph$ BL have διερησσετο, and  $\aleph$ BDL τα δικτυα (Tisch., W.H., adopt both).<sup>4</sup> Omit τοις  $\aleph$ BDL.<sup>5</sup>  $\aleph$ B al. omit του.<sup>6</sup> ων in BD instead of η (in  $\aleph$ CL).<sup>7</sup> Omit ο BL.

Vv. 8-11. Sequel of the miracle.—Ver. 8. Πέτρος: here for first time introduced without explanation, presumably in connection with the great crisis in his history.—ἀνὴρ ἀμαρτωλός: a natural exclamation especially for an impulsive nature in the circumstances. But the utterance, though real, might have been passed over in the tradition. Why so carefully recorded by Lk.? Perhaps because it was a fitting thing for any man to say on becoming a disciple of the Holy Jesus—the sin of the disciple a foil to the holiness of the Master. Also to supply a justification for the statement in ver. 32, "I came not to call," etc. In this connection sin is ascribed to all the apostles when called, in very exaggerated terms in Ep. Barnab., v. 9 (ὄντας ὑπὲρ πᾶσαν ἀμαρτίαν ἀνομωτέρους).—Ver. 10. Ἰάκωβον καὶ Ἰωάννην, dependent on περιέσχεν: fear encompassed them also, not less than Peter and the rest. This special mention of them is not explained, unless inferentially in what follows.—μὴ φοβοῦ, fear not, addressed to Peter alone. He alone, so far as appears, is to become a fisher of men, but the other two are named, presumably, because meant to be included, and in matter of fact they as well as Simon abandon all and follow Jesus (ver. 11).—ζωγρῶν: the verb means to take alive, then generally to take; here and in 2 Tim. ii. 26. The analytic form (ἔσῃ ζωγρῶν) implies permanent occupation = thou shalt be a taker.—Ver. 11. καταγαγόντες τ. πλ.,

12. ΚΑΙ ἐγένετο ἐν τῷ εἶναι αὐτὸν ἐν μιᾷ τῶν πόλεων, καὶ ἰδοῦ, ἀνὴρ πλήρης λέπρας· καὶ ἰδὼν<sup>1</sup> τὸν Ἰησοῦν, πεσὼν ἐπὶ πρόσωπον, εἰσέειπεν αὐτοῦ, λέγων, “Κύριε, ἐὰν θέλῃς, δύνασαι με καθαρίσαι.” 13. Καὶ ἐκτείνας τὴν χεῖρα, ἤψατο αὐτοῦ, εἰπών,<sup>2</sup> “Θέλω, καθαρῶσθητι.” Καὶ εὐθέως ἡ λέπρα ἀπῆλθεν ἀπ’ αὐτοῦ. 14. καὶ αὐτὸς παρήγγειλεν αὐτῷ μηδεὶ εἰπεῖν· “ἀλλὰ ἀπελθὼν δεῖξον σεαυτὸν τῷ ἱερεῖ, καὶ προσένεγκε περὶ τοῦ καθαρισμοῦ σου, καθὼς προσέταξε Μωσῆς, εἰς μαρτύριον αὐτοῖς.” 15. Διήρχετο δὲ μᾶλλον ὁ λόγος περὶ αὐτοῦ· καὶ συνήρχοντο ὄχλοι πολλοὶ ἀκούειν, καὶ θεραπεύεσθαι ὑπ’ αὐτοῦ<sup>3</sup> ἀπὸ τῶν ἀσθενειῶν αὐτῶν· 16. αὐτὸς δὲ ἦν ὑποχωρῶν ἐν ταῖς ἐρήμοις, καὶ προσευχόμενος.

17. Καὶ ἐγένετο ἐν μιᾷ τῶν ἡμερῶν, καὶ αὐτὸς ἦν διδάσκων· καὶ ἦσαν καθήμενοι Φαρισαῖοι καὶ νομοδιδάσκαλοι, οἳ ἦσαν ἐλληλυθότες ἐκ πάσης κόμης τῆς Γαλιλαίας καὶ Ἰουδαίας καὶ Ἰερουσαλήμ· καὶ δύναμις Κυρίου ἦν εἰς τὸ ἰᾶσθαι αὐτούς.<sup>4</sup> 18. καὶ ἰδοῦ, ἄνδρες φέροντες ἐπὶ κλίνης ἄνθρωπον ὃς ἦν παραλελυμένος, καὶ ἐζήτουν

<sup>1</sup> ἰδων δε in ΞB, e, cop.

<sup>2</sup> λεγων in ΞBCDL 33 al.

<sup>3</sup> Omit υπ αυτου ΞBCDL minusc.

<sup>4</sup> αυτον in ΞBLE aeth. (Tisch., W.H.), not understood, hence corrected into αυτους (T.R.).

drawing up their ships on land; that work done for ever. Chiefly in Lk. and Acts.

Vv. 12-16. The leper (Mt. viii. 1-4, Mk. i. 40-45).—Ver. 12. ἐν μιᾷ τ. π. for ἐν τινι, one of the cities or towns of Galilee in which Jesus had been preaching (Mk. i. 39 Lk. iv. 44).—καὶ ἰδοῦ, after καὶ ἐγένετο, very Hebraistic.—πλήρης λέπρας, full of leprosy (λεπρὸς in parallels). Note here again the desire to magnify the miracle.—ἐὰν θέλῃς, etc., the man's words the same in all three narratives. His doubt was as to the will not the power to heal.—Ver. 13. ἤψατο: this also in all three—a cardinal point; the touch the practical proof of the will and the sympathy. No shrinking from the loathsome disease.—ἡ λέπρα ἀπῆλθεν: Lk. takes one of Mk.'s two phrases, Mt. the other. Lk. takes the one which most clearly implies a cure; καθαρίσθη (Mt.) might conceivably mean: became technically clean.—Ver. 14. ἀλλὰ, etc.: here the oratio indirecta passes into or. directa as in Acts i. 4, xiv. 22, etc.—τῷ ἱερεῖ, to the priest; not necessarily in Jerusalem, but to the priest in the province whose business it was to attend to such duties (Hahn).—Ver. 15. ἀκούειν, to hear, but not the word as in ver. 1, rather to hear about the wonderful Healer and to get healing for themselves (θεραπεύεσθαι).—Ver. 16. To retirement mentioned in Mk. Lk. adds prayer (προσευχόμενος); frequent reference to this in Lk.

Vv. 17-26. The paralytic (Mt. ix. 1-8, Mk. ii. 1-12).—Ver. 17. ἐν μιᾷ τῶν ἡμερῶν, a phrase as vague as a note of time as that in ver. 12 as a note of place.—καὶ αὐτὸς, etc., and He was teaching; the Hebraistic paratactic construction so common in Lk. Note καὶ ἦσαν and καὶ δύναμις Κ. ἦν following.—νομοδιδάσκαλοι, teachers of the law, Lk.'s equivalent for γραμματεῖς. The Pharisees and lawyers appear here for the first time in Lk., and they appear in force—a large gathering from every village of Galilee, from Judaea, and from Jerusalem. Jesus had preached in the synagogues of Galilee where the scribes might have an opportunity of hearing Him. But this extensive gathering of these classes at this time is not accounted for fully in Lk. Not till later does such a gathering occur in Mk. (iii. 22).—αὐτόν, the reading in ΞBL gives quite a good sense; it is accusative before ἰᾶσθαι = the power of the Lord (God) was present to the effect or intent that He (Jesus) should heal.—Ver. 18. παραλελυμένος, instead of παραλυτικός αὐτὸν εἰσενεγκεῖν καὶ θείναι ἐνώπιον αὐτοῦ· 19. καὶ μὴ εὐρόντες διὰ<sup>1</sup> ποίας εἰσενεγκῶσιν αὐτὸν διὰ τὸν ὄχλον, ἀναβάντες ἐπὶ τὸ δῶμα, διὰ τῶν κεράμων καθήκαν αὐτὸν σὺν τῷ κλινιδίῳ εἰς τὸ μέσον ἔμπροσθεν τοῦ Ἰησοῦ. 20. καὶ ἰδὼν τὴν πίστιν αὐτῶν, εἶπεν αὐτῷ,<sup>2</sup> “Ἄνθρωπε, ἀφέωνταί σοι αἱ ἁμαρτίαι σου.” 21. Καὶ ἤρξαντο διαλογίζεσθαι οἱ γραμματεῖς καὶ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι, λέγοντες, “Τίς ἐστὶν οὗτος ὃς λαλεῖ βλασφημίας; τίς δύναται ἀφιέναι ἁμαρτίας,<sup>3</sup> εἰ μὴ ὁ μόνος ὁ Θεός;” 22. Ἐπιγνοὺς δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς τοὺς διαλογισμοὺς αὐτῶν ἀποκριθεὶς εἶπε πρὸς αὐτούς, “Τί διαλογίζεσθε ἐν ταῖς καρδίαις ὑμῶν; 23. τί ἐστὶν εὐκοπώτερον, εἰπεῖν, Ἀφέωνταί σοι αἱ ἁμαρτίαι σου, ἢ εἰπεῖν, Ἐγειραι<sup>4</sup> καὶ περιπάτει; 24. ἵνα δὲ εἰδῆτε ὅτι ἐξουσίαν ἔχει ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου<sup>5</sup> ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς ἀφιέναι ἁμαρτίας,” εἶπε τῷ παραλελυμένῳ, “Σοὶ λέγω, ἔγειραι,<sup>6</sup> καὶ ἄρας τὸ κλινιδίόν σου, πορεύου εἰς τὸν οἶκόν σου.” 25. Καὶ παραχρῆμα ἀναστὰς ἐνώπιον αὐτῶν, ἄρας ἐφ’ ᾧ<sup>7</sup> κατέκειτο, ἀπῆλθεν εἰς τὸν οἶκον αὐτοῦ, δοξάζων τὸν Θεόν. 26. καὶ ἔκστασις ἔλαβεν ἅπαντας, καὶ ἐδόξαζον τὸν Θεόν, καὶ ἐπλήσθησαν φόβου, λέγοντες, “Ὅτι εἶδομεν παράδοξα σήμερον.”

<sup>1</sup> δια omitted in all uncials.

<sup>2</sup> ΝΒΛΞ 33 omit αὐτῷ.

<sup>3</sup> αμαρ. αφιεναι in BDΞ.

<sup>4</sup> εγειρει in ΝΑΒCΔLΞ.

<sup>5</sup> ο υ. τ. αν. εξουσιαν εχει in BLΞ (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>6</sup> εγειρει here again in many MSS.

<sup>7</sup> εφ ο in ΝΑΒCΔLΞ al.

in the parallels, the former more in use among physicians, and the more classical.—ἐξήτουν, imperfect, implying difficulty in finding access, due, one might think, to the great numbers of Pharisees and lawyers present, no mention having as yet been made of any others. But the ὄχλος comes in in next verse.—Ver. 19. ποίας (διὰ ποίας ὁδοῦ), by what way.—σ. τ. κλινιδίῳ: dim. of κλίνη (ver. 18, here only in N. T.). Lk. avoids Mk.'s κράββατος, though apparently following him as to the substance of the story.—Ver. 20. ἄνθρωπε, man, instead of Mk.'s more kindly τέκνον and Mt.'s still more sympathetic θάρσει τέκνον; because (suggests J. Weiss) it was not deemed fitting that such a sinner should be addressed as son or child! This from Lk., the evangelist of grace! The substitution, from whatever reason proceeding, is certainly not an improvement. Possibly Lk. had a version of the story before him which used that word. Doubtless Jesus employed the kinder expression.—Ver. 21. διαλογίζεσθαι: Lk. omits the qualifying phrases ἐν ἑαυτοῖς, ἐν ταῖς καρδίαις of Mt. and

Mk., leaving it doubtful whether they spoke out or merely thought.—λέγοντες does not settle the point, as it merely indicates to what effect they reasoned.—Ver. 22. The expression “in your hearts” coming in here suggests that Lk. may have omitted it in ver. 21 merely to avoid repetition.—Ver. 24. ἔγειρε καὶ ἄρας . . . πορεύου: by introducing the participle ἄρας Lk. improves the style as compared with Mk., but weakens the force of the utterance, “arise, take up thy bed and go”. The same remark applies to the words of the scribes, ver. 21, “who is this that speaketh blasphemies?” compared with, “why doth this person speak thus? He blasphemeth.” Lk.'s is secondary, the style of an editor working over a rugged, graphic, realistic text.—Ver. 25. παραχρῆμα (παρὰ τὸ χρῆμα), on the spot, instantly; in Lk. only, magnifying the miracle.—Ver. 26. ἔκστασις might be taken out of Mk.'s ἐξίστασθαι.—παράδοξα. Each evangelist expresses the comments of the people in different terms. All three may be right, and not one of them may give the ipsissima

27. Καὶ μετὰ ταῦτα ἐξῆλθε, καὶ ἐθεάσατο τελώνην, ὀνόματι Λευὴν, καθήμενον ἐπὶ τὸ τελώνιον, καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, “Ἀκολούθει μοι.”
 28. Καὶ καταλιπὼν ἅπαντα, ἀναστὰς ἠκολούθησεν<sup>1</sup> αὐτῷ. 29. Καὶ ἐποίησε δοχὴν μεγάλην ὃ<sup>2</sup> Λευὴς αὐτῷ ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ αὐτοῦ· καὶ ἦν ὄχλος τελωνῶν πολὺς,<sup>3</sup> καὶ ἄλλων οἳ ἦσαν μετ’ αὐτῶν κατακέεμενοι.
 30. καὶ ἐγόγγυζον οἱ γραμματεῖς αὐτῶν καὶ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι<sup>4</sup> πρὸς τοὺς μαθητὰς αὐτοῦ, λέγοντες, “Διατί μετὰ τελωνῶν καὶ ἁμαρτωλῶν ἐσθίετε καὶ πίνετε;” 31. Καὶ ἀποκριθεὶς ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπε πρὸς αὐτοὺς, “Οὐ χρεῖαν ἔχουσιν οἱ ὑγιαίνοντες ἰατροῦ, ἀλλ’ οἱ κακῶς ἔχοντες. 32. οὐκ ἐλήλυθα καλέσαι δικαίους, ἀλλὰ ἁμαρτωλοὺς εἰς

<sup>1</sup> ἠκολουθεῖ in BDLΞ 69, a.

<sup>2</sup> Omit ο all uncials.

<sup>3</sup> πολὺς before τελ. in ΞBCDLΞ 33 al.

<sup>4</sup> οἱ Φαρ. καὶ οἱ γρ. αὐτῶν in ABCLΔΞ al. T.R. = ΞD.

verba. Lk.'s version is: We have seen unexpected things to-day. Here only in N. T.

Vv. 27-32. Call of Levi (Mt. ix. 9-13, Mk. ii. 13-17).—Ver. 27. ἐθεάσατο, instead of εἶδεν. Hahn, appealing to John i. 14, iv. 35, xi. 45, assigns to it the meaning, to look with interest, to let the eye rest on with complacency. But it is doubtful whether in later usage it meant more than to look in order to observe. If the view stated in Mt. on the so-called Matthew's feast (q.v.) be correct, Jesus was on the outlook for a man to assist Him in the Capernaum mission to the publicans.—ἐπὶ τὸ τελώνιον, at "the tolbothe," Wyclif. The tolls collected by Levi may have been either on highway traffic, or on the traffic across the lake. Mk.'s παράγων (ver. 14) coming after the reference to the sea (ver. 13) points to the latter.—Ver. 28. καταλιπὼν ἅπαντα, leaving all behind, in Lk. only; a speciality of the ebionitically inclined evangelist, thinks J. Weiss (in Meyer). But it merely predicates of Levi what all three evangelists predicate of Peter and his comrades.—Ver. 29. δοχὴν (from δέχομαι here and in xiv. 13), a reception, a feast, in Sept. for ΠΙΠΨΩ (Gen.

xxvi. 30, Esther i. 3). That Mt. made a feast is directly stated only by Lk., perhaps as an inference from the phrases in Mk. which imply it: κατακείσθαι, συνανέκειντο (ver. 15), ἐσθίει καὶ πίνει (ver. 16). That it was a great feast is inferred from πολλοὶ in reference to the number present. The expressions of the evangelists force us to conceive of the gathering as exceeding the dimensions of a private entertainment—a congregation rather, in the court, to eat and to hear the gospel of the kingdom. Possibly none of the evangelists realised the full significance of the meeting, though Lk. by the expression ὄχλος πολὺς shows that he conceived of it as very large.—ἄλλων stands for ἁμαρτωλῶν, which Lk. does not care to use when speaking for himself of the class, preferring the vague word "others". They were probably a very nondescript class, the "submerged tenth" of Capernaum.—Ver. 30. οἱ Φαρισαῖοι καὶ οἱ γραμ. αὐτῶν, the Pharisees, and the scribes connected with them, the professional men of the party. They were not of course guests, but they might if they chose look in: no privacy on such occasions in the East; or they might watch the strange company as they dispersed.—ἐσθίετε καὶ πίνετε: addressed to the disciples. In the parallels the question refers to the conduct of Jesus though put to the disciples.—Ver. 31. Jesus replies, understanding that it is He who is put on His defence. His reply is given in identical terms in all three Synoptics; a remarkable logion carefully preserved in the tradition.—Ver. 32. εἰς μετάνοιαν: doubtless a gloss of Lk.'s or of a tradition he used, defining and guarding the saying, but also limiting its scope.—καλέσαι is to be understood in a festive sense = I came to call sinners to the feast of the Kingdom, as I have called to this feast the "sinners" of Capernaum.

Vv. 33-39. Fasting (Mt. ix. 14-17, Mk. ii. 18-22).—Ver. 33. οἳ δὲ connects what follows with what goes before as a continuation of the same story. Not so in Mk.: connection there simply topical.

Parable of the Tares among the Wheat

The purpose of parables- "To you has been given the mystery of the Kingdom of heaven.

Many of the parables deal with the Kingdom of Heaven, or ~~xxx~~ Luke and ~~xxx~~ refer to: Kingdom of God.

This parable compares the incident described to the Kingdom of God, so it is in place that we look at the start, at what the Kingdom is.

All Gospels agree, that the Kingdom is the starting point of Jesus's preaching and teaching. John Baptist prepared.. by announcing its arrival.

The expression Kingdom of God comes from OT and means not a terrestrial territory over which God is sovereign--not a country or a territory. Nor is a people primarily in view--but rather it is the active exercise of God's kingly nature which is meant.

Not static, but an active process whereby God's kingly nature is given its proper place.

Now when Jesus came, he announced that this was being realized, as never before.

This parable is meant to illustrate what will result with the realization or inauguration of God's reign.

The point of the parable is directed to the mind-set of one of Christ's ~~xxxxxxx~~ disciples, namely, Simon the Zealot.

The mind-set of this man, and the class he represents was that when Messiah would come he would ~~xxxxx~~ bring in the Kingdom and pur μετάνοιαν." 33. Οἱ δὲ εἶπον πρὸς αὐτόν, "Διατί<sup>1</sup> οἱ μαθηταὶ Ἰωάννου νηστεύουσι πυκνά, καὶ δεήσεις ποιοῦνται, ὁμοίως καὶ οἱ τῶν Φαρισαίων· οἱ δὲ σοὶ ἐσθίουσι καὶ πίνουσιν;" 34. Ὁ δὲ<sup>2</sup> εἶπε πρὸς αὐτούς, "Μὴ δύνασθε τοὺς υἰοὺς τοῦ νυμφώνος, ἐν ᾧ ὁ νυμφίος μετ' αὐτῶν ἐστί, ποιῆσαι νηστεύειν<sup>3</sup>; 35. ἐλεύσονται δὲ ἡμέραι, καὶ ὅταν ἀπαρθῇ ἀπ' αὐτῶν ὁ νυμφίος, τότε νηστεύουσιν ἐν ἐκείναις ταῖς ἡμέραις." 36. Ἐλεγε δὲ καὶ παραβολὴν πρὸς αὐτούς, "Ὅτι οὐδεὶς ἐπίβλημα ἱματίου καινοῦ<sup>4</sup> ἐπιβάλλει ἐπὶ ἱμάτιον παλαιόν· εἰ δὲ μήγε, καὶ τὸ καιρὸν σχίζει,<sup>5</sup> καὶ τῷ παλαιῷ οὐ συμφωνεῖ<sup>6</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Omit διατι BL<sup>Ξ</sup> 33 cop.

<sup>2</sup> Add Ἰησους  $\aleph$ BCDL<sup>Ξ</sup> 33.

<sup>3</sup> νηστευσαι in B<sup>Ξ</sup> 28 (Tisch., W.H.). T.R. =  $\aleph$ ACDL<sup>Δ</sup> al.

<sup>4</sup> For ἱμ. καινου  $\aleph$ BDL<sup>Ξ</sup> 33 al. have απο ἱμ. κ. σχισας (Tisch., W.H.). AC<sup>Δ</sup> al. omit σχισας.

<sup>5</sup> σχισει in  $\aleph$ BCDL 33.

<sup>6</sup> συμφωνησει in  $\aleph$ ABCDLX 33 and many other minusc.

The supposed speakers are the Pharisees and scribes (ver. 30). In Mk. Phar. and John's disciples. In Mt. the latter only. If the Pharisees and scribes were the spokesmen, their putting John's disciples first in stating the common practice would be a matter of policy = John held in respect by Jesus, why then differ even from him?—πυκνά (neuter plural, from πυκνός, dense), frequently.—δεήσεις ποιοῦνται, make prayers, on system; added to complete the picture of an ascetic life; cf. ii. 37; referred to again in xi. 1; probably the question really concerned only fasting, hence omitted in the description of the life of the Jesus-circle even in Lk.—ἐσθίουσιν καὶ πίνουσιν, eat and drink; on the days when we fast, making no distinction of days.—Ver. 34. μὴ δύνασθε . . . ποιῆσαι νηστ., can ye make them fast? In Mt. and Mk., can they fast? Lk.'s form of the question points to the futility of prescriptions in the circumstances. The Master could not make His disciples fast even if He wished.—Ver. 35. καὶ ὅταν: Mt. and Mk. place the καὶ before τότε in the next clause. Lk.'s arrangement throws more emphasis on ἡμέραι: there will come days, and when, etc. The καὶ may be explicative (= et quidem, Bornemann), or it may introduce the apodosis.—ὅταν ἀπαρθῇ, the subjunctive with ἂν in a relative clause referring to a probable future event.

Vv. 36-39. Relative parabolic Logia.—ἔλεγε . . . ὅτι: an editorial introduction to the parabolic sayings. The first of these, as given by Lk., varies in form from the version in the parallels, suggests somewhat different ideas, and is in itself by no means clear. Much depends on whether we omit or retain σχίσας in the first clause. If, with  $\aleph$ BDL, we retain it, the case put is: a piece cut out of a new garment to patch an old one, the evil results being: the new spoiled, and the old patched with the new piece presenting an incongruous appearance (οὐ συμφωνήσει). If, with AC, etc., we omit σχίσας, the case put may be: a new piece not cut out of a new garment, but a remnant (Hahn) used to patch an old, this new piece making a rent in the old garment; τὸ καινὸν in second clause not object of, but nominative to, σχίσει, and the contrast between the new patch and old garment presenting a grotesque appearance. The objection to this latter view is that there is no reason in the case supposed why the new patch should make a rent. In Mt. and Mk. the patch is made with unfulled cloth, which will contract. But the remnant of cloth with which a new garment is made would not be unfulled, and it would not contract. The sole evil in that case would be a piebald appearance. On the whole it seems best to retain σχίσας, and to render τὸ καινὸν σχίσει, he (the man who does so foolish a thing) will rend the new. Kypke suggests as an alternative rendering: the new is rent, taking σχίζει intransitively, of which use he cites an instance from the Testament of the twelve patriarchs. The sense on this rendering remains the same.—Ver. 37. The tradition of the second logion seems to have come down to Lk.'s time without variation; at all events he gives

ἐπίβλημα τὸ ἀπὸ τοῦ καινοῦ. 37. καὶ οὐδεὶς βάλλει οἶνον νέον εἰς ἀσκοῦς παλαιούς· εἰ δὲ μήγε, ῥήξει ὁ νέος οἶνος<sup>1</sup> τοὺς ἀσκοῦς, καὶ αὐτὸς ἐκχυθήσεται, καὶ οἱ ἀσκοὶ ἀπολοῦνται· 38. ἀλλὰ οἶνον νέον εἰς ἀσκοῦς καινοὺς βλητέον, καὶ ἀμφότεροι συντηροῦνται.<sup>2</sup> 39. καὶ οὐδεὶς πῶν παλαιὸν εὐθέως<sup>3</sup> θέλει νέον· λέγει γάρ, 'Ὁ παλαιὸς χρηστότερός<sup>4</sup> ἐστιν.'

<sup>1</sup> ο οἶνος ο νέος in BCDL al.

<sup>2</sup> καὶ ἀμφ. συντηρ. omitted in ΞBL I, 33 al. cop. (Tisch., W.H.); an addition from Mt.

<sup>3</sup> Omit εὐθέως ΞBCL minusc. cop.

<sup>4</sup> χρηστός in ΞBL cop. D and some western codd. of vet. Lat. omit this verse.

it substantially as in parallels. The difficulty connected with this parabolic word is not critical or exegetical, but scientific. The question has been raised: could even new, tough skins stand the process of fermentation? and the suggestion made that Jesus was not thinking at all of fermented, intoxicating wine, but of "must," a non-intoxicating beverage, which could be kept safely in new leather bottles, but not in old skins, which had previously contained ordinary wine, because particles of albuminoid matter adhering to the skin would set up fermentation and develop gas with an enormous pressure. On this vide Farrar (C. G. T., Excursus, III.).—Ver. 38 gives the positive side of the truth answering to Mt. ix. 17b, only substituting the verbal adjective βλητέον for βάλλουσιν.—Ver. 39. The thought in this verse is peculiar to Lk. It seems to be a genial apology for conservatism in religion, with tacit reference to John and his disciples, whom Jesus would always treat with consideration. They loved the old wine of Jewish piety, and did not care for new ways. They found it good (χρηστός), so good that they did not wish even to taste any other, and could therefore make no comparisons. (Hence χρηστός preferable to χρηστότερος in T. R.) This saying is every way worthy of Christ, and it was probably one of Lk.'s finds in his pious quest for traditions of the Personal Ministry.

With reference to the foregoing parabolic words, drawn from vesture and wine, Hahn truly remarks that they would be naturally suggested through association of ideas by the figure of a wedding feast going before. Bengel hints at the same thought: "parabolam a veste, a vino; inprimis opportunam convivio".

CHAPTER VI. SABBATIC CONFLICTS. THE APOSTLES. THE SERMON ON THE MOUNT.—Vv. 1-5. The ears of corn (Mt. xii. 1-8, Mk. ii. 23-28).—ἐν σαββάτῳ: Mk. makes no attempt to locate this incident in his history beyond indicating that it happened on Sabbath. Mt. uses a phrase which naturally suggests temporal sequence, but to which in view of what goes before one can attach no definite meaning. Lk. on the other hand would seem to be aiming at very great precision if the adjective qualifying σαββάτῳ—δευτεροπρώτῳ, were genuine. But it is omitted in the important group ΞBL, and in other good documents, and this fact, combined with the extreme unlikelihood of Lk.'s using a word to which it is now, and must always have been, impossible to attach any definite sense, makes it highly probable that this word is simply a marginal gloss, which found its way, like many others, into the text. How the gloss arose, and what it meant for its author or authors, it is really not worth while trying to conjecture, though such attempts have been made. Vide Tischendorf, N. T., ed. viii., for the critical history of the word.—ἤσθιον, ate, indicating the purpose of the plucking, with Mt. Mk. omits this, vide notes there.—ψάροντες τ. χ., rubbing with their hands; peculiar to Lk., indicating his idea of the fault (or that of the tradition he followed); rubbing was threshing on a small scale, an offence against one of the many minor rules for Sabbath observance. This word occurs here only in N. T., and is not classical.—Ver. 2. τινές: more exact than Mt. and Mk., who say the Pharisees generally, but not necessary to make their meaning clear. Of course it was only some of the class.—Ver. 3. οὐδὲ, for Mk.'s οὐδέποτε and

VI. 1. ἘΓΕΝΕΤΟ δὲ ἐν σαββάτῳ δευτεροπρώτῳ<sup>1</sup> διαπορεύεσθαι αὐτὸν διὰ τῶν<sup>2</sup> σπορίμων· καὶ ἔτιλλον οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ τοὺς στάχυας, καὶ ἤσθιον,<sup>3</sup> ψώχοντες ταῖς χερσί. 2. τινὲς δὲ τῶν Φαρισαίων εἶπον αὐτοῖς,<sup>4</sup> “Τί ποιεῖτε ὃ οὐκ ἔξεστι ποιεῖν ἐν<sup>5</sup> τοῖς σάββασι;” 3. Καὶ ἀποκριθεὶς πρὸς αὐτοὺς εἶπεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Οὐδὲ τοῦτο ἀνέγνωτε, ὃ ἐποίησε Δαβὶδ, ὅποτε<sup>6</sup> ἐπεινάσεν αὐτὸς καὶ οἱ μετ’ αὐτοῦ ὄντες<sup>7</sup>; 4. ὡς<sup>8</sup> εἰσῆλθεν εἰς τὸν οἶκον τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ τοὺς ἄρτους τῆς προθέσεως ἔλαβε, καὶ<sup>9</sup> ἔφαγε, καὶ ἔδωκε καὶ<sup>9</sup> τοῖς μετ’ αὐτοῦ, οὓς οὐκ ἔξεστι φαγεῖν εἰ μὴ μόνους τοὺς ἱερεῖς;” 5. Καὶ ἔλεγεν αὐτοῖς, “Ὅτι<sup>10</sup> κύριός ἐστιν ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου καὶ τοῦ σαββάτου.”<sup>11</sup>

<sup>1</sup> NBL 33 al. omit δευτεροπρωτω. Vide below.

<sup>2</sup> NBL al. omit των (from parall.).

<sup>3</sup> καὶ ἠσθιον τοὺς σταχυας in BCL (W.H.; Tisch.=T.R. with N).

<sup>4</sup> Omit αυτοις NBCL minusc. a, c, e, cop.

<sup>5</sup> B omits ποιεῖν, and NBL omit ἐν (W.H. omit both).

<sup>6</sup> ὅτε in NBCLD minusc. (W.H.; Tisch. has ὅποτε with less weighty witnesses, vide below).

<sup>7</sup> Omit ὄντες with NBDL 33 al. (W.H.).

<sup>8</sup> B omits ὡς (W.H. in brackets), D also, reading εἰσελθων.

<sup>9</sup> For ἔλαβε καὶ BCLX 33 have λαβων, and BL omit καὶ after ἔδωκε.

<sup>10</sup> NB 1, 131 aeth. omit ὅτι (W.H.).

<sup>11</sup> του σαβ., without καὶ, before ο υ τ. αν. in NB cop. aeth. (W.H.). DL = T.R. (Tisch.).

Mt.'s οὐκ = not even; have ye so little understood the spirit of the O. T.? (De Wette). The word might be analysed into οὐ, δὲ, when it will mean: but have ye not then read this? So Hofmann, Nösgen, Hahn.—ὅποτε, here only in N. T., if even here, for many good MSS. have ὅτε (W.H.).—Ver. 4. Lk. contents himself with the essential fact: hunger, overruling a positive law concerning the shewbread. No reference to the high priest, as in Mk., and no additional instance of the Sabbath law superseded by higher interests, as in Mt. (xii. 5). The controversy no longer lives for him, and his accounts are apt to be colourless and secondary.—Ver. 5. καὶ ἔλεγεν: in Lk. this important logion about the Son of Man's Lordship over the Sabbath is simply an external annex to what goes before = and He said: instead of arising out of and crowning the argument, as in Mt., and partly in Mk., though the latter uses the same phrase in introducing the logion peculiar to him about the Sabbath being made for man. If Lk. had Mk. before him, how could he omit so important a word? Perhaps because it involved a controversial antithesis not easily intelligible to Gentiles, and because the Lordship of the Son of Man covered all in his view. How did he and his readers understand that Lordship?

Vv. 6-11. The withered hand (Mt. xii. 9-14, Mk. iii. 1-6).—Ver. 6. ἐν ἑτέρῳ σαββάτῳ: simply intended to indicate that the following incident, like the one going before, happened on a Sabbath. Observe Lk. uses here, as in vi. 1, 5, the singular for the Sabbath.—τὴν συν.: the article here might point to a particular synagogue, as in Mt., or be generic.—διδάσκειν, present, εἰσελθεῖν, aorist: the entering an act, the preaching continuous. He was preaching when the following happened.—καὶ ἡ χεῖρ: by comparison with Mt. and Mk. Lk. is here paratactic and Hebraistic in construction. But Palairer, against Grotius emphasising the Hebraism, cites from Aelian, Hist. Anim. (lib. xii., c. 24): ἐν τῇ θαλάττῃ τῇ Ἐρυθρᾷ ἰχθύς γίνεται, καὶ ὄνομα αὐτῷ ὑγρὸς φοῖνιξ.—ἡ δεξιᾶ,

6. Ἐγένετο δὲ καὶ<sup>1</sup> ἐν ἐτέρῳ σαββάτῳ εἰσελθεῖν αὐτὸν εἰς τὴν συναγωγὴν καὶ διδάσκειν· καὶ ἦν ἐκεῖ ἄνθρωπος,<sup>2</sup> καὶ ἡ χεὶρ αὐτοῦ ἡ δεξιὰ ἦν ξηρά. 7. παρετήρουν<sup>3</sup> δὲ αὐτὸν οἱ γραμματεῖς καὶ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι, εἰ ἐν τῷ σαββάτῳ θεραπεύσει<sup>4</sup>. ἵνα εὖρωσι κατηγορίαν<sup>5</sup> αὐτοῦ. 8. αὐτὸς δὲ ᾗδει τοὺς διαλογισμοὺς αὐτῶν, καὶ εἶπε τῷ ἀνθρώπῳ<sup>6</sup> τῷ ξηρὰν ἔχοντι τὴν χεῖρα, “Ἐγειραι,<sup>7</sup> καὶ στήθι εἰς τὸ μέσον.” Ὁ δὲ<sup>8</sup> ἀναστὰς ἔστη. 9. εἶπεν οὖν<sup>9</sup> ὁ Ἰησοῦς πρὸς αὐτούς, “Ἐπερωτήσω<sup>10</sup> ὑμᾶς, τί ἔξεστι τοῖς σάββασιν,<sup>11</sup> ἀγαθοποιῆσαι ἢ κακοποιῆσαι; ψυχὴν σῶσαι ἢ ἀπολέσαι;” 10. Καὶ περιβλεψάμενος πάντας αὐτούς, εἶπε τῷ ἀνθρώπῳ,<sup>12</sup> “Ἐκτεινον τὴν χεῖρά σου.” Ὁ δὲ ἐποίησεν οὕτω.<sup>13</sup> καὶ ἀποκατεστάθη<sup>14</sup> ἡ χεὶρ αὐτοῦ ὑγιής ὡς ἡ ἄλλη.<sup>15</sup> 11. αὐτοὶ δὲ ἐπλήσθησαν ἀνοίας· καὶ διελάλουν πρὸς ἀλλήλους, τί ἂν ποιήσαιεν<sup>16</sup> τῷ Ἰησοῦ.

<sup>1</sup> Omit καὶ ἝBL min.      <sup>2</sup> ἀνθ. ἐκεῖ in ἝBL 33 al. (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> παρετηρουντο in ABDL 33 al. (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> θεραπευει in ἝADL (Tisch., W.H., text). T.R. = B (W.H. marg.).

<sup>5</sup> κατηγορειν αυτου in ἝB (D -γορησαι).

<sup>6</sup> ειπεν δε τω ανδρι in ἝBL 33 (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>7</sup> εγειρε in very many uncials.

<sup>8</sup> For ο δε ἝBDL have καὶ.

<sup>9</sup> For ουν ἝBDL 33 al. have δε.

<sup>10</sup> επερωτω in ἝBL.

<sup>11</sup> ἝBDL have ει for τι, and τω σαββατω for τοις σαββασιν.

<sup>12</sup> αυτω in B and many other uncials. T.R. = ἝDL 33.

<sup>13</sup> Omit ουτω BLΔ 33.

<sup>14</sup> απεκατεσταθη in ADL al. pl., but B has αποκ.

<sup>15</sup> Omit υγιης . . . αλλη (from Mt.) with ἝBL.

<sup>16</sup> ποιησαιεν in BLA 33 al. pl. (Tisch., W.H.).

the right hand. This particular peculiar to Lk., with the Hebrew style, proves, some think (Godet, Hahn), a source distinct from Mt. or Mk. Not necessarily. It may be an inference by Lk., added to magnify the beneficence of the miracle. The right hand the working hand, the privation great, the cure the more valuable.—Ver. 7. παρετηροῦντο, they kept watching, in a sly, furtive manner, ex obliquo et occulto, Bengel on Mk.—εἰ θεραπεύει, whether He is going to heal, if that is to be the way of it.—Ver. 8. ᾗδει: a participle might have been expected here = He knowing their thoughts said, etc.—ἔγειρε καὶ στήθι, etc.: this command was necessary to bring the matter under the notice of the audience present, who as yet knew nothing of the thoughts of the Pharisees, and possibly were not aware that the man with the withered hand was present.—Ver. 9. ἀγαθοποιῆσαι, κακοποιῆσαι: on the meaning of these words and the issue raised vide on Mk.—Ver. 10. περιβλεψάμενος. Lk. borrows this word from Mk., but omits all reference to the emotions he ascribes to Jesus: anger mixed with pity. He looks round merely waiting for an answer to His pointed question. None being forthcoming, He proceeds to heal: “qui tacet, consentit,” Bornemann.—Ver. 11. ἀνοίας: they were filled with senseless anger. They were “mad” at Jesus, because He had broken the Sabbath, as they conceived it, in a way that would make Him popular: humanity and preternatural power combined.—τί ἂν ποιήσαιεν: ἂν with the optative in an indirect question, in Lk. only, following classic usage. This combination of occasional classicism with frequent Hebraism is curious. It is noticeable that Lk. does not impute murderous intentions to the opponents of Jesus at this stage, nor combination with politicians to effect truculent designs (vide Mk. iii. 6).

12. Ἐγένετο δὲ ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις ταύταις, ἐξῆλθεν<sup>1</sup> εἰς τὸ ὄρος προσεύξασθαι· καὶ ἦν διανυκτερεύων ἐν τῇ προσευχῇ τοῦ Θεοῦ.
 13. καὶ ὅτε ἐγένετο ἡμέρα, προσεφώνησε τοὺς μαθητὰς αὐτοῦ· καὶ ἐκλεξάμενος ἀπ' αὐτῶν δώδεκα, οὓς καὶ ἀποστόλους ὠνόμασε,
 14. Σίμωνα ὃν καὶ ὠνόμασε Πέτρον, καὶ Ἀνδρέαν τὸν ἀδελφὸν αὐτοῦ, Ἰάκωβον<sup>2</sup> καὶ Ἰωάννην, Φίλιππον καὶ Βαρθολομαῖον, 15. Ματθαῖον καὶ Θωμᾶν, Ἰάκωβον τὸν τοῦ<sup>3</sup> Ἀλφαίου καὶ Σίμωνα τὸν καλούμενον Ζηλωτῆν, 16. Ἰούδαν Ἰακώβου, καὶ Ἰούδαν Ἰσκαριώτην, ὃς καὶ<sup>4</sup> ἐγένετο προδότης· 17. καὶ καταβὰς μετ' αὐτῶν, ἔσθη ἐπὶ τόπου πεδινοῦ, καὶ ὄχλος<sup>5</sup> μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ, καὶ πλῆθος πολὺ τοῦ λαοῦ ἀπὸ

<sup>1</sup> ἐξελθῆναι αὐτον in MS.

<sup>2</sup> MS. have καὶ before Ἰακωβον, and there is MS. authority for καὶ before every name (Tisch., W.H.: καὶ in brackets before Ἰακ. Αλφ., omitted there only in B, probably by oversight).

<sup>3</sup> Omit τον του MS.

<sup>4</sup> Omit καὶ MS.

<sup>5</sup> ὄχλος πολυς in MS.

Vv. 12-19. On the hill (Mt. iv. 24-25, x. 2-4; Mk. iii. 7-19).—Ver. 12. ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις ταύταις: a vague expression, but suggestive of some connection with foregoing encounters.—ἐξελθῆναι, went out; whence not indicated, probably from a town (Capernaum?) into the solitude of the mountains.—εἰς τὸ ὄρος: as in Mt. v. i. and Mk. iii. 13, to the hill near the place where He had been.—προσεύξασθαι, to pray, in Mk.; might be taken for granted. But Lk. makes a point of exhibiting Jesus as a devotional Model, often praying, and especially at critical times in His life. The present is viewed as a very special crisis, hence what follows.—ἦν διανυκτερεύων, etc., He was spending the whole night in prayer to God; διανυκτερεύων occurs here only in N. T.—τοῦ θεοῦ is genitive objective: prayer of which God is the object; but if προσευχῇ were taken as = a place for prayer in the open air, as in Acts xvi. 13, we should get the poetic idea of the proseucha of God—the mountains!—Ver. 13. τοὺς μαθητὰς, the disciples, of whom a considerable number have gathered about Jesus, and who have followed Him to the hill.—ἀποστόλους, Apostles, used by Lk. in the later sense, here and elsewhere. The word is more frequent in his Gospel than in Mt. and Mk. (six times in Lk., once in Mt., twice in Mk.).—Ver. 14. Σίμωνα: here follows the list much the same as in Mt. and Mk. Lk., though he has already called Simon, Peter (v. 8), here mentions that Jesus gave him the name.

In the third group of four Judas Jacobi takes the place of Thaddaeus in Mk. and Lebbaeus in Mt. and Simon the Kananite is called Simon the Zealot. Of Judas Iscariot it is noted that he became a traitor, "turned traitor" (Field, Ot. Nor.).—προδότης has no article, and therefore should not be rendered the traitor as in A. V. and R. V. When the verb is used it is always παραδιδόναι.—Ver. 17. καταβὰς, descending, with the Twelve, suggesting descent to the foot of the hills, the plain below. Yet the expression τόπον πεδινοῦ is peculiar; hardly what we should expect if the reference were to the plain beside the lake; rather suggestive of a flat space lower down the hill.—πεδινός, here only in N. T. The descent takes place in order to the delivery of a discourse which, with the choice of the Apostles, constitutes the occasion with reference to which Jesus had spent the night in prayer. The audience consists of three classes separately named (1) the Twelve, (2) the company of disciples described as an ὄχλος πολυς, (3) a multitude (πλῆθος) gathered from a wide area. This is the same multitude from which in Mk.'s narrative Jesus escaped to the hill, taking His disciples with Him, to get rest, and presumably to devote some leisure time to their instruction. Of this desire to escape from the crowd, so apparent in Mk., there is no trace in Lk. In indicating the sources of this great human stream Lk. omits Galilee as superfluous, mentions Judaea and

πάσης τῆς Ἰουδαίας καὶ Ἱερουσαλήμ, καὶ τῆς παραλίου Τύρου καὶ Σιδῶνος, οἱ ἦλθον ἀκοῦσαι αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἰαθῆναι ἀπὸ τῶν νόσων αὐτῶν, 18. καὶ οἱ ὄχλουμένοι ὑπὸ<sup>1</sup> πνευμάτων ἀκαθάρτων, καὶ<sup>2</sup> ἐθεραπεύοντο. 19. καὶ πᾶς ὁ ὄχλος ἐξήτει<sup>3</sup> ἀπτεσθαι αὐτοῦ· ὅτι δύναμις παρ' αὐτοῦ ἐξήρχετο, καὶ ἴατο πάντας.

20. Καὶ αὐτὸς ἐπάρας τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς αὐτοῦ εἰς τοὺς μαθητὰς αὐτοῦ ἔλεγε, "Μακάριοι οἱ πτωχοί, ὅτι ὑμετέρα ἐστὶν ἡ βουσιεῖα τοῦ Θεοῦ. 21. μακάριοι οἱ πεινῶντες νῦν, ὅτι χορτασθήσεσθε. μακάριοι οἱ κλαίοντες νῦν, ὅτι γελάσετε. 22. μακάριοί ἐστε,

<sup>1</sup> ἐνοχλουμένοι ἀπο in  $\aleph$ ABL (D has ἀπο).

<sup>2</sup> καὶ omitted in  $\aleph$ ABDL 33.

<sup>3</sup> ἐζητούν in  $\aleph$ BL. T.R. a correction.

Jerusalem, passing over Idumaea and Peraea (Mk. iii. 8), and winds up with Tyre and Sidon, defining the territory there whence people came by the expression τῆς παραλίου (χώρας understood), the sea-coast. The people come from all these places to hear Jesus (ἀκοῦσαι αὐτοῦ) in the first place, as if in expectation of a great discourse, and also to be healed. The eagerness to get healing even by touch, of which Mk. gives so graphic a picture (iii. 10), is faintly indicated by ἐζήτουν (ἐξήτει, T. R.).—Ver. 19. δύναμις may be nominative both to ἐξήρχετο and to ἴατο (A. V. and R. V.), or we may render: "power went forth from Him and He healed all".

Vv. 20-49. The Sermon (Mt. v.-vii.). That it is the same sermon as Mt. reports in chapters v.-vii. may be regarded as beyond discussion. How, while the same, they came to be so different, is a question not quite easy to answer. There probably was addition to the original utterance in the case of Mt., and there was almost certainly selection involving omission in the case of Lk.'s version, either on his part or on the part of those who prepared the text he used. Retouching of expression in the parts common to both reports is, of course, also very conceivable. As it stands in Lk. the great utterance has much more the character of a popular discourse than the more lengthy, elaborate version of Mt. In Mt. it is didache, in Lk. kerygma—a discourse delivered to a great congregation gathered for the purpose, with the Apostles and disciples in the front benches so to speak, a discourse exemplifying the "words of grace" (iv. 22) Jesus was wont to speak, the controversial antithesis (Mt. v. 17-

48) eliminated, and only the evangelic passages retained; a sermon serving at once as a model for "Apostles" and as a gospel for the million.

Vv. 20-26. First part of the discourse: Beatitudes and Woes (Mt. v. 1-12).—Ver. 20. ἐπάρας τ. ὀφ.: in Lk. the Preacher lifts up His eyes upon His audience (τ. μαθητὰς, who are themselves a crowd), in Mt. He opens His mouth; both expressions introducing a solemn set discourse. Lk.'s phrase suggests a benignant look, answering to the nature of the utterance.—μακάριοι: Lk. has only four Beatitudes, of which the poor, the hungry, the weeping, the persecuted are the objects; the sorrows not the activities of the children of the kingdom the theme.—πτωχοί, πεινῶντες, κλαίοντες are to be taken literally as describing the social condition of those addressed. They are characteristics of those who are supposed to be children of the kingdom, not (as in Mt.) conditions of entrance. The description corresponds to the state of the early Church. It is as if Jesus were addressing a church meeting and saying: Blessed are ye, my brethren, though poor, etc., for in the Kingdom of God, and its blessings, present and prospective, ye have ample compensation. Note the use of the second person. In Mt. Jesus speaks didactically in the third person. Christ's words are adapted to present circumstances, but it is not necessary to suppose that the adaptation proceeds from an ebionitic circle, ascetic in spirit and believing poverty to be in itself a passport to the kingdom, and riches the way to perdition.

Vv. 22, 23. In the corresponding passage in Mt. there is first an objective didactic statement about the persecuted.

ὅταν μισήσωσιν ὑμᾶς οἱ ἄνθρωποι, καὶ ὅταν ἀφορίσωσιν ὑμᾶς, καὶ ὀνειδίσωσι, καὶ ἐκβάλωσι τὸ ὄνομα ὑμῶν ὡς πονηρόν, ἕνεκα τοῦ υἱοῦ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου. 23. χαίrete<sup>1</sup> ἐν ἐκείῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ καὶ σκιρτήσατε· ἰδοὺ γάρ, ὁ μισθὸς ὑμῶν πολὺς ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ· κατὰ ταῦτα<sup>2</sup> γὰρ ἐποίουν τοῖς προφήταις οἱ πατέρες αὐτῶν. 24. Πλὴν οὐαὶ ὑμῖν τοῖς πλουσίοις, ὅτι ἀπέχετε τὴν παράκλησιν ὑμῶν. 25. οὐαὶ ὑμῖν, οἱ ἐμπεπλησμένοι,<sup>3</sup> ὅτι πεινάσετε. οὐαὶ ὑμῖν,<sup>4</sup> οἱ γελῶντες νῦν, ὅτι πενήθησете καὶ κλαύσετε. 26. οὐαὶ ὑμῖν,<sup>4</sup> ὅταν καλῶς ὑμᾶς εἴπωσι πάντες οἱ ἄνθρωποι· κατὰ ταῦτα<sup>5</sup> γὰρ ἐποίουν τοῖς ψευδοπροφήταις οἱ πατέρες αὐτῶν.

27. "Ἄλλ' ὑμῖν λέγω τοῖς ἀκούουσιν, Ἀγαπάτε τοὺς ἐχθροὺς ὑμῶν, καλῶς ποιεῖτε τοῖς μισοῦσιν ὑμᾶς, 28. εὐλογεῖτε τοὺς καταρω-

<sup>1</sup> χαρτε in all uncials.

<sup>2</sup> τα αὐτα in BD (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> NBLΞ 33 al. add νυν to ἐμπεπλ.

<sup>4</sup> Omit ὑμιν in both places NBLΞ. Many more omit the second.

<sup>5</sup> τα αὐτα again in N<sup>3</sup>BDΞ 33.

then an expansion in the second person. Here all is in the second person, and the terms employed are such as suited the experience of the early Christians, especially those belonging to the Jewish Church, suffering, at the hands of their unbelieving countrymen, wrong in the various forms indicated—hatred, separation, calumny, ejection.—ἀφορίσωσιν may point either to separation in daily life (Keil, Hahn) or to excommunication from the synagogue (so most commentaries) = the Talmudic פְּרִיטָה.

In the former case one naturally finds the culminating evil of excommunication in the last clause—ἐκβάλωσιν τὸ ὄ. ὑ. = erasing the name from the membership of the synagogue. In the latter case this clause will rather point to the vile calumnies afterwards heaped upon the excommunicated. "Absentium nomen, ut improborum hominum, differre rumoribus," Grotius.—Ver. 23. σκιρτήσατε, leap for joy; the word occurs in i. 41, 44, and this and other terms found in the sermon have led some to infer that Lk. uses as his source a version of the discourse emanating from a Jewish-Christian circle. Vide the list of words in J. Weiss, Meyer, note, p. 387. Vide also Feine, Vork. Überlief.

Vv. 24-26. πλὴν, but, used here adversatively, a favourite word with Lk., suggesting therefore the hypothesis that he is responsible for the "woes" following, peculiar to his version of the sermon.—ἀπέχετε, ye have in full; riches and nothing besides your reward (cf. Mt. vi. 2).—Ver. 25. ἐμπεπλησμένοι, the sated, a class as distinct in character as the δεδιωγμένοι of Mt. v. 10, on whom vide remarks there. Readers can picture the sated class for themselves.—Ver. 26. This woe is addressed, not to the rich and full without, but to the disciples within, and points out to them that to be free from the evils enumerated in ver. 22 is not a matter of congratulation, but rather a curse, as indicative of a disloyalty to the faith and the Master, which makes them rank with false prophets.

Vv. 27-35. The law of love (Mt. v. 38-48).—Ver. 27. ὑμῖν λέγω: Lk. here uses the phrase with which Mt. introduces each dictum of Jesus in opposition to the dicta of the scribes. But of the many dicta of the Lord reported in Mt. he has preserved only one, that relating to the duty of loving (Mt. v. 44). The injunction to love enemies is much weakened in force by omission of the antithesis: love neighbours and hate enemies. As if to compensate Lk. gives the precept twice, (1) as a general head under which to collect sayings culled from the section of the discourse omitted (Mt. v. 17-42), (2) as a protest against limiting love to those who love us (ver. 35, cf. ver. 32).—τοῖς ἀκούουσιν, to you who hear; a phrase by which the discourse is brought back to the actual audience from the rich and the false disciples apostrophised in the preceding verses. It is an editorial phrase.—

10. μέρους ὑμῖν,<sup>1</sup> καὶ<sup>2</sup> προσεύχεσθε ὑπὲρ<sup>3</sup> τῶν ἐπηρεαζόντων ὑμᾶς,
 29. τῷ τύποντί σε ἐπὶ τὴν σιαγόνα, παρέχε καὶ τὴν ἄλλην· καὶ ἀπὸ τοῦ αἵροντός σου τὸ ἱμάτιον, καὶ τὸν χιτῶνα μὴ κωλύσης.
 30. παντὶ δὲ τῷ<sup>4</sup> αἰτοῦντί σε, δίδου· καὶ ἀπὸ τοῦ αἵροντος τὰ σά, μὴ ἀπαίτει. 31. καὶ καθὼς θέλετε ἵνα ποιῶσιν ὑμῖν οἱ ἄνθρωποι, καὶ ὑμεῖς ποιεῖτε αὐτοῖς ὁμοίως. 32. καὶ εἰ ἀγαπάτε τοὺς ἀγαπῶν-τας ὑμᾶς, ποία ὑμῖν χάρις ἐστί; καὶ γὰρ οἱ ἁμαρτωλοὶ τοὺς ἀγαπῶντας αὐτοὺς ἀγαπῶσι. 33. καὶ<sup>5</sup> ἐὰν ἀγαθοποιήτε τοὺς ἀγαθοποιούντας ὑμᾶς, ποία ὑμῖν χάρις ἐστί; καὶ γὰρ<sup>6</sup> οἱ ἁμαρτωλοὶ τὸ αὐτὸ ποιοῦσι. 34. καὶ ἐὰν δανείζητε<sup>7</sup> παρ' ὧν ἐλπίζετε ἀπολα-βεῖν,<sup>8</sup> ποία ὑμῖν χάρις ἐστί; καὶ γὰρ οἱ<sup>9</sup> ἁμαρτωλοὶ ἁμαρτωλοῖς δανείζουσιν, ἵνα ἀπολάβωσι τὰ ἴσα. 35. πλὴν ἀγαπάτε τοὺς ἐχθροὺς ὑμῶν, καὶ ἀγαθοποιεῖτε, καὶ δανείζετε μηδὲν<sup>10</sup> ἀπελπίζοντες· καὶ

<sup>1</sup> υμας in ΞBDΞ vet. Lat. 6. υμιν is a correction to classical usage.

<sup>2</sup> Omit καὶ ΞBDLΞ al. <sup>3</sup> περὶ in ΞBLE.

<sup>4</sup> Omit δε τῷ ΞB.

<sup>5</sup> ΞB have καὶ γὰρ εἰν (Tisch., W.H., in brackets).

<sup>6</sup> Omit γὰρ ΞB.

<sup>7</sup> δανισθετε in ΞBΞ (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>8</sup> λαβεῖν in ΞBLE.

<sup>9</sup> ΞBLE omit γὰρ, and many uncials omit οἱ.

<sup>10</sup> μηδεν is the best attested reading (ABLΔ al., W.H. in brackets); μηδενα in ΞΞΠ (Tisch.).

καλῶς ποιεῖτε, etc.: Lk., in contrast with Mt. (true text), enlarges here, as if to say: you must love in every conceivable case, even in connection with the most aggravated evil treatment. In the clause enjoining prayer for such as have done wrong Lk. substitutes ἐπηρεαζόντων (ver. 28) for Mt.'s διακόντων = those who insult you, the people it is hardest to pray for. Persecution may be very fierce, at the prompting of conscience, yet respectful.—Ver. 29 = Mt. v. 39, 40 with some changes: τύπτειν for ῥαπίζειν, παρέχειν for στρέφειν; αἵροντος suggests the idea of robbery instead of legal proceedings pointed at by Mt.'s κριθῆναι; ἱμάτιον and χιτῶνα change places, naturally, as the robber takes first the upper garment; for Mt.'s ἄφες Lk. puts μὴ κωλύσης = withhold not (for the construction τινὰ ἀπὸ τίνος κωλύειν, which Bornemann thought unexampled, vide Gen. xxiii. 6, Sept.).—Ver. 30. Lk. passes over Mt.'s instance of compulsory service (v. 41), perhaps because it would require explanation, or was not a practical grievance for his readers, and goes on to the duty of generous giving, which is to be carried the length of cheerfully resigning what is taken from us by force.—Ver. 31. Lk. brings in here the law of reciprocity (Mt. vii. 12), hardly in its proper place, as the change from singular to plural shows, but in sympathy with what goes before, though not quite in line, and therefore inserted at this point as the best place to be found for the golden rule. It seems to be meant as a general heading for the particular hypothetical cases following = you would like men to love you, therefore love them whether they love you or not, etc.—Ver. 32. χάρις, here and in the following verses stands for Mt.'s μισθός, as if to avoid a word of legal sound and substitute an evangelical term instead. Yet Lk. retains μισθός in ver. 23.—χάρις probably means not "thanks" from men but favour from God. It is a Pauline word, and apparently as such in favour with Lk. Vide on iv. 22.—ἁμαρτωλοὶ here and in vv. 33, 34 for τελῶναι and ἔθνηκοὶ in Mt., a natural alteration, but much weakening the point; manifestly secondary.—Ver. 33. For Mt.'s salutation Lk. substitutes doing good (ἀγαθοποιήτε).—Ver. 34. This example is robbed of its point if it be supposed that Lk. had an ascetic bias. If a man despise money there is no merit in lending without expecting repayment.—Ver. 35. πλὴν, but, in ἔσται ὁ μισθὸς ὑμῶν πολὺς, καὶ ἔσεσθε υἱοὶ τοῦ<sup>1</sup> ὑψίστου· ὅτι αὐτὸς χρηστός ἐστιν ἐπὶ τοὺς ἀχαρίστους καὶ πονηροὺς. 36. γίνεσθε οὖν<sup>2</sup> οἰκτίρμονες, καθὼς καὶ<sup>3</sup> ὁ πατὴρ ὑμῶν οἰκτίρμων ἐστί. <sup>b here and Jas. v. 11</sup> 37. καὶ μὴ κρίνετε, καὶ οὐ μὴ κριθῆτε. μὴ καταδικάζετε, καὶ οὐ μὴ καταδικασθῆτε. ἀπολύετε, καὶ ἀπολυθήσεσθε· 38. δίδετε, καὶ δοθήσεται ὑμῖν· μέτρον καλόν,<sup>4</sup> πεπιεσμένον καὶ<sup>5</sup> σεσαλευμένον καὶ<sup>4</sup> ὑπερεκχυνόμενον δώσουσιν εἰς τὸν κόλπον ὑμῶν. τῷ γὰρ αὐτῷ μέτρῳ ᾧ<sup>6</sup> μετρεῖτε, ἀντιμετρηθήσεται ὑμῖν.”

39. εἶπε δὲ<sup>6</sup> παραβολὴν αὐτοῖς, “Μήτι δύναται τυφλὸς τυφλὸν

<sup>1</sup> Omit του ἸΑΒΔΛΔΞ al. pl.

<sup>2</sup> Omit οὖν ἸΑΒΔΛΞ 33 al.

<sup>3</sup> Omit και ἸΒΛΞ.

<sup>4</sup> ἸΒΛ omit first και and ἸΒΔΛΞ the second; more expressive without.

<sup>5</sup> For τῷ γὰρ . . . ῶ ἸΒΔΛΞ 33 al. have ῶ γὰρ μετρω (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>6</sup> δε και in ἸΒΔΛΞ 33.

opposition to all these hypothetical cases.—μηδὲν ἀπελπίζοντες, “hoping for nothing again,” A. V., is the meaning the context requires, and accepted by most interpreters, though the verb in later Greek means to despair, hence the rendering “never despairing” in R. V. The reading μηδένα ἀπ. would mean: causing no one to despair by refusing aid.—υἱοὶ Ὑψίστου, sons of the Highest, a much inferior name to that in Mt. In Lk. to be sons of the Highest is the reward of noble, generous action; in Mt. to be like the Father in heaven is set before disciples as an object of ambition.—χρηστός, kind; by generalising Lk. misses the pathos of Mt.’s concrete statement (ver. 45), which is doubtless nearer the original.

Vv. 36-38. Mercifulness inculcated. God the pattern.—Ver. 36 corresponds to Mt. v. 48, which fitly closes the promulgation of the great law of love = be ye therefore perfect, as your Father in heaven is perfect (vide notes there). Lk. alters the precept both in its expression (οἰκτίρμονες for τέλειοι), and in its setting, making it begin a new train of thought instead of winding up the previous one = be compassionate (οὖν omitted, ἸΒΔΛ, etc.) as, etc.—the precepts following being particulars under that general.—γίνεσθε, imperative, for the future in Mt.—οἰκτίρμονες: a legitimate substitution, as the perfection inculcated referred to loving enemies, and giving opportunity for setting forth the doctrine of God’s free grace.—καθὼς for Mt.’s ὡς, common in Lk. (twenty-eight times), witnessing to editorial revision.—ὁ πατὴρ ὁ: without ὁ οὐράνιος, which is implied in the epithet “the Highest” (ver. 35).—Ver. 37. In these special precepts it is implied throughout that God acts as we are exhorted to act. They give a picture of the gracious spirit of God.—καὶ, connecting the following precept as a special with a general. No καὶ in Mt. vii. 1, where begins a new division of the sermon. In Mt. the judging condemned is referred to as a characteristic Pharisaic vice. Here it is conceived of as internal to the disciple-circle, as in James iv. 12.—ἀπολύετε, set free, as a debtor (Mt. xviii. 27), a prisoner, or an offender (τῆς ἀμαρτίας ἀπολυθῆναι, 2 Macc. xii. 45).—Ver. 38. δίδετε: this form of mercy is suggested by Mt. vii. 2, ἐν ᾧ μέτρῳ μετρεῖτε, etc.: be giving, implying a constant habit, and therefore a generous nature.—μέτρον καλόν, good, generous measure; these words and those which follow apply to man’s giving as well as to the recompense with which the generous giver shall be rewarded.—πεπιεσμένον, etc., pressed down, shaken, and overflowing; graphic epxegesis of good measure, all the terms applicable to dry goods, e.g., grain. Bengel takes the first as referring to dry (in aridis), the second to soft (in mollibus), the third to liquids (in liquidis).—κόλπον: probably the loose bosom of the upper robe gathered in at the waist, useful for carrying things (De Wette, Holtz., H. C., al.). It is implied that God gives so, e.g., “plenteous redemption” (Ps. cxxx. 7).

Vv. 39-45. Proverbial lore.—Ver. 39. εἶπε δὲ: the Speaker is represented here as making a new beginning, the connection of thought not being apparent.

ὀδηγεῖν; οὐχὶ ἀμφοτέροι εἰς βόθυνον πεσοῦνται<sup>1</sup>; 40. οὐκ ἔστι μαθητῆς ὑπὲρ τὸν διδάσκαλον αὐτοῦ<sup>2</sup>. κατηρτισμένος δὲ πᾶς ἔσται ὡς ὁ διδάσκαλος αὐτοῦ. 41. τί δὲ βλέπεις τὸ κάρφος τὸ ἐν τῷ ὀφθαλμῷ τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ σου, τὴν δὲ δοκὸν τὴν ἐν τῷ ἰδίῳ ὀφθαλμῷ οὐ κατανοεῖς; 42. ἢ<sup>3</sup> πῶς δύνασαι λέγειν τῷ ἀδελφῷ σου, Ἄδελφέ, ἄφες ἐκβάλω τὸ κάρφος τὸ ἐν τῷ ὀφθαλμῷ σου, αὐτὸς τὴν ἐν τῷ ὀφθαλμῷ σου δοκὸν οὐ βλέπων; ὑποκριτά, ἔκβαλε πρῶτον τὴν δοκὸν ἐκ τοῦ ὀφθαλμοῦ σου, καὶ τότε διαβλέψεις ἐκβαλεῖν<sup>4</sup> τὸ κάρφος τὸ ἐν τῷ ὀφθαλμῷ τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ σου. 43. οὐ γὰρ ἔστι δένδρον καλὸν ποιοῦν καρπὸν σαπρὸν· οὐδὲ δένδρον σαπρὸν ποιοῦν καρπὸν καλόν. 44. ἕκαστον γὰρ δένδρον ἐκ τοῦ ἰδίου καρποῦ γινώσκεται· οὐ γὰρ ἐξ ἀκανθῶν συλλέγουσι σύκα, οὐδὲ ἐκ βάτου τρυγῶσι σταφυλὴν.<sup>5</sup> 45. ὁ ἀγαθὸς ἄνθρωπος ἐκ τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ θησαυροῦ τῆς καρδίας αὐτοῦ προφέρει τὸ ἀγαθόν· καὶ ὁ πονηρὸς ἄνθρωπος<sup>6</sup> ἐκ τοῦ πονηροῦ θησαυροῦ τῆς καρδίας αὐτοῦ<sup>6</sup> προφέρει τὸ πονηρόν· ἐκ γὰρ τοῦ<sup>7</sup> περισσεύματος τῆς<sup>7</sup> καρδίας λαλεῖ τὸ στόμα αὐτοῦ.

<sup>1</sup> εμπεσ. in BDL; πεσ. in ΞCΔE 33.

<sup>2</sup> Omit αυτου ΞBDLΞ 33.

<sup>3</sup> B omits η. Ξ has πως δε. Most uncials = T.R.

<sup>4</sup> εκβαλειν at end of sentence in B 13, 69 al. (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> σταφ. τρυγ. in ΞBCDLΞ 13, 33, 69.

<sup>6</sup> ΞBDL omit ανθρωπος and θησ. της καρδιας αυτου (explanatory additions).

<sup>7</sup> ΞABDE omit both articles.

Grotius says plainly that there is no connection, and that Lk. has deemed it fitting to introduce here a logion that must have been spoken at another time. Mt. has a similar thought to that in ver. 39, not in the sermon but in xv. 14.—τυφλὸς τυφλόν: viewing the sermon as an ideal address to a church, this adage may apply to Christians trying to guide brethren in the true way (James v. 19), and mean that they themselves must know the truth.—Ver. 40. The connection here also is obscure; the adage might be taken as directed against the conceit of scholars presuming to criticise their teachers, which is checked by the reminder that the utmost height that can be reached by the fully equipped (κατηρτισμένος, a Pauline word, 1 Cor. i. 10, cf. 2 Tim. iii. 17, ἐξηρτισμένος) scholar is to be on a level with his teacher.—Ver. 41 introduces a thought which in Mt. stands in immediate connection with that in ver. 37 (Mt. vii. 1, 2, 3). If the view of ver. 40, above suggested, be correct, then this and the next verses may also be understood as referring still to the relations between teacher and taught in the Church, rather than to the vices of the Pharisees, which in Lk.'s version of the sermon are very much left out of account. Censoriousness is apt to be a fault of young converts, and doubtless it was rife enough in the apostolic age. On the parable of the mote and the beam vide on Mt. vii. 3-5.—Ver. 42. οὐ βλέπων: this is one of the few instances in N. T. of participles negated by οὐ. The οὐ in such cases may = μη, which in classical Greek has the force of a condition, οὐ being used only to state a fact (vide Burton, § 485).—Vv. 43-45. In Mt. these parabolic sayings are connected with a warning against false prophets (Mt. vii. 15-19). Here the connection is not obvious, though the thread is probably to be found in the word υποκριτά, applied to one who by his censoriousness claims to be saintly, yet in reality is a greater sinner than those he blames. This combination of saint and sinner is declared to be impossible by means of these adages.—Ver. 44. For τριβόλοι in Mt., Lk. puts βάτος = thorn bush, rubus, and for συλλέγουσιν applied to both thorns and thistles in Mt., Lk. uses in connection with βάτου τρυγῶσι, the

46. "Τί δέ με καλεῖτε, Κύριε, Κύριε, καὶ οὐ ποιεῖτε ἃ λέγω;
 47. πᾶς ὁ ἐρχόμενος πρὸς με καὶ ἀκούων μου τῶν λόγων καὶ ποιῶν αὐτούς, ὑποδείξω ὑμῖν τίμι ἐστὶν ὁμοίος. 48. ὁμοίός ἐστιν ἀνθρώπῳ οἰκοδομοῦντι οἰκίαν, ὃς ἔσκαψε καὶ ἔβῆθυνε, καὶ ἔθηκε θεμελίον ἐ ἐπὶ τὴν πέτραν· πλημμύρας<sup>1</sup> δὲ γενομένης, προσέρρηξεν ὁ ποταμὸς τῇ οἰκίᾳ ἐκείνῃ, καὶ οὐκ ἔσχυσε σαλευσαὶ αὐτήν· θεμελιώτω γὰρ ἐπὶ τὴν πέτραν.<sup>2</sup> 49. ὁ δὲ ἀκούσας καὶ μὴ ποιήσας ὁμοίός ἐστιν ἀνθρώπῳ οἰκοδομήσαντι οἰκίαν ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν χωρὶς θεμελίου· ἢ προσέρρηξεν ὁ ποταμὸς, καὶ εὐθέως ἔπεσε,<sup>3</sup> καὶ ἐγένετο τὸ ῥῆγμα τῆς οἰκίας ἐκείνης μέγα."

Ch. xiii. 8.
 xvi. 3.
 here only
 in N. T.

VII. 1. ἘΠΕΙ δὲ<sup>4</sup> ἐπλήρωσε πάντα τὰ ῥήματα αὐτοῦ εἰς τὰ
 ἀκοὰς τοῦ λαοῦ, εἰσῆλθεν εἰς Καπερναοῦμ. 2. Ἐκατοντάρχου δὲ

<sup>1</sup> πλημμυρης in  $\aleph$ BL $\Xi$  33.

<sup>2</sup> For τῆθ. γαρ . . . πέτραν (from Mt.)  $\aleph$ BL $\Xi$  33 have δια το καλως οἰκοδομησ (-εισ-)θαι αυτην (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> συνεπεσεν in  $\aleph$ B $\Delta$ L $\Xi$  33 al., a stronger word = collapsed (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> ἐπειδη in ABC (Tisch., W.H., text); ἐπει δε in  $\aleph$ L $\Xi$  (W.H. marg.).

proper word for grape-gathering.—Ver. 45. Θησαυροῦ τῆς καρδίας: either, the treasure which is in the heart, or the treasure which the heart is (Hahn). In either case the sense is: as is the heart, so is the utterance.

Ver. 46, introducing the epilogue, rather than winding up the previous train of thought, answers to Mt. vii. 21-23; here direct address (2nd person), there didactic (3rd person); here a pointed question, and paratactic structure as of an orator, in lively manner, applying his sermon, there a general statement as to what is necessary to admission into the Kingdom of Heaven—οὐ πᾶς ὁ λέγων, etc.

Vv. 47-49. The epilogue (Mt. vii. 24-27).—Ver. 47. πᾶς ὁ ἐρχόμενος, etc.: the style of address here corresponds to the idea of the discourse suggested by Lk.'s presentation throughout, the historical Sermon on the Mount converted into an ideal sermon in a church = every one that cometh to me by becoming a Christian, and heareth my words generally, not these words in particular.—Ver. 48. ἔσκαψε καὶ ἐβῆθυνε, dug, and kept deepening. A Hebraism, say Grotius and others = dug deeply. But Raphael produces an example from Xenophon of the same construction: σαφηνίζει τε καὶ ἀληθεύει for ἀληθῶς σαφηνίζει (Oeconomici, cap. xx.).—πλημμύρης (from πίμπλημι, ἄπ. λεγ. in N.T.), a flood, "the sudden rush of a spate,"

Farrar (C. G. T.); "Hochwasser," Weizsäcker.—προσέρρηξεν, broke against, here and in ver. 49 only, in N. T.—Ver. 49. χωρὶς θεμελίου, without a foundation; an important editorial comment. The foolish builder did not make a mistake in choosing a foundation. His folly lay in not thinking of a foundation, but building at haphazard on the surface. Vide notes on Mt. for the characteristics of the two builders.—τὸ ῥῆγμα (πτῶσις in Mt.), the collapse, here only in N. T. This noun is used to answer to the verb προσέρρηξεν.

The impression produced by the foregoing study is that Lk.'s version of the Sermon on the Mount, while faithfully reproducing at least a part of our Lord's teaching on the hill, gives us that teaching, not in its original setting, but readapted so as to serve the practical purposes of Christian instruction, either by Lk. or by some one before him.

CHAPTER VII. THE CENTURION OF CAPERNAUM. THE WIDOW'S SON AT NAIN. THE BAPTIST. IN THE HOUSE OF SIMON.—Vv. 1-10. The Centurion of Capernaum (Mt. viii. 5-13).—Ver. 1. εἰς τὰς ἀκοὰς, into the ears = εἰς τὰ ὦτα in Sept. (Gen. xx. 8, l. 4, Ex. x. 2). To show that it is not a Hebraism, Kyrie cites from Dion. Hal.: εἰς τὴν ἀπάντων τῶν παρόντων ἀκοήν.—εἰσῆλθεν, entered, not returned to, Capernaum.—Ver. 2. ὃς ἦν αὐτῷ ἐντίμος, who was dear to him; though a slave, indicating that he

3. ἀκούσας δὲ περὶ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, ἀπέστειλε πρὸς αὐτὸν πρεσβυτέρους τῶν Ἰουδαίων, ἐρῶτων αὐτόν, ὅπως ἐλθὼν διασώσῃ τὸν δούλον αὐτοῦ. 4. οἱ δὲ παραγενόμενοι πρὸς τὸν Ἰησοῦν παρεκάλουν<sup>1</sup> αὐτὸν σπουδαίως, λέγοντες, “Ὅτι ἀξίος ἐστὶν ᾧ παρέξει<sup>2</sup> τοῦτο. 5. ἀγαπᾷ γὰρ τὸ ἔθνος ἡμῶν, καὶ τὴν συναγωγὴν αὐτὸς ᾧκοδόμησεν ἡμῖν.” 6. Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς ἐπορεύετο σὺν αὐτοῖς. ἤδη δὲ αὐτοῦ οὐ μακρὰν ἀπέχοντος ἀπὸ<sup>3</sup> τῆς οἰκίας, ἔπεμψε πρὸς αὐτὸν<sup>4</sup> ὁ ἐκατόνταρχος φίλους,<sup>5</sup> λέγων αὐτῷ,<sup>6</sup> “Κύριε, μὴ σκύλλου· οὐ γὰρ εἰμι ἰκανὸς ἵνα ὑπὸ τὴν στέγην μου εἰσέλθῃς. 7. διὸ οὐδὲ ἐμαυτὸν ἠξίωσα πρὸς σε ἐλθεῖν· ἀλλὰ εἰπέ λόγῳ, καὶ ἰαθήσεται<sup>8</sup> ὁ παῖς μου. 8. καὶ γὰρ ἐγὼ ἄνθρωπός εἰμι ὑπὸ ἐξουσίαν τασσόμενος, ἔχων ὑπ’ ἐμαυτὸν στρατιώτας, καὶ λέγω τούτῳ, Πορεύθητι, καὶ πορεύεται· καὶ ἄλλῳ, Ἔρχου, καὶ

<sup>1</sup> So in BC al. ηρωτων in  $\aleph$ DL $\Xi$  minusc. (Tisch.). <sup>2</sup> παρεξη in  $\aleph$ ABCDL $\Delta$  $\Xi$  al.

<sup>3</sup>  $\aleph$ D min. omit απο (Tisch.).

<sup>4</sup> Omit προς αυτον  $\aleph$ B.

<sup>5</sup> φίλους before ο εκ. in  $\aleph$ BCL $\Xi$  33 al.

<sup>6</sup>  $\aleph$  omits αυτω (Tisch.).

<sup>7</sup> ικ. εἰμι in  $\aleph$ B.

<sup>8</sup> ιαθητω in BL. T.R. is from Mt.

was a humane master. Lk. has also in view, according to his wont, to enhance the value of the benefit conferred: the life of a valued servant saved.—Ver. 3. ἀκούσας: reports of previous acts of healing had reached him.—ἀπέστειλε: there is no mention of this fact or of the second deputation (in ver. 6) in Mt.'s version. Lk. is evidently drawing from another source, oral or written.—πρεσβυτέρους τῶν Ἰουδαίων, elders of the Jews; the reference is probably to elders of the city rather than to rulers of the synagogue. From the designation “of the Jews” it may be inferred that the centurion was a Pagan, probably in the service of Antipas.—διασώσῃ, bring safely through the disease which threatened life.—Ver. 4. σπουδαίως, earnestly; though he was a Pagan, they Jews, for reason given.—ἀξίος ᾧ παρέξει, for ἀξίος ἵνα αὐτῷ π. παρέξει is the 2nd person singular, future, middle, in a relative clause expressing purpose instead of the more usual subjunctive (vide Burton, § 318).—Ver. 5. ἀγαπᾷ γὰρ, etc., he loveth our race; a philo-Jewish Pagan, whose affection for the people among whom he lived took the form of building a synagogue. Quite a credible fact, which could easily be ascertained. Herod built the temple. Vide Lightfoot on this.—Ver. 6. ἐπορεύετο: no hint of scruples on the part of Jesus, as in the case of the Syrophenician woman.—οὐ μακρὰν, not far, i.e., quite near. Lk. often uses the negative with adjectives and adverbs to express strongly the positive. Hahn accumulates instances chiefly from Acts.—φίλους: these also would naturally be Jews.—ἰκανός εἰμι ἵνα: here we have ἰκανός, followed by ἵνα with subjunctive. In iii. 16 it is followed by the infinitive.—Ver. 7. εἰπέ λόγῳ, speak, i.e., command, with a word.—Ver. 8. καὶ γὰρ ἐγὼ: here follows the great word of the centurion reported by Lk. much as in Mt. But it seems a word more suitable to be spoken in propria persona than by deputy. It certainly loses much of its force by being given second hand. Lk. seems here to forget for the moment that the centurion is not supposed to be present. Schanz conjectures that he did come after all, and speak this word himself. On its import vide at Mt. viii. 9.—τασσόμενος: present, implying a constant state of subordination.

Comparing the two accounts of this incident, it may be noted that Lk.'s makes the action of the centurion consistent throughout, as inspired by diffident humility. In Mt. he has the courage to ask Jesus directly, yet he is too humble to let Jesus come to his house. In Lk. he uses intercessors, who show a geniality welcome to the irenic evangelist. Without suggesting intention, it may further be remarked that this story embodies the main features of the kindred incident of the

ἔρχεται· καὶ τῷ δούλῳ μου, Ποίησον τοῦτο, καὶ ποιεῖ.<sup>9</sup> 9. Ἀκούσας δὲ ταῦτα ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐθαύμασεν αὐτόν· καὶ στραφεὶς τῷ ἀκολουθοῦντι αὐτῷ ὄχλῳ εἶπε, “Λέγω ὑμῖν, οὐδὲ ἐν τῷ Ἰσραὴλ τοσαύτην πίστιν εὔρον.” 10. Καὶ ὑποστρέψαντες οἱ πεμφθέντες εἰς τὸν οἶκον<sup>1</sup> εὔρον τὸν ἀσθενοῦντα<sup>2</sup> δούλον ὑγιαίνοντα.

11. ΚΑΙ ἐγένετο ἐν τῇ<sup>3</sup> ἐξῆς, ἐπορεύετο<sup>4</sup> εἰς πόλιν καλουμένην Ναὶν· καὶ συνεπορεύοντο αὐτῷ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ ἱκανοί,<sup>5</sup> καὶ ὄχλος πολὺς. 12. ὡς δὲ ἤγγισε τῇ πόλει τῆς πόλεως, καὶ ἰδοῦ, ἐξεκομίζετο τεθνηκώς, υἱὸς μονογενῆς<sup>6</sup> τῇ μητρὶ αὐτοῦ, καὶ αὐτῇ ἦν χήρα· καὶ ὄχλος τῆς πόλεως ἱκανὸς<sup>7</sup> σὺν αὐτῇ. 13. καὶ ἰδὼν αὐτὴν ὁ Κύριος

<sup>1</sup> εἰς τ. ο. before οἱ πεμφ. in  $\aleph$ BDL al. vet. Lat. (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> Omit ἀσθενοντα  $\aleph$ BL.

<sup>3</sup> ἐν τω εξῆς in many MSS., including BL (W.H.). T.R. =  $\aleph$ CD (Tisch.).

<sup>4</sup> ἐπορευθη in  $\aleph$ B 13, 69 (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> Omit ἱκανοὶ  $\aleph$ BDL $\Xi$  (W.H.).

<sup>6</sup> μον. υἱος in  $\aleph$ BL $\Xi$ .

<sup>7</sup> Add ἦν after ἱκ.  $\aleph$ BL 33.

Syrophenician woman, not reported by Lk. The excessive humility of the centurion = “we Gentile dogs”. The intercession of the elders = that of the disciples. The friendliness of the elders is an admonition to Judaists = this is the attitude you ought to take up towards Gentiles. All the lessons of the “Syrophenician woman” are thus taught, while the one unwelcome feature of Christ’s refusal or unwillingness to help, which might seem to justify the Judaist, is eliminated. How far such considerations had an influence in moulding the tradition followed by Lk. it is impossible to say. Suffice it to point out that the narrative, as it stands, does double duty, and shows us:—

1. Gentile humility and faith.

2. Jewish friendliness.

3. Christ’s prompt succour, and admiration of great faith.

Vv. 11-17. The son of the widow of Nain. In Lk. only.—ἐν τῷ ἐξῆς (καιρῷ), in the following time, thereafter; vague.—ἐν τῇ ἡ. would mean: on the following day (ἡμέρα, understood), i.e., the day after the healing of the centurion’s servant in Capernaum. Hofmann defends this reading on the negative ground that no usage of style on the part of Lk. is against it, and that it better suits the circumstances. “We see Jesus on the way towards the city of Nain on the north-western slope of the little Hermon, a day’s journey from Capernaum. It is expressly noted that His disciples, and, as ἱκανοί is well attested, in considerable numbers, not merely the Twelve, were with Him, and many people besides; a surrounding the same as on the hill where He had addressed His disciples. Those of the audience who had come from Judæa are on their way home.” The point must be left doubtful. W. and H. have ἐν τῷ ἡ., and omit ἱκανοί.—Ναὶν: there is still a little hamlet of the same name (vide Robinson, Palestine, ii. 355, 361). Eusebius and Jerome speak of the town as not far from Endor. Some have thought the reference is to a Nain in Southern Palestine, mentioned by Josephus. But Lk. would hardly take his readers so far from the usual scene of Christ’s ministry without warning.—Ver. 12. καὶ ἰδοῦ, and lo! The καὶ introduces the apodosis, but is really superfluous; very Hebrew (Godet).—ἐξεκομίζετο, was being carried out (here only in N. T.); ἐκφέρειν used in the classics (Acts v. 6). Loesner cites examples of the use of this verb in the same sense, from Philo.—μονογενῆς, χήρα: these words supply the pathos of the situation, depict the woe of the widowed mother, and by implication emphasise the benevolence of the miracle, always a matter of interest for Lk.—Ver. 13. ὁ Κύριος, the Lord, first time this title has been used for Jesus in the narrative. Lk. frequently introduces it where the other synoptists have “Jesus”. The heavenly Christ, Lord of the Church, is in his mind, and perhaps he employs the title here because it is a case of raising from the dead. The “Lord” is Himself the risen One.—ἐσπλαγχνίσθη: express mention of sympathy, pity, as the ἔσπλαγχνίσθη ἐπ' αὐτῇ, καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῇ, "Μὴ κλαίε." 14. Καὶ προσελθὼν ἤψατο τῆς σοροῦ· οἱ δὲ βαστάζοντες ἔστησαν· καὶ εἶπε, "Νεανίσκε, σοὶ λέγω, ἐγέρθητι." 15. Καὶ ἀνεκάθισεν<sup>1</sup> ὁ νεκρός, καὶ ἤρξατο λαλεῖν· καὶ ἔδωκεν αὐτὸν τῇ μητρὶ αὐτοῦ. 16. Ἐλαβε δὲ φόβος ἅπαντας, καὶ ἐδόξαζον τὸν Θεόν, λέγοντες, "Ὅτι προφήτης μέγας ἐγήγερται<sup>2</sup> ἐν ἡμῖν," καὶ "Ὅτι ἐπεσκέψατο ὁ Θεὸς τὸν λαὸν αὐτοῦ." 17. Καὶ ἐξῆλθεν ὁ λόγος οὗτος ἐν ὅλῃ τῇ Ἰουδαίᾳ περὶ αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἐν<sup>3</sup> πάσῃ τῇ περιχώρῳ.

18. ΚΑΙ ἀπήγγειλαν Ἰωάννη οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ περὶ πάντων τούτων. 19. καὶ προσκαλεσάμενος δύο τινὰς τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ ὁ Ἰωάννης ἔπεμψε πρὸς τὸν Ἰησοῦν,<sup>4</sup> λέγων, "Σὺ εἶ ὁ ἐρχόμενος, ἢ ἄλλον<sup>5</sup> προσδοκῶμεν;" 20. Παραγενόμενοι δὲ πρὸς αὐτὸν οἱ ἄνδρες εἶπον, "Ἰωάννης ὁ Βαπτιστῆς ἀπέσταλκεν ἡμᾶς πρὸς σε, λέγων, Σὺ εἶ ὁ ἐρχόμενος, ἢ ἄλλον<sup>6</sup> προσδοκῶμεν;" 21. Ἐν αὐτῇ δὲ<sup>6</sup> τῇ ὥρᾳ

<sup>1</sup> B has εκαθισεν (W.H. marg.).

<sup>2</sup> ἡγερθη in  $\aleph$ ABCL $\Xi$  33.

<sup>3</sup> ἐν omitted by  $\aleph$ BL $\Xi$  33.

<sup>4</sup> κυριον in BL $\Xi$  13, 33, 69, the most likely word for Lk.

<sup>5</sup> ἕτερον in  $\aleph$ BL $\Xi$  33 (W.H.); in second place ἕτερον in  $\aleph$ DL $\Xi$  33, B has ἄλλον (W.H. text).

<sup>6</sup> ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ὥρᾳ in  $\aleph$ BL (Tisch., W.H.).

motive of the miracle. Cf. Mk. i. 41.—μὴ κλαίε, cease weeping, a hint of what was coming, but of course not understood by the widow.—Ver. 14. σοροῦ, the bier (here only in N. T.), probably an open coffin, originally an urn for keeping the bones of the dead.—ἔστησαν: those who carried the coffin stood, taking the touch of Jesus as a sign that He wished this.—Ver. 15. ἀνεκάθισεν, sat up: the ἀνά is implied even if the reading ἐκάθισεν be adopted; to sit was to sit up for one who had been previously lying; sitting up showed life returned, speaking, full possession of his senses; the reality and greatness of the miracle thus asserted.—Ver. 16. φόβος: the awe natural to all, and especially simple people, in presence of the preternatural.—προφήτης μέγας, a great prophet, like Elisha, who had wrought a similar miracle at Shunem, near by (2 Kings iv.).—ἐπεσκέψατο, visited graciously, as in i. 68, 78.—Ver. 17. ὁ λόγος οὗτος, this story. Lk. says it went out; it would spread like wildfire far and wide.—ἐν ὅλῃ τῇ Ἰουδαίᾳ, in all Judaea. Some (Meyer, Bleek, J. Weiss, Holtzmann) think Judaea means here not the province but the whole of Palestine. But Lk. is looking forward to the next incident (message from John); therefore, while the story would of course spread in all directions, north and south, he lays stress on the southward stream of rumour (carried by the Judaeian part of Christ's audience, vi. 17) through which it would reach the Baptist at Machaerus.—πάσῃ τῇ περιχώρῳ, the district surrounding Judaea, Peraea, i.e., where John was in prison.

Vv. 18-35. The Baptist's message (Mt. xi. 2-19).—Ver. 18. ἀπήγγειλαν: John's disciples report to him. Lk. assumes that his readers will remember what he has stated in iii. 20, and does not repeat it. But the reporting of the disciples tacitly implies that the master is dependent on them for information, i.e., is in prison.—περὶ πάντων τούτων: the works of Jesus as in Mt., but τούτων refers specially to the two last reported (centurion's servant, widow's son).—Ver. 19. δύο, two; more explicit than Mt., who has διὰ τ. μαθητῶν. The δύο may be an editorial change made on the document, from which both drew.—πρὸς τὸν κύριον (Ἰησοῦν, T. R.): a second instance of the use of the title "Lord" in Lk.'s narrative.—σὺ εἶ, etc.: question as in Mk., with the doubtful variation, ἄλλον for ἕτερον.—Ver. 20. On their arrival the men are made to repeat the question.—Ver. 21. Lk. makes Jesus reply not merely by word, as in Mt. (xi.

ἑθεράπευσε πολλοὺς ἀπὸ νόσων καὶ μαστίγων καὶ πνευμάτων
 πονηρῶν, καὶ τυφλοῖς πολλοῖς ἔχαρίσατο τὸ<sup>1</sup> βλέπειν. 22. καὶ
 ἀποκριθεὶς ὁ Ἰησοῦς<sup>2</sup> εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Πορευθέντες ἀπαγγείλατε Ἰωάννῃ ἃ εἶδετε καὶ ἤκούσατε· ὅτι<sup>3</sup> τυφλοὶ ἀναβλέπουσι, χωλοὶ περιπατοῦσι, λεπροὶ καθαρίζονται, κωφοὶ ἀκούουσι, νεκροὶ ἐγείρονται, πτωχοὶ εὐαγγελίζονται· 23. καὶ μακάριός ἐστιν, ὅς ἐάν μὴ σκανδαλισθῆ ἔν ἐμοί.” 24. Ἀπελθόντων δὲ τῶν ἀγγέλων Ἰωάννου, ἤρξατο λέγειν πρὸς τοὺς ὄχλους περὶ Ἰωάννου, “Τί ἐξεληλύθατε<sup>4</sup> εἰς τὴν ἔρημον θεάσασθαι; κάλαμον ὑπὸ ἀνέμου σαλευόμενον;
 25. ἀλλὰ τί ἐξεληλύθατε<sup>4</sup> ἰδεῖν; ἄνθρωπον ἐν μαλακοῖς ἱματίοις ἡμφιεσμένον; ἰδοῦ, οἱ ἐν ἱματισμῷ ἐνδόξῳ καὶ τρυφῇ ὑπάρχοντες ἐν τοῖς βασιλείοις εἰσίν. 26. ἀλλὰ τί ἐξεληλύθατε<sup>4</sup> ἰδεῖν; προφή-τιν; ναί, λέγω ὑμῖν, καὶ περισσότερον προφήτου. 27. οὗτός ἐστι περὶ οὗ γέγραπται, Ἰδοῦ, ἐγὼ<sup>5</sup> ἀποστέλλω τὸν ἄγγελόν μου πρὸ προσώπου σου, ὅς κατασκευάσει τὴν ὁδόν σου ἔμπροσθέν σου.”
 28. Λέγω γὰρ<sup>6</sup> ὑμῖν, μείζων ἐν γεννητοῖς γυναικῶν προφήτης<sup>7</sup>
 Ἰωάννου τοῦ Βαπτιστοῦ<sup>7</sup> οὐδεὶς ἐστιν. ὁ δὲ μικρότερος ἐν τῇ

<sup>1</sup> Omit το most uncials.

<sup>3</sup> Omit ο I. ΞBDΞ.

<sup>2</sup> Omit οτι ΞBL (W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> ἐξηλθατε in all three places in ΞABDLΞ 69 (W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> Omit ἐγὼ ΞBDLΞ minusc. verss. (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>6</sup> Omit γαρ omitted in BΞ 33 (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>7</sup> ΞBLΞ al. ῥl. vet. Lat. omit προφ. and του B. ADΔ al. have both.

5), but first of all by deeds displaying His miraculous power. That Jesus wrought demonstrative cures there and then may be Lk.'s inference from the expression ἀκούετε καὶ βλέπετε, which seems to point to something going on before their eyes.—ἐχαρίσατο: a word welcome to Lk. as containing the idea of grace = He granted the boon (of sight).—Ver. 22 contains the verbal answer, pointing the moral = go and tell your master what ye saw and heard (aorist, past at the time of reporting), and leave him to draw his own conclusion.—νεκροὶ ἐγείρονται: this refers to the son of the widow of Nain; raisings from the dead are not included in the list of marvels given in the previous verse. Lk. omits throughout the connecting καὶ with which Mt. binds the marvels into couplets. On the motive of John's message, vide notes of Mt., ad loc.

Vv. 24-30. Encomium on the Baptist.—Ver. 24. τί: if we take τί = what, the question will be: what went ye out to see? and the answer: “a reed, etc.”;

if=why, it will be: why went ye out? and the answer: “to see a reed, etc.”—ἐξεληλύθατε (T. R.): this reading, as different from Mt. (ἐξήλθατε), has a measure of probability and is adopted by Tischendorf, here and in vv. 25 and 26. But against this J. Weiss emphasises the fact that the “emendators” were fond of perfects. The aorists seem more appropriate to the connection as containing a reference to a past event, the visit of the persons addressed to the scene of John's ministry.—Ver. 25. ἰδοῦ οἱ: Lk. changes the expression here, substituting for οἱ τὰ μαλακὰ φοροῦντες (Mt.), οἱ ἐν ἱματισμῷ ἐνδόξῳ καὶ τρυφῇ ὑπάρχοντες = those living in (clothed with) splendid apparel and luxury.—Vv. 26 and 27 are = vv. 9 and 10 in Mt., with the exception that Lk. inverts the words προφήτην, ἰδεῖν, making it possible to render: why went ye out? to see a prophet? or, what went ye out to see? a prophet? In Mt., only the former rendering is possible.—Ver. 28. λέγω ὑμῖν: here as elsewhere Lk. omits the Hebrew ἄμην, and he other-

βασιλεία τοῦ Θεοῦ μείζων αὐτοῦ ἐστὶ." 29. Καὶ πᾶς ὁ λαὸς ἀκούσας καὶ οἱ τελῶναι ἐδικαίωσαν τὸν Θεόν, βαπτισθέντες τὸ βάπτισμα Ἰωάννου· 30. οἱ δὲ Φαρισαῖοι καὶ οἱ νομικοὶ τὴν βουλήν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἠθέτησαν εἰς ἑαυτούς, μὴ βαπτισθέντες ὑπ' αὐτοῦ. 31. εἶπε δὲ ὁ Κύριος,<sup>1</sup> "Τίνι οὖν ὁμοιώσω τοὺς ἀνθρώπους τῆς γενεᾶς ταύτης; καὶ τίνι εἰσὶν ὅμοιοι; 32. ὅμοιοί εἰσι παιδίσι τοῖς ἐν ἀγορᾷ καθημένοις, καὶ προσφωνοῦσιν ἀλλήλοις, καὶ λέγουσιν,<sup>2</sup> Ἠλλήσαμεν ὑμῖν, καὶ οὐκ ὠρχήσασθε· ἐθρηγήσαμεν ὑμῖν,<sup>3</sup> καὶ οὐκ ἐκλαύσατε. 33. ἐλήλυθε γὰρ Ἰωάννης ὁ Βαπτιστῆς ὁ μῆτε ἄρτον

<sup>1</sup> εἶπε δε ο Κ. omitted in uncials, found in minusc.; a marginal direction in Lectionaries.

<sup>2</sup> NB I have the peculiar reading α λεγει, which W.H. adopt.

<sup>3</sup> Omit this second ὑμιν (conforms to first) NBDLΞ 13, 346.

wise alters and tones down the remarkable statement about John, omitting the solemn ἐγγίγνεται, and inserting, according to an intrinsically probable reading, though omitted in the best MSS. (and in W.H.), προφήτης, so limiting the wide sweep of the statement. Lk.'s version is secondary. Mt.'s is more like what Jesus speaking strongly would say. Even if He meant: a greater prophet than John there is not among the sons of women, He would say it thus: among those born of women there hath not arisen a greater than John, as if he were the greatest man that ever lived.—ὁ δὲ μικ. On this vide at Mt. —Vv. 29, 30 are best taken as a historical reflection by the evangelist. Its prosaic character, as compared with what goes before and comes after, compels this conclusion, as even Hahn admits. Then its absence from Mt.'s account points in the same direction. It has for its aim to indicate to what extent the popular judgment had endorsed the estimate just offered by Jesus. The whole people, even the publicans, had, by submitting to be baptised by John, acknowledged his legitimacy and power as a prophet of God, and so "justified" (ἐδικαίωσαν) God in sending him as the herald of the coming Messianic Kingdom and King, i.e., recognised him as the fit man for so high a vocation. To be strictly correct he is obliged, contrary to his wont, to refer to the Pharisees and lawyers as exceptions, describing them as making void, frustrating (ἠθέτησαν, cf. Gal. ii. 21) the counsel of God with reference to themselves. The two words ἐδικ. and ἠθέτ. are antithetic, and help to define each other. The latter meaning to treat with contempt and so set aside, the former must mean to approve God's counsel or ordinance in the mission of the Baptist. Kypke renders: laudarunt Deum, citing numerous instances of this sense from the Psalt. Solom.—εἰς ἑαυτούς after ἠθέτησαν has been variously rendered = "against themselves" (A. V.) and = "for themselves," i.e., in so far as they were concerned (R. V.; "quantum ab eis pendeat," Bornemann). But the latter would require τὸ εἰς ἑαυτούς. The meaning is plain enough. God's counsel very specially concerned the Pharisees and lawyers, for none in Israel more needed to repent than they. Therefore the phrase = they frustrated God's counsel (in John's mission), which was for (concerned) the whole Jewish people, and its religious leaders very particularly.

Vv. 31-35. The children in the market place.—τούς ἀν. τ. γενεᾶς ταύτης. The pointed reference in the previous verse to the Pharisees and lawyers marks them out as, in the view of the evangelist, the "generation" Jesus has in His eye. This is not so clear in Mt.'s version, where we gather that they are the subject of animadversion from the characterisation corresponding to their character as otherwise known. Jesus spoke severely only of the religious leaders; of the people always pitifully.—Ver. 32. ὅμοιοί εἰσιν: referring to ἀνθρώπους, ὁμοία in Mt. referring to γενεάν. The variations in Lk.'s version from Mt.'s are slight: both seem to be keeping close to a common source—ἀλλήλοις for ἑτέροις, ἐκλαύσατε for ἐκόψασθε; in ver. 33 ἄρτον is inserted after ἐσθίων and οἶνον after πίνων;

ἐσθίων μήτε οἶνον πίνων,<sup>1</sup> καὶ λέγετε, Δαιμόνιον ἔχει. 34. ἐλήλυθεν ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἐσθίων καὶ πίνων, καὶ λέγετε, Ἰδοῦ, ἄνθρωπος φάγος καὶ οἰνοπότης, τελωνῶν φίλος<sup>2</sup> καὶ ἁμαρτωλῶν. 35. καὶ ἐδικαιώθη ἡ σοφία ἀπὸ τῶν τέκνων αὐτῆς πάντων."<sup>3</sup>

36. Ἦρώτα δέ τις αὐτὸν τῶν Φαρισαίων, ἵνα φάγῃ μετ' αὐτοῦ· καὶ εἰσελθὼν εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν<sup>4</sup> τοῦ Φαρισαίου ἀνεκλίθη.<sup>5</sup> 37. Καὶ ἰδοῦ, γυνὴ ἐν τῇ πόλει, ἣτις ἦν<sup>6</sup> ἁμαρτωλός, ἐπιγνοῦσα<sup>7</sup> ὅτι ἀνάκειται<sup>8</sup>

<sup>1</sup> In μητε αρτον . . . πινων ἰββῆ have μη for first μητε, BD εσθων for εσθίων, ἰββῆ art. after εσθ. and οιν. after πινων. W.H. adopt all these changes.

<sup>2</sup> φίλος before τελων. in most uncials.

<sup>3</sup> παντων after απο in ἰββ minusc. (W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> τον οικον in ἰββδλε ἰ, 33, 69 al.

<sup>5</sup> κατεκλιθη in βδλε ἰ, 33.

<sup>6</sup> ητις ην εν τη πολει in ἰββλε (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>7</sup> και before επιγ. in ἰαβ al. ῥλ.

<sup>8</sup> κατακ. in ἰαβδλε 33.

following a late tradition, think Meyer and Schanz. More probably they are explanatory editorial touches by Lk., as if to say: John did eat and drink, but not bread and wine.—For ἦλθεν Lk. substitutes in vv. 33 and 34 ἐλήλυθεν = is come. Thus the two prophets have taken their place once for all in the page of history: the one as an ascetic, the other as avoiding peculiarity—influencing men not by the method of isolation but by the method of sympathy. The malignant caricature of this genial character in ver. 34—glutton, drunkard, comrade of publicans and sinners—originated doubtless in the Capernaum mission.—Ver. 35. καὶ, etc., and wisdom is wont to be justified by all her children; by all who are themselves wise, not foolish and unreasonable like the “generation” described. On this adage vide notes on Mt. xi. 19. Bornemann thinks that this verse is part of what the adverse critics said, of course spoken in irony = their conduct shown to be folly by results; what converts they made: the refuse of the population!

Vv. 36-50. The sinful woman. This section, peculiar to Lk., one of the golden evangelic incidents we owe to him, is introduced here with much tact, as it serves to illustrate how Jesus came to be called the friend of publicans and sinners, and to be calumniated as such, and at the same time to show the true nature of the relations He sustained to these classes. It serves further to exhibit Jesus as One whose genial, gracious spirit could bridge gulfs of social cleavage, and make Him the friend, not of one class only, but of all classes, the friend of man, not merely of the degraded. Lk. would not have his readers imagine that Jesus dined only with such people as He met in Levi's house. In Lk.'s pages Jesus dines with Pharisees also, here and on two other occasions. This is a distinctive feature in his portraiture of Jesus, characteristic of his irenic cosmopolitan disposition. It has often been maintained that this narrative is simply the story of Mary of Bethany remodelled so as to teach new lessons. But, as will appear, there are original features in it which, even in the judgment of Holtzmann (H. C.), make it probable that two incidents of the kind occurred.

Vv. 36-39. The situation.—τις τῶν Φ.: when or who not indicated, probably not known, but of no consequence to the story; the point to be noted that one of the Pharisaic class was the inviter.—τοῦ Φαρισαίου: the class indicated a second time to make prominent the fact that Jesus did not hesitate to accept the invitation. Euthy. Zig. remarks: He did not refuse that He might not give excuse for saying that He ate with publicans and sinners and avoided the Pharisees (βδελυσσόμενος).—Ver. 37. γυνή, etc., a woman who was in the city, a sinner. This arrangement of the words (ἣτις ἦν ἐν τῇ πόλει, W.H.) represents her as a notorious character; how sinning indicated by expressive silence: a harlot. In what city? Various conjectures. Why not Capernaum? She a guest and hearer on occasion of the feast in Levi's house, and this what came of it! Place the two dinners side by side for an effective contrast.—ἐπιγνοῦσα,

<sup>b</sup> here only in sense of bearing or bringing to, in N. T. ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ τοῦ Φαρισαίου, <sup>b</sup> κομίσασα ἀλάστρον μύρου, 38. καὶ στᾶσα παρὰ τοὺς πόδας αὐτοῦ ὀπίσω<sup>1</sup> κλαίουσα, ἤρξατο βρέχειν τοὺς πόδας αὐτοῦ τοῖς δάκρυσιν,<sup>2</sup> καὶ ταῖς θριξὶ τῆς κεφαλῆς αὐτῆς ἐξέμασσε, καὶ κατεφίλει τοὺς πόδας αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἤλειφε τῷ μύρῳ. 39. ἰδὼν δὲ ὁ Φαρισαῖος ὁ καλέσας αὐτὸν εἶπεν ἐν ἑαυτῷ λέγων, “Οὗτος, εἰ ἦν προφήτης,<sup>3</sup> ἐγίνωσκεν ἂν τίς καὶ ποταπὴ ἢ γυνή, ἣτις ἄπτεται αὐτοῦ· ὅτι ἄμαρτωλός ἐστι.”

40. Καὶ ἀποκριθεὶς ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπε πρὸς αὐτόν, “Σίμων, ἔχω σοὶ τι εἰπεῖν.” Ὁ δὲ φησι, “Διδάσκαλε, εἶπέ.”<sup>4</sup> 41. “Δύο χρεωφειλέται ἦσαν δανειστῆτιν· ὁ εἰς ὠφείλε δηνάρια πεντακόσια, ὁ δὲ ἕτερος πεντήκοντα. 42. μὴ ἐχόντων δὲ<sup>5</sup> αὐτῶν ἀποδοῦναι, ἀμφοτέροις ἐχαρίσατο. τίς οὖν αὐτῶν εἶπέ,<sup>6</sup> πλεῖον αὐτὸν ἀγαπήσει;<sup>7</sup>”

<sup>1</sup> ὀπισω before παρα τ. π. in  $\aleph$ B $\Delta$ L $\chi$ A I, 33 (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> τοῖς δακ. before ἤρξατο in  $\aleph$ B $\Delta$ L 33, a very credible emphasis on the tears.

<sup>3</sup> B $\Xi$  have ο προφ. (W.H. in brackets).

<sup>4</sup> διδασκ. εἶπε φησιν in  $\aleph$ B $\Delta$ L $\Xi$  I (Tisch., W.H.). <sup>5</sup> Omit δε B $\Delta$ L $\Xi$ .

<sup>6</sup> Omit εἶπε  $\aleph$ B $\Delta$ L $\Xi$ .

<sup>7</sup> αγαπ. αυτον in  $\aleph$ B $\Delta$ L $\Xi$  33.

having learned, either by accident, or by inquiry, or by both combined.—ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ τ. φ.: the Pharisee again, nota bene! A formidable place for one like her to go to, but what will love not dare?—Ver. 38. στᾶσα ὀπίσω, standing behind, at His feet. The guests reclined on couches with their feet turned outwards, a posture learned by the Jews from their various masters: Persians, Greeks, Romans. In delicacy Jesus would not look round or take any notice, but let her do what she would.—κλαίουσα: excitement, tumultuous emotions, would make a burst of weeping inevitable.—ἤρξατο applies formally to βρέχειν, but really to all the descriptive verbs following. She did not wet Christ's feet with tears of set purpose; the act was involuntary.—βρέχειν, to moisten, as rain moistens the ground: her tears fell like a thunder shower on Christ's feet. Cf. Mt. v. 45.—ἐξέμασσε, she continued wiping. Might have been infinitive depending on ἤρξατο, but more forcible as an imperfect. Of late use in this sense. To have her hair flowing would be deemed immodest. Extremes met in that act.—κατεφίλει, kissed fervently, again and again. Judas also kissed fervently. Vide Mt. xxvi. 49 and remarks there.—ἤλειφε: this was the one act she had come of set purpose to do; all the rest was done impulsively under the rush of feeling.—Ver. 39. ὁ Φαρισαῖος, for the fourth time; this time he is most appropriately so designated because he is to act in character.—εἰ ἦν προφήτης: not the worst thing he could have thought. This woman's presence implies previous relations, of what sort need not be asked: not a prophet, but no thought of impurity; simply ignorant like a common man.—ἐγίνωσκεν ἂν, indicative with ἂν, as usual in a supposition contrary to fact.—τίς καὶ ποταπὴ, who and what sort of a woman; known to everybody and known for evil.—ἄπτεται: touch of a man however slight by such a woman impossible without evil desire arising in her. So judged the Pharisee; any other theory of her action inconceivable to him.

Vv. 40-50. Host and guest.—ἀποκριθεὶς, answering, to his thought written on his face.—Σίμων: the Pharisee now is called by his own name as in friendly intercourse. The whole dialogue on Christ's part presents an exquisite combination of outspoken criticism with courtesy.—ἔχω σοὶ τι εἰπεῖν: comis praeformatio, Bengel.—Διδάσκαλε: Simon's reply equally frank and pleasant.—Ver. 41. The parable of the two debtors, an original feature in the story.—χρεωφειλέται: here and in xvi. 5, only, in N. T.—δανειστῆτιν (here only in N. T.): might mean a usurer, but his behaviour in the story makes it more suitable to think of him simply as a creditor.—ὁ εἰς ὠφείλε: even the larger sum was a petty debt,

43. Ἀποκριθεὶς δὲ ὁ<sup>1</sup> Σίμων εἶπεν, “*Ὑπολαμβάνω ὅτι ᾧ τὸ πλεῖον Acts ii. 15 ἐχαρίσατο.” Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, “Ὁρθῶς ἔκρινας.” 44. Καὶ στραφεὶς πρὸς τὴν γυναῖκα, τῷ Σίμωνι ἔφη, “Βλέπεις ταύτην τὴν γυναῖκα; εἰσηλθόν σου εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν, ὕδωρ ἐπὶ τοὺς πόδας μου<sup>2</sup> οὐκ ἔδωκας. αὕτη δὲ τοῖς δάκρυσιν ἔβρεξέ μου τοὺς πόδας, καὶ ταῖς θριξὶ τῆς κεφαλῆς<sup>3</sup> αὐτῆς ἐξέμαξε. 45. φίλημά μοι οὐκ ἔδωκας· αὕτη δέ, ἀφ’ ἧς εἰσηλθον, οὐ διέλιπε<sup>4</sup> καταφιλοῦσά μου τοὺς πόδας. 46. ἔλαιψ τὴν κεφαλὴν μου οὐκ ἤλειψας· αὕτη δὲ μύρω ἤλειψέ μου τοὺς πόδας.<sup>5</sup> 47. οὐ χάριν, λέγω σοι, ἀφώνται αἱ ἁμαρτίαι αὐτῆς<sup>6</sup> αἱ πολλαί, ὅτι ἠγάπησε πολὺ· ᾧ δὲ ὀλίγον ἀφίεται, ὀλίγον ἀγαπᾷ.” 48. Εἶπε δὲ αὐτῇ, “Ἀφώνται σου αἱ ἁμαρτίαι.” 49. Καὶ ἤρξαντο οἱ συνανακείμενοι λέγειν ἐν ἑαυτοῖς, “Τίς οὗτός ἐστιν ὃς καὶ ἁμαρτίας ἀφήσιν;” 50. Εἶπε δὲ πρὸς τὴν γυναῖκα, “Ἡ πίστις σου σέσωκέ σε· πορεύου εἰς εἰρήνην.”

<sup>1</sup> Omit δε BD, and ο ΝΒLΞ.

<sup>2</sup> μου before ἐπι τ. π. in ΝLΞ (Tisch., W.H., marg.). μοι ἐπι ποδας in B (W.H. text).

<sup>3</sup> Omit της κεφ. ΝΑΒDILΞ vet. Lat. vulg. cop. al. (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> διέλιπε in BD (W.H. text); διέλειπεν in ΝAILΔΞ al. (Tisch., W.H., marg.)—a correction of style.

<sup>5</sup> μου τ. π. in Ν al., ι, ι3, 69 al. (Tisch. = T.R.). τ. π. μου in BLΞ (W.H.).

<sup>6</sup> αὐτῆς before αἱ ἁμαρ. in Ν, etc. (Tisch.). T.R. = BLΞ al. mul. (W.H.).

whereby Simon would be thrown off his guard: no suspicion of a personal reference.—Ver. 42. ἐχαρίσατο: a warmer word than ἀφιέναι, welcome to Lk. as containing the idea of grace.—ὀρθῶς ἔκρινας, like the πάνυ ὀρθῶς of Socrates, but without his irony.—Vv. 44-46. στραφεὶς: Jesus looks at the woman now for the first time, and asks His host to look at her, the despised one, that he may learn a lesson from her, by a contrast to be drawn between her behaviour and his own in application of the parable. A sharply marked antithesis runs through the description.—ὕδωρ—δάκρυσιν; φίλημα—καταφιλοῦσα; ἔλαιψ (common oil), μύρω (precious ointment); κεφαλὴν—πόδας. There is a kind of poetic rhythm in the words, as is apt to be the case when men speak under deep emotion.—Ver. 47. οὐ χάριν, wherefore, introducing Christ's theory of the woman's extraordinary behaviour as opposed to Simon's ungenerous suspicions.—λέγω σοι, I tell you, with emphasis; what Jesus firmly believes and what Simon very much needs to be told.—ἀφώνται (Doric perf. pas.) αἱ ἁμαρτίαι αὐτῆς, forgiven are her sins;

i.e., it is a case, not of a courtesan acting in character, as you have been thinking, but of a penitent who has come through me to the knowledge that even such as she can be forgiven. That is the meaning of this extraordinary demonstration of passionate affection.—αἱ πολλαί, the many, a sort of afterthought: many sins, a great sinner, you think, and so I also can see from her behaviour in this chamber, which manifests intense love, whence I infer that she is conscious of much forgiveness and of much need to be forgiven.—ὅτι ἠγάπησεν πολὺ: ὅτι introduces the ground of the assertion implied in πολλαί; many sins inferred from much love; the underlying principle: much forgiven, much love, which is here applied backwards, because Simon, while believing in the woman's great sin, did not believe in her penitence. The foregoing interpretation is now adopted by most commentators. The old dispute between Protestants and Catholics, based on this text, as to the ground of pardon is now pretty much out of date.—ᾧ δὲ ὀλίγον, etc.: this is the other side of the truth, as it applied to Simon: little (conscious)

Acts xvii. VIII. 1. Καὶ ἐγένετο ἐν τῷ καθεξῆς, καὶ αὐτὸς *διώδευε κατὰ πόλιν καὶ κώμην, κηρύσσων καὶ εὐαγγελιζόμενος τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ· καὶ οἱ δώδεκα σὺν αὐτῷ, 2. καὶ γυναϊκῆς τινες αἱ ἦσαν τεθεραπευμένα ἀπὸ πνευμάτων πονηρῶν καὶ ἀσθενειῶν, Μαρία ἡ καλουμένη Μαγδαληνῆ, ἀφ' ἧς δαιμόνια ἑπτὰ ἐξελήλυθει, 3. καὶ Ἰωάννα γυιὴ Χουζᾶ ἐπιτρόπου Ἡρώδου, καὶ Σουσάννα, καὶ ἕτεραι πολλάι, αἵτινες διηκόνουν αὐτῷ<sup>1</sup> ἀπὸ<sup>2</sup> τῶν ὕπαρχόντων<sup>3</sup> αὐταῖς.

b const. (with dat.) Ch. xii. 15. Acts iv. 32. 4. Συνιόντος δὲ ὄχλου πολλοῦ, καὶ τῶν κατὰ πόλιν ἐπιπορευομένων πρὸς αὐτόν, εἶπε διὰ παραβολῆς, 5. "Ἐξήλθεν ὁ σπείρων τοῦ σπείρειν τὸν σπόρον αὐτοῦ· καὶ ἐν τῷ σπείρειν αὐτόν, ὃ μὲν ἔπρεσε παρὰ τὴν ὁδόν, καὶ κατεπατήθη, καὶ τὰ πετεινὰ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ κατ-sin, little love. The doctrine here enunciated is another very original element in this story. It and the words in Lk. v. 31 and Lk. xv. 7 form together a complete apology for Christ's relations with the sinful.—Ver. 48. ἀφώνται: direct assurance of forgiveness, for confirmation of her faith tried by an unsympathetic surrounding of frowning Pharisees.—Ver. 49. τίς οὗτος: again the stupid cavil about usurpation of the power to pardon (v. 21).—Ver. 50. Concerned only about the welfare of the heroine of the story, Jesus takes no notice of this, but bids her farewell with "thy faith hath saved thee, go into peace". J. Weiss (Meyer) thinks ver. 49 may be an addition by Lk. to the story as given in his source.

<sup>1</sup> αυτοῖς for αὐτω in BD al. pl.

<sup>2</sup> εκ for απο in SABDL I, 69 al. (Tisch., W.H., adopt both changes).

CHAPTER VIII. THE SOWER AND OTHER INCIDENTS.—Vv. 1-3. Ministering women; peculiar to Lk., and one of the interesting fruits of his industrious search for additional memorabilia of Jesus, giving us a glimpse into the way in which Jesus and His disciples were supported.—Ver. 1. ἐν τῷ καθεξῆς, "afterwards," A. V., not necessarily "soon afterwards," R. V. (= ἐν τῷ ἐξῆς, vii. 11). The temporal connection with the preceding narrative is loose, but the connection of thought and sentiment is close. Lk. would show how penitent, suffering, sorrowful women who had received benefit in body or soul from Jesus went into peace and blessedness. They followed Him and served Him with their substance, and so illustrated the law: much benefit, much love.—διώδευε: of this itinerant preaching ministry Lk. knows, or at least gives, no particulars. The one thing he knows or states is that on such tours Jesus had the benefit of female devotion. Probably such service began very early, and was not limited to one tour of late date.—Ver. 2. Μαρία ἡ κ. Μαγδαληνῆ, Mary called the Magdalene, the only one of the three named who is more than a name for readers of the Gospel; since the fourth century, identified with the sinful woman of the previous chapter, the seven demons from which she is said to have been delivered being supposed to refer to her wicked life; a mistaken identification, as in the Gospels demoniacal possession is something quite distinct from immorality. Koetsveld, speaking of the place assigned in tradition and popular opinion to Mary as the patroness of converted harlots, remarks: "All the water of the sea cannot wash off this stain from Mary Magdalene," De Gelijknissen, p. 366. The epithet Μαγδαληνῆ is usually taken as meaning "of the town of Magdala". P. de Lagarde interprets it "the hair-curler," Haarkünstlerin (Nachrichten der Gesell. der Wissens., Göttingen, 1889, pp. 371-375).

Vv. 4-8. Parable of the sower (Mt. xiii. 1-9, Mk. iv. 1-9).—Ver. 4. ὄχλου: Lk., like the two other evangelists, provides for the parable discourse a large audience, but he makes no mention of preaching from a boat, which has been forestalled in a previous incident (chap. v. 3).—καὶ τῶν κατὰ πόλιν, etc.: this clause simply explains how the crowd was made up, by contingents from the various towns. This would have been clearer if the καὶ had been left out; yet it is not superfluous, as it gives an enhanced idea of the size of the crowd = even

ἔφαγεν αὐτό. 6. καὶ ἕτερον ἔπασεν<sup>1</sup> ἐπὶ τὴν πέτραν, καὶ φυὲν ἐξηράνθη, διὰ τὸ μὴ ἔχειν ἰκμάδα. 7. καὶ ἕτερον ἔπασεν ἐν μέσῳ τῶν ἀκανθῶν, καὶ συμφυεῖσαι αἱ ἀκανθαὶ ἀπέπνιξαν αὐτό. 8. καὶ ἕτερον ἔπασεν ἐπὶ<sup>2</sup> τὴν γῆν τὴν ἀγαθὴν, καὶ φυὲν ἐποίησε καρπὸν ἑκατονταπλασίονα.” Ταῦτα λέγων ἐφώνει, “Ὁ ἔχων ὅσα ἀκούειν ἀκούετω.” 9. Ἐπηρεῶτων δὲ αὐτὸν οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ, λέγοντες,<sup>3</sup> “Τίς εἶη ἡ παραβολὴ αὕτη<sup>4</sup> ;” 10. Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν, “Υμῖν δέδοται γινῶναι τὰ μυστήρια τῆς βασιλείας τοῦ Θεοῦ· τοῖς δὲ λοιποῖς ἐν παραβολαῖς, ἵνα βλέποντες μὴ βλέπωσι, καὶ ἀκούοντες μὴ συνιῶσιν. 11. Ἔστι δὲ αὕτη ἡ παραβολή· ὁ σπόρος ἐστὶν ὁ λόγος τοῦ Θεοῦ· 12. οἱ δὲ παρὰ τὴν ὁδὸν εἰσὶν οἱ ἀκούοντες,<sup>5</sup> εἶτα ἔρχεται ὁ διάβολος καὶ αἶρει τὸν λόγον ἀπὸ τῆς καρδίας αὐτῶν, ἵνα μὴ πιστεύσαντες

<sup>1</sup> So in  $\aleph D$  = parall.  $\kappa\alpha\tau\epsilon\pi\alpha\sigma\epsilon\nu$  in BLRE (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup>  $\epsilon\iota\varsigma$  for  $\epsilon\pi\iota$  in  $\aleph A B L E$  al. pl.

<sup>3</sup> Omit  $\lambda\epsilon\gamma\omicron\nu\tau\epsilon\varsigma$   $\aleph B D L E$  verss., Orig.

<sup>4</sup>  $\aleph B 33$  have  $\tau\iota\varsigma$   $\alpha\upsilon\tau\eta$   $\epsilon\iota\eta$   $\eta$  (B om.)  $\pi\alpha\rho.$ , changed into the smoother reading in T.R.

<sup>5</sup>  $\alpha\kappa\omicron\upsilon\sigma\alpha\nu\tau\epsilon\varsigma$  in  $\aleph B L E$ .

people from every city gathering to Him.—διὰ παραβολῆς: Lk. gives only a single parable in this place.—Ver. 5. τὸν σπόρον α.: an editorial addition, that could be dispensed with.—δὲ μὲν, one part, δ neuter, replied to by καὶ ἕτερον = ἕτερον δὲ in ver. 6.—Ver. 6. φυὲν, 2nd aorist participle, neuter, from ἐφύην (Alex. form), the Attic 2nd aorist being ἐφυν.—ικμάδα (ικμάς), moisture, here only in N. T.—Ver. 7. ἐν μέσῳ τ. ἀ.: Mt. has ἐπὶ, Mk. εἰς. Lk.'s expression suggests that the thorns are already above ground.—Ver. 8. ἑκατονταπλασίονα, an hundredfold. Lk. has only one degree of fruitfulness, the highest, possibly because when 100 is possible 60 and 30 were deemed unsatisfactory, but an important lesson is missed by the omission. The version in Mt. and Mk. is doubtless the original. It was characteristic of Jesus, while demanding the undivided heart, to allow for diversity in the measure of fruitfulness. Therein appeared His "sweet reasonableness". This omission seems to justify the opinion of Meyer that Lk.'s version of the parable is secondary. Weiss on the contrary thinks it comes nearest to the original.

Vv. 9-10. Conversation concerning the parable (Mt. xiii. 10-17, Mk. iv. 10-12).—Ver. 9. τίς εἶη, what this parable might be. The question in Lk. refers not to the parabolic method, as if they had never heard a parable before, but to the sense or aim of this particular parable. It simply prepares for the interpretation following.—Ver. 10. The contrast between the disciples and others, as here put, is that in the case of the former the mysteries of the kingdom are given to be known, in that of the latter the mysteries are given, but only in parables, therefore so as to remain unknown. The sense is the same in Mt. and Mk., but the mode of expression is somewhat different.—τοῖς δὲ λοιποῖς, a milder phrase than the ἐκείνοις τοῖς ἔξω of Mk.; cf. ἄλλων in chap. v. 29.—ἵνα βλέποντες, etc.: this sombre saying is also characteristically toned done by abbreviation as compared with Mt. and Mk., as if it contained an unwelcome idea. Vide notes on Mt.

Vv. 11-15. Interpretation of the parable (Mt. xiii. 18-23, Mk. iv. 13-20).—Ver. 12. οἱ ἀκούσαντες: this is not a sufficient definition of the wayside hearers; all the classes described heard. The next clause, beginning with εἶτα, must be included in the definition = the wayside men are persons in whose case, so soon as they have heard, cometh, etc.—ὁ διάβολος: each gospel has a different name for the evil one; ὁ πονηρὸς, Mt., ὁ σατανᾶς, Mk.—ἵνα μὴ πιστεύσαντες σωθῶσιν, lest believing they should be saved; peculiar to Lk., and in expression an echo of St. Paul σωθῶσιν. 13. οἱ δὲ ἐπὶ τῆς πέτρας,<sup>1</sup> οἱ ὅταν ἀκούσωσι, μετὰ χαρᾶς δέχονται τὸν λόγον, καὶ οὗτοι<sup>2</sup> ἴζαν οὐκ ἔχουσιν, οἱ πρὸς *καιρὸν πιστεύουσι, καὶ ἐν καιρῷ πειρασμοῦ ἀφίστανται. 14. τὸ δὲ εἰς τὰς ἀκάνθας πεσόν, οὗτοί εἰσιν οἱ ἀκούσαντες, καὶ ὑπὸ μεριμνῶν καὶ πλοῦτου καὶ ἡδονῶν τοῦ βίου πορευόμενοι συμπνίγονται, καὶ οὐ τελεσφοροῦσι. 15. τὸ δὲ ἐν τῇ καλῇ γῇ, οὗτοί εἰσιν οἵτινες ἐν καρδίᾳ καλῇ καὶ ἀγαθῇ, ἀκούσαντες τὸν λόγον κατέχουσι, καὶ καρποφοροῦσιν ἐν ὑπομονῇ.

16. "Οὐδεὶς δὲ λύχνον ἄψας καλύπτει αὐτὸν σκεύει, ἢ ὑποκάτω κλίνης τίθησιν· ἀλλ' ἐπὶ λυχνίας ἐπιτίθησιν,<sup>3</sup> ἵνα οἱ εἰσπορευόμενοι and the apostolic age.—Ver. 13. μετὰ χαρᾶς: common to the three reports, a familiar and important feature of this type—emotional religion.—πρὸς καιρὸν πιστεύουσι, believe for a season, instead of Mt.'s and Mk.'s, he (they) is (are) temporary.—ἐν καιρῷ πειρασμοῦ: a more comprehensive expression than that common to Mt. and Mk., which points only to outward trial, tribulation, or persecution. The season of temptation may include inward trial by deadness of feeling, doubt, etc. (Schanz).—Ver. 14. τὸ δὲ. There is a change here from the plural masculine to the neuter singular: from "those who" to "that which".—πορευόμενοι: the use of this word, which seems superfluous (Grotius), is probably due to Lk. having under his eye Mk.'s account, in which εἰσπορευόμενοι comes in at this point. Kypke renders: "illi a curis (ὑπὸ μεριμνῶν καὶ π. καὶ ἡ. τ. β.) occupati sive penetrati" = they being taken possession of by, etc., the passive form of Mk.'s "cares, etc., entering in and taking possession". This seems as good an explanation as can be thought of.—Bornemann takes ὑπὸ = μετὰ or σύν, and renders, they go or live amid cares, etc., and are checked.—οὐ τελεσφοροῦσι, they do not bring to maturity (here only in N. T.). Examples of this use in Wetstein and Kypke from Strabo, Philo, Josephus, etc. Hesychius explains τελεσφόρος thus: ὁ τελεσφορῶν καθ' ἑραν τοὺς καρποὺς, ἢ ὁ τελείους αὐτοὺς φέρων.—Ver. 15. ἐν καρδίᾳ καλῇ καὶ ἀγαθῇ, in a noble and generous heart, an important contribution by Lk. to the explanation of the conditions of fruitfulness. The former epithet points to a lofty aim or ideal, the latter to enthusiastic whole-hearted devotion to the ideal, the two constituting a heroic character. The phrase was familiar to the Greeks, and Lk. may have been acquainted with their use of it to describe a man comme il faut, but he brings to the conception of the καλὸς κάγαθὸς new moral elements.—ἐν ὑπομονῇ, in patience, as opposed to πρὸς καιρὸν; and, it might be added, ἐν εἰλικρινείᾳ as opposed to the thorny-ground hearers. ὑπομ., again in xxi. 19, often in Epistles.

<sup>1</sup> ἐπι τῆς π. in BLD al. pl. (W.H. text). ἐπι την π. in 8D al. (Tisch., W.H., marg.).

<sup>2</sup> B has αὐτοί (W.H. marg.).

<sup>3</sup> 8BLΞ have the simple τίθησιν (D has τιθι, apparently an incomplete word = τιθισιν).

Vv. 16-18. Those who have light must let it shine (Mt. v. 15, x. 26, Mk. iv. 21-25). Lk. here seems to follow Mk., who brings in at the same point the parable of the lamp, setting forth the duty of those who are initiated into the mysteries of the kingdom to diffuse their light. A most important complement to the doctrine set forth in ver. 10, that parables were meant to veil the mysteries of the kingdom.—Ver. 16. ἄψας: Mt. has καίουσιν. ἄπτειν is the more classical word.—σκεύει: any hollow vessel instead of the more definite but less familiar μόδιον in Mt. and Mk.—κλίνης, bed or couch, as in Mt. and Mk. Nobody puts the lamp under a vessel or a couch, as a rule; it may be done occasionally when the light, which burns night and day in an eastern cottage, for any reason needs to be obscured for a while.—ἵνα οἱ εἰσπορευόμενοι, etc., that those entering in may see the light. The light is rather for βλέπωσι τὸ φῶς. 17. οὐ γάρ ἐστι κρυπτόν, ὃ οὐ φανερόν γενήσεται· οὐδὲ ἀπόκρυφον, ὃ οὐ γνωσθήσεται<sup>1</sup> καὶ εἰς φανερόν ἔλθῃ

18. βλέπετε οὖν πῶς ἀκούετε· ὅς γὰρ ἂν<sup>2</sup> ἔχη, δοθήσεται αὐτῷ καὶ ὅς ἂν μὴ ἔχη, καὶ ὁ δοκεῖ ἔχειν, ἀρθήσεται ἀπ' αὐτοῦ.”

19. Παρεγένοντο<sup>3</sup> δὲ πρὸς αὐτὸν ἡ μήτηρ<sup>4</sup> καὶ οἱ ἀδελφοὶ αὐτοῦ, καὶ οὐκ ἠδύναντο<sup>4</sup> συντυχεῖν αὐτῷ διὰ τὸν ὄχλον. 20. καὶ ἀπηγγέλη<sup>d</sup> αὐτῷ, λεγόντων.<sup>e</sup> “Ἡ μήτηρ σου καὶ οἱ ἀδελφοὶ σου ἐστήκασιν ἔξω, ἰδεῖν σε θέλοντες.”<sup>6</sup> 21. Ὁ δὲ ἀποκριθεὶς εἶπε πρὸς αὐτούς, “Μήτηρ μου καὶ ἀδελφοὶ μου οὗτοί εἰσιν, οἱ τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ ἀκούοντες καὶ ποιῶντες αὐτόν.”<sup>7</sup>

22. Καὶ ἐγένετο<sup>8</sup> ἐν μιᾷ τῶν ἡμερῶν, καὶ αὐτὸς ἐνέβη εἰς πλοῖον καὶ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ, καὶ εἶπε πρὸς αὐτούς, “Διέλθωμεν εἰς τὸ πέραν τῆς λίμνης.” καὶ ἀνήχθησαν. 23. πλεόντων δὲ αὐτῶν ἄφύπνωσε. καὶ κατέβη λαίλαψ ἀνέμου εἰς τὴν λίμνην,<sup>9</sup> καὶ<sup>c</sup>

<sup>1</sup> For ο ου γνωσθησεται found in many texts  $\aleph$ BL $\Xi$  33 have ο ου μη γνωσθη (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> For γαρ αν in D al.  $\aleph$ BL $\Xi$  have αν γαρ.

<sup>3</sup> παρεγενετο in BDX 50, 71 cop. T.R. a grammatical correction.

<sup>4</sup> αυτου after μητηρ in  $\aleph$ D 69 (Tisch.).

<sup>5</sup> For και απ.  $\aleph$ BDL $\Xi$  have απ. δε, and omit λεγοντων (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>6</sup> σε after θελ. in B $\Xi$  (W.H.).

<sup>7</sup> Omit αυτον  $\aleph$ ABDL $\Delta$  $\Xi$  al.

<sup>8</sup> εγεν. δε in  $\aleph$ ABDL 1, 33, 69 al.

<sup>9</sup> Βα have ανεμου after λιμνην (W.H. marg.). J. Weiss suggests that εἰς τ. λ. may be a gloss.

the benefit of those who are within (τοῖς ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ, Mt. v. 15), the inmates. Is Lk. thinking of the Gentiles coming into the church?—Ver. 17. γενήσεται: predictive = nothing hidden which shall not some day be revealed.—γνωσθῆ, ἔλθῃ ( $\aleph$ BL), the fut. ind. passes into aor. subj., with οὐ μὴ for οὐ = nothing hidden which is not bound to become known (Meyer).—Ver. 18 enforces the duty thence arising, to be careful hearers; hearing so as really to know; shortcoming here will disqualify for giving light. Jesus has inculcated the duty of placing the light so that it may illuminate; He now inculcates the prior duty of being lights.—ὁ δοκεῖ ἔχειν: the δοκεῖ may be an editorial explanatory comment to remove the apparent contradiction between μὴ ἔχη and ὁ ἔχει (Weiss, Mk.-evang., p. 157).

Vv. 19-21. Mother and brethren (Mt. xii. 46-50, Mk. iii. 31-35). Given in a different connection from that in Mt. and Mk. The connection here seems purely topical: the visit of the friends of Jesus gives Him occasion to indicate who are they who represent the good, fruitful soil (ver. 21).—Ver. 19. διὰ τὸν ὄχλον: a crowd seems unsuitable here (though not in Mt. and Mk.), for just before, Jesus has been conversing with His disciples in private.—Ver. 21. Lk. omits the graphic touches—looking around, and stretching out His hands towards His disciples, concerned only to report the memorable word.—οἱ τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ, those hearing and doing the word of God. The expression here is somewhat conventional and secondary as compared with Mt. and Mk. Cf. chap. vi. 47, and λόγος τοῦ Θεοῦ, viii. 11.

Vv. 22-25. The tempest on the lake (Mt. viii. 23-27, Mk. iv. 35-41). The voyage across the lake took place, according to Mk., on the day of the parables; it was an escape from the crowd, a very real and credible account. The whole situation in Lk. is different: no preaching from a boat, no escape when the preaching was over. It simply happened on one of the days (ἐν μιᾷ τῶν ἡμερῶν).—Ver. 22. τῆς

1 Cor. xv. συνεπληροῦντο, καὶ ἔκινδύνευον. 24. προσελθόντες δὲ διήγειραν αὐτόν, λέγοντες, “Ἐπιστάτα, ἐπιστάτα, ἀπολλύμεθα.” Ὁ δὲ
 30. g Jas. I 6. ἐγερθεῖς<sup>1</sup> ἐπετίμησε τῷ ἀνέμῳ καὶ τῷ κλύδωνι τοῦ ὕδατος· καὶ ἐπαύσαντο, καὶ ἐγένετο γαλήνη. 25. εἶπε δὲ αὐτοῖς, “Ποῦ ἐστὶν<sup>2</sup> ἡ πίστις ὑμῶν;” Φοβηθέντες δὲ ἐθαύμασαν, λέγοντες πρὸς ἀλλήλους, “Τίς ἄρα οὗτός ἐστιν, ὅτι καὶ τοῖς ἀνέμοις ἐπιτάσσει καὶ τῷ ὕδατι, καὶ ὑπακούουσιν αὐτῷ;”

26. ΚΑΙ κατέπλευσαν εἰς τὴν χώραν τῶν Γαδαρηνῶν,<sup>3</sup> ἧτις ἐστὶν ἀντιπέραν<sup>4</sup> τῆς Γαλιλαίας. 27. ἐξελθόντι δὲ αὐτῷ ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν, ὑπήντησεν αὐτῷ ἀνὴρ τις<sup>5</sup> ἐκ τῆς πόλεως, ὃς εἶχε<sup>6</sup> δαιμόνια ἐκ χρόνων ἰκανῶν, καὶ ἰμάτιον οὐκ ἐνεδιδύσκετο,<sup>7</sup> καὶ ἐν οἰκίᾳ οὐκ ἔμενει, ἀλλ’ ἐν τοῖς μνήμασιν. 28. ἰδὼν δὲ τὸν Ἰησοῦν, καὶ<sup>8</sup> ἀνακράζας, προσέπεσεν αὐτῷ, καὶ φωνῇ μεγάλῃ εἶπε, “Τί ἐμοὶ καὶ σοί, Ἰησοῦ, υἱὲ τοῦ Θεοῦ<sup>9</sup> τοῦ ὑψίστου; δέομαί σου, μὴ με

<sup>1</sup> διεγερθεῖς in  $\aleph$ BL 13, 33 al. (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup>  $\aleph$ ABLX 1 al. omit ἐστίν.

<sup>3</sup> So in  $\alpha$ RGΔΛΠ al. syr. verss. (including Sin.). Γεργεσηνων in  $\aleph$ LXΞ minusc. 6 emph., etc. (Tisch.). Γερασσηνων in BC<sup>o</sup>D vet. Lat. vulg.; the most probable reading (W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> αντιπερα in most uncials.

<sup>5</sup> Omit αὐτω  $\aleph$ BEΞ 33. B has τις ἀνηρ. D, while retaining αὐτω, omits τις

<sup>6</sup> For ος εἶχε  $\aleph$ B 157 cop. have εχων.

<sup>7</sup> For ἐκ χρόνων . . . ἐνεδιδύσκετο  $\aleph$ BLΞ 1, 33, 131, 157 cop. al. have καὶ χρονω ἰκανω οὐκ ἐνεδυσατο ἰματιον (Tisch., W.H.). The true text is doubtful here, though I have assumed below that that adopted by Tisch. and W.H. is to be preferred.

<sup>8</sup> Omit καὶ  $\aleph$ B $\aleph$ LXΞ 33 al.

<sup>9</sup> Omit του θεου DΞ 1 (W.H. in brackets).

λίμνης: no need for this addition in Mk., or even in Mt., where Jesus is represented as in Capernaum. Lk. does not tell us where Jesus was at the time.—Ver. 23. ἀφύπνωσε, went off to sleep, fatigued with heat and speaking; the storm implies sultry conditions; ἀφυπνιῶν means both to awake = ἀφυπνίζειν, and to go to sleep = καθυπνοῦν; vide Lobeck, ad Phryn., p. 224.—κατέβη, came down, from the hills.—συνεπληροῦντο, they (i.e., the boat) were getting full and in danger. Seamen would naturally say, “we were getting full,” when they meant the boat. Examples of such usage in Kypke.—Ver. 24. ἐπιστάτα: Lk.’s word for master, answering to διδάσκαλε, Mk., and κύριε, Mt.—τῷ κλύδωνι τοῦ ὕδατος, the surge of the water.—Ver. 25. ποῦ, etc., where is your faith? a mild rebuke compared with Mt. and Mk. Note: Lk. ever spares the Twelve.

Vv. 26-39. The demoniac of Gerasa (Mt. viii. 28-34, Mk. v. 1-20).—Ver. 26. κατέπλευσαν εἰς τὴν χώραν, “they sailed down from the deep sea to the land, put in,” Grimm; appulerunt ad regionem, Raphael, who gives numerous examples of the use of this verb (here only in N. T.) in Greek authors.—τ. Γερασσηνῶν, the Gerasenes, inhabitants of the town of Gerasa (Kersa, Thomson, Land and Book), near the eastern shore of the lake, a little south of the mouth of Wadi Semach (Rob Roy on the Jordan, chap. xxiii.).—ἧτις ἐστίν, etc.: this clause answers to Mk.’s εἰς τὸ πέραν τ. θ. By the relative clause Lk. avoids the double εἰς (J. Weiss in Meyer).—ἀντίπερα τ. Γαλ., opposite Galilee, a vague indication; an editorial note for the benefit of readers little acquainted with the country.—Ver. 27. ἀνὴρ ἐκ τῆς πόλεως, a man of, or from, the city; he did not come βασανίσης.* 29. Παρήγγελλε<sup>1</sup> γὰρ τῷ πνεύματι τῷ ἀκαθάρτῳ ἐξελεῖν ἀπὸ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου· πολλοῖς γὰρ χρόνοις συνηρπάκει αὐτόν, καὶ ἐδεσμεῖτο<sup>2</sup> ἀλύσει καὶ πέδαις φυλασσόμενος, καὶ διαρρήσων τὰ δεσμὰ ἠλαύνετο ὑπὸ<sup>3</sup> τοῦ δαίμονος<sup>4</sup> εἰς τὰς ἐρήμους. 30. ἐπρωῶτησε δὲ αὐτὸν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, λέγων,<sup>5</sup> “Τί σοι ἐστὶν ὄνομα<sup>6</sup> ;” Ὁ δὲ εἶπε, “Λεγών.” ὅτι δαιμόνια πολλά εἰσῆλθεν<sup>7</sup> εἰς αὐτόν. 31. καὶ παρεκάλει<sup>8</sup> αὐτὸν ἵνα μὴ ἐπιτάξῃ αὐτοῖς εἰς τὴν ἄβυσσον ἀπελθεῖν. 32. ἦν δὲ ἐκεῖ ἀγέλη χοίρων ἰκανῶν βοσκομένων<sup>9</sup> ἐν τῷ ὄρει· καὶ παρεκάλουν<sup>10</sup> αὐτὸν ἵνα ἐπιτρέψῃ αὐτοῖς εἰς ἐκείνους εἰσελθεῖν. καὶ ἐπέτρεψεν αὐτοῖς. 33. ἐξελθόντα δὲ τὰ δαιμόνια ἀπὸ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου εἰσῆλθεν<sup>11</sup> εἰς τοὺς χοίρους· καὶ ὤρμησεν ἡ ἀγέλη κατὰ τοῦ κρημοῦ εἰς τὴν λίμνην, καὶ ἀπεπνίγη. 34. ἰδόντες δὲ οἱ βόσκοντες τὸ γεγενημένον<sup>12</sup> ἔφυγον, καὶ ἀπελθόντες<sup>13</sup> ἀπήγγειλαν εἰς τὴν πόλιν καὶ εἰς τοὺς ἀγρούς. 35. ἐξῆλθον δὲ ἰδεῖν τὸ γεγονός· καὶ ἦλθον πρὸς τὸν Ἰησοῦν, καὶ εὔρον καθήμενον τὸν ἄνθρωπον ἀφ’

<sup>1</sup> παρηγγειλεν in BΞ 69 (W.H. marg.).

<sup>2</sup> So in CD and other uncials. ΞBLXΞ 33 have εδεσμευετο. δεσμεω and δεσμεω are both rare (latter in Mt. xxiii. 4).

<sup>3</sup> So in most uncials. BΞ have απο (W.H. text).

<sup>4</sup> δαιμονιου in ΞBCDΞ (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> Omit λεγων ΞB I al. vet. Lat. (W.H.) against CDL (Tisch.).

<sup>6</sup> ονομα εστιν in ΞBDLΞ I, 33 al.

<sup>7</sup> εισηλθεν before δαιμ. in ΞB.

<sup>8</sup> παρεκαλουν in ΞBCDL minusc. T.R. a correction.

<sup>9</sup> So in very many uncials, but ΞBD have βοσκομενη (W.H. text).

<sup>10</sup> παρεκαλεσαν in BCLΞ I, 33 al.

<sup>11</sup> εισηλθον in most uncials.

<sup>12</sup> γεγονος in ΞABCDLΞ al. pl.

<sup>13</sup> Omit απελθ. all uncials.

out of the city to meet Jesus.—ἔχων δαιμ., having demons, a plurality with reference to ver. 30.—οὐκ ἐνεδύσατο, etc.: the description begun here is completed in ver. 29. Mk. gives it all at once (v. 2-5). Lk. seems to follow Mk. but freely—unclothed, abode among the tombs, the two facts first mentioned.—Ver. 29. παρήγγελλεν γὰρ: the command caused the cry of fear, and the fear is explained in the clause following, introduced by a second γὰρ.—πολλοῖς χρόνοις, answers to πολλάκις in Mk. v. 4, therefore presumably used in the sense: oftentimes, frequently. So Erasmus and Grotius, and most recent commentators. Meyer and others take it = during a long time. Schanz combines the two senses. The disease was of an intermittent character, there were paroxysms of acute mania, and intervals of comparative quiet and rationality. When the paroxysms came on, the demon (one in ver. 29) was supposed to seize him (συνηρπάκει). Then he had to be bound in chains and fetters, and kept under guard (φυλασσόμενος, cf. A. V. and R. V. here), but all to no purpose, the demoniac force bursting the bonds and driving the poor victim into the deserts. The madman feared the return of an attack, hence his alarmed cry.—Ver. 30. ὅτι εἰσῆλθεν, etc.: Lk. gives this explanation of the name Legion; in Mk. the demoniac gives it.—Ver. 31. εἰς τὴν ἄβυσσον, into the abyss (of Tartarus) instead of Mk.'s ἔξω τῆς χώρας, out of Decapolis.—Ver. 32. χοίρ. ἰκανῶν: for a large number, often in Lk.; his equivalent for Mk.'s 2000.

Vv. 34-39. The sequel. Lk. tells the second part of the story very much as it is given in Mk., with slight stylistic variations. In ver. 36 he substitutes the expression ὡς ἐσώθη ὁ δαιμονισθεὶς, how the demoniac was saved, for Mk.'s “how it happened to the demoniac, and concerning the swine,” suggesting the

οὐ τὰ δαιμόνια ἐξεληλύθει,<sup>1</sup> ἱματισμένον καὶ σωφρονοῦντα, παρὰ τοὺς πόδας τοῦ Ἰησοῦ· καὶ ἐφοβήθησαν. 36. ἀπήγγειλαν δὲ αὐτοῖς καὶ<sup>2</sup> οἱ ἰδόντες πῶς ἐσώθη ὁ δαιμονισθεὶς. 37. καὶ ἠρώτησαν ἅ αὐτὸν ἄπαν τὸ πλῆθος τῆς περιχώρου τῶν Γαδιρηνῶν<sup>4</sup> ἀπελθεῖν ἀπ' αὐτῶν, ὅτι φόβῳ μεγάλῳ συνείχοντο· αὐτὸς δὲ ἐμβὰς εἰς τὸ<sup>5</sup> πλοῖον ὑπέστρεψεν. 38. εἶδέτο δὲ αὐτοῦ ὁ ἀνὴρ ἀφ' οὗ ἐξεληλύθει τὰ δαιμόνια, εἶναι σὺν αὐτῷ. ἀπέλυσε δὲ αὐτὸν ὁ Ἰησοῦς,<sup>6</sup> λέγων, 39. “Ὑπόστρεφε εἰς τὸν οἶκόν σου, καὶ διηγοῦ ὅσα ἐποίησέ σοι<sup>7</sup> ὁ Θεός.” Καὶ ἀπῆλθε, καθ' ὅλην τὴν πόλιν κηρύσσων ὅσα ἐποίησεν αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς.

40. ἘΓΕΝΕΤΟ δὲ ἐν<sup>8</sup> τῷ ὑποστρέψαι<sup>9</sup> τὸν Ἰησοῦν, ἀπεδέξατο αὐτὸν ὁ ὄχλος· ἦσαν γὰρ πάντες προσδοκῶντες αὐτόν.

41. Καὶ ἰδοῦ, ἦλθεν ἀνὴρ ᾧ ὄνομα Ἰάειρος, καὶ αὐτὸς<sup>10</sup> ἄρχων τῆς συναγωγῆς ὑπῆρχε, καὶ πεσὼν παρὰ τοὺς πόδας τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, παρεκάλει

<sup>1</sup> ἐξηλθεν in SB (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> Omit καὶ SBCDL 33, 69 al.

<sup>3</sup> So in DI. al., and, as more difficult, preferable. SB al. have the sing. (W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> Vide at ver. 26.

<sup>5</sup> Omit το SBCL al.

<sup>6</sup> SBDL omit ο l., an explanatory addition. <sup>7</sup> σοὶ ἐποι. in SBCDL minusc.

<sup>8</sup> ἐγεν. δε εν in SCD and many other uncials (Tisch.). BL 33 al. have εν δε (W.H.).

<sup>9</sup> SB have υποστρεφειν (Tisch., W.H.)

<sup>10</sup> BD have ουτος (W.H. text).

idea that the destruction of the swine was a part of the cure. They had to be drowned that he might be restored to sanity.—Ver. 37. Lk. is very careful to involve the whole population in the request that Jesus would leave the country—the whole multitude of the district of Gerasa, town and country, citizens and farmers. And he gives as the reason, ὅτι φόβῳ μεγάλῳ συνείχοντο, they were possessed with a great fear, panic-stricken.—Ver. 38. εἶδέτο, Ionic form of the imperfect of δέομαι. W. and H. prefer εἶδετο, the reading of BL. The healed man's request, though not granted, would gratify Jesus, as a contrast to the unanimous petition of the Gerasenes that He would leave the place.—Ver. 39. ὑπόστρεφε: it was good for the man that he should return to his home and people, and tell them what had befallen him through the mercy of God (ὅσα ἐποίησεν ὁ Θεός). It was good for the people also. They needed a missionary greatly.—καθ' ὅλην τὴν πόλιν, over the whole city. Mk. says in Decapolis.

Ver. 40. On the western side (Mk. v. 21). Lk. still follows Mk. closely, mentioning the cordial welcome given Jesus on His arrival on the Galilean shore, and proceeding to narrate the incidents of the woman with a flux, and Jairus' daughter.—ὁ ὄχλος, the crowd. This crowd is unexplained by Lk., who says nothing of a crowd when he introduces his narrative of the voyage to the eastern shore (ver. 22). In Mk. the presence of a crowd is easily accounted for: Jesus had suddenly left the great congregation to which He had spoken in parables, and as His stay on the eastern side was cut short, when He returned to the western shore the crowd had hardly dispersed, or at least could reassemble on short notice. Mk. does not say the crowd, but a great crowd.—ἀπεδέξατο implies a cordial reception. Cf. Acts xv. 4. Raphael gives examples of this sense from Greek authors. Euthy. took it in this sense, giving as the reason for the welcome: ὡς εὐεργέτην καὶ σωτήρα.—προσδοκῶντες: the parables, not to speak of recent healings, account for the expectation.

Vv. 41-42. The story of Jairus' daughter begins (Mt. ix. 18, 19, Mk. v. 21-24).—ἄρχων τῆς συναγωγῆς instead of ἄρχισυνάγωγος (Mk.), as more intelligible to Gentile readers. But after having explained its meaning by the use of this phrase he employs the other in ver. 49.

αὐτὸν εἰσελθεῖν εἰς τὸν οἶκον αὐτοῦ· 42. ὅτι θυγάτηρ μονογενῆς ἦν αὐτῷ ὡς ἐτῶν δώδεκα, καὶ αὕτη ἀπέθνησκεν. Ἐν δὲ τῷ ὑπάγειν αὐτὸν οἱ ὄχλοι συνέπνιγον αὐτόν. 43. Καὶ γυνὴ οὖσα ἐν ῥύσει αἵματος ἀπὸ ἐτῶν δώδεκα, ἣτις εἰς ἰατροὺς προσαναλώσασα ὄλον τὸν βίον<sup>1</sup> οὐκ ἴσχυσεν ὑπ'<sup>2</sup> οὐδενὸς θεραπευθῆναι, 44. προσελθοῦσα ὀπισθεν, ἤψατο τοῦ κρασπέδου τοῦ ἱματίου αὐτοῦ· καὶ παραχρῆμα ἔστη ἡ ῥύσις τοῦ αἵματος αὐτῆς. 45. καὶ εἶπεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Τίς ὁ ἀψάμενός μου;” Ἀρνουμένων δὲ πάντων, εἶπεν ὁ Πέτρος καὶ οἱ μετ' αὐτοῦ,<sup>3</sup> “Ἐπιστάτα, οἱ ὄχλοι συνέχουσί σε καὶ ἀποθλίβουσι, καὶ λέγεις, Τίς ὁ ἀψάμενός μου<sup>4</sup>;” 46. Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν, “Ἡψατό μου τίς· ἐγὼ γὰρ ἔγνων δύναμιν ἐξελθοῦσαν<sup>5</sup> ἀπ' ἐμοῦ.” 47. Ἰδοῦσα δὲ ἡ γυνὴ ὅτι οὐκ ἔλαθε, τρέμουσα ἦλθε, καὶ προσπεσοῦσα αὐτῷ, δι' ἣν αἰτίαν ἤψατο αὐτοῦ ἀπήγγειλεν αὐτῷ<sup>6</sup> ἐνώπιον παντὸς τοῦ λαοῦ, καὶ ὡς ἰάθη παραχρῆμα. 48. ὁ δὲ εἶπεν αὐτῇ, “Θάρσει,<sup>7</sup> θύγατερ,<sup>8</sup> ἡ πίστις σου σέσωκέ σε· πορεύου εἰς εἰρήνην.”

<sup>1</sup> From εἰς ἰατροὺς τοῦ βίον omitted in BD (W.H.); may be a gloss from Mk.

<sup>2</sup> ap in  $\aleph$ BE.

<sup>3</sup> B some minusc. and verss. omit οἱ μετ. αὐτον (W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> Omit καὶ λέγεις . . . μου  $\aleph$ BL minusc. verss. (Tisch., W.H.); comes from Mk.

<sup>5</sup> ἐξεληλυθιαν in  $\aleph$ BL 33.

<sup>6</sup> αὐτῷ omitted in  $\aleph$ ABDLX $\Xi$  al.

<sup>7</sup>  $\aleph$ BDEL $\Xi$  minusc. verss. omit θάρσει, which may come from Mt.

<sup>8</sup> So in most uncials; BKL have θυγάτηρ (W.H.).

—Ver. 42. μονογενῆς (as in vii. 12): peculiar to Lk. The name of the father, his rank, and the girl's age (all lacking in Mt.) Lk. has in common with Mk. This feature he adds after his wont to enhance the benevolence of Jesus.—ἀπέθνησκεν, was dying. Mk.'s phrase, ἐσχάτως ἔχει, is avoided as not good Greek. In Mt. she is already dead.—συνέπνιγον, were suffocating Him; a very strong expression. Mk.'s word is sufficiently strong (συνέθλιβον, thronged), and if there was to be exaggeration we should hardly have expected it from Lk. But he uses the word to make Christ's quick perception of the special touch from behind (ver. 45) the more marvellous.

Vv. 43-48. The woman with an issue (Mt. ix. 20-22, Mk. v. 25-34).—Ver. 43. ἀπὸ: indicating the terminus a quo. Mk. uses the accusative of duration.—προσαναλώσασα (here only in N. T.), having expended in addition: to loss of health was added loss of means in the effort to gain it back.—βίον, means of life, as in xv. 12, 30, xxi. 4.—οὐκ ἴσχυσεν, etc., was not able to get healing from any (physician), a milder way of putting it than Mk.'s.—Ver. 44. κρασπέδον, the tassel hanging over the shoulder; this feature not in Mk., a curious omission in so graphic a writer.—παραχρῆμα: Lk.'s equivalent for εὐθὺς.—ἔστη, the flow of blood (ῥύσις) stopped. ιστάναί, the technical term for this experience.—Ver. 45. ὁ Πέτρος: Mk. says “the disciples,” but one would speak for the rest, and Lk. naturally makes Peter the spokesman.—συνέχουσί σε, hem thee in.—ἀποθλίβουσιν, squeeze, like grapes (Joseph., Ant., ii., v. 2).—Ver. 46. ἐγὼ ἔγνων: Lk. puts into the mouth of Jesus what in Mk. is a remark of the narrator. Vide notes on this incident in Mt. and Mk.

Vv. 49-56. Previous narrative resumed (Mt. ix. 23-26, Mk. v. 35-43).—Ver. 49. τις: one messenger, several in Mk.; one enough for the purpose.—παρὰ τ. ἀρχ., from the ruler = belonging to his house. Vide Mk. iii. 21: οἱ παρ' αὐτοῦ. Mk. has ἀπὸ here.—Ver. 50. ἀκούσας: Mk. has παρακούσας, the message being spoken not to Jesus but to Jairus: He overheard it.—μόνον πιστεύσον, etc., only

49. Ἐτι αὐτοῦ λαλοῦντος, ἔρχεταιί τις παρὰ τοῦ ἀρχισυναγώγου, λέγων αὐτῷ,<sup>1</sup> “Ὅτι τέθνηκεν ἡ θυγάτηρ σου· μὴ<sup>2</sup> σκύλλε τὸν διδάσκαλον.” 50. Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς ἀκούσας ἀπεκρίθη αὐτῷ, λέγων,<sup>3</sup> “Μὴ φοβοῦ· μόνον πίστευε,<sup>4</sup> καὶ σωθήσεται.” 51. Εἰσελθὼν<sup>5</sup> δὲ εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν, οὐκ ἀφῆκεν εἰσελθεῖν οὐδένα,<sup>6</sup> εἰ μὴ Πέτρον καὶ Ἰάκωβον καὶ Ἰωάννην,<sup>7</sup> καὶ τὸν πατέρα τῆς παιδὸς καὶ τὴν μητέρα. 52. ἔκλαιον δὲ πάντες, καὶ ἐκόπτοντο αὐτήν. ὁ δὲ εἶπε, “Μὴ κλαίετε· οὐκ<sup>8</sup> ἀπέθανεν, ἀλλὰ καθεύδει.” 53. Καὶ κατεγέλωσεν αὐτοῦ, εἰδότες ὅτι ἀπέθανεν. 54. αὐτὸς δὲ ἐκβαλὼν ἕξω πάντας, καὶ<sup>9</sup> κρατήσας τῆς χειρὸς αὐτῆς, ἐφώνησε, λέγων, “Ἡ παῖς ἐγείρου.”<sup>10</sup> 55. Καὶ ἐπέστρεψε τὸ πνεῦμα αὐτῆς, καὶ ἀνέστη παραχρῆμα· καὶ διέταξεν αὐτῇ δοθῆναι φαγεῖν. 56. καὶ ἐξέστησαν οἱ γονεῖς αὐτῆς· ὁ δὲ παρηγγεῖλεν αὐτοῖς μηδενὶ εἰπεῖν τὸ γεγονός.

<sup>1</sup> Omit αὐτῷ (expletive) ἧBLXΞ I, 33.

<sup>2</sup> μηκετι in ἧBD.

<sup>3</sup> Omit λεγων with ἧBLXΛΞ I, 33 αἷ.

<sup>4</sup> πιστευσον in BLΞ.

<sup>5</sup> ελθων in most uncials and verss.

<sup>6</sup> For ουδενα BCDLX 33, 69 have τινα συν αυτω (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>7</sup> Ιωαν. before Ιακ. in BCD and many other uncials. T.R. = ἧL 33.

<sup>8</sup> For ουκ ἧBCDL have ου γαρ (W.H.; Tisch. = T.R.).

<sup>9</sup> ἧBDLX minusc. omit εκβαλων . . . και; imported from Mk.

<sup>10</sup> εγειρε in ἧBCDX I, 33 (W.H.).

believe and she shall be saved—Paulinism in the physical sphere.—Ver. 51. In B and other MSS. the usual order of the three disciples—Peter, James, John—is changed into Peter, John, James.—Ver. 53. εἰδότες ὅτι ἀπέθανεν: Lk. is careful to add this remark to exclude the idea that it was not a case of real death; his aim here, as always, to magnify the power as well as the benevolence of Jesus.—Ver. 55. τὸ πνεῦμα, her spirit returned = ψυχὴ in Acts xx. 10.—φαγεῖν: the order to give the resuscitated child food is not peculiar to Lk., but he places it in a more prominent position than Mk. to show that as she had been really dead she was now really alive and well; needing food and able to take it. Godet remarks on the calmness with which Jesus gave the order after such a stupendous event. “As simply as a physician feels the pulse of a patient He regulates her diet for the day.”

CHAPTER IX. THE CLOSE OF THE GALILEAN MINISTRY. SETTING THE FACE TOWARDS JERUSALEM.—Vv. 1-50

contain sundry particulars which together form the closing scenes of the Galilean ministry: the mission of the Twelve, the feeding of the thousands, the conversation on the Christ and the cross, the transfiguration, the epileptic boy, the conversation on “who is the greatest”. At ver. 51 begins the long division of the Gospel, extending to xviii. 14, which forms the chief peculiarity of Lk., sometimes called the Great Interpolation or Insertion, purporting to be the narrative of a journey southwards towards Jerusalem through Samaria, therefore sometimes designated the Samaritan ministry (Baur and the Tübingen school), but in reality consisting for the most part of a miscellaneous collection of didactic pieces. At xviii. 15 Lk. rejoins the company of his brother evangelists, not to leave them again till the tragic end.

Vv. 1-6. The mission of the Twelve (Mt. x. 1, 5-15, Mk. vi. 7-13).—Ver. 1. συγκαλεσάμενος δὲ: the δὲ turns attention to a new subject, and the part συγκαλ. implies that it is a matter of

IX. 1. ΣΥΓΚΑΛΕΣΑΜΕΝΟΣ δὲ τοὺς δώδεκα μαθητὰς αὐτοῦ,<sup>1</sup> ἔδωκεν αὐτοῖς δύναμιν καὶ ἐξουσίαν ἐπὶ πάντα τὰ δαιμόνια, καὶ νόσους θεραπεύειν· 2. καὶ ἀπέστειλεν αὐτοὺς κηρύσσειν τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ ἰᾶσθαι τοὺς ἀσθενούντας.<sup>2</sup> 3. καὶ εἶπε πρὸς αὐτούς, “Μηδὲν αἴρετε εἰς τὴν ὁδόν· μήτε ράβδους,<sup>3</sup> μήτε πήραν, μήτε ἄρτον, μήτε ἀργύριον, μήτε ἀνά<sup>4</sup> δύο χιτῶνας ἔχειν. 4. καὶ εἰς ἣν ἂν οἰκίαν εἰσέλθητε, ἐκεῖ μένετε, καὶ ἐκεῖθεν ἐξέρχεσθε. 5. καὶ ὅσοι ἂν μὴ δέξωνται<sup>5</sup> ὑμᾶς, ἐξερχόμενοι ἀπὸ τῆς πόλεως ἐκείνης καὶ<sup>6</sup> τὸν κοινορτὸν ἀπὸ τῶν ποδῶν ὑμῶν ἀποτινάξατε,<sup>7</sup> εἰς μαρτύριον ἐπ’ αὐτούς.” 6. Ἐξερχόμενοι δὲ διήρχοντο κατὰ τὰς κώμας, εὐαγγελιζόμενοι καὶ θεραπεύοντες πανταχοῦ.

<sup>1</sup> Many uncials (BD, etc.) omit μαθ. αυτου. Some texts (NCLΞ al.) have αποστολους.

<sup>2</sup> B syrr. cur. and sin. omit τους ασθ. (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> ραβδον in N<sup>2</sup>BCDLΞ 1, 33, 69 al.

<sup>4</sup> Omit ανα N<sup>2</sup>BCLΞ; found in D and many other uncials.

<sup>5</sup> δεχονται in N<sup>2</sup>ABCLΞ. T.R. = D al.

<sup>6</sup> Omit και N<sup>2</sup>BCDLXΞ 1, 33 verss.

<sup>7</sup> αποτινασσετε in NB 1, 131, 157 (Tisch., W.H.). T.R. = parallels (aor.).

importance: calling together the Twelve, out of the larger company of disciples that usually followed Jesus, including the women mentioned in viii. 1-3.—δύναμιν καὶ ἐξουσίαν, power and right; power implies right. The man that can cast out devils and heal disease is entitled to do so, nay bound. This principle found an important application in St. Paul's claim to be an apostle, which really rested on fitness, insight. I understand Christianity, therefore I am entitled to be an apostle of it. Lk. alone has both words to express unlimited authority (Hahn). Mt. and Mk. have ἐξουσίαν.—ἐπὶ πάντα, etc., over all the demons, and (also power and authority) to heal diseases, the latter a subordinate function; thoroughly to quell the demons (πάντα emphatic) the main thing. Hence the Seventy on their return speak of that alone (x. 17).—Ver. 2. This might have been viewed as an incidental mention of preaching as another subordinate function, but for the reference to healing (ἰᾶσθαι), which suggests that this verse is another way of stating the objects of the mission, perhaps taken from another source.—Ver. 3. The instructions in this and the next two verses follow pretty closely the version in Mk.—μηδὲν αἴρετε εἰς τὴν ὁδόν: as in Mk., but in direct speech, while Mk.'s is indirect (ἵνα μ. αἴρωσιν).—μήτε ράβδον: Lk. interprets the prohibition more severely than Mk. Not a staff (Mk. except a staff only).—ἀργύριον, silver, for Mk.'s χαλκόν: silver the common metal for coinage among the Greeks, copper among the Romans.—δύο χιτῶνας, two tunics each, one on and one for change.—ἔχειν: infinitive, after αἴρετε, imperative. It may be a case of the infinitive used as an imperative, of which one certain instance is to be found in Phil. iii. 16 (στοιχεῖν = walk), or it may be viewed as a transition from direct to indirect speech (so most commentators). Bengel favours the first view.—Ver. 4. Thus far of material wants. We now pass to social relations. The general direction here is: stay in the same house all the time you are in a place; pithily put by Lk. = ἐκεῖ μένετε, ἐκεῖθεν ἐξέρχεσθε, there remain, thence depart, both adverbs referring to οἰκίαν.—Ver. 5. By omitting the ἀκούσωσιν ὑμῶν of Mk. Lk. gives the impression that non-receiving refers to the missionaries not as preachers but as guests = If they will not take you into the house you select, do not try another house, leave the place (so Hahn). This would be rather summary action, and contrary to the spirit of the incident ix. 52-56.—Ver. 6. Brief statement, as in Mk., αὖ

7. Ἦκουσε δὲ Ἡρώδης ὁ τετράρχης τὰ γινόμενα ὑπ' αὐτοῦ<sup>1</sup> πάντα· καὶ διηπόρει, διὰ τὸ λέγεσθαι ὑπὸ τινων, “Ὅτι Ἰωάννης ἐγήγερται<sup>2</sup> ἐκ νεκρῶν.” 8. ὑπὸ τινων δέ, “Ὅτι Ἠλίας ἐφάνη·” ἄλλων δέ, “Ὅτι προφήτης εἰς<sup>3</sup> τῶν ἀρχαίων ἀνέστη.” 9. Καὶ εἶπεν ὁ<sup>4</sup> Ἡρώδης, “Ἰωάννην ἐγὼ ἀπεκεφάλισα· τίς δέ ἐστιν οὗτος, περὶ οὗ ἐγὼ<sup>5</sup> ἀκούω τοιαῦτα;” Καὶ ἐζήτηε ἰδεῖν αὐτόν.

10. Καὶ ὑποστρέψαντες οἱ ἀπόστολοι διηγήσαντο αὐτῷ ὅσα ἐποίησαν· καὶ παραλαβὼν αὐτούς, ὑπεχώρησε κατ' ἰδίαν εἰς τόπον ἔρημον πόλεως καλουμένης<sup>6</sup> Βηθσαϊδά. 11. οἱ δὲ ὄχλοι γνόντες ἠκολούθησαν αὐτῷ· καὶ ἀποδεξάμενος<sup>7</sup> αὐτούς, ἐλάλει αὐτοῖς περὶ τῆς βασιλείας τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ τοὺς χρεῖαν ἔχοντας θεραπείας ἰάτο.

<sup>1</sup> Omit υπ αυτου ḲBCDLE 69 al.

<sup>2</sup> ηγερθη in ḲBCL E al.

<sup>3</sup> τις in ḲBCLXΔE 1, 13, 33.

<sup>4</sup> For και ειπεν ḲBCDLE 1, 33 al. have ειπεν δε and ḲCD al. pl. omit ο found in BL.

<sup>5</sup> ḲBCL E omit εγω.

<sup>6</sup> For εις τ. ερ. π. καλουμενης BLX E 33 sah. cop. have εις πολιν καλουμενην, which seems inconsistent with retirement; hence the introduction of τοπον ερημον = the desert of the city (Tisch., W.H., follow BL, etc.).

<sup>7</sup> αποδεξ. in ḲBDLX E 33 al.

to the execution of the mission, but wanting his reference to the use of oil in healing.

Hahn states that this mission was purely pedagogic, for the benefit of the Twelve, not of the people. This is a mere unfounded assertion. The training of the Twelve by no means appears a prominent aim of Jesus in the pages of Lk.; much less so than in Mt. and Mk.

Vv. 7-9. Herod's interest in Jesus (Mt. xiv. 1-2, Mk. vi. 14-16).—ὁ τετράρχης as in Mt., βασιλεὺς in Mk.—τὰ γινόμενα πάντα, all the things which were happening, most naturally taken as referring to the mission of the Twelve, though it is difficult to believe that Herod had not heard of Jesus till then.—διηπόρει, was utterly perplexed, in Lk.'s writings only.—διὰ τὸ λέγεσθαι ὑπὸ τινῶν. What Lk. represents as said by some, Mt. and Mk., doubtless truly, make Herod himself say. Vide notes on Mt. and Mk.—Ver. 8. ἐφάνη, appeared, the proper word to use of one who had not died, but been translated.—Ver. 9. Ἰ. ἐγὼ ἀπεκεφάλισα: the fact stated in the form of a confession by the criminal, but the grim story not told.—ἐγὼ, emphatic, the “I” of a guilty troubled conscience.—τις: he has no theory, but is simply puzzled, yet the question almost implies suspicion that Jesus is John returned to life. Could there be two such men at the same period?—καὶ ἐζήτηε ἰδεῖν αὐτόν: this points forward to xxiii. 8.

Vv. 10-17. Feeding of the multitude (Mt. xiv. 13-21, Mk. vi. 30-44, John vi. 1-14).—Ver. 10. The Twelve return from their mission and report what they had done; Mk. adds and taught.—ὑπεχώρησε, withdrew, here and in v. 16, only, in N. T. The reason of this retirement does not appear in Lk.'s narrative, nor whether Jesus with His disciples went by land or by sea.—Ver. 11. οἱ ὄχλοι: no particular multitude is meant, but just the crowds that were wont to gather around Jesus. In Mt. and Mk. Jesus appears as endeavouring (in vain) to escape from the people. In Lk. this feature is not prominent. Even the expression τόπον ἔρημον in ver. 10 is probably not genuine. What Lk. appears to have written is that Jesus withdrew privately into a city called Bethsaida.—ἀποδεξάμενος, the more probable reading, implies a willing reception of the multitude. Vide viii. 40.—Ver. 12. κλίνειν, the day began to decline; the fact is alluded to here, not

12. Ἡ δὲ ἡμέρα ἤρξατο κλίνειν· προσελθόντες δὲ οἱ δώδεκα εἶπον αὐτῷ, “Ἀπόλυσον τὸν ὄχλον, ἵνα ἀπελθόντες<sup>1</sup> εἰς τὰς κύκλῳ κώμας καὶ τοὺς ἀγροὺς καταλύσωσι, καὶ εὐρωσιν ἐπισιτισμόν· ὅτι ὦδε ἐν ἐρήμῳ τόπῳ ἐσμέν.” 13. Εἶπε δὲ πρὸς αὐτοὺς, “Δότε αὐτοῖς ὑμεῖς φαγεῖν.”<sup>2</sup> Οἱ δὲ εἶπον, “Οὐκ εἰσὶν ἡμῖν πλεῖον ἢ πέντε ἄρτοι καὶ δύο ἰχθύες, εἰ μῆτι πορευθέντες ἡμεῖς ἀγοράσωμεν εἰς πάντα τὸν λαὸν τοῦτον βρώματα.” 14. Ἦσαν γὰρ ὡσεὶ ἄνδρες πεντακισχίλιοι. Εἶπε δὲ πρὸς τοὺς μαθητὰς αὐτοῦ, “Κατακλίνατε αὐτοὺς κλισίας ἀνά<sup>3</sup> πενήτηκοντα.” 15. Καὶ ἐποίησαν οὕτω, καὶ ἀνέκλιναν<sup>4</sup> ἅπαντας. 16. Λαβὼν δὲ τοὺς πέντε ἄρτους καὶ τοὺς δύο ἰχθύας, ἀναβλέψας εἰς τὸν οὐρανόν, εὐλόγησεν αὐτοὺς, καὶ κατέκλασε, καὶ ἐδίδου τοῖς μαθηταῖς παρατιθέναι<sup>5</sup> τῷ ὄχλῳ. 17. καὶ ἔφαγον καὶ ἐχορτάσθησαν πάντες· καὶ ἦρθη τὸ περισσεῦσαν αὐτοῖς κλασμάτων κόφινος δώδεκα.

18. ΚΑΙ ἐγένετο ἐν τῷ εἶναι αὐτὸν προσευχόμενον καταμόνας, συνῆσαν αὐτῷ οἱ μαθηταί· καὶ ἐπηρώτησεν αὐτοὺς, λέγων, “Τίνα

<sup>1</sup> πορευθεντες in  $\aleph$ ABDE $\Xi$  al.

<sup>2</sup> φαγειν υμεις in B (Tisch., W.H., text), also with  $\aleph$  αρτοι before πεντε, and with  $\aleph$ AC al. ιχθυες before δυο.

<sup>3</sup> ωσει before ανα in  $\aleph$ BCDLR $\Xi$  33 (W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> κατεκλιναν in  $\aleph$ BL $\Xi$  1, 33, 69 al.

<sup>5</sup> παραθειναι in  $\aleph$ BCX 1. T.R. = DL al.

in a participial clause, but in an independent sentence, as bringing an unwelcome close to the beneficent labours of Jesus. He went on teaching and healing, but (δὲ) the day, etc.—καταλύσωσι: the disciples in Lk. are solicitous about the lodging as well as the feeding of the people.—ἐπισιτισμόν, provisions, here only in N. T., but often in classics, e.g., with reference to the provisioning of an army (commeatus).—Ver. 13. πλεῖον ἢ: on the construction, vide Winer, § 58, 4 obs. 1.—εἰ μῆτι . . . ἀγοράσωμεν, unless perhaps we are to buy, etc.; εἰ with subjunctive is one of the forms of protasis in N. T. to express a future supposition with some probability, εἰ takes also present and future indicative. Vide Burton, M. and T., § 252. That Lk. did not regard this proposal as, if possible, very feasible, appears from his mentioning the number present at this stage—ver. 14. Hence also he does not think it worth while to mention the amount of money at their disposal (200 denarii, Mk. vi. 37).—κλισίας, dining parties, answering to Mk.'s συμπόσια. Mk.'s πρασιαί, describing the appearance to the eye, like flower beds, with their gay garments, red, blue, yellow, Lk. omits.—Ver. 16. εὐλόγησεν αὐτοὺς, He blessed them (the loaves), and by the blessing made them sufficient for the wants of all. In Mt. and Mk. εὐλόγησεν has no object. This is the only trait added by Lk. to enhance the greatness of the miracle, unless the position of πάντες after ἐχορτάσθησαν be another = they ate and were filled, all; not merely a matter of each getting a morsel.

Vv. 18-27. The Christ and the cross (Mt. xvi. 13-28, Mk. viii. 27-ix. 1). At this point occurs a great gap in Lk.'s narrative as compared with those of Mt. and Mk., all between Mt. xiv. 22 and xvi. 12 and between Mk. vi. 45 and viii. 27 being omitted. Various explanations of the omission have been suggested: accident (Meyer, Godet), not in the copy of Mk. used by Lk. (Reuss), mistake of the eye, passing from the second feeding as if it were the first (Beyschlag). These and other explanations imply that the omission was unintentional. But against this hypothesis is the fact that the edges of the opposite sides of the gap are brought together in Lk.'s με λέγουσιν οἱ ὄχλοι<sup>1</sup> εἶναι;" 19. Οἱ δὲ ἀποκριθέντες εἶπον, "Ἰωάννην τὸν Βαπτιστὴν· ἄλλοι δέ, Ἥλιον. ἄλλοι δέ, ὅτι προφήτης τις τῶν ἀρχαίων ἀνέστη." 20. Εἶπε δὲ αὐτοῖς, "Ὑμεῖς δὲ τίνα με λέγετε εἶναι;" Ἀποκριθεὶς δὲ ὁ Πέτρος<sup>2</sup> εἶπε, "Τὸν Χριστὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ." 21. Ὁ δὲ ἐπιτιμήσας αὐτοῖς παρήγγειλε μηδενὶ εἰπεῖν<sup>3</sup> τοῦτο, 22. εἰπὼν, "Ὅτι δεῖ τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου πολλὰ παθεῖν, καὶ ἀποδοκιμασθῆναι ἀπὸ τῶν πρεσβυτέρων καὶ ἀρχιερέων καὶ γραμματέων, καὶ ἀποκτανθῆναι, καὶ τῇ τρίτῃ ἡμέρᾳ ἐγερθῆναι."<sup>4</sup>

23. Ἐλεγε δὲ πρὸς πάντας, "Εἴ τις θέλει ὀπίσω μου ἔλθειν,<sup>5</sup> ἀπαρνησάσθω ἑαυτὸν, καὶ ἀράτω τὸν σταυρὸν αὐτοῦ καθ' ἡμέραν,

<sup>1</sup> οἱ οχλοὶ λεγ. in  $\aleph$ BL $\Xi$  I, 131 sah. cop.

<sup>2</sup> Πέτρος δε αποκ. in  $\aleph$ BCL $\Xi$  I sah. cop.

<sup>3</sup> λεγειν in  $\aleph$ ABCDL $\Xi$  al. pl.

<sup>4</sup> So in most uncials. ACD minusc. have αναστηναι (W.H. marg.).

<sup>5</sup> ερχεσθαι in  $\aleph$ BCDL $\Xi$  al. The important authorities are divided between απαρνησασθω and the simple αρνησ. (W.H. former in margin, latter in text).

narrative at ix. 18: Jesus alone praying, as in Mt. xiv. 23, Mk. vi. 45-46, yet the disciples are with Him though alone (κατὰ μόναν α. οἱ μαθηταί), and He proceeds to interrogate them. This raises the question as to the motives for intentional omission, which may have been such as these: avoidance of duplicates with no new lesson (second feeding), anti-Pharisaic matter much restricted throughout (ceremonial washing), Jewish particularism not suitable in a Gentile Gospel, not even the appearance of it (Syrophenician woman).—κατὰ μόναν, the scene remains unchanged in Lk.—that of the feeding of the 5000. No trace in this Gospel of Caesarea Philippi, or indeed of the great northerly journey (or journeys) so prominently recognised in Mk., the aim of which was to get away from crowds, and obtain leisure for intercourse with the Twelve in view of the approaching fatal crisis. This omission can hardly be without intention. Whether Lk. knew Mk.'s Gospel or not, so careful and interested an inquirer can hardly have been ignorant of that northern excursion. He may have omitted it because it was not rich in incident, in favour of the Samaritan journey about which he had much to tell. But the very raison d'être of the journey was the hope that it might be a quiet one, giving leisure for intercourse with the Twelve. But this private fellowship of Jesus with His disciples with a view to their instruction is just one of the things to which justice is not done in this Gospel. Their need of instruction is not emphasised. From Lk.'s narrative one would never guess the critical importance of the conversation at Caesarea Philippi, as regards either Peter's confession or the announcement by Jesus of the coming passion.—Ver. 20. τὸν Χριστὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ: even the form of the confession, as here given, hides its significance. Peter speaks the language of the apostolic age, the Christ of God, a commonplace of the Christian faith. Mk.'s Thou art the Christ, laconic, emphatic, is original by comparison, and Mt.'s form still more sounds like the utterance of a fresh, strong conviction, a new revelation flashed into the soul of Peter.

Vv. 21-27. The cross and cross-bearing.—Ver. 22. εἰπὼν introduces reference to the coming sufferings of Jesus in a quite incidental way as a reason why the disciples should keep silence as to the Messiahship of their Master, just confessed. The truth is that the conversation as to the Christ was a mere prelude to a very formal, solemn, and plain-spoken announcement on a painful theme, to which hitherto Jesus had alluded only in veiled mystic language. Cf. the accounts in Mt. and Mk. (xvi. 21, viii. 31).—ὅτι δεῖ, etc., the announcement is given in much the same words as in Mk.—Ver. 23. εἶπε δὲ πρὸς πάντας: with this formula Lk. smoothly passes from Christ's statement concerning His own Passion to the kindred topic of cross-bearing as the law of καὶ ἀκολουθεῖτω μοι. 24. ὃς γὰρ ἂν θέλῃ τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ σῶσαι, ἀπολέσει αὐτήν· ὃς δ' ἂν ἀπολέσῃ τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ ἕνεκεν ἐμοῦ, οὗτος σώσει αὐτήν. 25. τί γὰρ ὠφελείται ἄνθρωπος, κερδήσας τὸν κόσμον ὅλον, ἑαυτὸν δὲ ἀπολέσας ἢ ζημιωθείς; 26. ὃς γὰρ ἂν ἐπαισχυθῆ με καὶ τοὺς ἐμοὺς λόγους, τοῦτον ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἐπαισχυθήσεται, ὅταν ἔλθῃ ἐν τῇ δόξῃ αὐτοῦ καὶ τοῦ πατρὸς καὶ τῶν ἁγίων ἀγγέλων. 27. Λέγω δὲ ὑμῖν ἀληθῶς, εἰσὶ τινες τῶν ὧδε<sup>1</sup> ἐστηκότων, οἳ οὐ μὴ γεύσονται<sup>2</sup> θανάτου, ἕως ἂν ἴδωσι τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ.”

28. Ἐγένετο δὲ μετὰ τοὺς λόγους τούτους ὥσει ἡμέραι ὀκτώ, καὶ παραλαβὼν τὸν Πέτρον<sup>4</sup> καὶ Ἰωάννην καὶ Ἰάκωβον, ἀνέβη εἰς τὸ ὄρος προσεύξασθαι. 29. καὶ ἐγένετο, ἐν τῷ προσεύχεσθαι αὐτόν, τὸ εἶδος τοῦ προσώπου αὐτοῦ ἕτερον, καὶ ὁ ἱματισμὸς αὐτοῦ λευκὸς

<sup>1</sup> For ὧδε  $\aleph$ BL $\Xi$  I have αὐτοῦ, doubtless the true reading. Vide below. The same authorities have ἐστηκότων, while CD and many others have ἐστῶτων.

<sup>2</sup> γεύσονται in most texts, including  $\aleph$ BCDL.

<sup>3</sup>  $\aleph$ B some verss. omit καὶ (W.H. relegate to margin).

<sup>4</sup> Omit τὸν before Π. all uncials.

discipleship. The discourse on that theme is reproduced in much the same terms as in the parallel accounts. But it loses greatly in point by the omission of the Master's rebuke to Peter for his opposition to the Passion. That rebuke gives to the discourse this meaning: you object to my suffering? I tell you not only must I suffer; it is the inevitable lot of all who have due regard to the Divine interest in this world. Thus the first lesson Jesus taught the Twelve on the significance of His death was that it was the result of moral fidelity, and that as such it was but an instance of a universal law of the moral order of the world. This great doctrine, the ethical aspect of the Passion, is not made clear in Lk.—καθ' ἡμέραν, daily, in Lk. only, a true exegetical addition, yet restricting the sense, directing attention to the commonplace trials of ordinary Christian life, rather than to the great tribulations at crises in a heroic career, in which the law of cross-bearing receives its signal illustration. This addition makes it probable that πάντας refers not only to the disciples, but to a larger audience: the law applies not to leaders only but to all followers of Jesus.—Ver. 25. ἑαυτὸν ἀπολέσας ἢ ζημιωθείς = losing, or receiving damage in, his own self (Field, Ot. Nor.). The idea expressed by the second participle seems to be that even though it does not come to absolute loss, yet if gaining the world involve damage to the self, the moral personality—taint, lowering of the tone, vulgarising of the soul—we lose much more than we gain.—Ver. 26. ἐν τῇ δόξῃ, etc., in the glory of Father, Son, and holy angels, a sort of trinitarian formula.—Ver. 27. ἀληθῶς = ἀμὴν in parallels.—αὐτοῦ, here = ὧδε in parallels.—τῇ βασ. τ. Θ., the Kingdom of God, a simplified expression compared with those in Mt. and Mk., perhaps due to the late period at which Lk. wrote, probably understood by him as referring to the origination of the church at Pentecost.

Vv. 28-36. The transfiguration (Mt. xvii. 1-13, Mk. ix. 2-13).—Ver. 28. τοὺς λόγους τούτους: the words about the Passion and cross-bearing.—ὥσει ἡμέραι ὀκτώ: no real discrepancy between Lk. and the other evangelists (after six days).—Πέτρον, etc., Peter, John and James, same order as in viii. 51 (BC, etc.).—εἰς τὸ ὄρος: the mountain contiguous to the scene of the feeding, according to the sequence of Lk.'s narrative.—προσεύξασθαι: prayer again (cf. ver. 18). In Lk.'s delineation of the character of Jesus prayer occupies a prominent place.—Ver. 29. ἐν τῷ προσεύχεσθαι, while praying, and as the result of the exercise.—ἕτερον, different; a real objective change, not merely to the view of the three disciples. Lk. omits ἔμπροσθεν αὐτῶν.—λευκὸς may be viewed as an ἔξαστράπτων. 30. Καὶ ἰδοῦ, ἄνδρες δύο συμελάλου ἀυτῶ οἵτινες ἦσαν Μωσῆς καὶ Ἡλίας· 31. οἱ ὀφθέντες ἐν δόξῃ ἔλεγον τὴν ἔξοδον αὐτοῦ, ἣν ἔμελλε πληροῦν ἐν Ἱερουσαλήμ. 32. ὁ δὲ Πέτρος καὶ οἱ σὺν αὐτῶ ἦσαν βεβαρημένοι ὕπνῳ· διαγρηγορήσαντες δὲ εἶδον τὴν δόξαν αὐτοῦ, καὶ τοὺς δύο ἄνδρας τοὺς συνεστῶτας αὐτῶ. 33. καὶ ἐγένετο ἐν τῷ διαχωρίζεσθαι αὐτοὺς ἀπ' αὐτοῦ, εἶπεν ὁ Πέτρος πρὸς τὸν Ἰησοῦν, "Ἐπιστάτα, καλὸν ἐστὶν ἡμᾶς ὡς εἶναι· καὶ ποιήσωμεν σκηνὰς τρεῖς, μίαν σοί, καὶ Μωσεὶ μίαν,<sup>1</sup> καὶ μίαν Ἡλίᾳ." μὴ εἰδῶς ὁ λέγει. 34. ταῦτα δὲ αὐτοῦ λέγοντος, ἐγένετο νεφέλη καὶ ἐπεσκίασεν<sup>2</sup> αὐτούς· ἐφοβήθησαν δὲ ἐν τῷ ἐκείνους εἰσελθεῖν<sup>3</sup> εἰς τὴν νεφέλην. 35. καὶ φωνὴ ἐγένετο ἐκ τῆς νεφέλης, λέγουσα, "Οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ υἱὸς μου ὁ ἀγαπητός,<sup>4</sup> αὐτοῦ ἀκούετε." 36. Καὶ ἐν τῷ γενέσθαι τὴν φωνὴν, εὐρέθη ὁ<sup>5</sup> Ἰησοῦς μόνος. Καὶ αὐτοὶ ἐσίγησαν, καὶ οὐδενὶ ἀπήγγειλαν ἐν ἐκείναις ταῖς ἡμέραις οὐδὲν ὧν ἑώρακαν.<sup>6</sup>

<sup>1</sup> μίαν before M. in all uncials.

<sup>2</sup> ἐπεκίαξεν in ΞBL; aorist (T.R.) from Mt.

<sup>3</sup> ΞBCL cop. have εἰσελθεῖν αὐτούς, which Tisch. and W.H. adopt. T.R. = ADXA al. sah.

<sup>4</sup> ἐκλελεγμένος in ΞBLΞ sah. cop. (Tisch., W.H.). T.R. = CD al. ρι.

<sup>5</sup> Omit ο very many uncials.

<sup>6</sup> ἑωρακαν in ΞABL al. ρι. (Tisch., W.H.).

adverb in function, qualifying ἔξαστράπτων (De Wette), but there is no reason why it should not be co-ordinate with ἔξασ., καὶ being omitted = white, glistening.—ἔξαστράπτων: in N. T. here only, flashing like lightning.—Ver. 31. ἐν δόξῃ: this is peculiar to Lk.—ἔλεγον, were speaking about. Kypke thinks more is meant: speaking with praise (cum laude aliquid commemorare). One could have accepted this sense had Peter's opposition been reported.—τὴν ἔξοδον, decease, death; so in 2 Peter i. 15. Other words for death are ἐκβασίς (Heb. xiii. 7), ἀφίξις (Acts xx. 29), ἀνάλυσις (2 Tim. iv. 6). Perhaps the exodus here spoken of should be taken comprehensively as including death, resurrection and ascension. (So Kypke, also Godet.) πληροῦν in that case will mean "pass through all the stages". But against this wide sense is ἐν Ἱερουσαλήμ.—Ver. 32. βεβαρ. ὕπνῳ: this particular, in Lk. only, implies that it was a night scene; so also the expression ἐν τῇ ἑξῆς ἡμέρᾳ, ver. 37. The celestial visitants are supposed to arrive while the disciples are asleep. They fell asleep while their Master prayed, as at Gethsemane.—διαγρηγορήσαντες, having thoroughly wakened up, so as to be able to see distinctly what passed (here only in N.T.).—Ver. 33. While the two celestials were departing Peter made his proposal, to prevent them from going.—μὴ εἰδῶς, etc., not knowing what he said; an apology for a proposal to keep the two celestials from returning to heaven.—Ver. 34. It is not clear who were enveloped by the cloud. If the reading ἐκείνους before εἰσελθεῖν were retained it would imply that the three disciples were outside; αὐτούς, the reading of B, etc., implies that all were within.—Ver. 35. ἐκλελεγμένος, the reading of ΞBL, is to be preferred, because ἀγαπητός, T. R., is conformed to that in the parallels; here only in N. T.—Ver. 36. ἐσίγησαν, they were silent; "in those days," it is added, implying that afterwards (after the resurrection) they spoke of the experience. Lk. does not mention the injunction of Jesus to keep silence, nor the conversation on the way down the hill about Elijah and John the Baptist.

Vv. 37-43a. The epileptic boy (Mt. xvii. 14-21, Mk. ix. 14-29).—Ver. 38. ἐπιβλέψαι, to look with pity, as in i. 48.—μονογενής, only son, as in vii. 12, viii. 42. to bring out the benevolence of

37. Ἐγένετο δὲ ἐν<sup>1</sup> τῇ ἐξῆς ἡμέρᾳ, κατελθόντων αὐτῶν ἀπὸ τοῦ ὄρους, συνήντησεν αὐτῷ ὄχλος πολὺς. 38. Καὶ ἰδοῦ, ἀνὴρ ἀπὸ τοῦ ὄχλου ἀνεβόησε,<sup>2</sup> λέγων, “Διδάσκαλε, δέομαί σου, ἐπιβλεψόν<sup>3</sup> ἐπὶ τὸν υἱόν μου, ὅτι μονογενῆς ἐστὶ μοι<sup>4</sup>. 39. καὶ ἰδοῦ, πνεῦμα λαμβάνει αὐτόν, καὶ ἐξαίφνης κράζει, καὶ σπαράσσει αὐτὸν μετὰ ἀφροῦ, καὶ μόγις<sup>5</sup> ἀποχωρεῖ ἀπ’ αὐτοῦ, συντρίβον αὐτόν. 40. καὶ ἐδεήθη τῶν μαθητῶν σου, ἵνα ἐκβάλλωσιν<sup>6</sup> αὐτό, καὶ οὐκ ἠδυνήθησαν.” 41. Ἀποκριθεὶς δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν, “Ἔω γενεὰ ἄπιστος καὶ διεστραμμένη, ἕως πότε ἔσομαι πρὸς ὑμᾶς, καὶ ἀνέξομαι ὑμῶν; προσάγαγε ὧδε τὸν υἱόν σου.” 42. Ἔτι δὲ προσερχομένου αὐτοῦ, ἔρρηξεν αὐτὸν τὸ δαιμόνιον καὶ συνεσπάραξεν· ἐπετίμησε δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς τῷ πνεύματι τῷ ἀκαθάρτῳ, καὶ ἴασατο τὸν παῖδα, καὶ ἀπέδωκεν αὐτὸν τῷ πατρὶ αὐτοῦ. 43. ἐξεπλήρῃοντο δὲ πάντες ἐπὶ τῇ<sup>a</sup> μεγαλειότητι τοῦ Θεοῦ. Πάντων δὲ θαυμαζόντων ἐπὶ πᾶσιν οἷς ἐποίησεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς,<sup>7</sup> εἶπε πρὸς τοὺς μαθητὰς αὐτοῦ, 44. “Θέσθε ὑμεῖς εἰς τὰ ὦτα ὑμῶν τοὺς λόγους τούτους· ὁ γὰρ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου μέλλει παραδίδοσθαι εἰς χεῖρας ἀνθρώπων.” 45. Οἱ δὲ ἠγνούον τὸ ῥήμα τοῦτο, καὶ ἦν παρακεκαλυμμένον ἀπ’ αὐτῶν, ἵνα μὴ αἰσθωνται αὐτό· καὶ ἐφοβούντο ἐρωτῆσαι αὐτὸν περὶ τοῦ ῥήματος τούτου. 46. Εἰσῆλθε δὲ διαλογισμὸς ἐν αὐτοῖς, τό, τίς ἂν εἶη μείζων αὐτῶν.

a Acts xix
27. 2 l'ci
L 16.

<sup>1</sup> NBL omit ἐν.

<sup>2</sup> εβοησεν in NBCDL.

<sup>3</sup> επιβλεψαι in BCL. ND have -ov = T.R.

<sup>4</sup> μοι εστι in NABCDLX 33 verss.

<sup>5</sup> μολις in B (W.H.); μογις in NCD (Tisch.). Not found elsewhere in N.T.

<sup>6</sup> εκβαλωσιν in most uncials.

<sup>7</sup> For εποι. ο l. NBDLΞ have simply εποιει (Tisch., W.H.).

the miracle.—Ver. 39. κράζει, he (the boy) crieth.—σπαράσσει, he (the demon) teareth him.—Ver. 42. προσερχομένου αὐτοῦ, while the boy was approaching Jesus, in accordance with His request that he should be brought to Him, the demon made a final assault on his victim, rending and convulsing him.—Ver. 43. ἐπὶ τῇ μεγαλειότητι τ. Θεοῦ, the people were astonished at the majesty of God, revealed in the power that could work such a cure. In Acts ii. 22 God is represented as working miracles through Jesus. So the matter is conceived here. But Lk. thinks of the majesty of God as immanent in Jesus.

Vv. 43b-45. Second prediction of the Passion (Mt. xvii. 22-23, Mk. ix. 30-32).—πάντων θαυμαζόντων, etc., while all were wondering at all the things which He did. The reference is to the cure of the epileptic, which led the multitude to see in Jesus the bearer of the majesty or greatness of the Almighty.—εἶπε. Jesus spoke a second time of His approaching death, in connection with this prevailing wonder, and His aim was to keep the disciples from being misled by it. The setting in Mt. and Mk. is different. There Jesus speaks of His passion, while He with the Twelve is wandering about in Galilee, endeavouring, according to Mk., to remain unnoticed, and He speaks of it simply because it is the engrossing theme with which His mind is constantly preoccupied. Here, on the other hand, the second announcement is elicited by an external occasion, the admiration of the people.—Ver. 44. μέλλει παραδίδοσθαι, is about to be betrayed. Lk. gives the specialty of the second prediction as in the parallels. Where he fails in comparison with Mt. and Mk. is in grasping the psychological situation

47. ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς ἰδὼν<sup>1</sup> τὸν διαλογισμὸν τῆς καρδίας αὐτῶν, ἐπιλαβόμενος παιδίου,<sup>2</sup> ἔστησεν αὐτὸ παρ' ἑαυτοῦ, 48. καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, "Ὅς ἐὰν δέξηται τοῦτο τὸ παιδίον ἐπὶ τῷ ὀνόματί μου, ἐμὲ δέχεται· καὶ ὡς ἐὰν ἐμὲ δέξηται, δέχεται τὸν ἀποστείλαντά με. ὁ γὰρ μικρότερος ἐν πᾶσιν ὑμῖν ὑπάρχων οὗτος ἔσται<sup>3</sup> μέγας."

49. Ἀποκριθεὶς δὲ ὁ Ἰωάννης εἶπεν, "Ἐπιστάτα, εἶδομέν τινα ἐπὶ<sup>4</sup> τῷ ὀνόματί σου ἐκβάλλοντα τὰ<sup>5</sup> δαιμόνια· καὶ ἐκωλύσαμεν<sup>6</sup>

<sup>1</sup> εἰδὼς in  $\aleph$ B al. (Tisch., W.H., text). ἰδὼν in CDLΞ (W.H. margin).

<sup>2</sup> So in  $\aleph$  and very many MSS. (Tisch.). BCD have παιδιον (W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> ἐστιν in  $\aleph$ BCLXΞ 1, 33 vet. Lat. vulg. D has εσται.

<sup>4</sup> ἐν in  $\aleph$ BLXΔΞ 1, 33 al. (W.H.). ἐπι in CD, etc.

<sup>5</sup> Omit τα most uncials.

<sup>6</sup>  $\aleph$ BIΞ have ἐκωλομεν, which may be conformed to Mk. (Tisch. aor. = T.R., W.H. imp.).

the emotional state of Christ's mind. Cf. remarks on Mk., ad loc. Lk.'s Christ is comparatively passionless.

Vv. 46-50. Who might be the greatest (Mt. xviii. 1-5, Mk. ix. 33-41).—Ver. 46. εἰσηλθε διαλογισμὸς, now there entered in among them (the Twelve) a thought. Lk.'s way of introducing this subject seems to show a desire, by way of sparing the future Apostles, to make as little of it as possible. It is merely a thought of the heart (τῆς καρδίας, ver. 47), not a dispute as in Mk., and inferentially also in Mt. It came into their minds, how or why does not appear. Mk.'s narrative leads us to connect the dispute with Christ's foreboding references to His Passion. While they walked along the way (ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ), the Master thinking always, and speaking often, of His death, they, realising that a crisis of some sort was approaching but not knowing its nature, discussed the question τίς μείζων; so supplying the comic side of the tragic drama.—τὸ τίς, etc., this, viz., who might be the greater of them, or, who might be greater than they. αὐτῶν may be taken either partitively, or as a genitive of comparison. It is ordinarily taken in the former sense, whereby Lk.'s account is brought into line with the parallels; but Weiss (Mk.-Evang., also J. Weiss in Meyer) contends for the latter. His idea is that the Twelve, in Lk.'s view, were all conscious of their common importance as disciples of Jesus, and wondered if anybody could be greater than they all were. He connects the "thought" of the Twelve with the exorcist incident (ver. 49) as evincing a similar self-importance. This view cannot be negatived on purely exegetical grounds.—Ver. 47. παρ' ἑαυτοῦ, beside Himself, not ἐν μέσῳ αὐτῶν, as in Mt. and Mk., as if to say, here is the greater one.—Ver. 48. τοῦτο τὸ παιδίον, this particular child—not such a child, or what such a child represents, the little and insignificant—as in Mt. and Mk. Yet Lk.'s expression practically means that = this child, for example.—δέξηται: in Lk. the receiving of the little child is placed first in the discourse of Jesus, whereas in Mk. the general maxim that the man who is willing to be last is first, comes first. This position favours the view that not internal rivalry but a common self-exaltation in relation to those without is the vice in the view of Lk. Jesus says in effect: Be not high-minded; an appreciative attitude towards those you are prone to despise is what I and my Father value.—ἐν πᾶσιν ὑμῖν: this phrase, on the other hand, seems to point to internal rivalries. There had been a question among them as to greater and less, to which the Master's answer was: the least one is the great one. Lk.'s version of this important discourse is, as De Wette remarks, inferior in point and clearness to Mt.'s.—Ver. 49. ἐκωλύσαμεν (T. R.), aorist, instead of Mk.'s imperfect; the former implies successful repression, the latter an attempt at it. Vide notes on Mk., ad loc.—μεθ' ἡμῶν: Phrynichus objects to this construction after ἀκολουθεῖν, and says it should be followed by the dative. But Lobeck gives examples of the former construction from good authors (vide p. 353).

αὐτόν, ὅτι οὐκ ἀκολουθεῖ μεθ' ἡμῶν." 50. Καὶ εἶπε<sup>1</sup> πρὸς αὐτὸν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Μὴ κωλύετε· ὅς γὰρ οὐκ ἔστι καθ' ἡμῶν,<sup>2</sup> ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν<sup>3</sup> ἔστιν."

51. ἘΓΕΝΕΤΟ δὲ ἐν τῷ συμπληροῦσθαι τὰς ἡμέρας τῆς ἀναλήψεως αὐτοῦ, καὶ αὐτὸς τὸ πρόσωπον αὐτοῦ<sup>4</sup> ἑστηρίξε<sup>4</sup> τοῦ πορεύεσθαι εἰς

<sup>1</sup> εἶπε δε in BCDLXΞ 33 al.

<sup>2</sup> ὑμῶν bis in BCDLΞ vet. Lat. vulg. cop. syrr. cur. sin. (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> BLΞ 1, 239 c omit αὐτου after προσωπον (W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> ἑστηρίσεν in BCLXΞ 33 (Tisch., W.H.). ἩD as in T.R.

Chapter ix., as Farrar remarks (C. T.), should have ended here, as with ver. 51 begins an entirely distinct, large, and very important division of Lk.'s Gospel.

Vv. 51-56. Looking southward. Samaritan intolerance.—Ver. 51 forms the introduction to the great division, ix. 51—xviii. 15. It makes all that follows up to the terminus ad quem stand under the solemn heading: the beginning of the end. From this time forth Jesus has the close of His earthly career in view. His face is fixedly set towards Jerusalem and—heaven. This conception of Jesus, as from this point onwards looking forward to the final crisis, suggests various reflections.

1. The reference to the last act of the drama comes in at a very early place in Lk.'s history.

2. The part of the story lying behind us does not adequately account for the mood of Jesus. We do not see why He should be thinking so earnestly of a final crisis of a tragic character, or even why there should be such a crisis at all. That the religious guides of Israel more or less disapproved of His ways has appeared, but it has not been shown that their hostility was of a deadly character. The dinner in Simon's house speaks to relations more or less friendly, and the omission of the sharp encounter in reference to hand-washing, and of the ominous demand for a sign from heaven, greatly tends to obscure the forces that were working towards a tragic end, and had the cross for their natural outcome. It does not seem to have entered into Lk.'s plan to exhibit Christ's death as the natural result of the opinions, practices, prejudices and passions prevalent in the religious world. He contemplated the event on the Godward, theological side, or perhaps it would be more correct to say on the side of fulfilment of O. T. prophecy. The necessity of Christ's death, the δαῖ (ix. 22) = the demand of O. T. Scripture for fulfilment, vide xxiv. 26.

3. In the long narrative contained in the next eight chapters, Jesus does not seem to be constantly thinking of the end. In Mk. and Mt. it is otherwise. From the period at which Jesus began to speak plainly of His death He appears constantly preoccupied with the subject. His whole manner and behaviour are those of one walking under the shadow of the cross. This representation is true to life. In Lk., on the other hand, while the face of Jesus is set towards Jerusalem, His mind seems often to be thinking of other things, and the reader of the story forgets about the cross as he peruses its deeply interesting pages.

συμπληροῦσθαι, etc., when the days of His assumption were in course of accomplishment, implying the approach of the closing scenes of Christ's earthly experience; here and in Acts ii. 1, only, of time; in viii. 23 in the literal sense.—ἀναλήψεως α. His assumption into heaven, as in Acts i. 2. The substantive in this sense is a ἄπ. λεγ. in N. T. It occurs in the Test., xii. Patr. The verb occurs in a similar sense in various places in the Sept. The assumption into heaven includes the crucifixion in Lk.'s conception, just as the glorification of Jesus includes the Passion in the Johannine conception. "Instabat adhuc passio, crux, mors, sepulchrum; sed per haec omnia ad metam prospexit Jesus, cujus sensum imitatur stylus evangelistae," Bengel. The ἀνάληψις was an act of God.—ἑστηρίσεν, He made His face firm (from στήριγξ, akin to στερεός, Thayer's Grimm), as if to meet something formidable and unwelcome, the cross rather than what lay beyond, here in view. Hahn, who does not believe that Lk. is here referring to Christ's final journey to Jerusalem, tones down the force of this word so as to make it

Ἱερουσαλήμ. 52. καὶ ἀπέστειλεν ἀγγέλους πρὸ προσώπου αὐτοῦ· καὶ πορευθέντες εἰσηήλθον εἰς κώμην<sup>1</sup> Σαμαρειτῶν, ὥστε<sup>2</sup> ἐτοιμάσαι αὐτῷ. 53. καὶ οὐκ ἐδέξαντο αὐτόν, ὅτι τὸ πρόσωπον αὐτοῦ ἦν πορευόμενον εἰς Ἱερουσαλήμ. 54. ἰδόντες δὲ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ<sup>3</sup>

Ἰάκωβος καὶ Ἰωάννης εἶπον, “Κύριε, θέλεις εἶπωμεν πῦρ καταβῆναι ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, καὶ<sup>b</sup> ἀναλωσαι αὐτούς, ὡς καὶ Ἡλίας ἐποίησε<sup>4</sup> ;”

<sup>b</sup> Gal. v. 15 <sup>(2 Thess.</sup>
ii. 8).

55. Στραφεῖς δὲ ἐπετίμησεν αὐτοῖς, καὶ εἶπεν, “Οὐκ οἴδατε οἶον πνεύματός ἐστε ὑμεῖς· 56. ὁ γὰρ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου οὐκ ἦλθε ψυχὰς ἀνθρώπων ἀπολέσαι, ἀλλὰ σῶσαι.”<sup>5</sup> Καὶ ἐπορεύθησαν εἰς ἑτέραν κώμην.

57. Ἐγένετο δὲ<sup>6</sup> πορευομένων αὐτῶν, ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ εἰπέ τις πρὸς αὐτόν, “Ἀκολουθήσω σοι ὅπου ἂν ἀπέρχῃ, κύριε.”<sup>7</sup> 58. Καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Αἱ ἀλώπεκες φωλεοὺς ἔχουσι, καὶ τὰ πετεινὰ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ κατασκευάζουσιν· ὁ δὲ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου οὐκ ἔχει ποῦ τὴν

<sup>1</sup> πολιν in  $\aleph^*$ ΓΛ some minusc. (Tisch.).

<sup>2</sup> So in CDL al.  $\beta$ l. (Tisch.).  $\aleph$ B some vet. Lat. codd. have  $\omega$ s (W.H.).

<sup>3</sup>  $\aleph$ B some minusc. omit αὐτοῦ.

<sup>4</sup>  $\aleph$ BLE minusc. vulg. syrr. cur. sin. memph. omit  $\omega$ s καὶ Η. εποίησε, which is probably a gloss.

<sup>5</sup> From καὶ εἶπεν (ver. 55) to ἀλλα σῶσαι (ver. 56) is probably also a gloss (found in FKMΓΑ al.  $\beta$ l. D has οὐκ οἶδ. οἱ. πν. εστε υμεῖς; also in many verss.).

$\aleph$ ABCLΔΕ al. syr. sin., etc., omit the whole passage (Tisch., Trg., R.V., W.H.).

<sup>6</sup> For εγεν. δε  $\aleph$ BCLXΕ 33 69 al. verss. have simply καὶ.

<sup>7</sup>  $\aleph$ BDLE minusc. verss. omit κύριε (Tisch., W.H.); found in CD al. Fewer MSS. omit κύριε in ver. 59 (BDV 57, Orig.).  $\aleph$ CLE have it (Tisch. omits, W.H. put in margin).

express in Oriental fashion the idea of Jesus addressing Himself to a journey not specially momentous.

Vv. 52-56. Samaritan intolerance.—εἰς κώμην Σαμαρειτῶν: this indicates an intention to go southward through Samaritan territory. Not an unusual thing. Josephus (Antiq., xx., vi. 1) states that it was the custom for Galileans going to Jerusalem to the feasts to pass through Samaria.—ἐτοιμάσαι α., to prepare for Him, i.e., to find lodgings for the night.—ὥστε in view of the sequel can only express tendency or intention.—οὐκ ἐδέξαντο α.: the aorist, implying “that they at once rejected Him,” Farrar (C. G. T.).—ὅτι introduces the reason: Christ’s face was, looked like, going to Jerusalem. In view of what Josephus states, this hardly accounts for the inhospitable treatment. Perhaps the manner of the messengers had something to do with it. Had Jesus gone Himself the result might have been different. Perhaps He was making an experiment to see how His followers and the Samaritans would get on together. In that case the result would make Him change His plan, and turn aside from Samaria into Peræa. If so then Baur’s idea of a Samaritan ministry is a misnomer.—Ver. 54. Ἰάκωβος καὶ Ἰωάννης: their outburst of temper, revealed in their truculent proposal, probably indicated the attitude of the whole company. In that case journeying through Samaria was hopeless.—καταβῆναι, infinitive, instead of ἵνα with subjunctive as often after εἰπεῖν.—Ver. 55. στραφεῖς: an imposing gesture, as in vii. 9, 44.—Ver. 56. εἰς ἑτέραν κώμην, to another village, probably in Galilee; both in the borderland.

Vv. 57-62. New disciples.—ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ: the indication of time is not precise. It does not mean, on the way to the other village, mentioned just before (Meyer), but on the way to Jerusalem (ver. 51).

κεφαλὴν κλίνῃ.” 59. Εἶπε δὲ πρὸς ἕτερον, “Ἀκούσθαι μοι.” Ὁ δὲ εἶπε, “Κύριε, ἐπίτρεψόν μοι ἀπελθόντι πρῶτον<sup>1</sup> θάψαι τὸν πατέρα μου.” 60. Εἶπε δὲ αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς,<sup>2</sup> “Ἄφες τοὺς νεκροὺς θάψαι τοὺς ἑαυτῶν νεκροὺς· σὺ δὲ ἀπελθὼν διάγγελλε τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ.” 61. Εἶπε δὲ καὶ ἕτερος, “Ἀκολουθήσω σοι, κύριε· πρῶτον δὲ ἐπίτρεψόν μοι ἀποτάξασθαι τοῖς εἰς τὸν οἶκόν μου.” 62. Εἶπε δὲ πρὸς αὐτὸν<sup>3</sup> ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Οὐδεὶς ἐπιβαλὼν τὴν χεῖρα αὐτοῦ<sup>4</sup> ἐπ’ ἄροτρον, καὶ βλέπων εἰς τὰ ὀπίσω, εὐθετός ἐστιν εἰς τὴν<sup>c</sup> here only βασιλείαν<sup>b</sup> τοῦ Θεοῦ.”

<sup>1</sup> πρῶτον ἀπελθ. in  $\mathfrak{N}$ BD.

<sup>2</sup> Omit ο ἰ.  $\mathfrak{N}$ B $\overline{\text{D}}$ L $\overline{\text{E}}$  33 a cop.

<sup>3</sup> B omits πρὸς αὐτον (W.H. in brackets).

<sup>4</sup> B minusc. and some codd. of vet. Lat. omit αὐτου.

<sup>c</sup> For εἰς τὴν β.  $\mathfrak{N}$ BL $\overline{\text{E}}$  1, 33 vet. Lat. codd. have τῆ βασιλεία (Tisch., W.H.). D and some vet. Lat. codd. invert the order of the clauses = looking back and putting his hand to the plough.

Grotius thinks the connection is purely topical. “Visum est Lucae connectere τὰ ὁμογενέα.” The first two of the three cases are reported by Mt. (viii. 19-22).—τις: Mt. (viii. 19) designates this certain one a scribe.—ἀπέρχη implies a departure from a place. It would be a leaving of home for the disciple.—Ver. 58. This remarkable saying is given in identical terms by Mt. and Lk. Vide on Mt. Vv. 59, 60. The second case (Mt. viii. 21-22).—ἀκούσθαι μοι. Jesus takes the initiative in this case. That He should not have done so in the first is intelligible if the aspirant was a scribe. Jesus did not look for satisfactory discipleship from that quarter.—σὺ δὲ, but thou, emphatic, implying that the man addressed is not among the dead, but one who appreciates the claims of the kingdom.—διάγγελλε, keep proclaiming on every side the Kingdom of God; that, thy sole business henceforth, to which everything else, even burying parents, must be sacrificed: seek first the kingdom.

Vv. 61, 62. The third case, peculiar to Lk., and setting forth a distinct type.—ἀκολουθήσω σοι, I will follow Thee, implying that he also has been asked to do so, and that he is ready, but on a condition.—ἐπίτρεψόν μοι: this is a type of man who always wants to do something, in which he is himself specially interested first (πρῶτον), before he addresses himself to the main duty to which he is called.—ἀποτάξασθαι: in this case it is to bid good-bye to friends, a sentimental business; that also characteristic.—τοῖς εἰς τὸν οἶκόν μου. The verb ἀπ. is used in later Greek both with the dative of a person to denote “to take leave of,” and with the dative of a thing = to renounce (so in xiv. 33). Both senses are admissible here, as τοῖς may be either masculine or neuter, but the first sense is the only one suitable to the character (sentimental) and to the request, as property could be renounced on the spot; though this reason is not so conclusive, as some legal steps might be necessary to denude oneself of property.—Ver. 62. οὐδεὶς ἐπιβαλὼν, etc.: the necessity of self-concentration inculcated in proverbial language borrowed from agricultural life. Wetstein cites from Hesiod, “Ἔργ., ver. 443, the well-known lines: ἰθεῖαν αὐλακ’ ἐλαύνου, Μηκέτι παπταῖνον μεθ’ ὁμήλικας, ἀλλ’ ἐπὶ ἔργῳ θυμὸν ἔχων. The ambition to make a straight furrow has been common to ploughmen in all ages and countries, and it needs, like the highest calling, steady intention and a forward-cast eye. Furrer compliments the Palestine fellah on his skill in drawing a long straight furrow (Wanderungen, p. 149). His plough is a very inferior article to that used in this country.—εὐθετός, well fitted, apt; here and in chap. xiv. 35, Heb. vi. 7.—The first case is that of inconsiderate impulse, the second that of conflicting duties, the third that of a divided mind. The incidents are related by Lk., not so much possibly for their psychological interest as to show how Jesus came to have so many disciples as chap. x. 1-16 implies, and yet how particular He was.

X. 1. ΜΕΤΑ δὲ ταῦτα ἀνέδειξεν ὁ Κύριος καὶ<sup>1</sup> ἑτέρους ἑβδομήκοντα,<sup>2</sup> καὶ ἀπέστειλεν αὐτοὺς ἀνὰ δύο πρὸς προσώπου αὐτοῦ, εἰς πᾶσαν πόλιν καὶ τόπον οὗ ἔμελλεν αὐτὸς ἔρχεσθαι." 2. Ἔλεγεν οὖν<sup>3</sup> πρὸς αὐτοὺς, "Ὁ μὲν θερισμὸς πολὺς, οἱ δὲ ἔργαται ὀλίγοι· δεῖθ' οὖν τοῦ κυρίου τοῦ θερισμοῦ, ὅπως ἐκβάλλῃ ἔργατας<sup>4</sup> εἰς τὸν θερισμὸν αὐτοῦ. 3. Ὑπάγετε· ἰδοὺ, ἐγὼ<sup>5</sup> ἀποστέλλω ὑμᾶς ὡς

<sup>1</sup> καί, found in  $\aleph$ CD al. pl. verss. (Tisch.), is omitted in BL $\Xi$  33 (W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> So in  $\aleph$ ACLD $\Xi$  al. b, f, q (Tisch.). BD a, c, e, l, g vulg. syr. cur. sin. have ββ. δυο (W.H. in brackets).

<sup>3</sup> For οὖν  $\aleph$ BCDL $\Xi$  1, 33, 69 verss. have δε.

<sup>4</sup> ἔργατας ἐκβ.: this order in BD e. ἐκβαλη (aor.) in  $\aleph$ ABCDL $\Xi$  al.

<sup>5</sup> Omit ἐγὼ (from Mt.)  $\aleph$ AB.

CHAPTER X. THE SEVENTY. THE GOOD SAMARITAN. MARTHA AND MARY.—Vv. 1-12. The Seventy sent forth, peculiar to Lk. Many questions have been raised as to this narrative, e.g., as to its historicity, as to the connection between the instructions to the new missionaries and those to the Twelve, and as to the time and place of their election, and the sphere of their mission. On these points only the briefest hints can be given here. As to the first, the saying about the paucity of labourers, found also in Mt. (ix. 38), implies that Jesus was constantly on the outlook for competent assistants, and that He would use such as were available. The cases mentioned in the closing section of last chapter confirm this inference. Whether He would send them out simultaneously in large numbers, twelve, or seventy, or piecemeal, one or more pairs now, and another small group then, is a matter on which it is precarious to dogmatise, as is done by W. Grimm when he says (Das Proemium des Lucas-Evang.) that Jesus did not send out twelve all at once, but two and two now and then, and besides the Twelve others of the second order, and that these piecemeal missions consolidated in the tradition into two large ones of twelve and seventy. As to the instructions: there would be such in every instance, and they would be substantially the same whether given once, twice, or twenty times, summed up in a few compact sentences, so racy and memorable as to be easily preservable even by oral tradition. It is, however, quite probable that versions of these instructions were to be found in documents, say in Mk. and in Mt.'s Logia; and Lk., as Weiss suggests, may have taken the instructions to the Twelve from the former, and those to the Seventy from the latter. Finally, as to time, place, and sphere, nothing certain can be determined, and there is room for various conjectures. Hahn, e.g., suggests, as the place of the appointment, Jerusalem; the time, the feast of tabernacles, mentioned in John vii. 2; and the sphere of the mission, the towns and villages of Judaea or southern Palestine. There was certainly need for a mission there. The mission of the Twelve was in Galilee.

Ver. 1. μετὰ ταῦτα, after what has been narrated in ix. 51-62, but not necessarily implying close sequence.—ἀνέδειξεν (ἀναδεικνυμι). The verb means (1) to lift up so as to show, cf. the noun in Lk. i. 80; (2) to proclaim as elected, cf. Acts i. 24; (3) to elect, appoint, as here = designavit, Vulgate.—ὁ Κύριος, the Lord, Jesus, here, as often in Lk. applied to Him in narrative.—ἑτέρους, others, the reference being not to ἀγγέλους, ix. 52 (Meyer), but to τοὺς δώδεκα, ix. 1 = others besides the Twelve.—ἑβδομήκοντα, seventy (seventy-two in B), representing the nations of the earth, the number consciously fixed by the evangelist to symbolise Christian universalism—according to Dr. Baur and the Tübingen School; representing in the mind of Jesus the seventy Sanhedrists, as the Twelve were meant to represent the tribes of Israel, the seventy disciples having for their vocation to do what the Sanhedrists had failed to do—prepare the people for the appearance of the Christ—according to Hahn.

Vv. 2-12. The instructions.—Ver. 2. ὁ μὲν θερισμὸς: preliminary statement as to the need of men fit to take part in the work of preaching the kingdom, as in Mt. ix. 38, vide notes there; a true ἄρνas ἐν μέσῳ λύκων. 4. μὴ βαστάζετε βαλάντιον, μὴ πήραν, μηδὲ ὑποδήματα· καὶ μηδένα κατὰ τὴν ὁδὸν ἀσπάσησθε. 5. Εἰς ἣν δ' ἂν οἰκίαν εἰσέρχησθε,<sup>1</sup> πρῶτον λέγετε, Εἰρήμη τῷ οἴκῳ τούτῳ. 6. καὶ ἔαν μὲν ἦ ἐκεῖ<sup>2</sup> υἱὸς εἰρήνης, ἐπαναπαύσεται<sup>3</sup> ἐπ' αὐτὸν ἡ εἰρήνη ὑμῶν· εἰ δὲ μήγε, ἐφ' ὑμᾶς ἀνακάμψει. 7. ἐν αὐτῇ δὲ τῇ οἰκίᾳ μένετε, ἐσθιόντες<sup>4</sup> καὶ πίνοντες τὰ παρ' αὐτῶν· ἄξιός γάρ ὁ ἐργάτης τοῦ μισθοῦ αὐτοῦ ἐστι<sup>5</sup>. μὴ μεταβαίνετε ἐξ οἰκίας εἰς οἰκίαν. 8. καὶ εἰς ἣν δ' ἂν πόλιν εἰσέρχησθε, καὶ δέχωνται ὑμᾶς, ἐσθίετε τὰ παρατιθέμενα ὑμῖν, 9. καὶ θεραπεύετε τοὺς ἐν αὐτῇ ἀσθενεῖς, καὶ λέγετε αὐτοῖς, Ἕγγικεν ἐφ' ὑμᾶς ἡ βασιλεία τοῦ Θεοῦ. 10. εἰς ἣν δ' ἂν πόλιν εἰσέρχησθε,<sup>7</sup> καὶ μὴ δέχωνται ὑμᾶς, ἐξελθόντες εἰς τὰς πλατείας αὐτῆς, εἴπατε, 11. Καὶ τὸν κολιορτὸν τὸν κολληθέντα ἡμῖν ἐκ τῆς πόλεως ὑμῶν<sup>8</sup> ἀπομασσόμεθα ὑμῖν· πλην τοῦτο γίνωσ-

<sup>a</sup> here only in N.T.

<sup>1</sup> εἰσελθῆτε in  $\aleph$ BCDLE $\Xi$  1, 13, 69.

<sup>2</sup> μὲν is found only in minusc. B places εκεῖ before ἡ (W.H. text).

<sup>3</sup>  $\aleph$ B have επαναπαησεται, to be preferred as the rarer form.

<sup>4</sup> BD have εσθοντες (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> ἐστι omitted in  $\aleph$ BDLX $\Xi$ .

<sup>6</sup> δε is wanting in  $\aleph$ BCDE $\Xi$  al.

<sup>7</sup> εἰσελθῆτε in  $\aleph$ BCDLE $\Xi$  1, 33 al.

<sup>8</sup> After ὑμῶν  $\aleph$ BD have εἰς τοὺς ποδας, adopted by modern editors.

logion of Jesus, whensoever spoken.—Ver. 3. ὑπάγετε, go, whither? Mt.'s version of the instructions to the Twelve says: not to Samaria, but to the lost sheep of Israel only; this omitted by Lk. with the one word, "go," retained.—ὡς ἄρνas, etc., as lambs among wolves; sheep (πρόβατα) in Mt. x. 16; pathetic hint as to the helplessness of the agents and the risks they run; not imaginary, as the recent experience at the Samaritan village shows.—Ver. 4. βαλάντιον, a purse, in Lk. only, in N. T.; often in classics, spelt there, as in MSS. of N. T., variously with one or two ls.—μηδένα ἀσπάσησθε: salute no one, to be taken in the spirit rather than in the letter; hyperbolic for: be exclusively intent on your business: "negotio quod imposui vobis incumbite, praeterhabitis vel brevissimis obstaculis et moramentis," Pricaeus. Weiss (Mt.-Evangel.) thinks the prohibition is directed against carrying on their mission on the way. It was to be exclusively a house-mission (vide Mt. x. 12, where ἀσπάσασθε occurs).—Ver. 5. πρῶτον λέγετε: the first word to be spoken, peace, speech on the things of the kingdom to be prepared for by courteous, kindly salutations. A sympathetic heart is the best guide in pastoral visitation. The first word should not be: how is it with your soul?—Ver. 6. ἐπαναπαύσεται ( $\aleph$ B), a form of the 2nd fut. ind. passive, probably belonging to the spoken Greek of the period. Again in Rev. xiv. 13.—ἀνακάμψει: in any case the good wish will not be lost. If there be no "son of peace" in the house to receive it, it will come back with a blessing to the man who uttered it.—Ver. 7. ἐν αὐτῇ τῇ οἰκίᾳ: verbally distinct from ἐν τῇ αὐτῇ, etc., but really meaning the same thing = "in that same house," R. V.—τὰ παρ' αὐτῶν, eating and drinking the meat and drink which belong to them, as if they were your own: libere et velut vestro jure, Grotius.—ἄξιός γάρ assigns the reason: your food is your hire; it belongs to you of right as wages for work done.—Ver. 8. ἐσθίετε τὰ παρατιθέμενα: not a repetition. It means, be contented with your fare: contenti este quamvis frugali apparatu, Bengel. Holtz. (H. C.) thinks Lk. has in view heathen houses, and that the meaning is: put aside Jewish scruples.—Ver. 9. The functions of the missionaries briefly indicated = heal the sick, and announce that the kingdom is at their doors (Ἕγγικεν).—Vv. 10, 11. Direction how to act in case of churlish treatment.—ἐξελθόντες εἰς τὰς πλατείας a. Lk. expresses the action so as to make it vivid for Gentile readers to

κατε, ὅτι ἤγγικεν ἐφ' ὑμᾶς<sup>1</sup> ἡ βασιλεία τοῦ Θεοῦ. 12. λέγω δὲ<sup>2</sup> ὑμῖν, ὅτι Σοδόμοις ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ ἐκείνῃ ἀνεκτότερον ἔσται, ἢ τῇ πόλει ἐκείνῃ. 13. Οὐαὶ σοι, Χωραζὶν, οὐαὶ σοι, Βηθσαιδᾶ· ὅτι εἰ ἐν Τύρῳ καὶ Σιδῶνι ἐγένοντο<sup>3</sup> αἱ δυνάμεις αἱ γινόμεναι ἐν ὑμῖν, πάλαι ἂν ἐν σάκκῳ καὶ σποδῷ καθήμεναι<sup>4</sup> μετενόησαν. 14. πλὴν Τύρῳ καὶ Σιδῶνι ἀνεκτότερον ἔσται ἐν τῇ κρίσει, ἢ ὑμῖν. 15. καὶ σύ, Καπερναοὺμ, ἡ ἕως τοῦ οὐρανοῦ ὑψωθείσα, ἕως ᾧδου καταβιβασθήσῃ.<sup>5</sup> 16. Ὁ ἀκούων ὑμῶν ἐμοῦ ἀκούει· καὶ ὁ ἀθετῶν ὑμᾶς ἐμὲ ἀθετεῖ· ὁ δὲ ἐμὲ ἀθετῶν ἀθετεῖ τὸν ἀποστείλαντά με." 17. Ὑπέστρεψαν δὲ οἱ ἐβδομήκοντα μετὰ χαρᾶς, λέγοντες, "Κύριε, καὶ τὰ δαιμόνια ὑποτάσσεται ἡμῖν ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί σου." 18. Εἶπε δὲ αὐτοῖς, "Ἐθεώ-

<sup>1</sup> ΞBDLE 1, 13, 33 al. omit ἐφ ὑμας.

<sup>2</sup> δε in ΞDE (Tisch.) is omitted in BCL al. pl. verss. (W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> ἐγενήθησαν in ΞBDLE 13, 33, 69.

<sup>4</sup> καθήμενοι in ΞABCLE al. -αι in D with many others.

<sup>5</sup> For η . . . ὑψωθείσα ΞBDLE vet. Lat. 5 syg. cur. have μη . . . ὑψώθηση; for καταβιβασθηση (ΞCLE al. pl. Tisch.) BD have καταβηση (W.H.).

whom the symbolic significance of the act was not familiar = go out of the inhospitable houses into the streets, and then solemnly wipe off the dust that has been taken up by your feet since you entered the town; wiping off (ἀπομασσομέθεα) is more expressive than shaking off (ἐκτινάξετε, Mt. x. 14, Lk. ix. 5), it means more thorough work, removing every speck of dust.—πλὴν, for the rest. The solemn symbolic act is to wind up with the equally solemn declaration that the Kingdom of God has come to them with its blessings, and that it is their own fault if it has come in vain.

Vv. 13-16. Woe to thee, Chorazin (Mt. xi. 21-24).—While the terms in which the woes on the cities of Galilee are reported are nearly identical in Mt. and Lk., the connections in which they are given are different. In Mt. the connection is very general. The woes simply find a place in a collection of moral criticisms by Jesus on His time: on John, on the Pharisees, and on the Galilean towns. Here they form part of Christ's address to the Seventy, when sending them forth on their mission. Whether they properly come in here has been disputed. Wendt (L. J., p. 89) thinks they do, inasmuch as they indicate that the punishment for rejecting the disciples will be the same as that of the cities which were unreceptive to the ministry of the Master. J. Weiss (in Meyer), on the other hand, thinks the woes have been inserted here from a purely external point of view, noting in proof the close connection between ver. 12 and ver. 16. It is impossible to be quite sure when the words were spoken, but also impossible to doubt that they were spoken by Jesus, probably towards or after the close of His Galilean ministry.—καθήμενοι, after σποδῷ, is an addition of Lk.'s, explanatory or pictorial.—Ver. 16 = Mt. x. 40, 41, only Mt. emphasizes and expands the positive side, while Lk. with the positive presents, and with special emphasis, the negative (ὁ ἀθετῶν ὑμᾶς, etc.).

Vv. 17-20. Return of the Seventy. No such report of the doings of the Twelve, and of their Master's congratulations, is given in any of the Gospels (cf. Mk. vi. 30, 31). It seems as if Lk. attached more importance to the later mission, as Baur accused him of doing under the influence of theological tendency (Pauline universalism). But probably this report was one of the fruits of his careful research for memorabilia of Jesus: "a highly valuable tradition arising on Jewish-Christian soil, and just on account of its strangeness trustworthy" (J. Weiss in Meyer). Similarly Feine, and Resch, Agrapha, p. 414, note.—Ver. 17. καὶ τὰ δαιμόνια, even the demons, subject to our power; more than they had expected or been promised, hence their exultation (μετὰ χαρᾶς).—Ver. 18. ἐθεώρουν: their report was no news to ρουν τὸν Σατανᾶν ὡς ἀστραπὴν ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ πεσόντα. 19. ἰδοῦ, δίδωμι<sup>1</sup> ὑμῖν τὴν ἐξουσίαν τοῦ πατεῖν ἐπάνω ὄφρων καὶ σκορπίων, καὶ ἐπὶ πᾶσαν τὴν δύναμιν τοῦ ἔχθρου· καὶ οὐδὲν ὑμᾶς οὐ μὴ ἄδικήσῃ<sup>2</sup>. 20. πλὴν ἐν τούτῳ μὴ χαίρετε, ὅτι τὰ πνεύματα ὑμῶν ὑποτάσσεται· χαίρετε δὲ μᾶλλον<sup>3</sup> ὅτι τὰ ὀνόματα ὑμῶν ἐγράφη<sup>4</sup> ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς.” 21. Ἐν αὐτῇ τῇ ὥρᾳ ἠγαλλιάσατο τῷ πνεύματι ὁ Ἰησοῦς,<sup>5</sup> καὶ εἶπεν, “Ἐξομολογοῦμαί σοι, πάτερ, Κύριε τοῦ οὐρανοῦ καὶ τῆς γῆς, ὅτι ἀπέκρυψας ταῦτα ἀπὸ σοφῶν καὶ συνετῶν, καὶ ἀπεκάλυψας αὐτὰ νηπίοις· ναί, ὁ πατήρ, ὅτι οὕτως ἐγένετο εὐδοκία<sup>6</sup> ἔμπροσθέν σου.” 22. Καὶ στραφεὶς πρὸς τοὺς μαθητὰς εἶπε,<sup>7</sup> “Πάντα παρεδόθη μοι<sup>8</sup> ὑπὸ τοῦ πατρὸς μου· καὶ οὐδεὶς γινώσκει τίς ἐστὶν ὁ υἱός, εἰ μὴ ὁ πατήρ, καὶ τίς ἐστὶν ὁ πατήρ,

b in the sense of to hurt here and several times in Rev.

<sup>1</sup> δεδωκα in ΞBCLX 1, vet. Lat. vulg. (Tisch., W.H.). D has διδωμι.

<sup>2</sup> So in BCXΔ al. (W.H. margin). ἀδικησει in ΞDL 1, 13, 33 al. mul. (Tisch., W.H., text).

<sup>3</sup> Most uncials and verss. omit μᾶλλον.

<sup>4</sup> ἐνεγγραπται in ΞBLX 1, 33; most uncials as in T.R.

<sup>5</sup> ΞBDE omit ο ι, and ΞBCDLX 1, 33 al. add τῷ ἁγίῳ τοῦ πνεύματος. Tisch. and W.H. adopt both changes.

<sup>6</sup> εὐδ. εγεν. in BCLX 33 some vet. Lat. codd.

<sup>7</sup> καὶ στραφεὶς . . . εἶπε omitted in ΞBDL 1, 13, 22, 33 verss. (Tisch. retains with ACΔ al. pl.).

<sup>8</sup> μοι παρεδοθη in most uncials.

Jesus. While they were working He saw Satan falling. There has been much discussion as to what is meant by this fall, and why it is referred to. It has been identified with the fall of the angels at the beginning of the world, with the Incarnation, with the temptation of Jesus, in both of which Satan sustained defeat. The Fathers adopted the first of these alternatives, and found the motive of the reference in a desire to warn the disciples. The devil fell through pride; take care you fall not from the same cause (ver. 20).—ὡς ἀστραπὴν, like lightning; the precise point of the comparison has been variously conceived: momentary brightness, quick, sudden movement, inevitableness of the descent—down it must come to the earth, etc.—πεσόντα, aorist, after the imperfect (ἰθεώρου), fallen, a fact accomplished. Pricæus refers to Acts xix. 20 as a historical exemplification of the fall—Satan's kingdom destroyed by the rapid spread of Christianity.—Ver. 19 reminds one of Mk. xvi. 18.—τοῦ ἔχθρου, the enemy, Satan.—οὐδὲν, may be either nominative or accusative = either, “nothing shall in any wise hurt you,” R. V., or “in no respect shall he (the enemy) hurt you”.—Ver. 20. πλὴν has adversative force here = yet, nevertheless. The joy of the Seventy was in danger of becoming overjoy, running into self-importance; hence the warning word, which is best understood in the light of St. Paul's doctrine of the Holy Spirit, which laid much more stress on the ethical than on the charismatical results of His influence = rejoice not so much in possessing remarkable spiritual gifts as in being spiritual men. This text may be put beside Mt. vii. 21-23 as bearing on the separability of gifts and graces (χαρίσματα and χάρις).

Vv. 21-24. The exultation of Jesus (Mt. xi. 25-27).—The setting in Mt. gives to this great devotional utterance of Jesus a tone of resignation in connection with the apparent failure of His ministry. Here, connected with the fall of Satan, it has a tone of triumph (ἠγαλλιάσατο).—ἐν τῷ πνεύματι τῷ ἁγίῳ; it was an inspired utterance, “a kind of glossolaly,” J. Weiss (Meyer).—Ver. 21 is almost verbatim, as in Mt. xi. 25, only that Lk. has ἀπέκρυψας for Mt.'s ἔκρυψας.—Ver.

αἰ μὴ ὁ υἱός, καὶ ᾧ ἐὰν βούληται ὁ υἱὸς ἀποκαλοῦσθαι." 23. Καὶ στραφεὶς πρὸς τοὺς μαθητὰς κατ' ἰδίαν εἶπε, "Μακάριοι οἱ ὀφθαλμοὶ οἱ βλέποντες ἃ βλέπετε. 24. λέγω γὰρ ὑμῖν, ὅτι πολλοὶ προφῆται καὶ βασιλεῖς ἠθέλησαν ἰδεῖν ἃ ὑμεῖς βλέπετε, καὶ οὐκ εἶδον· καὶ ἀκοῦσαι ἃ ἀκούετε, καὶ οὐκ ἤκουσαν."

25. Καὶ ἰδού, νομικός τις ἀνέστη, ἐκπειράζων αὐτόν, καὶ<sup>1</sup> λέγων, "Διδάσκαλε, τί ποιήσας ζωὴν αἰώνιον κληρονομήσω;" 26. Ὁ δὲ εἶπε πρὸς αὐτόν, "Ἐν τῷ νόμῳ τί γέγραπται; πῶς ἀναγινώσκεις;" 27. Ὁ δὲ ἀποκριθεὶς εἶπεν, "Ἀγαπήσεις Κύριον τὸν Θεόν σου, ἐξ ὅλης τῆς καρδίας σου, καὶ ἐξ ὅλης τῆς ψυχῆς σου, καὶ ἐξ ὅλης τῆς ἰσχύος σου, καὶ ἐξ ὅλης τῆς διανοίας<sup>2</sup> σου· καὶ τὸν πλησίον σου ὡς σεαυτόν." 28. Εἶπε δὲ αὐτῷ, "Ὁρθῶς ἀπεκρίθης· τοῦτο ποιεῖ,

<sup>1</sup> καί, found in ACD al., is omitted in  $\aleph$ BL $\Xi$  e syr. cur. cop.

<sup>2</sup> Instead of ἐξ with gen. in this and the two preceding phrases  $\aleph$ BD $\Xi$  minusc. have ἐν with dative (D has ἐν all through).  $\aleph$ BL $\Xi$  have ἐν with dative for ἐξ α. τ. διανοίας. D omits this clause.

22. This part of the devotional utterance, setting forth Christ's faith in the purpose of His Father and the intimate fellowship subsisting between Father and Son, appears in some texts of Lk. as a declaration made to the disciples (στραφεὶς πρὸς τ. μ. α., T. R.). The gesture implies that a solemn statement is to be made.—τίς ἐστιν ὁ υἱός, ὁ πατήρ: to know who the Son or the Father is = knowing the Son and the Father. The idea in Lk. is the same as in Mt., though the expression is different.—Ver. 23. στραφεὶς: a second impressive gesture, if that in ver. 22 be retained, implying that Jesus now more directly addresses the disciples. But the first στραφεὶς is altogether doubtful.—εἶπε: the word, spoken κατ' ἰδίαν to the disciples, is substantially = Mt. xiii. 16, there referring to the happiness conferred on the disciples in being privileged to hear their Master's parabolic teaching.—βασιλεῖς: in place of Mt.'s δίκαιοι, which expresses an idea more intelligible to Jews than to Gentiles.

Vv. 25-37. The lawyer's question, and the parable of the good Samaritan. Many critics (even Weiss, Mk.-Evang., p. 400) think that Lk. or his source has got the theme of this section from Mt. xxii. 35 ff., Mk. xii. 28 ff., and simply enriched it with the parable of the good Samaritan, peculiar to him. Leaving this critical question on one side, it may be remarked that this story seems to be introduced on the principle of contrast, the νομικός representing the σοφοὶ καὶ συνετοὶ, to whom the things of the kingdom are hidden as opposed to the νήπιοι, to whom they are revealed, i.e., the disciples whom Jesus had just congratulated on their felicity. Similarly in the case of the anecdote of the woman in Simon's house, vii. 36, vide notes there. J. Weiss remarks that this story and the following one about Martha and Mary form a pair, setting forth in the sense of the Epistle of James (ii. 8, 13, 14) the two main requirements of Christianity, love to one's neighbour and faith (vide in Meyer, ad loc.).—Ver. 25. ἀνέστη, stood up; from this expression and the present tense of ἀναγινώσκεις, how readest thou now? it has been conjectured that the scene may have been a synagogue.—τί ποιήσας: the νομικός, like the ἔρχων of xviii. 18, is professedly in quest of eternal life.—Ver. 26. τί γέγραπ., πῶς ἀναγιν., how stands it written? how readest thou? double question with a certain empressment.—Ver. 27. Lk. here puts into the mouth of the lawyer an answer combining as co-ordinate the religious and the ethical, which in the later incident reported in Mt. xxii. 34-40, Mk. xii. 28-34, is ascribed to Jesus. The unity of these interests is, as Holtz. (H. C.) remarks, the achievement and characteristic of Christianity, and one may legitimately doubt whether a man belonging to the clerical class in our Lord's time had attained such insight. Divorce of religion from morality was a cardinal vice of the righteousness of the time, and we καὶ ζήση." 29. Ὁ δὲ θέλων δικαιοῦν<sup>1</sup> ἑαυτὸν εἶπε πρὸς τὸν Ἰησοῦν,

 "Καὶ τίς ἐστί μου πλησίον;" 30. "Ὑπολαβὼν δὲ<sup>2</sup> ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν, "Ἄνθρωπός τις κατέβαινεν ἀπὸ Ἱερουσαλὴμ εἰς Ἱεριχώ, καὶ λησταῖς <sup>d</sup> περιέπεσεν, οἱ καὶ ἐκδύσαντες αὐτόν, καὶ πληγὰς ἐπιθέντες ἀπήλθον, ἀφέντες ἡμιθανῆ τυγχάνοντα.<sup>3</sup> 31. κατὰ ὁσσυκυρίαν δὲ ἱερεύς τις κατέβαινεν ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ ἐκείνῃ, καὶ ἰδὼν αὐτὸν ἄντιπαρῆλθεν. 32. f ὁμοίως δὲ καὶ Λευίτης, γενόμενος<sup>4</sup> κατὰ τὸν τόπον, ἐλθὼν καὶ ἰδὼν ἀντιπαρῆλθε. 33. Σαμαρείτης δὲ τις ὁδεύων ἦλθε κατ' αὐτόν, καὶ

c here only
 in N.T. in sense of replying.
 d Acts xxvii.
 41. Jas. i.
 2. e here only
 in N.T. f here (bis)
 only in
 N. T.
 Wisd.
 xvii. 10.

<sup>1</sup> δικαιοῦσαι in ΞBCDLXΞ.

<sup>2</sup> Omit δε ΞBC.

<sup>3</sup> Omit τυγχ. ΞBDLΞ ι, 33 al.

<sup>4</sup> Omit γευ BLXΞ ι, 38, 118.

see it exemplified in the following parable: priest and Levite religious but inhuman. In Lk.'s time the conception of religion and morality as one and inseparable had become a Christian commonplace, and he might have been unable to realise that there was a time when men thought otherwise, and so without any sense of incongruity made the lawyer answer as he does. But, on the other hand, it has to be borne in mind that even in our Lord's time there were some in the legal schools who emphasised the ethical, and Mk. makes the scribe (xii. 32, 33) one of this type.—ἀγαπήσεις, etc.: Deut. vi. 5 is here given, as in Mk. xii. 31, with a fourfold analysis of the inner man: heart, soul, strength, mind.—Ver. 29. δικαιοῦσαι ἐ., to keep up his character as a righteous man, concerned in all things to do his duty. Hence his desire for a definition of "neighbour," which was an elastic term. Whether Lk. thinks of him as guilty of evasion and chicanery is doubtful. It was not his way to put the worst construction on the conduct even of scribes and Pharisees.—πλησίον, without article, is properly an adverb = who is near me? But the meaning is the same as if ὁ had been there.

Vv. 30-37. The story of the good Samaritan, commonly called a parable, but really not such in the strict sense of natural things used as vehicle of spiritual truth; an example rather than a symbol; the first of several "parables" of this sort in Lk.—ἄνθρωπός τις: probably a Jew, but intentionally not so called, simply a human being, so at once striking the keynote of universal ethics.—κατέβαινεν, was descending; it was a descent indeed.—λ. περιέπεσαν, "fell among" robbers, A. and R. VV.; better perhaps "fell in with" encountered, so Field (Ot. Nor.). The verb is often joined with a noun singular (περιέπεσε χειμῶνι). Raphel cites from Polybius an instance in which robbers "fall in with" the party robbed: τούτους (legatos) λησταί τινες περιπεσόντες ἐν τῷ πελάγει διέφθειραν (Reliquiae, lib. xxiv. 11).—ἡμιθανῆ, half dead, semivivo relicto, Vulgate, here only in N. T.; he will soon be whole dead unless some one come to his help: cannot help himself or move from the spot.—Ver. 31. κατὰ σσυκυρίαν (σσυκυρία, from σσυκρέω), rare, late Greek = κατὰ συντυχίαν (Hesychius, σσυκυρία, σσυντυχία), by chance; the probabilities against succour being at hand just when sorely wanted; still more improbable that three possibilities of succour should meet just there and then. But the supposition, duly apologised for, is allowable, as the story must go on.—ἱερεύς: Schanz infers from κατὰ σσυγ. that Jericho was not a sacerdotal city, as, since Lightfoot, has been usually taken for granted. But the phrase has its full meaning independently of this inference, vide above.—ἀντιπαρῆλθεν, variously rendered either = passed by simply, or = passed the opposite way (going up), Grotius; or passed with the wounded man in full view, staring him in the face, a sight fit to awaken compassion in any one (Hahn); or passed by on the other side of the road.—Ver. 32. ὁμοίως Λευίτης ἀντιπ., likewise a Levite . . . passed by, the repetition of ἀντιπαρῆλθεν has a rhetorical monotony suggestive of the idea: such the way of the world—to pass by, "in nine cases out of ten that is what you may expect" (The Parabolic Teaching of Christ, p. 348).—Ver. 33. Σαμαρείτης, a Samaritan: will he a fortiori pass by? No, he does not, that the surprise and the point of the story. The unexpected happens.—ὁδεύων, here only in N. T., making a journey, pre-

g here only ἰδὼν αὐτὸν<sup>1</sup> ἐσπλαγχνίσθη· 34. καὶ προσελθὼν<sup>2</sup> κατέδησε τὰ
 in N. T. h here only<sup>3</sup> τραύματα αὐτοῦ, ἐπιχέων ἔλαιον καὶ οἶνον· ἐπιβιάσας δὲ αὐτὸν
 in N. T.
 i Acts xxiii. ἐπὶ τὸ ἴδιον<sup>4</sup> κτήνος, ἤγαγεν αὐτὸν εἰς<sup>5</sup> πανδοχεῖον, καὶ ἐπεμελήθη 24. 1 Cor. αὐτοῦ. 35. καὶ ἐπὶ τὴν αὔριον ἐξελθὼν,<sup>6</sup> ἐκβαλὼν δύο δηνάρια
 xv. 39. ἔδωκε τῷ πανδοχεῖ, καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ,<sup>7</sup> Ἐπιμελήθητι αὐτοῦ· καὶ ὅ τι
 Rev. xviii. 13. ἂν προσδαπανήσης, ἐγὼ ἐν τῷ ἐπανάρχεσθαί με ἀποδώσω σοι.
 j here only 36. Τίς οὖν<sup>8</sup> τούτων τῶν τριῶν δοκεῖ σοι πλησίον<sup>9</sup> γεγονέναι τοῦ in N. T. ἔμπεσοντος εἰς τοὺς ληστάς; 37. Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν, “Ὁ ποιήσας τὸ ἔλεος μετ’ αὐτοῦ.” Εἶπεν οὖν<sup>10</sup> αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Πορεύου, καὶ σὺ ποίει ὁμοίως.”
 k Ch. xix. 6. 38. ἘΓΕΝΕΤΟ δὲ ἐν<sup>11</sup> τῷ πορεύεσθαι αὐτοῦς, καὶ αὐτὸς εἰσηλθὼν Acts xvii. 7. Jas. ii. εἰς κώμην τινά· γυνὴ δὲ τις ὀνόματι Μάρθα<sup>12</sup> ὑπεδέξατο αὐτὸν εἰς 25.

<sup>1</sup> Omit αὐτον ἝBLΞ I, 33 vet. Lat. codd.

<sup>2</sup> Omit ἐξ. ἝBDLXΞ I, 33 al. B places ἔδωκεν before δύο δην. (W. H. margin).

<sup>3</sup> BDLΞ I, 33, 80 al. vet. Lat. codd. omit αὐτω.

<sup>4</sup> Omit οὖν ἝBLΞ I verss.

<sup>5</sup> πλησιον δοκεῖ σοι in ἝABCLΞ al. pl. D reads τινα οὖν δοκεῖς πλ. γεγονεῖαι.

<sup>6</sup> δε for οὖν in ἝBCDLXΔΞ al. verss.

<sup>7</sup> For εγεν. δε εν. ἝBLΞ 33 syr. cur. sin. have simply εν δε, and omit καὶ after αὐτους.

sumably longer than from Jerusalem to Jericho, fully equipped for a long journey (Hahn), and so in possession of means for help, if he have the will.—ἐσπλαγχνίσθη, was touched with pity. That sacred feeling will keep him from passing by, though tempted by his own affairs to go on and avoid trouble and loss of time, as ships may pass by other ships in distress, so deserving ever after to have branded on them ΑΝΤΙΠΑΡΗΛΘΕΝ.—Ver. 34. κατέδησε, ἐπιχέων: both technical terms in medicine.—ἔλαιον καὶ οἶνον: not separately, but mixed; in use among Greeks and Romans as well as Jews (Wetstein).—κτῆνος = κτῆμα from κτάομαι, generally a property, and specially a domestic animal: one's beast.—πανδοχεῖον (in classics πανδοκ.), a place for receiving all comers, an inn having a host, not merely a khan or caravanserai like κατάλυμα in ii. 7.—Ver. 35. ἐκβαλὼν, casting out (of his girdle or purse).—δύο δην., two “pence,” small sum, but enough for the present; will pay whatever more is needed; known in the inn, and known as a trusty man to the innkeeper (τῷ πανδοκεῖ).—ὅτι ἂν, etc.: the speech of a man who in turn trusts the host, and has no fear of being overcharged in the bill for the wounded man.—ἐγὼ: with a slight emphasis which means: you know me.—ἐπανάρχεσθαι: he expects to return to the place on his business, a regular customer at that inn. This verb, as well as προσδαπανάω, is used here only in N. T.—Ver. 36. Application of the story.—γεγονέναι: which of the three seems to you to have become neighbour by neighbourly action? neighbour is who neighbour does.—Ver. 37. ὁ ποιήσας, etc. If the lawyer was captious to begin with he is captious no longer. He might have been, for his question had not been directly (though very radically) answered. But the moral pathos of the “parable” has appealed to his better nature, and he quibbles no longer. But the prejudice of his class tacitly finds expression by avoidance of the word “Samaritan,” and the use instead of the phrase ὁ ποιήσας τὸ ἔλεος μετ’ αὐτοῦ. Yet perhaps we do him injustice here, for the phrase really expresses the essence of neighbourhood, and so indicates not only who is neighbour but why. For the same phrase vide i. 58, 72. This story teaches the whole doctrine of neighbourhood: first and directly, what it is to be a neighbour, viz., to give succour when and where needed; next, indirectly but by obvious consequence, who is a neighbour, viz., any one who needs help and whom I

τὸν οἶκον αὐτῆς.<sup>1</sup> 39. καὶ τῆδε ἦν ἀδελφὴ καλουμένη Μαρία, ἣ καὶ παρακαθίσασα παρὰ τοὺς πόδας τοῦ Ἰησοῦ<sup>2</sup> ἤκουε τὸν λόγον αὐτοῦ. 40. ἡ δὲ Μάρθα περιεσπᾶτο περὶ πολλὴν διακονίαν· ἐπιστάσα δὲ εἶπε, “Κύριε, οὐ μέλει σοι ὅτι ἡ ἀδελφὴ μου μόνην με κατέλιπε<sup>3</sup> διακονεῖν; εἰπέ<sup>4</sup> οὖν αὐτῇ ἵνα μοι συναντιλάβηται.” 41. Ἀποκριθεὶς δὲ εἶπεν αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς,<sup>5</sup> “Μάρθα, Μάρθα, μεριμνᾷς καὶ τυρβάζῃ<sup>6</sup> περὶ πολλά· 42. ἐνὸς δὲ ἐστὶ χρεία<sup>7</sup>. Μαρία δὲ<sup>8</sup> τὴν ἀγαθὴν μερίδα ἐξελέξατο, ἣτις οὐκ ἀφαιρέθησεται ἀπ’<sup>9</sup> αὐτῆς.”

<sup>1</sup>  $\aleph$ CL $\Xi$  33 have εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν and  $\aleph$ L $\Xi$  om. αὐτῆς (Tisch.). B has nothing after ὑπεδέξατο αὐτον (W.H. brackets).

<sup>2</sup> From  $\eta$  καὶ to Ἰησοῦ sundry variants occur: omit  $\eta$   $\aleph$ L $\Xi$ ;  $\aleph$ ABCL $\Xi$  have παρακαθεσθῆαισα; for παρα  $\aleph$ BCL $\Xi$  have προς; and for Ἰησοῦ these with D have κυρίου.

<sup>3</sup> κατέλειπεν in ABCL $\Xi$  al. pl.

<sup>4</sup> εἶπον in DL $\Xi$  1, 33 (Tisch., W.H.); εἶπε in  $\aleph$ ABC al. pl.

<sup>5</sup> For ο ἰ.  $\aleph$ BL have ο κυριος.

<sup>6</sup> θυροβαζῃ in  $\aleph$ BCDL 1, 33.

<sup>7</sup> For ἐνος δε ἐστὶ χρεία (Tisch.)  $\aleph$ BL 1, 33 have ολιγων δε ἐστὶ χρεία ἡ ἐνος, which commends itself on reflection. Vide below. D omits the clause. Syr. sin. omits all between Μάρθα and Μαρία.

<sup>8</sup> γαρ in  $\aleph$ BL.

<sup>9</sup> Omit απ  $\aleph$ BDL.

have opportunity and power to help, no matter what his rank, race, or religion may be: neighbourhood coextensive with humanity.

Vv. 38-42. Martha and Mary.—Ver. 38. ἐν τῷ πορεύεσθαι, in continuation of the wandering whose beginning is noted at ix. 52; when, where, not indicated.—εἰς κώμην τινά: either not known, or the name deemed of no importance. When it is stated that He (αὐτὸς) (Jesus) came to this village it is not implied that He was alone, though no mention is made of disciples in the narrative.—Μάρθα = mistress, feminine of  $\mu\alpha\rho\tau\alpha$ .—Ver. 39. Μαρία, socially subordinate (inferrible from the manner of reference), though the spiritual heroine of the tale.—ἡ καὶ: the force of the καὶ is not clear, and has been variously explained. Grotius regards it as simply an otiose addition to the relative. Bornemann takes it = adeo = to such an extent did Mary disregard the customary duty of women, that of serving guests, “quem morem adeo non observat M. ut docenti Jesu auscultet”. Perhaps it has something of the force of δὴ = who, observe! serving to counterbalance the social subordination of Mary; the less important person in the house, but the more important in the Kingdom of God.—παρακαθεσθῆαισα, first aorist passive participle, from παρακαθίζομαι, late Greek form = sitting at the feet of Jesus. Posture noted as significant of a receptive mind and devoted spirit.—τοῦ Κυρίου, the Lord, once more for Jesus in narrative (Ἰησοῦ in T. R.).—ἤκουε τὸν λόγον α., continued hearing His word, a conventional expression as in viii. 21.—Ver. 40. ἡ δὲ Μάρ., but Martha, δὲ as if μὲν had gone before where καὶ is = Mary on the one hand sat, etc., Martha on the other, etc.—περιεσπᾶτο, was distracted, over-occupied, as if the visit had been unexpected, and the guests numerous. In use from Xenophon down. In Polybius with τῇ διανοίᾳ added. Holtzmann (H. C.) points out the correspondence between the contrasted picture of the two sisters and the antithesis between the married and unmarried woman in 1 Cor. vii. 34, 35. The married woman caring for the world like Martha (μεριμνᾷς, ver. 41); the unmarried virgin: εὐπάρεδρον τ. κυρίῳ ἀπερισπάστως.—ἐπιστάσα, coming up to and placing herself beside Jesus and Mary: in no placid mood, looking on her sister as simply an idle woman. A bustling worthy housewife will speak her mind in such a case, even though a Jesus be present and come in for a share of the blame.—συναντιλάβηται, bid her take a hand along with me in the work (cf. Rom. viii. 26).—Ver. 41. θορυβᾶζει (from θόρυβος, an uproar; τυρβάζει T. R., from τύρβη, similar in meaning, neither form again in N. T.), thou art bustled, gently spoken and with a touch of pity.—περὶ πολλά: a great day in that house. Every effort made to entertain Jesus worthily of Him and to the credit of the house.—Ver. 42. ὀλίγων δὲ ἔστιν χρεῖα ἡ ἐνός. With this reading the sense is: there is need of few things (material); then, with a pause—or rather of one thing (spiritual). Thus Jesus passes, as was His wont, easily and swiftly from the natural to the spiritual. The notion that it was beneath the dignity of Jesus to refer to dishes, even as a stepping stone to higher things, is the child of conventional reverence.—τὴν ἀγαθὴν μερίδα, the good portion, conceived of as a share in a banquet (Gen. xliii. 34). Mary, having chosen this good portion, may not be blamed (γὰρ), and cannot be deprived of it, shall not with my sanction, in deference to the demands of a lower vocation.

XI. 1. ΚΑΙ ἐγένετο ἐν τῷ εἶναι αὐτὸν ἐν τόπῳ τινὶ προσευχόμενον, ὡς ἐπαύσατο, εἶπέ τις τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ πρὸς αὐτόν, "Κύριε, διδάξον ἡμᾶς προσεύχεσθαι, καθὼς καὶ Ἰωάννης ἐδίδαξε τοὺς μαθητὰς αὐτοῦ." 2. Εἶπε δὲ αὐτοῖς, "Ὅταν προσεύχησθε, λέγετε, Πάτερ ἡμῶν ὁ ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς,<sup>1</sup> ἁγιασθήτω τὸ ὄνομά σου· ἐλθέτω ἡ βασιλεία σου· γενηθήτω τὸ θέλημά σου, ὡς ἐν οὐρανῷ, καὶ ἐπὶ

<sup>1</sup> ἡμων . . . ουρανοῖς omitted in NBL 1, 22 al. Orig. Tert. syr. sin.; comes in doubtless from Mt.

CHAPTER XI. LESSON ON PRAYER. DISCOURSES IN SELF-DEFENCE.—Vv. 1-13 contain a lesson on prayer, consisting of two parts: first, a form of prayer suggesting the chief objects of desire (vv. 1-4); second, an argument enforcing perseverance in prayer (vv. 5-13). Whether the whole was spoken at one time or not cannot be ascertained; all one can say is that the instructions are thoroughly coherent and congruous, and might very well have formed a single lesson.

Vv. 1-4. The Lord's Prayer with a historical introduction (Mt. vi. 7-15).—ἐν τόπῳ τινί: neither the place nor the time of this incident is indicated with even approximate exactness. It is simply stated that it happened when Jesus was at a certain place, and when He was praying (προσευχόμενον). Why the narrative comes in here does not clearly appear. I have suggested elsewhere (The Parabolic Teaching of Christ, Preface to the Third Edition) that the parable of the Good Samaritan, the story of Martha and Mary and the Lesson on Prayer form together a group having for their common heading: "at school with Jesus," exhibiting under three types the scholar's burden, the Teacher's meekness, and the rest-bringing lesson, so giving us Lk.'s equivalent for Mt.'s gracious invitation (chap. xi. 28-30). I am now inclined to think that Schola Christi might be the heading not merely for these three sections but for the whole division from ix. 51 to xviii. 14, the contents being largely didactic.—τις τ. μαθ.: a later disciple, Meyer thinks, who had not heard the Teaching on the Hill, and who got for answer to his request a repetition of the Lord's Prayer, given by Mt. as part of the Sermon on the Mount. This conjecture must go for what it is worth.—καθὼς καὶ Ἰωάννης: the fact here stated is not otherwise known: no trace of a Johannine liturgy; but the statement in itself is very credible: prayer like fasting reduced to system in the Baptist's circle.—Ver. 2. λέγετε, say, but not implying obligation to repeat regularly the ipsissima verba. The divergence of Lk.'s form from that of Mt., as given in critical editions of the N. T., is sufficient evidence that the Apostolic Church did not so understand their Lord's will, and use the prayer bearing His name as a formula. Interpreters are not agreed as to which of the two forms is the more original. For my own part I have little doubt that Lk.'s is secondary and abbreviated from the fuller form of Mt. The very name for God—Father—without any added epithet is sufficient proof of this; for Jesus was wont to address God in fuller terms (vide x. 21), and was not likely to give His disciples a form beginning so abruptly. Lk.'s form as it stands in W.H. is as follows:

τῆς γῆς.<sup>1</sup> 3. τὸν ἄρτον ἡμῶν τὸν ἐπιούσιον δίδου ἡμῖν τὸ καθ' ἡμέραν· 4. καὶ ἄφες ἡμῖν τὰς ἁμαρτίας ἡμῶν, καὶ γὰρ αὐτοὶ ἀφιέμεν<sup>2</sup> παντὶ ὀφείλοντι ἡμῖν· καὶ μὴ εἰσενέγκῃς ἡμᾶς εἰς πειρασμόν, ἀλλὰ ῥύσαι ἡμᾶς ἀπὸ τοῦ πονηροῦ.”<sup>3</sup> 5. Καὶ εἶπε πρὸς αὐτούς, “Τίς ἐξ ὑμῶν ἐξει φίλον, καὶ πορεύσεται πρὸς αὐτὸν μεσονυκτίου, καὶ εἶπη αὐτῷ, φίλε, χρῆσόν μοι τρεῖς ἄρτους, 6. ἐπειδὴ φίλος μου παρεγένετο ἐξ ὁδοῦ πρὸς με, καὶ οὐκ ἔχω ὃ παραθήσω αὐτῷ· 7. κάκεινος ἔσωθεν ἀποκριθεὶς εἶπη, Μὴ μοι κόπους πάρεχε· ἦδη ἡ θύρα κέκλεισται, καὶ τὰ παιδιά μου μετ' ἐμοῦ εἰς τὴν κοίτην εἰσίν· οὐ δύναμαι ἀναστὰς δοῦναί σοι. 8. Λέγω ὑμῖν, εἰ καὶ οὐ δώσει αὐτῷ ἀναστὰς, διὰ τὸ εἶναι αὐτοῦ φίλον,<sup>4</sup> διὰ γε τὴν ἀναίδειαν

<sup>1</sup> This petition, γενηθητω . . . ἐπι της γης, omitted in BL 1, 22 vulg. syr. sin.

<sup>2</sup> ἀφιόμεν in ℵ<sup>c</sup>ABCD. T.R. as in ℵ*<sup>a</sup>L.

<sup>3</sup> ἀλλα . . . πονηρου omitted in ℵBL 1, 22 al. pl. vulg. syr. sin. These abbreviations in Lk.'s version of the Lord's Prayer are accepted by most modern editors and scholars.

<sup>4</sup> φίλον αὐτου in ℵBCLX 33 al.

Father! Hallowed be Thy name.
Come Thy kingdom.
The bread of each day give us daily.
And forgive our sins, for we also forgive every one owing us.
And bring us not into temptation.

The third petition: Thy will be done, etc., and the second half of the sixth: but deliver us from evil, are wanting.—Ver. 3. τὸ καθ' ἡμέραν, daily, for Mt.'s σήμερον, this day, is an alteration corresponding to the καθ' ἡμέραν in the Logion concerning cross-bearing (ix. 23).—δίδου, for δός, is a change necessitated by the other.—Ver. 4. ἁμαρτίας: for Mt.'s ὀφειλήματα, but it is noticeable that the idea of sins is not introduced into the second clause. Lk. avoids making our forgiving and God's parallel: we forgive debts, God sins. Whether the debts are viewed as moral or as material is not indicated, possibly both.—On the whole, vide Mt.

Vv. 5-8. The selfish neighbour. This parable and that of the unjust judge (xviii. 1-8) form a couplet teaching the same lesson with reference to distinct spheres of life or experience: that men ought always to pray, and not grow faint-hearted when the answer to prayer is long delayed. They imply that we have to wait for the fulfilment of spiritual desires, and they teach that it is worth our while to wait: fulfilments will come, God is good to them that wait upon Him.

Ver. 5. εἶπεν: the story is not called a parable, as the similar one in chap. xviii. is, but it is one. God's ways in the spiritual world are illustrated by men's ways in everyday life.—τίς ἐξ ὑμῶν, etc.: the whole parable, vv. 5-8, is really one long sentence in which accordingly the construction comes to grief, beginning interrogatively (as far as φίλον, ver. 5, or παραθήσω αὐτῷ, ver. 6) and continuing conditionally, the apodosis beginning with λέγω ὑμῖν, ver. 8, and taking the form of an independent sentence.—μεσονυκτίου, at midnight, a poetic word in classic Greek, a prose word in late Greek. Phryn. says: μεσονύκτιον ποιητικόν, οὐ πολιτικόν. In hot climates travelling was largely done during night, therefore the hour was seasonable from the traveller's point of view, while unseasonable from the point of view of people at home. This is a feature in the felicity of the parable.—χρῆσον, 1st aorist active imperative, from κίχρημι, here only in N. T., to lend.—Ver. 6. οὐκ ἔχω: this does not necessarily imply poverty: bread for the day was baked every morning. It is rather to be wondered at that a man with a family of children (ver. 7) had any over.—Ver. 7. μὴ μοι, etc.: similar phrase in xviii. 5. Cf. Mt. xxvi. 10, Mk. xiv. 6. Here = don't bother me!—κέκλεισται, has been barred for the night, a thing done and not to be undone for a trifling cause.—

αὐτοῦ, ἐγερθεῖς δώσει αὐτῷ ὅσων χρήζει. 9. Καὶ γὰρ ὑμῖν λέγω, Αἰτεῖτε, καὶ δοθήσεται ὑμῖν· ζητεῖτε, καὶ εὕρησете· κρούετε, καὶ ἀνοιγήσεται ὑμῖν. 10. πᾶς γὰρ ὁ αἰτῶν λυμβάνει· καὶ ὁ ζητῶν εὕρισκει· καὶ τῷ κρούοντι ἀνοιγήσεται.<sup>1</sup> 11. τίνα δὲ ὁμῶν<sup>2</sup> τὸν πατέρα αἰτήσῃ ὁ υἱὸς ἄρτον, μὴ λίθον ἐπιδώσει αὐτῷ; εἰ καὶ ἔξ ἰχθύος, μὴ ἀντὶ ἰχθύος ὄφιν ἐπιδώσει αὐτῷ<sup>3</sup>; 12. ἢ καὶ ἐὰν αἰτήσῃ ὄν, μὴ ἐπιδώσει αὐτῷ σκορπίον; 13. εἰ οὖν ὑμεῖς ποιηροὶ ὑπάρχοντες οἴδατε ἀγαθὰ δόματα<sup>4</sup> διδόναι τοῖς τέκνοις ὑμῶν, πόσῳ μᾶλλον ὁ πατήρ ὁ ἐξ οὐρανοῦ δώσει Πνεῦμα Ἅγιον τοῖς αἰτοῦσιν αὐτόν; ”

14. Καὶ ἦν ἐκβάλλων δαιμόνιον, καὶ αὐτὸ ἦν<sup>5</sup> κωφόν· ἐγένετο δὲ, τοῦ δαιμονίου ἐξεληθόντος, ἐλάλησεν ὁ κωφός· καὶ ἐθαύμασαν οἱ

<sup>1</sup> ἀνοιχθ. in many MSS. (Tisch.); ἀνοιγ. in  $\aleph$ BCL al. pl. (W.H.) may have come from Mt. (so Tisch.). For the second ἀνοιγησεται (ver. 10) BD have ἀνοιγεται (W.H. marg.).

<sup>2</sup> ἐξ ὑμῶν in  $\aleph$ ABCDL.

<sup>3</sup> From ἄρτον τοι καὶ is omitted in B verss. Orig. (W.H. text).

<sup>4</sup> αὐτω before ἐπιδ. in BDL.

<sup>5</sup>  $\aleph$ BL 1, 13, 33 omit εαν, and with CD al. have αἰτησῃ. BL also omit μη before ἐπιδ.

<sup>6</sup> δομ. αγ. in  $\aleph$ ABCDL al. pl.

<sup>7</sup> καὶ αὐτο ἦν omit  $\aleph$ BL al. verss.

εἰς τὴν κοίτην: they have gone to bed and are now sleeping in bed, and he does not want to risk waking them (τίνα μὴ ἀφυπνίση αὐτά, Euthym.).—οὐ δύναμαι: οὐ θέλω would have been nearer the truth.—Ver. 8. λέγω ὑμῖν: introducing a confident assertion.—διὰ γε τ. ἂν., yet at least on account of, etc. He may give or not give for friendship's sake, but he must give for his own sake.—ἀναίδειαν (here only in N.T.), the total disregard of domestic privacy and comfort shown by persistent knocking; very indecent from the point of view of the man in bed (ἀναίδειαν = τὴν ἐπιμονὴν τῆς αἰτήσεως, Euthym.).

Vv. 9-13. The moral of the story (cf. Mt. vii. 7-11).—καὶ γὰρ ὑμῖν, etc., and I (the same speaker as in ver. 8) say to you, with equal confidence. What Jesus says is in brief: you also will get what you want from God, as certainly as the man in my tale got what he wanted; therefore pray on, imitating his ἀναίδια. The selfish neighbour represents God as He seems, and persistent prayer looks like a shameless disregard of His apparent indifference.—Vv. 9, 10 correspond almost exactly with Mt. vii. 7, 8. Vide notes there.—Ver. 11. τίνα δὲ: δὲ introduces a new parabolic saying: which of you, as a father, shall his son ask? etc. In the T.R. Lk. gives three examples of possible requests—Mt.'s two: a loaf, and a fish, and a third, an egg. Cod. B omits the first (W.H. put it on the margin).—ὄν, σκορπίον: in the two first instances there is resemblance between the thing asked and supposed to be given: loaf and stone, fish and serpent; in Lk.'s third instance also, the σκορπίος being a little round lobster-like animal, lurking in stone walls, with a sting in its tail. The gift of things similar but so different would be cruel mockery of which almost no father would be capable. Hens were not known in ancient Israel. Probably the Jews brought them from Babylon, after which eggs would form part of ordinary food (Benziger, Heb. Arch., p. 94).—Ver. 13. ὁ π. ὁ ἐξ οὐρανοῦ, this epithet is attached to πατήρ here though not in the Lord's Prayer.—Πνεῦμα Ἅγιον instead of Mt.'s ἀγαθὰ. The Holy Spirit is mentioned here as the summum donum, and the supreme object of desire for all true disciples. In some forms of the Lord's Prayer (Marcion, Greg. Nys.) a petition for the gift of the Holy Spirit took the place of the first or second petition.

Vv. 14-16. Brief historical statement introducing certain defensive utterances of Jesus.—Vv. 14, 15 answer to Mt. ix. 33, 34, xii. 22-24, and ver. 16 to Mt.

ὄχλοι. 15. τινὲς δὲ ἐξ αὐτῶν εἶπον, “Ἐν Βεελζεβούλ ἄρχοντι<sup>1</sup> τῶν δαιμονίων ἐκβάλλει τὰ δαιμόνια.” 16. Ἄλλοι δὲ πειράζοντες σημεῖον παρ’ αὐτοῦ ἐζήτουν ἐξ οὐρανοῦ<sup>2</sup>. 17. Αὐτὸς δὲ εἰδὼς αὐτῶν τὰ<sup>a</sup> διανοήματα εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Πᾶσα βασιλεία ἐφ’ ἑαυτὴν διαμερισ-
a here only
in N. T.
(Is. lv. 9)
 θείσα ἐρημοῦται· καὶ οἶκος ἐπὶ οἶκον, πίπτει. 18. εἰ δὲ καὶ ὁ Σατανᾶς ἐφ’ ἑαυτὸν διμερισθῆ, πῶς σταθήσεται ἡ βασιλεία αὐτοῦ; ὅτι λέγετε, ἐν Βεελζεβούλ ἐκβάλλει με τὰ δαιμόνια. 19. εἰ δὲ ἐγὼ ἐν Βεελζεβούλ ἐκβάλλω τὰ δαιμόνια, οἱ υἱοὶ ὑμῶν ἐν τίνι ἐκβάλλουσι; διὰ τοῦτο κριταὶ ὑμῶν αὐτοὶ<sup>3</sup> ἔσονται. 20. εἰ δὲ ἐν δακτύλῳ Θεοῦ ἐκβάλλω τὰ δαιμόνια, ἄρα ἔφθασεν ἐφ’ ὑμᾶς ἡ βασιλεία τοῦ Θεοῦ. 21. Ὅταν ὁ ἰσχυρὸς καθωπλισμένος φυλάσῃ τὴν ἑαυτοῦ αὐλήν, ἐν εἰρήνῃ ἔσθι τὰ ὑπάρχοντα αὐτοῦ. 22. ἐπὶ δὲ ὁ<sup>4</sup> ἰσχυρότερος αὐτοῦ ἐπελθὼν νικήσῃ αὐτόν, τὴν πανοπλίαν αὐτοῦ αἶρει, ἐφ’ ἧ<sup>b</sup> ἐπεποίθει, καὶ τὰ<sup>b</sup> σκύλα αὐτοῦ διαδίδωσιν. 23. ὁ μὴ<sup>b</sup> ὦν μετ’ ἐμοῦ κατ’ ἐμοῦ ἔστι· καὶ ὁ μὴ συνάγων μετ’ ἐμοῦ σκορπίζει.
b here only
in N. T.

<sup>1</sup> τω αρχ. in ΞABCL.   <sup>2</sup> ἐξ ουρ. ἐζήτουν παρ αυτου in ΞABCDL I, 33 al.

<sup>3</sup> αυτοι before κρ. υμ. in BD (W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> Omit ο ΞBDL.

xii. 38. The reproduction of these passages here is very summary: the reference to Israel, Mt. ix. 33, and the question “is not this the Son of David?” xii. 23, e.g., being omitted. Then, further, it is noticeable that the references to the Pharisees and scribes, as the authors of the malignant theory as to Christ's cure of demoniacs and the persons who demanded a sign, are eliminated, the vague terms τινὲς (ver. 15) and ἄλλοι (ver. 16) being substituted. The historical situation in which Jesus spoke is wiped out, the writer caring only for what He said.

Vv. 17-23. The Beelzebub theory (Mt. xii. 25-30, Mk. iii. 23-27).—Ver. 17. διαμερισθεῖσα. Lk. has a preference for compounds; μερισθεῖσα in Mt.—καὶ οἶκος ἐπὶ οἶκον πίπτει, and house falls against house, one tumbling house knocking down its neighbour, a graphic picture of what happens when a kingdom is divided against itself. In Mt. kingdom and city are two co-ordinate illustrations of the principle. In Mk. a house takes the place of Mt.'s city. In Lk. the house is simply a feature in the picture of a kingdom ruined by self-division. Some (e.g., Bornemann and Hahn) render Lk.'s phrase: house upon house, one house after another falls. Others, in a harmonistic interest, interpret: a house being divided (διαμερισθεὶς understood) against itself (ἐπὶ οἶκον = ἐφ’ ἑαυτὸν) falls.—Ver. 20. ἐν δακτύλῳ Θεοῦ: instead of Mt.'s ἐν πνεύματι Θεοῦ, which is doubtless the original expression, being more appropriate to the connection of thought. Lk.'s expression emphasises the immediateness of the Divine action through Jesus, in accordance with his habit of giving prominence to the miraculousness of Christ's healing acts. But the question was not as to the fact, but as to the moral quality of the miracle. The phrase recalls Ex. viii. 9.—ἔφθασεν: φθάνω in classics means to anticipate, in later Greek to reach, the idea of priority being dropped out.—Ver. 21. ὅταν: introducing the parable of the strong man subdued by a stronger, symbolising the true state of the case as between Beelzebub and Jesus, probably more original in Lk. than in Mt. (xii. 29).—καθωπλισμένος, fully armed, here only in N.T.—αὐλήν, court, whose entrance is guarded, according to some; house, castle, or palace according to others (οἰκίαν in Mt.).—Ver. 22. πανοπλίαν, panoply, a Pauline word (Eph. vi. 11, 13).—διαδίδωσιν, distributes the spoils among his friends with the generosity and the display of victory, referring probably to the extensive scale of Christ's healing ministry among demoniacs.—Ver. 23 = Mt. xii. 30.

Vv. 24-26. The parable of the unclean spirit cast out and returning: given by Mt. in connection with the demand for a

24. Ὅταν τὸ ἀκάθαρτον πνεῦμα ἐξέλθῃ ἀπὸ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, διέρχεται δι' ἀνύδρων τόπων, ζητοῦν ἀνάπαυσιν· καὶ μὴ εὐρίσκον λέγει,<sup>1</sup> Ὑποστρέψω εἰς τὸν οἶκόν μου ὅθεν ἐξῆλθον· 25. καὶ ἔλθὼν εὐρίσκει<sup>2</sup> σσσαρωμένον καὶ κεκοσμημένον. 26. τότε πορεύεται καὶ παραλαμβάνει ἑπτὰ ἕτερα πνεύματα πονηρότερα ἑαυτοῦ,<sup>3</sup> καὶ εἰσελθόντα κατοικεῖ ἐκεῖ· καὶ γίνεται τὰ ἔσχατα τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἐκείνου χείρονα τῶν πρώτων.”

27. Ἐγένετο δὲ ἔν τῷ λέγειν αὐτὸν ταῦτα, ἐπάρασά τις γυνὴ<sup>c</sup> here only φωνῆν<sup>4</sup> ἐκ τοῦ ὄχλου εἶπεν αὐτῷ, “Μακαρία ἡ κοιλία ἡ ° βαστάσασά σε, καὶ μαστοὶ οὓς ἐθήλασας.” 28. Αὐτὸς δὲ εἶπε, “Μενοῦνγε<sup>5</sup> μακάριοι οἱ ἀκούοντες τὸν λόγον τοῦ Θεοῦ καὶ φυλάσσοντες αὐτόν.”<sup>6</sup>
 29. Τῶν δὲ ὄχλων<sup>d</sup> here only ἐπαθροισμένων ἤρξατο λέγειν, “Ἡ γενεὰ αὕτη<sup>7</sup> in N. T. πονηρὰ ἐστὶ· σημεῖον ἐπιζητεῖ,<sup>8</sup> καὶ σημεῖον οὐ δοθήσεται αὐτῇ, εἰ

<sup>1</sup> BLXΞ 33 prefix τότε, which implies that καὶ μὴ εὐρίσκον is to be joined to ἀναπαυσιν (W.H. marg.).

<sup>2</sup> BCL al. verss. insert σχολάζοντα, which may come in from Mt. (W.H. brackets).

<sup>3</sup> ἑπτα after ἑαυτου in NBLΞ 13, 69 al.; a most appropriate position of emphasis.

<sup>4</sup> φωνην before γυνη in NBL. A credible order, but apt to be altered by scribes into the smoother in T.R.

<sup>5</sup> μενουν in NABLDΞ; μενουνγε in CDX al. There seems no reason why either should be changed into the other. The latter is found in Rom. ix. 20, x. 18.

<sup>6</sup> Omit αυτον N=ABCDLΔΞ.

<sup>7</sup> γενεα follows as well as precedes αυτη in NABDLXΞ (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>8</sup> ζητει in NABLEΞ al. T.R. from Mt.

sign (xii. 43 ff.). Lk.'s version differs from Mt.'s chiefly in minute literary variations. Two omissions are noticeable: (1) the epithet σχολάζοντα in the description of the deserted house (a probable omission, the word bracketed in W. and H.), (2) the closing phrase of Mt.'s version: οὕτως ἐστὶ καὶ τῆ γενεῆ τ. τ. πονηρῆ. On the import of the parable vide on Mt., ad loc.

Vv. 27-28. The woman in the crowd. In Lk. only, though reminding one of Mt. xii. 46-50, Mk. iii. 32-35. It reports an honest matron's blessing on the, to her probably unknown, mother of Jesus, who in this case, as in an earlier instance (viii. 19-21), treats the felicity of natural motherhood as entirely subordinate to that of discipleship.—Ver. 27. κοιλία, μαστοί: “Mulier bene sentit sed muliebriter loquitur” (Bengel).—Ver. 28. μενοῦν might be confirmatory (utique) or corrective (imo vero), or a little of both; the tone of voice would show which of the two the speaker meant to be the more prominent. Correction probably was uppermost in Christ's thoughts. Under the appearance of approval the woman was taught that she was mistaken in thinking that merely to be the mother of an illustrious son constituted felicity (Schanz). Viger (Ed. Hermann), p. 541, quotes this text as illustrating the use of μενοῦν in the sense of imo vero, rendering: “Quin imo, vel imo vero, beati qui audiunt verbum Dei”. Its position at the beginning of the sentence is contrary to Attic use: “reperitur apud solos Scriptoros Macedonicos,” Sturz, De Dial. Mac. et Alex., p. 203.—τὸν λόγον τ. Θ., those who hear and keep the word of God, the truly blessed. Cf. “His word” in x. 39; an established phrase.

Vv. 29-32. The sign of Jonah (Mt. xii. 38-42).—T. δ. ἐπαθροισμένων, the crowds thronging to Him. The heading for the following discourse has been anticipated in ver. 16; ἕτεροι πειράζοντες, instead of Mt.'s scribes and Pharisees, asking a sign. In Lk.'s narrative Jesus answers their question in presence of a gathering crowd supposed to be reiterated to in the expression ἡ γενεὰ αὕτη.

μη τὸ σημεῖον Ἰωνᾶ τοῦ προφήτου.<sup>1</sup> 30. καθὼς γὰρ ἐγένετο Ἰωνᾶς σημεῖον τοῖς Νινευίταις,<sup>2</sup> οὕτως ἔσται καὶ ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου τῆ γενεᾷ ταύτῃ. 31. Βασιλισσα νότου ἐγερθήσεται ἐν τῇ κρίσει μετὰ τῶν ἀνδρῶν τῆς γενεᾶς ταύτης, καὶ κατακρινεῖ αὐτούς· ὅτι ἦλθεν ἐκ τῶν περάτων τῆς γῆς ἀκοῦσαι τὴν σοφίαν Σολομῶντος, καὶ ἰδοῦ, πλεῖον Σολομῶντος ᾤδε. 32. ἄνδρες Νινευεῖ<sup>3</sup> ἀναστήσονται ἐν τῇ κρίσει μετὰ τῆς γενεᾶς ταύτης, καὶ κατακρινουσὶν αὐτήν· ὅτι μετενόησαν εἰς τὸ κήρυγμα Ἰωνᾶ, καὶ ἰδοῦ, πλεῖον Ἰωνᾶ ᾤδε.

33. “Οὐδεὶς δὲ<sup>4</sup> λύχνον ἄψας εἰς κρυπτὸν<sup>5</sup> τίθησιν, οὐδὲ ὑπὸ τὸν μόδιον, ἀλλ’ ἐπὶ τὴν λυχνίαν, ἵνα οἱ εἰσπορευόμενοι τὸ φέγγος<sup>6</sup> βλέπωσιν. 34. ὁ λύχνος τοῦ σώματός ἐστιν ὁ ὀφθαλμὸς<sup>7</sup>. ὅταν οὖν<sup>8</sup> ὁ ὀφθαλμὸς σου ἀπλοῦς ᾦ, καὶ ὄλον τὸ σῶμά σου φωτεινὸν ἐστιν· ἐπὰν δὲ πονηρὸς ᾦ, καὶ τὸ σῶμά σου σκοτεινόν. 35. σκόπει

<sup>1</sup> Omit τ. προφ. (from Mt.) with  $\aleph$ BDL $\Xi$  codd. vet. Lat.

<sup>2</sup> σημ. after Nin. in  $\aleph$ BCL $\Xi$  33.

<sup>3</sup> Νινευίται in  $\aleph$ BL. D omits ver. 32.

<sup>4</sup> Omit δε  $\aleph$ BCD 33 verss.

<sup>5</sup> κρυπτην in all uncials.

<sup>6</sup> For φεγγος in AL $\Gamma$ A al. pl. (Tisch.).  $\aleph$ BCDX al. have the more usual φως (W.H.).

<sup>7</sup>  $\aleph$ BCD have σου after οφθ. here also.

<sup>8</sup>  $\aleph$ B $\Delta$ L $\Delta$  verss. omit ουν.

ἐπαθροίζω occurs here only in N.T.—ἡ γενεὰ αὕτη, etc., this generation is an evil generation; said in reference to the crowd supposed to sympathise with and share the religious characteristics of their leaders. The epithet μοιχαλῖς (Mt. xii. 39) is omitted as liable to be misunderstood by non-Hebrew readers.—Ver. 30. The sign of Jonah is not further explained as in Mt. (xii. 40), and it might seem that the meaning intended was that Jonah, as a prophet and through his preaching, was a sign to the Ninevites, and that in like manner so was Jesus to His generation. But in reference to Jesus Lk. does not say “is” but “shall be,” ἔσται, as if something else than Christ’s ministry, something future in His experience, was the sign. Something is obscurely hinted at which is not further explained, as if to say: wait and you will get your sign.—Vv. 31, 32 = Mt. xii. 41, 22, only that the men of Nineveh and the Queen of Sheba change places. Mt.’s order seems the more natural, the discourse so passing from the sign of Jonah to the Ninevites, who had the benefit of it.

Vv. 33-36 contain parabolic utterances concerning the placing of a light, and the conditions under which the eye sees the light.—Ver. 33 repeats viii. 16 in slightly varied language, and vv. 34-36 reproduce what Mt. gives in his version of the Sermon on the Mount (vi. 22, 23). The connection with what goes before is not apparent.—Ver. 33. κρύπτην, a hidden place: crypt, vault, cellar, or press, to put a lamp in which is to make it useless.—Ver. 34. ὁ λύχνος, etc., the lamp of the body is thine eye. This thought in connection with the foregoing one might lead us to expect some remark on the proper placing of the body’s lamp, but the discourse proceeds to speak of the single (ἀπλοῦς) and the evil (πονηρὸς) eye. The connection lies in the effects of these qualities. The single eye, like a properly placed lamp, gives light; the evil eye, like a lamp under a bushel, leaves one in darkness. On these attributes of the eye vide remarks on Mt. vi. 22, 23.—Ver. 35. A counsel to take care lest the light in us become darkness, answering to that suggested in the parable: see that the lamp be properly placed.—Ver. 36. This verse is very puzzling both critically and exegetically. As it stands in T.R. (and in W.H.) it appears tautological (De Wette), a fault which some have tried to surmount by punctuation, and some by properly placed emphasis—on ὄλον in the protasis and on φωτεινόν in the apodosis, giving this sense: if thy body be wholly lighted, having no part dark, οὐν μὴ τὸ φῶς τὸ ἐν σοὶ σκοτός ἐστίν. 36. εἰ οὖν τὸ σῶμά σου ὄλον φωτεινόν, μὴ ἔχον τὸ μέρος σκοτεινόν, ἔσται φωτεινόν ὄλον, ὡς ὅταν ὁ λύχνος τῇ ἀστραπῇ φωτίζη σε."<sup>1</sup>

37. Ἐν δὲ τῷ λαλήσαι, ἡρώτα<sup>2</sup> αὐτὸν Φαρισαῖός τις<sup>3</sup> ὅπως ἀριστήση παρ' αὐτῷ· εἰσελθὼν δὲ ἀνέπεσεν. 38. ὁ δὲ Φαρισαῖος ἰδὼν ἐθαύμασεν ὅτι οὐ πρῶτον ἐβαπτίσθη πρὸ τοῦ ἀρίστου. 39. εἶπε δὲ ὁ Κύριος πρὸς αὐτόν, "Νῦν ὑμεῖς οἱ Φαρισαῖοι τὸ ἔξωθεν τοῦ ποτηρίου καὶ τοῦ πίνακος καθαρίζετε· τὸ δὲ ἔσωθεν ὑμῶν γέμει

<sup>1</sup> On ver. 36 vide below, and W.H. (appendix) on vv. 35, 36.

<sup>2</sup> ἠρώτα in  $\aleph$ ABM 69 al.

<sup>3</sup> Omit τις  $\aleph$ NBL I, 13, 69 al. (Tisch., W.H.).

then will it be lighted indeed, as when the lamp with its lightning illumines thee (so Meyer). Even thus the saying seems unsatisfactory, and hardly such as Lk., not to say our Lord, could have been responsible for. The critical question thus forces itself upon us: is this really what Lk. wrote? Westcott and Hort think the passage contains "a primitive corruption," an opinion which J. Weiss (in Meyer, p. 476, note) endorses, making at the same time an attempt to restore the true text. Such attempts are purely conjectural. The verse is omitted in D, some Latin codd., and in Syr. Cur. The new Syr. Sin. has it in a form which Mrs. Lewis thus renders: "Therefore also thy body, when there is in it no lamp that hath shone, is dark, thus while thy lamp is shining, it gives light to thee"—a sentence as dark as a lampless body.

Vv. 37-54. In the house of a Pharisee; criticism of the religion of Pharisees and scribes (Mt. xxiii.). This section contains a selection of the hard sayings of Jesus on the "righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees," given with much greater fulness in Mt.'s great anti-pharisaic discourse, the severity of the attack being further mitigated by the words being thrown into the form of table talk. This is the second time Jesus appears as a guest in a Pharisee's house in this gospel, speaking His mind with all due freedom but without breach of the courtesies of life. The effect and probable aim of these representations is to show that if it ultimately came to an open rupture between Jesus and the Pharisees it was their fault, not His.—Ver. 37. ἐν τῷ λαλήσαι, while He was speaking, as if it had been ἐ. τ. λαλεῖν. ἐν goes most naturally with the present infinitive, but Lk., who uses ἐν with infinitive much more frequently than any other N.T. writer, has ἐν with the aorist nine times. Vide Burton (M. and T., § 109), who remarks in reference to such cases: "The preposition does not seem necessarily to denote exact coincidence (of time), but in no case expresses antecedence. In 1 Cor. xi. 21 and Heb. iii. 12 the action of the infinitive cannot be anteceded to that of the principal verb."—ἀριστήση: the meal was breakfast rather than dinner.—Ver. 38. ἐθαύμασεν: the cause of wonder was that Jesus did not wash (ἐβαπτίσθη) before eating. We have here Lk.'s equivalent for the incident in Mt. xv. 1 ff., Mk. vii. 1 ff., omitted by him. But the secondary character of Lk.'s narrative appears from this, that the ensuing discourse does not, as in Mt. and Mk., keep to the point in hand—neglect of ritual ablutions, but expatiates on Pharisaic vices generally.—Ver. 39. ὁ Κύριος, once more this title in narrative.—νῦν: variously taken as = igitur or = ecce, or as a strictly temporal particle = now "a silent contrast with a better πάλαι" (Meyer). Hahn affirms that νῦν at the beginning of a sentence can mean nothing else than "now". But Raphel, in support of the second of the above senses ("admiratiōnem quandam declarat"), quotes from Arrian νῦν δύναται τις ὠφέλησαι καὶ ἄλλους, μὴ αὐτὸς ὠφέλημένος (Epict., lib. iii., cap. 23, 1). Bengel cites 2 Kings vii. 6, Sept., where νῦν in the first position is the equivalent for  $\aleph$   $\aleph$   $\aleph$  (vide Sweet's edition). Lo! ecce! seems best to suit the situation, which demands a lively emotional word. Godet happily renders: "Vous voilà bien! Je vous prends sur le fait."—πίνακος for Mt.'s παροψίδος (xxiii. 25).—τὸ ἔσωθεν ὑμῶν, your inside, instead of the inside of the dishes in Mt. The idea is that the food they take

ἀρπαγῆς καὶ πονηρίας. 40. ἄφρονες, οὐχ ὁ ποιήσας τὸ ἔξωθεν καὶ τὸ ἔσωθεν ἐποίησε; 41. πλὴν τὰ ἐνόητα δότε ἐλεημοσύνην· καὶ ἰδοὺ, πάντα καθαρὰ ὑμῖν ἐστίν. 42. ἀλλ' οὐαὶ ὑμῖν τοῖς Φαρισαίοις, ὅτι ἀποδεκατοῦτε τὸ ἡδύοσμον καὶ τὸ πήγανον καὶ πᾶν λάχανον, καὶ παρέρχεσθε τὴν κρίσιν καὶ τὴν ἀγάπην τοῦ Θεοῦ· ταῦτα ἔδει ποιῆσαι, κάκεῖνα μὴ ἀφίεναί.<sup>1</sup> 43. οὐαὶ ὑμῖν τοῖς Φαρισαίοις, ὅτι ἀγαπᾶτε τὴν πρωτοκαθεδρίαν ἐν ταῖς συναγωγαῖς, καὶ τοὺς ἀσπασμοὺς ἐν ταῖς ἀγοραῖς. 44. οὐαὶ ὑμῖν, γραμματεῖς καὶ Φαρισαῖοι, ὑποκριταί,<sup>2</sup> ὅτι ἐστὲ ὡς τὰ μνημεῖα τὰ ἄδηλα, καὶ οἱ ἄνθρωποι οἱ περιπατοῦντες ἐπάνω οὐκ οἶδασιν.” 45. Ἀποκριθεὶς δέ τις τῶν νομικῶν λέγει αὐτῷ, “Διδάσκαλε, ταῦτα λέγων καὶ ἡμᾶς ὑβρίζεις.” 46. Ὁ δὲ εἶπε, “Καὶ ὑμῖν τοῖς νομικοῖς οὐαὶ, ὅτι φορτίζετε τοὺς ἀνθρώπους φορτία δυσβάστακτα, καὶ αὐτοὶ ἐνὶ τῶν δακτύλων ὑμῶν οὐ προσφάετε τοῖς φορτίοις. 47. οὐαὶ ὑμῖν, ὅτι οἰκοδομεῖτε τὰ μνημεῖα τῶν

<sup>1</sup> παρῆναι in BL 13 (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> γραμ. . . υποκριται omitted in NBCL al. Probably imported from Mt.

into their bodies is the product of plunder and wickedness (πονηρίας = ἀκρασίας, Mt.).—Ver. 40. ἄφρονες, stupid men! not so strong a word as μωροὶ (Mt. xxiii. 17).—οὐχ ὁ ποιήσας, etc.: either a question or an assertion. As an assertion = he that makes the outside (as it should be) does not thereby also make the inside: it is one thing to cleanse the outside, another, etc. On this view ποιήσας has a pregnant sense = purgare, which Kypke and others (Bornemann dissenting) claim for it in this place. As a question the reference will be to God, and the sense: did not the Maker of the world make the inside of things as well as the outside? Why therefore lay so exclusive stress on the latter? The outside and inside are variously taken as body and spirit (Theophy., Euthy., etc.), vessel and contents (Wolf, Hofmann), vessel and human spirit (Bengel).—Ver. 41. πλὴν, rather (instead of devoting such attention to the outside).—τὰ ἐνόητα, etc., give, as alms, the things within the dishes. Others render as if the phrase were κατὰ τ. ἐν.: according to your ability (Pricaeus, Grotius, etc.).

Vv. 42-44. To this criticism of the externalism of the Pharisees, the only thing strictly relevant to the situation as described, are appended three of Mt.'s “woes” directed against their will-worship in tithing (Mt. xxiii. 23), their love of prominence (Mt. xxiii. 6, not formally put as a “woe”), and their hypocrisy (Mt. xxiii. 27).—πήγανον, rue, instead of Mt.'s ἄνηθον, anise, here only in N.T.—πᾶν λάχανον, every herb, general statement, instead of Mt.'s third sample, κύμινον.—τὴν ἀγάπην τ. Θε., the love of God, instead of Mt.'s mercy and faith.—Ver. 43. Pharisaic ostentation is very gently dealt with here compared with the vivid picture in Mt. xxiii. 5-7, partly out of regard to the restraint imposed by the supposed situation, Jesus a guest; partly because some of the details (phylacteries, e.g.) lacked interest for Gentile readers.—Ver. 44. This “woe” is evidently adapted for Gentile use. In Mt. the sepulchres are made conspicuous by white-washing to warn passers-by, and the point is the contrast between the fair exterior and the inner foulness. Here the graves become invisible (ἄδηλα, in this sense here only in N.T.; cf. 1 Cor. xiv. 8) and the risk is that of being in the presence of what is offensive without knowing. Farrar (C. G. T.) suggests that the reference may be to Tiberias, which was built on the site of an old cemetery.

Vv. 45-52. Castigation of the scribes present; severe, but justified by having been invited.—Ver. 45. τις τῶν νομικῶν: a professional man, the Pharisees being laymen; the two classes kindred in spirit, hence the lawyer who speaks felt hit.—Ver. 46. Jesus fearlessly proceeds to say what He thinks of the class.—καὶ ὑμῖν, yes! to you lawyers also woes. Three are specified: heavy burdens (Mt.

προφητῶν, οἰδὲ <sup>1</sup> πατέρες ὑμῶν ἀπέκτειναν αὐτούς. 48. ἄρα μαρτυρεῖτε <sup>2</sup> καὶ συνευδοκεῖτε τοῖς ἔργοις τῶν πατέρων ὑμῶν· ὅτι αὐτοὶ μὲν ἀπέκτειναν αὐτούς, ὑμεῖς δὲ οἰκοδομεῖτε αὐτῶν τὰ μνημεῖα.<sup>3</sup> 49. διὰ τοῦτο καὶ ἡ σοφία τοῦ Θεοῦ εἶπεν, Ἄποστειλῶ εἰς αὐτούς προφήτας καὶ ἀποστόλους, καὶ ἐξ αὐτῶν ἀποκτενοῦσι καὶ ἐκδιώξουσιν<sup>4</sup>. 50. ἵνα ἐκζητηθῇ τὸ αἷμα πάντων τῶν προφητῶν τὸ ἐκχυνόμενον<sup>5</sup> ἀπὸ καταβολῆς κόσμου ἀπὸ τῆς γενεᾶς ταύτης, 51. ἀπὸ τοῦ αἵματος Ἄβελ ἕως τοῦ αἵματος Ζαχαρίου τοῦ ἀπολομένου μεταξύ τοῦ θυσιαστηρίου καὶ τοῦ οἴκου· ναί, λέγω ὑμῖν, ἐκζητηθήσεται ἀπὸ τῆς γενεᾶς ταύτης. 52. Οὐαὶ ὑμῖν τοῖς νομικοῖς, ὅτι ἤρατε τὴν κλεῖδα τῆς γνώσεως· αὐτοὶ οὐκ εἰσήλθετε, καὶ τοὺς εἰσερχομένους ἐκωλύσατε.” 53. Λέγοντος δὲ αὐτοῦ ταῦτα πρὸς αὐτούς,<sup>6</sup> ἤρξαντο οἱ γραμματεῖς καὶ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι δεινῶς ἐνέχειν, καὶ ἀποστοματίζειν αὐτὸν περὶ πλειόνων, 54. ἐνεδρεύοντες αὐτόν, καὶ ζητούντες<sup>7</sup> θηρεύσαι τι ἐκ τοῦ στόματος αὐτοῦ, ἵνα κατηγορήσωσιν αὐτοῦ.<sup>8</sup>

<sup>1</sup> For οἱ δε NC have καὶ οἱ (Tisch.). Vide below.

<sup>2</sup> For μαρτυρεῖτε (ACDX al. pl.) NBL aeth. Orig. have μαρτυρες εστε.

<sup>3</sup> NBDL codd. vet. Lat. omit αὐτων τα μνημεια. Vide below.

<sup>4</sup> διώξουσιν in NBCLX al. (W.H.). <sup>5</sup> ἐκκεχυμενον in B 33, 69 (W.H. text).

<sup>6</sup> For λεγοντος . . . προς αυτους, found in the Western type of text, NBCL 33 have κακειθεν εξελθοντος αυτου: two quite distinct prefaces to the new section. Tisch., W.H., prefer that of B (2) to that of D (1).

<sup>7</sup> NBL I, 118, 131 al. omit καὶ ζητούντες (Tisch., W.H.). NX omit also αυτον after ἐνεδρευοντες (Tisch.).

<sup>8</sup> NBL cop. aeth. omit ινα . . . αυτου (a gloss imitating Mt. xii. 10).

xiii. 3), tombs of the prophets (Mt. xxiii. 29-31), key of knowledge (Mt. xxiii. 14).—φορτίσετε (with two accusatives only in N.T.), ye lade men with unbearable burdens.—προσψάτετε, ye touch, here only in N.T.—Ver. 47. καὶ οἱ πατέρες ὑ., and your fathers. This reading of NC is to be preferred on internal grounds to οἱ πατέρες, as implying that the two acts were not contrasted but kindred = they killed, you build, worthy sons of such fathers.—Ver. 48 points the moral.—ἄρα: perhaps with Schleiermacher we should write ἄρα, taking what follows as a question.—οἰκοδομεῖτε, ye build, absolutely (without object, vide note 3 above). Tomb-building in honour of dead prophets and killing of living prophets have one root: stupid superstitious reverence for the established order.—Ver. 49. ἡ σοφία τ. Θ.: vide notes on Mt. xxiii. 34.—ἀποστόλους, apostles, instead of wise men and scribes in Mt.—ἐκδιώξουσιν, they shall drive out (of the land), in place of Mt.'s σταυρώσατε.—Ver. 50. ἐκζητηθῇ, “a Hellenistic verb used in the sense of the Latin exquiro,” Farrar (C. G. T.).—Ver. 51. τοῦ ἀπολομένου who perished, in place of the harsher whom ye slew of Mt.—τοῦ οἴκου = τοῦ ναοῦ in Mt., the temple.—Ver. 52. Final woe on the lawyers, a kind of anticlimax. Cf. Mt., where the pathetic apostrophe to Jerusalem follows and concludes the discourse.—τὴν κλεῖδα τῆς γνώσεως, the key which is knowledge (genitive of apposition) admitting to the Kingdom of God. Many take it = the key to knowledge.

Ver. 53. The foregoing discourse, though toned down as compared with Mt., was more than the hearers could stand. The result is a more hostile attitude towards the free-spoken Prophet than the classes concerned have yet shown, at least in the narrative of Lk. They began δεινῶς ἐνέχειν, to be sorely nettled at Him (cf. Mk. vi. 19). Euthy.

XII. 1. Ἐν οἷς ἐπισυναχθεισῶν τῶν μυριάδων τοῦ ὄχλου, ὥστε καταπατεῖν ἀλλήλους, ἤρξατο λέγειν πρὸς τοὺς μαθητὰς αὐτοῦ πρῶτον, “ Προσέχετε ἑαυτοῖς ἀπὸ τῆς ζύμης τῶν Φαρισαίων, ἣτις ἐστὶν ὑπόκρισις.<sup>1</sup> 2. οὐδὲν δὲ συγκεκαλυμμένον ἐστίν, ὃ οὐκ ἀποκαλυφθήσεται, καὶ κρυπτόν, ὃ οὐ γνωσθήσεται. 3. ἀνθ’ ὧν ὅσα ἐν τῇ σκοτίᾳ εἶπατε, ἐν τῷ φωτὶ ἀκουσθήσεται· καὶ ὃ πρὸς τὸ οὐς ἐλαλήσατε ἐν τοῖς ταμείοις, κηρυχθήσεται ἐπὶ τῶν δωματίων. 4. Λέγω δὲ ὑμῖν τοῖς φίλοις μου, Μὴ φοβηθῆτε ἀπὸ τῶν ἀποκτεινόντων τὸ σῶμα, καὶ μετὰ ταῦτα μὴ ἐχόντων περισσώτερόν τι ποιῆσαι.

<sup>1</sup> ἦτις . . . υποκ. before τ. Φαρ. in BL c (W.H.).

gives as equivalents ἐγκοτεῖν, ὀργίξασθαι. The Vulgate has graviter insistere, to press hard, which A.V. and R.V. follow. Field (Ot. Nor.) decides for the former sense = the scribes and Pharisees began to be very angry.—ἀποστοματίζειν: Grimm gives three meanings—to speak from memory (ἀπὸ στόματος); to repeat to a pupil that he may commit to memory; to ply with questions so as to entice to offhand answers. In this third sense the word must be taken here as it is by Theophy. (and by Euthy.: ἀπαιτεῖν αὐτοσχέδιους καὶ ἀνεπισκέπτους ἀποκρίσεις ἐρωτημάτων δολερῶν = to seek offhand ill-considered answers to crafty questions).—Ver. 54 really gives the key to the meaning of ἀποστοματίζειν (here only in N.T.).

CHAPTER XII. MISCELLANEOUS DISCOURSES.—Vv. 1-12. Exhortation to fearless utterance, addressed to the disciples (cf. Mt. x. 17-33).—ἐν οἷς, in these circumstances, i.e., while the assaults of the Pharisees and scribes on Jesus were going on (xi. 53).—μυριάδων: a hyperbolic expression for an “innumerable multitude,” pointing, if the words are to be taken in earnest, to the largest crowd mentioned anywhere in the Gospels. Yet this immense gathering is not accounted for: it does not appear where or why it collected, but the ἐν οἷς suggests that the people had been drawn together by the encounter between Jesus and His foes.—πρῶτον from its position naturally qualifies προσέχετε, implying that hypocrisy was the first topic of discourse (Meyer). But it may also be taken with μαθητὰς, as implying that, while Jesus meant to speak to the crowd, He addressed Himself in the first place to His disciples (Schanz, J. Weiss, Holtzmann). Bornemann points out that while Mt. places πρῶτον after imperatives, Lk. places it also before, as in ix. 61, x. 5.—ἀπὸ τῆς ζύμης τ. Φ.: this is the logion reported in Mt. xvi. 6 and Mk. viii. 15, connected there with the demand for a sign; here to be viewed in the light of the discourse in the Pharisee's house (xi. 37 f.). In the two first Gospels the warning expresses rather Christ's sense of the deadly character of the Pharisaic leaven; here it is a didactic utterance for the guidance of disciples as witnesses of the truth.—ἦτις ἐστὶν ὑπόκρισις: not in Mt. and Mk.; might be taken as an explanatory gloss, but probably to be viewed as part of the logion. Hypocrisy, the leading Pharisaic vice = wearing a mask of sanctity to hide an evil heart; but from what follows apparently here to be taken in a wider sense so as to include dissimulation, hiding conviction from fear of man as in Gal. ii. 13 (so J. Weiss in Meyer). In Lk.'s reports our Lord's sayings assume a form adapted to the circumstances of the writer's time. Hypocrisy in the sense of Gal. ii. 13 was the temptation of the apostolic age, when truth could not be spoken and acted without risk.—Ver. 2 = Mt. x. 26, there connected with a counsel not to fear men addressed to persons whose vocation imposes the obligation to speak out. Here = dissimulation, concealment of your faith, is vain; the truth will out sooner or later.—Ver. 3. ἀνθ’ ὧν, either = quare, inferring the particular case following from the general statement going before, or = because, assigning a reason for that statement. This verse = Mt. x. 27, but altered. In Mt. it is Christ who speaks in the darkness, and whispers in the ear; in Lk. it is His disciples. In the one representation the whispering stage has its place in the history of the kingdom; in the latter it is conceived as illegitimate and futile.

5. ὑποδείξω δὲ ὑμῖν τίνα φοβηθήτε· φοβήθητε τὸν μετὰ τὸ ἀποκτείναι ἐξουσίαν ἔχοντα<sup>1</sup> ἐμβαλεῖν εἰς τὴν γέενναν· καί, λέγω ὑμῖν τοῦτο φοβήθητε. 6. Οὐχὶ πέντε στρουθία πωλεῖται<sup>2</sup> ἀσαρίων δύο; καὶ ἐν ἐξ αὐτῶν οὐκ ἔστιν ἐπιλησμένον ἐνώπιον τοῦ Θεοῦ· 7. ἀλλὰ καὶ αἱ τρίχες τῆς κεφαλῆς ὑμῶν πᾶσαι ἠρίθμηνται. μὴ οὖν<sup>3</sup> φοβεῖσθε· πολλῶν στρουθίων διαφέρετε. 8. λέγω δὲ ὑμῖν, Πᾶς ὃς ἀν' ὁμολογήσῃ<sup>4</sup> ἐν ἐμοὶ ἔμπροσθεν τῶν ἀνθρώπων, καὶ ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ὁμολογήσῃ ἐν αὐτῷ ἔμπροσθεν τῶν ἀγγέλων τοῦ Θεοῦ· 9. ὁ δὲ ἀρνησάμενός με ἐνώπιον τῶν ἀνθρώπων ἀπαρητήσεται ἐνώπιον τῶν ἀγγέλων τοῦ Θεοῦ. 10. καὶ πᾶς ὃς ἐρεῖ λόγον εἰς τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, ἀφεθήσεται αὐτῷ· τῷ δὲ εἰς τὸ Ἅγιον Πνεῦμα βλασφημήσαντι οὐκ ἀφεθήσεται. 11. ὅταν δὲ προσφέρωσιν<sup>5</sup> ὑμᾶς ἐπὶ τὰς συναγωγὰς καὶ τὰς ἀρχὰς καὶ τὰς ἐξουσίας, μὴ μεριμνᾶτε<sup>6</sup> πῶς ἢ τί ἀπολογήσῃσθε, ἢ τί εἴπητε· 12. τὸ γὰρ Ἅγιον Πνεῦμα διδάξει ὑμᾶς ἐν αὐτῇ τῇ ᾠρᾳ, ἃ δεῖ εἰπεῖν.”

For ὁμολ. ἐν. side Mt. x. 32, with notes.

<sup>1</sup> ἔχοντα ἐξουσίαν in  $\aleph$ BDL, etc., verss.

<sup>2</sup> For πωλεῖται (a cor., as usual, neut. pl. nom.)  $\aleph$ B 13, 69, 346 have πωλονται.

<sup>3</sup> BLR 157 codd. vet. Lat. omit οὖν.

<sup>4</sup> So in  $\aleph$ L al. pl. (Tisch.). BDA al. have ὁμολογήσει (W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> εἰσφέρωσιν in  $\aleph$ BLX 1, 33 al.

<sup>6</sup> μεριμνήσητε in  $\aleph$ BLQRX 1, 13, 33, 69. D and codd. vet. Lat. syr. cur., etc., omit  $\eta$   $\tau$  after πως (W.H. brackets).

What you whisper will become known to all, therefore whisper not but speak from the housetop.—Ver. 4. λέγω δὲ, introducing a very important statement, not a mere phrase of Lk.'s to help out the connection of thought (Ws., Mt.-Evang., 279).—τοῖς φίλοις μου, not a mere conventional designation for an audience, but spoken with emphasis to distinguish disciples from hostile Pharisees = my comrades, companions in tribulation.—μὴ φοβηθήτε, etc., down to end of ver. 5 = Mt. x. 28, with variations. For Mt.'s distinction between body and soul Lk. has one between now and hereafter (μετὰ ταῦτα). The positive side of the counsel is introduced not with a simple "fear," but with the more emphatic "I will show ye whom ye shall fear". Then at the end, to give still more emphasis, comes: "Yea, I say unto you, fear him". Who is the unnamed object of fear? Surely he who tempts to unfaithfulness, the god of this world!—Ver. 6. πέντε, five, for two farthings, two for one in Mt. (x. 29); one into the bargain when you buy a larger number. They hardly have a price at all!—ἐπιλησμένον, forgotten, for Mt.'s "falls not to the ground without"; the former more general and secondary, but the meaning plainer.—Ver. 7. ἠρίθμηνται, they remain numbered, once for all; number never forgotten, one would be missed.

Vv. 8-12. Another solemn declaration introduced by a λέγω δὲ = Mt. x. 32, 33.—ἔμπροσθεν τῶν ἀγγέλων τ. Θ.: in place of Mt.'s "before my Father in heaven". In ver. 6 "God" takes the place of "your Father" in Mt. It seems as if the Christian circle to which Lk. belonged did not fully realise the significance of Christ's chosen designation for God.—Ver. 10. πᾶς ὃς ἐρεῖ, etc.: the true historical setting of the logion concerning blasphemy is doubtless that in Mt. (xii. 31), and Mk. (iii. 28), where it appears as a solemn warning to the men who broached the theory of Beelzebub-derived power to cast out devils. Here it is a word of encouragement to disciples (apostles) to this effect: blaspheming the Holy Spirit speaking through you will be in God's sight an unpardonable sin, far more heinous than that of prejudiced Pharisees speaking evil against me, the Son of Man, now.—

13. Εἶπε δὲ τις αὐτῷ ἐκ τοῦ ὄχλου,<sup>1</sup> "Διδάσκαλε, εἰπὲ τῷ ἀδελφῷ μου μερίσασθαι μετ' ἐμοῦ τὴν κληρονομίαν." 14. Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, "Ἄνθρωπε, τίς με κατέστησε δικαστὴν<sup>2</sup> ἢ μεριστὴν ἐφ' ὑμᾶς;" 15. Εἶπε δὲ πρὸς αὐτούς, "Ὁρᾶτε καὶ φυλάσσεσθε ἀπὸ τῆς<sup>3</sup> πλεονεξίας· ὅτι οὐκ ἐν τῷ περισσεύειν τινὶ ἢ ζωῇ αὐτοῦ ἐστὶν ἐκ τῶν ὑπαρχόντων αὐτοῦ."<sup>4</sup> 16. Εἶπε δὲ παραβολὴν πρὸς αὐτούς, λέγων, "Ἀνθρώπου τινὸς πλουσίου εὐφόρησεν ἡ χώρα· 17. καὶ διελογίζετο ἐν ἑαυτῷ,<sup>5</sup> λέγων, Τί ποιήσω, ὅτι οὐκ ἔχω ποῦ συνάξω τοὺς καρπούς μου; 18. καὶ εἶπε, Τοῦτο ποιήσω· καθελῶ μου τὰς ἀποθήκας, καὶ μείζονας οἰκοδομήσω, καὶ συνάξω ἐκεῖ πάντα τὰ γενήματά<sup>6</sup> μου, καὶ τὰ ἀγαθὰ μου, 19. καὶ ἐρῶ τῇ ψυχῇ μου, Ψυχῆ, ἔχεις πολλὰ ἀγαθὰ κείμενα εἰς ἔτη πολλά· ἀναπαύου, φάγε, πίε,<sup>7</sup> εὐφραίνου. 20. εἶπε δὲ αὐτῷ ὁ Θεός, Ἄφρων, ταύτη τῇ νυκτὶ τὴν ψυχὴν σου ἀπαιτοῦσιν<sup>8</sup> ἀπὸ σοῦ· ἃ δὲ ἠτοίμασας, τίνι ἔσται; 21. οὕτως ὁ θησαυρίζων ἑαυτῷ, καὶ μὴ εἰς Θεὸν πλουτῶν."<sup>9</sup>

<sup>1</sup> εκ τ. οχ. αυτω in  $\aleph$ BL 33.

<sup>2</sup> κριτην in  $\aleph$ BDL I, 13, 33 al.

<sup>3</sup> For της πλ.  $\aleph$ BDL al. verss. have πασης πλ. (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> αυτω in BD preferred by Tisch., W.H., to αυτου (T.R. =  $\aleph$ LD al. fl.).

<sup>5</sup> εν αυτω in BL.

<sup>6</sup> For τα γενηματα BL and some verss. have τον σιτον (W.H. text).

<sup>7</sup> κειμενα . . . πιε is wanting in D, codd. vet. Lat., and bracketed in W.H.

<sup>8</sup> So in  $\aleph$ DA, etc. (Tisch.). BLQT 33 have αιτουσιν (W.H.).

<sup>9</sup> D a, b omit ver. 21, which is therefore bracketed in W.H.'s text.

Ver. 11. τὰς ἀρχὰς καὶ τὰς ἐξουσίας: a general reference to heathen tribunals in place of Mt.'s συνέδρια (x. 17). "Synagogues," representing Jewish tribunals, retained.—Ver. 12. τὸ Ἅγιον Πνεῦμα: their utterances always inspired by the Holy Ghost (hence to contradict their word blasphemy), and specially when they are on their defence.

Vv. 13-21. An interlude leading to a change of theme, in Lk. only.—Ver. 13. τις ἐκ τοῦ ὄχλου: the crowd now comes to the front, and becomes the audience for at least a few moments.—εἰπὲ here takes after it the infinitive, instead of ἵνα with subjunctive.—μερίσασθαι, to divide, presumably according to law, one-third to the younger, two-thirds to the elder (Deut. xxi. 17). The references to tribunals in ver. 11 may have suggested this application to Jesus.—Ver. 14. ἄνθρωπε, man! discouraging, no sympathy with the object (cf. Rom. ii. 1, ix. 20).—κριτὴν, a judge, deciding the right or equity of the case; μεριστὴν, an arbiter carrying out the judgment (here only in N.T.). The application was the less blameworthy that appeals to Rabbis for such purposes seem to have been not infrequent (Schanz).—Ver. 15: the moral pointed = beware of covetousness!—οὐκ ἐν τῷ περισσεύειν, etc.: the expression here is peculiar and the meaning somewhat obscure, but apparently the idea is: not in the abundance enjoyed by any man is (consists) his life—not in (of) his possessions. Two ways of saying the same thing, the second a kind of afterthought. If life, true life, meant possessions, then the more the better, but it means something far higher.

Vv. 16-21. Parable of the rich fool, simply a story embodying in concrete form the principle just enunciated: teaching the lesson of Ps. xlix., and containing apparent echoes of Sirach xi. 17-19.—Ver. 16. εὐφόρησε, bore well; late and rare (here only in N.T.). Kypke gives examples from Josephus and Hippocrates.—χώρα, estate, farm = ἀγρός (ix. 12), so in John iv. 35.—Ver. 18. τὸν σιτον (or τὰ γενήματα): may refer to the fruits (καρπούς, ver. 17) of the season, τὰ ἀγαθὰ to the accumulated

22. Εἶπε δὲ πρὸς τοὺς μαθητὰς αὐτοῦ, " Διὰ τοῦτο ὑμῖν λέγω, μὴ μεριμνᾶτε τῇ ψυχῇ ὑμῶν,<sup>1</sup> τί φάγητε· μηδὲ τῷ σώματι, τί ἐνδύσηθε. 23. ἡ<sup>2</sup> ψυχὴ πλείον ἔστι τῆς τροφῆς, καὶ τὸ σῶμα τοῦ ἐνδύματος. 24. Κατανοήσατε τοὺς κόρακας, ὅτι οὐ<sup>3</sup> σπεύρουσιν, οὐδὲ<sup>4</sup> θερίζουσιν· οἷς οὐκ ἔστι ταμείον οὐδὲ ἀποθήκη, καὶ ὁ Θεὸς τρέφει αὐτούς· πόσῳ μᾶλλον ὑμεῖς διαφέρετε τῶν πετεινῶν; 25. τίς δὲ ἐξ ὑμῶν μεριμνῶν δύναται προσθεῖναι ἐπὶ τὴν ἡλικίαν αὐτοῦ πηχυν ἓνα,<sup>4</sup> 26. εἰ οὖν οὕτε<sup>5</sup> ἐλάχιστον δύνασθε, τί περὶ τῶν λοιπῶν μεριμνᾶτε; 27. Κατανοήσατε τὰ κρίνα, πῶς αὐξάνει· οὐ κοπιᾷ, οὐδὲ νῆθει.<sup>6</sup> λέγω δὲ ὑμῖν, οὐδὲ Σολομῶν ἐν πάσῃ τῇ δόξῃ αὐτοῦ περιεβέβητο ὡς ἐν τούτων. 28. εἰ δὲ τὸν χόρτον ἐν τῷ ἄργῳ σήμερον ὄντα,<sup>7</sup> καὶ αὔριον εἰς κλίβανον βαλλόμενον, ὁ Θεὸς οὕτως ἀμφιένυσσι,<sup>8</sup> πόσῳ μᾶλλον ὑμᾶς, ὀλιγόπιστοι; 29. Καὶ ὑμεῖς μὴ ζητεῖτε τί φάγητε,

<sup>1</sup> Omit ὑμῶν ἝABDLQ al.      <sup>2</sup> ἡ γὰρ in ἝBDLX (Trg., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> ου, ουδε in B (W.H. text). ουτε, ουτε in ἝDLQ e (Tisch., W.H., marg.).

<sup>4</sup> ἝBD omit ενα (Tisch., W.H.). B places προσθεῖναι just before πηχυν (W.H. text).

<sup>5</sup> ουδε in ἝBLQ ι, 33 al.

<sup>6</sup> For πῶς αὐξάνει . . . νηθει D 2 syrr. cur. sin. have πῶς ουτε νηθει ουτε υφαινει (Tisch., W.H., marg.; "worth considering," J. Weiss).

<sup>7</sup> ἝBL have ἐν ἀργῷ τον χορ. οντα σημερον (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>8</sup> ἀμφιέξει (-αζει B) in BDLT.

possessions of bygone years.—Ver. 19. ἀναπαύου, etc., rest, eat, drink, be jolly: an epicurean asyndeton.—Ver. 20. εἶπε δὲ α., but God said to him, through conscience at the death hour (Euthy.).—ἀπαιτοῦσι, they ask thy life = thy life is asked.—τίνι ἔσται, whose? Not thine at all events.—Ver. 21. εἰς Θεὸν πλουτῶν, rich with treasure laid up with God. Other interpretations are: rich in a way that pleases God, or rich in honorem Dei, for the advancement of God's glory. The last sense implies that the riches are literal, the first implies that they are spiritual.

Vv. 22-31. Dissuasives against earthly care (Mt. vi. 25-33). The disciples again become the audience.—Ver. 23. ψυχὴ and σῶμα are to be taken in the physical sense, the suggestion being that God has given us these the greater things, and therefore may be expected to give us food for the one and raiment for the other, the smaller things.—Ver. 24. κόρακας, the ravens, individualising, for Mt.'s πετεινὰ.—ὁ Θεὸς for ὁ πατὴρ ὑμῶν in Mt.—Ver. 26. ἐλάχιστον: the application of this epithet to the act of adding a cubit ἐπὶ τὴν ἡλικίαν at first appears conclusive evidence that for

Lk. at least ἡλικία must mean length of life: as to add a cubit to one's stature is so great a thing that no one thinks of attempting it (Hahn, similarly Holtzmann, H. C.). But adding to one's stature a cubit or an inch is of minimum importance as compared with lengthening our days. Yet it must be owned that Lk.'s ἐλάχιστον puts us off the track of the idea intended, if we take ἡλικία = stature. The point is, we cannot do what God has done for all mature persons: added a cubit at least to the stature of their childhood, and this is the greater thing, not the least, greater than giving us the means of life now that we have reached maturity. Vide notes on Mt.—Ver. 29. μετεωρίζεσθε: a ἄπ. λεγ. in N.T. and variously rendered. The meaning that best suits the connection of thought is that which finds in the word the figure of a boat tempest-tossed, but that which is best supported by usage points rather to high-mindedness, vain thoughts. The Vulgate renders nolite in sublime tolli = lift not yourselves up to lofty claims (Meyer); do not be ambitious, be content with humble things, a perfectly congruous counsel. Still the rendering: be not as

ἢ<sup>1</sup> τί πίητε· καὶ μὴ μετεωρίζεσθε. 30. ταῦτα γὰρ πάντα τὰ ἔθνη τοῦ κόσμου ἐπιζητεῖ<sup>2</sup>. ὑμῶν δὲ ὁ πατὴρ οἶδεν ὅτι χρῆζετε τούτων· 31. πλὴν ζητεῖτε τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ,<sup>3</sup> καὶ ταῦτα πάντα<sup>4</sup> προστεθήσεται ὑμῖν. 32. μὴ φοβοῦ, τὸ μικρὸν ποιμίμιον· ὅτι εὐδόκησεν ὁ πατὴρ ὑμῶν δοῦναι ὑμῖν τὴν βασιλείαν. 33. Πωλήσατε τὰ ὑπάρχοντα ὑμῶν, καὶ δότε ἐλεημοσύνην. ποιήσατε ἑαυτοῖς βαλάντια μὴ παλαιούμενα, θησαυρὸν ἀνέκλειπτον ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς, ὅπου κλέπτῃς οὐκ ἐγγίζει, οὐδὲ σὴς διαφθείρει· 34. ὅπου γὰρ ἐστὶν ὁ θησαυρὸς ὑμῶν, ἐκεῖ καὶ ἡ καρδιά ὑμῶν ἔσται. 35. Ἔστωσαν

<sup>1</sup> καὶ in  $\aleph$ BLT.

<sup>2</sup> For ἐπιζητεῖ (a cor., neut. pl. nom.)  $\aleph$ BLT 13, 33, 69 al. have ἐπιζητοῦσιν.

<sup>3</sup> αὐτου for τ. θ. in  $\aleph$ BDL. <sup>4</sup> Omit πάντα  $\aleph$ BL al. verss. (from Mt.).

tempest-tossed vessels, vexed with care, is a finer thought and more what we expect. Hahn renders: do not gaze with strained vision heavenwards, anxiously looking for help. Pricaeus: "ex futuro suspendi". Theophylact gives a paraphrase which in a way combines the two senses. He defines meteorismus as distraction (περισπασμὸν), and a restless movement of the mind, thinking now of one thing now of another, leaping from this to that, and always fancying higher things (ἀεὶ τὰ ὑψηλότερα φανταζομένου).—Ver. 30. τ. ἔ. τοῦ κόσμου, the nations of the world; this addition is peculiar to Lk., the expression here only in N.T., but frequent with the Rabbis (Lightfoot, ad loc.); meaning with them the peoples of the outside world as distinct from the Jews; here probably all (Jews included) but Christians. On the thought vide on Mt.—Ver. 31. πλὴν, much rather (Schanz, Hahn).—Ζητεῖτε, etc.: In his version of this great word of Jesus Lk. omits πρῶτον and τὴν δικαιοσύνην, so that it takes this simple and absolute form: seek His (the Father's) kingdom: very probably the original form. As temporal things are added (προστεθήσεται) they do not need to be sought. Mt.'s final word about not caring for to-morrow Lk. omits, either deeming it superfluous, or giving what follows as a substitute.

Vv. 32-34. The little flock, in Lk. only.—ποιμίμιον (contracted from ποιμένιον), a flock (of sheep), a familiar designation of the body of believers in the apostolic age (Acts xx. 28, 1 Pet. v. 3); μικρὸν adds pathos. That Jesus applied this name to His disciples is very credible, though it may be that in the sense of the source from which Lk. drew, the little flock is the Jewish-Christian Church of Palestine subject to persecution from their unbelieving countrymen (J. Weiss in Meyer). The counsel "fear not" is Mt.'s "take no thought for to-morrow," but the "to-morrow" refers not to temporal but to spiritual things; hence the declaration following. Paraphrased = Fear not future want of food and raiment, still less loss of the kingdom, the object of your desire. Your Father will certainly give it.—Ver. 33 counsels a heroic mood for which apprehension as to future temporal want has become an impossibility, such want being now viewed as a means of ensuring the one object of desire, eternal riches.—πωλήσατε, etc.: the special counsel to the man in quest of eternal life generalised (cf. xviii. 22).—βαλάντια, purses: contingens pro contento (De Wette).—παλαιούμενα: in Heb. viii. 13 applied to the Sinaitic covenant. Covenants, religions, wax old as well as purses.—ἀνέκλειπτον, unfailling. Cf. ἐκλίπη, xvi. 9, in reference to death: "vox rara, sed paris elegantiae cum altera ἀνεκλιπής, quam adhibet auctor libri Sapient., vii. 4, viii. 18, ubi habes θησαυρὸς ἀνεκλιπής et πλοῦτος ἀνεκλιπής," Wolf. There is poetry in this verse, but also some think asceticism, turning the poetry of Jesus into ecclesiastical prose. I prefer to believe that even Lk. sees in the words not a mechanical rule, but a law for the spirit.—Ver. 34 = Mt. vi. 21, with σου turned into ὑμῶν.

Vv. 35-38. Loins girt, lamps burning. Connection with what goes before is not apparent, but there is a latent affinity which makes the introduction of this logion here by Lk. or his source inὑμῶν αἱ ὀσφύες περιεζωσμέναι, καὶ οἱ λύχνοι καιόμενοι· 36. καὶ ὑμεῖς ὅμοιοι ἀνθρώποις προσδεχομένοις τὸν κύριον ἑαυτῶν, πότε ἀναλύσει<sup>1</sup> ἐκ τῶν γάμων, ἵνα, ἐλθόντος καὶ κρούσαντος, εὐθέως ἀνοίξωσιν αὐτῷ. 37. μακάριοι οἱ δούλοι ἐκεῖνοι, οὓς ἐλθὼν ὁ κύριος εὐρήσει γρηγοροῦντας. ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι περιζώσεται καὶ ἀνακλιεῖ αὐτούς, καὶ παρελθὼν διακονήσει αὐτοῖς. 38. καὶ ἐὰν ἔλθῃ ἐν τῇ δευτέρᾳ φυλακῇ, καὶ ἐν τῇ τρίτῃ φυλακῇ ἔλθῃ, καὶ εὖρη οὕτω,<sup>2</sup> μακάριοί εἰσιν οἱ δούλοι<sup>3</sup> ἐκεῖνοι. 39. τοῦτο δὲ γινώσκετε, ὅτι εἰ ἦδει ὁ οἰκοδεσπότης ποῖα ἔρα ὁ κλέπτῃς ἔρχεται, ἐγρηγόρησεν ἄν, καὶ οὐκ ἂν<sup>4</sup> ἀφήκε διορυγῆναι<sup>5</sup> τὸν οἶκον αὐτοῦ. 40. καὶ ὑμεῖς οὖν<sup>6</sup> γίνεσθε ἕτοιμοι· ὅτι ἡ ἔρα οὐ δοκεῖτε, ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἔρχεται.” 41. εἶπε δὲ αὐτῷ<sup>7</sup> ὁ Πέτρος, “Κύριε, πρὸς ἡμᾶς τὴν παραβολὴν ταύτην λέγεις, ἢ καὶ πρὸς πάντας;”

<sup>1</sup> ἀναλυση in  $\aleph$ ABDL and many others (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> For the words καὶ εἰν . . . οὕτω  $\aleph$ BLT 33, 131 have καν ἐν τῇ δευτ. καν ἐν τῇ τριτ. φυλ. ἐλθῃ καὶ εὖρη οὕτως (Tisch., Trg., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> οἱ δούλοι omit  $\aleph$ aBDL syrr. cur. sin., etc. (W.H.).  $\aleph^*$  omits ἐκεῖνοι (Tisch.).

<sup>4</sup> For ἐγρηγ. . . . οὐκ ἀν  $\aleph$ D e, i syrr. cur. sin. have simply οὐκ ἀν (Tisch., W.H., marg.).

<sup>5</sup> διορυχθῆναι in  $\aleph$ BL 33 (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>6</sup> Omit οὖν  $\aleph$ BL minusc. <sup>7</sup> Omit αὐτῷ (in  $\aleph$  = Tisch.) BDL 33 (W.H.).

telligible. The kingdom the summum bonum; all to be sacrificed for it; its coming (or the King's) to be eagerly waited for.—Vv. 35, 36 contain the germ of the parable of the Ten Virgins (Mt. xxv. 1 f.). So De Wette, J. Weiss, Holtzmann, Schanz, etc.—ὀσφύες περιεζωσμέναι, loins girt, for service.—λύχνοι καιόμενοι, lamps burning, for reception of the master expected to return during the night. In the spiritual sphere the loins girt point to a noble purpose in life, and the burning lamp to the spirit of hope.—Ver. 36. ἀναλύσει, when (πότε = ὁπότε) he shall return; the figure is taken from sailors making the return voyage to the port whence they had sailed, Beza (vide Phil. i. 23, 2 Tim. iv. 6).—ἐλθόντος καὶ κρούσαντος: the participles in the genitive absolute, though the subject to which they refer, αὐτῷ, is in the dative.—Ver. 37. μακάριοι: here as always implying rare felicity the reward of heroic virtue.—ἀμὴν: the Hebrew word retained here contrary to custom, introducing a startling thought, the inversion of the relation of master and servants, lord and slaves, through joy over their fidelity. For the other side of the picture vide Lk. xvii. 7-10.—διακονήσει αὐτοῖς: the master, in genial mood, turns servant to his own slaves; makes them sit down, throws off his caftan, girds his under-garments, and helps them to portions of the marriage feast he has brought home with him, as a father might do for his children (De Wette, Koetsveld, p. 244). There is not necessarily an allusion either to the last supper (xxii. 27) or to the Roman Saturnalia (Grotius, Holtzmann, H. C.).—Ver. 38. ἐν τῇ δευτέρᾳ, etc., second and third watches named as the times at which men are most apt to be overtaken with sleep (Hahn), the night being probably supposed to consist of four watches, and the first omitted as too early, and the last as too late for the return.

Vv. 39-40. The thief (Mt. xxiv. 43, 44). A new figure is now employed to give pictorial embodiment to the counsel: be ever ready. The master returning from a wedding is replaced by a thief whose study it is to come to the house he means to plunder at an unexpected time. This logion is reproduced by Lk. substantially as in Mt. with only slight stylistic variations.

Vv. 41-46. A question by Peter and a reply (Mt. xxiv. 45-51). Some look on Peter's question as a literary device of

42. Εἶπε δὲ<sup>1</sup> ὁ Κύριος, "Τίς ἄρα ἐστὶν ὁ πιστὸς οἰκονόμος καὶ<sup>2</sup> φρόνιμος, ὃν καταστήσει ὁ κύριος ἐπὶ τῆς θεραπείας αὐτοῦ, τοῦ διδόναι ἐν καιρῷ τὸ<sup>3</sup> σιτομέτριον; 43. μακάριος ὁ δούλος ἐκεῖνος, ὃν ἔλθων ὁ κύριος αὐτοῦ εὐρήσει ποιούντα οὕτως. 44. ἀληθῶς λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι ἐπὶ πᾶσι τοῖς ὑπάρχουσιν αὐτοῦ καταστήσει αὐτόν. 45. Ἐὰν δὲ εἶπη ὁ δούλος ἐκεῖνος ἐν τῇ καρδίᾳ αὐτοῦ, Χρονίζει ὁ κύριός μου ἔρχεσθαι· καὶ ἄρξῃται τύπτειν τοὺς παῖδας καὶ τὰς παιδίσκας, ἐσθίειν τε καὶ πίνειν καὶ μεθύσκεσθαι· 46. ἦξει ὁ κύριος τοῦ δούλου ἐκεῖνου ἐν ἡμέρᾳ ἣ οὐ προσδοκᾷ, καὶ ἐν ὥρᾳ ἣ οὐ γινώσκει· καὶ διχοτομήσει αὐτόν, καὶ τὸ μέρος αὐτοῦ μετὰ τῶν ἀπίστων θήσει. 47. Ἐκεῖνος δὲ ὁ δούλος ὁ γνοὺς τὸ θέλημα τοῦ κυρίου ἑαυτοῦ,<sup>4</sup> καὶ μὴ ἐτοιμάσας μὴδὲ<sup>5</sup> ποιήσας πρὸς τὸ θέλημα

<sup>1</sup> καὶ εἶπεν in  $\aleph$ BDL  $\Gamma$ , 13, 33, 69 al.

<sup>2</sup> For καὶ ( $\aleph$ L, etc.) read ο with BD, etc.

<sup>3</sup> BD 69 omit το (W.H. brackets).

<sup>4</sup> αὐτου in  $\aleph$ BDL.      <sup>5</sup> For μὴδε  $\aleph$ B 33 have  $\eta$ .

the evangelist either to connect his material (Weiss in Meyer; x. 29, xi. 45 cited as similar instances), or to give what follows a special relation to the Apostles and to Peter as their head (Holtzmann, H. C., the passage thus becoming in his view a substitute for Mt. xvi. 18, 19).—Ver. 41. Peter's question reminds us of Mk. xiii. 37: "What I say unto you, I say unto all, watch".—Ver. 42. ὁ Κύριος, the Lord, in narrative.—τίς ἄρα, etc.: in Mt. this is connected immediately with the thought in ver. 40, so that Peter's interpellation appears as an interruption of a continuous discourse. Some variations from Mt.'s text are noticeable in Lk.'s version: οἰκονόμος for δούλος, καταστήσει (future) for κατέστησεν (aorist), θεραπείας for οικετίας, σιτομέτριον for τροφήν. These changes, according to Weiss and Holtzmann (H. C.), are due to the parable being connected with the Apostles, and one can see some plausibility in the hypothesis so far as the first two variations are concerned. The question: who then, etc., is supposed to answer itself: who but each of you apostles, who especially but you Peter?—Ver. 42. σιτομέτριον, the due portion of food; a word of late Greek. Phryn., p. 383, forbids the use of σιτομετρέισθαι, and enjoins separation of the compound into its elements: σίτον, μετρέισθαι. The noun occurs here only; the verb in Gen. xlvii. 12 and occasionally in late Greek authors.—Ver. 44. ἀληθῶς here, as usual, for ἀμὴν (ver. 37 an exception).—Ver. 45. ἐὰν δὲ: introducing supposition of an abuse of power, conceived possible even in the case of an apostle, of a Peter. Let no proud ecclesiastic therefore say, Is thy servant a dog?—χρονίζει: a delayed παρουσία, a prominent thought in our Lord's later utterances. The delay may possibly be long enough to allow time for the utter demoralisation of even the higher officials. Vide on Mt.—τοὺς παῖδας, etc., the men- and maidservants, instead of συνδούλους in Mt.—διχοτομήσει: the retention of this strong word by Lk., who seems to have it for one of his aims to soften harsh expressions, is noticeable, especially when he understands it as referring to the Apostles, and even to Peter. It makes for the hypothesis that the word means not to cut into two as with a saw, but either to lash unmercifully, to cut to pieces in popular parlance, or to separate from the household establishment (Beza, Grotius, etc.).—μετὰ τῶν ἀπίστων points to degradation from the confidential position of οἰκονόμος to a place among the unfaithful; dismissed, or imprisoned, or set to drudging service.

Vv. 47, 48. Degrees of guilt and punishment, in Lk. only, and serving as an apology for the severity of the punishment as described in ver. 46. That punishment presupposes anger. The statement now made is to the effect: penalty inflicted not as passion dictates

αὐτοῦ, δαρήσεται πολλάς· 48. ὁ δὲ μὴ γνούς, ποιήσας δὲ ἄξια πληγῶν, δαρήσεται ὀλίγας. παντὶ δὲ ᾧ ἐδόθη πολὺ, πολὺ ζητηθήσεται παρ' αὐτοῦ· καὶ ᾧ παρέθεντο πολὺ, περισσώτερον αἰτήσουσιν αὐτόν. 49. Πῦρ ἦλθον βαλεῖν εἰς<sup>1</sup> τὴν γῆν, καὶ τί θέλω εἰ ἦδη
 b Acts xxviii. 2. Jas. iii. 5. ἔως οὐ<sup>2</sup> τελεσθῆ; 51. δοκεῖτε ὅτι εἰρήνην παρεγενόμενι δοῦναι ἐν
 c here only in N.T. τῇ γῇ; οὐχί, λέγω ὑμῖν, ἀλλ' ἡ<sup>3</sup> ° διαμερισμόν. 52. ἔσονται γὰρ ἀπὸ τοῦ νῦν πέντε ἐν οἴκῳ ἐνὶ<sup>4</sup> διαμερισμένοι, τρεῖς ἐπὶ δυσί, καὶ δύο ἐπὶ τρισί. 53. διαμερισθήσεται<sup>4</sup> πατὴρ ἐφ' οὐίῳ, καὶ υἱὸς ἐπὶ πατρί· μήτηρ ἐπὶ θυγατρί,<sup>5</sup> καὶ θυγάτηρ ἐπὶ μητρί<sup>5</sup>. πενθερά ἐπὶ τὴν νύμφην αὐτῆς, καὶ νύμφη ἐπὶ τὴν πενθερὰν αὐτῆς.”<sup>6</sup>

<sup>1</sup> ἐπι in  $\aleph$ ABL (εις in D).

<sup>2</sup> εως οτου in  $\aleph$ ABDL.

<sup>3</sup> ἐνι οικω in  $\aleph$ BDL.

<sup>4</sup> διαμερισθησονται in  $\aleph$ BDL minusc.

<sup>5</sup>  $\aleph$ BDL minusc. have θυγατερα, μητερα with or without the article.

<sup>6</sup> Omit αὐτῆς  $\aleph$ BDL.

but as principle demands.—ὁ δοῦλος ὁ γνούς, etc.: describes the case of a servant who knows the master's will but does not do it (μηδὲ ποιήσας), nay, does not even intend or try to do it (μη ἐτοιμάσας), deliberately, audaciously negligent.—δαρήσεται πολλάς (πληγὰς): many stripes justly his portion.—Ver. 48. ὁ δὲ μὴ γνούς: the opposite case is that of one who does not know. What he would do if he did know is another question; but it is not to be gratuitously supposed that he would neglect his duty utterly, like the other, though he does commit minor faults. He is a lower servant in the house to whom the master gave no particular instructions on leaving, therefore without special sense of responsibility during his absence, and apt like the average servant to take liberties when the master is away from home.—παντὶ δὲ ᾧ ἐδόθη, etc.: a general maxim further explaining the principle regulating penalty or responsibility (cf. Mt. xxv. 15 ff.).

Vv. 49-53. Not peace but division (Mt. x. 34-36). This section is introduced by no connecting particle. Yet there is a certain affinity of thought. Strict fidelity demanded under penalties, but fidelity not easy; times of fierce trial and conflict awaiting you. I forewarn you, that ye may be forearmed.—Ver. 49. πῦρ: the fire of a new faith, or religion, a burning enthusiasm in believers, creating fierce antagonism in unbelievers; deplorable but inevitable.—βαλεῖν, used by Mt. in reference to peace and war, where Lk. has δοῦναι.—τί θέλω εἰ, etc., how much I wish it were already kindled; τί = ὡς and εἰ after θέλω to express the object of the wish, as in Sirach xxiii. 14 (θελήσεις εἰ μὴ ἐγεννηθῆς, you will wish you had not been born).—Ver. 50. βάπτισμα: before the fire can be effectually kindled there must come for the kindler His own baptism of blood, of which therefore Jesus naturally speaks here with emotion.—πῶς συνέχομαι, how am I pressed on every side, either with fervent desire (Euthy., Theophy., De Wette, Schanz, etc.), or with fear, shrinking from the cup (Meyer, J. Weiss, Holtzmann, Hahn).—Ver. 51. διαμερισμόν: instead of Mt.'s μάχαιραν, an abstract prosaic term for a concrete pictorial one; exactly descriptive of the fact, however, and avoiding possible misapprehension as to Christ's aim = Jesus not a patron of war.—Ver. 52. τρεῖς ἐπὶ δυσίν, etc.: three against two and two against three; five in all, not six though three pairs are mentioned, mother and mother-in-law (μήτηρ and πενθερά) being the same person. This way of putting it is doubtless due to Lk.—ἐπὶ with dative = contra, only here in N.T.; κατὰ with genitive in Mt.

Vv. 54-59. A final word to the crowd (cf. Mt. xvi. 2 f., v. 25 f.).—τοῖς ὄχλοις: in Mt. Jesus speaks to the Pharisees and Sadducees, in reply to their demand for a sign, which gives a more definite occasion. But the words might quite appropriately have been addressed to the people at large. The weather-skill ascribed to the audience is such as any one might possess, and all Jews needed

54. Ἐλεγε δὲ καὶ τοῖς ὄχλοις, “Ὅταν ἴδητε τὴν<sup>1</sup> νεφέλην ἀνατέλλουσαν ἀπὸ<sup>2</sup> δυσμῶν, εὐθέως λέγετε,<sup>3</sup> Ὁμβρος ἔρχεται· καὶ γίνεται<sup>d</sup> οὕτω. <sup>in N.T.</sup> 55. καὶ ὅταν νότον πνέοντα, λέγετε, Ὅτι καύσων ἔσται· καὶ γίνεται. 56. ὑποκριταί, τὸ πρόσωπον τῆς γῆς καὶ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ οἴδατε δοκιμάζειν· τὸν δὲ καιρὸν τοῦτον πῶς οὐ δοκιμάζετε<sup>4</sup>; 57. τί δὲ καὶ ἀφ’ αὐτῶν οὐ κρίνετε τὸ δίκαιον; 58. ὡς γὰρ ὑπάγεις μετὰ τοῦ ἀντιδίκου σου ἐπ’ ἄρχοντα, ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ δὸς ἐργασίαν ἀπηλλάχθαι ἀπ’ αὐτοῦ· μήποτε κατασύρῃ σε πρὸς τὸν κριτὴν, καὶ ὁ κριτὴς σε παραδῶ<sup>5</sup> τῷ ὀφειλάτῳ, καὶ ὁ ὀφειλάτῳ σε βάλῃ<sup>e</sup> εἰς φυλακὴν. <sup>in N.T.</sup> 59. λέγω σοι, οὐ μὴ ἐξέλθῃς ἐκεῖθεν, ἕως οὗ<sup>6</sup> καὶ τὸ ἔσχατον λεπτὸν ἀποδώσῃ.”

<sup>1</sup> Omit τὴν ἝABLXΔ I, 33, 69 a1.

<sup>2</sup> ἐπι in ἝBL 64.

<sup>3</sup> οτι after λέγετε in ἝABL, etc.

<sup>4</sup> For δοκιμάζετε (ADD a1.) ἝBLT verss. have οὐκ οἴδατε δοκιμάζειν (W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> παραδωσει in ἝBD minusc. (L = T.R.). The same authorities have βαλει for βαλλη.

<sup>6</sup> Omit ου ἝBL I Orig.

the warning. The precise circumstances in which this logion was spoken are uncertain.—ἐπὶ δυσμῶν, in the west, the region of the setting sun, and of the Mediterranean. A cloud rising up from that quarter meant, of course, rain (I Kings xviii. 44, 45).—Ver. 55. καύσων, the sirocco, a hot wind from the desert, blighting vegetation (Jas. i. 11), equally a matter of course.—Ver. 56. ὑποκριταί seems too strong a term to apply to the people, and more appropriate to a Pharisaic or professional audience (Mt. xvi. 3). Raphel, after Erasmus Schmidt, translates harioli, weather prophets, citing a passage from Lucian in support of this sense. This is certainly one meaning of the word (vide Passow), but, as Hahn remarks, the usage of the N.T. does not support it here.—Ver. 57. ἀφ’ αὐτῶν, from or of yourselves (sua sponte, Palairot); without needing any one to tell you the right; implying that the persons addressed were destitute of the average moral insight (cf. Lk. xxi. 30).—Ver. 58. ὡς γὰρ: introducing a legal scene from natural life to illustrate a similar situation in the moral world. It is implied that if they had the necessary moral discernment they would see that a judgment day was at hand, and understand that the duty of the hour was to come to terms with their adversary by timely repentance. That is how they would all act if it were an ordinary case of debtor and creditor.—δὸς ἐργασίαν (phrase here only): usually interpreted give diligence, give thine endeavour = da operam, a Latinism. Theophylact renders it: give interest (of the sum owed); Hofmann, offer work, labour, in place of money.—κατασύρῃ (here only in N.T.), lest he drag thee to the judge, stronger than Mt.'s παραδῶ (v. 25), realistic and not exaggerated.—τῷ πράκτορι, the man whose business it was to collect the debts after the judge had decreed payment, or to put the debtor in prison till the debt was paid. Kypke defines πράκτορες: “exactores qui multas violatorum legum a iudice irrogatas exigunt,” citing an instance of its use from Demosthenes.—Ver. 59. λεπτὸν, the half of a κοδράντης (Mt.'s word), making the necessity of full payment in order to release from prison still more emphatic.

CHAPTER XIII. JUDGMENT TO COME.

This chapter continues the sombre judicial strain of xii. 54-59. Beginning with a general reference to the impending doom of Israel, as foreshadowed by a reported tragedy which had befallen certain individuals, it ends with a specific prediction of the destruction of Jerusalem similar to that which closes the great anti-Pharisaic discourse in Mt. xxiii. The dramatic effect of the prediction there is entirely lost in Lk.'s narrative, which in subsequent chapters continues

XIII. 1. ΠΑΡΗΣΑΝ δέ τινες ἐν αὐτῷ τῷ καιρῷ ἀπαγγέλλοντες αὐτῷ περὶ τῶν Γαλιλαίων, ὧν τὸ αἷμα Πιλάτος ἔμιξε μετὰ τῶν θουσιῶν αὐτῶν. 2. καὶ ἀποκριθεὶς ὁ Ἰησοῦς<sup>1</sup> εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “ Δοκεῖτε, ὅτι οἱ Γαλιλαῖοι οὗτοι ἁμαρτωλοὶ παρὰ πάντας τοὺς Γαλιλαίους ἐγένοντο, ὅτι τοιαῦτα<sup>2</sup> πεπόνθασιν; 3. οὐχί, λέγω ὑμῖν· ἀλλ’ ἐὰν μὴ μετανοήτε, πάντες ὡσαύτως<sup>3</sup> ἀπολείσθε. 4. ἢ ἐκεῖνοι οἱ δέκα καὶ<sup>4</sup> ὀκτώ, ἐφ’ οὓς ἔπεσεν ὁ πύργος ἐν τῷ Σιλωάμ, καὶ ἀπέκτεινεν αὐτούς, δοκεῖτε, ὅτι οὗτοι<sup>5</sup> ὀφειλέται ἐγένοντο παρὰ πάντας ἀνθρώπους τοὺς κατοικοῦντας ἐν<sup>6</sup> Ἱερουσαλὴμ; 5. οὐχί, λέγω ὑμῖν·

<sup>1</sup> MSBLT verss. omit o l.

<sup>2</sup> ομοίως in MSBLT 1, 13, 33, 69 al.

<sup>3</sup> αυτοι in MSBKL 33, 69 al.

<sup>3</sup> ταυτα in MSBDL.

<sup>4</sup> Omit και MSBDL.

<sup>6</sup> BDLX al. omit εν.

its report of the teaching of Christ as if the end were still a great way off.

Vv. 1-5. The Galilean tragedy, peculiar to Lk., as is the greater part of what follows, on to xviii. 14.—Ver. 1. παρήσαν δέ, etc.: The introduction to the gruesome story naturally implies a temporal connection between what follows and what goes before: i.e., some present when Jesus spoke as reported in xii. 54-59 took occasion to tell Him this piece of recent news, recalled to their minds by what He had said about judgment and how to avert it. There is no good reason to suppose that the connection is merely topical, and that the preface is simply a literary device of Lk.—τῶν Γαλ.: the article implies that the story was current.—ὧν τὸ αἷμα, etc.: So the story was told among the horrified people: the blood of the poor Galilean victims ruthlessly shed by Pilate while they were in the very act of offering sacrifice. Perfectly credible in those times under such a ruler, and in reference to such victims, Galileans, free in spirit, restive under the Roman yoke. Similar incidents in Josephus, though not this precise occurrence.—Ver. 2. ἀποκριθεὶς: Jesus answered to an implied question. Those who told the story expected Him to make some remarks on it; not such doubtless as He did make.—δοκεῖτε, think ye; probably that was just what they did think. The fate of the Galileans awakened superstitious horror prone to impute to the victims special criminality.—παρὰ πάντας τ. Γ., in comparison with all Galileans. To make the point more vivid the victims are compared with men of their own province, disposition, and temptations.—ἐγένοντο, became, were shown to be.—πεπόνθασιν, have suffered, an irrevocable fact.—Ver. 3. οὐχί, an emphatic “no,” followed by a solemn “I say to you”. The prophetic mood is on the speaker. He reads in the fate of the few the coming doom of the whole nation.—ὁμοίως, in a similar way. ὡσαύτως, the reading in T.R., is stronger = in the same way. Jesus expresses Himself with greater intensity as He proceeds = ye shall perish likewise; nay, in the same way (ver. 5, ὡσαύτως), your towers and temples falling about your ears.—Ver. 4. Jesus refers to another tragic occurrence, suggesting that He was acquainted with both. His ears were open to all current news, and His mind prompt to point the moral. The fact stated, otherwise unknown to us.—ὀφειλέται, word changed, in meaning the same as ἁμαρτωλοὶ, moral debtors paying their debt in that dismal way.

The utterances of Jesus on this occasion do not bear on the general question: how far may lot be viewed as an index of character? which was not then before His mind. He assumed that the sufferers in the two catastrophes were sinners and even great sinners, so acquiescing in the popular view, because He wanted to point a lesson for the whole nation which He regarded as fast ripening for judgment. From the saying in the Teaching on the Hill concerning the Father in Heaven giving sunshine and rain to evil and good alike, it is evident that He had risen not only above popular current opinion, but even above the O.T. view as to the connection between physical and moral good and evil. That saying implies that there is a large sphere of Divine action within which moral distinctions among men are overlooked, that good may come to bad

ἀλλ' ἐὰν μὴ μετανοήτε,<sup>1</sup> πάντες ὁμοίως<sup>2</sup> ἀπολεισθε." 6. Ἔλεγε δὲ ταύτην τὴν παραβολὴν· "Συκὴν εἶχε τις ἐν τῷ ἀμπελῶνι αὐτοῦ πεφυτευμένην<sup>3</sup>· καὶ ἦλθε καρπὸν ζητῶν<sup>4</sup> ἐν αὐτῇ, καὶ οὐχ εὗρεν. 7. εἶπε δὲ πρὸς τὸν ἀμπελοργόν, Ἰδοῦ, τρία ἔτη<sup>5</sup> ἔρχομαι ζητῶν καρπὸν ἐν τῇ συκῇ ταύτῃ, καὶ οὐχ εὕρισκω, ἔκκοψον αὐτήν· ἵνατί καὶ τὴν γῆν καταργεῖ; 8. ὁ δὲ ἀποκριθεὶς λέγει αὐτῷ, Κύριε, ἄφες αὐτήν καὶ τοῦτο τὸ ἔτος, ἕως ὅτου σκάψω περὶ αὐτήν, καὶ βάλας κοπρίαν<sup>6</sup>. 9. κἂν μὲν ποιήσῃ καρπὸν· εἰ δὲ μὴγε, εἰς τὸ μέλλον<sup>7</sup> ἐκκόψεις αὐτήν."

10. Ἦν δὲ διδάσκων ἐν μιᾷ τῶν συναγωγῶν ἐν τοῖς σάββασι·

<sup>1</sup> μετανοήσῃτε in  $\mathfrak{N}$ DLT.

<sup>2</sup> ὁμοίως in  $\mathfrak{N}$ BLM 1, 33 al. (vide below)

<sup>3</sup> πεφυτ. before ἐν τῷ ἀμπ. in  $\mathfrak{N}$ BDLX. <sup>4</sup> ζητῶν καρπὸν in all uncials.

<sup>5</sup> ἔτη  $\mathfrak{N}$ BDLT have ἀφ' οὗ (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>6</sup> κοπρία in  $\mathfrak{N}$ ABLT al. pl. (Tisch., W.H.). D has κοφινὸν κοπριῶν (W.H. marg.).

<sup>7</sup> εἰς τὸ μέλλον before εἰ δὲ μὴγε in  $\mathfrak{N}$ BLT 33, 69, a better arrangement.

men and evil to good men. To our Lord it would not have appeared impossible that some of the best men in Israel might be involved in the two calamities here mentioned.

Vv. 6-9. Parable of the barren fig tree, peculiar to Lk., probably extemporised to embody the moral of the preceding narratives; takes the place in Lk. of the cursing of the fig tree in Mt. and Mk.—Ver. 6. Συκὴν εἶχεν τις: a fig tree, quite appropriate and common in corners of a vineyard, yet not the main plant in such a place; selected rather than a vine to represent Israel, by way of protest against assumed inalienable privilege. "Perish," Jesus had said once and again (vv. 3 and 5). Some hearers might think: What! the Lord's elect people perish? Yes, replies Jesus in effect, like a barren fig tree cast out of a vineyard, where at best it has but a subordinate place.—Ver. 7. ἀμπελοργόν, the vine-dresser (ἄμπελος, ἔργον) here only in N.T.—Ἰδοῦ, lo! as of one who has a right to complain.—τρία ἔτη, three years, reckoned not from the planting of the tree (it is three years after planting that it begins to bear fruit), but from the time that it might have been expected in ordinary course to yield a crop of figs. Three years is not a long period, but enough to determine whether it is going to be fruit-bearing, the one thing it is there for. In the spiritual sphere in national life that cannot be determined so soon. It may take as many thousand years.—ἔρχομαι, I keep coming, the progressive present. The master comes not merely once a year, but again and again within the year, at the seasons when fruit may be found on a fig tree (Hahn). Cf. δουλεύω in xv. 29.—οὐχ εὕρισκω, I do not find it. I come and come and am always disappointed. Hence the impatient ἔκκοψον, cut it out (from the root).—ἵνα τί καὶ: καὶ points to a second ground of complaint. Besides bearing no fruit it occupies space which might be more profitably filled.—καταργεῖ (here and in Paul's epistles), renders useless; Vulgate, occupat, practically if not verbally the right rendering. A barren fig tree renders the land useless by occupying valuable space.—Ver. 8. τοῦτο τὸ ἔτος, one year more; he has not courage to propose a longer time to an impatient owner.—κόπρια (neuter plural from adjective κόπριος), dung stuffs. A natural proposal, but sometimes fertility is better promoted by starving, cutting roots, so preventing a tree from running to wood.—Ver. 9. εἰς τὸ μέλλον: if it bear the coming year—well (εὖ ἔχει understood).—ἐκκόψεις, if not, thou shalt cut it down—thou, not I. It depends on the master, though the vine-dresser tacitly recognises that the decision will be just. He sympathises with the master's desire for fruit. Of course when the barren tree is removed another will be planted in its place. The parable points to the truth taught in ver. 29.

11. καὶ ἰδοῦ, γυνὴ ἦν<sup>1</sup> πνεῦμα ἔχουσα ἀσθενείας ἔτη δέκα καὶ<sup>2</sup> ὀκτώ, καὶ ἦν συγκύπτουσα, καὶ μὴ δυναμένη ἀνακύψαι εἰς τὸ παντελές. 12. ἰδὼν δὲ αὐτὴν ὁ Ἰησοῦς προσεφώνησε, καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῇ, “Γύναι, ἀπολέλυσαι τῆς ἀσθενείας σου.” 13. Καὶ ἐπέθηκεν αὐτῇ τὰς χεῖρας· καὶ παραχρήμα ἀνωρθώθη, καὶ ἐδόξαζε τὸν Θεόν. 14. Ἀποκριθεὶς δὲ ὁ ἀρχισυνάγωγος, ἀγανακτῶν ὅτι τῷ σαββάτῳ ἐθεράπευσεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, ἔλεγε τῷ ὄχλῳ,<sup>3</sup> “Ἐξ ἡμέραι εἰσίν, ἐν αἷς δεῖ ἐργάζεσθαι· ἐν ταύταις<sup>4</sup> οὖν ἐρχόμενοι θεραπεύεσθε, καὶ μὴ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ τοῦ σαββάτου.” 15. Ἀπεκρίθη οὖν<sup>5</sup> αὐτῷ ὁ Κύριος, καὶ εἶπεν, “Ὑποκριτά,<sup>6</sup> ἕκαστος ὑμῶν τῷ σαββάτῳ οὐ λύει τὸν βῶν αὐτοῦ ἢ τὸν ὄνον ἀπὸ τῆς φάτνης, καὶ ἀπαγαγὼν<sup>7</sup> ποτίζει; 16. ταύτην δέ, θυγατέρα Ἀβραὰμ οὖσαν, ἦν ἔδησεν ὁ Σατανᾶς, ἰδοῦ, δέκα καὶ ὀκτὼ ἔτη, οὐκ ἔδει λυθῆναι ἀπὸ τοῦ δεσμοῦ τούτου τῇ

<sup>1</sup> Omit ἦν NBLT 33 al. verss.

<sup>2</sup> After οχλω NBL insert στι.

<sup>3</sup> For οὖν NBDL 1, 69 al. have δα.

<sup>7</sup> NB have ἀπαγων (W.H. text).

<sup>2</sup> Omit καὶ NBT 1, 209.

<sup>4</sup> αὐταις in NABLT.

<sup>6</sup> ὑποκριται in NBLT, etc.

Vv. 10-17. Cure in a synagogue on a Sabbath day, peculiar to Lk.—Ver. 10. ἐν τοῖς σάββασι: may mean on Sabbaths (Hahn, who refers to the discriminating use of singular and plural in Lk.) and imply a course of instruction in a particular synagogue for weeks.—Ver. 11. πνεῦμα ἀσθενείας: the Jews saw the action of a foreign power in every form of disease which presented the aspect of the sufferer's will being overmastered. In this case the woman was bent and could not straighten herself when she tried.—συγκύπτουσα, bent together, here only in N.T.—εἰς τὸ παντελές goes with ἀνακύψαι, and implies either that she could not erect her head, or body at all, or entirely. The former is more in keeping with the idea of bondage to a foreign spirit (Schanz). Similar use of the phrase in Heb. vii. 25.—Ver. 12. προσεφώνησε: Jesus, ever prompt to sympathise, called her to Him when His eye lit upon the bent figure.—ἀπολέλυσαι: perfect for future, the thing as good as done; spoken to cheer the downcast woman while she approaches. The cure was consummated by touch when she came up to Jesus (ver. 13), whereupon the eighteen years' sufferer burst into praise: ἐδόξαζε τὸν Θεόν. A lifelike moving scene.—Ver. 14. But religious propriety in the person of the ruler of the synagogue is once more shocked: it is a Sabbath cure.

—ἔλεγε τῷ ὄχλῳ: He spoke to the audience at Jesus—plausibly enough; yet, as so often in cases of religious zeal, from mixed motives. Christ's power and the woman's praise annoyed him.—Ver. 15. ὑποκριταί: plural less personal than the singular (T.R.), yet severe enough, though directed against the class. The case put was doubtless according to the prevailing custom, and so stated as to make the work done prominent (λύει, looses, that one bit of work: ἀπάγων, leading the animal loosed to the water, that another, vide Bengel).—ποτίζει, gives him drink, at least to the extent of drawing water from the well, if not of carrying it to the animal's mouth (the former allowed, the latter disallowed in the Talmud, vide Lightfoot and Wünsche).—Ver. 16. The case of the woman described so as to suggest a parallel and contrast: a daughter of Abraham versus an ox or ass; bound by Satan, not merely by a chain round the neck; for eighteen years, not for a few hours. The contrast the basis of a strong a fortiori argument. The reply is thoroughly in the spirit of Jesus, and the whole incident, though peculiar to Lk., is a credible reminiscence of His ministry; whether placed in its true historical setting is a matter of minor moment.—Ver. 17. The religious leaders and the people behave according to their character; the former ashamed, not af ἡμέρα τοῦ σαββάτου;” 17. Καὶ ταῦτα λέγοντος αὐτοῦ, κατησχύοντο πάντες οἱ ἀντικείμενοι αὐτῷ· καὶ πᾶς ὁ ὄχλος ἔχαιρεν ἐπὶ πᾶσι τοῖς ἐνδόξοις τοῖς γινομένοις ὑπ’ αὐτοῦ.

18. Ἐλεγε δέ,<sup>1</sup> “Τίνι ὁμοία ἐστὶν ἡ βασιλεία τοῦ Θεοῦ; καὶ τίνι ὁμοιώσω αὐτήν; 19. Ὅμοία ἐστὶ κόκκῳ σινάπεως, ὃν λαβὼν ἄνθρωπος ἔβαλεν εἰς κῆπον ἑαυτοῦ· καὶ ἤξησεν, καὶ ἐγένετο εἰς δένδρον μέγα,<sup>2</sup> καὶ τὰ πετεινὰ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ κατεσκήνωσεν ἐν τοῖς κλάδοις αὐτοῦ.” 20. Καὶ πάλιν εἶπε, “Τίνι ὁμοιώσω τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ; 21. Ὅμοία ἐστὶ ζύμη, ἣν λαβοῦσα γυνὴ ἐνέκρυψεν<sup>3</sup> εἰς ἀλεύρου σάτα τρία, ἕως οὗ ἔξυμῶθη ὄλον.”

22. ΚΑΙ διεπορεύετο κατὰ πόλεις καὶ κώμας διδάσκων, καὶ

<sup>1</sup> For δε NBL 1, 13, 69 al. have ουν.

<sup>2</sup> NBDLT codd. vet. Lat. syr. cur. omit μεγα, added by scribes in a spirit of exaggeration.

<sup>3</sup> ἐκρυψεν in BL minusc. (Tisch., W.H.).

convinced but as confounded, the latter delighted both by the works and by the words of Jesus.

Vv. 18-21. The parables of the mustard seed and the leaven (Mt. xiii. 31-33, Mk. iv. 30-32). Lk. may have introduced these parables here either because the joy of the people was in his view the occasion of their being spoken, Jesus taking it as a good omen for the future, or because he found in his source the two things, the cure and the parabolic speech, recorded together as incidents of the same meeting in the synagogue. In either case it is implied that the parables were spoken in a synagogue, in the latter case as a part of a regular synagogue address. This is the interesting feature in Lk.'s report of these parables. It is the only instance in which parables are connected with synagogue addresses as their occasion. The connection is every way credible, both from the nature of the two parables, and from the fact that Jesus was wont to speak to the people in parables. How many unrecorded parables He must have spoken in His synagogue addresses on His preaching tour through Galilee, e.g. (Mk. i. 39).—Ver. 19. κῆπον, garden, more exact indication of place than in Mt. and Mk.—δένδρον, a tree; an exaggeration, it remains an herb, though of unusually large size.—Ver. 20. The parable of the leaven is given as in Mt. The point of both is that the Kingdom of Heaven, insignificant to begin with, will become great. In the mind of the evangelist both have probably a reference to Gentile Christianity.

Vv. 22-30. Are there few that be saved? This section is a mosaic of words found dispersed in the pages of Mt.: the strait gate (ver. 24) in Mt. vii. 14; the pleading for admission (vv. 26, 27) recalls Mt. vii. 21-23; the exclusion from the kingdom (vv. 28, 29) reproduces Mt. viii. 11, 12; the apothegm in ver. 30 = Mt. xix. 30, xx. 16. The parabolic word concerning the master of the house (ver. 25) seems to be an echo from the parable of the ten virgins. The question as to the number of the saved introducing the group need not be an artificial heading furnished by Lk. or the compiler of his source.

Ver. 22 is a historical notice serving to recall the general situation indicated in ix. 51. So again in xvii. 11. “Luke gives us to understand that it is always the same journey which goes on with incidents analogous to those of the preceding cycle,” Godet. Hahn, however, maintains that here begins a new division of the history and a new journey to Jerusalem, yet not the final one. This division extends from this point to xvii. 10, and contains (1) words of Jesus on the way to Jerusalem (xiii. 22-35), (2) words spoken probably in Jerusalem (xiv. 1-24), (3) words spoken after the return to Galilee.—διδάσκων, teaching; the main occupation of Jesus as He went from village to village. The long section from ix. 51 to xviii. 14 is chiefly didactic in contents, though an occasional healing is recorded.—καὶ πορ. ποι., the καὶ is epexegetic = and at the same time; His face set towards Jerusalem as He taught.

πορείαν ποιούμενος εἰς Ἱερουσαλήμ.<sup>1</sup> 23. εἶπε δέ τις αὐτῷ, "Κύριε, εἰ ὀλίγοι οἱ σωζόμενοι;" Ὁ δὲ εἶπε πρὸς αὐτούς, 24. "Ἀγωνίζεσθε εἰσελθεῖν διὰ τῆς στενῆς πύλης.<sup>2</sup> ὅτι πολλοί, λέγω ὑμῖν, ζητήσουσιν εἰσελθεῖν, καὶ οὐκ ἰσχύσουσιν. 25. Ἄφ' οὗ ἂν ἐγερθῇ ὁ οἰκοδεσπότης, καὶ ἀποκλείσῃ τὴν θύραν, καὶ ἄρξησθε ἔξω ἐστάναι καὶ κρούειν τὴν θύραν, λέγοντες, Κύριε, Κύριε,<sup>3</sup> ἄνοιξον ἡμῖν· καὶ ἀποκριθεὶς ἐρεῖ ὑμῖν, Οὐκ οἶδα ὑμᾶς, πόθεν ἐστέ· 26. τότε ἄρξεσθε<sup>4</sup> λέγειν, Ἐφάγομεν ἐνώπιόν σου καὶ ἐπίομεν, καὶ ἐν ταῖς

<sup>1</sup> Ἱεροσόλυμα in  $\mathfrak{N}$ BL.

<sup>2</sup> θυρας in  $\mathfrak{N}$ BDL 1, 131 Orig.

<sup>3</sup> Omit second κυρ.  $\mathfrak{N}$ BL 157 Lat. and Egypt. verss.

<sup>4</sup> B has ἀρξεσθε (Tisch., W.H., text), but  $\mathfrak{N}$ DLT and many more have ἀρξησθε (W.H. marg.).

Vv. 23-24. εἰ ὀλ. οἱ σωζ.: εἰ introduces a direct question as in Mt. xii. 10 and Lk. xxii. 49: are those who are being saved few?—πρὸς αὐτούς, to them, not to the questioner merely but to all present, as the reply was of general concern.—Ver. 24. ἀγωνίζεσθε εἰς.: stronger than Mt.'s εἰσέλθετε, suggesting the idea of a struggle or prize-fight (1 Cor. ix. 25) in which only a few can win, so virtually answering the question in the affirmative.—διὰ τ. σ. θύρας, through the narrow door (πύλης, gate, in Mt.): no interpretation of the door here any more than in Mt. But the connection suggests repentance (vv. 23, 25). The Kingdom of Heaven is here conceived of as a house.—πολλοί: the idea is that many shall desire admission and shall not obtain it. The reason in the parable is the narrowness of the door, making it impossible for so many to get in in a short time. All are in earnest; no stress is to be laid on ζητήσουσιν, shall seek, as if it meant something less than ἀγωνίζεσθε (Godet). All strive, but success is for the strongest who can push the weaker aside. So in the parable. In the interpretation the one point to be insisted on is: be in dead earnest.

Vv. 25-27. Here begins a new parable and a new sentence, though some (Beza, Lachmann, W. and H.) connect with what goes before, putting a comma after ἰσχύσουσιν. Against this is not only the change from the third person to the second (ἄρξησθε), but the fact that the cause of exclusion is different: not the narrowness of the door, but coming too late. The case put now is that of the master of a house who is giving an entertainment. He waits for a certain time to receive his guests. At length, deeming that all are, or ought to be, present, he rises and shuts the door, after which no one can be admitted. Some, however, come later, knock at the door, and are refused admission. The moral of this parable is distinct; of the former parable it was: be in earnest; of this it is: be not too late.—ἐστάναι καὶ κρούειν: both verbs depend on ἄρξησθε: ye begin to stand without and to knock. Some take ἐστάναι as = a participle, but it is better to take it as denoting a first stage in the action of those arriving late. At first they expect that the door will be opened soon as a matter of course, and that they have nothing to do but to step in. By-and-by they find it will be necessary to knock, and finally, being refused admission even when the door is opened, they are fain to plead (ver. 26).—καὶ ἀποκριθεὶς: the καὶ here has the force of then. The sense would have been clearer had it been omitted. Here properly begins the apodosis of the sentence and the close of the parable proper = then he answering will say: I do not know you.—πόθεν ἐστέ: these added words rather weaken than strengthen the laconic οὐκ οἶδα ὑμᾶς of Mt. xxv. 12 = you must be strangers, not of those invited.—Ver. 26. This verse is viewed by many as the apodosis of a long sentence beginning with ἀφ' οὗ (ver. 25), and the emotional character of the passage, in which parable and moral are blended, goes far to justify them. But it is better on the whole to find here a new start.—ἐνώπιόν σου, before thee, either, as thy guests or hosts (Capernaum feast, dinners in the houses of Pharisees), i.e., with thee; or. under thine eye—inπλατείαις ἡμῶν ἐδίδαξας. 27. καὶ ἐρεῖ, Λέγω<sup>1</sup> ὑμῖν, οὐκ οἶδα ὑμᾶς,<sup>2</sup> πόθεν ἐστέ· ἀπόστητε ἀπ' ἐμοῦ πάντες οἱ<sup>3</sup> ἐργάται τῆς<sup>3</sup> ἀδικίας. 28. ἐκεῖ ἔσται ὁ κλαυθμὸς καὶ ὁ βρυγμὸς τῶν ὀδόντων, ὅταν ὄψῃσθε<sup>4</sup> Ἀβραὰμ καὶ Ἰσαὰκ καὶ Ἰακώβ καὶ πάντας τοὺς προφήτας ἐν τῇ βασιλείᾳ τοῦ Θεοῦ, ὑμᾶς δὲ ἐκβαλλομένους ἔξω· 29. καὶ ἤξουσιν ἀπὸ ἀνατολῶν καὶ δυσμῶν, καὶ ἀπὸ βορρᾶ καὶ νότου, καὶ ἀνακλιθήσονται ἐν τῇ βασιλείᾳ τοῦ Θεοῦ. 30. καὶ ἰδοῦ, εἰσὶν ἔσχατοι οἱ ἔσονται πρῶτοι, καὶ εἰσι πρῶτοι οἱ ἔσονται ἔσχατοι.”

31. Ἐν αὐτῇ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ<sup>5</sup> προσῆλθόν τινες Φαρισαῖοι, λέγοντες αὐτῷ, “Ἐξέλθε καὶ πορεύου ἐντεῦθεν, ὅτι Ἡρώδης θέλει σε ἀπο-

<sup>1</sup> For λεγω BT have λεγων (W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> Omit ὑμας BLRT minusc.

<sup>3</sup>  $\aleph$ B $\Delta$ L al. omit οἱ, and  $\aleph$ BLR omit τῆς. So D also, but with ἀνομίας.

<sup>4</sup> ὄψεσθε in BDX 69 al.

<sup>5</sup> ὡρα in  $\aleph$ B $\Delta$ LX al. (Tisch., W.H.).

volving a claim simply of neighbourhood. The former is the more likely, because it puts the case more strongly in their favour.—Ver. 27. οὐκ οἶδα, etc.: the same answer, iteration cum emphasi (Bengel).—ἀπόστητε, etc.: nearly as in Mt. vii. 23. This answer goes entirely out of the parable into the moral sphere. In the parable exclusion is due to arriving too late; in the spiritual sphere to character.—ἀδικίας, Mt. has ἀνομίαν, lawlessness. Against the tendency-criticism Schanz remarks: “ἀνομία in Mt. is Jewish-Christian but not anti-Pauline, ἀδικία Pauline but not anti-Jewish”.

Vv. 28-30. Concluding reflections.—Ver. 28. ἐκεῖ, there; then, according to Euthy. Zig. (τότε, ἐν ἐκείνῳ τῷ καιρῷ). Kuinoel also takes it as an adverb of time in accordance with Hebraistic usage, and Bornemann cites instances from Greek authors of the same use of adverbs of place as adverbs of time. But there is not only verbally correct, but graphic: there, outside the door of the house where patriarchs and prophets feast, shall the excluded weep and gnash their teeth, all the more because they think they have a right, as belonging to the chosen race, to be within.—Ver. 29 points to an aggravation of the misery of the outcasts: men coming from every quarter of the globe to join the festive company and finding admission. The shut door and the too late arrival are now out of view, and for the private house of the parable is substituted the Kingdom of God which it represents. It is needless to ask whether Mt. or Lk. has given this saying in its true place. Perhaps neither has The important point is their joint testimony to the saying as a true utterance of Jesus.—Ver. 30. The same remark applies to this saying. As it stands here it refers to Jews as the first who become last, and to Gentiles as the last who become first, and the distinction between first and last is not one of degree, but absolute = within and without.

Vv. 31-33. Warning against Herod by Pharisees, peculiar to Lk., but Mk. (iii. 6, viii. 15) has prepared us for combined action of court and religious coteries against Jesus similar to that against Amos (vii. 10-13), both alike eager to be rid of Him as endangering their power.—Ver. 31. ἐξέλθε: xvii. 11 shows that Lk. did not attach critical importance to this incident as a cause of Christ's final departure from Galilee.—θέλει σε ἀποκτείνειν: was this a lie, an inference, a message sent by Herod in order to intimidate, or a fact which had somehow come to the knowledge of the reporters? It is impossible to ascertain. The answer of Jesus seems to imply that He regarded the Pharisees as messengers, and also innocent tools of the crafty king. But He answers according to the ex facie character of the message, that of friends warning against a foe, while probably having His own thoughts as to where the craft and the enmity lay. The one thing certain is that there was low cunning somewhere. The king was using the Pharisees, or the Pharisees the king, or perhaps they were both playing the same game. Possibly the evangelist viewed the Pharisees as friends.—Ver. 32. τῇ ἀλώπεκι ταύτῃ, this fox; the fox revealed in this business, ostensibly the

κτείναι.” 32. Καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Πορευθέντες εἶπατε τῇ ἀλώπεκι ταύτῃ, Ἰδοῦ, ἐκβάλλω δαιμόνια καὶ ἰάσεις ἐπιτελῶ<sup>1</sup> σήμερον καὶ αὔριον, καὶ τῇ τρίτῃ τελειοῦμαι. 33. πλὴν δεῖ με σήμερον καὶ αὔριον καὶ τῇ ἐχομένῃ πορεύεσθαι· ὅτι οὐκ ἐνδέχεται προφήτην ἀπολέσθαι ἔξω Ἱερουσαλήμ. 34. Ἱερουσαλήμ, Ἱερουσαλήμ, ἡ ἀποκτείνουσα τοὺς προφήτας, καὶ λιθοβολοῦσα τοὺς ἀπεσταλμένους πρὸς αὐτήν, ποσάκις ἠθέλησα ἐπισυνάξει τὰ τέκνα σου, ὃν τρόπον ὄρνις τὴν ἑαυτῆς νοσσιὰν ὑπὸ τὰς πτέρυγας, καὶ οὐκ ἠθελήσατε. 35. Ἰδοῦ, ἀφίεται ὑμῖν ὁ οἶκος ὑμῶν ἔρημος<sup>2</sup>. ἀμὴν δὲ λέγω<sup>3</sup> ὑμῖν, ὅτι<sup>4</sup> οὐ μὴ με<sup>5</sup> ἴδητε ἕως ἂν ἴξῃ, ὅτε<sup>5</sup> εἴπητε, Εὐλογημένος ὁ ἐρχόμενος ἐν ὀνόματι Κυρίου.”

<sup>1</sup> ἀποτελῶ in  $\aleph$ BL 33, 124 (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup>  $\aleph$ ABKL al. verss. omit ἔρημος, found in DXΔ 33 al.

<sup>3</sup> λέγω δε (for ἀμην δε λεγ. in minusc.) in BDX al. (W.H. with δε in brackets). Simply λέγω in  $\aleph$ L (Tisch.).

<sup>4</sup> Omit ὅτι  $\aleph$ BDL (W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> For με ἴδητε  $\aleph$ B have ἴδητε με; for ἕως ἂν BDL have ἕως;  $\aleph$ BL omit ἣξῃ ὅτε, which may be conformed to Mt.

king, but in a roundabout way the would-be friends may be hit at (Euthy. Zig.). The quality denoted by the name is doubtless cunning, though there is no clear instance of the use of the fox as the type of cunning in the Scriptures elsewhere.—σήμερον, etc.: this note of time is not to be taken strictly. Jesus is in the prophetic mood and speaks in prophetic style: to-day, to-morrow, and the third day symbolise a short time.—τελειοῦμαι as to form may be either middle or passive. If middle it will mean: finish my healing (and teaching) ministry in Herod's territory (Galilee and Peraea). This meaning suits the connection, but against it is the fact that the verb is never used in a middle sense in N.T., and very rarely in classics. Taken passively it will mean: I am perfected by a martyr's death (Heb. xi. 40, xii. 23). Commentators are much divided between these meanings.—Ver. 33. πλὴν, for the rest, or, on the other hand, introducing the other side of the case = I must work still for a little space, yet I must keep moving on southwards, as the proper place for a prophet to die is Jerusalem, not Galilee. The second note of time (σήμερον) coincides with the first: work and moving southwards go hand in hand.—οὐκ ἐνδέχεται, it is not fitting (here only in N.T., cf. xvii. 1). John was murdered in Machaerus, but that was an offence against the fitness of things. The reply of Jesus is full of dignity and pathos. In effect He says: I am not to be driven out of Galilee by threats. I will work till the hour comes. Nevertheless keep your minds easy, princes and Pharisees! I must soon endure a prophet's fate, and not here. I go to meet it in the proper place, though not in fear of you.

Vv. 34, 35. Apostrophe to Jerusalem (Mt. xxiii. 37, 38), suitably introduced here as in sympathy with the preceding utterance, though not likely to have been spoken at this time and place, as indeed it is not alleged to have been. It is given nearly as in Mt.—τὴν νοσσιὰν (for τὰ νοσσία in Mt.) = a nest (nidum suum, Vulgate), hence the young in the nest. Vide remarks on Mt., ad loc.

CHAPTER XIV. TABLE TALK AND A CONCIO AD POPULUM.—Vv. 1-24 contain a digest of sayings of Jesus at the table of a Pharisee, this being the third instance in this Gospel of such friendly intercourse between Him and members of the Pharisaic party. The remaining part of the chapter consists of solemn words on self-sacrifice and on counting the cost represented as addressed to the people.

Vv. 1-6. The dropsical man healed, with relative conversation, in Lk. only (cf. Mt. xii. 9-14).—Ver. 1. ἐν τῷ ἐλθεῖν, etc.: the indication of place and time is very vague so as to lend plausibility to the suggestion that the introduction is

XIV. 1. ΚΑΙ ἐγένετο ἐν τῷ ἔλθειν αὐτὸν εἰς οἶκόν τινος τῶν ἀρχόντων τῶν Φαρισαίων σαββάτῳ φαγεῖν ἄρτον, καὶ αὐτοὶ ἦσαν παρατηρούμενοι αὐτόν. 2. καὶ ἰδοὺ, ἄνθρωπός τις ἦν ὑδρωπικὸς ἔμπροσθεν αὐτοῦ· 3. καὶ ἀποκριθεὶς ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπε πρὸς τοὺς νομικοὺς καὶ Φαρισαίους, λέγων, “Εἰ<sup>1</sup> ἔξεστι τῷ σαββάτῳ θεραπεύειν<sup>2</sup> ;” 4. Οἱ δὲ ἠσύχασαν. καὶ ἐπιλαβόμενος ἰάσατο αὐτόν, καὶ ἀπέλυσε. 5. καὶ ἀποκριθεὶς<sup>3</sup> πρὸς αὐτοὺς εἶπε, “Τίνος ὑμῶν ὄνος<sup>4</sup> ἢ βοῦς εἰς φρέαρ ἔμπροσθέν<sup>5</sup> καὶ οὐκ εὐθέως ἀνασπάσει αὐτὸν ἐν τῇ<sup>6</sup> ἡμέρᾳ τοῦ σαββάτου ;” 6. Καὶ οὐκ ἴσχυσαν ἀνταποκριθῆναι αὐτῷ<sup>7</sup> πρὸς ταῦτα.

<sup>1</sup> NBDL 59 omit ei.

<sup>2</sup> NBDL I, 13, 69 al. codd. Lat. vet. add η ου after θεραπευειν (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> BDL omit αποκριθεις.

<sup>4</sup> For ονος (N LX I, 33) B al. have υιος. D has προβατον. Syr. cur. has all three: υιος η βους η ονος (Baethgen). Vide below.

<sup>5</sup> προσπειται in NABL I, 13, 69 al.

<sup>6</sup> Omit τη NB.

<sup>7</sup> Omit αυτω NBDL minusc.

extracted from the parabolic speeches, vv. 7-24 (Holtzmann, H. C.).—ἀρχόντων τ. Φ., the house is described as that of one of the rulers of the Pharisees, an inexact expression, as the Pharisees as such had no rulers, being all on a level. Omitting the article before Φαρ. (as in B) we might take this word as in apposition and render: one of the rulers, Pharisees; rulers meaning the Sanhedrists, and Pharisees denoting their religious tendency (so Grotius, who therefore thinks the scene was in Jerusalem).—σαββάτῳ φαγεῖν ἄρτον: feasting on Sabbath was common among the Jews, ex pietate et religione (Lightfoot), but the dishes were cold, cooked the day before.—καί, introducing the apodosis, and the main fact the suspicious observation of Jesus by those present at the meal (αὐτοί). Altogether a strange situation: Jesus the guest of a great man among the Pharisees, as if held in honour, yet there to be watched rather than treated as a friend; simple-hearted geniality on one side, insincerity on the other.

Vv. 2-6. ὑδρωπικὸς (ὑδρωψ): here only in N.T., a solitary instance of this disease among the healing acts of Jesus. No conceivable reason for its being mentioned except that it was a fact.—ἔμπροσθεν αὐτοῦ, before Him, so that He could not fail to see him; how there—as guest, as brought by the Pharisees to tempt Jesus, come there of his own motion in hope to be cured, though not asking out of reverence for the Sabbath and in fear of its strict guardians (Euthy. Zig.)—not indicated.—Ver. 3. ἀποκριθεὶς: Jesus addresses Himself to the double situation; on the one hand a sick man dumbly appealing for help, on the other jealous religionists aware of His free habit and expecting eccentric speech and action open to censure.—ἔξεστιν, etc.: first He asks a question as to the legality of Sabbath healing in a tone which amounts to an affirmative assertion, allowed to pass uncontradicted (ἠσύχασαν); then He proceeds to answer His own question by healing the man (ver. 4), and finally He offers an apology for the act.—Ver. 5. τίνος ὑμῶν, etc.: an awkward Hebraistic construction for τίς ὑμῶν οὐ, etc.—οὐδὲς ἢ βοῦς, a son or (even) an ox, in either case, certainly in the former, natural instinct would be too strong for artificial Sabbath rules.—φρέαρ, a well, or cistern, an illustration as apt to the nature of the malady as that of the ox loosed from the stall in xiii. 15 (Godet).—εὐθέως, at once, unhesitatingly, without thought of Sabbath rules. The emphasis lies on this word.—Ver. 6. οὐκ ἴσ. ἀνταποκριθῆναι (again in Rom. ix. 20): silenced but of course not convinced. The difference in the way of thinking too great to be overcome in a moment.

Luke has three Sabbath cures. The present one has no very distinctive features. The accumulation may point to a desire to help weak Christians to

7. Ἐλεγε δὲ πρὸς τοὺς κεκλημένους παραβολήν, ἡ ἐπέχων πῶς τὰς πρωτοκλισίας ἐξελέγοντο, λέγων πρὸς αὐτοὺς, 8. "Ὅταν κληθῆς ὑπό τινος εἰς γάμους, μὴ κατακληθῆς εἰς τὴν πρωτοκλισίαν· μήποτε ἐντιμότερός σου ἢ κεκλημένος ὑπ' αὐτοῦ, 9. καὶ ἐλθὼν ὁ σέ καὶ αὐτὸν καλέσας ἔρεῖ σοι, Δὸς τούτῳ τόπον· καὶ τότε ἄρξῃ μετ' αἰσχύνης τὸν ἔσχατον τόπον κατέχειν. 10. ἀλλ' ὅταν κληθῆς, πορευθεὶς ἀνάπεσον<sup>1</sup> εἰς τὸν ἔσχατον τόπον· ἵνα, ὅταν ἔλθῃ ὁ κεκληκὼς σε, εἴπῃ<sup>2</sup> σοι, Φίλε, ἡ προσανάβηθι ἀνώτερον· τότε ἔσται σοι δόξα ἐνώπιον<sup>3</sup> τῶν συνανακειμένων σοί. 11. ὅτι πᾶς ὁ ὑψῶν ἑαυτὸν ταπεινωθήσεται· καὶ ὁ ταπεινῶν ἑαυτὸν ὑψωθήσεται."

b here only
in N.T.

12. Ἐλεγε δὲ καὶ τῷ κεκληκῶτι αὐτόν, "Ὅταν ποιῆς ἄριστον ἢ δεῖπνον, μὴ φῶναι τοὺς φίλους σου, μηδὲ τοὺς ἀδελφούς σου, μηδὲ τοὺς συγγενεῖς σου, μηδὲ γείτονας πλουσίου· μήποτε καὶ αὐτοὶ σε get above their scruples by an appeal to the Master (Schanz). In the first and second cases the principle of Christ's defence is indicated: it is lawful to do good (vi. 9); you may do for a man, a fortiori, what it is lawful to do for a beast (xiii. 15). In the present case it is not indicated. It may be: you may do for another what you all do for your own, son or ox (Meyer, J. Weiss); or if need is a valid plea in any case, it is valid in all cases (Schanz).

<sup>1</sup> ἀναπεσε in  $\aleph$ B al.

<sup>2</sup> ερει in  $\aleph$ BLX minusc.

<sup>3</sup> παντων after ενωπιον in  $\aleph$ ABLX verss.

Vv. 7-11. Take the lowest seat. Here begins the table talk of Jesus, consisting of three discourses. The first addressed to the guests in general is really a parable teaching the lesson of humility pointed in ver. 11. "Through the medium of a counsel of prudence relating to ordinary social life He communicates a lesson of true wisdom concerning the higher sphere of religion" (The Parabolic Teaching of Christ).—Ver. 7. ἐπέχων, observing. Euthy. renders: μεμφομένος, blaming, in itself a legitimate meaning but not compatible with πῶς. The practice observed—choosing the chief places—was characteristic of Pharisees (Mt. xxiii. 6), but it is a vice to which all are prone.—Ver. 8. γάμους, a marriage feast, here representing all great social functions at which ambition for distinction is called into play.—ἐντιμότερός σου: this does not necessarily denote one of known superior social standing, but may mean simply one held in more honour by the host (Hahn).—Ver. 9. ἐλθὼν ὁ, etc.: the guests are supposed to have taken their places before the host comes in.—ἄρξῃ: the shame would be most acutely felt at the beginning of the movement from the highest to the lowest place (Meyer).—τ. ἔσχατον τ., the lowest place just vacated by the honoured guest, who is humble in spirit though highly esteemed, who therefore in his own person exemplifies the honour and glory of being called up by the host from the lowest to the highest place.—Ver. 10. προσανάβηθι ἀνώτερον: "go up higher," A.V. and R.V.; better "come up higher," which gives effect to the πρὸς. The master invites the host to come towards himself. So Field (Ot. Nor.).—Ver. 11: the moral of the parable; a great law of the Kingdom of God dear to the heart of the Pauline evangelist, recurring in xviii. 14.

Vv. 12-14. A word to the host, also parabolic in character in so far as it gives general counsel under a concrete particular form (Hahn), but not parabolic in the strict sense of teaching spiritual truth by natural examples.—Ver. 12. φωνεῖν used for καλεῖν in Hellenistic Greek (Farrar, C. G. T.), denoting formal ceremonious invitation as on a great occasion (Hahn).—τοὺς φίλους, etc.: four classes likely to be asked on ordinary social grounds are named—personal intimates, brethren, relations (these two form one category), and rich neighbours. The epithet πλουσίου belongs to the last class alone. Friends and relatives are called because they are such. Mere neighbours are called ἀντικαλέσωσι,<sup>1</sup> καὶ γένηταί σοι ἁναπαδόμα.<sup>1</sup> 13. ἀλλ' ὅταν ποιῆς c Rom. xi. 9. δοχὴν,<sup>2</sup> κάλει πτωχοὺς, ἀναπήρους, χωλοὺς, τυφλοὺς. 14. καὶ μακάριος ἔσῃ. ὅτι οὐκ ἔχουσιν ἀναποδοῦναί σοι. ἀναποδοθήσεται γάρ σοι ἐν τῇ ἀναστάσει τῶν δικαίων.”

15. Ἀκούσας δέ τις τῶν συνανακειμένων ταῦτα εἶπεν αὐτῷ, “Μακάριος, ὃς<sup>3</sup> φάγεται ἄρτον ἐν τῇ βασιλείᾳ τοῦ Θεοῦ.” 16. Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, “Ἀνθρωπὸς τις ἐποίησε<sup>4</sup> δεῖπνον μέγα, καὶ ἐκάλεσε πολλοὺς. 17. καὶ ἀπέστειλε τὸν δούλον αὐτοῦ τῇ ὥρᾳ τοῦ δεῖπνου εἰπεῖν τοῖς κεκλημένοις, Ἔρχεσθε, ὅτι ἤδη ἔτοιμά ἐστι<sup>5</sup> πάντα.<sup>6</sup> 18. Καὶ ἤρξαντο ἀπὸ μιᾶς παραιτεῖσθαι πάντες.<sup>7</sup> ὁ πρῶτος εἶπεν αὐτῷ, Ἄγρὸν ἠγόρασα, καὶ ἔχω ἀνάγκην ἐξελθεῖν καὶ<sup>8</sup> ἰδεῖν αὐτόν. ἔρωτῶ σε, ἔχε με παρητημένον. 19. καὶ ἕτερος εἶπε, Ζεῦγῃ βοῶν ἠγόρασα πέντε, καὶ πορεύομαι δοκιμάσαι αὐτά. ἔρωτῶ σε, ἔχε με

<sup>1</sup> σε after ἀντικαλ. in ΞBDLR 1, 69 al., and σοι after ἀναπα.

<sup>2</sup> ΞB have δοχην ποιῆς.

<sup>3</sup> οστις in Ξ<sup>a</sup>BLPRX 1, 13, 69 al.

<sup>4</sup> εποιεῖ in ΞBR 1.

<sup>5</sup> εἰσι in ΞLR (Tisch., W.H., marg.); ἐστι (T.R.) in BDX (W.H. text).

<sup>6</sup> Omit πάντα ΞBLR.

<sup>7</sup> παντες παραι. in ΞBDLRX 1 verss.

<sup>8</sup> For ἐξελθεῖν καὶ ΞBDL have simply ἐξελθων.

only because they are rich, or, more generally, socially important.—μήποτε, lest, presenting return invitations (ἀντικαλεῖν, here only in N.T.) as an object of dread, a fear unknown to the world. (Hic metus mundo ignotus, Bengel.)—Ver. 13. δοχὴν, the same word used by Lk. in reference to the feast in Levi's house, which was a gathering of the sort here recommended by Jesus.—μακάριος, here and always denoting rare virtue and felicity = the pleasure of doing a kindness not to be repaid, except at the resurrection of the just, or by the joy that every really beneficent action brings now.—τῶν δικαίων: in specifying the righteous as the subjects of the resurrection the Speaker has no intention of indicating an opinion as to the unrighteous: whether they rise at all, or when.

Vv. 15-24. The great feast (cf. Mt. xxii. 1-14), very naturally introduced by the pious reflection of a guest whose religious sentiment had been touched by the allusion to the resurrection-felicity of the just. Like many other pious observations of the conventional type it did not amount to much, and was no guarantee of genuine godliness in the speaker. The parable expresses this truth in concrete form, setting forth that many care less for the Kingdom of God and its blessings than they seem to care, and teaching that these will be offered to those who do care indeed.

Vv. 16-20. ἐκάλεσεν: it was a great feast and many were asked, with a long invitation.—Ver. 17. εἰπεῖν τοῖς κεκλημένοις: a second invitation according to Eastern custom still prevailing (Rosenmüller, Morgenland, v. 192; Thomson, Land and Book, vol. i. chap. ix.).—Ver. 18. ἀπὸ μιᾶς (supply γνώμης, ψυχῆς, ὥρας, or some such word implying with one mind, or at one time, or in the same manner, here only in Greek literature), with one consent.—παραιτεῖσθαι: not to refuse, but in courteous terms to excuse themselves.—ὁ πρῶτος, the first; of three, simply samples, by no means exhausting the list of possible excuses.—ἄγρὸν ἠγόρασα: a respectable excuse, by no means justifying absence, but excellently exemplifying preoccupation, the state of mind common to all. A man who has purchased a farm is for a while very much taken up with it and makes himself very busy about it; everything else for the moment secondary.—ἔχω ἀνάγκην: no fewer than three Latinisms have been found in this sentence; this, the use of ἔρωτῶ in the sense of rogo, and ἔχε με παρητημένον (Grotius). But parallels can be found in Greek authors for the first. Kypke cites an instance of παρητημένον. 20. καὶ ἕτερος εἶπε, Γυναῖκα ἔγημα, καὶ διὰ τοῦτο οὐ δύναμαι ἔλθειν. 21. καὶ παραγενόμενος ὁ δούλος ἐκεῖνος<sup>1</sup> ἀπήγγειλε τῷ κυρίῳ αὐτοῦ ταῦτα. Τότε ὀργισθεὶς ὁ οἰκοδεσπότης εἶπε τῷ δούλῳ αὐτοῦ, Ἔξελθε ταχέως εἰς τὰς πλατείας καὶ ῥύμας τῆς πόλεως, καὶ τοὺς πτωχοὺς καὶ ἀναπήρους καὶ χωλοὺς καὶ τυφλοὺς<sup>2</sup> εἰσάγαγε ὧδε. 22. Καὶ εἶπεν ὁ δούλος, Κύριε, γέγονεν ὡς<sup>3</sup> ἑπέταξας, καὶ ἔτι τόπος ἐστί. 23. Καὶ εἶπεν ὁ κύριος πρὸς τὸν δούλον, Ἔξελθε εἰς τὰς ὁδοὺς καὶ φραγμοὺς, καὶ ἀνάγκασον εἰσελθεῖν, ἵνα γεμισθῇ ὁ οἶκος μου.<sup>4</sup> 24. λέγω γὰρ ὑμῖν, ὅτι οὐδεὶς τῶν ἀνδρῶν ἐκείνων τῶν κεκλημένων γεύσεταιί μου τοῦ δείπνου.”

<sup>1</sup> Omit ἐκεῖνος ἘABDL al.

<sup>2</sup> τυφ. καὶ χωλ. in ἘBDL, etc.

<sup>3</sup> For ὡς ἘBDLR i, e, etc., have ο.

<sup>4</sup> μου ο οἶκος in ἘABDLX 157 e cop.

the second from Josephus. The third, if not a Latinism (Meyer and J. Weiss say no, Schanz and Hahn yes), is at least exactly = excusatum me habeto.—Ver. 19. ἕτερος, another; his excuse is also highly respectable, though nothing more than a decent excuse; the pre-occupation very real, though the apology lame. Five yoke of oxen a very important purchase in the owner's eyes.—Ver. 20. γυναῖκα ἔγημα: most presentable excuse of all, therefore offered sans phrase; pre-occupation this time intense, and surely pardonable? In the natural sphere these are likely forms of pre-occupation, but not necessarily either the only, or even the chief in the spiritual sphere, or those which kept the lawyers and Pharisees from accepting the teaching of Jesus. Their prepossessions were religious and theological.

Not only these three but all decline to come. In the natural sphere this is highly improbable and unexampled. Jesus, from no fault on His part as a parable artist, had to make improbable suppositions to exemplify the fact in the spiritual sphere, which in this instance was that the bulk of the Jewish people were indifferent to the Kingdom as He presented it. On the other hand, in the parables spoken in justification of His own conduct, the case put has the highest measure of probability. Vide, e.g., those in next chapter.

Vv. 21-24. The sequel.—Ver. 21. The servant has done his duty and returns to make his strange report.—ὀργισθεὶς, enraged; no wonder.—ἔξελθε ταχέως, go out quickly; no time to be lost, as all things are ready; but the thing chiefly to be noted is how the word answers to the master's mood—πλατείας καὶ ῥύμας, broad streets and narrow lanes (Mt. vi. 2, q. v.); all sorts of people to be met with there and many of them: invitation to be broadcast, no one to be shunned however poor or unsightly; the poor, maimed, blind, and halt rather to be preferred, therefore expressly named—such is the master's mood in his disgust at the behaviour of the well-to-do, propertied, happy classes—a violent but natural reaction.—Ver. 22. ἔτι τόπος ἐστί, yet there is room, places for more; many more, else the servant would hardly think it worth while to mention the fact, though he quite understands that the master wants the banqueting hall filled, were it only to show that he can do without those saucy recusants. Room after such a widespread miscellaneous invitation speaks to a feast on a grand scale, worthy emblem of the magnificence of Divine grace.—Ver. 23. ὁδοὺς καὶ φραγμοὺς, “highways and hedges”; the main roads and the footpaths running between the fields, alongside of the hedges (Hahn); these, in the country, answering to the streets and lanes in the town. The people to be found there are not necessarily lower down socially than those called within the city, perhaps not so low, but they are without, representing in the interpretation the Gentiles.—ἀνάγκασον, compel; reflects in the first place the urgent desire of the master to have an absolutely full house, in the second the feeling that pressure will be needed to overcome the incredulity of country people as to the invitation to them being meant seriously. They would be apt to laugh in the servant's face.—ἵνα γεμισθῇ: the house must be full, no excuse to be taken; but for a curious reason.—Ver. 24. ὅτι οὐδεὶς, etc.: to keep out the

25. Συνεπορεύοντο δὲ αὐτῷ ὄχλοι πολλοί· καὶ στραφεὶς εἶπε πρὸς αὐτούς, 26. “ Ἐπιτεταί εἶπται πρὸς με, καὶ οὐ μισεῖ τὸν πατέρα ἑαυτοῦ,<sup>1</sup> καὶ τὴν μητέρα, καὶ τὴν γυναῖκα, καὶ τὰ τέκνα, καὶ τοὺς ἀδελφούς, καὶ τὰς ἀδελφάς, ἔτι δὲ καὶ<sup>2</sup> τὴν ἑαυτοῦ ψυχὴν, οὐ δύναται μου μαθητὴς εἶναι.<sup>3</sup> 27. καὶ ὅστις οὐ βαστάζει τὸν σταυρὸν αὐτοῦ,<sup>4</sup> καὶ ἔρχεται ὀπίσω μου, οὐ δύναται μου εἶναι μαθητὴς. 28. τίς γὰρ <sup>d Rev. xiii. 18 (to explain by counting).</sup> ἐξ ὧμῶν, θέλων πύργον οἰκοδομῆσαι, οὐχὶ πρῶτον καθίσας<sup>a</sup> ψηφίζει

<sup>1</sup> So in BL al. (W.H.).  $\aleph$ DX, etc., 1, 13, 69 al. have αὐτου (Tisch.).

<sup>2</sup> ἐτι δε και in  $\aleph$ D (Tisch.); ἐτι τε και in BLRA (W.H.). Vide below.

<sup>3</sup> εἶναι μου μαθ. in  $\aleph$ BLMRX (Tisch., W.H.). In ver. 27  $\aleph$ BL have the same order.

<sup>4</sup> So in  $\aleph$ DL. B has εαυτου (Tisch., W.H.).

first invited in case they should change their minds. Of course this is spoken by the master, and is no comment of Jesus, though we read ὧμῶν where we expect σοι, the application to the hearers of the parable intruding itself at this one point. The reason of the master for wishing his house filled is not a high one. But the ethics of parables belong to this world. They must not be transferred into the spiritual sphere.

Vv. 25-35. Concio ad populum. Jesus now appears on the way, and followed by “many multitudes” (ὄχλοι πολλοί, ver. 25) to whom He speaks. Thus sayings which in Mt. and Mk. form part of disciple-instruction (διδαχή) assume the character of popular preaching, as in the case of the Sermon on the Mount (in Lk.), though the subject is the conditions of discipleship.

Vv. 26-27. The requirements of true discipleship (Mt. x. 37-39).—Ver. 26. ἔρχεται πρὸς με, cometh to me, with a view to close and permanent discipleship.—μισεῖ: a stronger word than that used in Mt., where it is a question of loving less; surprising in Lk., whose general habit is to soften hard sayings. But the logion is presented in different lights in the two Gospels. In Mt. it is a question of being a disciple worthy of the Master (ἄξιος); in Lk. of being an effective disciple (οὐ δύναται). Love of friends makes discipleship difficult or impossible; on the other hand, hatred makes it easy. It is easy to be devoted to a master or cause when you hate all rival masters or interests. Therefore “hates” is the appropriate word here, but the practical meaning is love less, which in experience signifies: hating other objects of affection in so far as they present themselves as hindrances to the supreme love of the Master.—τὴν γυναῖκα, (not in Mt.): to be most “hated” just because most loved, and exercising the most entangling influence.—ἔτι τε καὶ, and moreover. The τε (BL) binds all the particulars named into one bundle of renuncianda.—ψυχὴν, life, oneself, most loved of all, therefore forming the climax, and also determining the sense of μισεῖ. The disciple is to hate friends as he can hate himself—“secundam eam partem, secundum quam se ipsum odisse debet, a Christo aversam” (Bengel). This last item in the list of things to be hated represents the idea contained in Mt. x. 39.—Ver. 27 = Mt. x. 38, with the idea of ability substituted for the idea of worth.

Vv. 28-33. Parables illustrating the need of counting the cost, peculiar to Lk., but intrinsically probable as sayings of Jesus, and thoroughly germane to the foregoing discourse. The connection is: It is a serious thing to be a disciple, therefore consider well before you begin—the renunciations required, the cross to be borne—as you would, if wise, consider before building a tower or engaging in battle.—Ver. 28. θέλων: conditional participle, “if he wish”; with the article it would = who wishes.—πύργον, a tower; need not be magnified into a grand house with a tower. Doubtless, as Bengel remarks, Christianity is a great and arduous affair, and is fitly compared cum rebus magnis et arduis. But the greatness of the undertaking is sufficiently represented by the second parable: the first emblem may be allowed to be less ambitious and more within the reach of ordinary mortals. A tower of observation in a vineyard (Mt. xxi. 33) or for refuge in danger, or for ornament in a garden may be thought of.—καθίσας:

τὴν δαπάνην, εἰ ἔχει τὰ πρὸς<sup>1</sup> ἀπαρτισμόν; 29. ἵνα μήποτε
 e here only θέντος αὐτοῦ θεμέλιον, καὶ μὴ ἰσχύοντος *ἐκτελέσαι, πάντες οἱ in N.T. θεωροῦντες ἄρῶνται ἐμπαίξιν αὐτῷ,<sup>2</sup> 30. λέγοντες, "Ὅτι οὗτος ὁ (bis). ἄνθρωπος ἤρξατο οἰκοδομεῖν, καὶ οὐκ ἴσχυσεν ἐκτελέσαι. 31. "Ἡ τίς
 f here only βασιλεὺς πορευόμενος ἑσβαλεῖν ἐτέρῳ βασιλεῖ<sup>3</sup> εἰς πόλεμον οὐχὶ in N.T. καθίσας πρῶτον βουλευέται<sup>4</sup> εἰ δυνατός ἐστιν ἐν δέκα χιλιάσιν in sense ἀπαντήσαι<sup>5</sup> τῷ μετὰ εἴκοσι χιλιάδων ἐρχομένῳ ἐπ' αὐτόν; 32. εἰ of fighting. δὲ μήγε, ἔτι αὐτοῦ πόρρω ὄντος, πρεσβείαν ἀποστείλας ἐρωτᾷ τὰ<sup>6</sup> πρὸς εἰρήνην. 33. οὕτως οὖν πᾶς ἐξ ὑμῶν, ὅς οὐκ ἀποτάσσεται πᾶσι τοῖς ἑαυτοῦ ὑπάρχουσιν, οὐ δυναταί μου εἶναι<sup>7</sup> μαθητής.
 34. Καλὸν<sup>8</sup> τὸ ἄλας<sup>9</sup>. ἐὰν δὲ<sup>10</sup> τὸ ἄλας<sup>9</sup> μωρανθῇ, ἐν τίνι ἀρτυθη-σεται; 35. οὔτε εἰς γῆν, οὔτε εἰς κοπρίαν εὐθετόν ἐστιν· ἕξω βάλλουσιν αὐτό. "Ὁ ἔχων ὦτα ἀκούειν ἀκούετω."

<sup>1</sup> For τα προς BDLR 225 have simply εἰς. <sup>2</sup> αὐτω εμπ. in *NA*BLX al.

<sup>3</sup> ετερω βασ. συμβ. in *NA*BDLRX 33, 157 al.

<sup>4</sup> So in D; βουλευσεται in *NA*B codd. vet. Lat. (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> So in L al. υπαντ. in *NA*ABDRXΔ I, 33, 69, 346.

<sup>6</sup> B omits τα and reads εἰς. NA omits τα and reads προς (W.H. προς in text with εἰς v. τα προς in marg.).

<sup>7</sup> εἶναι μου in *NA*BLR.

<sup>8</sup> Add οὖν to καλον *NA*BLX 69 al.

<sup>9</sup> αλας in BLR unc. and minusc. pl. *NA*D have αλα (Tisch.).

<sup>10</sup> εαν δε και in *NA*BDLX al.

the attitude appropriate to deliberate, leisurely consideration.—δαπάνη, the cost, here only in N.T.—εἰ ἔχει εἰς ἄ., if he has what is necessary for (τὰ δέοντα understood).—ἀπαρτισμόν = for completion, here only in N.T. and in Dion. Halic.; condemned by Phryn., p. 447. Cf. ἐξηρητισμένος in 2 Tim. iii. 17.—Ver. 29. ἐμπαίξιν, to mock; an unfinished tower is specially ridiculous: height is essential.—οὗτος, etc., this man, contemptuously; "this" stands for a proper name. "Vulgo ponunt N. N.," Bengel. Jesus here appeals with characteristic tact to one of the most sensitive feelings of human nature—shrinking from ridicule. Who would care to be spoken of all his days as the man who commenced a tower and could not finish it?

Vv. 31-33. The king going to fight. This is the affair of the few, a parable to be laid to heart by men aspiring to, or capable of, a grand career.—συμβαλεῖν εἰς πόλεμον, to encounter in war (R.V.), or perhaps better "to fight a battle" (Field, Ot. Nor.). πόλεμον is so rendered in 1 Cor. xiv. 8, Rev. ix. 9, in A.V. (altered in R.V. into "war"). In Homer the idea of battle prevails, but in later writers that of war.—ἐν δέκα, in, with, in the position of one who has only 10,000 soldiers at comma d.—μετὰ εἴκοσι: to beat 20,000 with 10,000 is possible, but it is an unlikely event: the chances are against the king with the smaller force, and the case manifestly calls for deliberation. The implied truth is that the disciple engages in a very unequal conflict. Cf. St. Paul, "we wrestle against principalities," etc., Eph. vi. 12. A reference in this parable to the relations between Herod Antipas (the "fox") and Aretas, his father-in-law, is possible (Holtzmann, H. C.).—Ver. 33 gives the applicatio of the parable. Hofmann, Keil, and Hahn divide the sentence into two, utting a full stop after ὑμῶν and rendering: "So then every one of you! (do the same thing, i.e., consider). He who does not renounce all he hath is not able to be a disciple of mine." This is very effective; it may have been what Jesus actually said; but it is hardly how Lk. reports His words. Ha he meant the sentence to be read so he would have put γὰρ after ὅς. He runs the two supposed sentences into one, and so the counsel to deliberate is left out or latent in the requirement of renunciation, which is the reason for deliberation.

XV. 1. ἦσαν δὲ ἐγγίζοντες αὐτῷ<sup>1</sup> πάντες οἱ τελῶναι καὶ οἱ ἁμαρτωλοί, ἀκούειν αὐτοῦ. 2. καὶ *διεγόγγυζον οἱ<sup>2</sup> Φαρισαῖοι<sup>a</sup> καὶ οἱ γραμματεῖς, λέγοντες, "Ὅτι οὗτος ἁμαρτωλοὺς<sup>b</sup> προσδέχεται, <sup>a</sup> Ch. xix. 7. <sup>b</sup> Rom. xvi. 2. Phil. ii. 29.

<sup>1</sup> αὐτῷ εγγ. in  $\aleph$ AB. D has εγγ. α.

<sup>2</sup> οἱ τε φ. in  $\aleph$ BDL.

Vv. 34-35. The saying concerning salt (Mt. v. 13, Mk. ix. 50). This logion may have been repeatedly uttered by Jesus, but it does not seem to be so appropriate here as in its place in Mk. In this place the salt appears to denote disciples and the idea to be: genuine disciples are an excellent thing, valuable as salt to a corrupt world, but spurious disciples are as utterly worthless as salt which has lost its savour.—

Ver. 35. οὐτε εἰς γῆν οὐτε εἰς κοπρίαν, neither for land nor for dung (is it fit, εὐθετον as in ix. 62). The idea seems to be that savourless salt is neither earth nor manure.—ἔξω is emphatic = out they cast it, as worthless, good for nothing, mere refuse, a waste substance.

CHAPTER XV. PARABLES TEACHING THE JOY OF FINDING THINGS LOST. Nothing is gained by insisting anxiously on historical connection here. The introduction of these beautiful parables of grace at this point is a matter of tact rather than of temporal sequence, so far as the conscious motive of the evangelist is concerned. They are brought in as a set-off to the severe discourse in the closing section of the previous chapter, in which Jesus seems to assume a repellent attitude towards those who desired to follow Him. Here, in happy contrast, He appears as One who graciously received the sinful, regardless of unfavourable comments. The parables of the Lost Sheep, the Lost Coin, and the Lost Son are here given as a self-defence of Jesus against Pharisaic fault-finding. Whether they were first spoken in that connection, or uttered in that connection alone, cannot be determined. So far as their main drift is concerned they might have been spoken to any audience; to critical Pharisees, to disciples (the first is given in Mt. xviii. 12-14 as spoken to the Twelve), to synagogue audiences, or to a gathering of publicans and sinners like that in Capernaum (Lk. v. 29-32); controversial, didactic, or evangelic, as the case might be. Quite possibly the original setting of these parables was a synagogue discourse, or better still the address to the Capernaum gathering. That they are all three authentic utterances of Jesus need not be doubted. The first has synoptical attestation, being found in Mt. also; the second has value only as a supplement to the first, and was hardly worth inventing as an independent parable; the third is too good to have been an invention by Lk. or any other person, and can only have proceeded from the great Master. Wendt (L. J.) accepts all three as authentic, and taken from the Logia of Mt.

Vv. 1, 2. Historic introduction.—ἦσαν ἐγγίζοντες: either were in the act of approaching Jesus at a given time (Meyer), or were in the habit of doing so. The position of αὐτῷ before ἐγγίζοντες in  $\aleph$ B favours the latter (Schanz). On the other hand, it is not improbable that the reference is to the Capernaum gathering. We may have here, in fact, another version of that story taken from the Logia, the occasion slightly described, the words spoken carefully reported. In that case we may take πάντες following somewhat strictly, and not as a mere exaggeration of the evangelist's. There were many at the feast. The aim was to have all the outcasts of the town present (vide on Mt. ix. 9-13). True, they came to feast according to the other report, whereas here stress is laid on the hearing (ἀκούειν). The festive feature is referred to in the complaint of the Pharisees (συνεσθίει, ver. 2). Of course there would be hearing as well as eating, and probably what the guests heard was just these same parables in slightly different form. In that case they served first as a gospel and then as an apologia.—Ver. 2. διεγόγγυζον: the διὰ conveys the idea of a general pervasive murmuring. This is probably not an instance illustrating Hermann's remark (ad Viger., p. 856) that this preposition in compound verbs often adds the notion of striving (διαπίπειν, certare bibendo).—οἱ τε φ.: the τε ( $\aleph$ BL) binds Pharisees and scribes together as one: as close a corporation as "publicans and sinners" (equivalent to "sinners" in their conception, ἁμαρτωλοὺς, ver. 2). Note the order, c Acts x. 41; καὶ ὁ συνεσθίει αὐτοῖς.” 3. Εἶπε δὲ πρὸς αὐτοὺς τὴν παραβολὴν

 xi. 2. 1
 Cor. v. 11. ταύτην, λέγων, 4. “Τίς ἄνθρωπος ἐξ ὑμῶν ἔχων ἑκατὸν πρόβατα.
 Gal. ii. 12. καὶ ἀπολέσας ἓν ἐξ αὐτῶν,<sup>1</sup> οὐ καταλείπει τὰ ἑννενηκονταεννέα ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ, καὶ πορεύεται ἐπὶ τὸ ἀπολωλός, ἕως εὔρη αὐτό; 5. καὶ εὐρῶν ἐπιτίθῃσιν ἐπὶ τοὺς ὤμους ἑαυτοῦ<sup>2</sup> χαίρων, 6. καὶ ἐλθὼν εἰς τὸν οἶκον, συγκαλεῖ τοὺς φίλους καὶ τοὺς γείτονας, λέγων αὐτοῖς, Συγχαρήτέ μοι, ὅτι εὔρον τὸ πρόβατόν μου τὸ ἀπολωλός. 7. λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι οὕτω χαρὰ ἔσται ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ<sup>3</sup> ἐπὶ ἐνὶ ἁμαρτωλῷ μετανοοῦντι, ἢ ἐπὶ ἑννενηκονταεννέα δικαίοις, οἵτινες οὐ χρεῖαν ἔχουσι

<sup>1</sup> For εν εξ α. NBD 1, 69 al. have εξ αυτων εν.

<sup>2</sup> The texts are divided between εαυτου (AEMΔ, etc.) and αυτου (NBDL: Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> εν τ. ουρανῳ εσται in NBL 33, 157.

Pharisees and scribes; usually the other way. Pharisees answers to sinners, scribes to publicans; the two extremes in character and calling; the holiest and unholiest; the most reputable and the most disreputable occupations. And Jesus preferred the baser group!—προσδέχεται, receives, admits to His presence; instead of repelling with involuntary loathing.—καὶ συνεσθίει: not only admits but also eats with them. That was the main surprise and offence, and therefore just the thing done, because the thing which, while offending the Pharisees, would certainly gain the “sinners”. Jesus did what the reputedly good would not do, so winning their trust.

Vv. 3-7. The first parable (cf. Mt. xviii. 12-14).—Ver. 3. τὴν παραβ. ταύτην: the phrase covers the second parable (Lost Coin) as well as the first. The two are regarded as virtually one, the second a duplicate with slight variations.—Ver. 4. ἐξ ὑμῶν, what man of you. Even the Pharisees and scribes would so act in temporal affairs. Every human being knows the joy of finding things lost. It is only in religion that men lose the scent of simple universal truths.—ἑκατὸν πρ.: a hundred a considerable number, making one by comparison insignificant. The owner, one would say, can afford to lose a single erring sheep. Yet not so judges the owner himself, any owner. Losing only one (ἐξ αὐτῶν ἓν) he takes immediate steps to recover it.—ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ, in the untilled, unfenced pasture land; but of course not so as to run the risk of losing the whole flock: it is left under the care of an assistant, the master taking the more arduous task to himself.—ἐπὶ after πορεύεται indicates not only direction but aim: goeth after in order to find.

(Schanz; Kypke remarks that ἐπὶ with verbs of going or sending often indicates “scopum itionis” and is usually prefixed to the thing sought. Similarly Pricaeus.)—ἕως εὔρη: the search not perfunctory, but thorough; goes on till the lost one be found, if that be possible.—Ver. 5. ἐπιτίθῃσιν, etc., he places the found one on his shoulders; not in affection merely or in the exuberance of his joy, but from necessity. He must carry the sheep. It cannot walk, can only “stand where it stands and lie where it lies” (Koetsveld). This feature, probable in natural life, is true to the spiritual. Such was the condition of the mass of Jews in Christ’s time (Mt. ix. 36, cf. “when we were without strength,” Rom. v. 6).—χαίρων: the carrying necessary, but not done with a grudge, rather gladly; not merely for love of the beast, but in joy that a thing lost has been found, making the burden, in spite of the long way, light. He is a very poor shepherd that does not bear the sheep that stands still, unable to walk (vide Zech. xi. 16, margin).—Ver. 6. συγκαλεῖ: the point here is not the formal invitation of neighbours to sympathise, but the confident expectation that they will. That they do is taken for granted. Sympathy from neighbours and friends of the same occupation, fellow-shepherds, a matter of course in such a case. This trait hit the Pharisees, and may have been added to the original parable for their special benefit.—Ver. 7. ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ, in heaven, that is, in the heart of God. Heaven is a synonym for God in vv. 18 and 21.—ἢ = more than, as if πλέον had preceded, so often in N.T. and in Sept. = Hebrew יְד. The comparison in the moral sphere is bold, μετανοίας. 8. Ἡ τίς γυνή <sup>d</sup> δραχμὰς ἔχουσα δέκα, ἐὰν ἀπολέσῃ <sup>d</sup> here only

 δραχμὴν μίαν, οὐχὶ ἄπει λύχνον, καὶ σαροὶ τὴν οἰκίαν, καὶ ζητεῖ <sup>In N.T.
 (thrice).</sup>
 ἐπιμελῶς, ἕως οὗ <sup>1</sup> εὕρη; 9. καὶ εὐρούσα συγκαλεῖται <sup>2</sup> τὰς <sup>e</sup> here only φίλας καὶ τὰς <sup>3</sup> γείτονας, λέγουσα, Συγχαρήτέ μοι, ὅτι εὐρον τὴν <sup>In N.T.</sup> δραχμὴν ἣν ἀπόλεσα. 10. οὕτω, λέγω ὑμῖν, χαρὰ γίνεται: <sup>4</sup> ἐνώπιον τῶν ἀγγέλων τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐπὶ ἐνὶ ἁμαρτωλῶ μετανοοῦντι.”

<sup>1</sup> For οὗτο NBLX al. have οὖ (W.H.). D has simply εως.

<sup>2</sup> So in D. συγκαλεῖ in NBKLD al. (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> NBL omit this second τὰς.

<sup>4</sup> γίνεται χαρὰ in NBLX 33.

but the principle holds true there as in the natural sphere, even if the ninety-nine be truly righteous men needing no repentance. It is rational to have peculiar joy over a sinner repenting, therefore God has it, therefore Christ might have it. This saying is the third great word of Christ's apology for loving the sinful. For the other two vide on Mt. ix. 9-13 and Lk. vii. 36-50.

Vv. 8-10. The second parable, a pendant to the first, spoken possibly to the Capernaum gathering to bring the experience of joy found in things lost home to the poorest present. As spoken to Pharisees it is intended to exemplify the principle by a lost object as insignificant in value as a publican or a sinner was in their esteem. A sheep, though one of a hundred, was a comparatively precious object. A drachma was a piece of money of inconsiderable value, yet of value to a poor woman who owned only ten drachmas in all; its finding therefore a source of keen joy to her.—Ver. 8. ἄπει λ., lights a lamp. The verb used in this sense in N.T. only in Lk. No windows in the dwellings of the poor: a lamp must be lighted for the search, unless indeed there be one always burning on the stand.—σαροὶ: colloquial and vulgar for σαίρει, vide on Mt. xii. 44.—ζητεῖ ἐπιμελῶς: the emphasis in this parable lies on the seeking—ἄπει, σαροὶ, ζητεῖ; in the Lost Sheep on the carrying home of the found object of quest.—Ver. 9. συγκαλεῖ: this calling together of friends and neighbours (feminine in this case, τὰς φ. καὶ τὰς γ.) peculiarly natural in the case of a woman; hence perhaps the reading of T.R., συγκαλεῖται, the middle being more subjective. The finding would appeal specially to feminine sympathies, if the lost drachma was not part of a hoard to meet some debt, but belonged to a string of coins worn as an ornament round the head, then as now, by married women in the East, as Tristram suggests (Eastern Customs in Bible Lands, p. 76). This view, favoured by Farrar, is ignored by most commentators.—Ver. 10 repeats the moral of ver. 7, but without comparison which, with a smaller number, would only weaken the effect.—ἐνώπιον τῶν ἀγγέλων τ. θ.: the angels may be referred to as the neighbours of God, whose joy they witness and share. Wendt (L. 7., i., 141) suggests that Luke uses the expression to avoid anthropopathism, and because God has no neighbours.

Vv. 11-32. The third parable, rather an example than a parable illustrating by an imaginary case the joy of recovering a lost human being. In this case care is taken to describe what loss means in the sphere of human life. The interest in the lost now appropriately takes the form of eager longing and patient waiting for the return of the erring one, that there may be room for describing the repentance referred to in vv. 7 and 10, which is the motive for the return. Also in the moral sphere the subject of the finding cannot be purely passive: there must be self-recovery to give ethical value to the event. A sinning man cannot be brought back to God like a straying sheep to the fold. Hence the beautiful picture of the sin, the misery, the penitent reflections, and the return of the prodigal peculiar to this parable. It is not mere scene-painting. It is meant to show how vastly higher is the significance of the terms “lost” and “found” in the human sphere, justifying increased interest in the finding, and so showing the utter unreasonableness of the fault-finding directed against Jesus for His efforts to win to goodness the publicans and sinners. Jesus thereby said in effect: You blame in me a joy which is universal, that of finding the lost, and which ought to be greater in the case of human beings just because it is a man that is found and not a beast. Does not the story as I tell it

11. 11. Εἶπε δέ, "Ἄνθρωπός τις εἶχε δύο υἱούς· 12. καὶ εἶπεν ὁ νεώτερος αὐτῶν τῷ πατρὶ, Πάτερ, δός μοι τὸ ἐπιβάλλον μέρος τῆς οὐσίας. 13. καὶ μετ' οὐ πολλὰς ἡμέρας συναγαγὼν ἅπαντα ὁ νεώτερος υἱὸς ἀπεδήμησεν εἰς χώραν μακράν, καὶ ἐκεῖ διεσκόρπισε τὴν οὐσίαν αὐτοῦ, ζῶν ἀσώτως. 14. δαπανήσαντος δὲ αὐτοῦ πάντα, ἐγένετο λιμὸς ἰσχυρὸς<sup>2</sup> κατὰ τὴν χώραν ἐκείνην, καὶ αὐτὸς ἤρξατο ὑστερεῖσθαι. 15. καὶ πορευθεὶς ἐκολλήθη ἐνὶ τῶν πολιτῶν τῆς χώρας ἐκείνης· καὶ ἔπεμψεν αὐτὸν εἰς τοὺς ἀγροὺς αὐτοῦ βόσκειν χοίρους. 16. καὶ ἐπεθύμει γεμίσει τὴν κοιλίαν αὐτοῦ<sup>3</sup> ἀπὸ<sup>4</sup> τῶν<sup>5</sup> κερατιῶν ὧν ἤσθιον οἱ χοῖροι· καὶ οὐδεὶς ἐδίδου αὐτῷ. 17. Εἰς ἑαυτὸν δὲ ἐλθὼν εἶπε,<sup>5</sup> Πόσοι ἂ μίσθοιοι τοῦ πατρὸς

<sup>1</sup> For καὶ (ΣD, Tisch.) BL cop. have ο δε (W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> ἰσχυρά in ΣABDL 1, 33, 131.

<sup>3</sup> γεμίσει . . . αὐτου in APQXΓΔΛΠ, etc., codd. vet. Lat. vulg. syr. (Peshito) sin. (Tisch.). χορτασθῆναι in ΣBDLR minusc. d e f syr. cur. (R.V., W.H.), text).

<sup>4</sup> εκ in texts which have χορτασθῆναι.

<sup>5</sup> ΣBL 13, 69 al. have εφη.

rebuke your cynicism and melt your hearts? Yet such things are happening among these publicans and sinners you despise, every day.

Vv. 11-13. The case put. δύο υἱούς: two sons of different dispositions here as in Mt. xxi. 28-31, but there is no further connection between the two parables. There is no reason for regarding Lk.'s parable as an allegorical expansion of Mt.'s Two Sons (Holtzmann in H. C.).—Ver. 12. ὁ νεώτερος, the younger, with a certain fitness made to play the foolish part. The position of an elder son presents more motives to steadiness.—τὸ ἐπιβάλλον μέρος, the portion falling or belonging to, the verb occurs in this sense in late authors (here only in N.T.). The portion of the younger when there were two sons would be one third, the right of the first-born being two portions (Deut. xxi. 17).—διεἶλεν: the father complies, not as bound, but he must do it in the parable that the story may go on.—βίον = οὐσίαν, as in Mk. xii. 44, Lk. viii. 43.—Ver. 13. μετ' οὐ πολλὰς ἡμέρας: to be joined to ἀπεδήμησεν: he went away as soon as possible, when he had had time to realise his property, in haste to escape into wild liberty or licence.—μακράν: the farther away the better.—ἀσώτως (a pr. and σώζω, here only in N.T.), insalvably; the process of reckless waste, free rein given to every passion, must go on till nothing is left. This is what undisciplined freedom comes to.

Vv. 14-19. The crisis: recklessness leads to misery and misery prompts reflection.—Ver. 14. λιμὸς, a famine, an accident fitting into the moral history of the prodigal; not a violent supposition; such correspondences between the physical and moral worlds do occur, and there is a Providence in them.—ἰσχυρά: the most probable reading if only because λιμὸς is feminine only in Doric and late Greek usage.—ὑστερεῖσθαι: the result of wastefulness and prevalent dearth combined is dire want. What is to be done? Return home? Not yet; that the last shift.—Ver. 15. ἐκολλήθη, he attached himself (pass. with mid. sense). The citizen of the far country did not want him, it is no time for employing superfluous hands, but he suffered the wretch to have his way in good-natured pity.—βόσκειν χοίρους: the lowest occupation, a poor-paid pagan drudge; the position of the publicans glanced at.—Ver. 16. ἐπεθύμει, etc., he was fain to fill his belly with the horn-shaped pods of the carob-tree. The point is that he was so poorly fed by his new master (who felt the pinch of hard times, and on whom he had small claim) that to get a good meal of anything, even swine's food, was a treat. γεμίσει τ. κ., though realistic, is redeemed from vulgarity by the dire distress of the quondam voluptuary. Anything to fill the aching void within!—οὐδεὶς ἐδίδου, no one was giving him: this his experience from day to day and week μου περισσεύουσιν<sup>1</sup> ἄρτων, ἐγὼ δὲ λιμῶ<sup>2</sup> ἀπόλλυμαι; 18. ἀναστὰς πορεύσομαι πρὸς τὸν πατέρα μου, καὶ ἐρῶ αὐτῷ, Πάτερ, ἡμαρτον εἰς τὸν οὐρανὸν καὶ ἐνώπιόν σου. 19. καὶ<sup>3</sup> οὐκέτι εἰμὶ ἄξιος κληθῆναι υἱός σου· ποίησόν με ὡς ἓνα τῶν μισθίων σου. 20. καὶ ἀναστὰς ἦλθε πρὸς τὸν πατέρα ἑαυτοῦ. Ἔτι δὲ αὐτοῦ μακρὰν ἀπέχοντος, εἶδεν αὐτὸν ὁ πατὴρ αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἐσπλαγχνίσθη, καὶ δραμῶν ἐπέπεσεν ἐπὶ τὸν τράχηλον αὐτοῦ, καὶ κατεφίλησεν αὐτόν. 21. εἶπε δὲ αὐτῷ ὁ υἱός,<sup>4</sup> Πάτερ, ἡμαρτον εἰς τὸν οὐρανὸν καὶ ἐνώπιόν σου, καὶ<sup>5</sup> οὐκέτι εἰμὶ ἄξιος κληθῆναι υἱός σου.<sup>6</sup> 22. εἶπε δὲ ὁ πατὴρ πρὸς τοὺς δούλους αὐτοῦ, Ἐξενέγκατε<sup>7</sup> τὴν στολὴν τὴν πρώτην, καὶ ἐνδύσατε αὐτόν, καὶ δότε δακτύλιον εἰς τὴν χεῖρα αὐτοῦ, καὶ ὑπόδη-

<sup>1</sup> So in  $\mathfrak{N}$ DL, etc. (Tisch.). περισσεύονται in ABP 1, 94 (W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> After λιμῶ  $\mathfrak{N}$ BL have ὠδε.

<sup>3</sup> Omit καὶ  $\mathfrak{N}$ ABDL and many others.

<sup>4</sup> ο υἱος before αὐτω in BL 1, 131 al.

<sup>5</sup> καὶ omitted here also in  $\mathfrak{N}$ ABDL, etc.

<sup>6</sup>  $\mathfrak{N}$ BD add ποιησον με ὡς ἓνα των μισθίων σου (W.H. brackets). Vide below.

<sup>7</sup>  $\mathfrak{N}$ BL prefix the expressive ταχυ (D ταχεως) and omit τὴν before στολὴν.

to week. Giving what? Not the pods, as many think, these he would take without leave, but anything better. His master gave him little—famine rations, and no other kind soul made up for the lack. Neither food nor love abounded in that country. So there was nothing for it but swine's food or semi-starvation—or home!—Ver. 17. εἰς ἑαυτὸν ἔλθῶν = either, realising the situation; or, coming to his true self, his sane mind (for the use of this phrase vide Kypke, Observ.). Perhaps both ideas are intended. He at last understood there was no hope for him there, and, reduced to despair, the human, the filial, the thought of home and father revived in the poor wretch.—περισσεύονται: passive, with gen. of the thing; here only in N.T.—are provided to excess, have more given them than they can use.—Ver. 18. ἀναστὰς: a bright hope gives energy to the starving man; home! Said, done, but the motive is not high. It is simply the last resource of a desperate man. He will go home and confess his fault, and so, he hopes, get at least a hireling's fare. Well to be brought out of that land, under home influences, by any motive. It is in the right direction. Yet though bread is as yet the supreme consideration, foretokens of true ethical repentance appear in the premeditated speech:—Πάτερ: some sense of the claims that long-disused word implies—ἡμαρτον, I erred; perception that the whole past has been a mistake and folly—εἰς τὸν οὐρανόν, against heaven, God —ἐνώπιόν σου, in thy sight, in thy judgment (Hahn)—he knows quite well what his father must think of his conduct; what a fool he must think him (Ps. lxxiii. 22)—οὐκέτι εἰμὶ, etc. (ver. 19), fully conscious that he has forfeited all filial claims. The omission of καὶ suits the emotional mood.

Vv. 20-24. Return and reception.—ἦλθεν, etc., he came to his father; no details about the journey, the fact simply stated, the interest now centring in the action of the father, exemplifying the joy of a parent in finding a lost son, which is carefully and exquisitely described in four graphic touches—εἶδεν: first recognition at a distance, implying, if not a habit of looking for the lost one (Göbel, Schanz, etc.), at least a vision sharpened by love—ἐσπλαγχνίσθη: instant pity awakened by the woful plight of the returning one manifest in feeble step, ragged raiment possibly also visible—δραμῶν, running, in the excitement and impatience of love, regardless of Eastern dignity and the pace safe for advancing years—κατεφίλησεν: kissing fervently and frequently the son folded in his arms (cf. Mt. xxvi. 49, Lk. vii. 38, 45). All signs these of a love ready to do anything to recover the lost, to search for him to the world's end, if that had been fitting or likely to gain the end.—Ver. 21. The son repeats his premeditated speech, with or without the last clause; probably with it, as part of a well-conned lesson, repeated half mechanically, yet not insin-

i here, three times. ματα εἰς τοὺς πόδας· 23. καὶ ἐνέγκαντες<sup>1</sup> τὸν μόσχον τὸν<sup>4</sup> σιτευτὸν θύσατε, καὶ φαγόντες εὐφρανθῶμεν· 24. ὅτι οὗτος ὁ υἱὸς μου νεκρὸς ἦν, καὶ ἀνέζησε· καὶ ἀπολωλὼς ἦν,<sup>2</sup> καὶ εὐρέθη. Καὶ ἤρξαντο εὐφραίνεσθαι. 25. Ἦν δὲ ὁ υἱὸς αὐτοῦ ὁ πρεσβύτερος ἐν ἀγρῷ· j here only in N.T. και ὡς ἐρχόμενος ἤγγισε τῇ οἰκίᾳ, ἤκουσε<sup>3</sup> συμφωνίας καὶ<sup>5</sup> χορῶν· k here only in N.T. 26. καὶ προσκαλεσάμενος ἕνα τῶν παίδων αὐτοῦ,<sup>3</sup> ἐπειθάνετο τί<sup>4</sup> εἶη ταῦτα. 27. ὁ δὲ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, Ὅτι ὁ ἀδελφός σου ἦκει· καὶ ἔθυσεν ὁ πατὴρ σου τὸν μόσχον τὸν σιτευτὸν, ὅτι ὑγιαίνοντα αὐτὸν ἀπέλαβεν. 28. Ὁργίσθη δέ, καὶ οὐκ ἤθελεν εἰσελθεῖν. ὁ οὖν<sup>5</sup>

<sup>1</sup> φερετε in  $\aleph$ BLRX, more suitable to emotional speech.

<sup>2</sup> For και απ. ην  $\aleph$ BL have ην απ. without και, which D also omits.

<sup>3</sup> Omit αὐτου all uncials.

<sup>4</sup> τι αν in B al. (W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> For ο ουν  $\aleph$ ABDLRX 1, 33 al. have ο δε.

cerely—as if to say: I don't deserve this, I came expecting at most a hireling's treatment in food and otherwise, I should be ashamed to be anything higher.—Ver. 22. δούλους: their presence conceivable, the father's running and the meeting noticed and reported by some one, so soon drawing a crowd to the spot, or to meet the two on the way to the house. To them the father gives directions which are his response to the son's proposed self-degradation. He shall not be their fellow, they shall serve him by acts symbolic of reinstatement in sonship.—ταχὺ, quick! a most probable reading ( $\aleph$ BL), and a most natural exclamation; obliterate the traces of a wretched past as soon as possible; off with these rags! fetch robes worthy of my son, dressed in his best as on a gala day.—ἐξενέγκατε, bring from the house—στολήν τ. πρώτην, the first robe, not in time, formerly worn (Theophy.), but in quality; cf. the second chariot, Gen. xii. 43 (currus secundus, Bengel).—δακτύλιον (here only in N.T.): no epithet attached, golden, e.g. (Wolff, golden ring for sons, iron ring for slaves); that it would be a ring of distinction goes without saying.—ὑποδήματα, shoes; needed—he is barefoot and footsore; and worn by sons, not by slaves. Robe, ring, shoes: all symbols of filial state.—Ver. 23. τὸν μόσχον τὸν σιτευτὸν: always one fattening for high-tides; could not be used on a better occasion.—Ver. 24: reason for making this a festive day.—οὗτος, etc.: the father formally calls him his son, partly by way of recognition, and partly to introduce him to the attendants in case they might not know him.—νεκρὸς, dead, ethically? or as good as dead? the latter more probable in a speech to slaves.—ἀπολωλὼς, lost; his whereabouts unknown, one reason among others why there was no search, as in the case of the sheep and the coin.

Vv. 25-32. The elder son, who plays the ignoble part of wet blanket on this glad day, and represents the Pharisees in their chilling attitude towards the mission in behalf of the publicans and sinners.—Ver. 25. ἐν ἀγρῷ, on the farm; of course there every day, doing his duty, a most correct, exemplary man, only in his wisdom and virtue so cold and merciless towards men of another sort. Being at his work he is ignorant of what has happened: the arrival and what followed.—ἐρχόμενος, coming home after the day's work is over, when the merriment is in full swing, with song and dance filling the air.—Ver. 26. τί ἂν εἶη ταῦτα, not contemptuous, "what all this was about" (Farrar, C. G. T.), but with the puzzled air of a man in the dark and surprised = what does this mean?—Ver. 27. In simple language the servant briefly explains the situation, showing in his words neither sympathy nor, still less, the reverse, as Hofmann thinks.—ὑγιαίνοντα, in good health; home again and well, that is the whole case as he knows it; no thought in his mind of a tragic career culminating in repentance, or if he has any suspicion he keeps it to himself; thoroughly true to nature this.—Ver. 28. Ὁργίσθη, he was angry, a very slight description of his state of mind into which various bad feelings would enter: disgust, chagrin that all this merriment had been going on for hours and they had not thought it worth while to let him know—an impolitic oversight; a sense of wrong and general unfair treatπατὴρ αὐτοῦ ἐξελθὼν παρεκάλει αὐτόν. 29. ὁ δὲ ἀποκριθεὶς εἶπε τῷ πατρὶ,<sup>1</sup> ἴδού, τοσαῦτα ἔτη δουλεύω σοι, καὶ οὐδέποτε ἐντολήν σου παρήλθον, καὶ ἐμοὶ οὐδέποτε ἔδωκας ἔριφον,<sup>2</sup> ἵνα μετὰ τῶν φίλων μου εὐφρανθῶ. 30. ὅτε δὲ ὁ υἱὸς σου οὗτος ὁ καταφαγῶν σου τὸν βίον μετὰ πορνῶν<sup>3</sup> ἦλθεν, ἔθυσας αὐτῷ τὸν μόνυχον τὸν σιτευτόν.<sup>4</sup> 31. ὁ δὲ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, Τέκνον, σὺ πάντοτε μετ' ἐμοῦ εἶ, καὶ πάντα τὰ ἐμὰ σὰ ἔστιν. 32. εὐφρανθῆναι δὲ καὶ χαρῆναι ἔδει, ὅτι ὁ ἀδελφός σου εὖτος νεκρὸς ἦν, καὶ ἀνέζησε<sup>5</sup>. καὶ ἀπολωλὼς ἦν,<sup>6</sup> καὶ εὐρέθη.”

<sup>1</sup> BD add αὐτου (W.H.), wanting in many copies (Tisch.).

<sup>2</sup> B has εριφιον (W.H. marg.).

<sup>3</sup> των πορ. in ADL (W.H. marg.). πορνων in ΞB (Tisch., W.H., text).

<sup>4</sup> τον σιτ. μοςχον for τ. μος τ. σιτ. in ΞBDLQR.

<sup>5</sup> εζησεν in ΞBLRD. T.R. = D, etc.

<sup>6</sup> For και απολ. ην ΞDX 1, 13, 69, etc., have simply απολωλως; with these BLR omit ην but retain και before απολ. (Tisch. has απολ., W.H., και απολ.).

ment of which this particular neglect was but a specimen.—ὁ δὲ πατὴρ, etc.: the father goes out and presses him to come in, very properly; but why not send for him at once that he might stop working on the farm and join in the feasting and dancing on that glad day? Did they all fear he would spoil the sport and act accordingly? The elder son has got a chance to complain, and he makes the most of it in his bitter speech to his father.—Ver. 29. ἔριφον, a kid, not to speak of the fatted calf.—μετὰ τῶν φίλων μου: he would have been content if there had been any room made for the festive element in his life, with a modest meeting with his own friends, not to speak of a grand family demonstration like this. But no, there was nothing but work and drudgery for him.—Ver. 30. οὗτος: contemptuous, this precious son of yours.—μετὰ πορνῶν: hard, merciless judgment; the worst said and in the coarsest way. How did he know? He did not know; had no information, jumped at conclusions. That the manner of his kind, who shirk work and go away to enjoy themselves.—Vv. 31, 32. The father answers meekly, apologetically, as if conscious that the elder son had some right to complain, and content to justify himself for celebrating the younger son's return with a feast; not a word of retaliation. This is natural in the story, and it also fits well into the aim of the parable, which is to illustrate the joy of finding the lost. It would serve no purpose in that connection to disparage the object of the lesser joy. There is peculiar joy over one sinner repenting even though the ninety-nine be truly righteous, and over a prodigal returned even though the elder brother be a most exemplary, blameless, dutiful son.

CHAPTER XVI. TWO ADDITIONAL PARABLES ON THE RIGHT USE OF WEALTH. These two parables, the unjust steward and Dives, bear such a foreign aspect when compared with the general body of Christ's teaching as to give rise to a doubt whether they have any claim to a place in an authentic record of His sayings. One at first wonders at finding them in such company, forming with the preceding three a group of five. Yet Luke had evidently no sense of their incongruity, for he passes from the three to the two as if they were of kindred import (ἔλεγε δὲ καὶ). Doubtless they appealed to his social bias by the sympathy they betray for the poor (cf. vi. 20, xi. 41), which has gained for them a place among the so-called Ebionitic sections of Luke's Gospel (vide Holtzmann in H. C.). In favour of the authenticity of the first of the two parables is its apparently low ethical tone which has been such a stumbling-block to commentators. Who but Jesus would have had the courage to extract a lesson of wisdom from conduct like that of the unrighteous steward? The literary grace of the second claims for it the same origin and author.

Vv. 1-7. The parable of the unjust steward.—Ver. 1. ἔλεγε δὲ καὶ: the same formula of transition as in xiv. 12. The καὶ connects with ἔλεγε, not with

XVI. 1. ἜΛΕΓΕ δὲ καὶ πρὸς τοὺς μαθητὰς αὐτοῦ,<sup>1</sup> “Ἄνθρωπός τις ἦν πλούσιος, ὃς εἶχεν οἰκονόμον· καὶ οὗτος διεβλήθη αὐτῷ ὡς διασκορπίζων τὰ ὑπάρχοντα αὐτοῦ. 2. καὶ φωνήσας αὐτὸν εἶπεν αὐτῷ, τί τοῦτο ἀκούω περὶ σοῦ; ἀπόδος τὸν λόγον τῆς οἰκονομίας σου· οὐ γὰρ δυνήσῃ<sup>2</sup> ἔτι οἰκονομεῖν. 3. εἶπε δὲ ἐν ἑαυτῷ ὁ οἰκονόμος, τί ποιήσω, ὅτι ὁ κύριός μου ἄφαιρεῖται τὴν οἰκονομίαν ἀπ’ ἐμοῦ; σκάπτειν οὐκ ἰσχύω, ἐπαιτεῖν αἰσχύνομαι. 4. ἔγνων τί ποιήσω, ἵνα, ὅταν μετασταθῶ<sup>3</sup> τῆς οἰκονομίας, δέξωνταί με εἰς τοὺς οἴκους αὐτῶν.<sup>4</sup> 5. Καὶ προσκαλεσάμενος ἕνα ἕκαστον τῶν χρεωφειλετῶν τοῦ κυρίου ἑαυτοῦ, ἔλεγε τῷ πρώτῳ, Πόσον ὀφείλεις τῷ

<sup>1</sup> Rom. xi.
27 (mid.)

<sup>1</sup> Omit αὐτου ὩBDLR.

<sup>2</sup> So in L and many others; ὩBDP have δυνῃ.

<sup>3</sup> ὩBD I, 69 al. have εκ after μετασταθω.

<sup>4</sup> εαυτων in ὩBPRX. αυτων in DL.

πρὸς τ. μαθητὰς, and points not to change of audience (disciples now, Pharisees before) but to continued parabolic discourse.—μαθητὰς, disciples, quite general; might mean the Twelve, or the larger crowd of followers (xiv. 25), or the publicans and sinners who came to Him (xv. 1, so Schleiermacher, etc.).—διεβλήθη, was accused, here only in N. T., often in classics and Sept.; construed with dative here; also with εἰς or πρὸς, with accusative. The verb implies always a hostile animus, often the accompaniment of false accusation, but not necessarily. Here the charge is assumed to be true.—ὡς διασκορπίζων, as squandering, that the charge; how, by fraud or by extravagant living, not indicated; the one apt to lead to the other.—Ver. 2. τί τοῦτο, etc. τί may be exclamatory = what! do I hear this of thee? or interrogatory: what is this that I hear of thee? the laconic phrase containing a combination of an interrogative with a relative clause.—τὸν λόγον: the reference may be either to a final account previous to dismissal, already resolved on (so usually taken), or to an investigation into the truth or falsehood of the accusation = produce your books that I may judge for myself (so Hahn). The latter would be the reasonable course, but not necessarily the one taken by an eastern magnate, who might rush from absolute confidence to utter distrust without taking the trouble to inquire further. As the story runs, this seems to be what happened.—Ver. 3. εἶπε ἐν ἑ.: a Hebraism, as in Mt. iii. 9, ix. 3. The steward deliberates on the situation. He sees that his master has decided against him, and considers what he is to do next, running rapidly over all possible schemes.—σκάπτειν, ἐπαιτεῖν: these two represent the alternatives for the dismissed: manual labour and begging; digging naturally chosen to represent the former as typical of agricultural labour, with which the steward's position brought him much into contact (Lightfoot). But why these two only mentioned? Why not try to get another situation of the same kind? Because he feels that dismissal in the circumstances means degradation. Who now would trust him? ἐπαιτεῖν = προσαιτεῖν (Mk. x. 46, John ix. 8).—Ver. 4. ἔγνων: too weak to dig, too proud to beg, he hits upon a feasible scheme at last: I have it, I know now what to do.—ἔγνων is the dramatic or tragic aorist used in classics, chiefly in poetry and in dialogue. It gives greater vividness than the use of the present would.—δέξωνται: his plan contemplates as its result reception of the degraded steward into their houses by people not named; probably the very people who accused him. We are not to suppose that permanent residence in other people's houses is in view. Something better may offer. The scheme provides for the near future, helps to turn the next corner.—Ver. 5. ἕνα ἕκαστον: he sees them one by one, not all together. These debtors might be farmers, who paid their rents in kind, or persons who had got supplies of goods from the master's stores; which of the two of no consequence to the point of the parable.—τῷ πρώτῳ, the first, in the

κυρίῳ μου; 6. Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν, Ἐκατὸν βάτους ἐλαίου. Καὶ<sup>1</sup> εἶπεν αὐτῷ, Δέξαι σου τὸ γράμμα,<sup>2</sup> καὶ καθίσας ταχέως γράψον πενήτηκοντα. 7. Ἐπειτα ἐτέρῳ εἶπε, Σὺ δὲ πόσον ὀφείλεις; Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν, Ἐκατὸν κόρους σίτου. Καὶ<sup>3</sup> λέγει αὐτῷ, Δέξαι σου τὸ γράμμα,<sup>4</sup> καὶ γράψον ὀγδοήκοντα. 8. Καὶ ἐπήνεσεν ὁ κύριος τὸν οἰκονόμον τῆς ἀδικίας, ὅτι<sup>b</sup> φρονίμως ἐποίησεν· ὅτι οἱ υἱοὶ τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτου φρονιμώτεροι <sup>b</sup> here only in N.T.

<sup>1</sup> For καὶ ἘABLR al. have ο δε.

<sup>2</sup> τα γραμματα in ἘBCLR 1 (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> Omit καὶ BLR 13, 69 al. (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> Again τα γραμματα in ἘBCLR.

parable = to one. Two cases mentioned, a first and a second (ἐτέρῳ), two, out of many; enough to exemplify the method. It is assumed that all would take advantage of the unprincipled concession; those who had accused him and those who had possibly been already favoured in a similar manner, bribed to speak well of him.—Ver. 6. τὰ γράμματα: literally, the letters, then a written document; here a bill showing the amount of indebtedness. The steward would have all the bills ready.—γράψον, write, i.e., write out a new bill with fifty in place of a hundred; not merely change a hundred into fifty in the old bill.—ταχέως, no time left for reflection—"is this right?" Some think that the knavery had come in before, and that fifty was the true amount. That might be, but the steward would keep the fact to himself. The debtors were to take it that this was a bona fide reduction of their just debt.—Ver. 7. ὀγδοήκοντα, eighty, a small reduction as compared with the first. Was there not a risk of offence when the debtors began to compare notes? Not much; they would not look on it as mere arbitrariness or partiality, but as policy: variety would look more like a true account than uniformity. He had not merely to benefit them, but to put himself in as good a light as possible before his master.

Vv. 8-13. Application of the parable. There is room for doubt whether ver. 8 should form part of the parable (or at least as far as φρονίμως ἐποίησεν), or the beginning of the application. In the one case ὁ κύριος refers to the master of the steward, in the other to Jesus, who is often in narrative called Lord in Lk.'s Gospel. On the whole I now incline to the latter view (compare my Parabolic Teaching of Christ). It sins rather against natural probability to suppose the steward's master acquainted with his new misconduct. The steward in his final statement, of course, put as fair a face as possible on matters, presenting what looked like a true account, so as to make it appear he was being unjustly dismissed, or even to induce the master to cancel his purpose to dismiss. And those who had got the benefit of his sharp practice were not likely to tell upon him. The master therefore may be supposed to be in the dark; it is the speaker of the parable who is in the secret. He praises the steward of iniquity, not for his iniquity (so Schleiermacher), but for his prudence in spite of iniquity. His unrighteousness is not glozed over, on the contrary it is strongly asserted: hence the phrase τὸν ο. τῆς ἀδικίας, which is stronger than τ. ο. τὸν ἀδικον. Yet however bad he still acted wisely for himself in providing friends against the evil day. What follows—ὅτι οἱ υἱοί, etc.—applies the moral to the disciples = go ye and do likewise, with an implied hint that in this respect they are apt to come short. The counsel would be immoral if in the spiritual sphere it were impossible to imitate the steward's prudence while keeping clear of his iniquity. In other words, it must be possible to make friends against the evil day by unobjectionable actions. The mere fact that the lesson of prudence is drawn from the life of an unprincipled man is no difficulty to any one who understands the nature of parabolic instruction. The comparison between men of the world and the "sons of light" explains and apologises for the procedure. If you want to know what prudent attention to self-interest means it is to men of the world you must look. Of course they show their wisdom suo more, in relation to men of their own kind, and in reference to worldly matters

ὑπὲρ τοὺς υἱοὺς τοῦ φωτὸς εἰς τὴν γενεὰν τὴν ἑαυτῶν εἰσι. 9. Καγὼ ὑμῖν λέγω, Ποιήσατε ἑαυτοῖς<sup>1</sup> φίλους ἐκ τοῦ μαμωνᾶ τῆς ἀδικίας, ἵνα, ὅταν ἐκλίπητε,<sup>2</sup> δέξωνται ὑμᾶς εἰς τὰς αἰωνίους σκηνάς. 10. Ὁ πιστὸς ἐν ἐλαχίστῳ καὶ ἐν πολλῷ πιστὸς ἔστι, καὶ ὁ ἐν ἐλαχίστῳ ἄδικος καὶ ἐν πολλῷ ἄδικός ἐστιν. 11. εἰ οὖν ἐν τῷ ἀδίκῳ μαμωνᾷ πιστοὶ οὐκ ἐγένεσθε, τὸ ἀληθινὸν τίς ὑμῖν πιστεῦσει; 12. καὶ εἰ ἐν τῷ ἀλλοτρίῳ πιστοὶ οὐκ ἐγένεσθε, τὸ ὑμέτερον<sup>3</sup> τίς ὑμῖν δώσει<sup>4</sup>; 13. Οὐδεὶς οἰκέτης δύναται δυσὶ κυρίοις δουλεῖν· ἢ γὰρ τὸν ἓνα μισήσει, καὶ τὸν ἕτερον ἀγαπήσει· ἢ ἐνὸς ἀνθέξεται, καὶ τοῦ ἑτέρου καταφρονήσει. οὐ δύνασθε Θεῷ δουλεῖν καὶ μαμωνᾷ.”

<sup>1</sup> εαυτοῖς before ποιήσατε in ΞBLR.

<sup>2</sup> So in Ξca1PΥΓΔ, etc., latt. (vet. vulg.) several Fathers; Ξ*AB*DLRX syr. cur. sin. have εκλιπη (Tisch., W.H., and modern editors generally).

<sup>3</sup> So in ΞΑΔΔ al. verss. Fathers. BL have ημετερον (W.H. text).

<sup>4</sup> δώσει υμιν in ΞDLR 33 a b c, etc. B as in T.R.

(this the sense of εἰς τ. γενεάν, etc.). Show ye your wisdom in your way and in reference to your peculiar generation (εἰς τ. γενεάν, etc., applicable to both parties) with equal zeal.

Ver. 9. ἐγὼ: the use of the emphatic pronoun seems to involve that here begins the comment of Jesus on the parable, ver. 8 being spoken by the master and a part of the parable. But J. Weiss (in Meyer) views this verse as a second application put into the mouth of Jesus, but not spoken by Him, having for its author the compiler from whom Lk. borrowed (Feine's Vork. Lukas). He finds in vv. 8-13 three distinct applications, one by Jesus, ver. 8; one by the compiler of precanonical Lk., ver. 9; and one by Lk. himself, vv. 10-13. This analysis is plausible, and tempting as superseding the difficult problem of finding a connection between these sentences, viewed as the utterance of one Speaker, the Author of the parable. Ver. 9 explicitly states what ver. 8 implies, that the prudence is to be shown in the way of making friends.—φίλους: the friends are not named, but the next parable throws light on that point. They are the poor, the Lazaruses whom Dives did not make friends of—to his loss. The counsel is to use wealth in doing kindness to the poor, and the implied doctrine that doing so will be to our eternal benefit. Both counsel and doctrine are held to apply even when wealth has been ill-gotten. Friends of value for the eternal world can be gained even by the mammon of unrighteousness. The more ill-gotten the more need to be redeemed by beneficent use; only care must be taken not to continue to get money by unrighteousness in order to have wherewith to do charitable deeds, a not uncommon form of counterfeit philanthropy, which will not count in the Kingdom of Heaven. The name for wealth here is very repulsive, seeming almost to imply that wealth per se is evil, though that Jesus did not teach.—ἐκλίπη, when it (wealth) fails, as it must at death. The other reading, ἐκλίπητε (T.R.), means “when ye die,” so used in Gen. xxv. 8.—αἰωνίους σκηνάς, eternal tents, a poetic paradox = Paradise, the poor ye treated kindly there to welcome you! Believing it to be impossible that Jesus could give advice practically suggesting the doing of evil that good might come, Bornemann conjectures that an οὐ has fallen out before ποιήσετε (fut.), giving as the real counsel: do not make, etc.

Vv. 10-13. These verses contain not so much an application as a corrective of the parable. They may have been added by Lk. (so J. Weiss in Meyer, and Holtzmann, H. C.) to prevent misunderstanding, offence, or abuse, so serving the same purpose as the addition “unto repentance” to the saying, “I came not to call,” etc. (v. 32); another instance of editorial solicitude on the part of an evangelist ever careful to guard the character and teaching of Jesus against misunderstanding. So viewed, their drift is: “the steward was dishonest in money matters; do not infer that it does not matter whether you

14. Ἦκουον δὲ ταῦτα πάντα καὶ<sup>1</sup> οἱ Φαρισαῖοι φιλάργυροι ὑπάρχοντες, καὶ ἐξεμυκτήριζον αὐτόν. 15. καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Ὑμεῖς ἐστε οἱ δικαιοῦντες ἑαυτοὺς ἐνώπιον τῶν ἀνθρώπων, ὁ δὲ Θεὸς γινώσκει τὰς καρδίας ὑμῶν· ὅτι τὸ ἐν ἀνθρώποις ὑψηλὸν βδέλυγμα ἐνώπιον τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐστίν<sup>2</sup>. 16. Ὁ νόμος καὶ οἱ προφῆται ἕως<sup>3</sup> Ἰωάννου· ἀπὸ τότε ἡ βασιλεία τοῦ Θεοῦ εὐαγγελίζεται, καὶ πᾶς εἰς αὐτὴν βιάζεται. 17. Εὐκοπώτερον δὲ ἐστὶ τὸν οὐρανὸν καὶ τὴν γῆν παρελθεῖν, ἢ τοῦ νόμου μίαν κεραίαν πεσεῖν. 18. Πᾶς ὁ ἀπολύων τὴν γυναῖκα αὐτοῦ καὶ γαμῶν ἑτέραν μοιχεύει· καὶ πᾶς<sup>4</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Omit καὶ ἧBDDL 157.

<sup>2</sup> Omit ἐστίν ἧABDL al.

<sup>3</sup> For ἕως (in D al.) ἧBLRX 1, 13, 69 al. have μέχρι (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> Omit πᾶς here BDL 67, 69 al. verss.

be honest or not in that sphere. It is very necessary to be faithful even there. For faithful in little faithful in much, unfaithful in little unfaithful in much. He who is untrustworthy in connection with worldly goods is unworthy of being entrusted with the true riches; the unjust administrator of another's property will not deserve confidence as an administrator even of his own. In the parable the steward tried to serve two masters, his lord and his lord's creditors, and by so doing promoted his own interest. But the thing cannot be done, as even his case shows." This corrective, if not spoken by Jesus, is not contrary to His teaching. (Ver. 10 echoes Mt. xxv. 21, Lk. xix. 17; ver. 13 reproduces verbally the logion in Mt. vi. 24.) Yet as it stands here it waters down the parable, and weakens the point of its teaching. Note the epithets applied to money: the little or least, the unjust, and, by implication, the fleeting, that which belongs to another (τῷ ἄλλοτρίῳ). Spiritual riches are the "much," the "true" τὸ ἀληθινόν, in the Johannine sense = the ideal as opposed to the vulgar shadowy reality, "our own" (ἡμέτερον).

Vv. 14-18 form a "somewhat heavily built bridge" (H. C.) between the two parables, which set forth the right and the wrong use of riches.—Ver. 14. φιλάργυροι; an interesting and very credible bit of information concerning the Pharisees (2 Tim. iii. 2).—ἐξεμυκτήριζον (ἐκ and μύκτηρ, the nose), turned up the nose at, in contempt, again in xxiii. 35.—Ver. 15. ἐνώπιον τ. ἄ.: cf. the statements in Sermon on Mount (Mt. vi.) and in Mt. xxiii. 5.—ὅτι, etc.: a strong statement, but broadly true; conventional moral judgments are very often the reverse of the real truth: the conventionally high, estimable, really the low; the conventionally base the truly noble.—Ver. 16 = Mt. xi. 12 and 13, inverted, introduced here in view of ver. 31.—Ver. 17 = Mt. v. 18, substantially. Ver. 18 = Mt. v. 32. Its bearing here is very obscure, and its introduction in a connection to which it does not seem to belong is chiefly interesting as vouching for the genuineness of the logion. J. Weiss suggests that its relevancy and point would have been more apparent had it come in after ver. 13. On the critical question raised by this verse, vide J. Weiss in Meyer.

Vv. 19-31. Parable of the rich man and Lazarus. This story is hardly a parable in the sense of illustrating by an incident from natural life a truth in the spiritual sphere. Both story and moral belong to the same sphere. What is the moral? If Jesus spoke, or the evangelist reported, this story as the complement of the parable of the unfaithful steward, then for Speaker or reporter the moral is: see what comes of neglecting to make friends of the poor by a beneficent use of wealth. Looking to the end of this second "parable," ver. 31, and connecting that with ver. 17, we get as the lesson: the law and the prophets a sufficient guide to a godly life. Taking the first part of the story as the main thing (vv. 19-26), and connecting it with the reflection in ver. 15 about that which is lofty among men, the resulting aim will be to exemplify by an impressive imaginary example the reversal of positions in this and the next world: the happy here the damned there, and vice versa. In that case the parable simply pictorially sets forth the fact of reversal, not its ground. If with

ὁ ἀπολελυμένην ἀπὸ ἀνδρὸς γαμῶν μοιχεύει. 19. Ἄνθρωπος δέ τις ἦν πλούσιος, καὶ ἐνεδιδύσκετο πορφύραν καὶ βύσσον, εὐφραιόμενος καθ' ἡμέραν λαμπρῶς. 20. πτωχὸς δέ τις ἦν<sup>1</sup> δνόματι Λάζαρος, ὃς<sup>2</sup> ἐβέβλητο πρὸς τὸν πυλῶνα αὐτοῦ<sup>3</sup> ἠλκωμένος<sup>4</sup> 21. καὶ ἐπιθυμῶν χορτασθῆναι ἀπὸ τῶν ψιχίων<sup>4</sup> τῶν πιπτόντων ἀπὸ τῆς τραπέζης τοῦ πλουσίου· ἀλλὰ καὶ οἱ κύνες ἐρχόμενοι ἀπέλειχον<sup>5</sup> τὰ ἔλκη αὐτοῦ. 22. ἐγένετο δὲ ἀποθανεῖν τὸν πτωχόν, καὶ ἀπενεχθῆναι αὐτὸν ὑπὸ τῶν ἀγγέλων εἰς τὸν κόλπον τοῦ<sup>6</sup> Ἀβραάμ· ἀπέθανε δὲ καὶ ὁ

<sup>1</sup> τις without ἦν in  $\mathfrak{N}$ B $\mathfrak{D}$ LX 33, 157, etc.

<sup>2</sup> Omit  $\sigma\varsigma$   $\mathfrak{N}$ B $\mathfrak{D}$ LX 33, 157.

<sup>3</sup> εἰλκ. in  $\mathfrak{N}$ A $\mathfrak{B}$ D $\mathfrak{L}$  and many more.

<sup>4</sup> Omit τῶν ψυχίων  $\mathfrak{N}$ B $\mathfrak{L}$  verss. (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> ἐπέλειχον in  $\mathfrak{N}$ A $\mathfrak{B}$ LX 33.

<sup>6</sup> Omit του all uncials.

some (Weizsäcker, Holtzmann, Feine, J. Weiss) we cut the story into two, an original part spoken by Jesus and an addition by a later hand, it will have two morals, the one just indicated, and another connecting eternal perdition with the neglect of the law and prophets by a worldly unbelieving Judaism, and eternal salvation with the pious observance of the law by the poor members of the Jewish-Christian Church. On this view vide J. Weiss in Meyer.

Ver. 19. ἄνθρωπος δέ, etc.: either there was a certain rich man, or a certain man was rich, or there was a certain man—rich, this the first fact about him.—καὶ introduces the second, instead of  $\delta\varsigma$ , after the Hebrew manner.—πορφύραν καὶ βύσσον: his clothing of the costliest: "purple without, Egyptian byssus underneath" (Farrar in C. G. T.).—λαμπρῶς (from λάμπω), splendidly, characterising his style of living; life a daily feast; here only in N.T.—Ver. 20. Λάζαρος gives the impression of a story from real life, but the name for the poor man is introduced for convenience in telling the tale. He has to be referred to in the sequel (ver. 24). No symbolic meaning should be attached to the name.—πρὸς τὸν πυλῶνα αὐτοῦ: Lazarus is brought into relation with the rich man. This favours the view that the moral is the folly of neglecting beneficence. If the story were meant to illustrate merely the reversals of lot, why not describe Lazarus' situation in this world without reference to the rich man? Is he placed at his door simply that he may know him in the next world?—εἰλκωμένος: covered with ulcers, therefore needing to be carried to the rich man's gate; supposed to be a leper, hence the words lazaretto, lazar, etc.—Ver. 21. ἐπιθυμῶν, desiring, perhaps not intended to suggest that his desire was not gratified. Suppose morsels did come to him from the rich man's table, not meant for him specially, but for the hungry without, including the wild street dogs, would that exhaust the duty of Dives to his poor brother? But the trait is introduced to depict the poor man's extreme misery rather than the rich man's sin.—ἀλλὰ καὶ: no ellipse implied such as that supplied by the Vulgate: et nemo illi dabat. Bornemann supplies: "not only was he filled with the crumbs," etc., but also, etc. (ὁ μόνον ἐχορτάσθη ἀπὸ τῶν ψιχίων—πλουσίου, ἀλλὰ, etc.).—ἀλλὰ simply introduces a new feature, and heightens the picture of misery (so Schanz) = he was dependent on casual scraps for his food, and moreover, etc.—ἐπέλειχον, licked (here only in N.T.); was this an aggravation or a mitigation? Opinion is much divided. Or is the point that dogs were his companions, now licking his sores (whether a benefit or otherwise), now scrambling with him for the morsels thrown out? The scramble was as much a fact as the licking. Farrer speaks of witnessing dogs and lepers waiting together for the refuse (Wanderungen, p. 40).—Ver. 22. The end comes to the two men.—ἀπενεχθῆναι: the poor man dies, and is carried by angels into the bosom of Abraham; the man, body and soul (so Meyer), but of course this is poetry. What really happened to the carcase is passed over in delicate reserve.—ἐτάφη: of course Dives was buried with all due pomp, his funeral worth mentioning. ("It is not said that the poor man was buried because of the meanness of poor men's burial, but it is

πλούσιος, καὶ ἐτάφη. 23. καὶ ἐν τῷ ᾄδῃ ἐπάρας τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς αὐτοῦ, ὑπάρχων ἐν βασάνοις, ὄρα τὸν<sup>1</sup> Ἀβραάμ ἀπὸ μακρόθεν, καὶ Λάζαρον ἐν τοῖς κόλποις αὐτοῦ· 24. καὶ αὐτὸς φωνήσας εἶπε, Πάτερ Ἀβραάμ, ἐλέησόν με, καὶ πέμψον Λάζαρον, ἵνα βιάψῃ τὸ ἄκρον τοῦ δακτύλου αὐτοῦ ὕδατος, καὶ καταψύξῃ τὴν γλῶσσάν μου· ὅτι ὀδυνῶμαι ἐν τῇ φλογὶ ταύτῃ. 25. Εἶπε δὲ Ἀβραάμ, Τέκνον, μνήσθητι ὅτι ἀπέλαβες σὺ<sup>2</sup> τὰ ἀγαθὰ σου ἐν τῇ ζωῇ σου, καὶ Λάζαρος ὁμοίως τὰ κακὰ· νῦν δὲ ὄδε<sup>3</sup> παρακαλεῖται, σὺ δὲ ὀδυνᾷσαι. 26. καὶ ἐπὶ<sup>4</sup> πᾶσι τούτοις, μεταξύ ἡμῶν καὶ ὑμῶν χάσμα μέγα ἐστήρικται, ὅπως οἱ θέλοντες διαβῆναι ἐντεῦθεν<sup>5</sup> πρὸς ὑμᾶς, μὴ δύνωνται, μηδὲ οἱ<sup>6</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Omit τον ἸBBDLX.

<sup>2</sup> Omit συ ἸBDL, etc., verss.

<sup>3</sup> ὄδε only in minusc. ὠδε is the approved reading.

<sup>4</sup> ἐν πασι τ. in ἸBL b c d f and vulg. cop. (Tisch., R.V., W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> ἐνθεν in ἸABLX al. D omits.

<sup>6</sup> Omit οἱ before ἐκείθεν ἸBD (W.H.).

said expressly of the rich man, διὰ τὸ πολυτελεῖς τῆς τῶν πλουσιῶν ταφῆς." Euthy. Zig.)

Vv. 23-26. In the other world.—ἐν τῷ ᾄδῃ: from the O.T. point of view Hades means simply the state of the dead. Thus both the dead men would be in Hades. But here Hades seems = hell, the place of torment, and of course Lazarus is not there, but in Paradise.—ἀπὸ μακρόθεν: Paradise dimly visible, yet within speaking distance; this is not dogmatic teaching but popular description; so throughout.—ἐν τοῖς κόλποις: plural here (cf. ver. 22); so often in classics.—Ver. 24. Πάτερ Ἀ.: the rich man, like Lazarus, is a Jew, and probably, as a son of Abraham, very much surprised that he should find himself in such a place (Mt. iii. 8, 9), and still hoping that the patriarch can do something for him.—καταψύξῃ (καταψύχω, here only in N.T.): surely that small service will not be refused! If the flames cannot be put out, may the pain they cause not be mitigated by a cooling drop of water on the tip of the tongue?—a pathetic request.—Ver. 25. τέκνον: answering to Πάτερ, introducing in a kindly paternal tone a speech holding out no hope, all the less that it is so softly and quietly spoken.—τὰ ἀγαθὰ σου, τὰ κακὰ: you got your good things—what you desired, and thought you had a right to—Lazarus got the ills, not what he desired or deserved, but the ills to be met with on earth, of which he had a very full share (no αὐτοῦ after κακὰ).—νῦν δέ, but now, the now of time and of logic: the reversal of lot in the state after death a hard fact, and equitable. The ultimate ground of the reversal, character, is not referred to; it is a mere question of fairness or poetic justice.—Ver. 26. The additional reason in this verse is supplementary to the first, as if to buttress its weakness. For the tormented man might reply: surely it is pressing the principle of equity too far to refuse me the petty comfort I ask. Will cooling my tongue increase beyond what is equitable the sum of my good things? Abraham's reply to this anticipated objection is in effect: we might not grudge you this small solace if it were in our power to bring it to you, but unfortunately that is impossible.—ἐν (ἐπὶ, T.R.) πᾶσι τούτοις, in all those regions: the cleft runs from end to end, too wide to be crossed; you cannot outflank it and go round from Paradise to the place of torment. With ἐπὶ the phrase means, "in addition to what I have said".—χάσμα μέγα, a cleft or ravine (here only in N.T.), vast in depth, breadth, and length; an effectual barrier to intercommunication. The Rabbis conceived of the two divisions of Hades as separated only by a wall, a palm breadth or a finger breadth (vide Weber, Lehre des Talmud, p. 326 f.).—ὅπως implies that the cleft is there for the purpose of preventing transit civiter way; location fixed and final ἐκεῖθεν πρὸς ἡμᾶς διαπερῶσιν. 27. Εἶπε δέ, Ἐρωτῶ οὖν σε,<sup>1</sup> πάτερ, ἵνα πέμψῃς αὐτὸν εἰς τὸν οἶκον τοῦ πατρὸς μου, 28. ἔχω γὰρ πέντε ἀδελφούς· ὅπως διαμαρτύρηται αὐτοῖς, ἵνα μὴ καὶ αὐτοὶ ἔλθωσιν εἰς τὸν τόπον τοῦτον τῆς βασάνου· 29. λέγει αὐτῷ<sup>2</sup> Ἀβραάμ, Ἐχουσι Μωσέα καὶ τοὺς προφῆτας· ἀκουσάτωσαν αὐτῶν. 30. Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν, Οὐχί, πάτερ Ἀβραάμ· ἀλλ' ἐάν τις ἀπὸ νεκρῶν πορευθῆ πρὸς αὐτούς, μετανοήσουσιν. 31. Εἶπε δὲ αὐτῷ, Εἰ Μωσέως καὶ τῶν προφητῶν οὐκ ἀκούουσιν, οὐδέ, ἐάν τις ἐκ νεκρῶν ἀναστῆ, πεισθήσονται."<sup>3</sup>

<sup>1</sup> For οὖν σε (ΣLX, etc., Tisch.) ABD 69 al. have σε οὖν (W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> Many authorities (ΣBDL, etc.) add δε after λέγει, and ΣBL omit αὐτω. D has εἶπεν.

Vv. 27-31. Dives intercedes for his brethren.—Ver. 27. οὖν—if no hope for me, there may be for those still dear to me. Possibility of transit from Paradise to carthi is assumed. That this is desired reveals humane feeling. No attempt to show that Dives is utterly bad. Is such a man a proper subject for final damnation?—Ver. 28. ἀδελφούς, brothers, in the literal sense. Why force on it an allegorical sense by finding in it a reference to the Pharisees or to the Jewish people, brethren in the sense of fellow-countrymen? Five is a random number, true to natural probability; a large enough family to make interest in their eternal well-being on the part of a deceased member very intelligible.—διαμαρτύρηται, urgently testify to, telling them how it looks beyond, how it fares with their brother, with the solemn impressiveness of one who has seen.—Ver. 29. Μωσέα, etc.: cf. xviii. 20, where Jesus refers the ruler to the commandments. Moses, or the law, and the prophets = the O.T., the appointed, regular means of grace.—Ver. 30. οὐχί, a decided negative = nay! that is not enough; so he knew from his own experience; the Scriptures very good doubtless, but men are accustomed to them.—τις ἀπὸ νεκρῶν: something unusual, the preaching of a dead man returned to life, that might do.—Ver. 31. εἶπε δέ: Abraham does not plead impossibility as in reference to the first request; he simply declares his unbelief in the utility of the plan for converting the five. The denizens of Paradise set little value on the unusual as a means of grace. Abraham does not say that a short-lived sensation could not be produced; he does say that they would not be persuaded (πεισθήσονται), i.e., to repent (Hahn). By taking πεισθήσονται as meaning something less than μετανοήσουσιν, and emphasising the difference between ἐκ νεκρῶν ἀναστῆ and ἀπὸ νεκρῶν πορευθῆ (ver. 30), Trench (Notes on the Parables) makes this point: "A far mightier miracle than you demand would be ineffectual for producing a far slighter effect". It is doubtful if the contrast be legitimate in either case; certainly not as between "repent" and "be persuaded". In the other case there may be the difference between an apparition and a resurrected man. It may be noted that the resurrection of Christ and of Christians is spoken of as ἐκ νεκρῶν (vide Lk. xx. 35), while the general resurrection is ἡ ἀνάσ. τῶν νεκρῶν (e.g., 1 Cor. xv. 42).

CHAPTER XVII. A COLLECTION OF SAYINGS, INCLUDING THE PARABLE OF EXTRA SERVICE. This chapter gives the impression of being a group of fragments with little connection in place, time, or topic, and nothing is gained for exegesis by ingenious attempts at logical or topical concatenation. If we view the group of parables in chaps. xv., xvi. as a mass which has grown around the parable of the Lost Sheep as its nucleus, and reflect that that parable with the sayings in xvii. 1-4 is found in Mt. xviii., we may with some measure of confidence draw the inference that the discourse on humility at Capernaum was the original locus of at least these elements of Luke's narrative. That they are mixed up with so much matter foreign to Mt.'s record speaks to extensive transformation of the tradition of our Lord's words by the time it reached Lk.'s hands (vide Weizsäcker, Untersuchungen, p. 177).

XVII. 1. ΕΙΠΕ ΔΕ ΠΡΟΣ ΤΟΥΣ ΜΑΘΗΤΑΣ,<sup>1</sup> “<sup>2</sup>Ανένδεκτόν ἐστι τοῦ μὴ ἔλθειν τὰ σκάνδαλα<sup>2</sup>· οὐαὶ δὲ<sup>3</sup> δι’ οὗ ἔρχεται. 2. λυσιτελεῖ αὐτῷ, εἰ μύλος ὀνικός<sup>4</sup> περιίκεται περὶ τὸν τράχηλον αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἔρριπται εἰς τὴν θάλασσαν, ἢ ἵνα σκανδαλίση ἓνα τῶν μικρῶν τούτων.<sup>5</sup> 3. προσέχετε ἑαυτοῖς. ἔὰν δὲ ἁμάρτη εἰς σέ<sup>6</sup> ὁ ἀδελφός σου, ἐπιτίμησον αὐτῷ· καὶ ἔὰν μετανοήσῃ, ἄφες αὐτῷ. 4. καὶ ἔὰν ἐπτάκις τῆς ἡμέρας ἁμάρτη<sup>7</sup> εἰς σέ, καὶ ἐπτάκις τῆς ἡμέρας<sup>8</sup> ἐπιστρέψῃ ἐπὶ σέ,<sup>9</sup> λέγων, Μετανοῶ, ἀφήσεις αὐτῷ.”

5. Καὶ εἶπον οἱ ἀπόστολοι τῷ Κυρίῳ, “Πρόσθεθες ἡμῖν πίστιν.”

<sup>1</sup> ἘABDL al. verss. add αὐτου.

<sup>2</sup> For μὴ ἐλ. τα σκ. (conformed to Mt.) ἘBLX e have τα σκ. μὴ ἐλθ. του is omitted in minusc.

<sup>3</sup> πλην ουαι in ἘBDL al. (W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> For μυλ. ονικός, the true reading in Mt. and Mk., read λιθος μυλικος with ἘBDL al. verss. (Tisch., W.H.). Vide below.

<sup>5</sup> των μικρ. τουτων ενα in ἘBL (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>6</sup> εαν αμαρτη without δε and εἰς σε in ἘBL (Tisch., W.H.). DX 33 omit δε, and A 1, 42; 131, etc., omit εἰς σε.

<sup>7</sup> αμαρτηση in ABDLXΔ al. (Tisch., W.H.). T.R. = Ἐ al.

<sup>8</sup> Omit της ημερας ἘBDLX verss.

<sup>9</sup> προς σε in ἘABDLX al. ἐπι σε chiefly in minusc.

Vv. 1-4. Concerning offences and forgiving of offences (cf. Mt. xviii. 6, 7; 21, 22).—ἀνένδεκτον: here only in N.T. and hardly found in classics; with ἐστι = οὐκ ἐνδέχεται (xiii. 33), it is not possible.—τοῦ μὴ ἔλθειν: the infinitive with the genitive article may depend on ἀνένδεκτον viewed as a substantive = an impossibility of offences not coming exists (Meyer, J. Weiss), or it may be the subject to ἐστι, ἀνεν. being the predicate = that offences should not come is impossible (Schanz; Burton, M. and T., inclines to the same view, vide § 405).—Ver. 2. λυσιτελεῖ (λύω, τέλος), it profits or pays; here only in N.T. = συμφέρει in Mt. xviii. 6.—λίθος μυλικός, a millstone, a great millstone, one driven by an ass (μύλος ὀνικός, T.R.), as in Mt.: the vehement emphasis of Christ's words is toned down in Lk. here as often elsewhere. The realistic expression of Mt. is doubtless truer to the actual utterance of Jesus, who would speak of the offences created by ambition with passionate abhorrence.—περίκεται = perf. pass. of περιτίθημι in sense = has been placed; with ἔρριπται, another perfect, suggesting the idea of an action already complete—the miscreant with a stone round his neck thrown into the sea.—εἰς τὴν θάλασσαν: here again a subdued expression compared with Mt.—ἢ ἵνα σκανδαλίση, than to scandalize; the subj. with ἵνα = the infinitive. Vide Winer, § 44, 8.—Ver. 3. προσέχετε ἑ, take heed to yourselves (lest ye offend), a reminiscence of the original occasion of the discourse: ambition revealing itself in the disciple-circle.—Ver. 4. ἐπτάκις τῆς ἡμέρας, seven times a day. The number recalls Peter's question (Mt. xviii. 21), and the phrase seven times a day states the duty of forgiving as broadly as Mt.'s seventy times seven, but not in so animated a style: more in the form of a didactic rule than of a vehement emotional utterance; obviously secondary as compared with Mt.

Vv. 5-6. The power of faith (cf. Mt. xvii. 20).—οἱ ἀπόστολοι instead of μαθηταί. Ver. 1. τῷ κυρίῳ: these titles for Jesus and the Twelve betray a narrative having no connection with what goes before, and secondary in its character.—πρόσθεθες ἡμῖν πίστιν, add faith to us. This sounds more like a stereotyped petition in church prayers than a request actually made by the Twelve. How much more life-like the occasion for the utterance supplied by Mt.: “Why could not we cast him out?”—Ver. 6. εἰ ἔχετε.

6. Εἶπε δὲ ὁ Κύριος, “Εἰ εἶχετε<sup>1</sup> πίστιν, ὡς κόκκον σινάπεως, ἐλέγετε ἂν τῇ συκαμίνῳ ταύτῃ, Ἐκριώθητι, καὶ φυτεύθητι ἐν τῇ θαλάσῃ· καὶ ὑπήκουσεν ἂν ὑμῖν. 7. Τίς δὲ ἐξ ὑμῶν δούλον ἔχων
 a 1 Cor. ix. ἄροτριῶντα ἢ ποιμαίνοντα, ὃς εἰσελθόντι ἐκ τοῦ ἀγροῦ ἐρεῖ,<sup>2</sup> Εὐθέως
 b Ch. xxii. παρελθὼν ἀνάπεσαι<sup>3</sup>. 8. ἀλλ’ οὐχὶ ἐρεῖ αὐτῷ Ἐτοίμασον τί<sup>4</sup> δειπ-
 20. 1 Cor. νήσω, καὶ περιζωσάμενος διακόνει μοι, ἕως φάγω καὶ πῖω· καὶ μετὰ xi. 25. Rev. ἡσῶν, καὶ πίεσαι σύ; 9. Μὴ χάριν ἔχει<sup>4</sup> τῷ δούλῳ ἐκείνῳ,<sup>5</sup>
 iii. 20. ὅτι ἐποίησε τὰ διαταχθέντα αὐτῷ,<sup>5</sup> οὐ δοκῶ.<sup>6</sup> 10. οὕτω καὶ ὑμεῖς, ὅταν ποιήσητε πάντα τὰ διαταχθέντα ὑμῖν, λέγετε, Ὅτι δούλοι ἀχρεῖοί ἐσμεν· ὅτι<sup>7</sup> ὁ ὠφείλομεν ποιῆσαι πεποιθήκαμεν.”

II. ΚΑΙ ἐγένετο ἐν τῷ πορεύεσθαι αὐτὸν<sup>8</sup> εἰς Ἱερουσαλήμ, καὶ

<sup>1</sup> εχετε in  $\aleph$ ABLXΔ al. pl. (Tisch., W.H.). εχετε in D al.

<sup>2</sup>  $\aleph$ BDLX al. verss. add αὐτῷ.

<sup>3</sup> ἀναπασε in  $\aleph$ BD al. T.R. = L al.

<sup>4</sup> εχει χαριν in  $\aleph$ BDL 124.

<sup>5</sup> Omit εκεινω  $\aleph$ A<sup>2</sup>BDLX, and  $\aleph$ ABLD al. omit αὐτῷ after διαταχθέντα.

<sup>6</sup>  $\aleph$ BLX 1, 28, 118, 131 al. verss. omit ου δοκω (Tisch., Trg., text, R.V., W.H.).

<sup>7</sup> Omit οτι here  $\aleph$ ABDL al. verss.

<sup>8</sup> Omit αὐτον  $\aleph$ BL.

εἰ with pres. in protasis, the imperf. in apodosis with ἂν. Possession of faith already sufficient to work miracles is here admitted. In Mt. the emphasis lies on the want of such faith. Another instance of Lk.'s desire to spare the Twelve.—συκαμίνῳ, here only in N.T. = συκομορέα, xix. 4, the fig mulberry tree (vide there). A tree here, a mountain in Mt.; and the miraculous feat is not rooting it out of the earth but replanting it in the sea—a natural impossibility. Pricaeus cites a classic parallel: τὸ πέλαγος πρότερον οἶσει ἄμπελον.

Vv. 7-10. The parable of extra service, in Luke only. For this name and the view of the parable implied in it see my Parabolic Teaching of Christ. It is there placed among the theoretic parables as teaching a truth about the Kingdom of God, viz., that it makes exacting demands on its servants which can only be met by a heroic temper. “Christ’s purpose is not to teach in what spirit God deals with His servants, but to teach rather in what spirit we should serve God.”—Ver. 7. εὐθέως: to be connected not with ἐρεῖ but with παρελθὼν ἂ. = he does not say: Go at once and get your supper.—Ver. 8. ἀλλ’ οὐχί: ἀλλὰ implies the negation of the previous supposition.—ἕως φάγω, etc., “till I have eaten,” etc., A.V.; or, while I eat and drink.—Ver. 9. μὴ ἔχει χάριν, he does not thank him, does he? the service taken as a matter of course, all in the day’s work.—Ver. 10. οὕτως, so, in the Kingdom of God: extremes meet. The service of the Kingdom is as unlike that of a slave to his owner as possible in spirit; but it is like in the heavy demands it makes, which we have to take as a matter of course.—διαταχθέντα, commanded. In point of fact it is not commands but demands we have to deal with, arising out of special emergencies.—δούλοι ἀχρεῖοι: the words express the truth in terms of the parabolic representation which treats of a slave and his owner. But the idea is: the hardest demands of the Kingdom are to be met in a spirit of patience and humility, a thing possible only for men who are as remote as possible from a slavish spirit: heroic, generous, working in the spirit of free self-devotion. Such men are not unprofitable servants in God’s sight; rather He accounts them “good and faithful,” Mt. xxv. 21. Syr. Sin. reads simply “we are servants”.

Vv. 11-19. The ten lepers.—Ver. 11. εἰς Ἱερ.: the note of time seems to take us back to ix. 51. No possibility of introducing historic sequence into the section of Lk. lying between ix. 51 and xviii. 15.—αὐτὸς, He without emphasis; not He, as opposed to other pilgrims taking another route, directly through Samaria (so Meyer and Godet).—διὰ μέσον = διὰ μέσου (T.R.), μέσον being used adverbially as in Philip. ii. 15 = through between the two provinces

αὐτὸς διήρχετο διὰ μέσου<sup>1</sup> Σαμαρείας καὶ Γαλιλαίας. 12. καὶ εἰσερχομένῳ αὐτοῦ εἰς τινα κώμην, ἀπήντησαν<sup>2</sup> αὐτῷ<sup>3</sup> δέκα λεπροὶ ἄνδρες, οἱ ἔστησαν<sup>4</sup> πόρρωθεν. 13. καὶ αὐτοὶ ἦσαν φωνήν, λέγοντες, “Ἰησοῦ, ἐπιστάτα, ἐλέησον ἡμᾶς.” 14. Καὶ ἰδὼν εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Πορευθέντες ἐπιδείξατε ἑαυτοὺς τοῖς ἱερεῦσι.” Καὶ ἐγένετο ἐν τῷ ὑπάγειν αὐτοὺς, ἑκαθαρίσθησαν. 15. εἰς δὲ ἐξ αὐτῶν, ἰδὼν ὅτι ἰάθη, ὑπέστρεψε, μετὰ φωνῆς μεγάλης δοξάζων τὸν Θεόν. 16. καὶ ἔπescen ἐπὶ πρόσωπον παρὰ τοὺς πόδας αὐτοῦ, εὐχαριστῶν αὐτῷ. καὶ αὐτὸς ἦν Σαμαρεῖτης. 17. ἀποκριθεὶς δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν, “Οὐχὶ<sup>5</sup> οἱ δέκα ἑκαθαρίσθησαν; οἱ δὲ<sup>6</sup> ἑννέα ποῦ; 18. οὐχ εὐρέθησαν ὑποστρέψαντες δοῦναι δόξαν τῷ Θεῷ, εἰ μὴ ὁ ἀλλογενὴς οὗτος;” 19. Καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, “Ἀναστὰς πορεύου. ἡ πίστις σου σέσωκέ σε.”

<sup>1</sup> δια μεσον in  $\mathfrak{N}$ BL (D μεσον alone) 1, 13, 69 al. ανα μεσον.

<sup>2</sup> So in ABX al. (W.H. text). υπηντ. in  $\mathfrak{N}$ L 1, 13, 69, 131 al. (Tisch., W.H., marg.).

<sup>3</sup> BL omit αυτω (W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> BF 157 have ανεστησαν (W.H. text).

<sup>5</sup> ουχ in BLS 131.

<sup>6</sup> Omit δε AD (Tisch., W.H., brackets), found in  $\mathfrak{N}$ BLX, etc.

named, on the confines of both, which explains the mixture of Jews and Samaritans in the crowd of lepers.—Ver. 12. δέκα λεπροί: ten, a large number, the disease common. Rosenmüller (das A. and N. Morgenland) cites from Dampier a similar experience; lepers begging alms from voyagers on the river Camboga, when they approached their village, crying to them from afar. They could not heal them, but they gave them a little rice.—Ver. 13. ἐπιστάτα: this word is peculiar to Lk., which suggests editorial revision of the story.—ἐλέησον: a very indefinite request compared with that of the leper in v. 12 f., whose remarkable words are given in identical terms by all the synoptists. The interest wanes here.—Ver. 14. ἐπιδείξατε ἐ.: the same direction as in the first leper narrative, but without reason annexed.—ἱερεῦσι: plural, either to the priests of their respective nationalities (Kuinoel, J. Weiss, etc.) or to the priests of the respective districts to which they belonged (Hahn).—ἐν τῷ ὑπάγειν, etc., on the way to the priests they were healed. Did they show themselves to the priests? That does not appear. The story is defective at this point (“negligently told,” Schleier.), either because the narrator did not know or because he took no interest in that aspect of the case. The priests might not be far off.

—Ver. 15. δοξάζων τ. Θ.: general statement, exact words not known, so also in report of thanksgiving to Jesus.—Ver. 16. Σαμαρεῖτης: this, with the comment of Jesus, the point of interest for Lk.—Ver. 17. οὐχ (οὐχι, T.R.): asking a question and implying an affirmative answer. Yet the fact of asking the question implies a certain measure of doubt. No direct information as to what happened had reached Jesus presumably, and He naturally desires explanation of the non-appearance of all but one. Were not all the ten (οἱ δέκα, now a familiar number) healed, that you come back alone?—ποῦ: emphatic position: the nine—where? expressing the suspicion that not lack of healing but lack of gratitude was the matter with the nine.—Ver. 18. οὐχ εὐρέθησαν, etc., best taken as another question (so R.V.).—ἀλλογενής, here only, in N.T.; also in Sept. = ἀλλόφυλος and ἀλλοεθνής in classics, an alien. Once more the Jew suffers by comparison with those without in respect of genuine religious feeling—faith, gratitude. It is not indeed said that all the rest were Jews. What is certain is that the one man who came back was not a Jew.—Ver. 19. ἀναστὰς πορεύου: that might be all that Jesus said (so in B), as it was the man's gratitude, natural feeling of thankfulness, not his faith, that was in evidence. But Lk., feeling that it was an abrupt conclusion, might add ἡ πίστις σ. σ. to round off the sentence, which may therefore be the true reading.

20. Ἐπερωτηθεὶς δὲ ὑπὸ τῶν Φαρισαίων, πότε ἔρχεται ἡ βασιλεία τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἀπεκρίθη αὐτοῖς, καὶ εἶπεν, "Οὐκ ἔρχεται ἡ βασιλεία τοῦ Θεοῦ μετὰ ὁ παρατηρήσεως· 21. οὐδὲ ἐροῦσιν, ἴδου ὧδε, ἢ, ἴδου<sup>1</sup> ἐκεῖ. ἴδου γάρ, ἡ βασιλεία τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐντὸς ὑμῶν ἐστίν." 22. Εἶπε δὲ πρὸς τοὺς μαθητάς, "Ἐλεύσονται ἡμέραι, ὅτε ἐπιθυμήσετε μίαν

<sup>1</sup> The second ἴδου in D and many other uncials is omitted in  $\aleph$ BL 157.

Vv. 20-37. Concerning the coming of the Kingdom and the advent of the Son of Man. In this section the words of Jesus are distributed between Pharisees and disciples, possibly according to the evangelist's impression as to the audience they suited. Weiffenbach (Wieder-kunftsgedanke Jesu, p. 217) suggests that the words in vv. 20, 21 were originally addressed to disciples who did not yet fully understand the inward spiritual character of the Kingdom of God. I am inclined to attach some weight to this suggestion. I am sure at any rate that it is not helpful to a true understanding of Christ's sayings to lay much stress on Lk.'s historical introductions to them.

Vv. 20, 21. μετὰ παρατηρήσεως: there is considerable diversity of opinion in the interpretation of this important expression. The prevailing view is that Jesus meant thereby to deny a coming that could be observed with the eye ("not with observation"). The older interpretation "not with pomp" (μετὰ περιφανείας ἀνθρωπίνης is the gloss of Euthy. Zig.) is closely related to this view, because such pomp alone would make the kingdom visible to the vulgar eye. J. Weiss (Meyer) contends that it is not visibility but predictability that is negated. Παρατήρησις, he remarks, "is used of the observation of the heavenly bodies, from whose movements one can calculate when an expected phenomenon will appear. In a similar way the apocalyptists sought to determine by signs the moment when the kingdom should be set up. That was what the Pharisees expected of Jesus with their πότε ἔρχεται. And it is just this that Jesus declines. The Kingdom of God comes not so that one can fix its appearing by observation beforehand." The assumption is that when it does come the kingdom will be visible. It does not seem possible by mere verbal interpretation to decide between the two views. Each interpreter will be influenced by his idea of the general drift of Christ's teaching concerning the nature of the kingdom. My own sympathies are with those who find in Christ's words a denial of vulgar or physical visibility. —Ver. 21. οὐδὲ ἐροῦσι, nor will they say; there will be nothing to give occasion for saying: non erit quod dicatur, Grotius.—ὧδε, ἐκεῖ, here, there, implying a visible object that can be located.—ἐντὸς ὑμῶν, within you, in your spirit. This rendering best corresponds with the non-visibility of the kingdom. The thought would be a very appropriate one in discourse to disciples. Not so in discourse to Pharisees. To them it would be most natural to say "among you" = look around and see my works: devils cast out (Lk. xi. 20), and learn that the kingdom is already here (ἐφθασεν ἐφ' ὑμᾶς). Kindred to this rendering is that of Tertullian (c. Marcionem, L. iv., 35): in your power, accessible to you: in manu, in potestate vestra. The idea "among you" would be more clearly expressed by ἤδη ἐν μέσῳ ὑμῶν. Cf. John i. 26. μέσος ὑ. στήκει, etc., one stands among you whom ye know not—cited by Euthy. to illustrate the meaning of our passage. Field (Ot. Nor.) contends that there is no clear instance of ἐντὸς in the sense of "among," and cites as an example of its use in the sense of "within" Ps. ciii. 1, πάντα τὰ ἐντὸς μου.

Vv. 22-25. The coming of the Son of Man (Mt. xxiv. 26-28).—πρὸς τ. μαθητάς: so in Mt., but at a later time and at Jerusalem; which connection is the more original cannot be decided.—ἐλεύσονται ἡμέραι, there will come days (of tribulation), ominous hint like that in v. 35.—μίαν τ. ἡ., etc., one of the days of the Son of Man; not past days in the time of discipleship, but days to come. Tribulation will make them long for the advent, which will put an end to their sorrows. One of the days; why not the first, the beginning of the Messianic period? Hahn actually takes μίαν as = first, Hebraistic fashion, as in τῶν ἡμερῶν τοῦ υἱοῦ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἰδεῖν, καὶ οὐκ ὄψεσθε. 23. καὶ ἐροῦσιν ὑμῖν, Ἰδοὺ ὠδε, ἢ, ἰδοὺ ἐκεῖ<sup>1</sup>. μὴ ἀπελθῆτε, μηδὲ<sup>2</sup> διώξητε. 24. ὡσπερ γὰρ ἡ ἀστραπή ἢ<sup>3</sup> ἀστράπτουσα ἐκ τῆς ὑπ' οὐρανὸν<sup>4</sup> εἰς τὴν ὑπ' οὐρανὸν λάμπει, οὕτως ἔσται καὶ<sup>5</sup> ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ αὐτοῦ.<sup>6</sup> 25. πρῶτον δὲ δεῖ αὐτὸν πολλὰ παθεῖν, καὶ ἀποδοκιμασθῆναι ἀπὸ τῆς γενεᾶς ταύτης. 26. καὶ καθὼς ἐγένετο ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις τοῦ<sup>7</sup> Νῶε, οὕτως ἔσται καὶ ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις τοῦ υἱοῦ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου. 27. ἦσθιον, ἔπινον, ἐγάμου, ἐξεγαμίζοντο,<sup>8</sup> ἄχρι ἧς ἡμέρας εἰσηλθε Νῶε εἰς τὴν κιβωτόν, καὶ ἦλθεν ὁ κατακλυσμός, καὶ ἀπώλεσεν ἅπαντας. 28. ὁμοίως καὶ ὡς<sup>9</sup> ἐγένετο ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις Λῶτ· ἦσθιον, ἔπινον, ἠγόραζον, ἐπώλουν, ἐφύτευον, ἀκοδόμου· 29. ἡ δὲ ἡμέρα ἐξηλθε Λῶτ ἀπὸ Σοδόμων, ἔβρεξε πῦρ καὶ θεῖον ἀπ' οὐρανοῦ, καὶ ἀπώλεσεν ἅπαντας· 30. κατὰ ταῦτα<sup>10</sup> ἔσται

<sup>1</sup> For ἰδου ὠδε η ἰδου ἐκει some copies have ἰδου ὠδε ἰδου ἐκει (DXΠ), some ἰδου ἐκει ἰδου ὠδε (L). Some have this order of ἐκει, ὠδε, but retaining η (B). ἢ has καί.

<sup>2</sup> Omit ἀπελθῆτε μηδε B 13, 69 (W.H. brackets).

<sup>3</sup> Omit this η ἢBLXΓ 169 al.

<sup>4</sup> ὑπο τον ουρ. in ἢBD al.

<sup>5</sup> Omit καί ἢABLX al.

<sup>6</sup> BD 220 a b e i omit εν τη ημ. α. (W.H. text).

<sup>7</sup> Omit τον all uncials.

<sup>8</sup> εγαμ. in ἢBDLX al.

<sup>9</sup> και ως in D al. καθως in ἢBLRX 13, 69 al.

<sup>10</sup> κατα τα αυτα in BDX al. T.R. = ἢLD al.

Mt. xxviii. 1, Mk. xvi. 2.—οὐκ ὄψεσθε, ye shall not see, not necessarily an absolute statement, but meaning: the vision will be deferred till your heart gets sick; so laying you open to temptation through false readers of the times encouraging delusive hope.—Ver. 23. ἐκεῖ, ὠδε: cf. the more graphic version in Mt. xxiv. 26, and notes thereon.—μὴ διώξητε, do not follow them, give no heed to them.—Ver. 24. ἐκ τῆς, χώρας understood, so also χώραν after εἰς τὴν = from this quarter under heaven to that. Here again Mt.'s version is the more graphic and original = from east to west.—Ver. 25. πρῶτον δὲ δεῖ, etc.; the Passion must come before the glorious lightning-like advent. What you have to do meantime is to prepare yourselves for that.

Vv. 26-30. The advent will be a surprise (Mt. xxiv. 37-41).—Ver. 27. ἦσθιον, etc.: note the four verbs without connecting particles, a graphic asyndeton; and note the imperfect tense: those things going on up to the very hour of the advent, as it was in the days of Noah, or in the fateful day of Pompeii.—Ver. 28. ὁμοίως: introducing a new comparison = similarly, as it was in the days, etc.—so shall it be in the day of, etc. (ver. 30). Bornemann ingeniously connects ὁμοίως with ἅπαντας going before, and, treating it as a Latinism, renders perdidit omnes pariter.—ἦσθιον, etc.: again a series of unconnected verbs, and a larger, six, and all in the imperfect tense. This second comparison, taken from Lot's history, is not given in Mt. The suddenness of the catastrophe makes it very apposite.—Ver. 29. ἔβρεξε (βρέχω): an old poetic word used in late Greek for sein, to rain. βροχή is the modern Greek for rain (vide Mt. v. 45).—Ver. 30. κατὰ τὰ αὐτὰ, etc., the apodosis of the long sentence beginning ver. 28.

Vv. 31-34. Sauve qui peut (Mt. xxiv. 17, 18; Mk. xiii. 15, 16). The saying in ver. 31 is connected in Mt. and Mk. with the crisis of Jerusalem, to which in this discourse in Lk. there is no allusion.

ἢ ἡμέρα ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἀποκαλύπτεται. 31. ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ, ὅς ἔσται ἐπὶ τοῦ δώματος, καὶ τὰ σκεύη αὐτοῦ ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ, μὴ καταβάτω ἄραι αὐτὰ· καὶ ὁ ἐν τῷ<sup>1</sup> ἀγρῷ ὁμοίως μὴ ἐπιστρέψατω εἰς τὰ ὀπίσω. 32. μνημονεύετε τῆς γυναικὸς Λῶτ. 33. ὅς ἐὰν ζητήσῃ τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ σῶσαι,<sup>2</sup> ἀπολέσει αὐτήν· καὶ ὅς ἐὰν<sup>3</sup> ἀπολέσῃ αὐτήν,<sup>4</sup> ζωογονήσει αὐτήν. 34. λέγω ὑμῖν, ταῦτα τῇ νυκτὶ ἔσονται δύο ἐπὶ κλίνης μιᾶς<sup>5</sup>· ὁ<sup>6</sup> εἰς παραληφθήσεται, καὶ ὁ ἕτερος ἀφεθήσεται. 35. δύο ἔσονται<sup>7</sup> ἀλήθουσαι ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτό· μία<sup>8</sup> παραληφθήσεται, καὶ ἡ<sup>9</sup> ἕτέρα ἀφεθήσεται.” 37. Καὶ ἀποκριθέντες λέγουσιν αὐτῷ, “Ποῦ, κύριε;” Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Ὅπου τὸ σῶμα, ἐκεῖ συναχθήσονται οἱ αἰετοί.”<sup>10</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Omit τῷ ἝBL 13, 69, 346.

<sup>2</sup> For σῶσαι (Ἕ al.) BL vet. Lat. (4) have περιποιήσασθαι (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> ος δ αν in ἝBL 69 al.

<sup>4</sup> ἀπολεση in BD. ἀπολεσει in ἝL (Tisch., W.H.). ἝBD 1, 33, 131 omit αὐτην after ἀπολ.

<sup>5</sup> B omits μιᾶς (W.H. brackets).

<sup>6</sup> All uncials except B omit ο.

<sup>7</sup> ἔσονται δυο in Ἕ<sup>a</sup>BDL a cop. syr. cur.

<sup>8</sup> η μια in Ἕ<sup>a</sup>BDR 1, 69.

<sup>9</sup> For και η (D al.) Ἕ<sup>a</sup>BLR have η δε.

<sup>10</sup> For συναχ. οι αετοι ἝBL have και οι αετοι επισυναχθησονται (Tisch., W.H.).

The connection in Mt. and Mk. seems the more appropriate, as a literal flight was then necessary.—Ver. 32. μνημονεύετε, etc.: the allusion to Lot's wife is prepared for by the comparison in ver. 28. It is not in Mt. and Mk., being inappropriate to the flight they had in view. No fear of looking back when an invading army was at the gates. Lk. has in view the spiritual application, as is shown by the next ver., which reproduces in somewhat altered form the word spoken at Caesarea Philippi concerning losing and saving life (ix. 24).—ζωογονήσει, will preserve alive, used literally in this sense in Acts vii. 19.

Vv. 34-37. The final separation (Mt. xxiv. 40, 41).—Ver. 34. τ. τ. νυκτὶ, on that night; day hitherto, the Jewish day began with night (Hahn), and the reference to night suits the following illustration. No need to take night metaphorically = imago miseriae (Kuinoel).—ἐπὶ κλίνης μ., in one bed; in the field in Mt.—Ver. 35. ἀλήθουσαι ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτό, grinding at the same place; in the mill, Mt. Proximity the point emphasised in Lk.—near each other, yet how remote their destinies!—Ver. 37. σῶμα, the carcass =

πῶμα, Mt. xxiv. 28; so used in Homer, who employs δέμας for the living body.

CHAPTER XVIII. 1-14. THE PARABLES OF THE UNJUST JUDGE AND THE PHARISEE AND THE PUBLICAN.—Vv. 1-8. The unjust judge, in Lk. only.—Ver. 1. παραβολὴν: the story is a parable in so far as it teaches by an incident in natural life the power of perseverance with reference to the spiritual life.—πρὸς, in reference to, indicating the subject or aim of the parable—de (so Kypke, with examples).—πάντοτε: not continuously, but persistently in spite of temptation to cease praying through delayed answer = keep praying, notwithstanding delay. The whole raison d'être of the parable is the existence of such delay. Some fail to see this and think that the difference between God and the judge is that He does not delay. It is not so. God is like the judge in this, only His delay has not the same cause or motive. The judge represents God as He appears in Providence to tried faith—ἐκκακεῖν: a Pauline word (Gal. vi. 9; 2 Thess. iii. 13, etc.). This introduction to the parable is probably due to Lk., who, it will be observed, takes care to make the lesson of general

XVIII. 1. "ΕΛΕΓΕ δὲ καὶ<sup>1</sup> παραβολὴν αὐτοῖς πρὸς τὸ δεῖν πάντοτε προσεύχεσθαι,<sup>2</sup> καὶ μὴ ἐκκακεῖν, 2. λέγων, "Κριτὴς τις ἦν ἐν τινι πόλει, τὸν Θεὸν μὴ φοβούμενος, καὶ ἄνθρωπον μὴ ἐντρέπομενος. 3. χήρα δὲ ἦν ἐν τῇ πόλει ἐκείνῃ, καὶ ἤρχετο πρὸς αὐτόν, λέγουσα, "Ἐκδίκησόν με ἀπὸ τοῦ ἀντιδίκου μου. 4. Καὶ οὐκ ἠθέλησεν<sup>3</sup> ἐπὶ χρόνον· μετὰ δὲ ταῦτα<sup>4</sup> εἶπεν ἐν ἑαυτῷ, Εἰ καὶ τὸν Θεὸν οὐ φοβοῦμαι, καὶ ἄνθρωπον οὐκ<sup>5</sup> ἐντρέπομαι· 5. διὰ γε τὸ παρέχειν μοι κόπον τὴν χήραν ταύτην, ἐκδικήσω αὐτήν, ἵνα μὴ εἰς τέλος ἐρχομένη<sup>b</sup> ὑπωπιάζῃ με." 6. Εἶπε δὲ ὁ Κύριος, "Ἀκούσατε

Rom. xii.
19. 2 Cor.
x. 6. Rev
vi. 10;
xix. 2.

b 1 Cor. ix.
27.

<sup>1</sup> Omit καὶ ᾤBLM 13, 69, 131 al. it. (4) cop.

<sup>2</sup> αὐτους after προσευχ. in ᾤBL al.

<sup>3</sup> ἠθελεν in ᾤABDLX al.

<sup>4</sup> μετὰ ταυτα δε in BLQ (W.H.). T.R = ᾤD al. (Tisch.).

<sup>5</sup> For καὶ ανθ. ουκ (D al. pl.) ᾤBLX 157 it. (8) vulg. have ουδε ανθρωπον.

application, though the δὲ after ἔλεγε and the concluding reflection in ver. 8 imply that the special subject of prayer contemplated both by Lk. and by our Lord was the advent referred to in the previous context.

Vv. 2-5. The parable.—τὸν Θεόν, etc.: a proverbial description for a thoroughly unprincipled man (examples from classics in Wetstein).—ἐντρέπομενος, having respect for, with accusative, as in late Greek; in earlier writers with genitive.—Ver. 3. χήρα, a widow, such a suppliant tests a man's character. Her weakness appeals to a generous, noble nature, and is taken advantage of by an ignoble.—ἤρχετο, presumably used in a frequentative sense = ventitabat (Grotius), though not necessarily meaning more than "began to come," with possibility of recurrence.—ἐκδίκησόν με, give me redress or satisfaction. "Avenge me" is too strong.—Ver. 4. ἐπὶ χρόνον, for a considerable time. Per multum tempus (Vulgate) may be too strong, but it is in the right direction. The scope of the parable and the use of the word χρόνος in a pregnant sense implying πολύς (vide examples in Kypke) demand a time sufficient to test the temper of the parties.—ἐν ἑαυτῷ, within himself. The characters in Lk.'s parables are given to talking to themselves (Prodigal, Unjust Steward).—Ver. 5. διὰ γε, etc.: similar expression in xi. 8. The parable before us is a companion to that of the Selfish Neighbour. The two should be studied together—vide The Parabolic Teaching of Christ.—κόπον: the power of the petitioner in both parables lies in their ability and determination to disturb the comfort of those they address. The neighbour and the judge are both selfish, care only for their own ease, and it is that very quality that gives the suppliants their opportunity. They can annoy the reluctant into granting their requests—success certain.—εἰς τέλος: interpreters differ as to the meaning of this phrase, and whether it should be connected with ἐρχομένη or with ὑπωπιάζῃ. The two ways of rendering the last clause of ver. 5 are: lest coming continually, she weary me to death, or lest coming and coming, she at last give me black eyes; of course meant in a humorous sense. The latter rendering does more justice to the humour of the situation, but the other seems more in harmony with the scope of the parable, which is to enforce persistence in prayer—continual coming. The present tense in participle and verb also seems to demand the first rendering; it points to a process in the coming and in its effect on the judge, the two keeping pace with each other. As she keeps coming, he gets more and more bored. If a final act, the use of fists (seriously or humorously meant) were pointed at by ὑπωπ., the aorist would have been more suitable. (So Field in Or. Nor.) The philological commentators differ in regard to the sense of εἰς τέλος, some taking it = perpetuo, indiesinenter (Grotius, Kypke); others = tandem (Palaiet); others = omnino (Raphel); all citing examples.

Vv. 6-8. The moral.—κριτὴς τ. ἀδικίας, cf. οἰκονόμον τ. ἀ., xvi. 8.—Ver. 7. οὐ μὴ ποιήσῃ, etc., will not God avenge, etc., the question implying strongly that τί ὁ κριτὴς τῆς ἀδικίας λέγει· 7. ὁ δὲ Θεὸς οὐ μὴ ποιήσει<sup>1</sup> τὴν ἐκδίκησιν τῶν ἐκλεκτῶν αὐτοῦ τῶν βοώντων πρὸς αὐτὸν<sup>2</sup> ἡμέρας καὶ νυκτός, καὶ μακροθυμῶν<sup>3</sup> ἐπ' αὐτοῖς; 8. λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι ποιήσει τὴν ἐκδίκησιν αὐτῶν ἐν τάχει. πλὴν ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἔλθων ἄρα εὐρήσει τὴν πίστιν ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς;”

9. Εἶπε δὲ καὶ πρὸς τινὰς τοὺς πεποιθότας ἐφ' ἑαυτοῖς ὅτι εἰσὶ δίκαιοι, καὶ ἐξουθενούντας τοὺς λοιπούς, τὴν παραβολὴν ταύτην· 10. “Ἀνθρωποὶ δύο ἀνέβησαν εἰς τὸ ἱερὸν προσεύξασθαι· ὁ 4 εἰς Φαρισαῖος, καὶ ὁ ἕτερος τελώνης. 11. ὁ Φαρισαῖος σταθεῖς πρὸς ἑαυτὸν ταῦτα<sup>5</sup> προσήχετο, Ὁ Θεός, εὐχαριστῶ σοι, ὅτι οὐκ εἰμί ὡσπερ<sup>6</sup> οἱ λοιποὶ τῶν ἀνθρώπων, ἄρπαγες, ἀδικοὶ, μοιχοί, ἢ καὶ ὡς

<sup>1</sup> So in L al. ποιησῆ in ΞBDQXΔ al. pl.

<sup>2</sup> αὐτῶ in ΞBLQ.

<sup>3</sup> μακροθυμῆ in ΞABDLQXΠ 1, 157, 209 (modern editors).

<sup>4</sup> ο εἰς in ΞALQ, etc. (Tisch.). εἰς in BDRX (W.H. text and in marg.).

<sup>5</sup> ταῦτα before πρὸς ε. in BL 1, 131 e vulg. (W.H. text). Ξ and codd. Lat. vet. omitt. πρὸς εαυτον (Tisch.).

<sup>6</sup> So in ΞAB al. (Tisch., W.H., text). DLQ al. pauc. have ὡς (W.H. marg.).

He will, but the emphasis is rendered necessary by appearances to the contrary, which strongly try men's faith in His good will—long delays in answering prayer which wear the aspect of indifference.—τῶν ἐκλεκτῶν α., His elect: standing in a close relation, so named to support the previous assertion. But in the dark hour of trial it is difficult to extract comfort from the title. Then the doubt arises: is the idea of election not a delusion? What are we to the far-off Deity?—τῶν βοώντων: from these words down to the end of the sentence (ἐπ' αὐτοῖς) is a single clause meant to define the situation of “the elect”. They are persons who keep crying to God day and night, while He seems to pay no heed to them, but delays action in their case, and in their interest. The words down to νυκτός describe the need of Divine interference; those which follow describe the experience which tempts to doubt whether succour will be forthcoming.—μακροθυμῆ: this verb means to be slow, leisurely, unimpulsive in temper, whether in punishing or in succouring, or in any other form of action. Instances of the use of the verb in the first-mentioned occur in 2 Maccab. vi. 14 (cited by Pricaeus) and Sirach xxxv. 22 (οὐ μὴ βραδύνῃ οὐδὲ μὴ μακροθυμήσει ἐπ' αὐτοῖς, frequently quoted). In James v. 7 it is applied to the husbandman waiting for harvest. Here it is applied to God's leisureliness in coming to the help of tried saints. The construction καὶ μακροθυμῆ is of the Hebraistic type.—Ver. 8. ἐν τάχει, quickly, quite compatible with delay; quickly when the hour comes = suddenly.—πλὴν, yet; in spite of the alleged speed, the time will seem so long that, etc.—ἄρα, so to be taken (not ἄρα), as bearing a major force of reasoning, and interrogative. The two words are one in essence, but ἄρα has more emphasis in utterance, and therefore the first syllable is lengthened, and it stands at the beginning of a sentence, here before εὐρήσει; cf. Gal. ii. 17. On the two particles vide Klotz in Dev., p. 180.—πίστιν: not absolutely, but in reference to the second coming, hope deferred making the heart sick.

Vv. 9-14. The Pharisee and the publican.—Ver. 9. πρὸς τινὰς, with reference to certain persons; who not indicated, of what sort definitely described. This introduction is doubtless an editorial heading extracted from the story. It is true, but not necessarily the whole truth. The story may have been spoken to publicans to encourage them to hope in God's mercy—at the Capernaum gathering, e.g.—παραβολὴν: it is not really a parable, but simply an imaginary incident within the sphere to which its moral belongs.—Ver. 11. σταθεῖς, having taken his stand; fidenter loco solito (Bengel); “a sign less of confidence οὗτος ὁ τελώνης. 12. νηστεύω δις τοῦ σαββάτου, ἀποδεκατῶ<sup>1</sup> πάντα ὅσα κτῶμαι. 13. Καὶ ὁ<sup>2</sup> τελώνης μακρόθεν ἑστῶς οὐκ ἤθελεν οὐδὲ τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς εἰς τὸν οὐρανὸν ἐπάραι<sup>3</sup>. ἄλλ' ἔτυπεν εἰς<sup>4</sup> τὸ στήθος αὐτοῦ, λέγων, Ὁ Θεός, ἰλάσθητί μοι τῷ ἁμαρτωλῷ. 14. Λέγων ὑμῖν, κατέβη οὗτος δεδικαιωμένος εἰς τὸν οἶκον αὐτοῦ, ἢ ἐκεῖνος,<sup>5</sup> ὅτι πᾶς ὁ ὑψῶν ἑαυτὸν ταπεινωθήσεται· ὁ δὲ ταπεινῶν ἑαυτὸν ὑψωθήσεται."

15. Προσέφερον δὲ αὐτῷ καὶ τὰ βρέφη, ἵνα αὐτῶν ἄπτηται·

<sup>1</sup> αποδεκατεω in  $\aleph B$ .

<sup>2</sup> For καὶ ο (ADQX al.)  $\aleph BGL$  69 al. have ο δε.

<sup>3</sup> επαραι εἰς τ. ουρ. in  $\aleph BLQX$  33 verss.

<sup>4</sup> Omit this εἰς  $\aleph BDLQX$  it. vulg.

<sup>5</sup> For η εκεινος (found in minusc.)  $\text{A}\rho\text{Q}\chi\Delta$  al. have η γαρ εκ. (Tisch.).  $\aleph BL$  1 94 al. sah. cop. Orig. have παρ εκεινον (Alf., Trg., W.H.).

than of self-importance" (J. Weiss in Meyer). Probably both qualities are aimed at.—πρὸς ἑαυτὸν: whether these words should be taken with σταθεῖς or with προσήχητο is disputed. If the position of ταῦτα before πρὸς ἐ. in BL be accepted, there is no room for doubt. Hahn contends that the proper meaning of πρὸς ἐ. προσήχητο is "prayed to himself," and that there is no instance of the use of πρὸς ἐ. in the sense of "with himself". Godet takes the phrase as = to himself, and regards the so-called prayer as simply self-congratulation in God's presence.—οἱ λοιποὶ τ. ἄ.: not necessarily all mankind, rather all the Jewish world outside his coterie = am haarez.—ἄρπαγες, etc. these hard words recall the elder brother's μετὰ πορνῶν (xv. 30).—ἢ καὶ, or even, the publican pointed at as the ne plus ultra of depravity: the best foil to Pharisaic exemplariness.—Ver. 12. δις τ. σ., twice in the week: voluntary fasts on Mondays and Thursdays, ultra-legal in his zeal.—ἀποδεκατῶ (-εύω, W. and H.) = δεκατεύω in Greek writers: tithing a typical instance of Pharisaic strictness.—πάντα, all, great and small, even garden herbs, again ultra-legal.—κτῶμαι, all I get (R.V.).—Ver. 13. ὁ τελώνης: the demeanour of the publican is drawn in vivid contrast to that of the Pharisee; he stands aloof, not in pride but in acute consciousness of demerit, does not dare to lift his eyes towards the object of prayer, beats upon his breast in pungent grief for sin.—τῷ ἁμαρτωλῷ, the sinner; he thinks of himself only and of himself as the sinner, well known as such, the one fact worth mentioning about him, as one might speak about the drunkard of the village. Koetsveld remarks: "The publican might see his own picture in the prodigal son; no doubt many a son out of a good house took to a publican's trade as a last resort".—Ver. 14. δεδικαιωμένος, justified (here only in Gospels), a Pauline word, but not necessarily used in a Pauline sense = pardoned.—παρ' ἐκεῖνον (ἢ ἐκεῖνος, T.R.), in comparison with that one (the Pharisee). The reading ἢ γὰρ ἐκεῖνος (QX) would have to be taken as a question—or was that one justified? The publican was the justified man; you would not say the other one was?—ὄτι, etc.: ὅτι introduces a moral maxim which we have met with already at xiv. 11. It stands here as the ethical basis of "justification". It is a universal law of the moral world, true both of God and of men, that self-exaltation provokes in others condemnation, and self-humiliation gentle judgment.

CHAPTER XVIII. 15-43. SOME SYNOPSIS INCIDENTS OF THE LATER TIME. Lk., who has for some time followed his own way, now joins the company of his brother evangelists. The section following is skilfully connected with what goes before, the link being the supreme value of humility.

Vv. 15-17. The little ones brought to Jesus (Mt. xix. 13-15, Mk. x. 13-16).—τὰ βρέφη: for παιδία in parallels = infants, sucklings, often in Lk.'s writings; the καὶ preceding naturally means "even," suggesting the notion of great popularity or great crowding, and perhaps hinting an apology for the Twelve. The article before βρέφη means the in ιδόντες δὲ οἱ μαθηταὶ ἐπετίμησαν<sup>1</sup> αὐτοῖς. 16. ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς προσκαλεσάμενος αὐτὰ εἶπεν,<sup>2</sup> “Ἀφετε τὰ παιδιά ἔρχεσθαι πρὸς με, καὶ μὴ κωλύετε αὐτά. τῶν γὰρ τοιούτων ἐστὶν ἡ βασιλεία τοῦ Θεοῦ. 17. ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅς ἐὰν μὴ δέξῃται τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ ὡς παιδίον, οὐ μὴ εἰσέλθῃ εἰς αὐτήν.”

18. Καὶ ἐπρωτότησέ τις αὐτὸν ἄρχων, λέγων, “Διδάσκαλε ἀγαθε, τί ποιήσας ζῶν αἰώνιον κληρονομήσω;” 19. Εἶπε δὲ αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Τί με λέγεις ἀγαθόν; οὐδεὶς ἀγαθός, εἰ μὴ εἷς, ὁ<sup>3</sup> Θεός. 20. τὰς ἐντολάς οἶδας, Μὴ μοιχεύσης· μὴ φονεύσης· μὴ κλέψης· μὴ ψευδομαρτυρήσης· τίμα τὸν πατέρα σου καὶ τὴν μητέρα σου.”<sup>4</sup> 21. Ὁ δὲ εἶπε, “Ταῦτα πάντα ἐφυλαξάμην<sup>5</sup> ἐκ νεότητός μου.”<sup>6</sup> 22. Ἀκούσας δὲ ταῦτα<sup>7</sup> ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν αὐτῷ, “Ἐτι ἐν σοὶ λείπει· πάντα ὅσα ἔχεις πώλησον, καὶ διάδος πτωχοῖς, καὶ ἕξεις θησαυρὸν ἐν οὐρανῷ<sup>8</sup>· καὶ δεῦρο, ἀκολούθει μοι.” 23. Ὁ δὲ ἀκούσας ταῦτα περίλυπος ἐγένετο<sup>9</sup>· ἦν γὰρ πλούσιος σφόδρα. 24. Ἰδὼν δὲ αὐτὸν

<sup>1</sup> ἐπετιμων in  $\aleph$ BDGL 1, 13, 69 al.

<sup>2</sup>  $\aleph$ BL a have προσκαλεσατο αυτα λεγων.

<sup>3</sup> Omit ο  $\aleph$ B (Tisch., W.H., brackets).

<sup>4</sup> Omit this second σου BDILX al.

<sup>5</sup> ἐφυλαξα in  $\aleph$ ABL 1, 209.

<sup>6</sup> Omit μου BD.

<sup>7</sup> Omit ταυτα  $\aleph$ BDL 1, 33, 69, 131 al.

<sup>8</sup> ἐν ουρανοῖς in  $\aleph$ ABDLR al. a e cop.

BD have also τοῖς after ἐν.

<sup>9</sup> γενηθη in  $\aleph$ BL.

fants of those who brought them = their infants.—Ver. 16. προσκαλέσατο, called, speaking to those who carried the infants. Lk. omits the annoyance of Jesus at the conduct of the Twelve, noted by Mk. Decorum controls his presentation not only of Jesus but of the Twelve. He always spares them (Schanz).—τῶν τοιούτων, of such; does this mean that children belong to the kingdom, or only that the childlike do so? Bengel, De Wette and Schanz take the former view, J. Weiss and Hahn the latter. Schanz says: “τοιούτοι with the article means not similarity but likeness with respect to something going before or following after. Therefore the children as such are recognised by Jesus as worthy of the kingdom.”—Ver. 17, as in Mk. x. 15. With this reflection Lk. ends, his interest being mainly in the didactic element, humility the door into the kingdom.

Vv. 18-23. The young ruler (Mt. xix. 16-22, Mk. x. 17-22). From a didactic point of view this narrative is closely connected with the two preceding. The three set forth conditions of entrance into the Kingdom of God—self-abase-ment, childlikeness, and single-mindedness.—Ver. 18. ἄρχων, a ruler; this definite statement in Lk. only.—τί ποιήσας instead of τί ποιήσω.—Ver. 20. μὴ μοιχεύσης: the Seventh Com., first in Lk., the Sixth in Mt. and Mk. (W. H.). Mk.'s μὴ ἀποστερήσης and Mt.'s ἀγαπήσεις τ. πλησίον σου, etc., are not found in Lk.—Ver. 21. ἐν σοὶ λείπει: ἐν σ. ὑστερεῖ in Mk. λείπει = fails, so in Tit. iii. 13.—Ver. 23. πλούσιος σφόδρα, very rich. Lk.'s expression differs from that of Mt. and Mk. (ἦν ἔχων κτήματα πολλά). Lk. follows Mk. in the most important points—the words first spoken by the ruler to Jesus: good Master, etc., and the reply of Jesus to him: why callest thou me good? but he agrees with Mt. in omitting some vivid traits found in Mk.: the placing of the incident (“going forth into the way”), the action of the man as he approached Jesus (προσδραμών, γονυπετήσας), the title διδάσκαλε (Mk. x. 20), and, most remarkable feature of all, the statement in Mk. x. 21: ἐμβλέψας αὐτῷ ἠγάπησεν αὐτόν, which so clearly excludes the notion entertained by many ὁ Ἰησοῦς<sup>1</sup> περιλυτοῦν γενόμενον<sup>2</sup> εἶπε, “ Πῶς δυσκόλως οἱ τὰ χρήματα ἔχοντες εἰσελεύσονται<sup>3</sup> εἰς τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ. 25. Εὐκοπώτερον γάρ ἐστι, κάμηλον διὰ τρυμαλιᾶς ραβίδος<sup>4</sup> εἰσελθεῖν, ἢ πλούσιον εἰς τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ εἰσελθεῖν.” 26. Εἶπον δὲ οἱ ἀκούσαντες, “ Καὶ τίς δύναται σωθῆναι; ” 27. Ὁ δὲ εἶπε, “ Τὰ ἀδύνατα παρὰ ἀνθρώποις δυνατὰ ἐστί παρὰ τῷ Θεῷ.”<sup>5</sup> 28. Εἶπε δὲ ὁ Πέτρος, “ Ἰδοὺ, ἡμεῖς ἀφήκαμεν πάντα, καὶ<sup>6</sup> ἠκολουθήσαμέν σοι.” 29. Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “ Ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι οὐδεὶς ἐστὶν ὃς ἀφήκεν οἰκίαν, ἢ γονεῖς, ἢ ἀδελφούς, ἢ γυναῖκα,<sup>7</sup> ἢ τέκνα, ἔνεκεν τῆς βασιλείας τοῦ Θεοῦ, 30. ὃς οὐ μὴ ἀπολάβῃ<sup>8</sup> πολλαπλασίονα ἐν τῷ καιρῷ τούτῳ, καὶ ἐν τῷ αἰῶνι τῷ ἐρχομένῳ ζῶν αἰώνιον.”

31. ΠΑΡΑΛΑΒΩΝ δὲ τοὺς δώδεκα, εἶπε πρὸς αὐτούς, “ Ἰδοὺ, ἀναβαίνομεν εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα,<sup>9</sup> καὶ τελεσθήσεται πάντα τὰ γεγραμ-

<sup>1</sup> ο before Ι is wanting in B (W.H. in brackets).

<sup>2</sup> ΝΒL I, 131 al. omit περιλ. γεν. (a gloss); found in ADIΔ al.

<sup>3</sup> εἰσπορευονται in BL and after του θεου. ΝDR 124 al. have εἰσελευσονται, but in the same position.

<sup>4</sup> τρηματος βελονης in ΝBD 49. L has τρυπηματος with βελονης. Assimilation to parall. has been at work in producing the T.R.

<sup>5</sup> ἐστι after θεω in ΝBDL I, 28, 131 al.

<sup>6</sup> For ἀφήκαμεν πάντα καὶ Ν<sup>c</sup>BDL I, 13, 69 al. have ἀφεντες τα ἰδια.

<sup>7</sup> ΝBL have this order: γυν. ἀδελφ. γονεῖς.

<sup>8</sup> οὐχι μη in ΝBL I al., and λαβη in BD al. (Tisch. adopts former W.H. both, but λαβη in text with ἀπολ. in marg.).

<sup>9</sup> I... λημ in ΝBDLR.

that the man was a self-complacent Pharisee. I am glad to find Hahn decidedly repudiating this view (vide notes on Mt. and Mk.). Vide Mt.

Vv. 24-30. Ensuing conversation (Mt. xix. 23-30, Mk. x. 23-31).—Ver. 24. εἰσπορευονται: present, not future, as in parallels, indicating not what will happen but what is apt to happen from the nature of riches.—Ver. 25. τρηματος βελόνης: each evangelist has his own expression here.—τρημα from τιτράω, τίτρημι (or τράω), to pierce, bore through; hence τρανής, penetrating, clear; βελόνη, the point of a spear.—Ver. 26. οἱ ἀκούσαντες, those hearing, a quite general reference to the company present. In Mt. and Mk. the words are addressed to the disciples.—καὶ τίς δ. σ.: as in Mk., vide notes there.—Ver. 27. τὰ ἀδύνατα, etc. Mk. and Mt. have first a particular then a general statement. Lk. gives the general truth only: the impossibles for men possible for God.

—Ver. 28. Peter's remark about leaving all, as in Mk., without the question, what shall we have? appended to it in Mt.—Ver. 29. γυναῖκα: as in xiv. 26, not in parallels.—γονεῖς: parents, for father and mother in parallels; the latter more impressive.—Ver. 30. πολλαπλασίονα, as in Mt. Mk. has the more definite ἑκατονταπλασίονα. The reading ἐπταπλασίονα (D, W.H., margin), though little supported, has intrinsic probability as toning down an apparent exaggeration (hundred fold! say seven fold). Cf. ἐπτάκις in xvii. 4.

Vv. 31-34. Third prediction of the Passion (Mt. xx. 17-19, Mk. x. 32-34). Vide notes on the account in Mk., which is exceptionally realistic.—Ver. 31. τελεσθήσεται, shall be fulfilled. With this verb is to be connected τῷ υἱῷ τ. ἀ. (not with γεγραμμένα). The sense is not “shall be fulfilled by the Son of Man”. So Bornemann (Scholia), “a dei filio perficientur, i.e., satisfiet proμένα διὰ τῶν προφητῶν τῷ υἱῷ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου. 32. παραδοθήσεται γὰρ τοῖς ἔθνεσι, καὶ ἐμπαιχθήσεται, καὶ ὑβρισθήσεται, καὶ ἐμπυτυθήσεται, 33. καὶ μαστιγώσαντες ἀποκτενοῦσιν αὐτόν· καὶ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ τῇ τρίτῃ ἀναστήσεται.” 34. Καὶ αὐτοὶ οὐδὲν τούτων συνήκαν, καὶ ἦν τὸ ῥῆμα τοῦτο κεκρυμμένον ἀπ’ αὐτῶν, καὶ οὐκ ἐγίνωσκον τὰ λεγόμενα.

35. Ἐγένετο δὲ ἐν τῷ ἐγγίξειν αὐτὸν εἰς Ἱεριχῶν, τυφλὸς τις ἐκάθητο παρὰ τὴν ὁδὸν προσαιτῶν.<sup>1</sup> 36. ἀκούσας δὲ ὄχλου διαπορευομένου, ἐπυνθάνετο τί<sup>2</sup> εἴη τοῦτο. 37. ἀπήγγειλαν δὲ αὐτῷ, “Ὅτι Ἰησοῦς ὁ Ναζωραῖος παρέρχεται.” 38. Καὶ ἐβόησε, λέγων, “Ἰησοῦ, υἱὲ Δαβίδ, ἐλέησόν με.” 39. Καὶ οἱ προάγοντες ἐπετίμων αὐτῷ ἵνα σιωπήσῃ<sup>3</sup>· αὐτὸς δὲ πολλῶ μᾶλλον ἔκραζεν, “Γιὰ Δαβίδ, ἐλέησόν

<sup>1</sup> ἐπαιτῶν in ΞBDL Orig.

· τι αν in DL (W.H. marg.).

<sup>2</sup> σιγήσῃ in BDLPX 245 al. T.R. conforms to parall.

phetarum vaticiniis a dei filio”. Nor is it necessary to insert ἐν before τ. ὕ. τ. α. The meaning is: all things shall happen to the Son of Man as written in the prophets.—τελειῶσθαι stands for γίνεσθαι, being used because of the prophetic reference (in Lk. only). So Pricaeus: “τελειῶσθαι hic esse quod Marc. xi, 23, 24 εἶναι, quod 1 Cor. iv. 5 γίνεσθαι, quod 1 Pet. v. 9 ἐπιτελειῶσθαι”. In all these places the verb is followed by the dative.—Vv. 32, 33. The details of the Passion are the same as in Mk., except that no mention is made of the Jewish rulers, and that other particulars are given in a somewhat different order.—Ver. 34. This is peculiar to Lk. A similar statement in ix. 45 with the same curious repetition. “An emphatic prolixity” is Meyer’s comment. J. Weiss (Meyer) from the facts that this verse repeats ix. 45 and that Lk. avoids repetition infers that the words must have been in his source. I rather think that we have here an effort on Lk.’s part to compensate by a general statement about the ignorance of the Twelve for the instructive narrative about the two sons of Zebedee which comes in at this point in Mt. and Mk., and which Lk. omits, doubtless by way of sparing the disciples an exposure. The iteration (same thing said three times) is in Lk.’s manner (Acts xiv. 8), but it is significant here. The aim is by repetition of a general statement to convey the impression made by the concrete story—an utter impossibility. No wonder Lk. labours in expression, in view of that humiliating proof of ignorance and moral weakness! But the attempt to express the inexpressible is interesting as showing that Lk. must have had the sons of Zebedee incident in his mind though he does not choose to record it. The omission of this incident carries along with it the omission of the second and most important saying of our Lord concerning the significance of His death. Lk.’s gospel contains hardly any basis for a doctrine on that subject (cf. Mt. xx. 28, Mk. x. 45).

Vv. 35-43. The blind man at Jericho (Mt. xx. 29-34, Mk. x. 46-52).—τυφλὸς τις: the blind man is not named, from which J. Weiss (Meyer) infers that the name cannot have been in Lk.’s source. A very precarious inference. Lk. deviates from the tradition in the parallels as to the place of the incident: connecting it with the entrance into Jericho instead of the exit from the town.—ἐπαιτῶν as in xvi. 3.—Ver. 36. ἀκούσας: in Lk. what he hears is the multitude passing through, which he would have seen if he had not been blind. In the parallels what is heard is that it was Jesus around whom the multitude had gathered, which even a seeing man might have had to learn by the ear. Lk. is careful to bring out the fact of blindness.—διαπορευομένου is an instance of a participle serving as the object of a verb. What was heard was the passing of the crowd.—τί εἴη τ., the optative without ἄν in an indirect question makes the question definite (cf. iii. 15, viii. 9, xv. 26).—Ver. 37. Ναζωραῖος: the usual form in Lk., an exception in iv. 34.—Ver. 38. ἐβόησεν: aorist, he cried out once.—Ver. 39. οἱ προάγοντες, those in front, nearest him.

με." 40. Σταθείς δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐκέλευσεν αὐτὸν ἀχθῆναι πρὸς αὐτόν· ἐγγίσαντος δὲ αὐτοῦ ἐπηρώτησεν αὐτόν, 41. λέγων,<sup>2</sup> "Τί σοι θέλεις ποιήσω;" Ὁ δὲ εἶπε, "Κύριε, ἵνα ἀναβλέψω." 42. Καὶ ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν αὐτῷ, "Ἀνάβλεπον· ἡ πίστις σου σέσωκέ σε." 43. Καὶ παραρῆμα ἀνέβλεψε, καὶ ἠκολούθει αὐτῷ δοξάζων τὸν Θεόν· καὶ πᾶς ὁ λαὸς ἰδὼν ἔδωκεν αἶνον τῷ Θεῷ.

XIX. 1. ΚΑΙ εἰσελθὼν διήρχετο τὴν Ἰεριχώ· 2. καὶ ἰδοῦ, ἀνὴρ ὀνόματι καλούμενος Ζακχαῖος, καὶ αὐτὸς ἦν ἄρχιτελώνης, καὶ <sup>a here only</sup> οὗτος ἦν <sup>in N.T.</sup> πλούσιος· 3. καὶ ἐζήτηι ἰδεῖν τὸν Ἰησοῦν, τίς ἐστι, καὶ οὐκ ἠδύνατο ἀπὸ τοῦ ὄχλου, ὅτι τῇ ἡλικίᾳ μικρὸς ἦν. 4. καὶ προδραμῶν ἔμπροσθεν<sup>4</sup> ἀνέβη ἐπὶ συκομωραίαν, ἵνα ἴδῃ αὐτόν·

<sup>1</sup> Omit ο BD (W.H.), found in  $\aleph$ L (Tisch.).

<sup>2</sup> Omit λεγων  $\aleph$ BDLX 57 e.

<sup>3</sup>  $\aleph$ L 245 omit ουτος (Tisch.). B reads καὶ αὐτος without ἦν (W.H. text, with καὶ ἦν in marg.).

<sup>4</sup> εἰς το ἐμπρ. in  $\aleph$ BL.

He would hear the sound of the crowd before it came up to him; when it was close to him he would make inquiry τί εἶη.—σιγήσῃ: only in Lk. and St. Paul, showing editorial overworking of the source.—ἐκραζεν: a stronger word than ἐβόησεν and imperfect, kept shouting louder than before.—Ver. 40. ἀχθῆναι, to be led to Him; Lk. again careful to bring out the fact of blindness, all the more noticeable when his narrative is compared with parallels. The omission of the interesting particulars in Mk., vv. 49, 50, has been remarked on (Hahn) as proving that Lk. did not know Mk. Again a precarious inference. It is Lk.'s habit to magnify the miracle, therefore he tells the story so as to bring out that it was a case of total blindness, which does not clearly appear in Mk., vide ver. 50.—Ver. 41. κύριε: in Mk. ῥαββονί.—Ver. 43. αἶνον, praise, a poetical word in Greek writers = (1) a saying, (2) a word of praise, frequent in Sept. διδόναι αἶνον, instead of αἰνεῖν, is Hellenistic.

CHAPTER XIX. ZACCHAEUS. PARABLE OF THE POUNDS. ENTRY INTO JERUSALEM.—Vv. 1-10. The story of Zacchaeus, in Lk. only, apparently derived from an Aramaic source—note the abundant use of καὶ to connect clauses—but bearing traces of editorial revision in the style (καθότι, ver. 9).—Ver. 1. διήρχετο: the incident occurred when Jesus was passing through Jericho, precisely where, not indicated.—ὀνόματι καλούμενος, called by name, as in i. 61; a Hebraism, ὀνόματι superfluous.—Ζακ., ἀρχιτ., πλούσιος: name, occupation, social standing. Zacchaeus = the pure one, but not so intended; chief publican; probably a head man or overseer over the local collectors of taxes, of whom there might be a goodly number in Jericho, with its balsam trade, and traffic from the eastern to the western side of Jordan.—Ver. 3. ἐζήτηι: imperfect, implying continuous effort, for a while unsuccessful, because of (ἀπὸ) the crowd, too dense to penetrate, and not to be seen over by him, being short of stature (ἡλικία as in Mt. vi. 27).—ἰδεῖν τὸν Ἰ. τίς ἐστι = ἰδεῖν τίς ἐστιν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, to see who Jesus is = de facie cognoscere (Kuinoel); "fama notum vultu noscere cupiebat" (Grotius).—Ver. 4. εἰς τὸ ἔμπροσθεν, in front of the crowd, to make sure; stationed at any point opposite the crowd he might miss his chance.—συκομωραίαν, a fig mulberry tree, as many think = συκάμινος in xvii. 6; but why then not use the same word in both places, the only two places in N.T. where they occur, both used by the same writer? To this it has been replied: "Although it may be admitted that the sycamine is properly and in Lk. xvii. 6 the mulberry, and the sycamore the fig mulberry, or sycamore fig, yet the latter is the tree generally referred to in the O.T. and called by the Sept. sycamine, as 1 Kings x. 27, 1 Chron. xxvii. 28, Ps. lxxviii. 47, Am. vii. 14.

ὅτι δι' ἐκείνης<sup>1</sup> ἤμελλε διέρχασθαι. 5. καὶ ὡς ἦλθεν ἐπὶ τὸν τόπον, ἀναβλέψας ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶδεν αὐτόν, καὶ<sup>2</sup> εἶπε πρὸς αὐτόν, "Ζακχαῖε, σπεύσας κατὰβηθι· σήμερον γὰρ ἐν τῷ οἴκῳ σου δεῖ με μείναι." 6. Καὶ σπεύσας κατέβη, καὶ ὑπεδέξατο αὐτὸν χαίρων. 7. καὶ ἰδόντες ἅπαντες διεγόγγυζον, λέγοντες, "Ὅτι παρὰ ἁμαρτωλῶ ἄνδρὶ εἰσῆλθε καταλύσαι." 8. Σταθεὶς δὲ Ζακχαῖος εἶπε πρὸς τὸν Κύριον, "Ἰδοῦ, τὰ ἡμίση<sup>3</sup> τῶν ὑπαρχόντων μου,<sup>4</sup> κύριε, δίδωμι τοῖς πτωχοῖς<sup>5</sup>." 9. Εἶπε δὲ πρὸς αὐτὸν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Ὅτι σήμερον σωτηρία τῷ οἴκῳ τούτῳ ἐγένετο, καθότι καὶ αὐτὸς υἱὸς Ἀβραάμ ἐστιν.<sup>6</sup> 10. ἦλθε γὰρ ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ζητῆσαι καὶ σῶσαι τὸ ἀπολωλός."

b Ch. iii. 14.
c here only
in N.T.

<sup>1</sup> ἐκείνης without δι in  $\aleph$ ABLQR al.

<sup>2</sup> εἶδεν αὐτον καὶ omitted in  $\aleph$ BL 1, 131 al.

<sup>3</sup> This word variously spelt, ἡμισεία in  $\aleph$ BLO 382.

<sup>4</sup> μου before των υπ. in  $\aleph$ BLQ 1, 209 al.

<sup>5</sup> τοῖς (B omits) πτωχοῖς διδωμι in  $\aleph$ BDLQ 1, 33, 209.

<sup>6</sup> Omit ἐστιν  $\aleph$ LR (Tisch.); found in BDQ al. (W.H. brackets).

Dioscorides expressly says Συκόμορον, ἐνιοὶ δὲ καὶ τοῦτο συκάμιον λέγουσι, lib. i., cap. 180" (Smith's Dictionary of the Bible, s. v. Sycamore). This is in effect to say that through the influence of the Sept. and following common usage Lk. used the two words indifferently as synonyms.—ἐκείνης: supply ὁδοῦ, cf. ποίας, v. 19.—Ver. 5. Ζακχαῖε: Jesus knows his name, how not indicated.—σπεύσας, etc., uttered in cordial tone as if He were speaking to a familiar friend whom He is glad to see and with whom He means to stay that day. What a delightful surprise that salutation, and how irresistible its friendly frankness, ver. 6 shows.—Ver. 7. ἅπαντες: general muttered dissent (not even the Twelve excepted), which Jesus anticipated and disregarded. Note His courage, and how much prejudice the uncommon in conduct has to reckon with.—ἁμαρτωλῶ: no reason to think with some ancient and modern commentators that Zacchaeus was a Gentile, a son of Abraham only in a spiritual sense. They thought him unfit to be Christ's host because he was a "sinner" (Grotius). A sinner of course because a publican, a great sinner because a chief publican.—Ver. 8. σταθεὶς: like the Pharisees (xviii. 11) but in a different spirit—in self-defence, not self-laudation. J. Weiss thinks the word indicates the solemn attitude of a man about to make a vow (Meyer).—μ. τ. ὑπαρχόντων, the half of my goods, earnings, not of my income (οἱ πρόσοδοι) as Godet suggests.—δίδωμι, ἀποδίδωμι: presents, probably expressing not past habit but purpose for the future. This is the regenerating effect of that generous, brave word of Jesus. It has made a new man of him. Yet the desire to see Jesus, of whom he had heard as the publicans' friend, shows that the germ of the new man was there before. A "sinner" doubtless in the way indicated, as the εἶ τι mildly admits, but by no means, even in the past, a type of the hard, heartless, unscrupulous publican.—τετραπλοῦν, four fold, as in cases of theft (Exodus xxii. 1, four or five fold).—Ver. 9. πρὸς αὐτόν, to him or with reference to him; probably both; the words meant for the ears of Zacchaeus and all who might be there to hear, or perhaps spoken half as a soliloquy.—καθότι, inasmuch as; a word of Lk.'s; in his writings only in N.T.—υἱὸς Ἀ., a son of Abraham in the natural sense, a Jew; a protest against popular prejudice, for which a publican was as a heathen. The more radical reason, unexpressed, but present doubtless to the mind of Jesus, was: because he also is a son of man, a human being.—Ver. 10. A great key-word to Christ's idea of His own mission—a Saviour.—τὸ ἀπολωλός, the lost, a pathetic name for the objects of Christ's quest; its shades of meaning to be learned from the parables in Lk. xv.: lost as a sheep, a coin, a foolish son may be lost. Here the term points

11. ἈΚΟΥΟΝΤΩΝ δὲ αὐτῶν ταῦτα, προσθεὶς εἶπε παραβολήν, διὰ τὸ ἐγγὺς αὐτὸν εἶναι Ἱερουσαλήμ,<sup>1</sup> καὶ δοκεῖν αὐτοὺς ὅτι παρα- d Acts xxi. 5 χρῆμα μέλλει ἢ βασιλεία τοῦ Θεοῦ ἄναφαίνεσθαι. 12. εἶπεν οὖν, e Acts xvii.
 “Ἀνθρωπός τις ἑυγενὴς ἐπορεύθη εἰς χώραν μακράν, λαβεῖν ἑαυτῷ f 11. 1 Cor.
 βασιλείαν, καὶ ὑποστρέψαι. 13. καλέσας δὲ δέκα δούλους ἑαυτοῦ, i. 26.
 ἔδωκεν αὐτοῖς δέκα ἑμῶν, καὶ εἶπε πρὸς αὐτούς, Πραγματεύσασθε here only in
 N.T.

<sup>1</sup> εγγυς ειναι I. αυτον in NBL 157.

to the social degradation and isolation of the publicans. They were social lepers. With reference to the conduct of Jesus in this case Euthy. Zig. remarks: “It is necessary to despise the little scandal when a great salvation comes to any one and not to lose the great on account of the little” (χρῆ γὰρ τοῦ μικροῦ σκανδάλου καταφρονεῖν, ἔνθα μεγάλη σωτηρία τινὶ προσγίνεται, καὶ μὴ διὰ τὸ μικρὸν ἀπόλλειν (sic) τὸ μέγα). The significance of Christ choosing a publican for His host in a town where many priests dwelt has been remarked on. Art. “Publican” in Smith’s Dictionary of the Bible.

Vv. 11-27. Parable of the pounds, or of the nobleman who goes to find a kingdom (cf. Mt. xxv. 14-30). Into the vexed question of the connection between this parable and that of the talents in Mt. I cannot here go. That there is a resemblance between them is obvious, and the hypothesis that the one has grown out of the other in the course of tradition cannot be treated as a mere impertinence. Yet that they are two distinct parables in their main features, both spoken by Jesus, is not improbable. They serve different purposes, and their respective details suit their respective purposes, and the kindred features may only show that Jesus did not solicitously avoid repeating Himself. The parable before us suits the situation as described by Luke, in so far as it corrects mistaken expectations with regard to the advent of the Kingdom. It is a prophetic sketch in parabolic form of the real future before them, the fortunes of the King and the various attitudes of men towards him. It is more allied to allegory than most of the parables, and on this ground, according to J. Weiss (in Meyer), it cannot have proceeded from Jesus. One fails to see why Jesus might not occasionally use allegory as a vehicle of truth as well as other teachers.

Ver. 11. The introduction.—ταῦτα naturally suggests the words spoken to Zacchaeus by Jesus about salvation, as what was heard.—προσθεὶς εἶπε imitates the Hebrew construction = He added and said, cf. Gen. xxxviii. 5, προσθεῖσα ἔτεκεν.—ἐγγυς: about fifteen miles off.—παραχρῆμα: a natural expectation for friends of Jesus to entertain, and for all, friends and foes, to impute to Him, and a good occasion for uttering a parable to correct false impressions; comparable in this respect with the parable of the Supper in Lk. xiv.—saying in effect, “not so soon as you think, nor will all be as well affected to the king and his kingdom as you may suppose”.

Vv. 12-27. The parable.—εὐγενὴς, well-born, noble; of such rank and social position that he might legitimately aspire to a kingdom. The Herod family might quite well be in view. Herod the Great and his son Archelaus had actually gone from Jericho on this errand, and Archelaus had had the experience described in ver. 14. Since the time of Clericus and Wolf, who first suggested it, the idea that the Herod family was in Christ’s mind has been very generally accepted. Schanz thinks Jesus would not have selected so bad a man as Archelaus to represent Him. Yet He selected a selfish neighbour and an unjust judge to represent God as He appears, and an unjust steward to teach prudence!—εἰς χώραν μακράν: implying lapse of time; Rome, in the case of Archelaus.—ὑποστρέψαι: the desired kingdom is in the land of his birth; Palestine in case of Archelaus.—Ver. 13. δέκα δ., ten, a considerable number, pointing to an extensive household establishment.—δέκα μῶν, ten pounds, not to each but among them (ver. 16). A Greek pound = about £3 or £4; a Hebrew = nearly double; in either case a small sum compared with the amounts in Mt. xxv. The purpose in the two parables is entirely different. In the Talents the master divides his whole means among his servants to be traded with, as the best way of disposing of them during his absence. In the Pounds he simply gives a moderate sum, the same to all, with a view to test fidelity and capacity, as he desires to

ἕως<sup>1</sup> ἔρχομαι. 14. Οἱ δὲ πολῖται αὐτοῦ ἐμίσουν αὐτόν, καὶ ἀπέ-
 g Ch. xiv. στείλαν ἑπρεσβείαν ὀπίσω αὐτοῦ, λέγοντες, Οὐ θέλομεν τοῦτον h Ch. x. 35. βασιλεῦσαι ἐφ' ἡμᾶς. 15. Καὶ ἐγένετο ἐν τῷ<sup>2</sup> ἑπαυελθεῖν αὐτὸν λαβόντα τὴν βασιλείαν, καὶ εἶπε φωνηθῆναι αὐτῷ τοὺς δούλους τούτους, οἷς ἔδωκε<sup>3</sup> τὸ ἀργύριον, ἵνα γνῶ<sup>3</sup> τίς τί διεπραγματεύσατο.<sup>4</sup>
 16. παρεγένετο δὲ ὁ πρῶτος, λέγων, Κύριε, ἡ μνᾶ σου προσειργάσατο δέκα<sup>5</sup> μνᾶς. 17. Καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, Εὖ,<sup>6</sup> ἀγαθὲ δοῦλε· ὅτι ἐν ἐλαχίστῳ
 πιστὸς ἐγένου, ἴσθι ἐξουσίαν ἔχων ἐπάνω δέκα πόλεων. 18. Καὶ ἦλθεν ὁ δεύτερος, λέγων, Κύριε, ἡ μνᾶ σου<sup>7</sup> ἐποίησε πέντε μνᾶς.
 19. Εἶπε δὲ καὶ τούτῳ, Καὶ σὺ γίνου ἐπάνω<sup>8</sup> πέντε πόλεων. 20.

<sup>1</sup> For εως ἩABDL al. Orig. have εν ω. Vide below.

<sup>2</sup> δεδωκει in ἩBBDL I, 25, 131.

<sup>3</sup> γνοι in ἩBBDL 33.

<sup>4</sup> For τις τι διεπραγματεύσατο in ΑΡΓΔΑΠ, etc. (Tisch.), ἩBBDL 157 e have τε διεπραγματεύσαντο (W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> δεκα προσειργάσατο in ἩBL I, 131, 209 a c.

<sup>6</sup> εν in ἩALRD al. pl. (W.H. marg. = Mt.). ευγε in BD 56, 58, 61 Orig. (Tisch., W.H., text).

<sup>7</sup> κυριε after η μνα σου in ἩBL. T.R. = D, etc.

<sup>8</sup> επαυου γινου in ἩBL I, 131, 157, 209. D has γινου και συ επω.

have tested men for higher service when the time comes. The amount may suit the master's finances, and though small it may just on that account the better test character and business talent.—πραγματεύσασθε, trade with, here only in the Scriptures, found in Plutarch.—ἔρχομαι: with ἕως (T.R.) = until I come back, with ἐν τῷ (W.H.) = while I go (to the far country); perhaps it is used pregnantly to include going and returning.—Ver. 14. πολῖται = συμπολίται, fellow-citizens of the aspirant to kingship while a private citizen (as in Gen. xxiii. 11, Sept., Heb. viii. 11, W.H.).—ἐμίσουν, hated habitually, showing something far wrong in him, or in them.—πρεσβείαν: this actually happened in the case of Archelaus, on just grounds; this, however, is no proof that he cannot have been in Christ's mind. The point is, hated just or unjust, in the case both of Archelaus and of Jesus very real.—οὐ θέλομεν, we don't wish, an emphatic nolumus, stronger than θέλομεν τοῦτον οὐ, etc.

Vv. 15 ff. After the return.—ἐν τῷ ἑπαυελθεῖν: ἐν with the aorist infinitive, usually with present, but frequently with aorist in Lk. = on his return, he takes action at once (vide Burton, M. and T., § 109).—εἶπε φωνηθῆναι = commanded (jussit, Vulgate) to be called; εἶπε with infinitive, instead of ἵνα with subjunctive, as in some places, e.g., Mt. iv. 3.—τίς τί διεπρ. (T.R.) is two questions in one: who had gained anything and what—τί διεπραγματεύσαντο (W.H.), what they had gained.—Ver. 16. ἡ μνᾶ σου, thy pound, modestly, as if he had no hand or merit in the gain (Grotius).—δέκα: a considerable increase, implying proportional length of time, the kingdom not near.—Ver. 17. ἀγαθὲ without πιστέ, as in Mt., but πιστὸς in next clause = noble, devoted.—ἐν ἐλαχίστῳ, in a very little. ἐπὶ ὀλίγα in Mt.—ἐπάνω δέκα πόλεων, over ten cities, or a Decapolis (Holtzmann, H. C.). This is what the king has had in view all along—to get capable and trusty governors. A new king needs to take special pains about this. The trial of character through trade is not unsuitable, as governors would have much to do with the provincial revenues.—Ver. 18. πέντε, five, half as much, implying less capacity, diligence, conscientiousness, or luck which, however, is not taken into account.—Ver. 19. καὶ σὺ: this man also deemed trustworthy, but of less capacity, therefore appointed to a governorship, but of less extent. Also, note, there is no praise. He was honest, but might have done better. The new king is thankful to have honesty even with respectable, though not admirable administrative qualities.

Καὶ ἕτερος<sup>1</sup> ἦλθε, λέγων, Κύριε, ἰδοὺ, ἡ μνᾶ σου, ἣν εἶχον<sup>1</sup> ἀποκει-
 μένην ἐν σουδαρίῳ· 21. ἐφοβούμην γάρ σε, ὅτι ἄνθρωπος αὐστηρὸς εἶ· αἴρεις ὃ οὐκ ἔθikas, καὶ θερίζεις ὃ οὐκ ἔσπειρας. 22. Λέγει
 δὲ<sup>2</sup> αὐτῷ, Ἐκ τοῦ στόματός σου κρινῶ σε, ποιηρὲ δούλε. ἦδεις ὅτι ἐγὼ ἄνθρωπος αὐστηρὸς εἶμι, αἴρων ὃ οὐκ ἔθικα, καὶ θερίζων ὃ οὐκ ἔσπειρα· 23. καὶ διατί οὐκ ἔδωκας τὸ ἀργύριόν μου<sup>3</sup> ἐπὶ τὴν<sup>4</sup> τράπεζαν, καὶ ἐγὼ ἐλθὼν σὺν τόκῳ ἂν ἔπραξα αὐτό<sup>5</sup>; 24. Καὶ τοῖς παρεστῶσιν εἶπεν, Ἄρατε ἀπ' αὐτοῦ τὴν μνᾶν, καὶ δότε τῷ τὰς δέκα μνᾶς ἔχοντι. 25. (Καὶ εἶπον αὐτῷ, Κύριε, ἔχει δέκα μνᾶς.)
 26. Λέγω γὰρ<sup>6</sup> ὑμῖν, ὅτι παντὶ τῷ ἔχοντι δοθήσεται· ἀπὸ δὲ τοῦ μὴ ἔχοντος, καὶ ὃ ἔχει ἀρθήσεται ἀπ' αὐτοῦ.<sup>7</sup> 27. Πλὴν τοὺς ἐχθρούς μου ἐκείνους,<sup>8</sup> τοὺς μὴ θελήσαντάς με βασιλεῦσαι ἐπ' αὐτούς, ἀγάγετε ὧδε, καὶ<sup>1</sup> κατασφάξατε<sup>9</sup> ἔμπροσθέν μου." 28. Καὶ ἰ εἰπὼν ταῦτα, ἐπορεύετο ἔμπροσθεν, ἀναβαίνων εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα.

here only
in N.T.

<sup>1</sup> ο ετερος in  $\aleph^c$ BDLR 69, 247.

<sup>2</sup> Omit δε  $\aleph$ B al. 1, 28, 131 al. pl.

<sup>3</sup> μου το αργ. in  $\aleph$ ABL 33. T.R. = D.

<sup>4</sup> Omit την  $\aleph$ ABDLR al. pl.

<sup>5</sup> αυτο επραξα in  $\aleph$ BL.

<sup>6</sup> Omit γαρ  $\aleph$ BL 1, 131, 209.

<sup>7</sup> Omit απ αυτου  $\aleph^*$ BL 36, 53 al.

<sup>8</sup> For εκεινους (D, etc.)  $\aleph$ BKLMΠ al. have τουτους.

<sup>9</sup> αυτους after κατασφ. in  $\aleph$ BFLR 33.

Vv. 20-27. The useless servant. If in any part the parable has borrowed from the parable in Mt., it is here. The story might well have wound up with a statement as to what was to be done with the disaffected.—Ver. 27. Yet this feature is not inapposite, for there were likely to be three classes of people to be dealt with by the king: the honest and capable, the incapable and useless, and the disaffected. The chief objection to the part referring to the second class is that it gives the parable a too didactic aspect, aiming at theoretic exhaustiveness rather than insisting on the main points: how the king will deal with his friends and how with his foes.—Ver. 20. ἐν σουδαρίῳ, in a handkerchief; ἐν τῇ γῶ in Mt.—Ver. 21. αὐστηρὸς (here only in N.T.), harsh in flavour, then in disposition.—αἴρεις, etc., you lift what you did not deposit, and reap what you did not sow; accusing the master of an exorbitant demand for profit. He despaired of pleasing him in that respect, therefore did nothing—a pretext of course.—Ver. 23. ἐπὶ τράπεζαν = τοῖς τραπέζιταις in Mt.—ἔπραξα = ἐκομισάμην in Mt.—Ver. 24. ἄρατε, etc.: the pound given to him that had ten could only have the significance of a present, and a petty one, for he was no longer to be a trader but a ruler, therefore not an important illustration of the principle stated in ver. 26, a sign that in this section of the parable Lk. is secondary.—Ver. 25. Possibly an utterance from the crowd interested in the parable, the "Lord" being Jesus, or an addition by Lk., or not genuine (wanting in D).—Ver. 26. Deprivation the only penalty here, no casting out into outer darkness as in Mt.; merciless severity reserved for the enemies of the king.—Ver. 27. πλὴν, for the rest, winding up the transactions at the commencement of the king's reign.—κατασφάξατε: barbarous, but true to Eastern life; the new king cannot afford to let them live. In the spiritual sphere the slaying will be done by the moral order of the world (destruction of the Jewish state), King Jesus weeping over their fate. Motive must not be transferred from the parable to the application.

Ver. 28. On the way to Jerusalem The Jericho incidents disposed of, the next centre of interest is the Holy City. Lk. connects the two parts of his narrative by a brief notice of the ascent from the smaller city at the foot of the pass to the larger and more famous at the top.—εἰπὼν ταῦτα refers naturally to the

29. ΚΑΙ ἐγένετο ὡς ἤγγισεν εἰς Βηθφαγή καὶ Βηθανίαν πρὸς τὸ ὄρος τὸ καλούμενον ἐλαιῶν, ἀπέστειλε δύο τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ,<sup>1</sup>
 30. εἰπῶν,<sup>2</sup> “Υπάγετε εἰς τὴν κατέναντι κώμην· ἐν ἧ εἰσπορευόμενοι εὐρήσετε πῶλον δεδεμένον, ἐφ’ ὃν οὐδεὶς πώποτε ἀνθρώπων ἐκάθισε· λύσαντες<sup>3</sup> αὐτὸν ἀγάγετε. 31. καὶ ἐάν τις ὑμᾶς ἐρωτᾷ, Διατί λύετε; οὕτως ἐρεῖτε αὐτῷ,<sup>4</sup> “Ὅτι ὁ Κύριος αὐτοῦ χρεῖαν ἔχει.” 32. Ἀπελθόντες δὲ οἱ ἀπεσταλμένοι εὗρον καθὼς εἶπεν αὐτοῖς· 33. λυόντων δὲ αὐτῶν τὸν πῶλον, εἶπον οἱ κύριοι αὐτοῦ πρὸς αὐτούς, “Τί λύετε τὸν πῶλον;” 34. Οἱ δὲ εἶπον, “Ὁ Κύριος<sup>5</sup> αὐτοῦ χρεῖαν ἔχει.” 35. Καὶ ἤγαγον αὐτὸν πρὸς τὸν Ἰησοῦν· καὶ ἐπιρρίψαντες ἐαυτῶν<sup>6</sup> τὰ ἱμάτια ἐπὶ τὸν πῶλον, ἐπεβίβασαν τὸν Ἰησοῦν. 36. πορευομένου δὲ αὐτοῦ<sup>κ</sup> ὑπεστρώσαντες τὰ ἱμάτια αὐτῶν<sup>7</sup> ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ. 37. Ἐγγίζοντος δὲ αὐτοῦ ἤδη πρὸς τῇ καταβάσει τοῦ ὄρους τῶν ἐλαιῶν,<sup>5</sup>
 ἤρξαντο ἅπαν τὸ πλῆθος τῶν μαθητῶν χαίροντες αἰνεῖν τὸν Θεὸν κ here only

 in N. T.
 (Is. Iviii.)
 5)

<sup>1</sup> Omit αὐτου ἧBL minusc. (found in D al.).

<sup>2</sup> λεγων in ἧBDL 13, 69.

<sup>4</sup> Omit αὐτω ἧBDL minusc.

<sup>6</sup> αὐτων in ἧBDL A, 13, etc.

<sup>3</sup> BDL 157 prefix και.

<sup>5</sup> οτι before ο κυρ. in ἧABDL al. pl.

<sup>7</sup> So in ἧDL. B has here εαυτων.

parable. As a note of time the expression is sufficiently vague, for we do not know when or where the parable was spoken, nor how much time intervened between its utterance and the commencement of the ascent. It is simply one of Lk.'s formulae of transition.—ἔμπροσθεν = εἰς τὸ ἔμπροσθεν, not before them, but forwards: iter suum continuabat, Kypke.—ἀναβαίνων, going up. A constant ascent, steep and rugged.

Vv. 29-38. The triumphal entry into Jerusalem (Mt. xx. 1-11, Mk. xi. 1-11).—Βηθφαγή. Following Lightfoot and Renan, Godet regards this as the name not of a village but of a suburban district included for passover purposes in the holy city, pilgrims to the feast finding quarters in it. The reference to the two places Bethphage and Bethany is obscure and confusing.—ἐλαιῶν, commentators dispute whether the word should be accentuated thus, making it genitive plural of εἰλαία, or ἐλαιῶν, making it nominative singular of a name for the place = Olivetum, olive grove. W. and H. print it with the circumflex accent, and Field (Ot. Nor.) and Hahn take the same view.—Vv. 31-34. The sending of two disciples for the colt is related as in Mt. and Mk., but with a little more of Greek in the style. The remark about the owners sending it (Mt.) or Jesus returning it (Mk.) is omitted. On the other hand, Lk. alone states that the two disciples found matters as the Master had said (ver. 32). In ver. 33 οἱ κύριοι suggests a plurality of owners.—Ver. 35. ἐπιρρίψαντες: the participle is used to relieve the monotony of the paratactic construction (καὶ, καὶ in Mt. and Mk.); the word occurs here only and in 1 Pet. v. 7, q.v.—ἐπεβίβασαν, helped to mount, as in Lk. x. 34, Acts xxiii. 24; a technical term, possibly used here to add pomp to the scene.—Ver. 36. τὰ ἱμάτια, their garments, but no mention of branches in Lk., possibly from a feeling that they would be an encumbrance.—Ver. 37. ἐγγίζοντος: Lk. is thinking of Jerusalem = when He was nearing the city. The next clause, πρὸς τῇ καταβάσει, is added to define more precisely the point reached = at the descent of the mount. They had got over the ridge to the western slope.—καταβάσει, here only in N. T.—ἅπαν τὸ πλῆθος: Mt. and Mk. divide the crowd into those going before and those following.—δυνάμεων: this reference to miracles as the occasion of praise is peculiar to Lk. That Galilean pilgrims should remember gratefully the healing ministry at that moment was very natural. Yet Lk.'s explanation of the popular enthusiasm, while true, may be far from exhaustive.—Ver. 38. A free reproduction of the popular acclaim as reported by Mt. and Mk., not without

φωνῇ μεγάλῃ περὶ πασῶν<sup>1</sup> ὧν εἶδον δυνάμεων, 38. λέγοντες “Εὐλόγημένος ὁ ἐρχόμενος βασιλεὺς ἐν ὀνόματι Κυρίου· εἰρήνη ἐν οὐρανῷ,<sup>2</sup> καὶ δόξα ἐν ὑψίστοις.” 39. Καὶ τινες τῶν Φαρισαίων ἀπὸ τοῦ ὄχλου εἶπον πρὸς αὐτόν, “Διδάσκαλε, ἐπιτίμησον τοῖς μαθηταῖς σου.” 40. Καὶ ἀποκριθεὶς εἶπεν αὐτοῖς,<sup>3</sup> “Λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι, ἐὰν οὗτοι σιωπήσωσιν,<sup>4</sup> οἱ λίθοι κεκράξονται.”<sup>5</sup> 41. Καὶ ὡς ἤγγισεν, ἰδὼν τὴν πόλιν, ἔκλαυσεν ἐπ’ αὐτῆ,<sup>6</sup> 42. λέγων, “Ὅτι εἰ ἔγνωσ καὶ σύ, καὶ γε<sup>7</sup> ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ σου ταύτῃ, τὰ πρὸς εἰρήνην σου· νῦν δὲ ἐκρύβη ἀπὸ ὀφθαλμῶν σου· 43. ὅτι ἤξουσιν ἡμέραι ἐπὶ σέ, καὶ περιβαλοῦσιν<sup>8</sup> οἱ ἐχθροὶ σου χάρακά σοι, καὶ περικυκλώσουσί

<sup>1</sup> παντων in BD, perhaps the true reading; πασων a correction to agree with δυναμεων.

<sup>2</sup> εν ουρ. ειρ. in NBL Orig. (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> NBL omit αυτοις.

<sup>4</sup> σιωπησουσι in NABLR al.

<sup>5</sup> For this form, common in Sept., NBL Orig. have κραξουσι.

<sup>6</sup> επ αυτην in NABDL, etc.

<sup>7</sup> και συ και γε is probably a conflate reading; some western texts have the one some the other. NBL (with D) omit και γε and read ει εγνω εν τη ημ. ταυτη (σου omitted) και συ, and omit σου after ειρηνην.

<sup>8</sup> So in B (W.H. marg.). παρεμβολουσιν in NCL 33 (Tisch., W.H., text).

variations even between them. The Hebrew Hosanna is omitted and translated into equivalents which recall the gloria in excelsis (Lk. ii. 14), “already become a church hymn” (Holtz., H. C.). Lk.’s version runs:

Blessed is He that cometh, the King, in the name of the Lord!

In heaven peace,

And glory in the highest.

In comparison with Mt. and Mk. this version seems secondary.

Vv. 39-44. Pharisees murmur and Jesus weeps, peculiar to Lk.—ἀπὸ τοῦ ὄχλου, from within the crowd, or on account of the crowd and what they had been saying = brae turba as in ver. 3. Loesner cites from Philo instances of the use of ἀπὸ in this sense (but in reference to ver. 3).—Ver. 40. ἐὰν σιωπήσωσιν: ἐὰν with future indicative instead of subjunctive as in classic Greek, one of the divergent ways in which the N.T. expresses a future supposition with some probability (vide Burton, M. and T., §§ 250-256).—οἱ λίθοι κράξουσιν, the stones will cry out; possibly there is a reference to Hab. ii. 11, but the expression is proverbial (instances in Pricaeus, Wetstein, etc.) = the impossible will happen rather than the Messianic kingdom fail of recognition. Some, e.g., Stier and Nösgen, find in the words a reference to the destruction of the temple and the witness it bore to Jesus = if I receive not witness from the Jewish people the scattered stones of the ruined temple will witness for me. An attractive idea, not refuted by Hahn’s objection that if it had been in view we should have had ὅταν οὗτοι σιωπ. instead of ἐὰν, etc. ἐὰν with future may express a future supposition with some probability.

Vv. 41-44. Jesus weeps at sight of the city and laments its doom.—ὡς = when, as in many places in Lk.—ἐκλαυσεν ἐπ’ α., He wept aloud, like Peter (Mk. xiv. 72).—δακρύειν = to shed tears silently; for a group of synonyms with their distinctive meanings vide under κλαίω in Thayer’s Grimm.—Ver. 42. εἰ ἔγνωσ: εἰ with the aorist indicative in a supposition contrary to fact, the apodosis being omitted by an impressive aposiopesis.—ἐν τ. ἡμέρᾳ τ., in this (late) day, not too late yet.—καὶ σύ, thou too, as well as my disciples: their insight will save them, but not you and the nation; you must know for yourselves.—καὶ γε (T.R.): the combination καὶ σύ καὶ γε (vide critical notes) is suspicious. Coming before ἐν τ. ἡμέρᾳ, etc., as in T.R., it will mean: even at this late hour.—τὰ πρὸς εἰρήνην, the things tending to thy peace = thy salvation.—νῦν δέ, but now as things stand; the day of grace there.

σε, καὶ συνέξουσί σε πάντοθεν, 44. καὶ ἔδαφιοῦσί σε καὶ τὰ τέκνα σου ἐν σοί, καὶ οὐκ ἀφήσουσιν ἐν σοὶ λίθον ἐπὶ λίθῳ<sup>1</sup>. ἀνθ' ὧν οὐκ ἔγνωσ τὸν καιρὸν τῆς ἐπισκοπῆς σου.”

45. Καὶ εἰσελθὼν εἰς τὸ ἱερόν, ἤρξατο ἐκβάλλειν τοὺς πωλοῦντας ἐν αὐτῷ καὶ ἀγοραζοντας,<sup>2</sup> 46. λέγων αὐτοῖς, “Γέγραπται, ‘Ὁ οἶκός μου οἶκος προσευχῆς ἐστίν<sup>3</sup>. ὑμεῖς δὲ αὐτὸν ἐποιήσατε σπήλαιον ληστῶν.”

47. Καὶ ἦν διδάσκων τὸ καθ' ἡμέραν ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ· οἱ δὲ ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ γραμματεῖς ἐζήτουν αὐτὸν ἀπολέσαι, καὶ οἱ πρῶτοι τοῦ λαοῦ·

48. καὶ οὐχ εὔρισκον τὸ τί ποιήσωσιν, ὁ λαὸς γὰρ ἅπας<sup>4</sup> ἐξεκρέματο<sup>4</sup> αὐτοῦ ἀκούων.

I here only
in N. T.

<sup>1</sup> λίθον ἐπι λίθον ἐν σοὶ in  $\aleph$ B $\Delta$ L (D with other texts have ἐν ὅλῃ σοὶ : e, in tota terra).

<sup>2</sup>  $\aleph$ B $\Delta$ L I, 69, 209 al. omit ἐν αὐτῷ, and  $\aleph$ BL I, 209 syr. sin. Orig. omit καὶ ἀγοραζοντας, which, in view of Lk.'s editorial peculiarities, is to be rejected.

<sup>3</sup>  $\aleph$ BLR I, 13, 69 al. have καὶ ἐστὶν ὁ οἶκ. μ. οἶκ. προσευχῆς (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> ἐξεκρέματο in  $\aleph$ B (W.H., also Tisch., who remarks: a vulgari usu haud aliena videtur fuisse).

fore is already past.—ἐκρύβη: judicial blindness has set in, the penalty of a long course of moral perversity.—Ver. 43. ὅτι, for, because, introducing a prophetic picture of coming ruin, either to explain the εἰ ἔγνωσ = what you would have escaped had you but known; or to substantiate the assertion of judicial blindness = no hope of your seeing now; your fate sealed; judgment days will surely come (ἤξουσιν ἡμέραι). Then follows an awful picture of these judgment days in a series of clauses connected by a fivefold καὶ, the first being = when. The description recalls Isaiah xxix. 3 so closely that the use of such definite phrases before the event is quite conceivable, although many critics think the prophecy so certainly ex eventu as to use it for fixing the date of the Gospel.—χάρακα, a palisade (here only in N.T.). Titus did erect a palisaded mound around Jerusalem, and, after it was destroyed by the Jews in a sortie, he built a wall.—Ver. 44. ἔδαφιοῦσι: this verb (here only in N.T., Sept. several times) has both σε and τὰ τέκνα σ. for its objects and must have a meaning assigned to it suitable to each: (1) to raze to the ground—in reference to the city, (2) to dash to the ground—in reference to the children or population of the city. Here only in N.T., frequent in Sept.—τὸν καιρὸν τ. ἐπισκοπῆς σ., the season of thy gracious visitation.—ἐπισκοπή and its corresponding verb have this meaning in N.T. In

Sept. it is a vox media and is used with reference to visitations both in mercy and in judgment.

Vv. 45-48. Jesus in the temple (Mt. xxi. 12-17, Mk. xi. 15-19). We have here two tableaux: Jesus reforming temple abuses (45-46), and Jesus teaching in the temple to the delight of the people and the chagrin of their religious and social superiors. Of the former we have but a slight and colourless presentation from Lk., whose editorial solicitudes, now well known to us, here come into play. The story as told by Mt. and Mk. shows passion (of the true Divine prophetic type) and action bordering on violence. This disappears from Lk.'s page in favour of a decorous but neutral picture. J. Weiss thinks it incredible that Lk. should have given us so inadequate a statement had he had such an account as that in Mk. before him (Meyer, eighth edition, note, p. 584). It is perfectly intelligible, once we understand Lk.'s method of handling his material. Equally groundless, for the same reason, is the inference of Hahn from the omissions of Lk. between vv. 44 and 45 (Mt. xxi. 10, 11, Mk. xi. 11-14) that he cannot have known either Mt. or Mk.

Ver. 45. τοὺς πωλοῦντας, the sellers, no mention of the buyers in the true text (W.H. after  $\aleph$ BL).—Ver. 46. καὶ ἐστὶν: the καὶ, a well-attested reading, does not occur in the text quoted (Is. lvi. 7). The

XX. 1. ΚΑΙ ἐγένετο ἐν μιᾷ τῶν ἡμερῶν ἐκείνων,<sup>1</sup> διδάσκοντος αὐτοῦ τὸν λαὸν ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ καὶ εὐαγγελιζομένου, ἐπέστησαν οἱ ἄρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ γραμματεῖς σὺν τοῖς πρεσβυτέροις, 2. καὶ εἶπον πρὸς αὐτόν, λέγοντες,<sup>2</sup> “Εἰπέ<sup>3</sup> ἡμῖν, ἐν ποίᾳ ἐξουσίᾳ ταῦτα ποιεῖς, ἢ τίς ἐστιν ὁ δούς σοι τὴν ἐξουσίαν ταύτην;” 3. Ἀποκριθεὶς δὲ εἶπε πρὸς αὐτούς, “Ἐρωτήσω ὑμᾶς κἀγὼ ἓνα<sup>4</sup> λόγον, καὶ εἶπάτε μοι· 4. Τὸ βάπτισμα<sup>5</sup> Ἰωάννου ἐξ οὐρανοῦ ἦν, ἢ ἐξ ἀνθρώπων;” 5. Οἱ δὲ συνελογίσαντο<sup>6</sup> πρὸς ἑαυτούς, λέγοντες, “Ὅτι ἐὰν εἴπωμεν, Ἐξ οὐρανοῦ, ἔρει, Διατί οὖν<sup>7</sup> οὐκ ἐπιστεύσατε αὐτῷ; 6. ἐὰν δὲ εἴπωμεν, Ἐξ ἀνθρώπων, πᾶς ὁ λαὸς<sup>8</sup> καταλιθάσει ἡμᾶς· πεπεισμένοις

<sup>1</sup> Omit εκείνων  $\aleph$ BDLQ al.

<sup>2</sup> λεγοντες προς αυτον in  $\aleph$ BL 1, 131, 209 verses.

<sup>3</sup> ειπον in  $\aleph$ BLR 1, 33.

<sup>4</sup> Omit ενα (from parall.)  $\aleph$ BLR 1, 33, 69, etc.

<sup>5</sup> το before l. in  $\aleph$ DLR (Tisch.), not in B (W.H.).

<sup>6</sup> συνελογιζοντο (imperfect in Mt. and Mk.) in  $\aleph$ CD. Tisch. and W.H. retain -σαντο.

<sup>7</sup>  $\aleph$ BL al. pl. omit ουν.

<sup>8</sup> ο λαος απας in  $\aleph$ BDL 1, 33 al.

words πᾶσιν τοῖς ἔθνεσιν, which do occur, are strangely omitted by Lk., the Gentile evangelist, perhaps to sharpen the contrast between the ideal—a house of prayer, and the reality—a den of robbers, i.e., of dishonest traders, or it may be because the temple was now in ruins. The last part of the saying is from Jerem. vii. 11.

Vv. 47-48. τὸ καθ' ἡμέραν, daily, as in xi. 3.—ἄρχιερεῖς καὶ γραμματεῖς, priests and scribes, Sadducees and Pharisees, lax and strict, united against the Man who had nothing in common with either.—καὶ οἱ πρῶτοι: added as a kind of afterthought = the socially important people who, though laymen, agreed with the professionals in their dislike of Jesus.—Ver. 48. τὸ τί ποιήσωσιν, “the what to do”; the will to kill there, but the way dark (cf. i. 62, xxii. 24).—ὁ λαὸς, the people, the common mass, with their inconvenient liking for a true, outspoken, brave, heroic man.—ἐξεκρέμετο a., hung upon Him (hearing), an expressive phrase, and classical; examples in Wetstein and Pricaeus and in Loesner from Philo. From the Latins they cite:

Pendentque iterum narrantis ab ore.—Virg., Aen., v. 79.

Narrantis conjux pendet ab ore viri.—Ovid., Her., 1, 30.

Pricaeus suggests that the metaphor is taken from iron and the magnet.

CHAPTER XX. IN THE TEMPLE. PREACHING, CONFLICTS, AND PARABLE OF THE VINEDRESSERS.—Vv. 1-8. By what authority? (Mt. xxi. 23-27, Mk. xi. 27-33).—ἐν μιᾷ τ. ἡ., on one of the days, referred to in ix. 47; vague note of time.—εὐαγγελιζομένου: Lk. wishes his readers to understand that Jesus was not engaged in heated controversy all the time, that His main occupation during these last days was preaching the good news, speaking “words of grace” there as in Galilee and in Samaria.—ἐπέστησαν, came upon, with perhaps a suggestion of suddenness (examples in Loesner from Philo), and even of hostility (adorti sunt, Erasmus, Annot.). In xxi. 34 Lk. uses a separate word along with the verb to express the idea of suddenness.—Ver. 2. εἰπὸν ἡμῖν: peculiar to Lk., makes the question pointed.—ταῦτα ought to refer to the preaching, not to the cleansing of the temple, which in Lk. is very slightly noticed.—τίς ἐστιν, etc.: a direct question introduced by ἦ, not dependent on εἰπὸν, not altogether distinct from the first question; an alternative form putting it more specifically and more pointedly than in parallels = who is it that gives, who can it be? Authority everything for the interrogants. Every Rabbi had his diploma, every priest his ordination (Farrar).—Ver. 3. λόγον: without the ἓνα of the parallels. Vide notes there.—Ver. 5. συνελογίσαντο:

γάρ ἐστιν Ἰωάννην προφήτην εἶναι.” 7. Καὶ ἀπεκρίθησαν μὴ εἰδέναι πόθεν. 8. καὶ ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Οὐδὲ ἐγὼ λέγω ὑμῖν ἐν ποίᾳ ἐξουσίᾳ ταῦτα ποιῶ.”

9. Ἦρξατο δὲ πρὸς τὸν λαὸν λέγειν τὴν παραβολὴν ταύτην· “Ἀνθρωπὸς τις ἐφύτευσεν ἀμπελῶνα,<sup>1</sup> καὶ ἐξέδοτο<sup>2</sup> αὐτὸν γεωργοῖς, καὶ ἀπεδήμησε χρόνους ἱκανοῦς. 10. καὶ ἐν<sup>3</sup> καιρῷ ἀπέστειλε πρὸς τοὺς γεωργοὺς δούλον, ἵνα ἀπὸ τοῦ καρποῦ τοῦ ἀμπελῶνος δῶσιν<sup>4</sup> αὐτῷ· οἱ δὲ γεωργοὶ δείραντες αὐτὸν ἐξάπεστειλαν<sup>5</sup> κενόν. 11. καὶ προσέθετο πέμψαι ἕτερον<sup>6</sup> δούλον· οἱ δὲ κάκεινον δείραντες καὶ ἀτιμάσαντες ἐξάπεστειλαν κενόν. 12. καὶ προσέθετο πέμψαι τρίτον<sup>7</sup>· οἱ δὲ καὶ τοῦτον ἄ τραυματίσαντες ἐξέβαλον. 13. εἶπε δὲ ὁ κύριος αὐτοῖς· τὸν ἀμπελῶνος, τί ποιήσω; πέμψω τὸν υἱόν μου τὸν ἀγαπητόν·

<sup>1</sup> ΞBCDL omit τις, and ΞBL have εφυτ. αμπ. as in T.R. C has αμπ.ανθ. εφυτ. D αμπ. εφυτ. ανθ.

<sup>2</sup> εξεδετο in ΞBCL = parall. Tisch. and W.H. both adopt it, but Trg. retains εξεδετο found in D.

<sup>3</sup> Omit εν ΞBDL 33.

<sup>4</sup> δωσουσιν in ΞABLMQ (Tisch., W.H.). CD have δωσιν.

<sup>5</sup> εξαπεστειλαν α. δειραντες in ΞBL.

<sup>6</sup> ετερον πεμψαι in ΞABLU.

<sup>7</sup> τριτον πεμψαι in ΞBL.

for the more usual διαλ.; here only in N.T.—πρὸς ἑαυτοῦς may be connected either with this verb or with λέγοντες.—Ver. 6. καταλιθάσει: in the parallels it is indicated generally that they feared the people; here it is explained why or what they feared: viz., that the people would stone them; to be taken cum grano. The verb is ἀπαξ λεγ.; synonyms are καταλιθοῦν (Joseph.), καταλιθοβολεῖν (Ex. xvii. 4).—πεισιμμένος points to a fixed permanent conviction, this the force of the perfect participle.—Ver. 7. μὴ εἰδέναι: the answer is given in dependent form = οὐκ οἶδαμεν in parallels. Vv. 9-19. The parable of the wicked vinedressers (Mt. xxi. 33-46, Mk. xii. 1-12). Between the last section and this comes, in Mt., the parable of the Two Sons.

Ver. 9. ἦρξατο: this word is less appropriate here than in Mk., where it means: made a beginning in teaching by parables by uttering this particular parable. Here it may signify turning to the people again after disposing of the question of the Pharisees concerning authority.—ἐφύτευσεν ἀμπελῶνα: Lk. contents himself with this general statement, omitting the details given in parallels, which explain what planting a vineyard involves.—χρόνους ἱκανοῦς:

literally, “for long times,” peculiar to Lk. here; similar phrases are of frequent occurrence in his writings. The “long times” cover the whole period of Israel’s history. The absenteeism of God during these long ages represents the free scope given in providence to the will of man in the exercise of his moral responsibility.—Ver. 10. καιρῷ means the fruit season each year; many such seasons at which God sent demanding fruit.—ἵνα δώσουσιν: ἵνα with the future in a pure final clause; similar constructions occur in classic Greek, but with ὅπως, not with ἵνα.—δείραντες: the gradation in indignities is well marked in Lk.—beating, beating with shameful handling (ἀτιμάσαντες), ejection with wounding (τραυματίσαντες ἐξέβαλον), culminating in murder in the case of the son. In the parallels killing comes in sooner, which is true to the historical fact.—Ver. 12. προσέθετο πέμψαι, he added to send, a Hebraism, as in xix. 11.—Ver. 13. τί ποιήσω; deliberative subjunctive, serving to make the step next taken appear something extraordinary. In Mt. it appears simply as the next (final) step in common course. In Mk. the son is the only person left to send. He had yet one, a beloved son, “beloved” added to bring out the significance of ἴσως τοῦτον ἰδόντες<sup>1</sup> ἐντραπήσονται. 14. Ἰδόντες δὲ αὐτὸν οἱ γεωργοὶ διελογίζοντο πρὸς ἑαυτοὺς,<sup>2</sup> λέγοντες, Οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ κληρονόμος· δευτε,<sup>3</sup> ἀποκτείνωμεν αὐτόν, ἵνα ἡμῶν γένηται ἡ κληρονομία. 15. Καὶ ἐκβαλόντες αὐτὸν ἔξω τοῦ ἀμπελῶνος, ἀπέκτειναν. Τί οὖν ποιήσει αὐτοῖς ὁ κύριος τοῦ ἀμπελῶνος; 16. ἐλεύσεται καὶ ἀπολέσει τοὺς γεωργοὺς τούτους, καὶ δώσει τὸν ἀμπελῶνα ἄλλοις.” Ἀκούσαντες δὲ εἶπον, “Μὴ γένοιτο.” 17. Ὁ δὲ ἐμβλέψας αὐτοῖς εἶπε, “Τί οὖν ἐστὶ τὸ γεγραμμένον τούτου, ‘λίθον ὃν ἀπεδοκίμασαν οἱ οἰκοδομοῦντες, οὗτος ἐγενήθη εἰς κεφαλὴν γωνίας;’ 18. Πᾶς ὁ πεσὼν ἐπ’ ἐκεῖνον τὸν λίθον συνθλασθήσεται· ἐφ’ ὃν δ’ ἂν πέσῃ, λικμήσει αὐτόν.” 19. Καὶ ἐζήτησαν οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ γραμματεῖς<sup>4</sup> ἐπιβαλεῖν ἐπ’ αὐτὸν τὰς χεῖρας ἐν αὐτῇ τῇ ὥρᾳ, καὶ ἐφοβήθησαν τὸν λαόν· ἔγνωσαν γὰρ ὅτι πρὸς αὐτοὺς τὴν παραβολὴν ταύτην εἶπε.<sup>5</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Omit ἰδόντες in BCDLQ 1, 33, 131 verss.

<sup>2</sup> ἀλλήλους in BDLR 1, 33 al.

<sup>3</sup> Omit δευτε B and other uncials (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> οἱ γραμ. καὶ οἱ αρχ. in BL al. 1, 33 al. pl. verss. T.R. = ND.

<sup>5</sup> εἶπεν before τῆν παρ. in NB (D εἰρηκεν) L 13, 69, etc.

sending him. In Lk. the reference to the son has a theological colour: τὸν υἱόν μου τὸν ἀγαπητόν.—ἴσως: more than “perhaps” or “it may be” (A.V., R.V.), and less than “without doubt” (“sine dubio,” Wolf). It expresses what may naturally and reasonably be expected = τάχα (Hesychius), or οἶμαι (Bornemann) = I should think (they will reverence him). Here only in N.T.—Ver. 15. ἐκβαλόντες ἀπέκτειναν, casting out they killed him, inverting the order of the actions in Mk.; perhaps with prospective reference (on Lk.’s part) to the crucifixion, when Jesus was led outside the city and crucified “without the gate”.—Ver. 16. μὴ γένοιτο: here only in the Gospels, frequent in St. Paul’s Epistles (“a Pauline phrase,” Holtzmann, H. C.). Sturz (De Dialecto Mac. et Alex.) reckons it an Alexandrine usage, because found in the sense of deprecation only in Sept., N. T., and late Greek writers. Raphael cites an example from Herodotus. This μὴ γένοιτο is put by Lk. into the mouth of the people, as unable to contemplate the doom pronounced on the husbandmen as described by Jesus. In Mt. (xxi. 41) the people themselves pronounce the doom. The sentiment thus strongly expressed prepares the way for the reference to the “rejected stone”.

Vv. 17-19.—ἐμβλέψας, looking intently, to give impressiveness to what

He is going to say in reply.—τί οὖν, etc., what then is (means) this Scripture? the οὖν implying that the words point to the very doom they deprecate. Yet the oracle does not directly indicate the fate of the builders, but rather the unexpected turn in the fortunes of the rejected and despised Stone. In Mt. and Mk. the citation is introduced, without any binding connection with what immediately goes before, to state a fact concerning the future of the “Son” lying outside the parable. They give the citation in full. Lk. omits the last clause: παρὰ κυρίου, etc.—Ver. 18 points out the bearing of the turn in the fortunes of the “Stone” on the fate of those who rejected Him. The thought is based on Daniel ii. 35. It is not in Mk., and it is a doubtful reading in Mt. It may have been a comment on the oracle from the Psalter suggested to believing minds by the tragic fate of the Jews. They first stumbled on the stone, then the stone fell on them with crushing judicial effect.—Ver. 19 states the effect of the parabolic discourse of Jesus on the men whom it satirised. They desired to apprehend the obnoxious Speaker on the spot.—ἐν αὐτῇ τῇ ὥρᾳ, καὶ ἐφοβήθησαν, etc.: the καὶ here, as in Mk., is in effect = but; vide notes on Mk.—ἔγνωσαν, they, that is the Pharisees and scribes, knew.—πρὸς αὐτοὺς = with reference to themselves.

20. Καὶ παρατηρήσαντες ἀπέστειλαν ἐγκαθέτους, ὑποκρινομένους ἑαυτοὺς δικαίους εἶναι, ἵνα ἐπιλάβωνται αὐτοῦ λόγου, εἰς τὸ<sup>1</sup> παραδῶναι αὐτὸν τῇ ἀρχῇ καὶ τῇ ἐξουσίᾳ τοῦ ἡγεμόνος. 21. καὶ ἐπηρώτησαν αὐτόν, λέγοντες, “ Διδάσκαλε, οἶδαμεν ὅτι ὀρθῶς λέγεις καὶ διδάσκεις, καὶ οὐ λαμβάνεις πρόσωπον, ἀλλ’ ἐπ’ ἀληθείας τὴν ὁδὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ διδάσκεις. 22. ἔξιστιν ἡμῖν<sup>2</sup> Καίσαρι φόρον δοῦναι, ἢ οὐ;” 23. Κατανοήσας δὲ αὐτῶν τὴν<sup>b</sup> πανουργίαν, εἶπε πρὸς αὐτούς, “ Τί με πειράζετε<sup>3</sup>; 24. ἐπιδείξατέ<sup>4</sup> μοι δηνάριον· τίνας ἔχει εἰκόνα καὶ ἐπιγραφήν;” Ἀποκριθέντες δὲ εἶπον,<sup>5</sup> “ Καίσαρος.” 25. Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς,<sup>6</sup> “ Ἀπόδοτε τοίνυν<sup>7</sup> τὰ Καίσαρος Καίσαρι, καὶ τὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ τῷ Θεῷ.” 26. Καὶ οὐκ ἴσχυσαν ἐπιλαβέσθαι αὐτοῦ<sup>8</sup> ῥήματος ἐναντίον τοῦ λαοῦ· καὶ θαυμάσαντες ἐπὶ τῇ ἀποκρίσει αὐτοῦ, ἐσίγησαν.

b 1 Cor. iii.
19. 2 Cor.
iv. 2; xi. 3.
Eph. iv. 14.

<sup>1</sup> For εἰς το ἩBCDL have ὡστε (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> ημας in ἩABL 13, 33, 69 al. CD have ημιν.

<sup>3</sup> Omit τι με πειρ. ἩBL minusc. e cop.

<sup>4</sup> δεῖξατε in ἩABDLMP al.

<sup>5</sup> For αποκρ. δε εἶπον ἩBL 33 have οἱ δε ε. <sup>6</sup> προς αυτους in ἩBL 1, 13, 69.

<sup>7</sup> τοινυν αποδοτε in ἩBL 69.

<sup>8</sup> του for αυτου in ἩBL 433 (W.H.).

Vv. 20-26. The tribute question (Mt. xii. 15-22, Mk. xii. 13-17).—Ver. 20. παρατηρήσαντες: used absolutely = watching, not Him, but their opportunity; so Grotius and Field (Ol. Nor.); watching with close cunning observation (accurate et insidiose observare, Kypke). —ἐγκαθέτους: some derive from ἐν and κάθημαι = sitters down, lying in wait (subsessores, Grotius), others from κατατίθημι. The most probable derivation is from καθίημι, to place in ambush (so Kypke, Schanz, etc.). Pricaeus cites Sirach viii. 11: ἵνα μὴ ἐγκαθίσῃ ὡς ἐνεδρον τῷ στόματί σου, as probably in the mind of Lk. Here only in N.T. = “spies” (A.V., R.V.), “Aufpasser” (Weizsäcker).—ὑποκρινομένους ἐ., passing themselves off as; that was the trick they had been put up to.—δικαίους, honest men, sincerely anxious to know and do their duty. They might pose as such with the better chance of success if they were as Mt. states “disciples”; scholars of the scribes = ingenuous young men.—αὐτοῦ λόγου: that they might lay hold either of a word of His, or of Him by a word (eum in sermone, Vulgate), or of Him, i.e., of a word spoken by Him; all three alternatives find support.—ὥστε (εἰς τὸ T.R.), indicating aim and tendency.—τ. ἀρχῇ καὶ τ. ἐξουσίᾳ: the repetition of the article raises a doubt whether both nouns refer τὸ τοῦ ἡγεμόνος. So construed the clause will mean “to the rule and especially to the authority of the governor,” rule being general, and authority a more special definition of it. Some take ἀρχῇ as referring to the Sanhedrim. The probability is that both refer to Pilate. On the aim thus said to be in view Grotius remarks: “When disputes about religion do not suffice to oppress the innocent, matters relating to the state are wont to be taken up”.—Ver. 21. ὀρθῶς, rightly, as in vii. 43, pointing not to sincerity in speech (λέγεις) and teaching (διδάσκεις) but to sound judgment = you always say the right thing; the second clause points to impartiality = you say the same thing to all; the third to sincerity = you say what you think. They describe an ideal from which their own masters were as remote as possible.

Ver. 22 f. The question.—φόρον = κῆνσον, a Latinism, in the parallels.—Ver. 23. πανουργίαν, craft, cunning, as in 2 Cor. iv. 2, which possibly the evangelist had in his eye. Each synoptist has his own word here (πονηρίαν Mt., ὑπόκρισιν Mk.) as if trying to describe the indescribable.—Ver. 24. Lk. reports more briefly than Mt. and Mk., not thinking it necessary to state that the denarius asked for was handed to Jesus.—Ver. 25. τοίνυν, therefore, connecting

27. Προσελθόντες δέ τινες τῶν Σαδδουκαίων, οἱ ἀντιλέγοντες<sup>1</sup> ἀνάστασιν μὴ εἶναι, ἐπηρώτησαν αὐτόν, 28. λέγοντες, “Διδάσκαλε, Μωσῆς ἔγραψεν ἡμῖν, ἐάν τις ἀδελφὸς ἀποθάνῃ ἔχων γυναῖκα, καὶ οὗτος ἄτεκνος ἀποθάνῃ,<sup>2</sup> ἵνα λάβῃ ὁ ἀδελφὸς αὐτοῦ τὴν γυναῖκα, καὶ ἐξαναστήσῃ σπέρμα τῷ ἀδελφῷ αὐτοῦ. 29. ἑπτὰ οὖν ἀδελφοὶ ἦσαν· καὶ ὁ πρῶτος λαβὼν γυναῖκα ἀπέθανεν ἄτεκνος· 30. καὶ<sup>3</sup> ἔλαβεν ὁ δεύτερος τὴν γυναῖκα, καὶ οὗτος ἀπέθανεν ἄτεκνος<sup>4</sup>. 31. καὶ ὁ τρίτος ἔλαβεν αὐτήν· ὡσαύτως δὲ καὶ οἱ ἑπτὰ οὐ κατέλιπον τέκνα, καὶ ἀπέθανον· 32. ὕστερον δὲ πάντων<sup>4</sup> ἀπέθανε καὶ ἡ γυνή. 33. ἐν τῇ οὖν ἀναστάσει,<sup>5</sup> τίνος αὐτῶν γίνεται γυνή; οἱ γὰρ ἑπτὰ ἔσχον αὐτὴν γυναῖκα.” 34. Καὶ ἀποκριθεὶς<sup>6</sup> εἶπεν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Οἱ υἱοὶ τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτου γαμοῦσι καὶ ἐγαμίσκονται<sup>7</sup>. 35. οἱ δὲ καταξιωθέντες τοῦ αἰῶνος ἐκείνου τυχεῖν καὶ τῆς ἀναστάσεως τῆς ἐκ νεκρῶν οὔτε γαμοῦσιν οὔτε ἐγαμίσκονται<sup>8</sup>. 36. οὔτε γὰρ

<sup>1</sup> ΞBCDL 1, 33 al. verss. have οι λεγοντες, which may be a conformation to parall. W.H. adopt this reading.

<sup>2</sup> For αποθανη ΞaBLP 1, 33 al. have η (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> For και ελαβεν . . . ατεκνος ΞBDL have simply και ο δευτερος (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> Omit παντων and place απεθανε after γυνη ΞBDL minusc. ΞBD omit δε.

<sup>5</sup> For εν τη ουν αναστασει BL have η γυνη ουν εν τη αναστ., γυνη thus occurring twice (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>6</sup> Omit αποκριθεις ΞBDL.

<sup>7</sup> γαμισκονται in ΞBL 33.

<sup>8</sup> γαμιζονται in ΞDLQRA 1, 33 al. (Tisch., W.H., text). B has γαμισκονται (W.H. marg.).

the dictum following with the fact stated before that the denarius bore Caesar's image, and implying that by the dictum Jesus pronounced in favour of paying tribute to the Roman ruler.—Ver. 26. The reply of Jesus, baffling in itself, was doubly so, because it had made a favourable impression on the people. Therefore the questioners deemed it best to make no attempt at criticism in presence of the people (ἐναντίον τοῦ λαοῦ).

Vv. 27-39. The resurrection question. Sadducees speak (Mt. xxii. 23-33, Mk. xii. 18-27).—οἱ ἀντιλέγοντες in strict grammar ought to refer to τινες, but doubtless it is meant to refer to the whole party. It is a case of a nominative in loose apposition with a genitive—“outside the construction of the sentence—interposed as a pendent word, so to speak,” Winer, G. N. T., p. 668.—μὴ εἶναι: literally denying that there is not a resurrection, the meaning being really the reverse. After verbs of denying the Greeks repeat the negation. The reading λέγοντες, though well attested, looks like a grammatical correction.—Ver. 28.

ἄτεκνος: here only in N.T. = μὴ ἔχων τ. in Mt. and μὴ ἄφη τ. in Mk.—Ver. 29. οὖν, therefore, carrying on the narrative (frequent in John) and implying that the law of Moses cited gave rise to the curious case stated and the difficulty connected with it.—Ver. 31. οὐ κατέλιπον τ. κ. ἀπέθανον, did not leave children and died, for died leaving no children. The emphasis is on the childlessness, therefore it is mentioned first. That the seven died in course of time was a matter of course, but that seven in succession should have no children was marvellous.—Ver. 34. In giving Christ's answer Lk. omits the charge of ignorance against the questioners found in Mt. and Mk.—γαμίσκονται = γαμίζονται in parallels, here only in N.T.—Ver. 35. οἱ δὲ καταξιωθέντες, etc., those deemed worthy to attain that world. The thought could have been expressed without τυχεῖν, for which accordingly there is no equivalent in the Vulgate: “qui digni habebuntur seculo illo,” on which account Pricaeus thinks it should be leit out of the Greek text. But the ἀποθανεῖν ἔτι δύνανται· ἰσάγγελοι γάρ εἰσι, καὶ υἱοὶ εἰσι τοῦ<sup>1</sup> Θεοῦ, τῆς ἀναστάσεως υἱοὶ ὄντες. 37. Ὅτι δὲ ἐγείρονται οἱ νεκροί, καὶ Μωσῆς ἐμήνυσεν ἐπὶ τῆς βάτου, ὡς λέγει Κύριον τὸν Θεὸν Ἀβραάμ καὶ τὸν<sup>2</sup> Θεὸν Ἰσαὰκ καὶ τὸν<sup>1</sup> Θεὸν Ἰακώβ. 38. Θεὸς δὲ οὐκ ἔστι νεκρῶν, ἀλλὰ ζώντων. πάντες γὰρ αὐτῷ ζῶσιν." 39. Ἀποκριθέντες δὲ τινες τῶν γραμματέων εἶπον, "Διδάσκαλε, καλῶς εἶπας." 40. Οὐκ ἔτι δὲ<sup>8</sup> ἐτόλμων ἐπερωτᾶν αὐτὸν οὐδέν.

41. Εἶπε δὲ πρὸς αὐτούς, "Πῶς λέγουσι τὸν Χριστὸν υἱὸν Δαβὶδ εἶναι; 42. καὶ αὐτὸς<sup>4</sup> Δαβὶδ λέγει ἐν βίβλῳ ψαλμῶν, 'Εἶπεν ὁ<sup>5</sup> Κύριος τῷ κυρίῳ μου, Κάθου ἐκ δεξιῶν μου, 43. ἕως ἂν θῶ τοὺς ἐχθρούς σου ὑποπόδιον τῶν ποδῶν σου.' 44. Δαβὶδ οὖν κύριον αὐτὸν<sup>6</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Omit του ἘABL.      <sup>2</sup> Omit τον in second and third places ἘBDLR.

<sup>3</sup> ουκετι γαρ in ἘBL 33 al.

<sup>4</sup> εἶναι Δ. υιον in ἘBL, and αυτος γαρ for και αυτος.      <sup>5</sup> BD omit ο.

<sup>6</sup> αυτον κυριον in ABKL, etc. (W.H.). T.R. = ἘD (Tisch.).

use of this verb, even when it seems but an elegant superfluity, is common in Greek. Examples in Bornemann.—Ver. 36. ἀποθανεῖν: marriage, birth, death, go together, form one system of things, that of this world. In the next they have no place. Here Lk. expatiates as if the theme were congenial.—ἰσάγγελοι, angel-like, here only in N.T.—καὶ υἱοὶ εἰσιν, etc.: sons of God, being sons of the resurrection. This connection of ideas recalls St. Paul's statement in Rom. i. 4 that Christ was declared or constituted Son of God with power by the resurrection.—Ver. 37. καὶ Μ.: the same Moses who gave the Levirate law. It was important in speaking to Sadducees to show that even Moses was on the side of the resurrection.—ἐμήνυσεν, made known, used in reference to something previously hidden (John xi. 57).—ἐπὶ τῆς βάτου, as in Mk., vide notes there.—Ver. 38. θεὸς is predicate = Jehovah is not God of dead men.—δὲ has the force of the argumentative nonne.—πάντες γὰρ αὐτῷ ζῶσιν, "for all live unto Him" (A.V., R.V.), is probably an editorial explanatory gloss to make the deep thought of Jesus clearer (not in parallels). The gloss itself needs explanation. Is "all" to be taken without qualification?—αὐτῷ may be variously rendered "by Him," i.e., by His power: quoad Dei potentiam (Grotius), "in Him" (Ewald), "for Him," i.e., for His honour (Schanz), or for "His thought or judgment" = He accounts them as living (Hahn). The sentiment in some measure echoes Rom. xiv. 7, 8.—Ver. 39. καλῶς εἶπας, Thou hast spoken well; complimentary, but insincere, or only half sincere. They are glad to have the Sadducees put down, but not glad that Jesus triumphed.—Ver. 40. οὐκέτι γὰρ: the γὰρ, if the true reading, must mean: The scribes could do nothing but flatter (ver. 39), for they were so conscious of His power that they dared no longer ask captious questions.

Vv. 41-44. The counter question (Mt. xxii. 41-46, Mk. xii. 35-37). Lk., who had given something similar at an earlier stage (x. 25-37), omits the question of the scribe concerning the great commandment, which comes in at this point in Mt. (xxii. 34-40) and Mk. (xii. 28-34), retaining only its conclusion (in Mk.), which he appends to the previous narrative (ver. 40).—Ver. 41. πρὸς αὐτούς, to them, i.e., the representatives of the scribes mentioned in ver. 39. In Mt. the Pharisees are addressed, in Mk. the audience is the people, and the question is about the scribes as interpreters.—πῶς λέγουσι, how do they say? (not λέγετε). The controversial character of the question is not made clear in Lk.—Ver. 42. ἐν βίβλῳ ψ., in the book of Psalms, in place of ἐν τῷ πνεύματι τ. ἁγ. (in the Holy Spirit, Mk.), which one might have expected Lk. to retain if he found it in his source. But he probably names the place in O.T. whence the quotation is taken for the information of his readers. That what καλεῖ, καὶ πῶς υἱὸς αὐτοῦ<sup>1</sup> ἔστιν;” 45. Ἀκούοντος δὲ παντὸς τοῦ λαοῦ, εἶπε τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ,<sup>2</sup> 46. “Προσέχετε ἀπὸ τῶν γραμματέων τῶν θελόντων περιπατεῖν ἐν στολαῖς, καὶ φιλοῦντων ἀσπασμοὺς ἐν ταῖς ἀγοραῖς, καὶ πρωτοκαθεδρίας ἐν ταῖς συναγωγαῖς, καὶ πρωτοκλισίας ἐν τοῖς δείπνοις· 47. οἱ κατεσθίουσι τὰς οἰκίας τῶν χηρῶν, καὶ προφάσει μακρὰ προσεύχονται. οὗτοι λήψονται περισσότερον κρίμα.”

XXI. 1. ἈΝΑΒΛΕΨΑΣ δὲ εἶδε τοὺς βάλλοντας τὰ δῶρα αὐτῶν εἰς τὸ γαζοφυλάκιον<sup>3</sup> πλουσίους· 2. εἶδε δὲ καί<sup>4</sup> τινα χήραν πενιχρὰν βάλλουσαν ἐκεῖ δύο λεπτά,<sup>5</sup> 3. καὶ εἶπεν, “Ἀληθῶς λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι ἡ χήρα ἢ πτωχὴ αὕτη<sup>6</sup> πλείον<sup>7</sup> πάντων ἔβαλεν· 4. ἅπαντες γὰρ οὗτοι ἐκ τοῦ περισσεύοντος αὐτοῖς ἔβαλον εἰς τὰ δῶρα τοῦ Θεοῦ,<sup>8</sup> αὕτη δὲ ἐκ τοῦ ὑστερήματος αὐτῆς ἅπαντα τὸν βίον ὃν εἶχεν ἔβαλε.”

<sup>1</sup> αὐτον υἱος in  $\aleph$ B, etc. (Tisch., W.H.). T.R. =  $\aleph$ DL.

<sup>2</sup> Omit αὐτου BD.

<sup>3</sup> εἰς το γαζ. τα δωρα α. in  $\aleph$ BDLX 1, 33, 69 al. pl.

<sup>4</sup> Omit καὶ  $\aleph$ BKLMQ 33.

<sup>5</sup> So in D al. (Tisch.). λεπτα δυο in  $\aleph$ BLQX 33 (W.H.); conformed to Mk.?

<sup>6</sup> αὕτη before η πτωχη in  $\aleph$ BDLQ (W.H. = Mk.). T.R. =  $\Delta$ ΧΓΔ, etc. (Tisch.).

<sup>7</sup> πλειω in DQX minusc. (Tisch.). T.R. = B = Mk. (W.H.).

<sup>8</sup> Omit του Θεου  $\aleph$ BLX minusc.

was written in the Psalms, was spoken by the Holy Spirit, was axiomatic for him.—ὑποπόδιον, as in the Psalms, for ὑποκάτω in Mt. and Mk. according to the approved readings. Lk. seems to have turned the passage up (Holtzmann, H. C.).

Vv. 45-47. Warning against the scribes (Mk. xii. 38-40).—Either a mere fragment of the larger whole in Mt. xxiii., or the original nucleus around which Mt. has gathered much kindred matter—the former more likely.—Ver. 46. φιλοῦντων: while following Mk. in the main, Lk. improves the construction here by introducing this participle before ἀσπασμοὺς, which in Mk. depends on θελόντων.—Ver. 47. Another improvement is the change of οἱ κατεσθίουσι (Mk. xii. 40) into οἱ κατεσθίουσι—vide notes on Mk.—μακρὰ, at length, an adverb. Bengel (in Mt.) suggests μακρὰ to agree with προφάσει (“ex orationibus suis fecere magnam πρόφασιν, praetextum comedendi domos viduarum”). Elsner adopts the same view.

CHAPTER XXI. THE WIDOW'S OFFERING. THE APOCALYPTIC DISCOURSE.—Vv. 1-4. The widow's offering (Mk. xii. 41-44), unfortunately placed at the beginning of this chapter, which should have been devoted wholly to Christ's solemn discourse concerning the future. Yet this mal-arrangement corresponds to the manner in which Lk. introduces that discourse, by comparison with Mt. and Mk., markedly unemphatic.—Ver. 1. ἀναβλέψας, looking up, giving the impression of a casual, momentary glance taken by one who had been previously preoccupied with very different matters. Mk's narrative conveys the idea of deliberate, interested observation by one who took a position convenient for the purpose, and continued observing (καθίσας κατέναντι, ἐθεώρει).—τὰ δῶρα, instead of Mk's χαλκόν. Lk. has in view only the rich; Mk., in the first place, the multitude.—πλουσίους: the whole clause from τοὺς may be taken as the object of εἶδε, saw the rich casting in, etc., or πλ. may be in apposition with τοὺς βάλλοντας = saw those casting in, etc., being rich men (so Hahn and Farrar). The former (A.V., Wzs.) is to be preferred.—Ver. 2. πενιχρὰν, needy, from πένομαι or πένης; a poetic word rarely used, here only in N.T. πτωχῆ, Mk.'s word, is stronger = reduced to beggary.—δύο λεπτά. Lk. does not think it necessary to explain

5. ΚΑΙ ΤΙΝΩΝ ΛΕΓΟΝΤΩΝ ΠΕΡΙ ΤΟΥ ΙΕΡΟΥ, ὅτι λίθοις καλοῖς καὶ ἀναθήμασι<sup>1</sup> κεκόσμηται, εἶπε, 6. "Ταῦτα ἂ θεωρεῖτε, ἐλεύσονται ἡμέραι ἐν αἷς οὐκ ἀφεθήσεται λίθος ἐπὶ λίθῳ,<sup>2</sup> ὃς οὐ καταλυθήσεται."

7. Ἐπηρώτησαν δὲ αὐτόν, λέγοντες, "Διδάσκαλε, πότε οὖν ταῦτα ἔσται; καὶ τί τὸ σημεῖον, ὅταν μέλλῃ ταῦτα γίνεσθαι;"

8. Ὁ δὲ εἶπε, "Βλέπετε μὴ πλανηθῆτε· πολλοὶ γὰρ ἐλεύσονται ἐπὶ τῷ ὀνόματί μου, λέγοντες, Ὅτι<sup>3</sup> ἐγὼ εἰμι· καί, Ὁ καιρὸς ἤγγικε."

<sup>1</sup> So in BLQD al. (W.H.). ἀναθεμασιν in ΞADX (Tisch.).

<sup>2</sup> ΞBL minusc. add ὡδε (W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> Omit οτι ΞBLX.

what the coin was or what the contribution amounted to. Mk. states its value in Roman coinage (κοδρανῆς).—Ver. 3. εἶπεν: to whom not indicated. The narrator is concerned alone about the saying—ἀληθῶς, for Mk.'s Hebrew ἀμήν, as nearly always.—πτωχή: Lk. does not avoid this word: the use of the other term in his preliminary narrative is a matter of style. πτωχή implies that the widow might have been expected to beg rather than to be giving to the temple treasury.—Ver. 4. ἅπαντες οὗτοι, all these, referring to the rich and pointing to them.—ὑστερήματος: practically = Mk.'s ὑστερήσεως, preferred possibly because in use in St. Paul's epistles: not so good a word as ὑστέρησις to denote the state of poverty out of which she gave. Lk.'s expression strictly means that she gave out of a deficit, a minus quantity ("ex eo quod deest illi," Vulg.), a strong but intelligible way of putting it.—τ. βίον, her living, as in xv. 12, 30 = means of subsistence. Lk. combines Mk.'s two phrases into one.

THE APOCALYPTIC DISCOURSE (vv. 5-38).—Vv. 5-7. Introduction to the discourse (Mt. xxiv. 1-3, Mk. xiii. 1-4).—καὶ τινων λεγόντων, and some remarking. A most unemphatic transition, as if what follows were simply a continuation of discourse in the temple on one of many topics on which Jesus spoke. No indication that it was disciples (any of the Twelve) who asked the question, or that the conversation took place outside. Cf. the narrative in Mk. The inference that Lk. cannot have known Mk.'s narrative (Godet) is inadmissible. Lk. omits many things he knew. His interest is obviously in the didactic matter only, and perhaps we have here another instance of his "sparing the Twelve". He may not have cared to show them filled with thoughtless admiration for a building (and a system) which was doomed to judicial destruction.—λίθοις καλοῖς, beautiful stones: marble, huge; vide Joseph., B. J., v. 5, 2.—καὶ ἀναθήμασι, and votive or sacred gifts, in Lk. only; the reference implies that the spectators are within the building. These gifts were many and costly, from the great ones of the earth: a table from Ptolemy, a chain from Agrippa, a golden vine from Herod the Great. The temple was famous for its wealth. Tacitus writes: "illic immensae opulentiae templum," Hist., vi. 8.—κεκόσμηται: perfect, expressing the permanent result of past acts of skilful men and beneficent patrons—a highly ornamented edifice, the admiration of the world, but marked for destruction by the moral order of the universe.—Ver. 6. ταῦτα ἂ θ. Some (Grotius, Pricaeus) take ταῦτα = τούτων: of these things which ye see a stone shall not be left. Most, however, take it as a nominative absolute = as for these things which ye see (vide Winer, § lxiii. 2 d). This suits better the emotional mood.—ἐλεύσονται ἡμέραι: cf. v. 35, where a similar ominous allusion to coming evil days occurs.—Ver. 7. διδάσκαλε, Master, suggesting its correlate, disciples, but not necessarily implying that the question proceeded from the Twelve; rather the contrary, for they would not be so formal in their manner of speaking to Jesus (cf. Mt. and Mk.).—πότε οὖν ταῦτα, etc.: the question refers exclusively to the predicted destruction of the temple = when, and what the sign? So in Mk. Cf. Mt.

Vv. 8-11. Signs prelusive of the end (Mt. xxiv. 4-8, Mk. xiii. 5-11).—βλέπετε, etc., take heed that ye be not deceived. This the keynote—not to tell when, but to protect disciples from delusions and terrors.—ἐπὶ τῷ ὀνόματί μου, in my name, i.e., calling themselves Christs. Vide at Mt. on these false Messiahs.—ὁ καιρὸς ἤγγικε: the καιρὸς should naturally mean Jerusalem's fatal day.—Ver. 9.

μή οὖν<sup>1</sup> πορευθῆτε ὀπίσω αὐτῶν. 9. ὅταν δὲ ἀκούσητε πολέμους καὶ ἄκαταστασίας, μή πτοηθῆτε· δεῖ γὰρ ταῦτα γενέσθαι πρῶτον, <sup>a 1 Cor. xiv. 33. 2 Cor. vi. 5; xii 20. Jas. iii. 16.</sup> ἀλλ' οὐκ εὐθὺς τὸ τέλος." 10. Τότε ἔλεγεν αὐτοῖς, "Ἐγερθήσεται ἔθνος ἐπὶ ἔθνος, καὶ βασιλεία ἐπὶ βασιλείαν· 11. σεισμοὶ τε μεγάλοι κατὰ τόπους καὶ<sup>2</sup> λιμοὶ καὶ λοιμοὶ<sup>3</sup> ἔσονται, φόβητρά τε καὶ σημεῖα ἀπ' οὐρανοῦ μεγάλα ἔσται. 12. Πρὸ δὲ τούτων ἀπάντων ἐπιβαλοῦσιν ἐφ' ὑμᾶς τὰς χεῖρας αὐτῶν, καὶ διώξουσιν, παραδιδόντες εἰς συναγωγὰς<sup>4</sup> καὶ φυλακάς, ἀγομένους<sup>5</sup> ἐπὶ βασιλεῖς καὶ ἡγεμόνας, ἕνεκεν τοῦ ὀνόματός μου. 13. ἀποθήσεται δὲ<sup>6</sup> ὑμῖν εἰς μαρτύριον· 14. θέσθε οὖν εἰς τὰς καρδίας<sup>7</sup> ὑμῶν, μή προμελετᾶν ἀπολογηθῆναι· 15. ἐγὼ γὰρ δώσω ὑμῖν στόμα καὶ σοφίαν, ἧ οὐ δυηήσονται ἀντειπεῖν

<sup>1</sup> Omit οὖν ΣBDLX.

<sup>2</sup> καὶ before κατὰ τ. in ΣBL 33.

<sup>3</sup> λιμ. καὶ λοιμ. in ΣDL (Tisch.). λοιμ. καὶ λιμ. in B (W.H. text).

<sup>4</sup> τας before συναγ. in ΣBD.

<sup>5</sup> απαγομένους in ΣBDL minusc.

<sup>6</sup> Omit δε ΣBD.

<sup>7</sup> θετε οὖν εν ταις καρδιας in ΣABDLX 33.

ἀκαταστασίας, unsettled conditions, for ἀκοῦς πολέμων in Mt. and Mk., and perhaps intended as an explanation of that vague phrase. Hahn refers to the French Revolution and the Socialist movement of the present day as illustrating the meaning.—πτοηθῆτε = θροεῖσθε in parallels; here and in xxiv. 37.—δεῖ γὰρ, etc., cf. the laconic version in Mk. (W. and H.) and notes there.—πρῶτον, οὐκ εὐθὺς: both emphasising the lesson that the crisis cannot come before certain things happen, and the latter hinting that it will not come even then.—Ver. 10. τότε ἔλεγεν points to a new beginning in discourse, which has the effect of dissociating the repeated mention of political disturbances from what goes before, and connecting it with apostolic tribulations referred to in the sequel. In Mt. and Mk. the verse corresponding is simply an expansion of the previous thought.—Ver. 11. καὶ κατὰ τόπους: the καὶ thus placed (ΣBL) dissociates κ. τ. from σεισμοὶ and connects it with λιμοὶ καὶ λοιμοὶ: not earthquakes, but pestilences and famines here, there, everywhere. λ. καὶ λ., a baleful conjunction common in speech and in fact.—φόβητρά, terrifying phenomena, here only in N.T. (in Is. xix. 17, Sept.). The τε connects the φόβητρά with the signs from heaven next mentioned. They are in fact the same thing (ἐν διὰ δυοῖν, Bengel).

Vv. 12-19. Signs earlier still (Mt. xxiv. 9-14, Mk. xiii. 9-13).—Ver. 12. πρὸ δὲ τούτων ἀπάντων: this phrase may be introduced here because Mk.'s account lying under Lk.'s eye mentions the signs in the heaven at a later stage, ver. 24. Or it may be Lk.'s equivalent for "these things are the beginning of birth pangs" (Mt. ver. 8, Mk. ver. 9), a Hebrew idea which he avoids.—ἀπαγομένους: a technical term in Athenian legal language.—Ver. 13. ἀποθήσεται, it will turn out; as in Phil. i. 19.—ὑμῖν εἰς μαρτύριον, for a testimony to you = to your credit or honour; = εἰς μαρτυρίου δόξαν, Theophy. So also Bleek. J. Weiss (Meyer), following Baur and Hilgenfeld, renders: it will result in your martyrdom. This meaning is kindred to that of Theophy., but can hardly be intended here (Schanz). The idea belongs to a later time, and the sense is scarcely consistent with ver. 18.—Ver. 14. θέτε οὖν: not = consider, as in i. 66, but = resolve, as in Acts v. 4 ("settle it in your hearts," A.V.).—μή προμελετᾶν (here only in N.T.), not to study beforehand, with the inf.; not to be taken in the letter, as a rule, but in the spirit, therefore = Mk.'s προμεριμνᾶτε which counsels abstinence from anxious thought beforehand.—Ver. 15. ἐγὼ, I, emphatic, the exalted Lord, instead of "the Holy Spirit" in Mk. and "the Spirit of the Father" in Mt. x. 20. The substitution bears witness to the inspiring effect of the thought of the Lord Jesus ruling in heaven on the minds of Christians enduring tribulation, at the time when Lk. wrote.—στόμα, a mouth = utterance.—σοφίαν: the wisest thing to say in the actual situation.—ἀντιστῆναι refers to στόμα, and ἀντειπεῖν to σοφίαν = "They will not be able to

οὐδὲ ἀντιστῆναι<sup>1</sup> πάντες οἱ ἀντικείμενοι ὑμῖν. 16. παραδοθήσεσθε δὲ καὶ ὑπὸ γονέων καὶ ἀδελφῶν καὶ συγγενῶν καὶ φίλων, καὶ θανατώσουσιν ἐξ ὑμῶν· 17. καὶ ἔσεσθε μισούμενοι ὑπὸ πάντων διὰ τὸ ὄνομά μου· 18. καὶ θριξὶ ἐκ τῆς κεφαλῆς ὑμῶν οὐ μὴ ἀπόληται. 19. ἐν τῇ ὑπομονῇ ὑμῶν κτήσασθε<sup>2</sup> τὰς ψυχὰς ὑμῶν. 20. Ὄταν δὲ ἴδητε κυκλομένην ὑπὸ στρατοπέδων τὴν<sup>3</sup> Ἱερουσαλήμ, τότε γνῶτε ὅτι ἤγγικεν ἡ ἐρήμωσις αὐτῆς. 21. τότε οἱ ἐν τῇ Ἰουδαίᾳ φευγέτωσαν εἰς τὰ ὄρη· καὶ οἱ ἐν μέσῳ αὐτῆς<sup>4</sup> ἐκχωρείτωσαν· καὶ οἱ ἐν ταῖς<sup>5</sup> χώραις μὴ εἰσερχέσθωσαν εἰς αὐτήν. 22. ὅτι ἡμέραι ἐκδικήσεως αὐταῖ εἰσι, τοῦ πληρωθῆναι<sup>4</sup> πάντα τὰ γεγραμμένα. 23. οὐαὶ δὲ<sup>6</sup> ταῖς ἐν γαστρὶ ἐχούσαις καὶ ταῖς θηλαζούσαις ἐν ἐκείναις ταῖς ἡμέραις· ἔσται γὰρ ἀνάγκη μεγάλη ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, καὶ ὄργῃ ἐν<sup>6</sup> τῷ λαῷ τούτῳ. 24. καὶ πεσοῦνται στόματι μαχαίρας, καὶ αἰχμαλωτισθήσονται εἰς πάντα τὰ ἔθνη<sup>7</sup> καὶ Ἱερουσαλήμ ἔσται πατουμένη

<sup>5</sup> here only
in N.T.

<sup>1</sup> ἀντιστῆναι ἢ ἀντεπεῖν in  $\aleph$ BL 13, 69 al. (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> κτήσεσθε in AB minusc. (W.H.). T.R. =  $\aleph$ DLRX; etc. (Tisch.).

<sup>3</sup> Omit τὴν  $\aleph$ BD.

<sup>4</sup> πλησθῆναι in  $\aleph$ ABDLRΔ al. (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> BDL codd. vet. Lat. omit δε; unsuitable to the prophetic style, which makes abrupt transitions.

<sup>6</sup> Omit ἐν  $\aleph$ ABCDKL al. pl.

<sup>7</sup> τὰ ἔθνη πάντα in  $\aleph$ BLR 124 cop. (Tisch., W.H.).

gainsay your speech nor to resist your wisdom" (Farrar, C. G. T.).—Ver. 16. καὶ, even, by parents, etc.: non modo alienis, Beng.—ἐξ ὑμῶν, some of you, limiting the unqualified statement of Mk., and with the facts of apostolic history in view.—Ver. 17. μισούμενοι ὑπὸ πάντων, continually hated (pres. part.) by all; dismal prospect! Yet—Ver. 18, θριξί, etc., a hair of your head shall not perish = Mt. x. 30, where it is said: "your hairs are all numbered". What! even in the case of those who die? Yes, Jesus would have His apostles live in this faith whatever betide; an optimistic creed, necessary to a heroic life.—Ver. 19. κτήσεσθε or κτήσασθε, ye shall win, or win ye; sense the same. Similar various readings in Rom. v. 1, ἔχωμεν or ἔχομεν.

Vv. 20-24. Jerusalem's judgment day (Mt. xxiv. 15-21, Mk. xiii. 14-19).—Ver. 20. κυκλομένην, in course of being surrounded; pres. part., but not necessarily implying that for the author of this version of Christ's words the process is actually going on (J. Weiss—Meyer). Jesus might have so spoken conceiving Himself as present.—στρατοπέδων, camps, or armies, here only in N.T. This takes the place in Lk. of the βδέλυγμα in the parallels, avoided as at once foreign and mysterious.—ἡ ἐρήμωσις α., her desolation, including the ruin of the temple, the subject of inquiry: when besieging armies appear you know what to look for.—Ver. 21. τότε, then, momentous hour, time for prompt action.—φευγέτωσαν, flee! The counsel is for three classes: (1) those in Judaea at some distance from Jerusalem, (2) those who happen to be in Jerusalem (ἐν μέσῳ αὐτῆς) when the armies appear, (3) those in the fields or farms round about Jerusalem (ἐν ταῖς χώραις) who might be tempted to take refuge within the city from the invaders, thinking themselves safe within its walls, and who are therefore counselled not to enter. The corresponding counsel in the parallels, vv. 17, 18 in Mt., 15, 16 in Mk., vividly sets forth the necessity of immediate flight.—Ver. 22: peculiar to Lk., and setting forth Jerusalem's fate as the fulfilment (πλησθῆναι, for the more usual πληρωθῆναι, here only in N.T.) of prophecy.—Ver. 23. οὐαὶ, etc.: as in parallels as far as ἡμέραις; then follow words peculiar to Lk. concerning the ἀνάγκη and ὄργη. The use of the former word in the sense of distress is mainly Hellenistic; here and in St. Paul's epistles. The latter

ὑπὸ ἔθνῶν, ἄχρι<sup>1</sup> πληρωθῶσι καιροὶ ἔθνῶν. 25. Καὶ ἔσται<sup>2</sup> σημεῖα ἐν ἡλίῳ καὶ σελήνῃ καὶ ἄστροις, καὶ ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς * συνοχή ἔθνῶν ἐν c 2 Cor. ii. 4 ἀπορίᾳ, ἡχοῦσης<sup>3</sup> θαλάσσης καὶ σάλου, 26. <sup>d here only</sup> ἀποψυχόντων ἀνθρώ- in N.T. πων ἀπὸ φόβου καὶ προσδοκίας τῶν ἐπερχομένων τῇ οἰκουμένῃ· αἱ γὰρ δυνάμεις τῶν οὐρανῶν σαλευθήσονται. 27. καὶ τότε ὄψονται τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἐρχόμενον ἐν νεφέλῃ μετὰ δυνάμεως καὶ δόξης πολλῆς.

28. “ Ἀρχομένων δὲ τούτων γίνεσθαι, ἀνακύψατε καὶ ἐπάρατε τὰς κεφαλὰς ὑμῶν· διότι ἐγγίζει ἡ * ἀπολύτρωσις ὑμῶν.” e here only in Gospels.

<sup>1</sup> ἀχρῖ ου in ΞBCDLR al. pl. B inserts after πληρωθῶσιν καὶ εἰσονται (W.H. in brackets).

<sup>2</sup> The singular with a plural neuter nominative as usual in T.R.; εἰσονται in ΞBD.

<sup>3</sup> ηχοῦσι in ΞABCLMRX al. (Tisch., W.H.). ηχοῦσης (D, etc.) an exegetical change.

word expresses the same idea as that in 1 Thess. ii. 16.—Ver. 24: the description here becomes very definite (slaughter and captivity) and may be coloured by the event.—πατομένη; usually taken as = καταπατομένη: trodden under foot in a contemptuous way, but it may mean simply “trodden” in the sense of being occupied by (Hahn).—καιροὶ ἔθνῶν: the meaning of this suggestive phrase is not clear. The connection of thought seems to require that it be taken = the times of Gentile action in execution of Divine judgment on Israel, or more generally the times of Gentile supremacy. Yet I strongly incline to side with those who find in the phrase a reference to a Gentile day of grace. The Jews had had their day of grace (vide xix. 44, τὸν καιρὸν τῆς ἐπισκοπῆς) and the Gentiles were to have their turn. Such an idea would be congenial to Lk., the Pauline evangelist, and in sympathy with St. Paul’s own thought in Rom. xi. 25. It would also be Lk.’s equivalent for the thought in Mt. xxiv. 14, Mk. xiii. 10. The expression may have become current and so be used here as a vox signata.

Vv. 25-28. Signs of the advent (Mt. xxiv. 29-31, Mk. xiii. 24-27).—Ver. 25. σημεῖα, etc.: the reference to the signs in heaven is very summary as compared with the graphic picture in the parallels. Lk. is more interested in the state of things on earth.—συνοχή ἔ., distress of nations, cf. συνέχομαι in xii. 50.—ἐν ἀπορίᾳ may be connected with what follows or with ἔθνῶν = nations in perplexity, in which case the last clause—ἡχοῦς, etc.—will depend on συνοχή = distress from the noise and billows (σάλος = wave-movement: ἡ τῆς θαλάσσης κλύδωνος κίνησις, Hesych.) of the sea (so Hahn). The main difficulty lies in the vagueness of the reference to the sea. Is it meant literally, or is it a metaphor for the disturbed state of the world? If the latter the force of the genitives ἡχοῦς, σάλου will be best brought out by supposing ὡς to be understood = in perplexity like the state of the sea in a storm. So Heinsius (Exer. Sac.): “ἀπορίαν illam et calamitatem mari fore similem, quoties horrendum tonat atque commovetur,” citing in support Tertullian’s veluti a sonitu maris fluctuantis. The mode of expression is very loose: the sound of the sea and the waves, instead of “the sounding waves of the sea”. Yet the crudeness of the construction suits the mood described. ἡχοῦς may be accented ἡχοῦς (Tisch.) or ἡχοῦς (W.H.) according as it is derived from ἡχος (neuter like ἔλεος, νίκος, etc., in N.T.) or from ἡχώ.—Ver. 26. ἀποψυχόντων: literally, dying, probably meant tropically = ὡς νεκροί, Mt. xxviii. 4.—ἀπὸ φόβου καὶ προσδοκίας, from fear and expectation, instead of fearful expectation as in Heb. x. 27 (φοβερὰ ἐκδοχή). προσδοκία here and in Acts xii. 11.—Ver. 27. ἐν νεφέλῃ, in a cloud, sing., instead of the plural in parallels, making the conception more literal.—Ver. 28: instead of the graphic picture of the angels gathering the elect in Mt. and Mk., Lk. has a general statement that when these signs, terrible to the world, begin to appear the hour of redemption for believers is at hand. They may look up and raise their heads. Cf. 1 Thess. i. 5-10, Jas. v. 7.

29. Καὶ εἶπε παραβολὴν αὐτοῖς, "Ἴδετε τὴν συκὴν καὶ πάντα τὰ δένδρα. 30. ὅταν προβάλωσιν ἤδη, βλέποντες ἀφ' ἑαυτῶν γινώσκετε ὅτι ἤδη ἐγγὺς τὸ θέρος ἐστίν. 31. οὕτω καὶ ὑμεῖς, ὅταν ἴδητε ταῦτα γινόμενα, γινώσκετε ὅτι ἐγγὺς ἐστὶν ἡ βασιλεία τοῦ Θεοῦ. 32. ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι οὐ μὴ παρέλθῃ ἡ γενεὰ αὕτη, ἕως ἂν πάντα γένηται. 33. ὁ οὐρανὸς καὶ ἡ γῆ παρελεύσονται, οἱ δὲ λόγοι μου οὐ μὴ παρέλθωσι.<sup>1</sup> 34. Προσέχετε δὲ ἑαυτοῖς, μήποτε βαρυνθῶσιν<sup>2</sup> ὑμῶν αἱ καρδίαι<sup>3</sup> ἐν κραιπάλῃ καὶ μέθῃ καὶ μερίμναις βιωτικαῖς, καὶ αἰφνίδιος ἐφ' ὑμᾶς ἐπιστῇ<sup>4</sup> ἡ ἡμέρα ἐκείνη. 35. ὡς παγὶς γὰρ ἐπελεύσεται<sup>5</sup> ἐπὶ πάντας τοὺς καθημένους ἐπὶ πρόσωπον πάσης τῆς γῆς. 36. ἀγρυπνεῖτε οὖν<sup>6</sup> ἐν παντὶ καιρῷ δεόμενοι, ἵνα καταξιοθῆτε<sup>7</sup> ἐκφυγεῖν ταῦτα πάντα τὰ μέλλοντα γίνεσθαι, καὶ σταθῆναι ἔμπροσθεν τοῦ υἱοῦ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου."

<sup>1</sup> παρελεύσονται in ΞBDL 13, 33.

<sup>2</sup> βαρυνθῶσι in ΞABCL al. βλ.

<sup>3</sup> υμ. αι καρ. in ΞCDL (Tisch.). αι καρ. υμ. in BX al. (W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> επιστη εφ υμ. αιφνιδιος in ΞBDLR (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> επεισελευσεται γαρ in ΞBD. Vide below. <sup>6</sup> δε for ουν (CL) in ΞBD.

<sup>7</sup> κατισχυσητε in ΞBLX 1, 33 al. (Tisch., W.H.). T.R. = CDΔ al.

Vv. 29-33. Parabolic enforcement of the lesson (Mt. xxiv. 32-35, Mk. xiii. 28-31).—Ver. 29. καὶ πάντα τὰ δένδρα: added by Lk., generalising as in ix. 23: "take up his cross daily". The lesson is taught by all the trees, but parabolic style demands special reference to one particular tree.—προβάλωσιν, put forth (their leaves, τὰ φύλλα understood). Similar phrases in Greek authors.—βλέποντες, etc., when ye look (as who does not when spring returns!) ye know of yourselves, need no one to tell you.—Ver. 31. ἡ βασιλεία τοῦ θεοῦ, explaining the elliptical but not obscure words in Mt. and Mk.: "(it) is near," i.e., the coming of the Son of man. For Lk. that is one with the coming of the Kingdom, which again = redemption in ver. 28.—Vv. 32, 33: with slight change as in parallels, even to the retention of ἀμὴν usually replaced by ἀληθῶς. Presumably ἡ γενεὰ αὕτη means for Lk., as it must have done for the Twelve to whom the words were spoken, the generation to which Jesus Himself belonged. Hahn holds that αὕτη refers to the generation within whose time the events mentioned in vv. 25, 26 shall happen (so also Klostermann).

Vv. 34-36. General exhortation to watchfulness, peculiar to Lk.; each evangelist having his own epilogue.—ἐν κραιπάλῃ καὶ μέθῃ: this seems to be a phrase similar to ἡχοῦς καὶ σάλου—sound and wave for sounding wave (ver. 25) = in headache (from yesterday's intoxication) and drunkenness, for: in drunkenness which causes headache and stupidity. Pricaeus denies that κραιπάλη (here only in N.T.) means yesterday's debauch (χθεσινὴ μέθη), and takes it = ἀδηφαγία, gluttony. That is what we expect certainly. The warning he understands figuratively. So also Bleek.—μερίμναις βιωτικαῖς, cares of life, "what shall we eat, drink?" etc. (xii. 22).—Ver. 35. ὡς παγὶς, as a snare, joined to the foregoing clause in R.V. ("and that day come upon you suddenly as a snare"). Field objects that the verb following (ἐπεισελεύσεται) does not seem sufficiently strong to stand alone, especially when the verb ἐπιστῇ is doubly emphasised by "suddenly" and "as a snare". He therefore prefers the T.R., which connects ὡς παγὶς with what follows, the arrangement adopted in all the ancient versions. The revisers, as if conscious of the force of the above objections, insert "so," "for so shall it come," etc., which virtually gives ὡς παγὶς a double connection. The figure of a snare, while expressive, is less apposite than that of a thief (xii. 39).—καθημένους ε. π., etc., sitting on the face of the earth; the language here has a Hebrew colouring.—Ver. 36. ἐν παντὶ καιρῷ, in every season.—κατισχύσητε,

37. Ἦν δὲ τὰς ἡμέρας ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ διδάσκων<sup>1</sup>. τὰς δὲ νύκτας ἐξερχόμενος ἠύλιζετο εἰς τὸ ὄρος τὸ καλούμενον Ἐλαιῶν. 38. καὶ πᾶς ὁ λαὸς ἔωρθριζε πρὸς αὐτὸν ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ ἀκούειν αὐτοῦ.

f here only
in N.T

XXII. 1. ἮΓΓΙΖΕ δὲ ἡ ἑορτὴ τῶν ἀζύμων, ἡ λεγομένη πάσχα· 2. καὶ ἐξήτουν οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ γραμματεῖς, τό, πῶς ἀνέλωσιν αὐτόν· ἐφοβοῦντο γὰρ τὸν λαόν. 3. Εἰσῆλθε δὲ ὁ<sup>2</sup> Σατανᾶς εἰς Ἰούδαν τὸν ἐπικαλούμενον<sup>3</sup> Ἰσκαριώτην, ὄντα ἐκ τοῦ ἀριθμοῦ τῶν δώδεκα· 4. καὶ ἀπελθὼν συνελάλησε τοῖς ἀρχιερεῦσι καὶ τοῖς<sup>4</sup>

<sup>1</sup> διδ. ἐν τῷ ἱερ. in BK codd. vet. Lat. (W.H. marg.).

<sup>2</sup> Omit ο ἸΑΒCDDL, etc.

<sup>3</sup> καλούμενον in ἸΒDLX 69.

<sup>4</sup> ἸΑΒL, etc., omit this second τοῖς.

that ye may have power, "prevail" (R.V.).—καταξιώθητε (T.R.), "may be accounted worthy" (A.V.), also gives a very good meaning, even in some respects preferable.—σταθῆναι, to stand—in the judgment (so, many), or to be presented to, placed before. So most recent commentators. Either gives a good sense (Bleek).

Vv. 37-38. Concluding notice as to how Jesus spent His last days.—Ver. 37. ἐν τ. ἱερῷ διδάσκων, teaching in the temple. The statement covers all that is related in chapters xx., xxi., including the Apocalyptic discourse = Jesus made the most of His short time for the spiritual instruction of the people.—ἠύλιζετο, lodged, imperfect, because done night after night. Some (e.g., Godet and Farrar) think Jesus with the Twelve slept in the open air. The word might mean this, though in Mt. xxi. 17 it appears to mean passed the night in a house in Bethany.—εἰς τ. ὄ.: the use of εἰς is probably due to the influence of ἐξερχόμενος. But Tobit xiv. 10 has a similar construction: μηκέτι αὐλισθήτε εἰς Νινευῆ.—Ver. 38. ἑωρθρίζεν, came early, or sought Him eagerly (Meyer). ὀρθρεύω, the Greek form, always is used literally or temporarily.—ὀρθρίζω, its Hellenistic equivalent, seems sometimes to be used tropically, as in Ps. lxxviii. 34 ("early," R.V., "earnestly" in margin), Sirach iv. 12, vi. 36. The one meaning easily runs into the other: he who rises early to learn is in earnest. Earliness in the people implies earliness in Jesus, and corresponding devotion to the work.

CHAPTER XXII. THE PASSION HISTORY. The Passion history, as told by Lk., varies considerably from the narratives of Mt. and Mk. by omissions, additions, etc. J. Weiss (Meyer), following Feine, thinks that Lk. used as his main source for this part of his Gospel not Mk. but the precanonical Lk., whose existence Feine has endeavoured to prove. Lk.'s narrative at some points resembles that of the Fourth Gospel.

Vv. 1-2. Introductory (Mt. xxvi. 1-5, Mk. xiv. 1-2).—ἡγγίζεν, drew near, for the more definite note of time in parallels.—ἡ ἑορτὴ, etc.: the Feast of Unleavened Bread and the Passover are treated as one. Mk. distinguishes them. Lk. writes for Gentiles; hence his "called" the passover (ἡ λεγομένη).—Ver. 2. τὸ πῶς, the how, that was the puzzle; that Jesus should be put out of the way by death (ἀνέλωσιν α.); some-how was a settled matter. Cf. xix. 48 (τὸ τί, etc.).—ἐφοβοῦντο γὰρ τ. λ.: their fear of the people explains why the how was so perplexing a matter. The popularity of Jesus was very embarrassing.

Vv. 3-6. Judas (Mt. xxvi. 14-16, Mk. xiv. 10, 11). At this point in Mt. (xxvi. 6-13) and Mk. (xiv. 3-9) comes in the anointing at Bethany omitted by Lk.—εἰσῆλθεν Σατανᾶς, Satan entered into Judas. Lk. alone of the synoptists thus explains the conduct of Judas. Cf. John xiii. 2. Lk.'s statement is stronger even than John's, suggesting a literal possession. Only so could he account for such behaviour on the part of a disciple towards such a Master. It was a natural view for a devout evangelist in the Apostolic Age, but, taken literally, it would be fatal to the moral significance of the act of the traitor, which, while presenting a difficult psychological problem, doubtless proceeded from conscious motives.—ἐκ τοῦ ἀριθμοῦ, of the number, but how far from the spirit which became that privileged body!—Ver. 4. στρατηγοῖς: a military term which might suggest the captains of Roman soldiers, but doubtless pointing

εγχο

στρατηγοῖς, τό, πῶς αὐτὸν παραδῶ αὐτοῖς.<sup>1</sup> 5. καὶ ἐχάρησαν, καὶ συνέθεντο αὐτῷ ἀργύριον δοῦναι· 6. καὶ ἐξωμολόγησε, καὶ ἐξήτει εὐκαιρίαν τοῦ παραδοῦναι αὐτὸν αὐτοῖς ἄτερ ὄχλου.<sup>2</sup>

7. Ἦλθε δὲ ἡ ἡμέρα τῶν ἀξύμων, ἐν<sup>3</sup> ᾗ ἔδει θύεσθαι τὸ πάσχα· 8. καὶ ἀπέστειλε Πέτρον καὶ Ἰωάννην, εἰπών, “Πορευθέντες ἐτοιμάσατε ἡμῖν τὸ πάσχα, ἵνα φάγωμεν.” 9. Οἱ δὲ εἶπον αὐτῷ, “Ποῦ θέλεις ἐτοιμάσωμεν; 10. Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Ἰδοῦ, εἰσελθόντων ὑμῶν εἰς τὴν πόλιν, συναγῆσει ὑμῖν ἄνθρωπος κεράμιον ὕδατος βαστάζων· ἀκολουθήσατε αὐτῷ εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν οὗ<sup>4</sup> εἰσπορεύεται· 11. καὶ ἐρεῖτε τῷ οἰκοδεσπότη τῆς οἰκίας, λέγει σοι ὁ διδάσκαλος, Ποῦ ἔστι τὸ κατάλυμα, ὅπου τὸ πάσχα μετὰ τῶν μαθητῶν μου φάγω; 12. Κἀκεῖνος ὑμῖν δείξει ἀνώγειον<sup>5</sup> μέγα ἐστρωμένον· ἐκεῖ ἐτοιμάσατε.” 13. Ἀπελθόντες δὲ εὗρον καθὼς εἶρηκεν<sup>6</sup> αὐτοῖς· καὶ ἠτοίμασαν τὸ πάσχα.

<sup>1</sup> αυτοῖς παραδω αυτον in NBCL 116.

<sup>2</sup> αυτοῖς after ατ. οχ. in NABCL. D omits αυτοῖς.

<sup>3</sup> Omit εν BCDL, found in N, etc. (Tisch.).

<sup>4</sup> For ου (in D and many uncials) NBC and codd. vet. Lat., etc., have εις ην.

<sup>5</sup> αναγαιον in NABDL, etc. (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>6</sup> ειρηκει in NBCLD 69.

to the heads of the temple watches (Levites) who kept order during the feast. They would be necessary to the carrying out of Judas' plan. The Levites had to perform garrison duty for the temple (vide Numbers viii. 24, 25). In Acts iv. 2 we read of one στρατηγὸς τ. ἰ., who was doubtless the head of the whole body of temple police.—τὸ πῶς; a second reference to the perplexing how.—Ver. 5. ἐχάρησαν, they were glad, emphatically; and how piously they would remark on the providential character of this unexpected means of getting out of the difficulty as to the πῶς!—Ver. 6. ἐξωμολόγησε, he agreed, spondit, for which the Greeks used the simple verb. The active of ἐξομ. occurs here only in N. T.—ἄτερ ὄχλου, without a crowd, the thing above all to be avoided. ἄτερ is a poetic word in Greek authors; here and in ver. 35 only in N. T.

Vv. 7-13. Preparation for the paschal feast (Mt. xxvi. 17-19, Mk. xiv. 12-16).—Ver. 7. ἦλθε, arrived. A considerable number of commentators (Euthy. Zig., Godet, Schanz, J. Weiss (Meyer)) render, approached (ἐπλησίασε, Euthy.), holding that Lk. with John makes Jesus anticipate the feast by a day, so finding here one of the points in which the third Gospel is in touch with the fourth.—Ver. 8. ἀπέστειλε: in Lk. Jesus takes the initiative; in Mt. and Mk. the disciples introduce the subject. Various reasons have been suggested for this change. Lk. simply states the fact as it was (Schanz). He thought it unsuitable that Jesus should seem to need reminding (Meyer, seventh edition). The change of day, from 14th to 13th Nisan, required Jesus to take the initiative (J. Weiss, Meyer, eighth edition).—Πέτρον καὶ Ἰ.: the two disciples sent out not named in parallels.—Ver. 11. οἰκοδεσπότη τῆς οἰκίας: a pleonasm = the house-master of the house. Bornemann cites from Greek authors similar redundancies, οικοφύλαξ δομῶν, αἰπόλια αἰγῶν, αἰπόλος αἰγῶν, συβόσια συῶν, and from Sept., τὰ βουκόλια τῶν βοῶν (Deut. vii. 13). In the remainder of ver. 11 and in vv. 12, 13 Lk. follows Mk. closely.

Vv. 14-18. Prelude to the Lord's Supper (Mt. xxvi. 20, Mk. xiv. 17).—Ver. 14. οἱ ἀπόστολοι, the apostles, for disciples in parallels. This designation for the Twelve, the initiative ascribed to Jesus (ver. 8), and the desire of Jesus spoken of in next ver. all fit into each other and indicate a wish on the part of the evangelist to invest what he here

14. Καὶ ὅτε ἐγένετο ἡ ὄρα, ἀνέπεσε, καὶ οἱ δώδεκα<sup>1</sup> ἀπόστολοι σὺν αὐτῷ. 15. καὶ εἶπε πρὸς αὐτούς, “Ἐπιθυμία ἐπεθύμησα τοῦτο τὸ πάσχα φαγεῖν μεθ’ ὑμῶν, πρὸ τοῦ με παθεῖν· 16. λέγω γὰρ ὑμῖν, ὅτι οὐκέτι<sup>2</sup> οὐ μὴ φάγω ἐξ αὐτοῦ,<sup>3</sup> ἕως ὅτου πληρωθῆ ἔν τῃ βασιλείᾳ τοῦ Θεοῦ.” 17. Καὶ δεξάμενος ποτήριον, εὐχαριστήσας εἶπε, “Λάβετε τοῦτο, καὶ διαμερίσατε ἑαυτοῖς<sup>4</sup>· 18. λέγω γὰρ ὑμῖν, ὅτι<sup>5</sup> οὐ μὴ πῖω<sup>6</sup> ἀπὸ τοῦ γεννήματος τῆς ἀμπέλου, ἕως ὅτου<sup>7</sup> ἡ βασιλεία τοῦ Θεοῦ ἔλθῃ.” 19. Καὶ λαβὼν ἄρτον, εὐχαριστήσας ἔκλασε, καὶ ἔδωκεν αὐτοῖς, λέγων, “Τοῦτό ἐστι τὸ σῶμά μου,<sup>8</sup> τὸ ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν διδόμενον· τοῦτο ποιεῖτε εἰς τὴν ἑμὴν ἀνάμνησιν.” 20. Ὡσαύτως καὶ τὸ ποτήριον μετὰ τὸ δειπνήσαι, λέγων, “Τοῦτο τὸ ποτήριον, ἢ καινὴ διαθήκη ἐν τῷ αἵματί μου, τὸ ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν ἐκχυνόμενον.<sup>8</sup> 21 Πλὴν ἰδοῦ, ἡ χεὶρ τοῦ παραδιδόντος με μετ’ ἐμοῦ ἐπὶ τῆς τραπέζης.

<sup>1</sup> Omit δωδεκα  $\aleph$ B $\Delta$  (Tisch., W.H.). LX omit αποσ. T.R. = C, etc.

<sup>2</sup>  $\aleph$ ABL omit ουκετι (W.H.), found in D al. (Tisch.).

<sup>3</sup> For ἐξ αὐτου  $\aleph$ NBL minusc. have αὐτο.

<sup>4</sup> εἰς εαυτους in  $\aleph^c$ BCLM 1, 13, 69 al. (Tisch., W.H.). D al. have εαυτοις = T.R.

<sup>5</sup> Omit οτι BCDGL al. (W.H.), found in  $\aleph$ XΓΔ al. (Tisch.).

<sup>6</sup> After πῖω  $\aleph$ BKLMΠ al. have απο του νυν. DG 1 have the phrase, but before ον μη.

<sup>7</sup> So in DX al. (Tisch.).  $\aleph$ NBL have ον (W.H.).

<sup>8</sup> From το υπερ v., ver. 19, to the end of ver. 20, found in nearly all Greek codd. and verss., is omitted in D a ff<sub>2</sub> i; b e syrr. cur. sin. more or less rearrange the matter referring to the Supper. Syr. cur. has ver. 19 before vv. 17, 18. Syr. sin. has this order: 19, 20 a, 17, 20 b, 18 (“And He took bread and gave thanks over it and brake, and gave unto them, saying, This is my body which I give for you: thus do in remembrance of me. And after they had supped He took the cup and gave thanks over it, and said, Take this, share it among yourselves. This is my blood, the new Testament. For I say unto you that henceforth I will not drink of this fruit, until the Kingdom of God shall come,” Mrs. Lewis).

narrates with great significance. He seems to write with the practice of the Apostolic Church in view in reference to the Holy Communion.—Ver. 15. πρὸ τοῦ με παθεῖν: the last passover He will eat with them is looked forward to with solemn, tender feeling.—Ver. 16. λέγω γὰρ: the words of Jesus here reported answer to words given in Mt. and Mk. at a later stage, i.e., at the close of their narrative of the institution of the Supper. At this point Lk.’s narrative follows a divergent course.—Ver. 17. δεξάμενος, having received from the hand of another (different from λαβὼν, ver. 19), handed to Him that He might drink.—εὐχαριστήσας, this solemn act gives to the handing round of the cup here mentioned the character of a prelude to the Holy Supper: (“quaedam quasi prolusio S.

Coenae,” Beng. in reference to vv. 15-18). If the reading of D and some Old Latin codd. which makes ver. 19 stop at σῶμά μου and omits ver. 20 be the true text (vide critical notes above), then Lk.’s account of the institution really begins in ver. 17, and what happened according to it was this: Jesus first sent round the cup, saying: take this and divide it among yourselves, then ~~took~~ bread, broke it, and gave it to the disciples, saying: this is my body. In this version two things are to be noted: first, the inversion of the actions; second, the omission of all reference to the blood in connection with the wine. The existence of such a reading as that of D and the Old Latin version raises questions, not only as to Lk.’s text, but as to church practice in the Apostolic age and afterwards; or, assuming as a possibility that Lk. wrote as D represents, have we here another instance of editorial discretion—shrinking from imputing to Jesus the idea of drinking His blood? If with D we omit all that follows σῶμά μου, then it results that Lk. has left out all the words of our Lord setting forth the significance of His death uttered (1) at Caesarea Philippi; (2) on the occasion of the request of Zebedee's sons; (3) the anointing at Bethany; (4) the institution of the Supper. (2) and (3) are omitted altogether, and (1) is so reported as to make the lesson non-apparent.

22. καὶ ὁ μὲν υἱὸς<sup>1</sup> τοῦ ἀνθρώπου πορεύεται κατὰ τὸ ὠρισμένον<sup>2</sup>. πλὴν οὐαὶ τῷ ἀνθρώπῳ ἐκείνῳ, δι' οὗ παραδίδοται." 23. Καὶ αὐτοὶ ἤρξαντο συζητεῖν πρὸς ἑαυτούς, τό, τίς ἄρα εἶη ἐξ αὐτῶν ὁ τοῦτο μέλλων πράσσειν. 24. Ἐγένετο δὲ καὶ φιλονεικία ἐν αὐτοῖς, τό, τίς αὐτῶν δοκεῖ εἶναι μέζων. 25. ὁ δὲ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, "Οἱ βασιλεῖς τῶν ἔθνων κυριεύουσιν αὐτῶν, καὶ οἱ ἐξουσιάζοντες αὐτῶν εὐεργέται καλοῦνται. 26. ὑμεῖς δὲ οὐχ οὕτως· ἀλλ' ὁ μέζων ἐν ὑμῖν γενέσθω ὡς ὁ νεώτερος· καὶ ὁ ἡγούμενος ὡς ὁ διακονῶν. 27. τίς γὰρ μέζων, ὁ ἀνακαίμενος, ἢ ὁ διακονῶν; οὐχὶ ὁ ἀνακαίμενος; ἐγὼ δὲ εἰμι ἐν

<sup>1</sup> For καὶ ὁ μ. υ.  $\aleph$ BDL have οτι, etc., and  $\aleph$ cBL ο υιος μεν.

<sup>2</sup> κατὰ τ. ω. πορεύεται in  $\aleph$ BDGLT 13, 69, etc.

Vv. 19-20. The Supper.—Ver. 19. τὸ σῶμά μου, my body, broken like the bread, implying blood-shedding, though that is passed over in silence if the reading of D be accepted. Note that in Acts ii. 46 the communion of the faithful is called breaking bread.—τὸ ὕ. ὕ. διδόμενον: what follows from these words to the end of ver. 20 resembles closely St. Paul's account in 1 Cor. xi. 23-25. This resemblance is one of the arguments of W. and H. against the genuineness of the passage. On the whole subject consult J. Weiss (Meyer, eighth edition) and Wendt, L. 7., i., 173, both of whom adopt the reading of D.

Vv. 21-23. The traitor (Mt. xxvi. 21-25, Mk. xiv. 18-21), placed after the Supper, instead of before, as in parallels.—πλὴν: making a transition to an incident presenting a strong moral contrast to the preceding.—ἡ χεῖρ, the hand, graphic and tragic; the hand which is to perform such opposite acts, now touching the Master's on the table, ere long to be the instrument of betrayal.—Ver. 22. πλὴν, adversative, nevertheless; the Son of Man destined to go (to death), but that does not relieve the instrument of his responsibility.—Ver. 23. πρὸς ἑαυτούς, to one another, or among themselves, without speaking to the Master; otherwise in parallels.—τοῦτο: in an emphatic position = this horrible deed.

Vv. 24-30. Strife among the disciples. Cf. on chap. ix. 46.—Ver. 24. φιλονεικία, a contention, here only in N.T. The juxtaposition of this strife among the eleven with the announcement of the traitor gives to it by comparison the aspect of a pardonable infirmity in otherwise loyal men, and it is so treated by Jesus.—τὸ τίς α., etc., as to the who of them, etc. The topic of the earlier dispute (ix. 46) might be: who outside their circle was greater than they all, but here it certainly is: which of them is greater than his fellow. It is usual to connect this incident with the feet-washing in John xiii.—δοκεῖ, seems, looks like, makes the impression of being (Bleek and Hahn).—Vv. 25, 26: borrowed from the incident of the two sons of Zebedee (Mt. xx. 25, 26, Mk. x. 42, 43), which Lk. omits and somewhat alters in expression.—Ver. 25. εὐεργέται: here only in N.T., either titular, like our "your highness," e.g., Ptolemy Euergetes (so, many), or = benefactors.—Ver. 26. ὑμεῖς δὲ, etc., but ye not so, elliptical, ἐσεσθε or ποιήσετε understood.—ὁ νεώτερος, the younger, "who in Eastern families fulfils menial duties, Acts v. 6" (Farrar).—ὁ ἡγούμενος, the leader or chief, the name of those in office in the Church in Heb. xiii. 7, also in the epistle of Clement; therefore viewed by some as a note of a late date, but without sufficient reason.—Ver. 27 adduces the example of Jesus to enforce the principle stated in ver. 26. He, the admittedly greater, had assumed the position

μέσῳ ὑμῶν<sup>1</sup> ὡς ὁ διακονῶν. 28. Ὑμεῖς δέ ἐστε οἱ διαμεμενηκότες
 μετ' ἐμοῦ ἐν τοῖς πειρασμοῖς μου· 29. κἀγὼ *διατίθειμαι ὑμῖν, a here only καθὼς διέθετό μοι ὁ πατήρ μου, βασιλείαν, 30. ἵνα ἐσθίητε<sup>2</sup> καὶ in Gospels.
 πίνητε ἐπὶ τῆς τραπέζης μου ἐν τῇ βασιλείᾳ μου, καὶ καθίσθητε<sup>3</sup> Acts iii.
 ἐπὶ θρόνων, κρίνοντες τὰς δώδεκα φυλάς<sup>4</sup> τοῦ Ἰσραήλ." 31. Εἶπε 25 and δὲ ὁ Κύριος,<sup>5</sup> " Σίμων, Σίμων, ἰδοῦ, ὁ Σατανᾶς<sup>b</sup> ἐξήγησατο ὑμᾶς, τοῦ Heb.
 in N.T.

<sup>1</sup> εἰμι after ὑμων in  $\aleph$ BLT.

<sup>2</sup> εσθητε in BDT (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> καθισσεσθε in  $\aleph$ AB<sup>3</sup>L al. (Tisch., W.H., marg.). καθησθε in BTA (W.H. text).

<sup>4</sup> τας δωδ. φυλ. κρινοντες in BT (W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> Omit ειπε δε ο κ. BLT sah. cop. syr. sin. (Tisch., W.H.).

of the less by becoming the serving man, ὁ διακονῶν, instead of the guest at table (ὁ ἀνακείμενος). In what way Jesus had played the part of serving man Lk. does not indicate. The handing round of the cup might be viewed as service. By omitting the incident of the sons of Zebedee Lk. missed the supreme illustration of service through death (Mt. xx. 28, Mk. x. 45).—Ver. 28. ὑμεῖς δέ, but ye, the δέ making transition from words of correction to a more congenial style of address.—οἱ διαμεμενηκότες, who have continued all through; the perfect participle, pointing them out as in possession of a permanent character, a body of thoroughly tried, faithful men.—πειρασμοῖς, in my temptations, pointing to all past experiences fitted to try faith and patience, which were of daily occurrence: temptations even to the Master, but still more to the disciples (in view of their spiritual weakness) to lose confidence in, and attachment to, One so peculiar, so isolated, and so much disliked and opposed by the people of repute and influence.—Ver. 29. διατίθειμαι (διατίθημι, middle only in N.T.), "appoint," make a disposition of. The corresponding noun is διαθήκη. In Heb. ix. 17 we find ὁ διαθέμενος, a testator, and the verb may be used here in the sense of bequeathing, though that sense is inapplicable to God's gift of a kingdom to Jesus referred to in next clause.—Ver. 30. καθίσσεσθε, ye shall sit, the judicial function the main thing, the feasting a subordinate feature; hence stated in an independent proposition (καθίσσεσθε not dependent on ἵνα).—δώδεκα, twelve tribes, and twelve to rule over them, the defection of Judas not taken into account. The promise is given in that respect as if spoken on another occasion (Mt. xix.

28). This generous eulogy of the disciples for their fidelity has the effect of minimizing the fault mentioned just before. Lk. was aware of the fact. It is another instance of his "sparing of the Twelve".

Vv. 31-34. Peter's weakness foretold. With John (xiii. 36-38) Lk. places this incident in the supper chamber. In Mt. and Mk. it occurs on the way to Gethsemane (Mt. xxvi. 31-35, Mk. xiv. 37-41). It is introduced more abruptly here than in any of the other accounts. The εἶπε δὲ ὁ κύριος of the T.R. is a natural attempt to mitigate the abruptness, but the passage is more effective without it. From generous praise and bright promises Jesus passes suddenly, with perhaps a slight pause and marked change of tone, to the moral weakness of His much-loved companions and of Peter in particular.—Ver. 31. Σίμων, Σίμων: one can imagine, though not easily describe, how this was said—with much affection and just enough of distress in the tone to make it solemn.—ὁ Σατανᾶς. The reference to Satan naturally reminds us of the trial of Job, and most commentators assume that the case of Job is in the view of Jesus or the evangelist. The coming fall of Peter could not be set in a more advantageous light than by being paralleled with the experience of the famous man of Uz, with a good record behind him and fame before him, the two connected by a dark but profitable time of trial.—ἐξήγησατο, not merely "desired to have" (A.V.) but, obtained by asking (R.V., margin). Careful Greek writers used ἐξαιτεῖν = to demand for punishment, and ἐξαιτεῖσθαι = to beg off, deprecari. Later writers somewhat disregarded this distinction. The aorist implies success in the demand. It is an instance of the "Resultative Aorist" σινιάσαι ὡς τὸν σίτον· 32. ἐγὼ δὲ ἐδεήθην περὶ σοῦ, ἵνα μὴ ἐκλείη<sup>1</sup> ἢ πίστις σου· καὶ σὺ ποτε ἐπιστρέψας στήριξον<sup>2</sup> τοὺς ἀδελφούς σου." 33. Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, "Κύριε, μετὰ σοῦ ἔτοιμός εἰμι καὶ εἰς φυλακὴν καὶ εἰς θάνατον πορεύεσθαι." 34. Ὁ δὲ εἶπε, "Λέγω σοι, Πέτρε, οὐ μὴ<sup>3</sup> φωνήσαι σήμερον ἀλέκτωρ, πρὶν ἢ<sup>4</sup> τρεῖς ἀπαρηγήσῃ μὴ εἰδέναί με."<sup>5</sup> 35. Καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, "Ὅτε ἀπέστειλα ὑμᾶς ἄτερ βαλαντίου καὶ πήρας καὶ ὑποδημάτων, μὴ τινος ὑστερήσατε;" Οἱ δὲ εἶπον, "Οὐδένος."<sup>6</sup> 36. Εἶπεν οὖν<sup>7</sup> αὐτοῖς, "Ἀλλὰ νῦν ὃ ἔχων βαλάντιον ἀράτω, ὁμοίως καὶ πήραν· καὶ ὃ μὴ ἔχων πωλησάτω τὸ

κλιπη in SBDLT al.

στηρισον in SABKLT 1 (Tisch., W.H.). T.R. = D, etc.

<sup>2</sup> ου without μη in SBLTX.

<sup>3</sup> For πριν η SBLT 69 al. have εως (D εως οτου).

<sup>5</sup> For απαρ . . . με SBLT 13, 131 al. have με απαρνηση ειδεναί (W.H.), <sup>6</sup> ουθενος in SBT al. (Tisch., W.H.). T.R. = SDL.

<sup>7</sup> For ουν ScBLT have δε. S*D have ο δε ειπεν.

(vide on this and other senses of the aorist, Burton, M. and T., § 35). Field (Ot. Nor.) cites from Wetstein instances of such use and renders ἐξητ. ὦ. periphrastically "Satan hath procured you to be given up to him".—ὕμᾶς, you, the whole of you (though not emphatic); therefore, Simon, look to yourself, and to the whole brotherhood of which you are the leading man. Bengel remarks: "Totus sane hic sermo Domini praesupponit P. esse primum apostolorum, quo stante aut cadente ceteri aut minus aut magis periclitarentur".—σινιάσαι: a ἄπ. λεγ., but of certain meaning. Hesychius gives as equivalent κοσκινεύσαι, from κόσκινον, a sieve. Euthy. Zig. is copious in synonyms = θορυβῆσαι, κυκῆσαι, ταράξαι. He adds, "what we call κόσκινον is by some called σινίον," and he thus describes the function of the sieve: ἐν φῷ ὃ σίτος τῆδε κἀκείσε μεταφερόμενος τaráσσεται. Sifting points to the result of the process anticipated by Jesus. Satan aimed at ruin.—Ver. 32. ἐγὼ δὲ ἐδεήθην, but I have prayed: I working against Satan, and successfully.—ἵνα μὴ ἐκλείη ἢ π. σ., that thy faith may not (utterly) fail or die (xvi. 9), though it prove weak or inadequate for the moment. Job's faith underwent eclipse. He did not curse God, but for the time he lost faith in the reality of a Divine government in human affairs. So Peter never ceased to love Jesus, but he was overpowered by fear and the instinct of self-preservation.—

ἐπιστρέψας, having returned (to thy true self). Cf. στραφήτε in Mt. xviii. 3. The word "converted," as bearing a technical sense, should be allowed to fall into desuetude in this connection. Many regard ἐπιστρέψας as a Hebraism = vicissim: do thou in turn strengthen by prayer and otherwise thy brethren as I have strengthened thee. So, e.g., Grotius: "Da operam ne in fide deficiant, nempe pro ipsis orans, sicut ego pro te oro". Ingenious but doubtful.—στήρισον: later form for στήριξον; for the sense vide Acts xiv. 22 and 1 Pet. v. 10.—Ver. 33. εἰς φυλακὴν καὶ εἰς θάνατον: more definite reference to the dangers ahead than in any of the parallels.—Ver. 34. σήμερον, to-day, as in Mk., but without the more definite ταύτη τῇ νυκτὶ.—μὴ εἰδέναί: μὴ after a verb of denial as often in Greek authors, e.g., τὸν τὰμ' ἀπαρηγήεντα μὴ χράναί λέχη, Eurip., Hippol., l. 1256.

Vv. 35-38. Coming danger, peculiar to Lk. There is danger ahead physically as well as morally. Jesus turns now to the physical side. What He says about a sword is not to be taken literally. It is a vivid way of intimating that the supreme crisis is at hand = the enemy approaches, prepare!—Ver. 35. ὅτε ἀπέστειλα: the reference is to ix. 3, or rather, so far as language is concerned, to x. 4, which relates to the mission of the seventy.—ἄτερ as in ver. 6.—Ver. 36. ἀλλὰ νῦν, but now, suggesting an emphatic contrast between past and present, ἱμάτιον αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἀγορασάτω μάχαιραν. 37. λέγω γὰρ ὑμῖν, ὅτι ἔτι<sup>1</sup> τοῦτο τὸ γεγραμμένον δεῖ τελεσθῆναι ἐν ἐμοί, τό, 'Καὶ μετὰ ἀνόμων ἐλογίσθη'· καὶ γὰρ τὰ<sup>2</sup> περὶ ἐμοῦ τέλος ἔχει." 38. Οἱ δὲ εἶπον, "Κύριε, ἰδοῦ, μάχαιραι ὡδε δύο." Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, "Ἰκανόν ἐστι."

39. ΚΑΙ ἐξελθὼν ἐπορεύθη κατὰ τὸ ἔθος εἰς τὸ ὄρος τῶν Ἐλαιῶν· ἠκολούθησαν δὲ αὐτῷ καὶ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ.<sup>3</sup> 40. γενόμενος δὲ

<sup>1</sup> Omit ετι ἩABDLTX.

<sup>2</sup> For τα ἩBDLT I have το (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> Omit αουτου ἩABDLT I, 13, etc. (Tisch., W.H.). B omits και before οι μαθ. (W.H. brackets).

or near future.—ἄρρωτο, lift it: if he has a purse let him carry it, it will be needed, either to buy a sword or, more generally, to provide for himself; he is going now not on a peaceful mission in connection with which he may expect friendly reception and hospitality, but on a campaign in an enemy's country.—δὲ μὴ ἔχων, he who has not; either purse and scrip, or, with reference to what follows, he who hath not already such a thing as a sword let him by all means get one.—πωλησάτω τὸ ἱμάτιον, let him sell his upper garment, however indispensable for clothing by day and by night. A sword the one thing needful. This is a realistic speech true to the manner of Jesus and, what is rare in Lk., given without toning down, a genuine logion without doubt.—Ver. 37. τὸ γεγραμμένον: the words quoted are from Is. liii. 12, and mean that Jesus was about to die the death of a criminal.—δεῖ, it is necessary, in order that Scripture might be fulfilled. No other or higher view than this of the rationale of Christ's sufferings is found in Luke's Gospel. Cf. xxiv. 26. A Paulinist in his universalism, he shows no acquaintance with St. Paul's theology of the atonement unless it be in ver. 20.—τὸ (τὰ T.R.) περὶ ἐμοῦ, that which concerns me, my life course.—τέλος ἔχει is coming to an end. Some think the reference is still to the prophecies concerning Messiah and take τέλος ἔχει in the sense of "is being fulfilled," a sense it sometimes bears: τελειοῦται ἤδη, Euthy. Kypke renders: rata sunt, the phrase being sometimes used in reference to things whose certainty and authority cannot be questioned = "my doom is fixed beyond recall"—Ver. 38. μάχαιραι δύο: how did such a peaceable company come to have even so much as one sword? Were the two weapons really swords, fighting instruments, or large knives? The latter suggestion, made by Chrysostom and adopted by Euthym., is called "curious" by Alford, but regarded by Field (Ot. Nor.) as "probable".—Ἰκανόν, enough! i.e., for one who did not mean to fight. It is a pregnant word = "for the end I have in view more than enough; but also enough of misunderstanding, disenchantment, speech, teaching, and life generally," Holtzmann, H. C.

Vv. 39-46. Gethsemane (Mt. xxvi. 36-46, Mk. xiv. 32-42). Lk.'s narrative here falls far short of the vivid realism of the parallels. Mt. and Mk. allow the infirmity of the great High Priest of humanity so graphically described in the Epistle to the Hebrews to appear in its appalling naked truth. Lk. throws a veil over it, so giving an account well adapted doubtless to the spiritual condition of first readers, but not so well serving the deepest permanent needs of the Church. This statement goes on the assumption that vv. 43, 44 are no part of the genuine text, for in these, especially in ver. 44, the language is even more realistic than that of Mk., and is thus out of harmony with the subdued nature of Lk.'s narrative in general. This want of keeping with the otherwise colourless picture of the scene, which is in accord with Lk.'s uniform mode of handling the emphatic words, acts and experiences of Jesus, is, in my view, one of the strongest arguments against the genuineness of vv. 43, 44.

Ver. 39. ἐξελθὼν: no mention of the hymn sung before going out (Mt. ver. 30, Mk. ver. 26). Lk. makes prominent the outgoing of Jesus. The parallels speak in the plural of the whole company.—κατὰ τὸ ἔθος: for the form vide ii. 42, and for the fact xxi. 37 and John xviii. 2. This is another point of contact between ἐπὶ τοῦ τόπου, εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, " Προσεύχθε μὴ εἰσελθεῖν εἰς πειρασc Acts xxi. 1. d here only in N.T. μόν." 41. Καὶ αὐτὸς ἄπεσπᾶσθη ἀπ' αὐτῶν ὡσεὶ λίθου ἄβολήν, καὶ θεῖς τὰ γόνατα προσηύχето, 42. λέγων, " Πάτερ, εἰ βούλει παρενεγκεῖν<sup>1</sup> τὸ ποτήριον τοῦτο<sup>2</sup> ἀπ' ἐμοῦ· πλὴν μὴ τὸ θέλημα μου, ἀλλὰ τὸ σὸν γενέσθω." 43. "Ὁφθη δὲ αὐτῷ ἄγγελος ἀπ' e Acts xli. 5. i Pet. i. 22. οὐρανοῦ ἐπισχῶν αὐτόν. 44. καὶ γενόμενος ἐν ἀγωνίᾳ, ἔκτενέτερον προσηύχето. ἐγένετο δὲ ὁ ἰδρῶς αὐτοῦ ὡσεὶ θρόμβοι αἵματος καταβαίνοντες ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν.<sup>4</sup> 45. Καὶ ἀναστὰς ἀπὸ τῆς προσευχῆς,

<sup>1</sup> For παρενεγκεῖν  $\aleph$ L, etc., have παρενεγκαι (Tisch.). BDT al. have παρενεγμε (W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> τοῦτο το ποτηριον in  $\aleph$ BDLT.

<sup>3</sup> γιν-(οτ γενιν-)εσθω in  $\aleph$ ABL al. pl. D has γεν. = T.R.

<sup>4</sup> Verses 43, 44 are found in  $\aleph^*$ DL and many other uncials, in codd. vet. Lat. vulg. Egypt. verss. Syr. (cur. Pesh. Hier., but not sin.) Eus. Canons, etc., etc. They are wanting in  $\aleph$ ABRT, and Epiph. Hil. and Hier. mention that they were wanting in many codd. known to them. W.H. give them in double brackets, and regard them as no part of Lk.'s text, though a true element of the Christian tradition. Vide their appendix. Cf. Blass' theory of two recensions in Evang. sec. Lucam.

these two Gospels. The reference to the habit of Jesus deprives this visit of special significance.—ἠκολούθησαν: the disciples followed, no talk by the way of their coming breakdown, as in Mt. ver. 31, and Mk. ver. 27.

Vv. 40-46. ἐπὶ τοῦ τόπου, at the place, of usual resort, not the place of this memorable scene, for it is not Lk.'s purpose to make it specially prominent. Cf. John xviii. 2, τὸν τόπον previously described as a κήπος across the brook Kedron.—προσεύχθε: Jesus bids the disciples pray against temptation. In Mt. and Mk. He bids them sit down while He prays. Their concern is to be wholly for themselves.—Ver. 41. ἄπεσπᾶσθη, He withdrew, cessavit. Some insist on the literal sense, and render, "tore Himself away" = "avulsus est," Vulg., implying that Jesus was acting under strong feeling. But did Lk. wish to make that prominent? The verb does not necessarily mean more than "withdrew," and many of the philological commentators (Wolf, Raphel, Pricaeus, Palairer, etc.) take it in that sense, citing late Greek authors in support.—ἀπ' αὐτῶν, from them (all); no mention of three taken along with Him, a very important feature as an index of the state of mind of Jesus. The Master in His hour of weakness looked to the three for sympathy and moral support; vide Mt. xxvi. 40. But it did not enter into Lk.'s plan to make that apparent.—λίθου βολήν, a stone's cast, not too distant to be overheard. βολήν is the accusative of measure.—θεῖς τὰ γόνατα: the usual attitude in prayer was standing; the kneeling posture implied special urgency ("in genibus orabant quoties res major urgebat," Grot.), but not so decidedly as falling at full length on the ground, the attitude pointed at in the parallels.—Ver. 42. πάτερ, Father! the keynote, a prayer of faith however dire the distress.—εἰ βούλει, etc.: with the reading παρένεγκε the sense is simple: if Thou wilt, take away. With παρενεγκεῖν or παρενέγκαι we have a sentence unfinished: "apodosis suppressed by sorrow" (Winer, p. 750), or an infinitive for an imperative (Bengel, etc.). The use of παρ. in the sense of "remove" is somewhat unusual. Hesi-chius gives as synonyms verbs of the opposite meaning παραθεῖναι, παραβαλεῖν. The ἀπ' ἐμοῦ leaves no doubt what is meant. In Lk.'s narrative there is only a single act of prayer. The whole account is mitigated as compared with that in Mt. and Mk. Jesus goes to the accustomed place, craves no sympathy from the three, kneels, utters a single prayer, then returns to the Twelve. With this picture the statement in vv. 43, 44 is entirely out of harmony.—Ver. 44. ἐν ἀγωνίᾳ, in an agony (of fear), or simply in "a great fear". So Field (Ot. Nor.), who has an important note on the word ἀγωνία, with examples to show that fear is the radical meaning of the word. Loesner supports the same view with examples from Philo. Here only in N.T.

ἐλθὼν πρὸς τοὺς μαθητάς, εὗρεν αὐτοὺς κοιμωμένους<sup>1</sup> ἀπὸ τῆς λύπης, 46. καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Τί καθεύδετε; ἀναστάντες προσεύχεσθε, ἵνα μὴ εἰσέλθητε εἰς πειρασμόν.”

47. Ἐτι δὲ<sup>2</sup> αὐτοῦ λαλοῦντος, ἰδοὺ, ὄχλος, καὶ ὁ λεγόμενος Ἰούδας, εἰς τῶν δώδεκα, προήρχετο αὐτῶν,<sup>3</sup> καὶ ἤγγισε τῷ Ἰησοῦ φιλήσαι αὐτόν. 48. ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς<sup>4</sup> εἶπεν αὐτῷ, “Ἰούδα, φιλήματι τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου παραδίδως;” 49. Ἰδόντες δὲ οἱ περὶ αὐτὸν τὸ ἐσόμενον εἶπον αὐτῷ,<sup>5</sup> “Κύριε, εἰ πατάξομεν ἐν μαχαίρᾳ;” 50. Καὶ ἐπάταξεν εἰς τις ἐξ αὐτῶν τὸν δούλον τοῦ ἀρχιερέως,<sup>6</sup> καὶ ἀφείλεν αὐτοῦ τὸ οὖς<sup>7</sup> τὸ δεξιόν. 51. ἀποκριθεὶς δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν, “Ἐάτε ἕως τούτου.” Καὶ ἀψάμενος τοῦ ὠτίου αὐτοῦ,<sup>8</sup> ἵασατο αὐτόν. 52. Εἶπε δὲ ὁ<sup>9</sup> Ἰησοῦς πρὸς τοὺς παραγενομένους ἐπ’<sup>10</sup> αὐτὸν ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ στρατηγούς τοῦ ἱεροῦ καὶ πρεσβυτέρους, “Ὡς

<sup>1</sup> κοιμωμενους αυτους in  $\aleph$ B $\Delta$ L $\tau$  69 al.

<sup>2</sup> Omit δε  $\aleph$ A $\Delta$ B $\Delta$ L $\tau$ , etc.

<sup>3</sup> αυτους in uncials. αυτων in minusc.

<sup>4</sup> For ο δε I.  $\aleph$ B $\Delta$ L $\tau$ X 157 have I. δε.

<sup>5</sup> Omit αυτω  $\aleph$ B $\Delta$ L $\tau$ X.

<sup>6</sup> του αρχ. τον δουλον in  $\aleph$ B $\Delta$ L $\tau$  69, 346.

<sup>7</sup> το ους αυτου in  $\aleph$ B $\Delta$ L $\tau$  69, 346.

<sup>8</sup> Omit αυτου  $\aleph$ B $\Delta$ L $\tau$  1, 131.

<sup>9</sup> Omit ο before I.  $\aleph$ A $\Delta$ B $\tau$ .

<sup>10</sup> προς in  $\aleph$ , etc. (Tisch.). επι (= T.R.) in AB $\Delta$ L (W.H.).

From this word comes the name “The Agony in the Garden”.— $\theta\rho\mu\beta\omicron\iota$ , clots (of blood), here only in N.T.

Vv. 45, 46. Return of Jesus to His disciples.—ἀπὸ τῆς προσευχῆς: rising up from the prayer, seems to continue the narrative from ver. 42.—ἀπὸ τῆς λύπης, asleep from grief, apologetic; Hebraistic construction, therefore not added by Lk., but got from a Jewish-Christian document, says J. Weiss (in Meyer). Doubtless Lk.’s, added out of delicate feeling for the disciples, and with truth to nature, for grief does induce sleep (“moestitia somnum affert,” Wolf).—Ver. 46. ἀναστάντες προσεύχεσθε: Jesus rose up from prayer. He bids His disciples rise up to prayer, as if suggesting an attitude that would help them against sleep.—ἵνα, etc.: again a warning against temptation, but no word of reproach to Peter or the rest, as in parallels.

Vv. 47-53. The apprehension (Mt. xxvi. 47-56, Mk. xiv. 43-52).—Ver. 47. φιλήσαι α., to kiss Him; that the traitor’s purpose, its execution left to be inferred, also that it was the preconcerted signal pointing out who was to be apprehended.—Ver. 48. φιλήματι, etc.: the question of Jesus takes the place of, and explains, the enigmatical ἰφ’ ὃ πάρει of Mt. The simple φίλημα, unlike καταφιλέω, implies no fervour.—Ver. 49. οἱ περὶ αὐτόν, those about Him, i.e., the disciples, though the word is avoided.—τὸ ἐσόμενον, what was about to happen, i.e., the apprehension. The disciples, anticipating the action of the representatives of authority, ask directions, and one of them (ver. 50) not waiting for an answer, strikes out. In the parallels the apprehension takes place first.—Ver. 50. εἰς τις, etc., a certain one of them, thus vaguely referred to in all the synoptists. John names Peter.—τὸ δεξιόν, the right ear; so in Fourth Gospel. Cf. the right hand in vi. 6.—Ver. 51. ἔατε ἕως τούτου: an elliptical colloquial phrase, whose meaning might be made clear by intonation or gesture. It might be spoken either to the captors = leave me free until I have healed the wounded man, or to the disciples = let them apprehend me, or: no more use of weapons. For the various interpretations put upon the words, vide Hahn. Perhaps the most likely rendering is: “cease, it is enough,” desinite, satis est, as if it had stood, ἔατε, ἕως τούτου ἱκανόν ἐστι, the disciples being addressed.—Ver. 52. ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ, etc.: Lk. alone represents the authorities as present with the ὄχλος—priests, captains of the temple and elders—some of them might be. though it is

ἐπὶ ληστὴν ἐξεληλύθατε<sup>1</sup> μετὰ μαχαιρῶν καὶ ξίλων; 53. καθ' ἡμέραν ὄντος μου μεθ' ὑμῶν ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, οὐκ ἐξετείνατε τὰς χεῖρας ἐπ' ἐμέ. ἀλλ' αὕτη ὑμῶν ἐστίν<sup>2</sup> ἡ ὥρα, καὶ ἡ ἐξουσία τοῦ σκότους."

54. ΣΥΛΛΑΒΟΝΤΕΣ δὲ αὐτὸν ἤγαγον, καὶ εἰσήγαγον αὐτὸν<sup>3</sup> εἰς τὸν οἶκον<sup>4</sup> τοῦ ἀρχιερέως· ὁ δὲ Πέτρος ἠκολούθει μακρόθεν. 55. ἀψάντων<sup>5</sup> δὲ πῦρ ἐν μέσῳ τῆς αὐλῆς, καὶ συγκαθισάντων αὐτῶν,<sup>6</sup> ἐκάθητο ὁ Πέτρος ἐν μέσῳ<sup>7</sup> αὐτῶν. 56. ἰδοῦσα δὲ αὐτὸν παιδίσκη

f Acts i. 10; iii. 4; vi. 15, etc. 2 σὺν αὐτῷ ἦν." 57. Ὁ δὲ ἠρνήσατο αὐτόν,<sup>8</sup> λέγων, "Γυναί, οὐκ οἶδα αὐτόν."<sup>9</sup> 58. Καὶ μετὰ βραχὺ ἕτερος ἰδὼν αὐτὸν ἔφη, "Καὶ σὺ ἐξ αὐτῶν εἶ."<sup>10</sup> Ὁ δὲ Πέτρος εἶπεν,<sup>10</sup> "Ἄνθρωπε, οὐκ εἰμί." 59.

E Acts xii. 15. Καὶ διαστάσης ὡσεὶ ὥρας μίας, ἄλλος τις<sup>10</sup> διίσχυρίζετο, λέγων, "Ἐπ' ἀληθείας καὶ οὗτος μετ' αὐτοῦ ἦν· καὶ γὰρ Γαλιλαῖός ἐστιν."

<sup>1</sup> ἐξηλαθετε in ΞBDLRT, etc. (W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> ἐστὶν ὑμῶν in ΞBDLT, etc.

<sup>3</sup> Omit this αὐτον ΞABDLT al.

<sup>4</sup> εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν in ΞBLT, etc., 1, 124 al.

<sup>5</sup> περιψάντων in ΞBLT.

<sup>6</sup> Omit αὐτων ΞBDLT.

<sup>7</sup> μέσος for ἐν μέσῳ (Ξ, etc.) in BLT 1, 209 (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>8</sup> Omit αὐτον ΞBD<sup>2</sup>LT (W.H.).

<sup>9</sup> οὐκ οἶδα αὐτον γυναί in ΞBLTX. D omits γυναί.

<sup>10</sup> ἐφη in ΞBLT al. pl.

not likely. Farrar remarks: "these venerable persons had kept safely in the background till all possible danger was over"—ὡς ἐπὶ ληστῆν. Lk. gives the reproachful words of Jesus nearly as in the parallels.—Ver. 53. ἀλλ' αὕτη ἐστίν, etc.: the leading words in this elliptical sentence are τοῦ σκότους, which qualify both ὥρα and ἐξουσία. Two things are said: your hour is an hour of darkness, and your power is a power of darkness. There is an allusion to the time they had chosen for the apprehension, night, not day, but the physical darkness is for Jesus only an emblem of moral darkness. He says in effect: why should I complain of being captured as a robber in the dark by men whose whole nature and ways are dark and false?

Vv. 54-62. Peter's fall (Mt. xxvi. 57, 58, 69-75, Mk. xiv. 53, 54, 66-72).—Lk. tells the sad story of Peter's fall without interruption, and in as gentle a manner as possible, the cursing omitted, and the three acts of denial forming an anticlimax instead of a climax, as in parallels.—Ver. 54. ὁ δὲ Πέτρος ἠκολούθει, Peter followed. What the rest did is passed over in silence; flight left to be inferred.—Ver. 55. περιψάντων, more strongly than ἀψάντων (T.R.) suggests the idea of a well-kindled fire giving a good blaze, supplying light as well as heat. Who kindled it did not need to be said. It was kindled in the open court of the high priest's house, and was large enough for the attendants to sit around it in the chilly spring night (συγκαθισάντων).—μέσος αὐτῶν. Peter sat among them. Was that an acted denial, or was he simply seeking warmth, and taking his risk?—Ver. 56. ἀτενίσασα (a intensive, and τείνω), fixing the eyes on, with dative here, sometimes with εἰς and accusative, frequently used by Lk., especially in Acts.—οὗτος, the maid makes the remark not to but about Peter in Lk. = this one also was with Him, of whom they were all talking.—Ver. 57. οὐκ οἶδα α. γ.: a direct denial = I do not know Him, woman, not to speak of being a follower.—Ver. 58. μετὰ βραχὺ, shortly after (here only in N.T.), while the mood of fear is still on him, no time to recover himself.—ἕτερος, another of the attendants, a man.—ἐξ αὐτῶν, of the notorious band, conceived possibly as a set of desperadoes.—ἄνθρωπε, οὐκ εἰμί, man, I am not, with more emphasis and some irritation = denial of discipleship. In one sense a stronger form of denial, but in another a weaker. Peter

60. Εἶπε δὲ ὁ Πέτρος, “Ἀνθρώπε, οὐκ οἶδα ὃ λέγεις.” Καὶ παρα-
χρῆμα, ἔτι λαλοῦντος αὐτοῦ, ἐφώνησεν ὁ<sup>1</sup> ἀλέκτωρ· 61. καὶ
στραφεῖς ὁ Κύριος ἐνέβλεψε τῷ Πέτρῳ· καὶ ὑπεμνήσθη ὁ Πέτρος τοῦ λόγου<sup>2</sup> τοῦ Κυρίου, ὡς εἶπεν αὐτῷ, “Ὅτι, πρὶν ἀλέκτορα φωνῆσαι,<sup>3</sup> ἀπαρνήσῃ με τρίς.” 62. Καὶ ἐξελθὼν ἕξω ὁ Πέτρος<sup>4</sup> ἔκλαυσε πικρῶς.

63. Καὶ οἱ ἄνδρες οἱ συνέχοντες τὸν Ἰησοῦν<sup>5</sup> ἐνέπαιζον αὐτῷ, δέροντες· 64. καὶ περικαλύψαντες αὐτόν, ἔτυπτον αὐτοῦ τὸ πρόσωπον, καὶ<sup>6</sup> ἐπηρώτων αὐτόν,<sup>7</sup> λέγοντες, “Προφήτευσον, τίς ἐστὶν ὁ παίσας σε;” 65. Καὶ ἕτερα πολλά βλασφημοῦντες ἔλεγον εἰς αὐτόν.

<sup>1</sup> Omit ο ἱ ABBDL, etc.

<sup>2</sup> ρηματος in ἱBLTX 124 al. (W.H.). T.R. = AD (Tisch.).

<sup>3</sup> Add σημερον after φωνησαι ἱBKLM T al.

<sup>4</sup> Omit ο Π. ἱBDLT, etc. Some codd. of vet. Lat. omit ver. 62 (W.H. in brackets).

<sup>5</sup> For τον Ι. ἱBDLT, etc., 157 al. have αυτον.

<sup>6</sup> ετυπτον . . . και omitted in ἱBKLT al. 1, 209.

<sup>7</sup> Omit this αυτον BKLM TX.

might have known Jesus without being a disciple. To deny all knowledge was the strongest form of denial. Besides it was less cowardly to deny to a man than to a woman.—Ver. 59. διαστάσης ὥρας, at the distance of an hour; the verb here used of time, in xxiv. 51 and Acts xvii. 28 of place. This interval of an hour is peculiar to Lk. Peter in the course of that time would begin to think that no further annoyance was to be looked for.—δισχυρίζετο, ἐπ' ἀληθείας: these expressions imply that the previous denials had partly served their purpose for a time, and put the attendants off the idea that Peter was of the company of Jesus. After watching Peter, and listening to his speech, a third gains courage to reaffirm the position = I am sure he is after all one of them, for, etc.—Ver. 60. ἄνθρωπε, etc., man, I don't know what you are saying—under shelter of the epithet Γαλιλαῖος, pretending ignorance of what the man said—an evasion rather than a denial, with no cursing and protesting accompanying. A monstrous minimising of the offence, if Lk. had Mk.'s account before him, thinks J. Weiss; therefore he infers he had not, but drew from a Jewish-Christian source with a milder account. What if he had both before him, and preferred the milder?—ἐφώνησεν ἀλεκ., immediately after the cock crew; but in Lk.'s account the reaction is not brought about thereby. In the parallels, in which Peter appears worked up to a paroxysm, a reaction might be looked for at any moment on the slightest occasion, the crowing of the cock recalling Christ's words abundantly sufficient. But in Lk. there is no paroxysm, therefore more is needed to bring about reaction, and more accordingly is mentioned.—Ver. 61. στραφεῖς, etc., the Lord, turning, looked at Peter; that look, not the cock crowing, recalled the prophetic word of Jesus, and brought about the penitent reaction.—ὑπεμνήσθη, remembered, was reminded, passive here only in N.T.—Ver. 62 exactly as in Mt.

Vv. 63-65. Indignities (Mt. xxvi. 67-68, Mk. xiv. 65). In Mt. and Mk. these come after the trial during the night which Lk. omits. In his narrative the hours of early morning spent by Jesus in the palace of the high priest are filled up by the denial of Peter and the outrages of the men who had taken Jesus into custody (οἱ συνέχοντες αὐτόν).—Ver. 63. ἐνέπαιζον, mocked, in place of the more brutal spitting in parallels.—δέροντες, smiting (the whole body), instead of the more special and insulting slapping in the face (κολαφίζειν).—Ver. 64. περικαλύψαντες, covering (the face understood, τὸ πρόσωπον in Mk.)—προφήτευσον, τίς, etc.: Lk. here follows Mt., not Mk., who has simply the verb

66. Καὶ ὡς ἐγένετο ἡμέρα, συνήχθη τὸ πρεσβυτέριον τοῦ λαοῦ, ἀρχιερεῖς τε καὶ γραμματεῖς, καὶ ἀνήγαγον<sup>1</sup> αὐτὸν εἰς τὸ συνέδριον ἑαυτῶν,<sup>2</sup> 67. λέγοντες, “Εἰ σὺ εἶ ὁ Χριστός, εἰπέ<sup>3</sup> ἡμῖν.” Εἶπε δὲ αὐτοῖς, “Ἐὰν ὑμῖν εἴπω, οὐ μὴ πιστεύσητε· 68. ἐὰν δὲ καὶ<sup>4</sup> ἐρωτήσω, οὐ μὴ ἀποκριθῆτέ μοι, ἢ ἀπολύσητε.<sup>5</sup> 69. ἀπὸ τοῦ νῦν<sup>6</sup> ἔσται ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου καθήμενος ἐκ δεξιῶν τῆς δυνάμεως τοῦ Θεοῦ.” 70. Εἶπον δὲ πάντες, “Σὺ οὖν εἶ ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ;” Ὁ δὲ πρὸς αὐτοὺς ἔφη, “Ὑμεῖς λέγετε, ὅτι ἐγὼ εἰμι.” 71. Οἱ δὲ εἶπον, “Τί ἔτι χρεῖαν ἔχομεν μαρτυρίας<sup>7</sup>; αὐτοὶ γὰρ ἠκούσαμεν ἀπὸ τοῦ στόματος αὐτοῦ.”

<sup>1</sup> ἀπηγαγον in ΞBDKT (Tisch., W.H.). T.R. = ALX al.

<sup>2</sup> αὐτων in ΞBDLT al.

<sup>3</sup> εἶπον in ΞBLT.

<sup>4</sup> Omit καὶ ΞBLT.

<sup>5</sup> ΞBLT omit μοι ἢ ἀπολύσητε (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>6</sup> νυν δε in ΞABDLTX.

<sup>7</sup> ἔχομεν μαρ. χρεῖαν in BLT (Tisch., W.H.).

προφ. without the question following.—Ver. 65. ἕτερα πολλά, many other shameful words, filling up the time, which Lk. would rather not report particularly, even if he knew them.

Vv. 66-71. Morning trial, the proceedings of which, as reported by Lk., correspond to those of the night meeting reported by Mt. and Mk. (Mt. xxvi. 59-66, Mk. xiv. 55-64), only much abridged. No mention of the attempt to get, through witnesses, matter for an accusation, or of the testimony concerning the word about destroying the temple. The Messiah question is alone noticed. Perhaps Lk. omitted the former because of their futility, though they were important as revealing the animus of the judges.—Ver. 66. εἰς τὸ συνέδριον, to the council chamber, in which the Sanhedrim met.—λέγοντες, introducing the proceedings, in a very generalising way. Cf. the graphic account of the high priest rising up to interrogate Jesus, after the first attempt to incriminate Him had failed, in parallels (Mt. xxvi. 62 f., Mk. xiv. 60 f.).—Ver. 67. Εἰ σὺ εἶ ὁ Χ. εἰπὸν ἡμῖν: either, art Thou the Christ? tell us, or tell us whether Thou be the Christ. Christ simpliciter without any epithet as in parallels (Son of God, Son of the Blessed).—εἶπε δὲ α.: Jesus first answers evasively, saying in effect: it is vain to give an answer to such people. In parallels He replies with a direct “yes” (“thou sayst,” Mt.; “I am,” Mk.).—Ver. 69. What Jesus now says amounts to an affirmative answer.—ἀπὸ τοῦ νῦν ἔσται, etc.: Jesus points to a speedy change of position from humiliation to exaltation, without reference to what they will see, or to a second coming.—Ver. 70. πάντες, all, eagerly grasping at the handle offered by Christ’s words.—ὁ υἱὸς τ. Θε. This is supposed to be involved in the exalted place at the right hand.—ἐγὼ εἰμι, the direct answer at last.—Ver. 71. μαρτυρίας: instead of μαρτύρων, no mention having been previously made of witnesses.

J. Weiss (in Meyer; eighth edition) finds in this section clear evidence of the use of a Jewish-Christian source from the correspondence between the account it gives of the questions put to Jesus and His replies and the Jewish-Christian ideas regarding the Messiahship. These he conceives to have been as follows: In His earthly state Jesus was not Messiah or Son of Man; only a claimant to these honours. He became both in the state of exaltation (cf. Acts ii. 36: “God hath made Him both Lord and Christ”). He was God’s Son in the earthly state because He was conscious of God’s peculiar love and of a Messianic commission. So here: Jesus is to become (ἔσται) Messianic Son of Man with glory and power (δόξα and δύναμις); He is Son of God (ἐγὼ εἰμι). On this view Sonship is lower than Christhood. Was that Lk.’s idea? On the contrary, he evidently treats the Christ question as one of subordinate importance on which it was hardly worth debating. The wider, larger question was that as to Sonship, which, once settled, settled also the narrower question. If Son, then Christ and more: not only the Jewish Messiah, but Saviour of the world. The

XXIII. 1. ΚΑΙ ἀναστὰν ἅπαν τὸ πλῆθος αὐτῶν, ἤγαγεν<sup>1</sup> αὐτὸν ἐπὶ τὸν Πιλάτον. 2. ἤρξαντο δὲ κατηγορεῖν αὐτοῦ, λέγοντες, “Τοῦτον εὖρομεν διαστρέφοντα τὸ ἔθνος,<sup>2</sup> καὶ κωλύοντα Καίσαρι φόρους<sup>3</sup> δίδόναι, λέγοντα ἑαυτὸν<sup>4</sup> Χριστὸν βασιλέα εἶναι.” 3. Ὁ δὲ Πιλάτος ἐπηρώτησεν<sup>5</sup> αὐτόν, λέγων, “Σὺ εἶ ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων;” Ὁ δὲ ἀποκριθεὶς αὐτῷ ἔφη, “Σὺ λέγεις.” 4. Ὁ δὲ Πιλάτος εἶπε πρὸς τοὺς ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ τοὺς ὄχλους, “Οὐδὲν εὕρισκω αἴτιον ἐν τῷ ἀνθρώπῳ τούτῳ.”

5. Οἱ δὲ ἐπίσχυον, λέγοντες, “Ὅτι ἄνασεῖι τὸν λαόν, διδάσκων καθ’ ὅλης τῆς Ἰουδαίας,<sup>6</sup> ἀρξάμενος ἀπὸ τῆς Γαλιλαίας ἕως ὧδε.”

6. Πιλάτος δὲ ἀκούσας Γαλιλαίαν<sup>7</sup> ἐπηρώτησεν εἰ ὁ ἄνθρωπος a here and in Mk. xv. 11 (δισ. in Ch. iii. 14).

<sup>1</sup> ἤγαγον in uncials, ἤγαγεν in minusc.

<sup>2</sup> Add ἡμῶν το εθνος in BDLT, etc.

<sup>3</sup> φόρους K. in BBLT, which also have καὶ before λέγοντα.

<sup>4</sup> So in BDLT (Tisch.). αὐτον in BGT.

<sup>5</sup> ἠρωτησεν in BRT. T.R. = DL, etc.

<sup>6</sup> καὶ before ἀρξάμενος in BBLT, not in D, etc., probably omitted because difficult.

<sup>7</sup> Omit Γαλ. in BDLT.

<sup>8</sup> B and a few others omit ο (W.H. brackets).

account of the trial runs on the same lines as the genealogy, in which Davidic descent is dwarfed into insignificance by Divine descent (ὡς . . . τοῦ θεοῦ).

CHAPTER XXIII. THE PASSION HISTORY CONTINUED.—Vv. 1-5. Before Pilate (Mt. xxvii. 1, 2, 11-14, Mk. xv. 1-5). At the morning meeting of the Sanhedrim (in Mt. and Mk.) it had doubtless been resolved to put the confession of Jesus that He was the Christ into a shape fit to be laid before Pilate, i.e., to give it a political character, and charge Him with aspiring to be a king. To this charge Lk. adds other two, meant to give this aspiration a sinister character.—Ver. 1. ἅπαν τὸ πλῆθος, the whole number. The Jewish authorities go to Pilate in full strength to make as imposing an appearance as possible and create the impression that something serious was on hand.—ἤγαγεν: nothing is said about leading Jesus bound, as in Mt. and Mk.—Ver. 2. διαστρέφοντα, perverting, causing disaffection and disloyalty to Rome.—κωλύοντα, doing His best to prevent (people from paying tribute to Caesar); false, and they probably knew it to be so, but it was a serviceable lie.—βασιλέα: in apposition with Χριστὸν = saying that He was Christ—a King!—Ver. 3. σὺ εἶ, etc.: Pilate's question exactly as in Mt. and Mk.—σὺ λέγεις: this reply needs some such explanation as is given in John; vide notes on Mt.—Ver. 4. αἴτιον, blameworthy, punishable (neuter of αἴτιος) = αἰτία. Pilate arrived at his conclusion very swiftly. A glance sufficed to satisfy him that Jesus was no dangerous character. Probably he thought him a man with a fixed idea.—Ver. 5. ἐπίσχυον (here only in N.T.), they kept insisting, used absolutely = “invalescebant,” Vulg.—ἀνασεῖι, stirs up, a stronger word than διαστρέφειν.—διδάσκων, teaching, the instrument of excitement. Jesus did, in fact, produce a great impression on the people by His teaching, and one not favourable to the Pharisees, but He did not set Himself to stir up the people even against them.—καθ’ ὅλης τ. ἰ.: κατὰ with the genitive of place as in iv. 14 = in the whole of Judaea. This, considering the purpose, should mean Judaea strictly, Pilate's province, and so taken it bears witness to more work done by Jesus in the south than is recorded in the Synoptists. But the testimony is of little value. The accusers said what suited their purpose, true or false.—καὶ ἀρξάμενος: the καὶ is a difficult reading, and just on that account probably correct. It gives the impression of an unfinished sentence, something left out = and beginning from Galilee He has spread His mischievous doctrine over the land even to this holy city. The Γαλιλαῖός ἐστι· 7. καὶ ἐπιγνοὺς ὅτι ἐκ τῆς ἑξουσίας Ἡρώδου ἐστίν, ἀνέπεμψεν αὐτὸν πρὸς Ἡρώδη, ὄντα καὶ αὐτὸν ἐν Ἱεροσολύμοις ἐν ταύταις ταῖς ἡμέραις. 8. ὁ δὲ Ἡρώδης ἰδὼν τὸν Ἰησοῦν ἐχάρη λίαν· ἦν γὰρ θελῶν ἐξ ἱκανοῦ<sup>1</sup> ἰδεῖν αὐτόν, διὰ τὸ ἀκούειν πολλὰ<sup>2</sup> περὶ αὐτοῦ· καὶ ἠλπίζε τι σημεῖον ἰδεῖν ὑπ' αὐτοῦ γινόμενον. 9. ἐπηρώτα δὲ αὐτὸν ἐν λόγοις ἱκανοῖς· αὐτὸς δὲ οὐδὲν ἀπεκρίνατο αὐτῷ. 10. εἰστήκεισαν δὲ οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ γραμματεῖς, εὐτόνως κατηγοροῦντες αὐτοῦ. 11. ἐξουθενήσας δὲ αὐτὸν<sup>3</sup> ὁ Ἡρώδης σὺν τοῖς στρατεύμασιν αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἐμπαίξας, περιβαλὼν αὐτὸν<sup>4</sup> ἐσθῆτα λαμπράν, ἀνέπεμψεν αὐτὸν τῷ Πιλάτῳ. 12. ἐγένοντο δὲ φίλοι ὁ τε Πιλάτος καὶ ὁ Ἡρώδης<sup>5</sup> ἐν αὐτῇ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ μετ' ἀλλήλων· προὔπληρον γὰρ ἐν ἔχθρᾳ ὄντες πρὸς ἑαυτούς.<sup>6</sup> 13. Πιλάτος δὲ συγ-

<sup>1</sup> ἐξ ἱκανῶν χρόνων θελῶν in  $\mathfrak{N}$ BT. D also has ἐξ ἱκανῶν χρ., but θελῶν in a different position. L omits θελῶν.

<sup>2</sup> Omit πολλὰ  $\mathfrak{N}$ B $\mathfrak{D}$ L $\mathfrak{T}$  1, 131 al.

<sup>3</sup> καὶ before ο H. in  $\mathfrak{N}$ L $\mathfrak{T}$ X 13, 69 (Tisch., W.H., marg.). BD omit.

<sup>4</sup> Omit αὐτὸν  $\mathfrak{N}$ BL $\mathfrak{T}$ .

<sup>5</sup>  $\mathfrak{H}$ p. and Πιλ. change places in  $\mathfrak{N}$ BL $\mathfrak{T}$ .

<sup>6</sup> αὐτούς in  $\mathfrak{N}$ BL $\mathfrak{T}$ .

words from καὶ to Γαλιλαίας are omitted in some MSS., and it is not inconceivable that they are an early gloss to explain ver. 6 (so Weiss in Meyer).

Vv. 6-12. Before Herod, peculiar to Lk.—Ver. 7. ἀνέπεμψεν, remitted Him = remisit, sent Him to, not the higher (Meyer), but the proper tribunal: a Galilean, to the tetrarch of Galilee; a technical term.—ἐν Ἱεροσ. Herod would be in Jerusalem to keep the Passover, though that is not stated.—Ver. 8. ἐχάρη λίαν, was much pleased, “exceeding glad” (A.V. and R.V.) is too grave a phrase to express the feeling of this worthless man, who simply expected from the meeting with Jesus a “new amusement” (Schanz), such as might be got from a conjurer who could perform some clever tricks (τι σημεῖον).—Ver. 9. ἐν λόγοις ἱκανοῖς: suggesting the idea of a desultory conversation, in which the king introduced topic after topic in a random, incoherent manner, showing no serious interest in any of his questions.—οὐδὲν ἀπεκρίνατο, answered nothing, which would greatly astonish and pique this kingling, accustomed to courtier-servility. The fact that Jesus said nothing, and that nothing of importance came out of the appearance before Herod; may explain its omission by the other evangelists.—Ver. 10. οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς, etc., priests, scribes, there too, having followed Jesus, afraid that the case might take an unfavourable turn in their absence.—εὐτόνως, eagerly (Acts xviii. 28).—Ver. 11. ἐξουθενήσας: on this verb and kindred forms, vide at Mk. ix. 12. Herod, feeling slighted by Jesus, slights Him in turn, inciting his bodyguards (τοῖς στρατεύμασιν, which cannot here mean armies) to mock Him, and having Him invested with a costly robe, probably a cast-off royal mantle of his own, and so sending Him back a mock king to Pilate, a man to be laughed at, not to be feared or punished.—ἐσθῆτα λαμπράν, a splendid robe; of what colour, purple or white, commentators vainly inquire.—ἀνέπεμψεν, “sent Him again” (A.V.), or “back” (R.V.). The verb may mean here, as in ver. 7, sent Him to Pilate as the proper person to try the case. The two magnates compliment each other, and shirk unpleasant work by sending Jesus hither and thither from tribunal to tribunal, the plaything and sport of unprincipled men.—Ver. 12. ἐγένοντο φίλοι: that the one positive result of the transaction—two rulers, previously on bad terms, reconciled, at least for the time. Sending Jesus to Herod was a politic act on Pilate’s part. It might have ended the case so far as he was concerned; it pleased a jealous prince, and it gave him a free hand in dealing with the matter: nothing to fear in that quarter.—μετ’ ἀλλήλων for ἀλλήλοις (Euthy. Zig., who also sub-

καλεσάμενος τοὺς ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ τοὺς ἄρχοντας καὶ τὸν λαόν, 14. εἶπε πρὸς αὐτούς, “Προσηνέγκατέ μοι τὸν ἄνθρωπον τοῦτον, ὡς ἀποστρέφοντα τὸν λαόν· καὶ ἰδοῦ, ἐγὼ ἐνώπιον ὑμῶν ἀνακρίνας οὐδέν<sup>1</sup> εὔρον ἐν τῷ ἀνθρώπῳ τούτῳ αἴτιον, ὧν κατηγορεῖτε κατ’ αὐτοῦ· 15. ἀλλ’ οὐδὲ Ἡρώδης· ἀνεπεμψα γὰρ ὑμᾶς πρὸς αὐτόν,<sup>2</sup> καὶ ἰδοῦ, οὐδὲν ἄξιον θανάτου ἐστὶ πεπραγμένον αὐτῷ. 16. παιδεύσας οὖν αὐτὸν ἀπολύσω.” 17. Ἀνάγκην δὲ εἶχεν ἀπολύειν αὐτοῖς κατὰ ἑορτὴν ἓνα.<sup>3</sup> 18. ἀνέκραξαν<sup>4</sup> δὲ παμπληθεῖ, λέγοντες, “Αἶρε τοῦτον, ἀπόλυσον δὲ ἡμῖν τὸν Βαραββάν·” 19. ὅστις ἦν διὰ στάσιν τινὰ γενομένην ἐν τῇ πόλει καὶ φόνον βεβλημένος εἰς φυλακὴν.<sup>5</sup> 20. Πάλιν οὖν ὁ Πιλάτος προσεφώνησε,<sup>6</sup> θέλων ἀπολύσαι

<sup>1</sup> ουθεν in ΣBT I.

<sup>2</sup> ανεπεμψε γαρ αυτον προς ημας in ΣBKLM T. T.R. = ADX is perhaps a correction by the scribes.

<sup>3</sup> Ver. 17 is omitted in ABKLTΠ (Tisch. W.H.).

<sup>4</sup> ανεκραγον in ΣBLT 124, 157. T.R. = ADX, etc.

<sup>5</sup> βληθεις εν τη φυλακη in BLT (Tisch., W.H.). Σ<sup>a</sup> has βεβλ. εν τ. φυλ.

<sup>6</sup> ΣBLT have παλιν δε ο Π. προσεφ. αυτοις.

stitutes πρὸς ἀλλήλους for πρὸς ἑαυτούς).—ὄντες after προῦπάρχον might have been omitted, as in Acts viii. 9, but it serves to convey the idea of continued bad relations.

Vv. 13-16. Pilate proposes to release Jesus.—Ver. 14. ἀποστρέφοντα, turning away (the people from their allegiance). In Acts iii. 26, of turning men from their iniquities.—ἐνώπιον ὃ ἀνακρίνας, having made an inquiry in your presence. In John, Pilate's inquiry is private. “He says this,” remarks Pricaeus, “lest they should think he was setting Jesus free by favour or intrigue” (gratiā aut ambitu). ἀνακρίνας is used absolutely here as in Acts xxiv. 8.—Ver. 15. αὐτῷ: some have taken this as referring to Herod = Herod did nothing in the case, implying that it was of a serious, capital nature. Most take it as referring to Jesus = behold, the result of sending to Herod is that in his judgment nothing has been done deserving death by the accused.—αὐτῷ instead of ὑπ’ αὐτοῦ; vide on this construction Winer, § xxxi., 10.—Ver. 16. παιδεύσας: doubtless used here in the Hellenistic sense of chastise, scourge—a mild name for an ugly thing. The policy of the proposal Euthy. thus explains: “a moderate flagellation (μετρίαν μαστιγῶσιν) to mitigate their wrath, that thinking they had gained their point they might cease from further madness”. A weak, futile policy. “Hic coepit nimium concedere” (Bengel). Fanaticism grows by concession (Schanz).

Vv. 17-25. Pilate finally succumbs (Mt. xxvii. 15-26, Mk. xv. 6-15).—Ver. 17, which states that Pilate was under a necessity (why, not explained) to release one (prisoner) at least time, is almost certainly imported from the parallels by a later hand, though it fills up an obvious hiatus in Lk.'s meagre narrative.—Ver. 18. παμπληθεῖ: adverb, from παμπληθής (here only in N.T.)=in the whole-mob style, giving a vivid idea of the overpowering shout raised.—αἶρε τοῦτον, take away this one, i.e., to the cross.—ἀπόλυσον, release; if ye will release some one (ver. 16, ἀπολύσω) let it be Barabbas. Lk. makes this demand the voluntary act of the people. In the parallels (vide there) it is suggested to them by Pilate (Mt.), and urged on them by the priests. In Lk.'s narrative the behaviour of the people is set in a dark light, while both Pilate and the priests are treated with comparative mildness. In view of Israel's awful doom, Lk. says in effect: the people have suffered for their own sin.—Ver. 19. ὅστις seems to be = ὅς here, following the growing usage of later Greek (Schanz, vide Buttmann, Gram., p. 115).—διὰ στάσιν . . . καὶ φόνον = διὰ φόνον ἐν στάσει πεποιημένον, Pricaeus.—ἦν βληθείς: instead of ἔβληθη, the analytic form is unusual

τὸν Ἰησοῦν. 21. οἱ δὲ ἐπεφώνουν, λέγοντες, "Σταύρωσον, σταύρωσον<sup>1</sup> αὐτόν." 22. Ὁ δὲ τρίτον εἶπε πρὸς αὐτοὺς, "Τί γὰρ κακὸν ἐποίησεν οὗτος; οὐδὲν αἴτιον θανάτου εὔρον ἐν αὐτῷ· παιδεύσας οὖν αὐτὸν ἀπολύσω." 23. Οἱ δὲ ἐπέκειντο φωναῖς μεγάλαις, αἰτούμενοι αὐτὸν σταυρωθῆναι· καὶ κατίσχυον αἱ φωναὶ αὐτῶν καὶ τῶν ἀρχιερέων.<sup>2</sup> 24. Ὁ δὲ<sup>3</sup> Πιλάτος ἐπέκρινε γενέσθαι τὸ αἴτημα αὐτῶν· 25. ἀπέλυσε δὲ αὐτοῖς<sup>4</sup> τὸν διὰ στάσιν καὶ φόνον βεβλημένον εἰς τὴν<sup>5</sup> φυλακὴν, ὃν ᾔθούοντο· τὸν δὲ Ἰησοῦν παρέδωκε τῷ θελήματι αὐτῶν.

26. Καὶ ὡς ἀπήγαγον<sup>6</sup> αὐτόν, ἐπιλαβόμενοι Σίμωνός τινος Κυρηναίου τοῦ ἐρχομένου<sup>7</sup> ἀπ' ἀγροῦ, ἐπέθηκαν αὐτῷ τὸν σταυρόν, φέρειν ὅπισθεν τοῦ Ἰησοῦ. 27. Ἦκολούθει δὲ αὐτῷ πολὺ πλῆθος τοῦ λαοῦ,

<sup>1</sup> σταυρου, σταυρου in  $\mathfrak{N}$ BD. T.R. = ALX, etc.

<sup>2</sup> Omit καὶ των αρχ.  $\mathfrak{N}$ BL (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> For ο δε  $\mathfrak{N}$ BL have καὶ.

<sup>4</sup> Omit αυτοῖς  $\mathfrak{N}$ ABDX, etc.

<sup>5</sup> Omit τὴν  $\mathfrak{N}$ BD 69 al.

<sup>6</sup> ἀπηγον in B (W.H. marg.).

<sup>7</sup> Σιμωνα τινα Κ—ον ἐρχ—ον in  $\mathfrak{N}$ BCDLX 13, 33 al. (Tisch., W.H.).

with the aorist (here only in N.T.), hence probably the reading of T.R., βεβλημένος.—Ver. 20. πάλιν, again, a second time. Lk. carefully enumerates the friendly attempts of Pilate, hence τρίτον in ver. 22. The first is in ver. 16.—Ver. 21. ἐπεφώνουν, shouted (βοᾷ κράζει, Hesych.), in Lk. only, and in reference to the people (Acts xii. 22).—σταύρον (active, not middle = σταυροῦ), "crucify," repeated, with passion; thoughtless, foolish, impulsive mob!—Ver. 22. τρίτον: third and final attempt, showing some measure of earnestness on Pilate's part.—τί γὰρ κακόν: the γὰρ answers to the hostile mood of the people = I cannot respond to your demand for, etc.; the "why, what evil," etc., of the A.V. is a happy rendering. In this final appeal, Pilate states most distinctly his opinion that Jesus is innocent.—Ver. 23. ἐπέκειντο, "they were instant," A.V. The verb is used absolutely.—κατίσχυον, were overpowering; "ecce gentis ingenium!" Pricaeus.—Ver. 24. ἐπέκρινεν, decided, gave judgment; here only in N.T. and in 2 Maccab. iv. 47, 3 Maccab. iv. 2. It was not a condemnation but simply a sentence to death under pressure.—αἴτημα, desire, here and in Phil. iv. 6 in this sense.—Ver. 25. τὸν διὰ σ.: the repetition of this description, instead of giving the name, is very expressive.—τῷ θελήματι α., to their will. Weak man and wicked people!

Vv. 26-32. On the way to the cross (Mt. xxvii. 31-34, Mk. xv. 21).—Ver. 26. ἀπήγαγον: who led Jesus away is not indicated. It might seem it was the mob, to whose will Jesus had just been delivered. But Lk. does not mean that. He simply continues the story, as in Mk., omitting the mockery of the soldiers (Mk. xv. 16-20), who, that brutal sport ended, led Him out (ἐξάγουσιν, Mk. xv. 20). Lk. omits also the scourging, which even Mt. and Mk. hurry over (φραγελλώσας).—ἐπιλαβόμενοι: a Greek word substituted for the foreign technical ἀγγαρεύειν in the parallels (usually takes the genitive in the Gospel, here also in T.R., accusative in W. and H.'s text, vide Acts xvii. 19, xviii. 17).—ὅπισθεν τοῦ Ἰησοῦ does not mean that Simon helped Jesus to bear the cross, carrying the end behind Jesus. They laid the whole cross on him.

V. 27 f. This incident of the women following in the crowd is peculiar to Lk.—καὶ γυναικῶν, and of women; they are the part of the crowd in which the story is interested. They were mainly women of Jerusalem (ver. 28).—αὶ ἐκόπτοντο, etc.: they indulged in demonstrative grief by gesture and voice (ἐθρήνουν), contrary to rule it would appear ("non planxerunt eductum ad supplicium, sed interius luxerunt in corde," Lightfoot on Mt. xxvii. 31), but great grief heeds not rules.—Ver. 28. ἐπ' ἐμέ, ἐφ' ἑαυτὰς are brought close together to emphasise the

καὶ γυναικῶν, αἱ καὶ<sup>1</sup> ἐκόπτοντο καὶ ἐθρήνουν αὐτόν. 28. στραφεῖς δὲ πρὸς αὐτάς ὁ<sup>2</sup> Ἰησοῦς εἶπε, “Θυγατέρες Ἱερουσαλήμ, μὴ κλαίετε ἐπ’ ἐμέ, πλὴν ἐφ’ ἑαυτάς κλαίετε καὶ ἐπὶ τὰ τέκνα ὑμῶν. 29. ὅτι ἰδοὺ, ἔρχονται ἡμέραι ἐν αἷς ἐροῦσι, Μακάριαι αἱ στεῖραι, καὶ κοιλίαι<sup>3</sup> αἱ οὐκ ἐγέννησαν, καὶ μαστοὶ οἱ οὐκ ἐθήλασαν.<sup>4</sup> 30. τότε ἄρξονται λέγειν τοῖς ὄρεσι, Πέσετε ἐφ’ ἡμᾶς· καὶ τοῖς<sup>5</sup> βουνοῖς, c Lk. iii. 5
(late Gr.)
d here only
in N.T. e here, vv.
33, 39, and
2 Tim. ii. 9.

Καλύψατε ἡμᾶς. 31. ὅτι, εἰ ἐν τῷ<sup>6</sup> ὑγρῷ ξύλῳ ταῦτα π. ιουσι, ἐν τῷ ξηρῷ τί γένηται; 32. Ἦγοντο δὲ καὶ ἕτεροι, δύο<sup>7</sup> κακοῦργοι σὺν αὐτῷ ἀναιρεθῆναι.

33. Καὶ ὅτε ἀπῆλθον<sup>6</sup> ἐπὶ τὸν τόπον τὸν καλούμενον Κρανίον, ἐκεῖ ἔσταύρωσαν αὐτόν, καὶ τοὺς κακοῦργους, ὃν μὲν ἐκ δεξιῶν, ὃν δὲ ἐξ ἀριστερῶν. 34. ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς ἔλεγε, “Πάτερ, ἄφες αὐτοῖς· οὐ γὰρ οἶδαςι τί ποιοῦσι.”<sup>7</sup> Διαμεριζόμενοι δὲ τὰ ἱμάτια αὐτοῦ, ἔβαλον

<sup>1</sup> Omit καὶ ABCDLX 28.

<sup>2</sup> Omit ο ἸΒL.

<sup>3</sup> αἱ κοιλίαι in ἸBCX I, 28, 69, etc.

<sup>4</sup> ἐθρεψαν in ἸBCL 131. D has ἐξεθρεψαν.

<sup>5</sup> Omit τῶ BC (W.H. text).

<sup>6</sup> ἦλθον (-αν) in ἸBCL (W.H.).

<sup>7</sup> Ver. 34, from ο δε I. to ποιοῦσι, is omitted in Ἰ<sup>a</sup>BD minusc. (2) a b d Egypt. verss. syr. sin. Tisch. retains, but W.H. only in double brackets, regarding this as one of D's non-interpolations, i.e., where the interpolation is on the side of those who have the clause. Vide their appendix.

contrast = weep not for me, but for yourselves weep, hinting at the tragedies of Jerusalem's fatal day. At such times the greatest joy, that of motherhood, is turned into the greatest misery (Holtzmann, H. C.). The mothers ever have the worst of it (J. Weiss in Meyer).—Ver. 29. μακάριαι, etc.: blessed the women that have no children, barren, or unmarried: nobody to care for but themselves. The reflection implies keen sympathy with human feeling.—Ver. 30. τοῖς ὄρεσι, τοῖς βουνοῖς: the reference is to Palestine, a land of mountains and hills, and the prayer of the miserable that a hill may fall on them and bury them under its ruins (quoted from Hosea x. 8).—Ver. 31. The sense of this proverbial phrase is obscure, but the connection demands this general idea: what is happening to me now is nothing to what is going to happen to this people. The green tree represents innocence, the dry tree guilt, ripe for the fire of judgment. Vide Ezekiel xx. 47, xxi. 3. Pricaeus cites as a parallel from Catullus: “quid facient crines quum ferro talia cedant?” The Rabbinical proverb, “si duo fuerint ligna arida et unum viride, arida illud lignum viride exurunt,” does not seem to bear the same meaning.—ἐν ὑγρῷ ξύλῳ, in the wet tree, in ligno humido, Grotius. ξύλον χλωρὸν = lignum viride, in Ezekiel.—Ver. 32. ἕτεροι δύο κακοῦργοι, other two malefactors, as if Jesus was one also. But this is not meant. “It is a negligent construction, common to all languages, and not liable to be misunderstood,” remarks Field (Ol. Nor.), who gives an example from the Communion service. “If he require further comfort or counsel let him come to me, or to some other discreet and learned minister of God's word.” If κακοῦργοι were meant to include Jesus it would be used in reference to what men thought, δοξαστικῶς (Κυρκε) = pro tali habitus in reference to Jesus (Kuinoel). On this use of ἕτερος and ἄλλος, vide Winer, p. 665.

Vv. 33-38. Crucifixion (Mt. xxvii. 35-38, Mk. xv. 24-27).—κρανίον, a skull, for the Hebrew Γολγοθά in Mt. and Mk.—Ver. 34. Πάτερ, etc.: a prayer altogether true to the spirit of Jesus, therefore, though reported by Lk. alone, intrinsically credible. It is with sincere regret that one is compelled, by its omission in important MSS., to regard its genuineness as subject to a certain amount of doubt. In favour of it is its

f here and κληρον.<sup>1</sup> 35. καὶ εἰστήκει ὁ λαὸς θεωρῶν. Ἐξεμυκτήριζον δὲ καὶ
 in Ch. xvi. οἱ ἄρχοντες σὺν αὐτοῖς,<sup>2</sup> λέγοντες, "Ἄλλους ἔσωσε, σωσάτω ἑαυτόν, 14 εἰ οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ Χριστός, ὁ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐκλεκτός."<sup>3</sup> 36. Ἐνέπαιζον<sup>4</sup> δὲ αὐτῷ καὶ οἱ στρατιῶται, προσερχόμενοι καὶ<sup>5</sup> ὄξος προσφέροντες αὐτῷ, 37. καὶ λέγοντες, "Εἰ σὺ εἶ ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων, σῶσον σεαυτόν." 38. Ἦν δὲ καὶ ἐπιγραφὴ γεγραμμένη<sup>6</sup> ἐπ' αὐτῷ γράμ-μασιν Ἑλληνικοῖς καὶ Ῥωμαϊκοῖς καὶ Ἑβραϊκοῖς,<sup>7</sup> "Οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων."<sup>8</sup>
 39. Εἷς δὲ τῶν κρεμασθέντων κακούργων ἐβλασφήμει αὐτόν, λέγων,<sup>9</sup> "Εἰ<sup>10</sup> σὺ εἶ ὁ Χριστός, σῶσον σεαυτόν καὶ ἡμᾶς." 40.
 Ἀποκριθεὶς δὲ ὁ ἕτερος ἐπέτιμα αὐτῷ, λέγων,<sup>11</sup> "Οὐδὲ φοβῆ σὺ τὸν

<sup>1</sup> κληρος in AX 1, 33 al. (Tisch., who thinks κληρον an assimilation to parall.).

<sup>2</sup> Omit σὺν αυτοῖς NBCDLQX 33, 69, etc. (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> In NBL 1, 118, 209 the last clause stands thus: εἰ οὗτος ἐστὶν ὁ Χ. τοῦ Θεοῦ ὁ ἐκλεκτός.

<sup>4</sup> ἐνεπαιζαν in NBL.

<sup>5</sup> Omit καὶ NABCL.

<sup>6</sup> Omit γεγραμμένη NBL.

<sup>7</sup> All after ἐπ' αὐτῷ is omitted in BCL a sah. cop. syrr. cur. sin. It comes from John (Tisch., W.H. omit).

<sup>8</sup> ὁ βασ. τῶν Ἰ. οὗτος in NBL a.

<sup>9</sup> Omit λέγων BL.

<sup>10</sup> οὐχὶ in NBCL.

<sup>11</sup> ἐπιτιμῶν αὐτῷ ἐφη in NBCLX.

conformity with the whole aim of Lk. in his Gospel, which is to exhibit the graciousness of Jesus.—διαμεριζόμενοι, etc., and parting His garments they cast lots = they divided His garments by casting lots.—Ver. 35. θεωρῶν: the people are now mere spectators. Have they begun to rue already when they see what their demand has come to? Observe the words θεωρίαν and θεωρήσαντες in ver. 48. When they had gazed long enough it came to decided poignant regret. Fickle mob!—οἱ ἄρχοντες: they alone, the rulers of the people, mock and sneer. The σὺν αὐτοῖς (T.R.) is a badly attested reading and clearly contrary to the spirit of the narrative.—ὁ ἐκλεκτός, the Elect One, and come to this? Incredible? No! thus all the truest sons and elect of God have fared in this evil world.—Ver. 36. οἱ στρατιῶται, the soldiers; first mention of them, whether there as executioners or as keeping order does not appear in Lk.'s narrative. They too mock in their own rough way, offering the sufferer vinegar by way of grim joke (Meyer). So Lk. understands the matter. Note how he hurries over these brutalities. Cf. Mt. and Mk.—Ver. 37. The taunt put into the mouth of the soldiers is a pointless echo of the sneers of the rulers. The crucified one might be a King, yet be unable to save Himself. The Christ, elect of God, might be conceived endowed with supernatural power.—Ver. 38. ἐπ' αὐτῷ, over Him, i. e., above His head; or in reference to Him (Bleek). The ἐπιγραφὴ is viewed by Lk. as also an insult, crowning the others (ἦν δὲ καὶ), to which answers its form as in W. and H.: ὁ βασιλεὺς τ. Ἰ. οὗτος = the King of the Jews this (crucified person).

Vv. 39-43. The penitent malefactor, peculiar to Lk. and congenial to the spirit of the Gospel of the sinful.—Ver. 39. ἐβλασφήμει: the wretched man caught up the taunt of the rulers and, half in coarse contempt, half by way of petition, repeated it, with καὶ ἡμᾶς added, which redeemed the utterance from being a gratuitous insult.—Ver. 40. οὐδὲ φοβῆ σὺ τ. θ.: οὐδὲ may be connected with, and the emphasis may fall on, either φοβῆ, σὺ, or θεόν = (1) dost thou not even fear God, not to speak of any higher religious feeling? (2) dost thou not even thou, in contrast to these mockers of misery, fear, etc.? (3) dost thou not fear God, at least, if thou hast no regard for men? The position of οὐδὲ just before φοβῆ, casts the scale in favour of (1).—Ver. 41. ἄποπον (a pr. and τόπος): primarily out of place, unfitting, absurd, often in Plato; in later usage bearing a moral sense—wrong, wicked (ἄποπα

Θεόν, ὅτι ἐν τῷ αὐτῷ κρίματι εἶ; 41. καὶ ἡμεῖς μὲν δικαίως. ἄξια γὰρ ὧν ἐπράξαμεν ἀπολαμβάνομεν· οὗτος δὲ οὐδὲν ἄτοπον ἔπραξε.” 42. Καὶ ἔλεγε τῷ<sup>1</sup> Ἰησοῦ, “Μνήσθητί μου, Κύριε,<sup>2</sup> ὅταν ἔλθῃς ἐν τῇ βασιλείᾳ<sup>3</sup> σου.” 43. Καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς,<sup>4</sup> “Ἄμην λέγω σοι,<sup>5</sup> σήμερον μετ’ ἐμοῦ ἔσῃ ἐν τῷ παραδείσῳ.”

44. Ἦν δὲ<sup>6</sup> ὥσεὶ ὥρα ἕκτη, καὶ σκότος ἐγένετο ἐφ’ ὅλην τὴν γῆν, ἕως ὥρας ἐνάτης. 45. καὶ ἐσκοτίσθη ὁ ἥλιος, καὶ ἐσχίσθη<sup>7</sup> τὸ καταπέτασμα τοῦ ναοῦ μέσον· 46. καὶ φωνήσας φωνῇ μεγάλῃ ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπε, “Πάτερ, εἰς χεῖράς σου παραθήσομαι<sup>8</sup> τὸ πνευμά μου.” Καὶ ταῦτα<sup>9</sup> εἰπόν ἐξέπνευσεν. 47. Ἰδὼν δὲ ὁ ἑκατόνταρχος<sup>10</sup> τὸ γενόμενον ἐδόξασε<sup>11</sup> τὸν Θεόν, λέγων, “Ὅντως ὁ ἄνθρωπος οὗτος

<sup>1</sup> NBCL omit τω; based on mistaken interpretation. Vide below.

<sup>2</sup> Omit κυριε. NB CDLM. <sup>3</sup> εἰς τὴν β. in BL (W.H. text).

<sup>4</sup> Omit ο ἰ. NB L. <sup>5</sup> σοι λεγων in BCL.

<sup>6</sup> For ἦν δε NB CDL 255 have καὶ ἦν, to which BC*L add ἠδη.

<sup>7</sup> For καὶ ἐσκ. ο ἡλ. καὶ ἐσχ. NB C*L minusc. have του ἡλιου ἐκλιπόντος ἐσχίσθη δε.

<sup>8</sup> παρατιθεμαι in ABC, etc. <sup>9</sup> For καὶ ταῦτα NB C*D have τουτο δε.

<sup>10</sup> εκατονταρχης in NB I, 131, 209. <sup>11</sup> εδοξαξεν in BDL.

πονηρὰ, αἰσυχρὰ, Hesyeh.); of persons 2 Thess. iii. 2, in the sense of physically hurtful in Acts xxviii. 6.—Ver. 42. καὶ ἔλεγεν· Ἰησοῦ, and he said: Jesus! not to Jesus as T. R. signifies.—ἐν τῇ βασιλείᾳ σ.: when Thou comest in Thy kingdom = when Thou comest as King to earth again, the petition meaning: may I be among those whom Thou shalt raise from the dead to share its joys! The reading of BL, εἰς τὴν β. σ., might point to an immediate entering into the Kingdom of Heaven, the prayer meaning: may I go there to be with Thee when I die!—Ver. 43. σήμερον: to be connected with what follows, not with λέγω = to-day, as opposed to a boon expected at some future time (which makes for the reading ἐν τῇ β. in ver. 42). Or the point may be: this very day, not tomorrow or the next day, as implying speedy release by death, instead of a slow lingering process of dying, as often in cases of crucifixion.—ἐν τῷ παραδείσῳ, in paradise; either the division of Hades in which the blessed dwell, which would make for the descensus ad inferos, or heaven; vide at xvi. 23, and cf. 2 Cor. xii. 4, where it is a synonym for heaven, and Rev. ii. 7, where it denotes the perfected Kingdom of God, the ideal state of bliss realised. The use of “paradise” in this sense is analogous to the various representations in Hebrews of the perfect future drawn from the primeval condition of man: lordship in the world to come, deliverance from the fear of death, a Sabbatism (Heb. ii. 8, 14; iv. 9). The use of the term παράδεισος by St. Paul makes its use by our Lord credible.

Vv. 44-49. After crucifixion (Mt. xxvii. 45-56, Mk. xv. 33-41).—Ver. 44. ἐφ’ ὅλην τὴν γῆν: though Lk. writes for Gentiles this phrase need not mean more than over the whole land of Israel.—Ver. 45. τοῦ ἡλίου ἐκλιπόντος: this phrase (a well-attested reading as against the T.R. ἐσκοτίσθη ὁ ἥ.) ought to mean the sun being eclipsed, an impossibility when the moon is full. If all that was meant was the sun’s light totally failing, darkened, e.g., by a sand storm, the natural expression would be ἐσκοτίσθη.—Ver. 46. φωνῇ μεγάλῃ: this expression is used in Mt. and Mk. in connection with the “My God, My God,” which Lk. omits. In its place comes the “Father, into Thy hands”. Here as in the agony in the garden Lk.’s account fails to sound the depths of Christ’s humiliation. It must not be inferred that he did not know of the “Eli, Eli”. Either he personally, or his source, or his first readers, could not bear the thought of it.—παρατιθεμαι τ. π. μ.: an echo of Psalm xxxi. 6, and to be understood in a similar sense, as an expression δίκαιος ἦν." 48. Καὶ πάντες οἱ συμπαραγεγόμενοι ὄχλοι ἐπὶ τὴν θεωρίαν ταύτην, θεωροῦντες<sup>1</sup> τὰ γενόμενα, τύπτοντες ἑαυτῶν<sup>2</sup> τὰ στήθη ὑπέστρεφον. 49. εἰστήκεισαν δὲ πάντες οἱ γνωστοὶ αὐτοῦ<sup>3</sup> μακρόθεν,<sup>4</sup> καὶ γυναῖκες αἱ συνακολουθήσασαι<sup>5</sup> αὐτῷ ἀπὸ τῆς Γαλιλαίας, ὁρῶσαι ταῦτα.

50. Καὶ ἰδοῦ, ἀνὴρ ὀνόματι Ἰωσήφ, βουλευτῆς ὑπάρχων, ἀνὴρ ἀγαθὸς καὶ δίκαιος, 51. (οὗτος οὐκ ἦν συγκαταθεθεὶμένος τῇ βουλῇ καὶ τῇ πράξει αὐτῶν,) ἀπὸ Ἀριμαθαίας πόλεως τῶν Ἰουδαίων, ὅς καὶ προσεδέχετο καὶ αὐτὸς<sup>6</sup> τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ, 52. οὗτος προσελθὼν τῷ Πιλάτῳ ᾗτήσατο τὸ σῶμα τοῦ Ἰησοῦ. 53. καὶ καθελὼν αὐτὸ<sup>7</sup> ἐνετύλιξεν αὐτὸ σινδόνι, καὶ ἔθηκεν αὐτὸ<sup>8</sup> ἐν μνήματι λαξευτῷ,

<sup>1</sup> θεωρησαντες in  $\aleph$ BCDL 33.

<sup>2</sup> Omit εαυτων  $\aleph$ ABCDL minusc.

<sup>3</sup> αυτω in  $\aleph$ BLP 33, 64.

<sup>4</sup> απο μακ. in  $\aleph$ BDL al.

<sup>5</sup> συνακολουθουσαι in  $\aleph$ BCLRX al. T.R. = AD, etc. B has αι before γυναικες.

<sup>6</sup>  $\aleph$ BCDL 69 verss. have ος προσεδεχετο without και before προσεδ., ορ και αυτος after it.

<sup>7</sup> αυτο omitted in  $\aleph$ BCDL 13, 33, 69, etc.

<sup>8</sup> αυτον in  $\aleph$ BCD.

of trust in God in extremis. Various shades of meaning have been put on the words, among which is that Jesus died by a free act of will, handing over His soul to God as a deposit to be kept safe (Grotius, Bengel, Hahn, etc.).—Ver. 47. ὁ ἑκατοντάρχης, the centurion, in command of the soldiers named in ver. 36.—δίκαιος, righteous, innocent; in the parallels he confesses that Jesus is a Son of God. Lk. is careful to accumulate testimonies to Christ's innocence: first the robber, then the centurion, then the multitude (ver. 48) bears witness.—Ver. 48. θεωρίαν, sight, here only (3 Macc. v. 24).—τὰ γενόμενα, the things that had happened; comprehensively, including the crucifixion and all its accompaniments. They had looked on and listened, and the result was regret that they had had anything to do with bringing such a fate on such a man.—τύπτοντες τ. σ., beating their breasts. Lk. has in mind Zechariah's "they shall look on me whom they have pierced and mourn" (xii. 10).—ὑπέστρεφον, kept going away, in little groups, sad-hearted.—Ver. 49. οἱ γνωστοί, His acquaintances, Galileans mostly, who stood till the end, but far away. Mt. and Mk. do not mention this. No word of the eleven.—καὶ γυναῖκες: warm-hearted Galileans they too, and women, therefore bolder where the heart was concerned; nearer presumably, therefore "seeing" predicted of them specially (ὁρῶσαι). The men stood at a safe distance, the women cared more for seeing than for safety.

Vv. 50-56. The burial (Mt. xxvii. 57-61, Mk. xv. 42-47).—Ver. 50. καὶ ἰδοῦ: introducing the bright side of the tragic picture, a welcome relief after the harrowing incidents previously related: the Victim of injustice honourably buried by a good man, who is described with greater fulness of detail than in Mt. and Mk.—ἀνὴρ ἀγαθὸς καὶ δίκαιος, a man generous or noble and just. Instead of the epithets εὐσχήμων (Mk. xv. 43) and πλούσιος (Mt. xxvii. 57), indicative of social position, Lk. employs words descriptive of moral character, leaving βουλευτῆς to serve the former purpose. ἀγαθὸς has reference to the generous act he is going to perform, δίκαιος to his past conduct in connection with the trial of Jesus; hence the statement following: οὗτος οὐκ ἦν, etc., which forms a kind of parenthesis in the long sentence.—Ver. 51. οὐκ ἦν συγκαταθεθεὶμένος, was not a consenting party, here only in N. T. Alford thinks the meaning is that he absented himself from the meeting. Let us hope it means more than that: present at the meeting, and dissenting from its proceedings.—τ. βουλῇ καὶ τ. πράξει, their counsel and their subsequent action in carrying that counsel into effect.—ὅς προσεδέχετο, etc.: this describes his religious character. Thus we have first social position, a counsellor; next ethical character, generous and just:

οὐ οὐκ ἦν οὐδέπω οὐδεὶς<sup>1</sup> κείμενος. 54. καὶ ἡμέρα ἦν παρασκευή,<sup>2</sup> καὶ σάββατον ἐπέφωσκε.

55. Κατακολληθήσασαι δὲ καὶ<sup>3</sup> γυναῖκες, αἵτινες ἦσαν συνεληλυθῆναι αὐτῷ ἐκ τῆς Γαλιλαίας,<sup>4</sup> ἐθεάσαντο τὸ μνημεῖον, καὶ ὡς ἐτέθη τὸ σῶμα αὐτοῦ. 56. ὑποστρέψασαι δὲ ἠτοίμασαν ἀρώματα καὶ μύρα· καὶ τὸ μὲν σάββατον ἠσύχασαν κατὰ τὴν ἐντολήν, XXIV.

1. τῇ δὲ μιᾷ τῶν σαββάτων * ὄρθρου βαθέως,<sup>5</sup> ἦλθον ἐπὶ τὸ μῆμα,<sup>6</sup> ἃ Acts v. 21. φέρουσαι ἃ ἠτοίμασαν ἀρώματα, καὶ τινες σὺν αὐταῖς.<sup>7</sup>

2. EYPON δὲ τὸν λίθον ἀποκεκλισμένον ἀπὸ τοῦ μνημείου, 3. και

<sup>1</sup> ουδεις ουδεπω in  $\aleph C$  (Tisch.); ουδεις ουπω in  $\aleph B L$  (W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> παρασκευης in  $\aleph B C^* L$  13, 346.

<sup>3</sup> Omit και  $\aleph A C$  al. (Tisch.). For δε και BLPX 33 al. have δε αι (W.H. text). D codd. Lat. vet. have δε δυο (W.H. marg.).

<sup>4</sup> αυτω after Γαλ. in  $\aleph B L$ .

<sup>5</sup> βαθεως in  $\aleph A B C D L$ , etc.

<sup>6</sup> επι το μνημα ηλθαν in  $\aleph B L$ .

<sup>7</sup> και τ. συν αυταις omitted in  $\aleph B C L$  33 Lat. vet. vulg. cop.

finally religious character, one who was waiting for the Kingdom of God.—Ver. 53. λαξευτῶ, cut out of stone, here only, and in Deut. iv. 49.—οὐκ, οὐδέπω, οὐδεὶς, an accumulation of negatives to emphasise the honour done to Jesus by depositing His body in a previously unused tomb.—Ver. 54. ἐπέφωσκε, was about to dawn, illucescebat, Vulgate. The evening is meant, and the word seems inappropriate. Lk. may have used it as if he had been speaking of a natural day (as in Mt. xxviii. 1) by a kind of inadvertence, or it may have been used with reference to the candles lit in honour of the day, or following the Jewish custom of calling the night light justified by the text, Ps. cxlviii. 3, "Praise Him, all ye stars of light" (vide Lightfoot, Hor. Heb.). Or it may be a touch of poetry, likening the rising of the moon to a dawn. So Casaubon, Exercit. anti-Baroniana, p. 416.—Ver. 55. αἵτινες: possibly = αἱ, but possibly meant to suggest the idea of distinction: Galilean women, and such in character as you would expect them to be: leal-hearted, passionately devoted to their dead Friend.—ἀρώματα, spices, dry.—μύρα, ointments, liquid.—Ver. 56. κατὰ τὴν ἐντολήν: they respected the Sabbath law as commonly understood. The purchase of spices and ointments is viewed by some as a proof that the day of Christ's crucifixion was an ordinary working day.

CHAPTER XXIV. THE RESURRECTION. In this narrative Lk. diverges widely from Mt. and Mk. both as to the appearances of the Risen Christ he reports and as to the scene of these. Specially noticeable is the limitation of the Christophanies to the neighbourhood of Jerusalem, Galilee being left out of account.

Vv. 1-11. The women at the tomb (Mt. xxviii. 1-10, Mk. xvi. 1-8).—Ver. 1. τῇ δὲ μ. τ. σ.: the δὲ answers to the μὲν in the preceding clause (xxiii. 56) and carries the story on without any break. The T.R. properly prints the clause introduced by τῇ δὲ as part of the sentence beginning with καὶ τὸ μὲν, dividing the two clauses by a comma.—ὄρθρου βαθέως (βαθέως, T. R., a correction), at deep dawn = very early. βαθέως is either an adverb or an unusual form of the genitive of βαθύς. This adjective is frequently used in reference to time. Thus Philo says that the Israelites crossed the Red Sea περὶ βαθὴν ὄρθρον. The end of the dawn was called ὄρθρος ἔσχατος, as in the line of Theocritus: ὄρνιχες τρίτον ἄρτι τὸν ἔσχατον ὄρθρον αἶδον (Idyll xxiv., v., 63).—ἀρώματα: the μύρα omitted for brevity.—Ver. 2. τὸν λίθον, the stone, not previously mentioned by Lk., as in Mt. and Mk.; nor does he (as in Mk.) ascribe to the women any solicitude as to its removal: enough for him that they found it rolled away.—Ver. 3. εἰσελθούσαι δὲ: this is obviously a better reading than καὶ εἶσθ. (T.R.), which implies that they found what they expected, whereas the empty grave was a surprise.—Ver. 4. ἄνδρες, two men in appearance, but with

εἰσελθούσαι<sup>1</sup> οὐχ εὔρον τὸ σῶμα τοῦ κυρίου Ἰησοῦ.<sup>2</sup> 4. καὶ ἐγένετο ἐν τῷ διαπορεῖσθαι<sup>3</sup> αὐτὰς περὶ τούτου, καὶ ἰδοὺ, δύο ἄνδρες<sup>4</sup> ἐπέστεισαν αὐταῖς ἐν ἐσθήσεσιν ἀστραπτούσαις.<sup>5</sup> 5. ἐμβόβων δὲ γενομένων αὐτῶν, καὶ κλινουσῶν τὸ πρόσωπον<sup>6</sup> εἰς τὴν γῆν, εἶπον πρὸς αὐτάς, "Τί ζητεῖτε τὸν ζῶντα μετὰ τῶν νεκρῶν; 6. οὐκ ἔστιν ὡδε, ἀλλ' ἠγέρθη<sup>7</sup>. μνήσθητε ὡς ἐλάλησεν ὑμῖν, ἔτι ὢν ἐν τῇ Γαλιλαίᾳ, 7. λέγων, Ὅτι δεῖ τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου<sup>8</sup> παραδοθῆναι εἰς χεῖρας ἀνθρώπων ἀμαρτωλῶν, καὶ σταυρωθῆναι, καὶ τῇ τρίτῃ ἡμέρᾳ ἀναστῆναι." 8. Καὶ ἐμνήσθησαν τῶν ῥημάτων αὐτοῦ. 9. καὶ ὑποστρέψασαι ἀπὸ τοῦ μνημείου,<sup>9</sup> ἀπήγγειλαν ταῦτα πάντα<sup>10</sup> τοῖς ἑνδεκα καὶ πᾶσι τοῖς λοιποῖς. 10. ἦσαν δὲ ἡ Μαγδαληνὴ Μαρία καὶ Ἰωάννα καὶ Μαρία Ἰακώβου,<sup>11</sup> καὶ αἱ λοιπαὶ σὺν αὐταῖς, αἱ<sup>12</sup> ἑλεγον

<sup>1</sup> εἰσελθ. δε in NBCDL 1, 33 al.

<sup>2</sup> του κυριου 1. is found in NBACL al. pl. (Tisch.). D and some codd. vet. Lat. omit the whole; f. syrr. cur. sin. omit κυριου. W.H. count this one of the "Western non-interpolations," remarking that the combination ο κυριος Ιησους is not found in the genuine text of the Gospels.

<sup>3</sup> απορεισθαι in NBCDL.

<sup>4</sup> ανδρες δυο in NABCL. T.R. = D.

<sup>5</sup> εν εσθητι αστραπτουση in NBD.

<sup>6</sup> τα προσωπα in NBCDL, 33, etc.

<sup>7</sup> ουκ εστιν ωδε αλλα ηγερθη wanting in D a b e ff<sub>2</sub>, a "Western non-interpolation"; "comes from Mt. xxviii. 6 = Mk. xvi. 6 thrown into an antithetic form," W.H. App.

<sup>8</sup> οτι δει after ανθρωπου in N*BC*L (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>9</sup> D a b c e ff<sub>2</sub> 1 omit απο. τ. μν. (W.H. brackets).

<sup>10</sup> So in BL (W.H.). παντα ταυτα in ND (Tisch.).

<sup>11</sup> η Ιακ. in NABD al. pl.

<sup>12</sup> Omit αι NABDL, etc.

angelic raiment (ἐν ἐσθῆτι ἀστραπτούσῃ).—Ver. 5. ἐμβόβων, fear-stricken, from ἔμβοβος, chiefly in late writers, for ἐν φόβῳ εἶναι. Vide Hermann, ad Viger., p. 607.—τὸν ζῶντα, the living one, simply pointing to the fact that Jesus was risen: no longer among the dead.—μετὰ τῶν νεκρῶν, among the dead. The use of μετὰ in the sense of among, with the genitive, is common in Greek authors, as in Pindar's line (Pythia, v., 127): μάκαρ μὲν ἀνδρῶν μετὰ ἕναιεν. Wolf mentions certain scholars who suggested that μετὰ τ. νεκρῶν should be rendered "with the things for the dead," i.e., the spices and mortuaria. But of this sense no example has been cited.—Ver. 6. μνήσθητε, etc.: the reference is to what Jesus told the disciples in the neighbourhood of Caesarea Philippi (ix.). There is no indication elsewhere that women were present on that occasion.—ὡς: not merely "that," but "how," in what terms.—ἐν τῇ Γαλιλαίᾳ: this reference to Galilee suggests that Lk. was aware of another reference to Galilee as the place of rendezvous for the meeting between the disciples and their risen Master (Mt. xxvi. 32, Mk. xiv. 28, to which there is nothing corresponding in Lk.).—Ver. 7. τὸν υἱὸν τ. ἀ.: standing before δεῖ δεῖ may be taken as an accusative of reference = saying as to the Son of Man that, etc.—ἀνθρώπων ἀμαρτωλῶν, sinful men, not necessarily Gentiles only (Meyer, J. Weiss, etc.), but men generally (Hahn) Jesus actually expressed Himself in much more definite terms.—Ver. 9. ἀπήγγειλαν, etc.: cf. the statement in Mk. xvi. 8, according to which the women said nothing to any person.—Ver. 10: here for the first time Lk. gives names, adding to two of those named by Mk. (xv. 47, xvi. 1) Joanna, mentioned in viii. 3. Mary Magdalene is here called the Magdalene Mary.—καὶ αἱ λοιπαὶ, etc., also the other women with them. The emphasis must lie on the persons named as those who took the chief hand in informing the Apostles.—σὺν αὐταῖς describes the other

πρὸς τοὺς ἀποστόλους ταῦτα. 11. Καὶ ἐφάνησαν ἐνώπιον αὐτῶν ὡσεὶ λήρος τὰ ῥήματα αὐτῶν,<sup>1</sup> καὶ ἠπίστουν αὐταῖς. 12. ὁ δὲ Πέτρος ἀναστὰς ἔδραμεν ἐπὶ τὸ μνημεῖον, καὶ παρακύψας βλέπει τὰ ὀθόνια κείμενα μόνα· καὶ ἀπῆλθε πρὸς ἑαυτὸν θαυμάζων τὸ γεγονός.<sup>2</sup>

13. Καὶ ἰδοὺ, δύο ἐξ αὐτῶν ἦσαν πορευόμενοι ἐν αὐτῇ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ<sup>3</sup> εἰς κάμην ἀπέχουσαν σταδίου ἐξήκοντα ἀπὸ Ἱερουσαλήμ, ἧ ὄνομα Ἐμμαοῦς· 14. καὶ αὐτοὶ ὠμίλουν πρὸς ἀλλήλους περὶ πάντων τῶν συμβεβηκότων τούτων. 15. καὶ ἐγένετο ἐν τῷ ὄμιλεϊ αὐτοῦς καὶ women as, in a subordinate way, joint-informants. The αἱ before ἔλεγον in T. R. makes the construction easier, and just on that account may be regarded as a correction by the scribes.—Ver. 11. ἐφάνησαν: plural with a neuter pl. nom. (τὰ ῥήματα), denoting things without life (vide John xix. 31), because the "words," reports, are thought of in their separate-ness (vide Winer, § lviii., 3 a).—λήρος: here only in N.T. = idle talk, not to be taken seriously.

<sup>1</sup> ταῦτα for αὐτῶν in ΞBDL codd. vet. Lat.

<sup>2</sup> Ver. 12 is another "Western non-interpolation," wanting in D a b e l (Tisch. smits, W.H. double brackets). ΞB omit κείμενα, and BL have πρὸς αὐτον for π. εαυτον.

<sup>3</sup> ἦσαν πορ. after ἐν α. τ. ἡμ. in ΞB.

Ver. 12. Peter runs to the sepulchre. This verse, omitted in D and some copies of the old Latin version, is regarded by some as an interpolation. For Rohrbach's theory vide notes on the appendix to Mark's Gospel (xvi. 9-20).—ἀναστὰς, rising up, suggesting prompt action, like the man; as if after all he at last thought there might be something in the women's story.—παρακύψας may mean: stooping down so as to look in, but in many passages in which the verb is used the idea of stooping is not suggested, but rather that of taking a stolen hasty glance with outstretched neck. Kypke gives as its meaning in profane writers exserto capite prospicere (examples there). Field (Ot. Nor.) quotes with approval these words of Casaubon against Baronius (p. 693): "Male etiam probat humilitatem sepulchri ex eo quod dicitur Joannes se inclinasse; nam Graeca veritas habet παρακύψαι, quod sive de fenestra sumatur sive de janua, nullam inclinationem corporis designat, qualem sibi finxit B., sed protensionem colli potius cum modica corporis incurvatione".—μόνα, alone, without the body.—πρὸς ἑαυτὸν (or αὐτὸν): most connect this with ἀπῆλθεν → went away to his home, as in John xx. 10 (πρὸς τὴν ἑαυτοῦ διαγωγὴν, Euthy. Zig.). The Vulgate connects with θαυμάζων = secum mirans, and is followed by not a few, including Theophyl. and Grotius; Wolf also, who lays stress on the fact that the ancient versions except the Coptic so render.—θαυμάζων, wondering; for, remarks Euthy., he knew that the body had not been carried off, for then the clothes would have been carried off also.

Vv. 13-35. On the way to Emmaus: in Lk. only, and one of the most beautiful and felicitous narratives in his Gospel, taken, according to J. Weiss (in Meyer), from Feine's precanonical Luke. Feine, after Holtzmann, remarks on the affinities in style and religious tone between it and Lk. i. and ii.

Vv. 13 ff. δύο ἐξ αὐτῶν, two of them. The reference ought naturally to be to the last-named subject, the Apostles (ver. 10); yet they were evidently not Apostles. Hence it is inferred that the reference is to τοῖς λοιποῖς in ver. 9. Feine (also J. Weiss) thinks the story had been originally given in a different connection.—Ἐμμαοῦς: now generally identified with Kalonieh, the Emmaus of Josephus, B. J., vii. 6, 6, lying to the north-west of Jerusalem (vide Schürer, Div. I., vol. ii., p. 253, note 138, and Furrer, Wanderungen, pp. 168-9).—Ver. 15. συζητεῖν. This word, added to ὄμιλεϊν to describe the converse of the two disciples, suggests lively discussion, perhaps accompanied by some heat. One might be sceptical, the other more inclined to believe the story of the resurrection.—Ver. 16. ἐκρατοῦντο, their eyes were held, from

συζητεῖν, καὶ αὐτὸς ὁ<sup>1</sup> Ἰησοῦς ἐγγίνας συνεπορεύετο αὐτοῖς· 16. οἱ δὲ ὀφθαλμοὶ αὐτῶν ἐκρατοῦντο τοῦ μὴ ἐπιγνῶναι αὐτόν· 17. εἶπε δὲ πρὸς αὐτούς, “Τίνες οἱ λόγοι οὗτοι, οὓς ἀντιβάλλετε πρὸς ἀλλήλους περιπατοῦντες, καὶ ἐστε σκυθρωποὶ<sup>2</sup> ;” 18. Ἀποκριθεὶς δὲ ὁ εἰς,<sup>3</sup> ὡς ὄνομα<sup>4</sup> Κλεόπας, εἶπε πρὸς αὐτόν, “Σὺ μόνος παροικεῖς ἐν<sup>5</sup> Ἱερουσαλήμ, καὶ οὐκ ἔγνωσ τὰ γενόμενα ἐν αὐτῇ ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις ταύταις ;” 19. Καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Ποῖα ;” Οἱ δὲ εἶπον αὐτῷ, “Τὰ περὶ Ἰησοῦ τοῦ Ναζωραίου,<sup>6</sup> ὃς ἐγένετο ἀνὴρ προφήτης, δυνατὸς ἐν ἔργῳ καὶ λόγῳ ἐναντίον τοῦ Θεοῦ καὶ παντὸς τοῦ λαοῦ· 20. ὅπως τε παρέδωκαν αὐτόν οἱ ἄρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ ἄρχοντες ἡμῶν εἰς κρίμα θανάτου, καὶ ἐσταύρωσαν αὐτόν· 21. ἡμεῖς δὲ ἠλπίζομεν ὅτι αὐτὸς ἔστιν ὁ μέλλων λυτρωθῆναι τὸν Ἰσραήλ. ἀλλὰ γε<sup>7</sup> σὺν πᾶσι τούτοις

<sup>1</sup> Ὡς ABL omit ο. D retains ο but omits αὐτος.

<sup>2</sup> καὶ ἐσταθησαν σκ. in ὩB e sah. cop. D has simply σκυθρωποὶ.

<sup>3</sup> For ο εἰς ὩBDL 1, 13 al. have εἰς.

<sup>4</sup> For ω ὄνομα (AD, etc., Tisch.) ὩBLNX have ὀνοματι (W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> Omit ἐν ὩABDIL and many others.

<sup>6</sup> Ναζαρηνοῦ in ὩBIL.

<sup>7</sup> ἀλλὰ γε καὶ in ὩBDL 1, 33 (Tisch., W.H.).

recognising Him (here only in this sense). Instances of the use of the verb in this sense in reference to the bodily organs are given by Kypke. It is not necessary, with Meyer, to suppose any special Divine action or purpose to prevent knowledge of Jesus.—Ver. 17. ἀντιβάλλετε: an expressive word (here only in N.T.), confirming the impression of animated and even heated conversation made by συζητεῖν. It points to an exchange of words, not simply, but with a certain measure of excitement. As Pricaeus expresses it: “fervidius aliquanto et commotius, ut fieri amat ubi de rebus novis mirisque disserentes nullamque expediendi nos viam invenientes, altercamur”. The question of the stranger quietly put to the two wayfarers is not without a touch of kindly humour.—καὶ ἐστάθησαν, σκυθρωποί: this well-attested reading gives a good graphic sense = “they stood still, looking sad” (R. V.). A natural attitude during the first moments of surprise at the interruption of their talk by an unknown person, and in a puzzling tone.—Ver. 18. ἀποκριθεὶς δὲ: at last after recovering from surprise one of them, Cleopas, finds his tongue, and explains fully the subject of their conversation.—Σὺ μόνος, etc.: he begins by expressing his surprise that the stranger should need to be told. What could they be talking about but the one supreme topic of the hour? The verb παροικεῖς might mean: live near, and the point of the question be: dost thou live near Jerusalem (in the neighbourhood of Emmaus, a few miles distant), and not know, etc. So Grotius, Rosenmüller, Bleek, etc. The usual meaning of the verb in Sept. and N.T. (Heb. xi. 9) is to sojourn as a stranger, and most take it in that sense here = art thou a stranger sojourning in Jerusalem (at passover time), and therefore ignorant? The μόνος implies isolation over and above being a stranger. There were many strangers in Jerusalem at passover season; the two friends might be among them; but even visitors from Galilee and other places knew all about what had happened = do you live alone, having no communication with others—a stranger in Jerusalem so as to be the only man who does not know? (μόνος qualifies ἔγνωσ as well as παροικεῖς).—Ver. 19. ποῖα, what sort of things? with an affected indifference, the feigning of love—οἱ δὲ εἶπον: both speak now, distributing the story between them.—ἀνὴρ προφήτης, a prophetic man, a high estimate, but not the highest.—ἀνὴρ may be viewed as redundant—“elegantèr abundat,” Kypke.—Ver. 20. ὅπως τε, and how; ὅπως here = πῶς, used adverbially with the indicative, here

τρίτην ταύτην ἡμέραν ἄγει σήμερον,<sup>1</sup> ἀφ' οὗ ταῦτα ἐγένετο. 22. ἀλλὰ καὶ γυναῖκες τινες ἐξ ἡμῶν ἐξέστησαν ἡμᾶς, γενόμεναι ὄρθριαι<sup>2</sup> ἐπὶ τὸ μνημεῖον· 23. καὶ μὴ εὐροῦσαι τὸ σῶμα αὐτοῦ, ἦλθον, λέγουσαι καὶ ὀπτασίαν ἀγγέλων ἑωρακέναι, οἱ λέγουσιν αὐτὸν ζῆν. 24. καὶ ἀπῆλθόν τινες τῶν σὺν ἡμῖν ἐπὶ τὸ μνημεῖον, καὶ εὗρον οὕτως καθὼς καὶ<sup>3</sup> αἱ γυναῖκες εἶπον· αὐτὸν δὲ οὐκ εἶδον.” 25. Καὶ αὐτὸς εἶπε πρὸς αὐτοὺς, “Ὁ ἄνόητοι καὶ βραδεῖς τῇ καρδίᾳ τοῦ πνεύματος· ἡμεῖς ἄρα ἔσταντες ἐπὶ τῷ θανάτῳ τοῦ κυρίου, οὐκ εἶδον αὐτὸν ζῆν.” in Gospels. g Jas. i. 19.

<sup>1</sup> Omit σήμερον *℣*BL I. <sup>2</sup> ορθριαι in *℣*ABDL al. <sup>3</sup> Omit καὶ BD (W.H.).

only in N.T. The τε connects what follows with what goes before as together constituting one complete tragic story: the best of men treated as the worst by the self-styled good.—καὶ ἐσταύρωσαν: this confirms the idea suggested in the previous narrative of the crucifixion that Lk. regarded that deed as the crime of the Jewish people, and even as executed by them.—Ver. 21. ἡμεῖς δὲ, but we, on the other hand, as opposed to the priests and rulers.—ἠλπίζομεν, were hoping; the hope dead or in abeyance now. But how wide asunder these disappointed ones from the rulers, ethically, in that they could regard such an one as Jesus as the Redeemer of Israel! λυτροῦσθαι is to be taken in the sense of i. 68, 74.—ἀλλὰ γε: these two particles stand together here contrary to the ordinary usage of Greek writers, who separate them by an intervening word. It is not easy to express the turn of feeling they represent. Does the ἐστιν in the previous clause mean that they think of Him as still living, hoping against hope on the ground of the women's report, mentioned in the following clause, and does the ἀλλὰ γε express a swing of feeling away in the opposite direction of hopelessness? = we hoped, we would like to hope still; yet how can we? He is dead three days, and yet again on the other hand (ἀλλὰ καὶ, ver. 22) there is a story going that looks like a resurrection. How true to life this alternation between hope and despair! σὺν πᾶσι τούτοις, in addition to all these things, i.e., all that caused them to hope: prophetic gifts, marvellous power in word and work, favour with the people: there is the hard fact making hope impossible.—ἄγει: probably to be taken impersonally = agitur, one lives this third day since. So Grotius and many others. Other suggestions are that χρόνος or ὁ Ἰησοῦς is to be understood (cf. Acts xix. 38).—Ver. 22. ἀλλὰ καὶ γ. τ.: introducing another hope-inspiring phase of the story.—ἐξέστησαν ἦ., astonished us.—ὄρθριαι: ὄρθρινός is a late form for ὄρθριος, and condemned by Phryn.; the adjective instead of the adverb = early ones, a common classical usage.—Ver. 23. μὴ εὐροῦσαι, etc.: that part of the women's story—the body gone—is accepted as a fact; their explanation of the fact is regarded as doubtful, as appears from the cautious manner of expression.—λέγουσαι, etc., they came saying that they had also seen a vision of angels who say. Yet the use of the present indicative, λέγουσιν, in reporting what the angels said, shows a wish to believe the report.—Ver. 24. τινες τῶν σὺν ἡμῖν: a general reference to the Apostles, though the phrase covers all the lovers of Jesus. The τινες were Peter and John (John xx. 3).—αὐτὸν δὲ οὐκ εἶδον, but Him they saw not, as surely, think the two friends, they ought to have done had He really been alive from the dead.

Ver. 25 f. Jesus speaks.—ἀνόητοι, “fools” (A.V.) is too strong, “foolish men” (R.V.) is better. Jesus speaks not so much to reproach as by way of encouragement. As used by Paul in Gal. iii. 1 the word is harder. “Stupid” might be a good colloquial equivalent for it here.—πιστεύειν ἐπὶ π.: ἐπὶ with dative of person after πιστεύειν is common, with dative of the thing only here.—Ver. 26. ἔδει: here as always in Lk. pointing to the necessity that O.T. prophecy should be fulfilled. Accordingly Jesus is represented in the next verse as going on to show that prophecy demanded the course of experience described: first the passion, then entrance into glory.—καὶ εἰσελθεῖν: the passion is past, the entering into glory is still to come, therefore it seems unfit to make εἰσελ. dependent with παθεῖν τὸν Χριστόν, καὶ εἰσελθεῖν εἰς τὴν δόξαν αὐτοῦ; 27. Καὶ ἀρξάμενος ἀπὸ Μωσέως καὶ ἀπὸ πάντων τῶν προφητῶν, διηρμήνευεν<sup>1</sup> αὐτοῖς ἐν πάσαις ταῖς γραφαῖς τὰ περὶ ἑαυτοῦ. 28. Καὶ ἤγγισαν εἰς τὴν κώμην οὐ ἐπορεύοντο· καὶ αὐτὸς προσεποιεῖτο<sup>2</sup> πορρωτέρω πορεύεσθαι. 29. καὶ παρεβιάσαντο αὐτόν, λέγοντες, “Μείνον μεθ’ ἡμῶν, ὅτι πρὸς ἑσπέραν ἐστί, καὶ κέκλικεν ἡ ἡμέρα.”<sup>3</sup> Καὶ εἰσήλθε γινῶ μείναι σὺν αὐτοῖς. 30. καὶ ἐγένετο ἐν τῷ κατακλιθῆναι αὐτὸν μετ’ αὐτῶν, λαβὼν τὸν ἄρτον εὐλόγησε, καὶ ἐπέδιδου αὐτοῖς. 31. αὐτῶν δὲ διηνοίχθησαν οἱ ὀφθαλμοί, καὶ ἐπέγνωσαν αὐτόν· καὶ αὐτὸς ἄφαντος ἐγένετο ἀπ’ αὐτῶν. 32. Καὶ εἶπόν πρὸς ἀλλήλους, “Οὐχὶ ἡ καρδία ἡμῶν καιομένη ἦν ἐν ἡμῖν,<sup>4</sup> ὡς ἐλάλει ἡμῖν ἐν τῇ

<sup>1</sup> διερμήνευσεν in BL (Tisch., W.H. text). D has ἦν before ἀρξάμενος with ἐρμήνευσεν (W.H. marg.).

<sup>2</sup> προσεποιήσατο in  $\aleph$ ABDL 1; for πορρωτέρω (in  $\aleph$ DL) AB 382 have πορρωτερον (W.H.).

<sup>3</sup> ἡδη before ἡ ημ. in  $\aleph$ BL 1, 33 al.

<sup>4</sup> So in  $\aleph$ ALX al. pl. BD omit ἐν ἡμ. (W.H.). For καιομένη D has κεκαλυμμένη (W.H. marg.).

παθεῖν on εἶδει. Meyer supplies δεῖ, Bornemann ταῦτα παθόντα, the Vulgate οὕτω = et ita intrare.—Ver. 27. καὶ ἀρξάμενος ἀπὸ, etc.: there is a grammatical difficulty here also. He might begin from Moses, but how could He begin from Moses and all the prophets? Hahn, after Hofmann, suggests that Moses and the prophets together are set in contrast to the rest of the O.T. But Lk. seems to have in mind not so much where Jesus began as what He began to do, viz., teach = beginning (to instruct them) from Moses, etc.—Ver. 28. προσεποιήσατο, He assumed the air of one going farther. The verb in the active means to bring about that something shall be acquired by another, in middle, by oneself = “meum aliquid facio” (Alberti, Observ. Phil., ad loc.). Jesus wished to be invited to stay.—Ver. 29. παρεβιάσαντο, they constrained by entreaty, again in Acts xvi. 15, found in Gen. xix. 9.—μεθ’ ἡμῶν, with us, presumably in their home or lodgings. If they were but guests they could not well invite another.—πρὸς ἑσπέραν, κέκλικεν ἡ ἡ.: two phrases where one was enough, by way of pressing their fellow-traveller. They make the most of the late hour, which is not their real reason.—Ver. 30. λαβὼν τ. α., etc.: Jesus possibly by request assumes the position of host, prepared for by the previous exercise of the function of Master. By this time a suspicion of who

He was had dawned upon the two disciples. While He spoke old impressions of His teaching were revived (Pricaeus).—Ver. 31. διηνοίχθησαν οἱ ὀφθ., their eyes were at length opened, a Divine effect, but having its psychological causes. Euthy. suggests the use of the well-known blessing by Jesus as aiding recognition. The opening of the mind to the prophetic teaching concerning Messiah’s suffering was the main preparation for the opening of the eyes. The wonder is they did not recognise Jesus sooner.—ἄφαντος: an early poetical and late prose word = ἀφανής, not in Sept., here only in N.T. After being recognised Jesus became invisible, ἀπ’ αὐτῶν, not to them (αὐτοῖς) but from them, implying departure from the house. Some take ἀφαντος adverbially as qualifying the departure = He departed from them in an invisible manner.

Vv. 32-35. After Jesus’ departure.—Ver. 32. ἡ καρδία καιομένη, the heart burning, a beautiful expression for the emotional effect of new truth dawning on the mind; common to sacred writers (vide Ps. xxxix. 4, Jerem. xx. 9) with profane. Their heart began to burn while the stranger expounded Scripture, and kept burning, and burning up into ever clearer flame, as He went on—“valde et diu,” Bengel. It is the heart that has been dried by tribulation that burns so. This burning of the heart experienced by the two disciples was

ὁδῶ, καὶ<sup>1</sup> ὡς διήνοιγεν ἡμῖν τὰς γραφάς;” 33. Καὶ ἀναστάντες αὐτῇ τῇ ὥρᾳ, ὑπέστρεψαν εἰς Ἱερουσαλήμ, καὶ εὗρον συνηθροισμένους<sup>2</sup> τοὺς ἑνδεκα καὶ τοὺς σὺν αὐτοῖς, 34. λέγοντας, “Ὅτι ἠγέρθη ὁ Κύριος ὄντως,<sup>3</sup> καὶ ᾤφθη Σίμωνι.” 35. Καὶ αὐτοὶ ἐξηγούντο τὰ ἐν τῇ ὁδῶ, καὶ ὡς ἐγνώσθη αὐτοῖς ἐν τῇ κλάσει τοῦ ἄρτου.

36. Ταῦτα δὲ αὐτῶν λαλούντων, αὐτὸς ὁ Ἰησοῦς<sup>4</sup> ἔστη ἐν μέσῳ αὐτῶν, καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς, “Εἰρήνη ὑμῖν.<sup>5</sup> 37. Πτοηθέντες<sup>6</sup> δὲ καὶ ἔμφοβοι γενόμενοι ἐδόκουν πνεῦμα θεωρεῖν. 38. καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Τί τεταραγμένοι ἐστέ; καὶ διατὶ διαλογισμοὶ ἀναβαίνουσιν ἐν ταῖς καρδίαις<sup>7</sup> ὑμῶν; 39. ἴδετε τὰς χεῖράς μου καὶ τοὺς πόδας μου, ὅτι αὐτὸς ἐγὼ εἰμι.<sup>8</sup> ἠψηλαφήσατέ με καὶ ἴδετε· ὅτι πνεῦμα ἢ Acts xvii
27. Heb
xii. 18. 1
John i. 1
σάρκα καὶ ὄστέα οὐκ ἔχει, καθὼς ἐμὲ θεωρεῖτε ἔχοντα.” 40. Καὶ τοῦτο εἰπὼν ἐπέδειξεν αὐτοῖς τὰς χεῖρας καὶ τοὺς πόδας.<sup>9</sup> 41. ἔτι δὲ ἀπιστούντων αὐτῶν ἀπὸ τῆς χαρᾶς καὶ θαυμαζόντων, εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Ἐχετε τι βρώσιμον ἐνθάδε;” 42. Οἱ δὲ ἐπέδωκαν αὐτῶ ἰχθύος

<sup>1</sup> ἜBDL 33 omit καὶ

<sup>2</sup> ἠθροισμενους in ἜBD 33.

<sup>3</sup> ὄντως ἠγερ. ο K. in ἜBDL I, 131.

<sup>4</sup> Omit ο I. ἜBDL 61 al.

<sup>5</sup> καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς εἰρ. ὑμῖν wanting in D a b e ff<sup>2</sup> l; a “Western non-interpolation,” W.H. App. Omitted also by Tisch.

<sup>6</sup> B has θροηθεντες (W.H. marg.).

<sup>7</sup> τῆ καρδια in BD.

<sup>8</sup> ἐγὼ εἰμι αὐτος in ἜBL 33.

<sup>9</sup> D a b e ff<sup>2</sup> syr. cur. omit ver. 40. A “Western non-interpolation,” W.H.

typical of the experience of the whole early Church when it got the key to the sufferings of Jesus (Holtzmann, H. C.). Their doubt and its removal was common to them with many, and that is why the story is told so carefully by Lk.—ὡς ἐλάλει, ὡς διήνοιγεν (without καὶ), as He spoke, as He opened, etc.; first the general then the more specific form of the fact.—Ver. 33. αὐτῇ τῇ ὥρᾳ: no time lost, meal perhaps left half finished, no fear of a night journey; the eleven must be told at once what has happened. “They ran the whole way from overjoy” (ὑπὸ περιχαρείας), Euthy. Zig.—Ver. 34. λέγοντας: the apostolic company have their story to tell: a risen Lord seen by one of their number. The two from Emmaus would not be sorry that they had been forestalled. It would be a welcome confirmation of their own experience. On the other hand, the company in Jerusalem would be glad to hear their tale for the same reason. So they told it circumstantially (τὰ ἐν τῇ ὁδῶ, ver. 35).

Vv. 36-43. Jesus appears to the eleven (cf. Mk. xvi. 14, John xx. 19-23).—Ver.

36. ἔστη ἐν μέσῳ a. suggests an appearance as sudden as the departure from the two brethren.—Ver. 37. πνεῦμα, a spirit, i.e., a form recognisable as that of Jesus, but of Jesus not risen but come from the world of the dead disembodied or only with an apparent body; therefore they were terrified at the sight, notwithstanding what they had heard.—Ver. 38. τί τεταραγμένοι ἐστέ; why are ye disturbed? or about what are ye disturbed? taking τί as object of τεταρ. (Schanz).—Ver. 39. τὰς χεῖράς μου, etc.: Jesus shows His hands and feet with the wounds to satisfy them of His identity (ὅτι ἐγὼ εἰμι αὐτός). Then He bids them touch Him (ψηλαφήσατέ με) to satisfy themselves of His substantiality.—ἴδετε, see with the mind; with the eye in case of the preceding ἴδετε.—ὅτι: either that, or because.—Ver. 40. Very nearly John xx. 20 and possibly an interpolation. It seems superfluous after ver. 39.—Ver. 41. ἀπὸ τῆς χαρᾶς, a psychological touch quite in Lk.'s manner. Cf. xxii. 45: there asleep from grief, here unbelievers from joy. Hahn takes χαρά objectively.—τι βρώσιμον, anything eatable, here

ὄπτοῦ μέρος, καὶ ἀπὸ μελισσίου κηρίου.<sup>1</sup> 43. καὶ λαβὼν ἐνώπιον αὐτῶν ἔφαγεν. 44. εἶπε δὲ αὐτοῖς,<sup>2</sup> "Οὗτοι οἱ λόγοι,<sup>3</sup> οὓς ἐλάλησα πρὸς ὑμᾶς ἔτι ὢν σὺν ὑμῖν, ὅτι δεῖ πληρωθῆναι πάντα τὰ γεγραμμένα ἐν τῷ νόμῳ Μωσέως καὶ προφήταις<sup>4</sup> καὶ ψαλμοῖς περὶ ἐμοῦ." 45. Τότε διήνοιξεν αὐτῶν τὸν νοῦν, τοῦ συνιέναι τὰς γραφάς· 46. καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, "Ὅτι οὕτω γέγραπται, καὶ οὕτως ἔδει<sup>5</sup> παθεῖν τὸν Χριστόν, καὶ ἀναστῆναι ἐκ νεκρῶν τῇ τρίτῃ ἡμέρᾳ, 47. καὶ κηρυχθῆναι ἐπὶ τῷ ὀνόματι αὐτοῦ μετάνοιαν καὶ<sup>6</sup> ἄφῃσιν ἁμαρτιῶν εἰς πάντα τὰ ἔθνη, ἀρξάμενον<sup>7</sup> ἀπὸ Ἱερουσαλήμ. 48. ὑμεῖς δὲ ἐστε<sup>8</sup>

<sup>1</sup> καὶ ἀπο μελ. κηρ. omitted in  $\aleph$ ABDL (Tisch.; W.H., text, with the words in marg.). A Syrian and Western interpolation.

<sup>2</sup> πρὸς αὐτοὺς in  $\aleph$ BLX 33.

<sup>3</sup> Add μου ABDL 33.

<sup>4</sup> B has τοὺς προφ. (W.H.).

<sup>5</sup> καὶ οὕτως εἶδει omitted in  $\aleph$ BCDL a b c e ff<sup>2</sup>; an explanatory addition.

<sup>6</sup> εἰς in  $\aleph$ B (Tisch., W.H., text). CD have καὶ (W.H. marg.).

<sup>7</sup> ἀρξάμενον in  $\aleph$ BCLNX 33 (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>8</sup>  $\aleph$ BCL have ὑμεῖς without δε, and BD omit ἐστε.

only in N.T.—Ver. 42. ἀπὸ μελισσίου κηρίου, of a bee-comb. The adjective μελ. occurs nowhere else. κηρίον is the diminutive of κηρός. The words are probably a gloss.—Ver. 43. That Jesus ate is carefully stated. The materiality thus evinced seems inconsistent with the pneumatic nature of Christ's body as suggested by sudden appearing and departure, and with the immortal form of embodied life generally. Hahn suggests that the materiality was assumed by Jesus for the moment to satisfy the disciples that He had a body, and that He was risen. Euthy. Zig. expresses a similar view, stating that Jesus ate and digested supernaturally (ὑπερφυσῶς), and that what He did to help the faith of the disciples was exceptional in reference to the immortal condition of the body, which can have nothing to do with wounds or food (οὐδεὶς γὰρ ἕτερος μετὰ τὴν ἀφθαρσίαν τοῦ σώματος ὡτειλάς ἔξει, ἢ βρώσιν προσήσεται).

Vv. 44-49. Parting words.—εἶπε δὲ αὐτοῖς: it is at this point, if anywhere, that room must be made for an extended period of occasional intercourse between Jesus and His disciples such as Acts i. 3 speaks of. It is conceivable that what follows refers to another occasion. But Lk. takes no pains to point that out. His narrative reads as if he were still relating the incidents of the same meeting. In his Gospel the post-resurrection scenes seem all to fall within a single day, that of the resurrection.—οὗτοι οἱ λόγοι, etc., these are the words. With Euthy. Zig. we naturally ask: which? (οὗτοι· ποῖοι; and there he leaves it). Have we here the concluding fragment of a longer discourse not given by Lk., possibly the end of a document containing a report of the words of Jesus generally (so J. Weiss in Meyer)? As they stand in Lk.'s narrative the sense must be: these events (death and resurrection) fulfil the words I spoke to you before my death. If that be the meaning the mode of expression is peculiar.—ἐν τ. ν. Μωσέως, etc.: Moses, Prophets, Psalms, a unity (no article before προφήταις or ψαλμοῖς) = the whole O.T. canon. So most. Or, these three parts of the O.T. the main sources of the Messianic proof (Meyer, Hahn, etc.). The latter the more likely.—Ver. 45 points to detailed exposition of Messianic texts, generally referred to in ver. 44, as in the case of the two brethren.—Ver. 46 gives the conclusion of the expository discourse in Christ's own words (καὶ εἶπεν, ὅτι) = the gist of prophecy is: the suffering and resurrection of the Christ, and the preaching in the name of the Risen One, to all nations, of repentance unto the remission of sins.—Ver. 47. ἀρξάμενοι: this well-approved reading gives a satisfactory sense. We have to suppose a pause and then Jesus resuming says to the eleven—"beginning," the implied though not expressed thought being: this preaching of repentance to the nations is to be your work; or go ye

μάρτυρες τούτων. 49. καὶ ἰδοῦ, ἐγὼ ἀποστέλλω<sup>1</sup> τὴν ἐπαγγελίαν τοῦ πατρός μου ἐφ' ὑμᾶς· ὑμεῖς δὲ καθίσατε ἐν τῇ πόλει Ἱερουσαλήμ,<sup>2</sup> ἕως οὗ ἐνδύσησθε δύναμιν ἐξ ὕψους."<sup>3</sup>

50. Ἐξήγαγε δὲ αὐτοὺς ἕξω<sup>4</sup> ἕως εἰς<sup>5</sup> Βηθανίαν· καὶ ἐπάρας τὰς χεῖρας αὐτοῦ, εὐλόγησεν αὐτούς. 51. καὶ ἐγένετο ἐν τῷ εὐλογεῖν αὐτὸν αὐτούς, διέστη ἀπ' αὐτῶν, καὶ ἀνεφέρετο εἰς τὸν οὐρανόν.<sup>6</sup> 52. καὶ αὐτοὶ προσκυνήσαντες αὐτόν,<sup>7</sup> ὑπέστρεψαν εἰς Ἱερουσαλήμ μετὰ χαρᾶς μεγάλης· 53. καὶ ἦσαν διαπαντός ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, αἰνοῦντες καὶ εὐλογοῦντες<sup>8</sup> τὸν Θεόν. Ἀμήν.<sup>9</sup>

<sup>1</sup> καὶ ἰδου ἐγω in ABC al. (W.H.); omit ἰδου ΞDL (Tisch.). Ξ<sup>e</sup>BLXΔ 33 have εξαποστέλλω (Tisch., W.H.).

<sup>2</sup> Omit ἱερ. ΞBCDL codd. vet. Lat.

<sup>3</sup> ἐξ ὑψους δυναμιν in ΞBCL 33.

<sup>4</sup> Omit ἐξω ΞBCL 1, 33.

<sup>5</sup> For εἰς ΞBCDL 1, 33 have προς.

<sup>6</sup> καὶ ανεφ. εἰς τ. ουρ. is wanting in Ξ*D a b c e l ff<sup>2</sup>. A "Western non-interpolation," W.H. App.

<sup>7</sup> προσκυν. αὐτον wanting in D a b e ff<sup>2</sup>. A "Western non-interpolation," W.H. App.

<sup>8</sup> αἰνουντες only in D a b e ff<sup>2</sup> (Tisch.). ΞBC*L have εὐλογοῦντες only (W.H. text).

<sup>9</sup> Ἀμήν is wanting in ΞC*DL 1, 33 al.

and do this—beginning at Jerusalem.—Ver. 48. μάρτυρες τ., the witnessing function refers mainly to the resurrection, not exclusively as i. 2 shows.—Ver. 49. τὴν ἐπαγγελίαν τ. π.: the promise is the Spirit spoken of in prophetic oracles (Is. xlv. i., Joel ii. 28, etc.).—καθίσατε, sit still, patiently but with high hope.—ἕως οὗ: without ἄν, because the power is expected to come without fail.—ἐνδύσησθε: till ye be invested, a natural figure, and no mere Hebraism. Cf. Rom. xiii. 14, Gal. iii. 27. There may be a reference to warlike armour (δίκην πανοπλίας, Euthy. Zig.).

Vv. 50-53. Farewell! (cf. Mk. xvi. 19, 20, Acts i. 9-12).—Ver. 50. ἐξήγαγε: does this imply that Jesus walked through the streets of Jerusalem towards Bethany visible to all? Assuming that it does, some (e.g., Holtz. in H. C.) find here a contradiction of the statement in Acts x. 41 that Jesus was manifested after His resurrection only to chosen witnesses.—ἕξω: the best MSS. leave this out, and it seems superfluous after ἐξήγ.; but such repetitions of the preposition are by no means uncommon in Greek (examples in Bornemann).—ἕως πρὸς (εἰς T.R.): this reading adopted by the revisers they render: "until they were over against," which brings the indication of place into harmony with that in Acts i. 12. Possibly harmonistic considerations influenced transcription, leading, e.g., to the adoption of πρὸς instead of εἰς (in AC<sup>3</sup>X, etc.). Bethany lay on the eastern slope of Olivet, about a mile beyond the summit.—Ver. 51. διέστη, parted; taken by itself the verb might point merely to a temporary separation, but even apart from the next clause, referring to the ascension, it is evidently meant to denote a final leaving.—καὶ ἀνεφέρετο, etc.: the absence of this clause from ΞD and some old Latin codd. may justify suspicion of a gloss, meant to bring the Gospel statement into line with Acts. But on the other hand, that the author of both books should make a distinct statement concerning the final departure of Jesus from the world in the one as well as in the other was to be expected.—Ver. 52. μετὰ χαρᾶς μεγάλης, with great joy, the joy of men convinced that their Lord was risen and gone up to glory, and that great events were impending in connection with the promise of the Spirit.—Ver. 53. διὰ παντός (χρόνον understood), continually, i.e., at the hours of worship when the temple was open. By frequenting the temple the disciples remained faithful to the programme "beginning at Jerusalem". To the Jew first, and with the Jew as far and as long as possible: such was Lk.'s habitual attitude; manifest throughout in the Gospel and in Acts.

THE GOSPEL

ACCORDING TO

JOHN

INTRODUCTION.

AUTHORSHIP. The importance of ascertaining the authorship of the Fourth Gospel can hardly be exaggerated. In no other Gospel have we the direct testimony of an eye-witness. Luke expressly informs us that his information, although carefully sifted, is at second hand. If in Mark we have the reminiscences of the Apostle Peter, these are related not by himself but by his companion and interpreter John Mark. In the first Gospel we probably have in a more or less original form the collection of our Lord's sayings which Papias tells us was made by Matthew; but certainly the original work of Matthew did not exactly coincide with our present Gospel, and to what extent alteration has been made upon it, it is not easy to say. But the Fourth Gospel professes to be the work of an eye-witness, and of an eye-witness who enjoyed an intimacy with our Lord allowed to none besides. If this claim be true, and if the Gospel be indeed the work of the Apostle John, then we have not only the narrative of one who saw and was a part of what he records, but we have a picture of our Lord by one who knew Him better than any one else did.

On examination the contents of this Gospel are found to be of such a character as to make it imperative that we should know whether we can trust its statements or not. The author of the Gospel not only expresses his own belief in our Lord's divinity, but he puts words into the mouth of Jesus which even on close scrutiny seem to many to form an explicit claim to pre-existence and thus to imply a claim to divinity. If these claims and statements merely reflect the belief and opinion of the third or fourth generation and not the very mind of Christ Himself, then they are important mainly as historical evidence of a growing tradition and not as giving us the firm basis on which the Church may build. But if an apostle was responsible for the Gospel, then the probability is that the utterances which are referred to Christ nearly, if not absolutely, represent His very words, and that the doctrinal position of the author himself is not one we can lightly set aside. For, although apostolic authorship does not guarantee absolute accuracy in detail, and although we cannot determine the relation of the record to the words actually spoken by Jesus until we have ascertained the object and point of view of the writer, yet apostolic authorship not only fixes the date within certain limits, but also determines to a considerable extent the probable spirit, attitude, means, and object of the writer.

Critics who find themselves unable to admit apostolic authorship lay stress upon the value of the Gospel as exhibiting the faith of the Church in the early part of the second century and the grounds on which that faith rested. Thus Weizsäcker declares that the debates regarding the divinity of Christ are a mere reflex of the time in which the evangelist lived—a time when, according to Pliny, Christians were accustomed to sing hymns to Christ as God and were creating a fuller dogma of His divinity. The Johannine Christ occupies no relation to the Law, because for the Church of the evangelist's day the Law was no longer of present interest as it had been in a former generation. The strife exhibited in the Gospel did not belong to the life of Christ, but is a strife of the Epigoni.

Holtzmann is of the same opinion. The Gospel has value as a mirror of the times in which the writer lived and of the experiences through which the Church had reached that period; but when we proceed to use the Gospel as a record of our Lord's life we must bear in mind that the author meant to portray the image of Christ as that image lived in his own soul and in the Church for which he wrote; and as, in his view, it should live in the Church of all times as the image of the Godhead. Oscar Holtzmann (Das Johannes-evangelium, 1887, p. 137) believes that the writer sought to write a life of Jesus which should be in keeping with the thought of his time; and with this object he used the material furnished by the Synoptists and by the oral tradition of his day, correcting and amplifying to suit his purpose.

Schürer (Vorträge d. theol. Konferenz zu Giessen, 1889, Über d. gegenwärtigen Stand d. Johanneischen Frage) maintains that the worth of the fourth Gospel lies, not in its historical narrative, but in its expression of the conviction that in Jesus Christ God revealed Himself. This is the essence of Christianity; and this is the fundamental thought of the Gospel. Nowhere in the New Testament is it presented with such clearness, with such ardent faith, with such victorious confidence. Accordingly, though this Gospel as a source of history must take a lower place than the synoptic Gospels, it must always have its worth as a witness of the Christian faith.

Doubtless the Gospel has a value, whoever is its author, and whatever its date. But if it is not historically reliable and if the utterances attributed to our Lord were not really uttered by Him but are merely the creation of the writer and ascribed to the Founder of the Church to account for and justify some of its developments, plainly its value is widely different from that which attaches to a reliable record of the words and actions of Jesus. The faith and life of the Church of the second century is not normative; and if in this Gospel all that we have is a reflex of that life given in terms of the life of Christ, we have, no doubt, a very interesting document, but not a document on which we can build our knowledge of our Lord. Nay, professing, as this record does, to be historically reliable, the Church has been throughout its history gravely in error regarding the claims of its Founder, and this error lies at the door of the author of the Gospel. It is of the first importance, therefore, that we ascertain whether the writer had the means of being historically trustworthy, whether he was an eye-witness or was entirely dependent on others for his information.

1. External evidence in favour of Johannine authorship. In examining the Christian literature of the second century with a view to ascertain the belief of the Church regarding the authorship of the Fourth Gospel, it must be borne in mind that there are many instances in which the classical writers of antiquity were not quoted for some centuries after their works were published. The character and position of the New Testament writings, however, made it likely that they would at once and frequently be referred to. But although the second century was prolific of Christian writings, their extant remains are unfortunately scanty. We might have expected definite information from the exegetical writings of Papias and Basileides, and possibly some allusions in the histories of Hegesippus, but of these and other important documents only the names and a few extracts survive. It is also to be borne in mind that the mode of quotation in vogue at that time was different from our own. Books were not so plentiful, and they were more cumbrous. Accordingly there was more quotation from memory and little of the exactness which in our day is considered desirable. It was a common practice with early writers to weave Scriptural language into their own text without pausing to say whence these allusions were derived. The consequence is that while such allusions may seem to one reader to carry evidence that the writer is making use of such and such a book of Scripture, it is always open to a more sceptical reader to say that the inexactness of the allusion is rather a proof that the book of Scripture had not been seen, and that some traditional saying was the source of the quotation. And even where explicit quotations occur, no light may be thrown on the authorship of the book quoted, except in so far as they indicate the date of its composition.

It is not questioned that in the last quarter of the second century the Fourth Gospel was accepted by the Church as the work of the Apostle John, and was recognised as canonical. This is a fact not questioned, but its importance may easily be underrated and its significance missed. Opponents of the Johannine authorship have declared it to be "totally unnecessary to account" for this remarkable consent of opinion. But the very fact that a Gospel so obviously different from the synoptic Gospels should have been unanimously received as Apostolic is a weighty testimony. Its significance has been admirably summarised by Archdeacon Watkins (Bampton Lectures, p. 47): "It is not that the Fourth Gospel was known and read as the work of St. John in the year A.D. 190 or 180 or 170; but that it was known and read through all the extent of Christendom, in churches varying in origin and language and history, in Lyons and Rome, in Carthage and Alexandria, in Athens and Corinth, in Ephesus and Sardis and Hierapolis, in Antioch and Edessa; that the witness is of Churches to a sacred book which was read in their services, and about which there could be no mistake, and of individuals who had sacrificed the greatest good of temporal life, and were ready to sacrifice life itself as a witness to its truth; that these individual witnesses were men of culture and rich mental endowment, with full access to materials for judgment, and full power to exercise that judgment; that their witness was given in the face of hostile heathenism and opposing heresy, which demanded caution in argument and reserve in statement; and that this witness is clear, definite, unquestioned".

To this universal consent the sole exceptions were Marcion and the Alogi, and possibly Gaius.<sup>1</sup> During the decade A.D. 160-170 there existed in Asia Minor some persons who discovered in the Gospel traces of Gnostic and Montanistic teaching. They held their place in the Christian Church, but discarded the Johannine writings and ascribed them to Cerinthus. Epiphanius gives them the name of ἄλογοι [unreasonable, irrational] because they did not accept the Logos proclaimed by John.<sup>2</sup> Harnack justly maintains that this is

<sup>1</sup> See Rendel Harris' Hermas in Arcadia and other Essays, 1896.

<sup>2</sup> Epiphanius, Haeres., 51, 3, defines this heresy as ἀποβάλλουσαν Ἰωάννου τὰς βίβλους. Ἐπεὶ οὖν τὸν λόγον οὐ δέχονται τὸν παρὰ Ἰωάννου κεκηρυγμένον, ἄλογοι κληθήσονται. See Harnack, Das N. Test. um d. Jahr 200, pp. 58-70;

"of the highest significance" for the history of the Canon; but it has little or no significance for the criticism of the Gospel, because the rejection of the Gospel proceeded wholly on dogmatic grounds. Its ascription to Cerinthus, an impossible author, betrays the recklessness of the judgment pronounced; while the naming of a contemporary and fellow-townsmen of the Apostle may be accepted as an indication of the true date of the Gospel. Some of the scholars who are best informed regarding the second century, such as Hilgenfeld and Salmon, are inclined to believe that no such sect as the Alogi ever existed, although one or two individuals may have held the opinions identified with that nickname. If they existed, their rejection of the writings of John demonstrates that previous to their time these writings had been accepted as Apostolic and authoritative.<sup>1</sup> Marcion's neglect of the Johannine books is equally unimportant for the criticism of the Gospel.

In the writings of Irenaeus, who was born, according to Lipsius, about A.D. 130, and whose great work against Gnosticism may be dated between 180-185, the Fourth Gospel is referred to the Apostle John and is regarded as canonical. In a well-known passage (Contra Haer., III., xi., 8) this representative writer even argues that in the nature of things there can be neither more nor fewer than four Gospels, as there are four zones of the world in which we live, and four principal winds. In accordance with this natural fourfoldness the Word who designs all things has given us the Gospel under four aspects but united and unified by one Spirit. Additional importance has been given to this statement by the suggestion of Dr. Taylor of Cambridge that Irenaeus borrowed this idea from Hermas. This writer, who belongs to a much earlier period than Irenaeus, in speaking of the Church says: "Whereas thou sawest her seated on a couch, the position is a firm one; for the couch has four feet and standeth firmly, for the world too is upheld by means of four elements".<sup>1</sup> If we could accept Dr. Taylor's view and believe that the four Gospels are here alluded to, we should have the earliest testimony to our four canonical Gospels; but it may so reasonably be doubted whether the reference is to four Gospels that the passage cannot be appealed to without hesitation.

Watkins' B. L., p. 123; Salmon's Introd., p. 229; Sanday's B. L., p. 64; and cf. Irenaeus, Haer., III., xi., 9.

<sup>1</sup> Dr. Plummer, after discussing the rejection of the Gospel by Marcion and the Alogi, proceeds: "All this tends to show that if the Fourth Gospel was rejected in certain quarters for a time, this tells little or nothing against its genuineness. Indeed it may fairly be said to tell the other way; for it shows that the universal recognition of the Gospel, which we find existing from A.D. 170 onwards, was no mere blind enthusiasm, but a victory of truth over baseless, though not unnatural, suspicion. Moreover, the fact that these overwary Christians assigned the Gospel to Cerinthus is evidence that the Gospel was in their opinion written by a contemporary of St. John. To concede this is to concede the whole question" (Cambridge Greek Test.; Gospel acc. to St. John, n. 24).

But it is the connection of Irenaeus with Polycarp which has always been considered the significant element in his testimony. Eusebius (H. E., v., 20) has preserved a letter written by Irenaeus to Florinus, in which he reminds him how they had together listened to Polycarp in their youth: "I distinctly remember the incidents of that time better than events of recent occurrence; for the lessons received in childhood, growing with the growth of the soul, become identified with it; so that I can describe the very place in which the blessed Polycarp used to sit when he discoursed, and his goings out and his comings in, and his manner of life and his personal appearance, and the discourses which he held before the people; and how he would describe his intercourse with John and with the rest who had seen the Lord, and how he would relate their words. And what were the accounts he had heard from them about the Lord, and about His miracles, and about His teaching, how Polycarp, as having received them from eye-witnesses of the life of the Word [τῆς ζωῆς τοῦ Λόγου], used to give an account harmonising on all points with the Scriptures."<sup>2</sup> The Scripture in which "the life of the Word" can be traced is the Fourth Gospel. Polycarp does not refer his hearers to that Gospel, because having himself been a pupil of John, he preferred to relate what he had heard from him. But Irenaeus recognised that Polycarp's oral tradition was in harmony with the Gospel. Besides, John lived to the times of Trajan, whose reign began in A.D. 98, while Polycarp was born not later than A.D. 70, and was put to death in 156, so that the first thirty years of his life coincided with the last years of John's, and the last thirty years with the youth of Irenaeus. This being so, can it fairly be said to be likely that after such intimacy with Polycarp as Irenaeus claims, he should not know whether John had written a Gospel or not? Is it conceivable that a young man of an intelligent and inquiring turn of mind should have been in daily communication with a pupil of the Apostle's, and should never have discovered the origin of the most remarkable document of primitive Christianity?

But Irenaeus is not the earliest writer who ascribes the Fourth

<sup>1</sup> See Taylor's Hermas and the Four Gospels. Cambridge, 1892.

<sup>2</sup> This argument is put in an interesting and conclusive form by Dr. Dale in his Living Christ and the Four Gospels, pp. 149-151, 281-284.

Gospel to the Apostle John. This distinction belongs to Theophilus of Antioch. His treatise, Ad Autolyicum, was probably of an earlier date than Irenaeus' great work, and in this treatise, speaking of inspired men, he says: "one of whom, John, says, In the beginning was the Word".

The date of the Muratorian Canon is so much debated that it cannot be cited as a witness anterior to Irenaeus. But it records an interesting tradition of the origin of the Gospel. "The fourth of the Gospels is by the disciple John. He was urged by his fellow disciples and bishops and said, 'Fast with me this day and for three days and whatever shall be revealed to any of us let us relate it'. The same night it was revealed to the Apostle Andrew that John should write the whole in his own name, and that all the rest should revise it." Whatever may be thought of this tradition, it is at all events evidence that for some considerable time prior to the publication of the Muratorian Canon the Fourth Gospel had been accepted as the work of John.

The esteem in which the Fourth Gospel was held about the middle of the second century is evinced by the place it holds in the Diatessaron of Tatian. This harmony of the four Gospels opens with a portion of the Fourth Gospel. What may reasonably be gathered from the existence of such a work is fairly stated by Harnack in his article on Tatian in the Encyc. Brit.: "We learn from the Diatessaron that about A.D. 160 our four Gospels had already taken a place of prominence in the Church, and that no others had done so; that in particular the Fourth Gospel had already taken a fixed place alongside of the three synoptics". But this is too modest an inference. Prof. Sanday has shown that the text used in the composition of the Diatessaron does not represent the original autograph of the Gospel, nor a first copy of it, but that several copyings must have intervened between the original and Tatian's text; that in fact this text was derived "from a copy that is already very corrupt, a copy perhaps farther removed (if every aberration is taken into account) from the original text than the text which was committed to print in the sixteenth century. This is a fact of the very highest significance, and it is one that the negative critics in Germany have, to the best of my belief, entirely overlooked."<sup>1</sup> The date of the Gospel is thus pushed back considerably.

With the writings of Tatian's master, Justin, we pass from the second into the first half of the second century. Dr. Hort places his martyrdom in the year A.D. 149, and his writings may, with Lightfoot, be dated in the fifth decade of the century. That he made use of the Fourth Gospel, although hotly contested a few years ago, is now, since the investigations of Drummond and Abbot, scarcely denied.<sup>1</sup> And indeed several passages in Justin's writings are indisputable echoes of the Gospel. In the Dialogue with Trypho (c. 105) he expressly states that his knowledge of Jesus as the only begotten of the Father and as the Logos was derived from the Gospels, that is, from the Fourth Gospel, for none of the synoptics speak of the Logos. In his First Apology (c. 63) he says of the Jews: "They are justly upbraided by Christ Himself as knowing neither the Father nor the Son". In the same Apology (c. 61), in explaining baptism, he says: "For Christ also said, Except ye be born again ye shall in no wise enter into the Kingdom of Heaven". Other passages have a similar bearing.

<sup>1</sup> See also Harris' Preliminary Study, etc., p. 56.

In the Apostolic Fathers we find no express references to the Fourth Gospel, but there are not wanting echoes which indicate a familiarity with its teaching. Thus in the epistles of Ignatius written in the year A.D. 110 while the writer was on his way to martyrdom, are found such expressions as "the Spirit . . . knoweth whence it cometh and whither it goeth," an obvious reminiscence of our Lord's conversation with Nicodemus. And when we find Ignatius speaking of Jesus as "the door of the Father," "the Shepherd," "the Son who is His Word," the probability is that these expressions were derived from the Gospel.

Polycarp's one epistle dates from the same year A.D. 110. It is a brief letter, and no reference to the Fourth Gospel occurs in it. But he quotes from the First Epistle of John, and as no one doubts that the Gospel and the Epistle are from the same hand, it can at any rate be concluded that the writer of the Gospel "flourished before Polycarp wrote".

Papias of Hierapolis, although not usually numbered among the Apostolic Fathers, was a contemporary of Polycarp, and his life overlapped that of the Apostle John by about twenty-five years. He wrote the earliest known commentary, entitled An Exposition of our Lord's Oracles. Most unfortunately this book is lost, and among the many rich discoveries which modern research is making none could be more valuable than the discovery of this work of Papias. The fact remains that he did write it, and therefore had some written material to proceed upon. And significant allusion is made to this work in an old Latin argument prefixed to the Gospel in a MS. of the ninth century, which says: "The Gospel of John was revealed and given to the churches by John while he still remained in the body, as one named Papias of Hierapolis, a beloved disciple of John, related in his five books of expositions".

<sup>1</sup> See Abbot's Critical Essays; Purves, Test. of Justin; Norton, Genuineness of the Gospels.

The testimony of heretics is equally decisive. From the decade A.D. 160-170 we receive a significant witness in the commentary on the Gospel of John by Heracleon, a pupil or companion of Valentinus,<sup>1</sup> (γνώριμον is Origen's word). Mr. Brooke, who edited the extant portions of this commentary for Armitage Robinson's Texts and Studies, arrives at the conclusion that it must be dated shortly after the death of Valentinus, that is to say, not much later than A.D. 160. "The rise of commentaries shows an advanced stage in the history of the text of the Fourth Gospel" (Lightfoot, Bibl. Essays, p. 111). And the reason for Heracleon's choosing this Gospel as the subject of a commentary is that Valentinus and his school borrowed from it much of their phraseology, and hoped by putting their own interpretation on it to gain currency for their views. We have, then, this remarkable circumstance that shortly after the middle of the second century the Fourth Gospel occupied such a position of authority in the Church that the Gnostics considered it of importance to secure its voice in favour of their views. No wonder that even Vollmar should exclaim: "Ah! Great God! if between A.D. 125 and 155 a commentary was composed on John's Gospel such as that of which Origen has preserved considerable extracts, what yet remains to be discussed? It is very certain that it is all over with the critical thesis of the composition of the Fourth Gospel in the middle of the second century."<sup>2</sup>

But there is evidence that even an earlier Gnostic teacher made use of this Gospel. Hippolytus (Philos., vii., 22), in giving an account of the opinions of Basileides, who flourished at Alexandria about the year A.D. 125, quotes him in the following terms: "This," says he (i.e., Basileides), "is that which is said in the Gospels, 'That was the true light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world'". The words are cited precisely as they stand in the Fourth Gospel, and as they are not words of Jesus, which might have been handed down through some other channel, but words of the evangelist himself, they prove that the Gospel existed before the year A.D. 125. The attempt to evade this conclusion by the suggestion that

<sup>1</sup> Valentinus himself used "integro instrumento," the whole N.T. as Tertullian received it. Tert., Praescr., 38.

<sup>2</sup> See Reynolds, Pulpit Com., p. 29.

Hippolytus is quoting the followers of Basileides rather than himself has been finally disposed of by Matthew Arnold (God and the Bible, 268-9). But even Basileides was not the earliest Gnostic who used this Gospel. Hippolytus gives an account of the previously existing sects, the Naasseni and Peratae, which proves that they made large use of this Gospel. Already in the earliest years of the second century the Fourth Gospel was an authoritative document.

What must necessarily be inferred from this use of the Gospel by the Gnostics of the second century? The conclusion drawn by Ezra Abbot is as follows: "It was then generally received both by Gnostics and their opponents between the years A.D. 120 and 130. What follows? It follows that the Gnostics of that date received it because they could not help it. They would not have admitted the authority of a book, which could be reconciled with their doctrines only by the most forced interpretation, if they could have destroyed its authority by denying its genuineness. Its genuineness could then be easily ascertained. Ephesus was one of the principal cities of the Eastern world, the centre of extensive commerce, the metropolis of Asia Minor. Hundreds, if not thousands, of people were living who had known the Apostle John. The question whether he, the beloved disciple, had committed to writing his recollections of his Master's life and teaching, was one of the greatest interest. The fact of the reception of the Fourth Gospel as his work at so early a date, by parties so violently opposed to each other, proves that the evidence of its genuineness was decisive."<sup>1</sup>

The Clementine Homilies and the Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs, which respectively represent the Ebionite and Nazarene branches of Judaistic Christianity, betray familiarity, if not with the Fourth Gospel, certainly with its teaching and phraseology.

In the face of this external evidence, it has been found impossible to maintain the late date which was ascribed to the Gospel by several eminent critics of the last generation. There can be no doubt that the Gospel existed in the earliest years of the second century, and that it was even then esteemed authoritative. That the Apostle John was its author, is nowhere explicitly stated before the middle of the century; but that this was from the first believed, may legitimately be inferred both from the esteem in which it was held, and from the fact that no other name was ever connected with the Gospel until the impossible Cerinthian authorship was suggested by the insignificant and biassed sect of the Alogi. Schürer, indeed, says that "the utmost one can admit in an unprejudiced way, is that the external evidence is evenly balanced pro and con, and leads to no decision. Perhaps, however, it would be truer to say it is more unfavourable than favourable to the authenticity." Such a conclusion can only excite astonishment.

<sup>1</sup> Critical Essays, p. 91.

2. Internal evidence of Johannine authorship. The internal evidence has usually been grouped under four heads, showing respectively that the author was (1) a Jew, (2) a Palestinian, (3) an eye-witness, (4) the Apostle John.

(1) That the writer was a Jew is proved by his Hebraistic style, by his knowledge of Hebrew and Aramaic, and by his familiarity with Jewish traditions, ideas, modes of thought, expectations, customs. Although written in Greek which is neither awkward nor ungrammatical, the Gospel uses a small number of words and only such as are familiar in ordinary conversation. The vocabulary is much more limited than that of the well-educated Paul, and the style reveals none of the nicety found in the Epistle to the Hebrews. One chief distinction between Hebrew and Greek style is that the Greek writer by means of multitudinous particles exhibits with precision the course of thought by which each clause is connected with that which goes before it · the Hebrew writer contents himself with laying thought alongside of thought and leaving it to the reader to discover the connection. The most casual reader of the Fourth Gospel speedily finds that the difficulty of understanding it is the difficulty of perceiving the sequence of the clauses. Any one accustomed to a Greek style would on reading the Fourth Gospel conclude that its author was not familiar with Greek literature.<sup>1</sup>

It would also naturally be concluded that the writer was a Jew from his inserting translations of Aramaic names, as in i. 38, i. 41, i. 42, ix. 7, xix. 13, xix. 17, xx. 21 ; and especially from his familiarity with Jewish customs, ideas, and institutions. Thus he knows that it is a Jewish custom to sit under the fig tree, i. 49 ; to have water-pots for purposes of purification, ii. 6 ; to embalm the dead, xix. 40 ; to wash the feet before meals, xiii. 4. He is familiar with Jewish ideas, as that it is wrong for a Rabbi to speak with a woman, iv. 27 , that disease is the result of sin, ix. 2 ; that Elias was to come before the Messiah, i. 21 ; that it defiles a Jew to enter a Gentile dwelling, xviii. 29. So intimate an acquaintance with the Jewish Messianic ideas as is shown in chap. vii. cannot easily be ascribed to any but a Jew. Jewish institutions are also well known : Levites and priests are distinguished, i. 19; the composition and action of the Sanhedrim is well understood; the less frequented feasts (ἑγκαίρια, x. 22) are known. He is also aware of the chief point in dispute between Jews and Samaritans, iv. 20; the length of time the Temple has been in building, ii. 21; that synagogue and temple are the favourite resort of teachers, xviii. 20.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> See further in Lightfoot's Bibl. Essays, p. 16 ff. Weiss, Introd., ii., 359.

Two objections, however, have been raised. 1st. It is said that the author throughout his Gospels betrays a marked antipathy to the Jews. He uses the name as a recognised designation of the enemies of Jesus; "the Jews" sought to kill Him; "no man spake openly of Him for fear of 'the Jews'". They are spoken of as "the children of the devil". This objection, however, is baseless. In the synoptic Gospels Jesus, Himself a Jew, is represented as pronouncing invectives against the leaders of the people quite as strong as any to be found in the Fourth Gospel. In John all the apostles are Jews, and it is in this Gospel the great saying is preserved that "salvation is of the Jews". 2nd. Matthew Arnold and the author of Supernatural Religion have maintained that the Jews and their usages are spoken of in this Gospel as if they belonged to a race different from the writer's. "The water-pots at Cana are set 'after the manner of purifying of the Jews'; . . . 'now the Jews' passover was nigh at hand'. . . It seems almost impossible to think that a Jew born and bred—a man like the Apostle John—could ever have come to speak so. . . . A Jew talking of the Jews' passover and of a dispute of some of John's disciples with a Jew about purifying. It is like an Englishman writing of the Derby as the English people's Derby, or talking of a dispute between some of Mr. Cobden's disciples and an Englishman about free trade. An Englishman would never speak so."<sup>2</sup> An Englishman who had for many years been resident abroad and who was writing for foreigners would use precisely such forms of expression.

(2) The author was a Palestinian. A Jew of the dispersion, a Hellenist, would probably betray himself, not only by writing a freer Greek style, but by showing a less intimate knowledge of the localities of the Holy Land, and by using the LXX., and not the original Hebrew, in quoting from the Old Testament. In regard to the evidence afforded by a knowledge of localities, Professor Ramsay lays down the following: "It is impossible for any one to invent a tale, whose scene lies in a foreign land, without betraying in slight details his ignorance of the scenery and circumstances amid which the event is described as taking place. Unless the writer studiously avoids details, and confines himself to names and generalities, he is certain to commit numerous errors. Even the most laborious and minute study of the circumstances of the country, in which he is to lay his scene, will not preserve him from such errors. He must live long, and observe carefully in the country, if he wishes to invent a tale which will not betray his ignorance in numberless details. Allusions of French or German authors to English life supply the readiest illustration of this principle." Now the author of the Fourth Gospel betrays that intimate acquaintance with the localities of Palestine, which could only be possessed by a resident. He describes Bethany as "nigh unto Jerusalem, about fifteen furlongs off". Who, but one who had often walked it, would be likely to let that exact indication drop from his pen? It is the unconscious gratuitousness of full knowledge. In chap. vi. he has before his mind's eye the movements round the Sea of Galilee, which he describes. He is familiar with the Temple, with its porches and cloisters, and he knows the side of the building which people chose in cold weather. He passes from Jerusalem to the villages around, crossing brooks, and visiting gardens without once stumbling in his topographical details. This sure sign of a resident he constantly betrays, he adds to the name of a town the additional specification by which it might be distinguished from others of the same name: "Bethany beyond Jordan," "Aenon near to Salim," "Bethsaida the city of Andrew and Peter," and so forth.

<sup>1</sup> The best statement of this part of the evidence will be found in Oscar Holtzmann's Johan., pp. 188-191.

<sup>2</sup> God and the Bible, p. 251.

In a matter of this kind few are more qualified to judge than Bishop Lightfoot, who spent so much of his own life in archæological research. Here is his judgment: "Let us place ourselves in the position of one who wrote at the middle of the second century, after the later Roman invasion had swept off the scanty gleanings of the past which had been spared from the earlier. Let us ask how a romancer so situated is to make himself acquainted with the incidents, the localities, the buildings, the institutions, the modes of thought and feeling which belonged to this past age, and (as we may almost say) this bygone people. Let it be granted that here and there he must stumble upon a historical fact, that in one or two particulars he might reproduce a national characteristic. More than this would be beyond his reach. For, it will be borne in mind, he would be placed at a great disadvantage, compared with a modern writer; he would have to reconstruct history without these various appliances, maps and plates, chronological tables, books of travel, by which the author of a historical novel is so largely assisted in the present day" (Expositor, Jan., 1890, p. 13).

A few years ago the writer's ignorance of the localities he mentioned was insisted upon. But since the Palestinian Survey the tables are turned. It is now admitted that competent knowledge of the localities is shown. Schürer, e.g., says: "Among serious difficulties we need no longer reckon at the present day the supposed ignorance of Palestinian and Jewish matters from which Bretschneider and Baur inferred that the author was neither a Palestinian nor in any sense a Jew. The geographical errors and ignorance of things Jewish have more and more shrunk to a minimum." The argument now is, "admitting that the writer shows local knowledge, this does not prove that he was a native of Palestine. He may have derived his knowledge from books, or from occasional residence in the country." Professor Sanday has been at pains to show that any knowledge which could have been derived from such geographers as Pomponius Mela, Ptolemy, or Strabo, was of the scantiest possible description. Holtzmann, though strongly opposed to the Johannine authorship, admits that the topographical knowledge indicates that the author had visited the holy places, but not that he was a Palestinian. He had then been a resident in Palestine, knew the places he spoke about, and so far was not romancing.

One distinction of the Jew of the dispersion was his use of the LXX., instead of the Hebrew Bible. What Old Testament then does the writer of the Fourth Gospel use? He is found to depart from the LXX., and to use language more closely representing the Hebrew. Until a very few years ago, this was accepted as proof that he read the Hebrew, and used it. But recently there has been a growing conviction that during the Apostolic Age other versions of the Old Testament, or of some books and portions of it, were extant in Greek. And it is argued that John might have used some of these. But when it is found that in some of his quotations his language is closer to the original than that of the LXX., or than the versions of Aquila, Symmachus, and Theodotion, it is certainly reasonable to conclude that he used the Hebrew, and translated for himself, and was, therefore, a native Palestinian.<sup>1</sup>

(3) There is reason to believe that the author was an eye-witness of the events he relates. In the first place, the writer claims to be an eye-witness. This is surely of some account. The expression

<sup>1</sup> See this handled with his usual fairness by Professor Sanday, Expositor, March, 1892.

"we beheld His glory" (i. 14) need not be pressed, although considering the analogous statement of I John i. 1, it may very well be maintained that the writer had with his bodily eyes seen the manifestation of his Lord's glory. But in xix. 35 we have an explicit claim: "He that saw it bare record, and his record is true, and he knoweth that he saith true, that ye might believe". The words "he knoweth that he saith true" could hardly have been inserted by any other hand than that of the eye-witness himself. In xxi. 24 we read: "This is the disciple which testifieth of these things, and wrote these things". Whether this note was added by the writer himself, or by another hand, certainly the intention is to identify the writer with an eye-witness and participator of the events recorded. We are thus confronted with the alternative: either an eye-witness wrote this Gospel, or a forger whose genius for truth and for lying are alike inexplicable. As Renan says (Vie, xxvii.): "L'auteur y parle toujours comme témoin oculaire; il veut se faire passer pour l'Apôtre Jean. Si donc cet ouvrage n'est pas réellement de l'apôtre, il faut admettre une supercherie que l'auteur s'avouait à lui-même."

This claim is abundantly confirmed by the character of the Gospel. For we find in it such a multitude of detail as gratuitously invites the detection of error. Not only are individuals named, and so described that we seem to know them, but frequently there are added specifications of time and place which obviously are the involuntary superfluity of information which flows almost unconsciously from a full memory. Such details are: the hour at which Jesus sat on the well, the number and size of the water-pots at the marriage at Cana, the weight and value of the ointment, the number of fish at the last cast, the hour at which the nobleman's son began to amend, the hour at which Jesus took the two inquirers into His own lodging.

Circumstantiality can, no doubt, be given to a narrative by a Defoe or a Swift. But among the Jews the writing of fiction was not cultivated; and besides, the circumstantial detail of this Gospel does not belong to the world of imagination, but attaches to real objects and events, and can in many instances be verified. If in these instances the detail is found to be accurate, the presumption is that accuracy characterises those also which cannot so easily be checked; and that, therefore, the circumstantiality is due to the fact that the writer was an eye-witness of what he records.

(4) This Palestinian Jew who was himself an eye-witness of the ministry of Jesus was the Apostle John. In xxi. 24 the writer of the Gospel is identified with the disciple whom Jesus loved. This disciple was certainly one of the seven named in xxi. 2, who appear as the actors in the scene there recorded. Of these seven there were three who frequently appear in the other Gospels as the intimates of Jesus. These are Peter, James, and John. But Peter cannot have been the disciple in question, for in this chapter Peter and that disciple are spoken of separately. Neither can James be the person meant, for his early death precludes the idea of his being the author of the Gospel. It remains that John was the disciple whom Jesus loved,<sup>1</sup> the author of the Fourth Gospel. And however we interpret the intention of John in using this circumlocution to designate himself, it must not be overlooked that its employment is evidence of the Johannine authorship. In the other Gospels John is frequently spoken of by name. In this Gospel John is not once named, although from no Gospel do we gather such vivid descriptions of the Apostles. Certainly it is a most natural and sufficient explanation of this fact to suppose that John was the author of the Gospel.

Objections. But to this conclusion many critics demur. Since Bretschneider it has been continually asserted that this does not exhaust the internal evidence, and that there is that in the Fourth Gospel which makes it impossible to refer it to the Apostle John. There are evidences of dependence on the synoptists, inconsistent with the hypothesis that it was written by an Apostle who himself had been an eye-witness; of a universalism inconsistent with the fact that the Apostle John was a pillar of the Jewish Christian Church; and of a philosophical colouring which does not favour the idea that the author was a Galilean fisherman.<sup>2</sup>

The two latter objections are not formidable. Schürer shows with considerable force that up to the time of the Apostolic convention in Jerusalem John was a Jewish Christian and an upholder of the law, whereas the author of this Gospel knows the law only as the law of the Jews. Is it likely, he asks, that one who during the first twenty years of his ministry maintained the law would in his latter years so entirely repudiate it? "If during this long period the influence of the preaching of Jesus had not made John a liberal, was such a transformation probable at a still later time?" That such a transformation was very probable will be the answer of those who consider that between the earlier and the later period the Jewish economy had come to an end and that John had become the successor of Paul in a thoroughly Greek city.

<sup>1</sup> "There is no trace that in Christian antiquity this title ever suggested any one but John" (Ezra Abbot, Critical Essays, p. 73).

<sup>2</sup> For a brief but conclusive answer to these objections, see Dale's Living Christ and the Four Gospels, 149-152.

The traces of philosophical colouring have been exaggerated and misinterpreted. In the Platonic dialogues the circumstances, the speakers, and their utterances are all either created by the writer or employed to proclaim his own philosophy. To suppose that the Gospel was composed in some analogous manner is to misconceive it. No doubt in Ephesus John was brought into contact with forms of thought and with speculations which were little heard of in Palestine. And in so far as the ideas then prevalent were true, an intelligent Christian mind would necessarily bring them into relation with the manifestation of God in Christ. This process would bring to the surface much of the significance both of the life and teaching of Jesus which hitherto had been unnoticed and unused. The process is apparent in the epistles of Paul as well as in the Fourth Gospel. The idea of the Logos was a Jewish-Alexandrian idea, and that the author sought to attach his Gospel to this idea is unquestionable, but it is a very long and insecure step from this to conclude that he was himself trained in the Hellenistic philosophy of Alexandria. The Logos idea is not essential to the Fourth Gospel; it is rather the Sonship idea that is essential. But the term and the idea of the Logos are used by the author to introduce his subject to the Greek readers. As Harnack says: "The prologue is not the key to the understanding of the Gospel, but is rather intended to prepare the Hellenistic reader for its perusal".<sup>1</sup> After the introduction the Logos is never again referred to. The philosophy one finds in the Gospel is not the metaphysics of the schools, but the insight of the contemplative, brooding spirit which finds in Christ the solvent of all problems.

The originality of the author of the Fourth Gospel has recently been vigorously assailed.<sup>2</sup> It has been shown that, in certain passages, he is dependent for his phraseology on the Synoptic Gospels; and it has been urged that an Apostle and eye-witness would not thus derive from others an account of what he had himself seen. As a general rule it is of course true that an eye-witness would depend on his own reminiscences; but, presumably, no one denies that John knew and used the Synoptic Gospels; and that phrases which occur in them should have remained in his memory is not surprising. Even in the passages where these borrowings occur, there are divergences so considerable as to indicate an original witness. For, to interpret these divergences, as Oscar Holtzmann does, as misunderstandings of his sources, is rather, if it may without offence be said, a misunderstanding of John. It may rather be said that, in several instances, we find additions and corrections which are requisite for the understanding of the Synoptists. From the first three Gospels the reader might gather that our Lord's ministry extended over only one year; the Fourth Gospel definitely mentions three Passovers (ii. 13; vi. 4; xiii. 1), with a possible fourth (v. 1). The probabilities here are certainly in favour of the representation of the Fourth Gospel, and it may be shown that even in the Synoptic narratives a longer ministry is implied than that which they expressly mention. Again, the ministry in Jerusalem, as recounted in the Fourth Gospel, alone enables us to understand the lament which finds a place in the Synoptics, "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, how often," etc. The call of those who afterwards became Apostles, the arrival in Galilee of scribes from Jerusalem to watch Jesus, and other incidents recorded by the Synoptists, only become fully intelligible when read in the light of the narrative given in the Fourth Gospel. Evidently the author of this Gospel had, at least on some points, access to more accurate and complete information than that which was accessible to the other evangelists.

<sup>1</sup> Zeitschrift f. T. und K., 2nd Jahrg., p. 230.

<sup>2</sup> See especially Oscar Holtzmann, Johannesevang., p. 6 ff.

The independence of the Fourth Gospel is further shown by its omission of such remarkable scenes as the Temptation, the Transfiguration, the Agony in the Garden, and by its introduction of places and persons unnamed in the other Gospels; as, Aenon, Salim, Sychar, Bethany beyond Jordan, Nicodemus, Nathanael, the Samaritan woman, the man born blind, the dead Lazarus, Annas. The most natural way to account for this is to suppose that we have here the additional information which an Apostle would necessarily possess. The alternatives are that we must refer it to the creative imagination of the writer, or to the tradition of our Lord's life which had been handed down irrespective of the Synoptic Gospels, the "Johanneisches vor Johannes". But why deny this tradition to the Apostle John? In whom could it find a more suitable repository? Unquestionably there underlies this Gospel a full and significant tradition, but there seems no good reason for allotting the tradition to one source and the Gospel to another. Much more probable is the account of Eusebius,<sup>1</sup> who tells us "that John, having spent all his life in proclaiming the Gospel orally, at the last committed it to writing".

<sup>1</sup> H. E., iii., 24: ἰωάννην φασὶ τὸν πάντα χρόνον ἀγράφῳ κεκρημένον κηρύγματι τέλος καὶ ἐπὶ τὴν γραφὴν ἔλθειν.

Suspicion has been cast on the historicity of the Fourth Gospel by the omission from the others of all reference to the raising of Lazarus. As related by John, this event was not only remarkable in itself, but materially contributed to the catastrophe. It is difficult to suppose that so surprising an event should not be known to the Synoptists. It is true John omits incidents as remarkable; but he knew that they were already related. It is possible that at the first, while the life of Lazarus was still in danger from the authorities, reference to the miracle may have been judged unadvisable, especially as similar raisings from the dead had been recorded. Probably, however, Professor Sanday's solution is right: "Considering that the Synoptists knew nothing of events in Jerusalem before the last Passover, we cannot be surprised that they should omit an event which is placed at Bethany".<sup>1</sup>

But that which has driven many open-minded critics to a disbelief in the Apostolic authorship of the Gospel is the character of the conversations and addresses which are here attributed to our Lord. Some pronounce these discourses to be entirely fictitious, ascribed to Jesus for the sake of illustrating and enforcing opinions of the author. Others suppose that a small modicum of historical truth is to be found in them; while critics who are branded as "Apologists" almost entirely eliminate from the discourses ascribed to our Lord any subjective element contributed by the Evangelist. Is there then any test we can apply to this record, any criterion by which these discourses may be judged? The reports in the Synoptic Gospels at once suggest themselves as the required criterion. Doubts there may be regarding the very words ascribed to our Lord in this or that passage of the Synoptists, doubts there must be, whether we are to follow Matthew or Luke, when these two differ; but practically there is no doubt at all, even among extreme critics, that we may gather from those Gospels a clear idea both of the form and of the substance of our Lord's teaching.

Now it is not to be denied that the comparison of the Fourth Gospel with the first three is a little disconcerting. For it is obvious that in the Fourth Gospel the discourses occupy a different position, and differ also both in style and in matter from those recorded in the Synoptical Gospels. They occupy a different position, bulking much more largely in proportion to the narrative. Indeed, the narrative portion of the Gospel of John may be said to exist for the sake of the verbal teaching. The miracles which in the first three Gospels appear as the beneficent acts of our Lord without ulterior motive, seem in the Fourth Gospel to exist for the sake of the teaching they embody, and the discussions they give rise to. Similarly, the persons introduced, such as Nicodemus, are viewed chiefly as instrumental in eliciting from Jesus certain sayings, and are themselves forgotten in the conversation they have suggested.

<sup>1</sup> Authorship of Fourth Gospel, p. 185.

In form the teachings recorded in John conspicuously differ from those recorded by the other evangelists. They present our Lord as using three forms of teaching, brief, pregnant apophthegms, parables, and prolonged ethical addresses. In John, it is alleged, the parable has disappeared, the pointed sayings suitable to a popular teacher have also disappeared, and in their place we have prolonged discussions, self-defensive explanations, and stern invectives. As Renan says: "This fashion of preaching and demonstrating without ceasing, this everlasting argumentation, this artificial get-up, these long discussions following each miracle, these discourses, stiff and awkward, whose tone is so often false and unequal, are intolerable to a man of taste alongside the delicious sentences of the synoptists".

Even more marked is the difference in the substance of the discourses. From the synoptists we receive the impression that Jesus was a genial ethical teacher who spent His days among the common people exhorting them to unworldliness, to a disregard of wealth, to the humble and patient service of God in love to their fellow-men, exposing the hollowness of much that passed for religion, and seeking to inspire all men with firmer trust in God as their Father. In the Gospel of John His own claims are the prominent subject. He is the subject matter taught as well as the teacher. The Kingdom of God no longer holds the place it held in the synoptists: it is the Messiah rather than the Messianic kingdom that is pressed upon the people.

Again it has been urged that the style ascribed to our Lord in this Gospel is so like the style of John himself as to be indistinguishable; so that it is not always possible to say where the words of Jesus end and the words of John begin (see chap. xii. 44, iii. 18-21). This difficulty may, however, be put aside, and that for more reasons than one. The words of Jesus are translated from the vernacular Aramaic in which He probably uttered them, and it was impossible they should not be coloured by the style of the translator. Besides, there are obvious differences between the style of John and that of Jesus. For example, the Epistle of John is singularly abstract and devoid of illustration. James abounds in figure, and so does Paul; but in John's epistles not a single simile or metaphor occurs. Is it credible that their writer was the author of the richly figurative teachings in the tenth and fifteenth chapters of the Gospel [the sheepfold and the vine]?

But turning to the real differences which exist between the reports of the first three and the Fourth Gospel, several thoughts occur which at least take off the edge of the criticism and show us that on a point of this kind it is easy to be hasty and extreme. For, in the first place, it is to be considered that if John had had nothing new to tell, no fresh aspect of Christ or His teaching to present, he would not have written at all. No doubt each of the synoptists goes over ground already traversed by his fellow-synoptist, but it has yet to be proved that they knew one another's work. John did know of their Gospels, and the very fact that he added a fourth prepares us to expect that it will be different; not only in omitting scenes from the life of Christ with which already the previous Gospels had made men familiar, but by presenting some new aspect of Christ's person and teaching. That there was another aspect essential to the completeness of the figure was, as the present Bishop of Derry has pointed out, also to be surmised. The synoptists enable us to conceive how Jesus addressed the peasantry and how He dealt with the scribes of Capernaum; but, after all, was it not also of the utmost importance to know how He was received by the authorities of Jerusalem and how He met their difficulties about His claims? Had there been no record of those defences of His position, must we not still have supposed them and supplied them in imagination?

That we have here, then, a different aspect of Christ's teaching need not surprise us, but is it not even inconsistent with that already given by the synoptists? The universal Christian consciousness has long since answered that question. The faith which has found its resting-place in the Christ of the synoptists is not unsettled or perplexed by anything it finds in John. They are not two Christs but one which the four Gospels depict: diverse as the profile and front face, but one another's complement rather than contradiction. A critical examination of the Gospels reaches the same conclusion. For while the self-assertiveness of Christ is more apparent in the Fourth Gospel, it is implicit in them all. Can any claim be greater than that which our Lord urges in the Sermon on the Mount to be the supreme lawgiver and judge of men? Or than that which is implied in His assertion that He only knows the Father and that only through Him can others know Him; or can we conceive any clearer confidence in His mission than that which He implies when He invites all men to come to Him and trust themselves with Him, or when He forgives sin, and proclaims Himself the Messiah, God's representative on earth?

Can we then claim that all that is reported in this Gospel as uttered by our Lord was actually spoken as it stands? This is not claimed. Even the most conservative critics allow that John must necessarily have condensed conversations and discourses. The truth probably is that we have the actual words of the most striking sayings, because these, once heard, could not be forgotten. And this plainly applies especially to the sayings regarding Himself which were most likely to astonish or even shock and startle the hearers. These at once and for ever fixed themselves in the mind. In the longer discussions and addresses we have the substance but cannot at each point be sure that the very words are given. No doubt in the last resort we must trust John. But whom could we more reasonably trust? He was the person of all others who entered most fully into sympathy with Christ and understood Him best, the person to whom our Lord could most freely open His mind. So that although, as Godet says, we have here "the extracted essence of a savoury fruit," we may be confident that this essence perfectly preserves the flavour and peculiarity of the fruit.

Neither ought it to be forgotten that there occur in the Gospel passages which strikingly illustrate the desire of the author to preserve the very words of our Lord. In chap. xii. 33, e.g., we find an interpretation given of the saying recorded in verse 32. This is unintelligible on the hypothesis that the author was himself composing the discourses which he attributes to Christ. Any author who is expressing his own ideas, and writing freely out of his own mind, even although he is using another person as his mouthpiece, will at once deliver his meaning. To suppose that John first put his own words in the mouth of Jesus, and then interpreted them, is to suppose an elaborateness of contrivance which would reduce the Gospel to a common forgery. Cf. vii. 39.

While, then, it cannot be affirmed that the internal evidence uniformly points to the Johannine authorship, neither can it be said that it is decisively against it. There are difficulties on either alternative. But when to the internal evidence the weight of external attestation is added, by far the most probable conclusion is that the Fourth Gospel is the work of the Apostle John, and that it is historically trustworthy.

Between the affirmation and denial of the Johannine authorship

there has been interposed a third suggestion. The Gospel may have been (1) partly or (2) indirectly the work of the Apostle: parts of it may be from the hand of John, while the remainder is the work of an unknown editor; or, the whole may be from the school of John, but not directly from his own hand. The most distinguished advocate of the former of these two suggestions is Dr. Wendt, whose theory is that the Apostle John made a collection of our Lord's discourses, which was used by some unknown editor as the basis or nucleus of a Gospel. This theory ruthlessly sacrifices many of the most valuable and characteristic portions of the Gospel, such as the scene between the Baptist and the deputation, the examination before Annas (or Caiaphas), and many of those historical touches which lend life to the narrative. But the fatal objection to this theory is the solidarity of the Gospel. Holtzmann does not accept the Fourth Gospel as Johannine, but he says: "All attempts to draw a clearly distinguishable line of demarcation, whether it be between earlier and later strata, or between genuine and not genuine, historical and unhistorical elements, must always be wrecked against the solid and compact unity which the work presents, both in regard to language and in regard to matter. Apart from the interpolations indicated by the history of the text (v. 4, vii. 53, viii. 11), and from the last chapter added by way of supplement, the work is both in form and substance, both in arrangement and in range of ideas, an organic whole without omissions or interpolations, the 'seamless coat,' which cannot be parted or torn, but only by a happy cast allotted to its rightful owner." Certainly, if this Gospel is not from one hand, then there is no possibility of proving unity of authorship by unity of design and execution.

The second alternative, that the Gospel proceeded rather from the circle of John's disciples than from his own hand, has more in its favour and has enlisted great names in its support. Thus Renan says (Vie de J., xxv.): "Can it indeed be John who has written in Greek these abstract metaphysical discourses, which find no analogy either in the Synoptists or in the Talmud? This is a heavy tax on faith, and for myself I dare not say I am convinced that the Fourth Gospel was entirely from the pen of an old Galilean fisherman; but that the Gospel as a whole proceeded, towards the close of the first century, from the great school of Asia Minor whose centre was John." "One is sometimes tempted to believe that some precious notes made by the Apostle were employed by his disciples."

The other great literary critic of our own day, Matthew Arnold, held the same opinion regarding the origin of the Gospel. In God and the Bible, 256-7, he writes: "In his old age St. John at Ephesus has 'logia,' sayings of the Lord, and has incidents in the Lord's story which have not been published in any of the written accounts that were beginning at that time to be handed about. The elders of Ephesus, whom tradition afterwards makes into apostles, fellows of St. John, move him to bestow his treasure on the world. He gives his materials, and the presbytery of Ephesus provides a redaction for them and publishes them. The redaction with its unity of tone, its flowingness and connectedness, is by one single hand; the hand of a man of literary talent, a Greek Christian, whom the Church of Ephesus found proper for such a task. A man of literary talent, a man of soul also, a theologian. A theological lecturer perhaps, as in the Fourth Gospel he so often shows himself, a theological lecturer, an earlier and a nameless Origen, who in this one short composition produced a work outweighing all the folios of all the Fathers, but was content that his name should be written in the Book of Life." Schürer and Weizsäcker<sup>1</sup> are both advocates of this theory.

That this is an inviting theory is not to be denied. But, after all, little is gained by it; and there are grave objections to it. The Jew and the eye-witness appear on every page; so that the utmost that can be allowed is that some younger man may in quite a subordinate function have collaborated with the Apostle. That the Gospel was composed after the Apostle's death, mainly from reminiscences of his teaching, is a hypothesis which seems at once needless and inadequate.

Object of the Gospel. The object of the writer reflects some light on the nature of his work. In xx. 31 it is said: "these things are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and that believing ye might have life in His name". The writer has no intention of composing a full biography of Jesus. He means to select from His life such material as will most readily convince men that He is the Christ, the Son of God. If not a dogmatic treatise [a "lehrschrift"], it is at any rate a history with a dogmatic purpose. This is always a dangerous form of literature, tempting the author to exaggeration, concealment, misrepresentation. But that this temptation invariably overcomes an author is of course not the case. A certain limitation, however, nay, a certain amount of distortion, do necessarily attach to a biography which aims at presenting only one aspect of its subject—distortion, not in what is actually presented, but in the implication that this is the whole. Where only a part of the life is given and certain aspects of the character are exclusively depicted, there is a want of perspective and so far a misleading element. But this gives us no ground for affirming that the actual statements of the book are erroneous or unhistorical.

<sup>1</sup> Apost. Zeit., 531-538.

The circumstance that John wrote a Gospel with the express purpose of proving that Jesus was the Christ, the Son of God, implies that he considered that this truth needed confirmation; that in the Christian circle in which he moved there was some more or less pronounced tendency towards a denial of the Messiahship or Divinity of Jesus. Whether the teaching of Cerinthus was or was not the immediate occasion of the publication of the Gospel, it is a happy circumstance that the author did not confine himself to what was controversial, or throw his work into a polemic and doctrinal form, but built up a positive exhibition of the Person and claims of our Lord as stated by Himself.

The object in view, therefore, reflects light on the historicity of the contents of the Gospel. The writer professes to produce certain facts which have powerfully influenced the minds of men and have produced faith. If these pretended facts were fictions, then the writer is dishonest and beneath contempt. He wishes to produce the conviction that Jesus is the Messiah, and to accomplish his purpose invents incidents and manipulates utterances of Jesus. A writer of romance who merely wishes to please, even a preacher whose aim is edification, might claim a certain latitude or negligence of accuracy, but a writer whose object it is to prove a certain proposition stands on a very different platform, and can only be pronounced fraudulent if he invents his evidence.

Method and Plan of the Gospel. The method adopted by the writer to convince men that Jesus is the Christ is the simplest possible. He does not expect that men will believe this on his mere word. He sets himself to reproduce those salient features in the life of Jesus which chiefly manifested His Messianic dignity and function. He believes that what convinced himself will convince others. One by one he cites his witnesses, never garbling their testimony nor concealing the adverse testimony, but showing with as exact truthfulness how unbelief grew and hardened into opposition, as he tells how faith grew till it culminated in the supreme confession of Thomas, "My Lord and my God". The plan of the Gospel is therefore also the simplest. Apart from the Prologue (i. 1-18), and the Epilogue (chap. xxi.), the work falls into two nearly equal parts, i. 19-xii. and xiii.-xx. In the former part the evangelist relates with a singular felicity of selection the scenes in which Jesus made those self-revelations which it was essential the world should see. These culminate in the raising of Lazarus related in chap. xi. The twelfth chapter therefore holds a place by itself, and in it three incidents are related which are intended to show that the previously related manifestations of Jesus had sufficed to make Him known (1) to His intimates (xii. 1-11), (2) to the people generally (12-19), and (3) even to the Gentile world (20-36). Jesus may therefore now close His self-revelation. And the completeness of the work He has done is revealed not only in this widely extended impression and well-grounded faith, but also in the maturity of unbelief which now hardens into hatred and resolves to compass His death. Between the first and second part of the Gospel there is interposed a paragraph (xii. 37-50), in which it is pointed out that the rejection of Jesus by the Jews, who had been trained to receive the Messiah, had been predicted and reflects no suspicion on the sufficiency of the preceding manifestations. In the second part of the Gospel the glory of Christ is manifested (1) in His revealing Himself as the permanent source of life and joy to His disciples (xiii.-xvii.), and (2) in His triumph over death (xviii.-xx.).

The Gospel, therefore, falls into these parts :—

THE PROLOGUE, i. 1-18.

I. PART FIRST. 1. Manifestation of Christ's glory as the Joy, Life, Light, Nourishment, Saviour of Men : or as the Son of God among men, i. 19-xi.

2. Summary of results, xii. 1-35.

PAUSE in the Gospel for review of Christ's teaching and its consequences, xii. 36-56.

II. PART SECOND. 1. Jesus declares Himself to be the permanent source of life and joy to His disciples, xiii.-xvii.

2. His victory over death, xviii.-xx.

THE EPILOGUE, xxi.

LITERATURE.

A vast literature has grown up around the Fourth Gospel. A full list of critical treatises on the Authorship, published between 1792 and 1875, is given by Dr. Caspar Gregory in an appendix to the translation of Luthardt's St. John, the Author of the Fourth Gospel. To this list may now be added Thoma, Die Genesis d. Joh. Evang., 1882; Jacobsen, Untersuchungen über d. Joh. Evang., 1884; Oscar Holtzmann, Das Joh. evangelium, 1887. The Introductions of H. Holtzmann, Weiss, Salmon, and Gloag may also be consulted. The fullest history of the criticism of the Gospel is to be found in Watkins' Bampton Lectures for 1890.

Full lists of commentaries are given in the second volume of the translation of Meyer on John, and in Luthardt. The most valuable are the following :—

HERACLEON. The Fragments of Heraclion have been collected out of Origen's Commentary on John, and edited for Armitage Robinson's Texts and Studies by A. E. Brooke, M.A.

CRIGEN. Commentary on St. John's Gospel; originally only extending to the thirteenth chapter, and even of this original much has been lost. The best edition is that of A. E. Brooke, M.A., Cambridge University Press, 1896.

Portions of this Commentary are translated in the additional volume of Clark's Ante-Nicene Library

CHRYSOSTOM [347-407 A.D.]. Homilies on the Gospel, etc. The most convenient edition is Migne's. The Commentary on John is translated in the Oxford Library, and in the American Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers.

AUGUSTINE [354-430]. Tractatus in Joan. Evan. In third volume of Migne's edition; translated in Oxford series and Clark's translation.

CYRIL OF ALEXANDRIA [ob. 444]. In D. Joannis Evangelium. Best edition by P. E. Pusey, A.M., Clarendon Press. Three vols. 1872

THEOPHYLACT and EUTHYMIUS (see p. 58) both wrote on this Gospel. The commentary of the latter is especially excellent.

Among post-reformation works, the Paraphrases of Erasmus, the Commentary of Calvin, and the Annotationes Majores of Beza are to be recommended. The Annotationes of Melancthon are frequently irrelevant. Besides the collections of illustrative passages mentioned on pp. 58, 59, and the commentaries of Grotius, Bengel, and others which cover the whole New Testament, there may be named the following which deal especially with this Gospel: Lampe, Com. Analytico-Exegeticus, 3 vols., 4to, Amstel., 1724, an inexhaustible mine. More recent commentaries are those of Lücke, 1820-24; Tholuck, 1827 [translated in Clark's F. T. Lib., 1860]; Meyer, 1834 [translated 1875], edited by Weiss, 1893; Luthardt, 1852-3 [translated in Clark's F. T. Lib., 1876], Alford, 1849; 4th edition, 1859; Godet, 1864-5 [translated in Clark's F. T. L., 1876-7], Westcott, 1882; Reith, in Clark's Hand-books for Bible-classes; Whitelaw, 1888; Reynolds, in Pulpit Com., 1888; Watkins, in Ellicott's Com., n. d.; Holtzmann, in Hand-commentar, 1890; Plummer, in Cambridge Greek Testament, 1893. In Oscar Holtzmann's Das Johannesevangelium untersucht und erklärt, 1887, there are a hundred pages of commentary.

ΤΟ ΚΑΤΑ ΙΩΑΝΝΗΝ

ΑΓΙΟΝ ΕΥΑΓΓΕΛΙΟΝ.<sup>1</sup>

Ι. Ι. <sup>a</sup> Ἐν ἀρχῇ ἦν ὁ λόγος, καὶ ὁ λόγος ἦν <sup>b</sup> πρὸς τὸν Θεόν, καὶ <sup>a</sup> Gen i. 1.
<sup>1</sup> Θεὸς ἦν ὁ λόγος. 2. οὗτος ἦν ἐν ἀρχῇ πρὸς τὸν Θεόν. 3. <sup>d</sup> Πάντα Ch. xvii.
<sup>b</sup> 1 Jo. i. 2. <sup>c</sup> Prov. viii. 30. <sup>c</sup> xx. 28; x. 30. <sup>Phil.</sup> ii. 6. <sup>d</sup> v. 17. <sup>Col.</sup> i. 16. <sup>5</sup> Heb. i. 2.

<sup>1</sup> κατὰ Ἰωαννῆν in ⳨ a b e q; κατὰ Ἰωαννῆν in B; εὐαγγέλιον κατὰ Ἰωαννῆν in ACEFG; T.R. in minusc.

CHAPTER I.—Vv. 1-18. The prologue. The first eighteen verses contain a preface, or as it is usually called, the prologue to the Gospel. In this prologue the writer identifies the person, Jesus Christ, whom he is about to introduce on the field of history, with the Logos. He first describes the Logos in His relation to God and to the world, and then presents in abstract the history of His reception among men, which he is about to give in detail. That the Eternal Divine Word, in whom was the life of all things, became flesh and was manifested among men; that some ignored while others recognised Him; that some received while others rejected Him—that is what John means to exhibit in detail in his Gospel, and this is what he summarily states in this prologue.

The prologue may be divided thus: Vv. 1-5, The Logos described; vv. 6-13, The historic manifestation of the Logos and its results in evoking faith and unbelief; vv. 14-18, This manifestation more precisely defined as incarnation, with another aspect of its results. Cf. Westcott's suggestive division; and especially Falconer in Expositor, 1897.

Vv. 1-5. The Logos described. The first five verses describe the pre-existence, the nature, the creative power of the Logos, who in the succeeding verses is spoken of as entering the world, becoming man, and revealing the Father; and this description is given in order that we may at once grasp a continuous history which runs out of an unmeasured past, and the identity of the person who is the subject of that history.

Ver. 1. In the first verse three things are stated regarding the Logos, the subject ὁ λόγος being repeated for impressiveness. Westcott remarks that these three clauses answer to the three great moments of the Incarnation declared in ver. 14. He who was (ἦν) in the beginning, became (ἐγένετο) in time; He who was with God, tabernacled among men; He who was God, became flesh.

(1) ἐν ἀρχῇ ἦν ὁ λόγος. ἐν ἀρχῇ is here used relatively to creation, as in Gen. i. 1 and Prov. viii. 23, ἐν ἀρχῇ πρὸ τοῦ τὴν γῆν ποιῆσαι; cf. 1 John i. 1. Consequently even in the time of Theophylact it was argued that this clause only asserts that the Logos was older than Adam. But this is to overlook the ἦν. The Logos did not then begin to be, but at that point at which all else began to be He already was. In the beginning, place it where you may, the Word already existed. In other words, the Logos is before time, eternal. Cf. Col. i. 18 (the article is absent because ἐν ἀρχῇ is virtually an adverbial expression).—ὁ λόγος. The term Logos appears as early as Heraclitus to denote the principle which maintains order in the world (see passages in Ritter and Preller). Among the Stoics the word was similarly used, as the equivalent of the anima mundi (cf. Virgil, Æn., vi., 724). Marcus Aurelius (iv. 14-21) uses ε ν 21: xi. δι' αὐτοῦ ἐγένετο, καὶ χωρὶς αὐτοῦ ἐγένετο οὐδὲ ἓν, ὃ γέγονεν.<sup>1</sup> 1 xii 36. 13 4. ἐν αὐτῷ ὡς ζωὴ ἦν,<sup>2</sup> καὶ ἡ ζωὴ ἦν τὸ φῶς τῶν ἀνθρώπων, 5. καὶ τὸ times in John

 Elsewhere
 only in Mt. x. 27. Lk. xii. 3.

<sup>1</sup> Almost all ante-Nicene Fathers join ο γέγονεν to ver. 4 with AC*DG*L. Chrysostom declares this reading heretical and argues against it. T.R. is found in C<sup>8</sup>EG<sup>2</sup>HK vet. Lat. Brixianus.

<sup>2</sup> ἦν in ABCL, vulg.; εστιν in ND vet. Lat., arising out of above punctuation.

the term σπερματικός λόγος to express the generative principle or creative force in nature. The term was familiar to Greek philosophy. In Hebrew thought there was felt the need for some term to express God, not in His absolute being, but in His manifestation and active connection with the world. In the O. T. "the Angel of the Lord" and "the wisdom of God" are used for this purpose. In the Apocryphal books and the Targums "the word of Jehovah" is similarly used. These two streams of thought were combined by Philo, who has a fairly full and explicit doctrine of the Logos as the expression of God or God in expression (see Drummond's Philo; Siegfried's Philo; Reville, Doctrine du Logos; Bigg's Bampton Lec.; Hatch's Hibbert Lec.). The word being thus already in use and aiding thoughtful men in their efforts to conceive God's connection with the world, John takes it and uses it to denote the Revealer of the incomprehensible and invisible God. Irrespective of all speculations which had gathered around the term, John now proceeds to make known the true nature of the Logos. (Cf. The Primal Will, or Universal Reason of the Babis; Sell's Faith of Islam, 146.)

(2) If the Word was thus in the beginning, what relation did He hold to God? Was He identical or opposed? ὁ λόγος ἦν πρὸς τὸν θεόν. πρὸς implies not merely existence alongside of but personal intercourse. It means more than μετά or παρά, and is regularly employed in expressing the presence of one person with another. Thus in classical Greek, τὴν πρὸς Σωκράτην συνουσίαν, and in N. T. Mk. vi. 3, Mt. xiii. 56, Mk. ix. 19, Gal. i. 18, 2 John 12. This preposition implies intercourse and therefore separate personality. As Chrysostom says: "Not in God but with God, as person with person, eternally".

(3) The Word is distinguishable from God and yet Θεὸς ἦν ὁ λόγος, the Word was God, of Divine nature; not "a God," which to a Jewish ear would have been abominable; nor yet identical with all that can be called God, for then the article would have been inserted (cf. 1 John iii. 4). "The Christian doctrine of the Trinity was perhaps before anything else an effort to express how Jesus Christ was God (Θεός) and yet in another sense was not God (ὁ Θεός), that is to say, was not the whole Godhead." Consult Du Bose's Ecumenical Councils, p. 70-73. Luther says "the Word was God" is against Arius: "the Word was with God" against Sabellius.

Ver. 2. οὗτος ἦν ἐν ἀρχῇ πρὸς τὸν θεόν. Not a mere repetition of what has been said in ver. 1. There John has said that the Word was in the beginning and also that He was with God: here he indicates that these two characteristics existed contemporaneously. "He was in the beginning with God." He wishes also to emphasise this in view of what he is about to tell. In the beginning He was with God, afterwards, in time, He came to be with man. His pristine condition must first be grasped, if the grace of what succeeds is to be understood.

Ver. 3. Πάντα δι' αὐτοῦ ἐγένετο. The connection is obvious: the Word was with God in the beginning, but not as an idle, inefficacious existence, who only then for the first time put forth energy when He came into the world. On the contrary, He was the source of all activity and life. "All things were made by Him, and without Him was not even one thing made which was made."

The double sentence, positive and negative, is characteristic of John and lends emphasis to the statement.—πάντα, "grande verbum quo mundus, i.e., universitas rerum factarum denotatur" (Bengel). The more accurate expression for "all things" taken as a whole and not severally is τὰ πάντα (Col. i. 16) or τὸ πᾶν; and, as the negative clause of this verse indicates, created things are here looked at in their variety and multiplicity. Cf. Marcus Aurelius, iv. 23, ὡ φύσις, ἐκ σοῦ πάντα, ἐν σοὶ πάντα, εἰς σὲ πάντα.—δι' αὐτοῦ. The Word was the Agent in creation. But it is to be observed that the same preposition is used of God in the same connection in Rom. xi. 36, ὅτι ἐξ αὐτοῦ καὶ δι' αὐτοῦ καὶ εἰς αὐτὸν τὰ πάντα; and in Col. i. 16 the same writer uses the same prepositions not of the Father but of the Son when he says: τὰ πάντα δι' αὐτοῦ καὶ εἰς αὐτὸν ἔκτισται. In I Cor. viii. 6 Paul distinguishes between the Father as the primal source of all things and the Son as the actual Creator. (In Greek philosophy the problem was to ascertain by whom, of what, and in view of what the world was made; ὑφ' οὗ, ἐξ οὗ, πρὸς ὅ. And Lücke quotes a significant sentence from Philo (De Cherub., 35): εὐρήσεις αἴτιον μὲν αὐτοῦ (τοῦ κόσμου) τὸν θεὸν, ὑφ' οὗ γέγονεν ἕλην δὲ τὰ τέσσαρα στοιχεῖα, ἐξ ὧν συνεκράθη ὄργανον δὲ λόγον θεοῦ δι' οὗ κατασκευάσθη.)

6. Ἐγένετο ἄνθρωπος ἀπεσταλμένος παρὰ Θεοῦ, ὄνομα αὐτῷ ἑ Cp. Gen. xi. 29. Lk. Ἰωάννης.<sup>1</sup> 7. οὗτος ἦλθεν εἰς μαρτυρίαν, ἵνα μαρτυρήσῃ<sup>h</sup> περὶ τοῦ ἰ. 5. ἡ μαρτυρ. περὶ freq. in Jo., not elsewhere in N. T.

<sup>1</sup> Ἰωάνης in Tr.W.H., here and at every recurrence of the name.

Ver. 4. ἐν αὐτῷ ζωὴ ἦν. "In Him was life"; that power which creates life and maintains all else in existence was in the Logos. To limit "life" here to any particular form of life is rendered impossible by ver. 3. In John ζωὴ is generally eternal or spiritual life, but here it is more comprehensive. In the Logos was life, and it is of this life all things have partaken and by it they exist. Cf. Philo's designation of the Logos as πηγὴ ζωῆς.—καὶ ἡ ζωὴ ἦν τὸ φῶς τῶν ἀνθρώπων, "and the life was the light of men"; the life which was the fountain of existence to all things was especially the light of man (Lücke). It was not the Logos directly but the life which was in the Logos which was the light of men. O. Holtzmann thinks this only means that as men received life from the Logos they might be expected in the gift to recognise the Giver. Godet says: "The Logos is light; but it is through the mediation of life that He must become so always; this is precisely the relation which the Gospel restores. We recover through the new creation in Jesus Christ an inner light which springs up from the life." Stevens says: "The Word represents the self-manifesting quality of the Divine life. This heavenly light shines in the darkness of the world's ignorance and sin." The words seem to mean that the life which appears in the variety, harmony, and progress of inanimate nature, and in the wonderfully manifold yet related forms of animate existence, appears in man as "light," intellectual and moral light, reason and conscience. To the Logos men may address the words of Ps. xxxvi. 9, παρὰ σοὶ πηγὴ ζωῆς, ἐν τῷ φωτί σου ὀψόμεθα φῶς.—Ver. 5. καὶ τὸ φῶς ἐν τῇ σκοτίᾳ φαίνει, "and the light shineth in the darkness". Three interpretations are possible. The words may refer to the incarnate, or to the pre-incarnate experience of the Logos, or to both. Holtzmann and Weiss both consider the clause refers to the incarnate condition (cf. I John ii. 8). De Wette refers it to the pre-incarnate operation of the Logos in the O. T. prophets. Meyer and others interpret φαίνει as meaning "present, i.e., uninterruptedly from the beginning until now". The use of the aorist κατέλαβεν seems to make the first interpretation impossible; while the second is obviously too restricted. What "shining" is meant? This also must not be limited to O. T. prophecy or revelation but to the light of conscience and reason (cf. ver. 4).—ἐν τῇ σκοτίᾳ, in the darkness which existed wherever the light of the Logos was not admitted. Darkness, σκότος or σκοτία, was the expression naturally used by secular Greek writers to describe the world's condition. Thus Lucian: ἐν σκότῳ πλανώμενοι πάντες εἰοικαμεν. Cf. Lucretius:

"Qualibus in tenebris vitae, quantisque periclis, Degitur hoc aevi quodcunque est".

καὶ ἡ σκοτία αὐτὸ οὐ κατέλαβεν. The A. V. renders this "and the darkness comprehended it not"; the R. V. has "apprehended" and in the margin "overcame". The Greek interpreters understood the clause to mean that the darkness did not conquer the light. Thus Theophylact says: ἡ σκοτία . . . ἐδίωξε τὸ φῶς, ἀλλ' εὗρεν ἀκαταμάχτων καὶ ἀήττητον. Some modern interpreters, φωτός, ἵνα πάντες πιστεύσωσι δι' αὐτοῦ. 8. οὐκ ἦν ἐκεῖνος τὸ φῶς, ἀλλ' ἵνα μαρτυρήσῃ περὶ τοῦ φωτός. 9. ἦν τὸ φῶς τὸ ἀληθινόν, ὃ and especially Westcott, adopt this rendering. "The whole phrase is indeed a startling paradox. The light does not banish the darkness: the darkness does not overpower the light." This rendering is supposed to find support in chap. xii. 35, where Christ says, "Walk while ye have the light," ἵνα μὴ σκοτία ὑμᾶς καταλάβῃ; and καταλαμβάνειν is the word commonly used to denote day or night overtaking any one (see Wetstein). But the radical meaning is "to seize," "to take possession of," "to lay hold of"; so in Rom. ix. 30, 1 Cor. ix. 24, Phil. iii. 12. It is also used of mental perception, as in the Phaedrus, p. 250, D. See also Polybius, iii. 32, 4, and viii. 4, 6, δυσχερὲς καταλαβεῖν, difficult to understand. This sense is more congruous in this passage; especially when we compare ver. 10 (ὁ κόσμος αὐτὸν οὐκ ἔγνω) and ver. 11 (οἱ ἴδιοι αὐτὸν οὐ παρέλαβον).

Vv. 6-13. The historic manifestation of the Logos and its results.—Ver. 6. In this verse John passes to the historical; and like the other evangelists begins with the Baptist. So Theodore Mops: μετεληλυθὼς ἐπὶ τὴν ἐπιφάνειαν τοῦ υἱοῦ, τίνα ἄν εὖρεν ἀρχὴν ἑτέραν ἢ τὰ κατὰ τὸν Ἰωάννην;—ἐγένετο ἄνθρωπος, "not there was (chap. iii. 1), but denoting the appearing, the historical manifestation," Meyer. Cf. Lk. i. 5. The testimony of John is introduced not only as a historical note but in order to bring out the aggravated blindness of those who rejected Christ. This man was ἀπεσταλμένος παρὰ θεοῦ. Holtzmann says "an historical appearance is characterised as Godsent". It might rather be said that an historical appearance sent to fulfil a definite Divine purpose is so characterised. There is no designation our Lord more frequently applies to Himself. In the prayer of chap. xvii. some equivalent occurs six times. And in the epistle to the Hebrews He is called "the Apostle of our confession". No distinguishing title is added to the common name "John". Westcott says: "If the writer of the Gospel were himself the other John of the Gospel history, it is perfectly natural that he should think of the Baptist, apart from himself, as John only". Watkins says: "The writer stood to him in the relation of disciple to teacher. To him he was the John." Afterwards the disciple became the John.—Ver. 7.

οὗτος ἦλθεν εἰς μαρτυρίαν . . . δι' αὐτοῦ. "The same (or, this man) came for witness," etc. "John's mission is first set forth under its generic aspect: he came for witness; and then its specific object (ἵνα μαρτ. περὶ τ. φ.) and its final object (ἵνα παντ. πιστ.) are defined co-ordinately," Westcott. John was not to do a great work of his own but to point to another. All his experience, zeal, and influence were to be spent in testifying to the true Light. This he was to do "that all might believe through him". The whole of this Gospel is a citing of witnesses, but John's comes first and is of most importance. At first sight it might seem that his mission had failed. All did not believe. No; but all who did believe, speaking generally, believed through him. The first disciples won by Jesus were of John's training; and through them belief has become general.—Ver. 8. οὐκ ἦν ἐκεῖνος . . . φῶς, the thought of the previous verse is here put in a negative form for the sake of emphasis; and with the same object οὐκ ἦν is made prominent that it may contrast with the ἵνα μαρτυρήσῃ. He (or, that man) was not the light, but he appeared that he might bear witness regarding the light. Why say this of John? Was there any danger that he should be mistaken for the light? Some did think he was the Christ. See vv. 19, 20.—Ver. 9. ἦν τὸ φῶς . . . εἰς τὸν κόσμον. ἦν stands first in contrast to the οὐκ ἦν of ver. 8. The light was not . . . : the light was . . . In this verse the light is also further contrasted with John. The Baptist was himself a light (ver. 35) but not τὸ φῶς τὸ ἀληθινόν. This designation occurs nine times in John, never in the Synoptists. It means that which corresponds to the ideal; true not as opposed to false, but to symbolical or imperfect. The light is further characterised as ὃ φωτίζει πάντα ἄνθρωπον. This is the text on which the Quakers found for their doctrine that every man has a day of visitation and that to every man God gives sufficient grace. Barclay in his Apology says: "This place doth so clearly favour us that by some it is called 'the Quakers' text,' for it doth evidently demonstrate our assertion". It was also much used by the Greek Fathers, who believed that the Logos guided the heathen in their φωτίζει πάντα ἄνθρωπον ἐρχόμενον εἰς τὸν κόσμον. ΙΟ. ἐν τῷ <sup>Cor. i. 21.</sup> κόσμῳ ἦν, καὶ ὁ κόσμος δι' αὐτοῦ ἐγένετο, <sup>Acts xxiv.</sup> καὶ ὁ κόσμος αὐτὸν οὐκ ἔγνω. ΙΙ. εἰς τὰ ἴδια ἦλθε, καὶ <sup>23.</sup> οἱ ἴδιοι αὐτὸν οὐ παρέλαβον. κ <sup>Col. ii. 6.</sup>

philosophical researches (see Justin's Dial., ii., etc., and Clement, passim).—ἐρχόμενον has been variously construed, with ἄνθρωπον, with τὸ φῶς, or with ἦν. (1) The first construction is favoured by Chrysostom, Euthymius, the Vulgate, and A. V., "that was the true light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world"; or with Meyer, "the true light which lightens every man coming into the world was present" (ἦν = aderat). To the objection that ἐρχόμενος . . . κόσμον is thus redundant, Meyer replies that there is such a thing as a solemn redundancy, and that we have here an "epic fulness of words". But the "epic fulness" is here out of place, emphasising πάντα ἄνθρωπον. Besides, in this Gospel, "coming into the world" is not used of human birth, but of appearance in one's place among men. And still further ἐρχόμενον of this verse is obviously in contrast with the ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ ἦν of the next, and the subject of both clauses must be the same. (2) The second construction, with τὸ φῶς, was advocated by Grotius ("valde mihi se probat expositio quae apud Cyrillum et Augustinum exstat, ut hoc ἐρχόμενον referatur ad τὸ φῶς," cf. iii. 19, xii. 46, xviii. 37), and has been adopted by Godet, who renders thus: "(That light) was the true light which lighteth every man, by coming (itself) into the world". If this were John's meaning, it is difficult to see why he did not insert οὗτος as in the second verse or τοῦτο. (3) The third construction, with ἦν, has much to recommend it, and has been adopted by Westcott, Holtzmann, and others. The R. V. margin renders as if ἦν ἐρχόμενον were the periphrastic imperfect commonly used in N. T., "the true light which enlighteneth every man was coming into the world," i.e., at the time when the Baptist was witnessing, the true light was dawning on the world. Westcott, however, thinks it best to take it "more literally and yet more generally as describing a coming which was progressive, slowly accomplished, combined with a permanent being, so that both the verb (was) and the participle (coming) have their full force and do not form a periphrasis for an imperfect". And he translates: "There was the light, the true light which lighteth every man; that light was, and yet more, that light was coming into the world".—Ver. 10. ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ . . . οὐκ ἔγνω. Vv. 10 and 11 briefly summarise what happened when the Logos, the Light, came into the world. John has said: "The Light was coming into the world"; take now a further step, ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ ἦν, and let us see what happened. Primarily rejection. The simplicity of the statement, the thrice repeated κόσμος, and the connecting of the clauses by a mere καί, deepens the pathos. The Logos is the subject, as is shown by both the second and the third clause.

Westcott thinks that the action of the Light which has been comprehensively viewed in ver. 9 is in vv. 10, 11 divided into two parts. "The first part (ver. 10) gathers up the facts and issues of the manifestation of the Light as immanent. The second part (ver. 11) contains an account of the special personal manifestation of the Light to a chosen race." That is possible; only the obvious advance from the ἐρχόμενον of ver. 9 to the ἦν of ver. 10 is thus obscured. Certainly Westcott goes too far when he says: "It is impossible to refer these words simply to the historical presence of the Word in Jesus as witnessed to by the Baptist".

Ver. 11. εἰς τὰ ἴδια ἦλθεν, "He came to His own". In the world of men was an inner circle which John calls τὰ ἴδια, His own home. (For the meaning of τὰ ἴδια cf. xix. 27, xvi. 32, Acts xxi. 6, 3 Macc. iv. 27-37, Esther v. 10, Polybius, Hist., ii. 57, 5.) Perhaps in this place "His own property" might give the sense as accurately. Israel is certainly signified; the people and all their institutions existed only for Him. (See Exod. xix. 5, Deut. vii. 6, "The Lord thy God hath chosen thee to be a special people, a peculium, unto Himself"; also Mt. xxi. 33.)—οἱ ἴδιοι, those of His own home (His intimates, cf. xiii. 1), those who belonged to Him, αὐτὸν οὐ παρέλαβον "gave Him no reception". The word is used of welcoming to a home, as in xiv. 3, πάλιν ἐρχομαι καὶ παραλήμφομαι ὑμᾶς πρὸς ἑμαυτὸν. Even those whose whole history had been a training to know and receive Him rejected Him. It is not said of "His own" that they did not "know" Him, but that they did

17. 43. 12. ὅσοι δὲ ἔλαβον αὐτὸν, ἔδωκεν αὐτοῖς ἔξουσίαν τέκνα Θεοῦ
 m ii. 23; iii. γενέσθαι, τοῖς πιστεύουσιν εἰς τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ. 13. οἱ οὐκ ἐξ 18. αἱμάτων, οὐδὲ ἐκ θελήματος σαρκὸς, οὐδὲ ἐκ θελήματος ἀνδρῶς, n iii. 5. Jan. 1. 18. ἀλλ' ἐκ Θεοῦ ἔγεννήθησαν.
 o With i. 5, 6, ἀλλ' ἐκ Θεοῦ ἔγεννήθησαν.
 Mt. i. 5, 6. 16. Ch. iii.
 5, 6. 1 Jo. passim.

not receive Him. And in the parable of the Wicked Husbandmen our Lord represents them as killing the heir not in ignorance but because they knew him.—Ver. 12. But not all rejected Him. ὅσοι δὲ ἔλαβον . . . ὄνομα αὐτοῦ. ὅσοι, as many as, as if they were a countable number (Holtzmann), or, rather, suggesting the individuality of exceptional action on the part of those who received Him.—ἔδωκεν αὐτοῖς, to them (resuming ὅσοι by a common construction) He gave ἔξουσίαν, not equivalent to δύναμις, the inward capacity, nor just equivalent to saying that He made them sons of God, but He gave them title, warrant, or authorisation, carrying with it all needed powers. Cf. v. 27, x. 18, xix. 10, Lk. ix. 1., Mk. vi. 7, where ἔξουσία includes and implies δύναμις.—τέκνα Θεοῦ γενέσθαι, to become children of God. Weiss (Bibl. Theol., § 150) says: “To those who accept Him by faith Christ has given not sonship itself, but the power to become sons of God; the last and highest realisation of this ideal, a realisation for the present fathomless, lies only in the future consummation”. Rather, with Stevens, “to believe and to be begotten of God are two inseparable aspects of the same event or process” (Johan. Theol., p. 251). John uses τέκνα rather than the Pauline υἱὸς τ. θ., because Paul’s view of sonship was governed by the Roman legal process of adopting a son who was not one’s own child: while John’s view is mystical and physical, the begetting of a child by the communication of the very life of God (1 John, passim). This distinction underlies the characteristic use of υἱὸς by the one writer and τέκνον by the other (cf. Westcott, Epistles of St. John, p. 123). By the reception of Christ as the Incarnate Logos we are enabled to recognise God as our Father and to come into the closest possible relation to Him. Those who thus receive Him are further identified as τοῖς πιστεύουσιν εἰς τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ, “those who believe (believers, present participle) in His name”.—πιστεύειν εἰς τινα is the favourite construction with John, and emphasises the object on which the faith rests. Here that object is τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ, the sum of all characteristic qualities which attach to the bearer of the name: “quippe qui credant esse eum id ipsum, quod nomen declarat” (Holtzmann). It is impossible to identify this “name” with the Logos, because Jesus never proclaimed Himself under this name. Other definite names, such as Son of God or Messiah, can here only be proleptic, and it is probably better to leave it indefinite, and understand it in a general sense of those who believed in the self-manifestation of Christ, and were characterised by that belief.—Ver. 13. οἱ οὐκ ἐξ αἱμάτων . . . ἐγεννήθησαν. This first mention of τέκνα Θεοῦ suggests the need of further defining how these children of God are produced. The ἐκ denotes the source of the relationship. First he negatives certain ordinary causes of birth, not so much because they could be supposed in connection with children of God (although thoughts of hereditary rights might arise in Jewish minds) as for the sake of emphasising by contrast the true source.—οὐκ ἐξ αἱμάτων; that is, not by ordinary physical generation. αἷμα was commonly used to denote descent; Acts xvii. 26, Odys. iv. 611, αἱματος εἰς ἀγάθοιο. This is rather a Greek than a Hebrew expression. The plural αἱμάτων has given rise to many conjectural explanations; and the idea currently received is that it suggests the constituent parts of which the blood is composed (Godet, Meyer). Westcott says: “The use of the plural appears to emphasise the idea of the element out of which in various measures the body is formed”. Both explanations are doubtful. The plural is used very commonly in the Sept., 2 Sam. xvi. 8, ἀνὴρ αἱμάτων σῦ; Ps. xxv. 9, μετὰ ἀνδρῶν αἱμάτων; 2 Chron. xxiv. 25, etc.; and especially where much slaughter or grievous murder is spoken of. Cf. Eurip., Iph. in Taur., 73. It occurs in connection with descent in Eurip., Ion., 693, ἄλλων τραφεὶς ἐξ αἱμάτων (Lücke). The reason of John’s preference for the plural in this place is not obvious; he may perhaps have wished to indicate that all family 14. Καὶ ὁ λόγος Ἦσάρξ ἐγένετο, καὶ ἔσκηνωσεν ἐν ἡμῖν, (καὶ ῑ Tim. iii. 16. Heb. ἔθεασάμεθα τὴν δόξαν αὐτοῦ, δόξαν ἔως μονογενοῦς ἔπαρὰ πατρός), ῑ Zech. ii. 10, 11. Rev. vii. iv. 24.

ῑ xxī. 3, etc. ῑ Jo. I. 1.

ῑ Mt. vii. 29.

ῑ vi. 45; x. 18; xv. 26.

histories and pedigrees were here of no account, no matter how many illustrious ancestors a man could reckon, no matter what bloods united to produce him.— οὐδὲ . . . ἄνδρος. The combination of these clauses by οὐδὲ . . . οὐδὲ and not by οὔτε . . . οὔτε excludes all interpretations which understand these two clauses as subdivisions of the foregoing. οὐδέ adds negation to negation: οὔτε divides a single negation into parts (see Winer, p. 612). "Nor of the will of the flesh," *i.e., not as the result of sexual instinct; "nor of the will of a man," i.e., not the product of human purpose ("Fortschritt von Stoff zum Naturtrieb und zum persönlichen Thun," Holtzmann). Cf. Delitzsch, Bibl. Psych., p. 290, note E. Tr.—ἀλλ' ἐκ θεοῦ ἐγεννήθησαν. The source of regeneration positively stated. Human will is repudiated as the source of the new birth, but as in physical birth the life of the child is at once manifested, so in spiritual birth the human will first manifests regeneration. In spiritual as in physical birth the origination is from without, not from ourselves; but just because our spiritual birth is spiritual the will must take its part in it. Nothing is spiritual into which the will does not enter.*

Vv. 14-18. The manifestation of the Logos defined as Incarnation.—Ver. 14. καὶ ὁ λόγος Ἦσάρξ ἐγένετο, "and the Word became flesh". This is not a mere repetition. John has told us that the Logos came into the world, but now he emphasises the actual mode of His coming and the character of the revelation thus made, καὶ "simply carrying forward the discourse" (Meyer) and now introducing the chief statement (Luthardt). It is this great statement to which the whole prologue has been directed; and accordingly he names again the great Being to whom he at first introduced us but whom he has not named since the first verse. As forcibly as possible does he put the contrast between the prior and the subsequent conditions, ὁ λόγος Ἦσάρξ ἐγένετο; he does not even say ἄνθρωπος but Ἦσάρξ. He wishes both to emphasise the interval crossed, λόγος, Ἦσάρξ; and to direct attention to the visibility of the manifestation. Cf. 1 Tim. iii. 16, ἐφανέρωθη ἐν σαρκί; 1 John iv. 2, ἐν σαρκὶ ἠληλυθώς; also Heb. ii. 14. "Flesh expresses here human nature as a whole regarded under the aspect of its present corporal embodiment, including of necessity the 'soul' (xii. 27) and the 'spirit' (xi. 33, xiii. 21) as belonging to the totality of man" (Westcott). The copula is ἐγένετο, and what precisely this word covers has been the problem of theology ever since the Gospel was written. The Logos did not become flesh in the sense that He was turned into flesh or ceased to be what He was before; as a boy who becomes a man ceases to be a boy. By his use of the word ἐκένωσεν in connection with the incarnation Paul intimates that something was left behind when human nature was assumed; but in any case this was not the Divine essence nor the personality. The virtue of the incarnation clearly consists in this, that the very Logos became man. The Logos retaining His personal identity, "became" man so as to live as man.—καὶ ἔσκηνωσεν ἐν ἡμῖν, "and tabernacled among us"; not only appeared in the flesh for a brief space, manifesting Himself as a Being apart from men and superior to human conditions, but dwelt among us ("non tantum momento uno apparuisse, sed versatum esse inter homines," Calvin). The "tent," σκηνή, suggests no doubt temporary occupation, but not more temporary than human life. Cf. 2 Cor. v. 1, 2 Pet. i. 13. And both in classical and N.T. Greek σκηνοῦν had taken the meaning "dwell," whether for a long or a short time. Cf. Rev. vii. 15, xii. 12, and Raphel, Annot. in loc. From the use of the word in Xenophon to denote living together and eating together Brentius would interpret in a fuller sense: "Filius ille Dei carne indutus, inter nos homines vixit, nobiscum locutus est, nobiscum convivatus est". But the association in John's mind was of course not military, but was rather with the Divine tabernacle in the wilderness, when Jehovah pitched His tent among the shifting tents of His people, and shared even in their thirty-eight years of punishment.

v ver. 7. 15. Ἰωάννης μαρτυρεῖ ὅτι ἐπεὶ αὐτοῦ, καὶ κέκραγε λέγων, "Οὗτος
 w Const
 vii. 55; n. ἦν ὃν εἶπον,<sup>1</sup> "Ὁ ὀπίσω μου ἐρχόμενος, ἔμπροσθέν μου γέγονεν."
 x Col. i. 19. ὅτι πρῶτός μου ἦν." 16. Καὶ<sup>2</sup> ἐκ τοῦ πληρώματος αὐτοῦ ἡμεῖς

<sup>1</sup> T.R. in  $\aleph^{cb}AB^3DL$ , etc.; οὗτος ἦν ο εἶπον, as a parenthesis, in  $\aleph A^3C^*$ .

<sup>2</sup> T.R. in  $AC^3EF$ ; οτι in  $\aleph BC^*DL$  33.

Whether there is an allusion to the  $\eta\eta\eta\eta$  has been doubted, but it is probable. The Shekinah meant the token of God's presence and glory, and among the later Jews at all events it was supposed to be present not only in the temple but with individuals. See Schoettgen in loc. and Weber, Die Lehren des Talmud, § 39. What the tabernacle had been, the dwelling of God in the midst of the people, the humanity of the Logos now was.—καὶ ἐθεασάμεθα τὴν δόξαν αὐτοῦ, we, among whom He lived, beheld by our own personal observation the glory of the incarnate Logos. "Beheld," neither, on the one hand, only by spiritual contemplation (Baur), nor, on the other, merely with the bodily eye, by which the glory could not be seen. This "beholding" John treasured as the wealth and joy of his life. The "glory" they saw was not like the cloud or dazzling light in which God had manifested His glory in the ancient tabernacle. It was now a true ethical glory, a glory of personality and character, manifesting itself in human conditions. It is described as something unique, δόξαν ὡς μονογενοῦς παρὰ πατρός, "a glory as of an only begotten from a father".—ὡς introduces an illustrative comparison, as is indicated by the anarthrous μονογενοῦς. Holtzmann expands thus: "The impression which the glory made was of so specific a character that it could be taken for nothing less than such a glory as an only son has from a father, that is, as the only one of its kind; for besides the μονογενής a father has no other sons". But the expression is no doubt suggested by the immediately preceding statement that as many as received Christ were born of God. The glory of the Incarnate Logos, however, is unique, that of an only begotten. In the connection, therefore, the application of the relation of Father and Son to God and Christ is close at hand and obvious, although not explicitly made. "The thought centres in the abstract relation of Father and Son, though in the actual connection this abstract relation passes necessarily into the relation of the Son to the Father." Westcott.—παρὰ πατρός more naturally follows δόξαν than μονογενοῦς. The glory proceeds from the Father and dwells in the only begotten wholly, as if there were no other children required to reflect some rays of the Divine glory. Accordingly He is πλήρης. With what is πλήρης to be construed? Erasmus thinks with Ἰωάννης following. Codex Bezae reads πλήρη and joins it to δόξαν. Many interpreters consider it to be one of those slight irregularities such as occur in Mk. xii. 40 and Phil. iii. 19 and in the Apo., and would unite it either with αὐτοῦ or μονογενοῦς. But (pace Weiss) there is no good reason why we should not accept it as it stands and construe it in agreement with the nominative to ἐσκήνωσε.—χάριτος καὶ ἀληθείας. His glory consisted in the moral qualities that appeared in Him. What these qualities were will appear more readily from ver. 17.—Ver. 15. Ἰωάννης μαρτυρεῖ . . . πρῶτός μου ἦν. At first sight this verse seems an irrelevant interpolation thrust in between the πλήρης of ver. 14 and the πλήρωμα of ver. 16. Euthymius gives the connection: εἰ καὶ μὴ ἐγώ, φησι, δοκῶ τισιν ἴσως ἀξιοπίστους, ἀλλὰ πρὸ ἐμοῦ ὁ Ἰωάννης μαρτυρεῖ περὶ τῆς θεότητος αὐτοῦ Ἰωάννης ἐκεῖνος οὐ τὸ ὄνομα μέγα καὶ περιβόητον παρὰ πάντι τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις. "John witnesses and cries, saying οὗτος ἦν ὃν εἶπον. This was He of whom I said ὁ ὀπίσω μου ἐρχόμενος," etc. This testimony was given to Andrew and John, ver. 30; but when the previous "saying" occurred we do not know, unless it be referred to the answer to the authorities, ver. 27. The meaning of the testimony will be considered in the next section of the Gospel, which is entitled "The Testimony of John".—Ver. 16. ὅτι ἐκ τοῦ πληρώματος . . . χάριτος, "because out of His fulness have we all received". The ὅτι does not continue the Baptist's testimony, but refers to πλήρης in ver. 14. In Col. ii. 9 Paul says that in Christ dwelleth all the πλήρωμα of the Godhead, meaning to repudiate the πάντες ἐλάβομεν καὶ χάριν ἄντι χάριτος· 17. ὅτι ὁ νόμος διὰ γ Cr. Ia. vii. 19. z Rom. iii 24.

 Μωσέως ἐδόθη, ἢ ἡ χάρις καὶ ἡ ἀλήθεια διὰ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ ἐγένετο.
 18. Ἐθεὸν οὐδεὶς ἑώρακε πώποτε· ὁ μονογενὴς υἱὸς,<sup>1</sup> ὁ ὢν εἰς τὸν α viii. 32; xiv. 6.
b Exod. xxxiii. 20. Eclus. xliiii. 31.

<sup>1</sup> Instead of the reading of the T.R., ο μονογενὴς υἱος, several modern editors read μονογενὴς θεος. For the T.R. the authorities are AC<sup>2</sup>X and some other uncials; of versions the old Latin and the Vulgate, Curetonian Syriac, Armenian and Ethiopic; almost all the cursives and the great body of the Fathers—all the Latin Fathers after the fourth century. For μονογενὴς θεος the uncials ΞBC<sup>2</sup>L and cursive 33; the Peshito and Harklean Syriac in margin, and the Memphitic; and of the Greek Fathers Clement of Alexandria, Valentinus in Irenaeus, Epiphanius, Basil, etc. These authorities and the text they witness to have been discussed by the late Dr. Hort in his Two Dissertations, and by Ezra Abbot in his Critical Essays, pp. 241-285. The MS. authority favours the reading θεος; while the versions and the Fathers weigh rather in the opposite scale. Internal evidence is on the whole in favour of the T.R. The reading θεος is rejected by Scrivener, Wordsworth, McLellan, Tischendorf, Meyer, Godet, Lücke, Holtzmann, and Weizsäcker. It should be noted, as brought out by Ezra Abbot, that the Arians were quite willing to call the Son ο μονογενὴς θεος, because in their view this appellation happily distinguished Him from the Father who alone was God in the highest sense, unbegotten, uncaused, and without beginning.

Gnostic idea that this pleroma was distributed among many subordinate beings or æons. But what John has here in view is that the fulness of grace in Christ was communicable to men. By ἡμεῖς πάντες he indicates himself and all other Christians. He had himself experienced the reality of that grace with which Christ was filled and its inexhaustible character. For he adds καὶ χάριν ἄντι χάριτος, "grace upon grace". Beza suggests the rendering: ("ut quidam vir eruditus explicat," he says): "Gratiam supra gratiam; pro quo eleganter dixeris, gratiam gratia cumulatam," but he does not himself adopt it. It is, however, adopted by almost all modern interpreters: so that ever and anon fresh grace appears over and above that already received. This rendering, as Meyer points out, is linguistically justified by Theognis, Sent., 344, ἀντ' ἀνιῶν ἄνίας, sorrows upon sorrows; and it receives remarkable illustration from the passage quoted by Wetstein from Philo, De Poster. Cain., where, speaking of grace, he says that God does not allow men to be sated with one grace, but gives ἐτέρας ἀντ' ἐκείνων (the first) καὶ τρίτας ἀντι τῶν δευτέρων καὶ αἰ νέας ἀντι παλαιότερων. Harnack (Hist. of Dogma, i., 76, E. Tr.) asks: "Where in the history of mankind can we find anything resembling this, that men who had eaten and drunk with their Master should glorify Him, not only as the Revealer of God, but as the Prince of Life, as the Redeemer and Judge of the world, as the living power of its existence, and that a choir of Jews and Gentiles, Greeks and barbarians, wise and foolish, should along with them immediately confess that out of the fulness of this one man they have received grace for grace?" —Ver. 17. ὅτι ὁ νόμος . . . ἐγένετο. What is the connection? His statement that the Incarnate Logos was the inexhaustible supply of grace might seem to disparage Moses and the previous manifestations of God. He therefore explains. And he seems to have in view the same distinction between the old and the new that is so frequently emerging in the Pauline writings. Through Moses, here taken as representing the pre-Christian dispensation, was given the law, which made great demands but gave nothing, which was a true revelation of God's will, and so far was good, but brought men no ability to become like God. But through Jesus Christ (here for the first time named in the Gospel, because we are now fully on the ground of history) came grace and truth. In contrast to the inexorable demands of a law that brought no spiritual life, Jesus Christ brought "grace," the unearned favour of God. The Law said: Do this and live; Christ says: God gives you life, accept it. "Truth" also was brought by Christ.—ἀλήθεια here means "reality" as opposed to the symbolism of the Law (cf. iv. 23). In the Law was a shadow of good things to come: in Christ we have the good things themselves. Several good critics ε Deut. xiii.<sup>o</sup> κόλπον τοῦ πατρὸς, ἐκεῖνος ἐξηγήσατο. 19. Καὶ αὕτη ἐστὶν ἡ μαρτυρία τοῦ Ἰωάννου, ὅτε ἀπέστειλαν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι ἐξ Ἱεροσολύμων ἱερεῖς καὶ Λευίτας, ἵνα ἐρωτήσωσιν αὐτὸν, "Σὺ τίς εἶ;" 20. Καὶ ὠμολόγησε, καὶ οὐκ ἤρνήσατο· καὶ ὠμολόγησεν, "Ὅτι οὐκ εἰμὶ find a contrast between ἐδόθη and ἐγένετο; the law being "given" for a special purpose, "grace and truth" "coming" in the natural course and as the issue of all that had gone before.—Ver. 18. θεὸν οὐδεὶς ἑώρακεν . . . ἐξηγήσατο. This statement, "God no one has ever seen," is probably suggested by the words διὰ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ. The reality and the grace of God we have seen through Jesus Christ, but why not directly? Because God, the Divine essence, the Godhead, no one has ever seen. No man has had immediate knowledge of God: if we have knowledge of God it is through Christ.

A further description is given of the Only Begotten intended to disclose His qualification for revealing the Father in the words ὁ ὢν εἰς τὸν κόλπον τοῦ πατρὸς. Meyer supposes that John is now expressing himself from his own present standing point, and is conceiving of Christ as in His state of exaltation, as having returned to the bosom of the Father. But in this case the description would not be relevant. John adds this designation to ground the revealing work which Christ accomplished while on earth (ἐξηγήσατο, aorist, referring to that work), to prove His qualification for it. It must therefore include His condition previous to incarnation. ὁ ὢν is therefore a timeless present and εἰς is used, as in Mk. xiii. 16, Acts viii. 40, etc., for ἐν. εἰς τὸν κόλπον, whether taken from friends reclining at a feast or from a father's embrace, denotes perfect intimacy. Thus qualified, ἐκεῖνος ἐξηγήσατο "He" emphatic, He thus equipped, "has interpreted" what? See viii. 32; or simply, as implied in the preceding negative clause, "God". The Scholiast on Soph., Ajax, 320, says, ἐξήγησις ἐπὶ θεῶν, ἐρμηνεία ἐπὶ τῶν τυχόντων, Wetstein.

Ver. 19. With this verse begins the Gospel proper or historical narrative of the manifestation of the glory of the Incarnate Logos.

Vv. 19-42. The witness of John and its result.—Vv. 19-28. The witness of John to the deputation from Jerusalem, entitled αὕτη ἐστὶν . . . Λευίτας. The witness or testimony of John is placed first, not only because it was that which influenced the evangelist himself, nor only because chronologically it came first, but because the Baptist was commissioned to be the herald of the Messiah. The Baptist's testimony was of supreme value because of (1) his appointment to this function of identifying the Messiah, (2) his knowledge of Jesus, (3) his own holiness, (4) his disinterestedness.—αὕτη, this which follows, is the testimony given on a special occasion ὅτε ἀπέστειλαν . . . Λευίτας, "when the Jews sent to him from Jerusalem priests and Levites".—Ἰουδαῖοι [Ἰουδαῖοι], originally designating the tribes of Judah and Benjamin which formed the separate kingdom of Judah, but after the exile denoting all Israelites. In this Gospel it is used with a hostile implication as the designation of the "entire theocratic community as summed up in its official heads and as historically fixed in an attitude of hostility to Christ" (Whitelaw). Here "the Jews" probably indicates the Sanhedrim, composed of priests, presbyters, and scribes.—ἱερεῖς καὶ Λευίτας, the higher and lower order of temple officials (Holtzmann). Why were not scribes sent? Possibly because John's father was himself a priest. The priests were for the most part Sadducees, but John tells us this deputation was strong in Pharisees (ver. 24). Lampe says: "Custodibus Templi incumbibat, Dominum Templi, cujus adventum expectabant, nosse". They were sent ἵνα ἐρωτήσωσιν αὐτόν, "that they might interrogate him," not captiously but for the sake of information. Lk. tells us (iii. 15) that the people were on the tiptoe of expectation, and were discussing whether John were not the Christ; so it was time the Sanhedrim should make the inquiry. "The judgment of the case of a false prophet is specially named in the Mishna as belonging to the council of the Seventy One" (Watkins). "This incident gives a deep insight into the extraordinary religious life of the Jews—their unusual combination of conservatism with progressive thought" (Reynolds' John the Baptist, p. 365).—Σὺ τίς εἶ, "Who art thou?" Not, what is your name, or birth, but, what personage do you claim to be, ἐγὼ ὁ Χριστός." 21. Καὶ ἠρώτησαν αὐτὸν, "Τί οὖν, ἡλίας εἶ δ Mal. iv. 5. σύ;" Καὶ λέγει, "Οὐκ εἰμί." "Ὁ προφήτης εἶ σύ;" Καὶ <sup>Deut. xviii. 15.</sup> ἀπεκρίθη, "Οὐ." 22. Εἶπον<sup>1</sup> οὖν αὐτῷ, "Τίς εἶ; ἵνα ἀποκρισῶν<sup>1</sup> εἰς. 9. Job xxxiii. 3. δώμεν τοῖς πέμψασιν ἡμᾶς· τί λέγεις περὶ σεαυτοῦ;" 23. Ἐφη, "Ἐγὼ φωνὴ βοῶντος ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ, Εὐθύνετε τὴν ὁδὸν Κυρίου." <sup>Is. xl. 3.</sup>

<sup>1</sup> T.R. in  $\text{BAC}^2\text{L}$ ;  $\text{ειπαν}$  in  $\text{BC}^2\text{D}$ .

what place in the community do you aspire to?—with an implied reference to a possible claim on John's part to be the Christ. This appears from John's answer,  $\omega\mu\omicron\lambda\omicron\gamma\eta\sigma\epsilon\nu$  καὶ οὐκ ἠρνήσατο καὶ ὠμολόγησεν. Schoettgen says the form of the sentence is "judaico more," citing "Jethro confessus, et non mentitus est". Cf. Rom. ix. 1 and 1 Tim. ii. 7. The iteration serves here to bring out the earnestness, almost horror, with which John disclaimed the ascription to him of such an honour. His high conception of the office emphasises his acknowledgment of Jesus.— $\delta\tau\iota$ , here, as commonly, "recitative," serving the purpose of our inverted commas or marks of quotation.—ἐγὼ οὐκ εἰμί ὁ Χριστός, the reading adopted by Tisch. and W.H., bringing the emphasis on the "I". "I am not the Christ," but another is. The T.R. οὐκ εἰμί ἐγὼ ὁ Χριστός, by bringing the ἐγὼ and ὁ Χριστός together, accentuates the incongruity and the Baptist's surprise at being mistaken for the Christ. This straightforward denial evokes another question (ver. 21), τί οὖν; which Weiss renders, "What then art thou?" Better "what then?" "what then is the case?" quid ergo, quid igitur?—ἡλίας εἶ σύ; If not the Christ Himself, the next possibility was that he was the forerunner of the Messiah, according to Mal. iv. 5, "Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord". [Among the Fathers there seems to have been a belief that Elias would appear before the second Advent. Thus Tertullian (De anima, 50) says: "Translatu est Enoch et Elias, nec mors eorum reperta est, dilata scilicet. Caeterum morituri reservantur, ut Antichristum sanguine suo exstinguant." Other references in Lampe.] But to this question also John answers οὐκ εἰμί, because the Jews expected Elias in person, so that although our Lord spoke of the Baptist as Elias (Mt. xvii. 10-13), John could not admit that identity without misleading them. If people need to question a great spiritual personality, replies in their own language will often mislead them. Another alternative presented itself: ὁ προφήτης εἶ σύ; "art thou the prophet?" viz., the prophet promised in Deut. xviii. 15, "The Lord thy God will raise up unto thee a prophet from the midst of thee, like unto me". Allusion is made to this prophet in four places in this Gospel, the present verse and ver. 25 of this chapter; also in vi. 14 and vii. 40. That the Jews did not see in this prophet the Messiah would appear from the present verse, and also from vii. 40: "Some said, Of a truth this is the prophet; others said, This is the Christ". The Jews looked for "a faithful prophet" (1 Macc. xiv. 41) who was to terminate the prophetic period and usher in the Messianic reign. But after Peter, as recorded in Acts iii. 22, applied the prophecy of Deut. to Christ, the Christian Church adopted this interpretation. The use of the prophecy by Christ Himself justified this. But the different interpretations thus introduced gave rise to some confusion, and as Lightfoot points out, none but a Jew contemporary with Christ could so clearly have held the distinction between the two interpretations. (See Deane's Pseudepigr., p. 121; Wendt's Teaching of Jesus, E. Tr., i., 67; and on the relation of "the prophet" to Jeremiah, see Weber, p. 339.) To this question also John answered "No"; "quia Prophetis omnibus erat praestantior" (Lampe). This negation is explained by the affirmation of ver. 23. Thus baffled in all their suggestions the deputies ask John to give them some positive account of himself, that they might not go back to those who sent them without having accomplished the object of their mission. To this second τίς εἶ; τί λέγεις περὶ σεαυτοῦ; (ver. 23) he replies in words made familiar by the Synoptists, ἐγὼ φωνὴ βοῶντος ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ . . . ὁ προφήτης; John applies to himself the words of Is. xl. 3, blending the two clauses  $\epsilon\iota\sigma\tau\omicron\mu\epsilon\iota\sigma\alpha\tau\epsilon$  τὴν ὁδὸν Κυρίου and  $\epsilon\upsilon\theta\upsilon\eta\iota\sigma\alpha\tau\epsilon$  τὰς τρίβους τοῦ θεοῦ ἡμῶν into one: εὐθύνετε τὴν καθὼς εἶπεν Ἡσαΐας ὁ προφήτης." 24. Καὶ οἱ<sup>1</sup> ἀπεσταλμένοι ἦσαν ἐκ τῶν Φαρισαίων· 25. καὶ ἠρώτησαν αὐτὸν, καὶ εἶπον αὐτῷ, "Τί οὖν βαπτίζεις, εἰ σὺ οὐκ εἶ ὁ Χριστὸς, οὔτε Ἡλίας, οὔτε ὁ προφήτης;"

δ Mt. iii. 11. 26. Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰωάννης λέγων, "Ἐγὼ βαπτίζω<sup>2</sup> ἐν ὕδατι·
Lk. iii. 16.
I Mt. xiv. 24. ἡ μέσος δὲ ὑμῶν ἔστηκεν,<sup>3</sup> ὃν ὑμεῖς οὐκ οἴδατε. 27. αὐτὸς ἐστὶν ὁ
A rare
const., usually infm. or
gen.
ὀπίσω μου ἐρχόμενος, ὃς ἔμπροσθέν μου γέγονεν· οὐ ἐγὼ οὐκ εἰμι ἀξίος ἵνα λύσω αὐτοῦ τὸν ἱμάντα τοῦ ὑποδήματος." 28. Ταῦτα ἐν Βηθανίᾳ<sup>3</sup> ἐγένετο πέραν τοῦ Ἰορδάνου, ὅπου ἦν Ἰωάννης βαπτίζων.

<sup>1</sup> T.R. in  $\aleph^b A^2 C^3$ , etc.; without article in  $\aleph^* A^* B C^*$ .

<sup>2</sup> T.R. in ACX, etc.;  $\sigma\tau\eta\kappa\epsilon\iota$  in BL, adopted by W.H.R.

<sup>3</sup> βηθανια in  $\aleph^* A B C^* E F G$ , etc., adopted by Tr.T.W.H.R.

ὄδῳ Κυρίου. By appropriating this prophetic description John identifies himself as the immediate precursor of the Messiah; and probably also hints that he himself is no personage worthy that inquiry should terminate on him, but only a voice. [Heracleon neatly graduates revelation, saying that the Saviour is ὁ λόγος, John is φωνή, the whole prophetic order ἦχος, a mere noise; for which he is with some justice rebuked by Origen.] "The desert," a pathless, fruitless waste fitly symbolises the spiritual condition of the Messiah's people. For the coming of their King preparation must be made, especially by such repentance as John preached. "If Israel repent but for one day, the Messiah will come." Cf. Weber, p. 334.—Ver. 24. καὶ ἀπεσταλμένοι ἦσαν ἐκ τῶν Φαρισαίων. This gives us the meaning "And they had been sent from," which is not so congruous with the context as "And they who were sent were of the Pharisees"; because apparently this clause was inserted to explain the following question (ver. 25): τί οὖν βαπτίζεις . . . ὁ προφήτης; Founding on Zech. xiii. 1, "In that day there shall be a fountain opened for sin and for uncleanness," and on Ezek. xxxvi. 25, "then will I sprinkle clean water upon you," they expected a general purification before the coming of the Messiah. Hence their question. If John was not the Messiah, nor the prophet, nor Elias in close connection with the Messiah, why did he baptise? Lightfoot (Hor. Heb., p. 965) quotes from Kiddushin "Elias venit ad immundos distinguendum et ad purificandum". See also Ammonius and Beza quoted in Lampe. In reply to this objection of the Pharisees (ver. 26) John says: ἐγὼ βαπτίζω . . . τοῦ ὑποδήματος, "I for my part baptise with water"; the emphatic "I" leading us to expect mention of another with whom a contrast is drawn. This contrast is further signified by the mention of the element of the baptism, ἐν ὕδατι; a merely symbolic element, but also the element by baptism in which preparation for the Messiah was to be made. And John's administration of this precursory baptism is justified by the fact he immediately states, μέσος ὑμῶν στήκει δὲ ὑμεῖς οὐκ οἴδατε. Had they been aware of this presence (ὑμεῖς emphatic) as John was aware of it, they could not have challenged the baptism of John, because it was the divinely appointed preparation for the Messiah's advent. This scarcely amounts to what Lampe calls it, "nova exprobratio ignorantiae Pharisaeorum" (Is. xlii. 19, xxix. 14), because as yet they had had no opportunity of knowing the Christ.—μέσος ὑμῶν. There is no reason why the words should not be taken strictly. So Euthymius, ἦν γὰρ ὁ Χριστὸς ἀναμειγμένος τότε τῷ λαῷ.—ὀπίσω μου ἐρχόμενος, denoting the immediate arrival of the Messiah and John's close connection with Him. He is further described relatively to John as inconceivably exalted above him, οὐ οὐκ εἰμι . . . ὑποδήματος. The grammatical form admitting both the relative and pers. pronoun is Hebraistic. ἀξίος ἵνα also stands instead of the classical construction with the infinitive. Talmudists quote the saying: "Every service which a servant will perform for his master, a disciple will do for his Rabbi, except loosing his sandal thong".—Ver. 28. ταῦτα ἐν Βηθανίᾳ . . . βαπτίζων. The place is mentioned on account of the importance of the testimony thus borne to Jesus, and because the evangelist himself in all probability was present and it was natural to him to name it. But where was it? There is no doubt that

29. Τῇ ἐπαύριον βλέπει ὁ Ἰωάννης τὸν Ἰησοῦν ἐρχόμενον πρὸς αὐτὸν, καὶ λέγει, “Ἴδε ὁ ἄμνος τοῦ Θεοῦ, ὁ αἴρων τὴν ἁμαρτίαν”

Exod. xii.
3. 1 Cor.
v. 7.
1 Heb. i. 3.
1 Jo. ii. 2. 1 Pet. i. 19.

the reading Βηθανία is to be preferred. The addition πέραν τοῦ Ἰορδάνου confirms this reading; as the existence of Bethany near Jerusalem rendered the distinguishing designation necessary.

Bethany = בֵּית הַנַּיִת meaning “boat-house,” and Bethabara having the same meaning [עֲבָרָה a ferry boat] is it not possible that the same place may have been called by both names indifferently? Henderson (Palestine, p. 154) suggests that possibly the explanation of the doubtful reading is that the place referred to is Bethabara which led over into Bethania, that is, Bashan. Similarly Conder (Handbook, p. 320) says Bethania beyond Jordan is evidently the province of Batanea, and the ford Abārah now discovered leads into Batanea. At this place “John was baptizing,” rather than “John was baptizing.”

Vv. 29-34. The witness of John based on the sign at the baptism of Jesus.—Ver. 29. τῇ ἐπαύριον, the first instance of John's accurate definition of time. Cf. 35, 43, ii. 1. The deputation had withdrawn, but the usual crowd attracted by John would be present. “The inquiries made from Jerusalem would naturally create fresh expectation among John's disciples. At this crisis,” etc. (Westcott).—βλέπει τὸν Ἰησοῦν ἐρχόμενον πρὸς αὐτόν. Jesus had quite recently returned from the retirement in the wilderness, and naturally sought John's company. Around John He is more likely to find receptive spirits than elsewhere. And it gave His herald an opportunity to proclaim Him, ἴδε ὁ ἄμνος τοῦ θεοῦ ὁ αἴρων τὴν ἁμαρτίαν τοῦ κόσμου. The article indicates that a person who could thus be designated had been expected; or it may merely be introductory to the further definition of the succeeding clause.—τοῦ θεοῦ, provided by God; cf. “bread of God,” vi. 33; also Rom. viii. 32. It is impossible to suppose with the author of Ecce Homo that by this title “the lamb of God” the Baptist merely meant to designate Jesus as a man “full of gentleness who could patiently bear the ills to which He would be subjected” (cf. Aristoph., Pax, 935). The second clause forbids this interpretation. He is a lamb αἴρων τὴν ἁμαρτίαν.

and there is only one way in which a lamb can take away sin, and that is by sacrifice. The expression might suggest the picture of the suffering servant of the Lord in Is. liii., “led as a lamb to the slaughter,” but unless the Baptist had previously been speaking of this part of Scripture, it is doubtful whether those who heard him speak would think of it. In Isaiah it is as a symbol of patient endurance the lamb is introduced; here it is as the symbol of sacrifice. It is needless to discuss whether the paschal lamb or the lamb of daily sacrifice was in the Baptist's thoughts. He used “the lamb” as the symbol of sacrifice in general. Here, he says, is the reality of which all animal sacrifice was the symbol.—ὁ αἴρων, the present participle, indicating the chief characteristic of the lamb. αἴρω has three meanings: (1) to raise or lift up, John viii. 59, ἦραν λίθους; (2) to bear or carry, Mt. xvi. 24, ἀράτω τὸν σταυρὸν αὐτοῦ; (3) to remove or take away, John xx. 1, of the stone ἠρμένον from the sepulchre; and 1 John iii. 5, ἵνα τὰς ἁμαρτίας ἄρῃ, that He might take away sins. In the LXX φέρειν, not αἴρειν, is regularly used to express the “bearing” of sin (see Leviticus, passim). In 1 Sam. xv. 25 Saul beseeches Samuel in the words ἄρον τὸ ἁμάρτημά μου, which obviously means “remove” (not “bear”) my sin. So in 1 Sam. xxv. 28. But a lamb can remove sin only by sacrificially bearing it, so that here αἴρειν includes and implies φέρειν.—τοῦ κόσμου, cf. 1 John ii. 2, αὐτὸς ἰλασμός ἐστι . . . περὶ ὅλου τοῦ κόσμου, and especially Philo's assertion quoted by Wetstein that some sacrifices were ὑπὲρ ἁπαντος ἀνθρώπων γένους.

In this verse Holtzmann finds two marks of late date. (1) The Baptist was markedly a man of his own people, whose eye never ranged beyond a Jewish horizon; yet here he is represented as from the first perceiving that the work of Jesus was valid for all men. And (2) the allusion to the sacrificial efficacy of Christ's death could not have been made till after that event. Strauss stated this difficulty with his usual lucidity. “So foreign to the current opinion at least was this notion of the Messiah that the disciples of Jesus, during the whole τοῦ κόσμου. 30. οὗτός ἐστι περὶ<sup>1</sup> οὐ ἐγὼ εἶπον, Ὅπισω μου ἔρχεται ἀνὴρ, ὃς ἔμπροσθέν μου γέγονεν, ὃτι πρῶτός μου ἦν.

31. κἀγὼ οὐκ ᾔδειν αὐτόν· ἀλλ' ἵνα φανερωθῇ τῷ Ἰσραὴλ, διὰ
 m Mk. i. 10. τοῦτο ἦλθον ἐγὼ ἐν τῷ ὕδατι βαπτίζων." 32. Καὶ ἐμαρτύρησεν
 Mt. iii. 16.
 Lk. iii. 22. Ἰωάννης λέγων, "Ἐ" Ὅτι τεθέαμαι τὸ Πνεῦμα καταβαῖνον ὡσεὶ period of their intercourse with Him, could not reconcile themselves to it; and when His death had actually taken place their trust in Him as the Messiah was utterly confounded." Yet Strauss himself admits that "a penetrating mind like that of the Baptist might, even before the death of Jesus, gather from the O.T. phrases and types the notion of a suffering Messiah, and that his obscure hints on the subject might not be comprehended by his disciples and contemporaries". The solution is probably to be found in the intercourse of John with Jesus, and especially after His return from the Temptation. These men must have talked long and earnestly on the work of the Messiah; and even though after his imprisonment John seems to have had other thoughts about the Messiah, that is not inconsistent with his making this statement under the direct influence of Jesus. We must also consider that John's own relation to the Messianic King must have greatly stimulated his thought; and his desire to respond to the cravings he stirred in the people must have led him to consider what the Messiah must be and do.

<sup>1</sup> ὑπερ in NBC, Origen. Cp. 2 Thess. ii. 1, and 2 Cor. i. 8. This use common in late Greek prose. Cp. Holden's note in Plutarch, Demosth., p. 181.

Ver. 30. οὗτος . . . πρῶτός μου ἦν. Pointing to Jesus he identifies Him with the person of whom he had previously said ὀπίσω μου, etc. Cf. ver. 15. "After me comes a man who is before me because He was before me." The A.V. "which is before me" is preferable though not so literal as the R.V. "which is become before me". The words mean: "Subsequent to me in point of time comes a man who has gained a place in advance of me, because He was eternally prior to me".—ὀπίσω μου ἔρχεται refers rather to space than to time, "after me," but with the notion of immediacy, close behind, following upon. As certainly, ἔμπροσθέν μου γέγονεν refers to position or dignity; He has come to be in front of me, or ahead of me. So used sometimes in classic writers; as ἔμπροσθ. τοῦ δικαίου, preferred before justice. Dem., 1297, 26.

—ὃτι πρῶτός μου ἦν, assigning the ground of this advanced position of Jesus: He was before me. For πρῶτός μου see chap. xv. 18, "If the world hateth you, ye know ὃτι ἐμὲ πρῶτον ὑμῶν μείσηκεν," and Justin Martyr, 1 Apol., 12. It is difficult to escape the impression that something more is meant than πρότερος would have conveyed, some more absolute priority. As οἱ πρῶτοι στρατοῦ are the chief men or leaders, it might be supposed that John meant to say that Christ was his supreme, in virtue of whom he himself lived and worked. But it is more probable he meant to affirm the pre-existence of the Messiah, a thought which may have been derived from the Apocalyptic books (see Deane's Pseud. and Drummond's Jewish Mess.).—Ver. 31. κἀγὼ οὐκ ᾔδειν αὐτόν, i.e., I did not know Him to be the Messiah. Mt. iii. 14 shows that John knew Jesus as a man. This meaning is also determined by the clause added: ἀλλ' ἵνα . . . ἐν ὕδατι βαπτίζων. The object of the Baptist's mission was the manifestation of the Christ. It was the Baptist's preaching and the religious movement it initiated which summoned Jesus into public life. He alone could satisfy the cravings quickened by the Baptist. And it was at the baptism of Jesus, undergone in sympathy with the sinful people and as one with them, that the Spirit of the Messiah was fully imparted to Him and He was recognised as the Messiah. How John himself became convinced that Jesus was the Messiah he explains to the people, vv. 32-4.—Ver. 32. τεθέαμαι τὸ πνεῦμα . . . ἐπ' αὐτόν. "I have seen the Spirit coming down like a dove out of heaven, and it remained upon Him." "I have seen, perfect, in reference to the sign divinely intimated to him, in the abiding fulfilment of which he now stood." Alford. τεθέαμαι is used (as in ver. 14) in its sense of seeing with intelligence, with mental or spiritual observation and inference (cf. Aristoph., Clouds, 363, περιστερὰν ἐξ οὐρανοῦ, καὶ ἔμεινεν ἐπ' αὐτόν. 33. καὶ γὰρ οὐκ ἤδεν αὐτόν· ἀλλ' ὁ πέμψας με βαπτίζειν ἔν ὕδατι, ἐκεῖνός μοι ver. 26 εἶπεν, Ἐφ' ὃν ἂν ἴδῃς τὸ Πνεῦμα καταβαῖνον καὶ μένον ἐπ' αὐτόν, οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ βαπτίζων ἐν Πνεύματι Ἁγίῳ. 34. καὶ γὰρ ἐώρακα, καὶ μεμαρτύρηκα ὅτι οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ."

"Have you ever seen it rain without clouds?"). In what sense did the Baptist "see" the Spirit descending? Origen distinctly declared that these words οικονομίας τρόπον γέγραπται οὐχ ἱστορικὴν διήγησιν ἔχοντα ἀλλὰ θεωριὰν νοητήν, ii. 239. The ὡς περιστερὰν ἐξ οὐρανοῦ does not necessarily involve that an actual dove was visible. It was not the dove which was to be the sign; but, as the Baptist affirms in ver. 33, the descent and abiding of the Spirit. John was scarcely the type of man who would be determined in an important course of action by the appearance of a bird. What he saw was the Spirit descending. This he can best have seen in the demeanour of Jesus, in His lowliness and sympathy and holiness, all of which came to their perfect bloom at and in His baptism. It was the possession of this spirit by Jesus that convinced John that He could baptise with the Holy Spirit. That this conviction came to him at the baptism of Christ with a clearness and firmness which authenticated it as divine is guaranteed by the words of this verse. It was as plain to him that Jesus was possessed by the Spirit as if he had seen the Spirit in a visible shape alighting upon Him. To a mind absorbed in this one idea it may have actually seemed as if he saw it with his bodily eyes. Ambrose, De Sacram., i., 5, "Spiritus autem sanctus non in veritate columbae, sed in specie columbae descendit de coelo". The dove was in the East a sacred bird, and the brooding dove was symbolic of the quickening warmth of nature. In Jewish writings the Spirit hovering over the primeval waters is expressly compared to a dove: "Spiritus Dei ferebatur super aquas, sicut columba, quae fertur super pullos suos nec tangit illos". Cf. also Noah's dove as symbol of the new creation. (See Suicer, s.v., περιστέρα, and Strauss, i., 362.) Such a symbol of the Spirit would scarcely have been imagined by the Baptist, who was all for stern and violent methods.—Ver. 33. καὶ γὰρ οὐκ ἤδεν . . . ἐκεῖνός μοι εἶπεν. Because of the importance of the identification of the Messiah the Baptist reiterates that his proclamation of Jesus was not a private idea for which he alone was responsible. On the contrary, He who had sent him to baptise had given him this sign by which to recognise the Christ.—ἐφ' ὃν ἂν ἴδῃς . . . πνεύματι ἁγίῳ. Lk. (iii. 16) adds καὶ πυρί, which occasions the well-known utterance in Ecce Homo: "Baptism means cleansing, and fire means warmth. How can warmth cleanse? The answer is that moral warmth does cleanse. No heart is pure that is not passionate; no virtue is safe that is not enthusiastic. And such an enthusiastic virtue Christ was to introduce." In affirming that the Christ baptises with the Holy Spirit, and that this is what distinguishes the Christ, the Baptist steps on to ground where his affirmations can be tested by experience. This is the fundamental article of the Christian creed. Has Christ power to make men holy? History gives the answer. The essence of the Holy Spirit is communication: Jesus being the Christ, the anointed with the Spirit, must communicate it.—Ver. 34. καὶ γὰρ ἐώρακα . . . ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ. "And I have seen and have testified that this is the Son of God." The Synoptists tell us that a voice was heard at the baptism declaring "this is my beloved Son"; and in the Temptation Satan uses the title. Nathanael at the very beginning of the ministry, and the demoniacs very little later, use the same designation. This was in a rigidly monotheistic community and in a community in which the same title had been applied to the king, to designate a certain alliance and close relation between the human representative and the Divine Sovereign. Whether the Baptist in his peculiar circumstances had begun to suspect that a fuller meaning attached to the title, we do not know. Unquestionably the Baptist must have found his ideas of the Messianic office expanding under the influence of intercourse with Jesus, and must more than ever have seen that this was a unique title setting Jesus apart from all other men. The basis of the application of the title to the Messiah is to be found in 2 Sam. vii. 14, "I will be to him a Father

35. Τῇ ἐπαύριον πάλιν<sup>1</sup> εἰσῆλκει ὁ Ἰωάννης, καὶ ἐκ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ δύο. 36. καὶ ἐμβλέψας τῷ Ἰησοῦ περιπατοῦντι, λέγει, "Ἴδε ὁ ἀμνὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ." 37. Καὶ ἤκουσαν αὐτοῦ οἱ δύο μαθηταὶ λαλοῦν-
9. P. xxvii. τος, καὶ ἠκολούθησαν τῷ Ἰησοῦ. 38. στραφεῖς δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ
8. Lk. xi. 9. θεασάμενος αὐτοὺς ἀκολουθοῦντας, λέγει αὐτοῖς, 39. "Τί ζητεῖτε;"

<sup>1</sup> For the two forms εἰσῆλκει and ἰσῆλκει see Veitch.

and he will be to me a Son". In the second and eighty-ninth Psalms the term is seen passing into a Messianic sense, and that it should appear in the N.T. as a title of the Messiah is inevitable.

Vv. 35-42. Witness of John to two of his disciples and first self-manifestation of Jesus as the Christ. Bengel entitles the section, vv. 35-52, "primae origines Ecclesiae Christianae"; but from the evangelist's point of view it is rather the blending of the witness of John with the self-manifestation of Jesus. His kingly lordship over men He reveals (1) by making Himself accessible to inquirers: Andrew and John; (2) by giving a new name, implying new character: Simon becomes Peter; (3) by summoning men to follow Him: Philip; (4) by interpreting and satisfying men's deepest desires and aspirations: Nathanael.—Ver. 35. τῇ ἐπαύριον . . . αὐτοῦ δύο. On the morrow John was again standing (ἰσῆλκει, pluperfect with force of imperfect) and two of his disciples. [Holtzmann uses this close riveting of day to day as an argument against the historicity of this part of the Gospel. He says that no room is left for the temptation between the baptism and the marriage in Cana. But these repeated "mornings" take us back, not to the baptism, which is nowhere in this Gospel directly narrated, but to the Baptist's conversation with the deputation from Jerusalem, in which it is implied that already the baptism of Jesus was past; how long past this Gospel does not state, but, quite as easily as not, six weeks may be inserted between the baptism of Jesus and the deputation.]—πάλιν looks back to ver. 29. Then no results followed John's testimony: now results follow. Two of his disciples stood with him, Andrew (ver. 41) and probably John.—Ver. 36. The Baptist, ἐμβλέψας τῷ Ἰησοῦ, having gazed at, or contemplated (see Mt. vi. 26, ἐμβλέψατε εἰς τὰ πέτεινά, and especially Mk. xiv. 67, καὶ ἰδοῦσα τὸν Πέτρον . . . ἐμβλέψασα) Jesus as He walked, evidently not towards John as on the previous day, but away from him.—λέγει Ἴδε ὁ ἀμνὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ without the added clause of ver. 29.—Ver. 37. καὶ ἤκουσαν . . . τῷ Ἰησοῦ. "And the two disciples heard him speaking"—possibly implying that the day before they had not heard him—"and they followed Jesus"; the Baptist does not bid them follow, but they feel that attraction which so often since has been felt.—Ver. 38. στραφεῖς δὲ . . . τί ζητεῖτε; Jesus, hearing their steps behind Him, turns. To all who follow He gives their opportunity. Having turned and perceived that they were following Him, He asks τί ζητεῖτε; the obvious first inquiry, but perhaps with a breath in it of that Fan which the Baptist had warned them to expect in the Messiah; as if, Are you seeking what I can give? They reply Ῥαββέι . . . μένεις; Lightfoot (Hor. Heb.) tells us that "Rabbi" was a new title which had not been used long before the Christian era, and possibly arose during the rivalries of the schools of Hillel and Shammai. The word means "my greatness". Cf. His Majesty, etc., and for the absorption of the pronoun cf. monsieur or madame. See Lampe. As it occurs here for the first time John translates it, and renders by διδάσκαλε, Teacher; so that as yet they were scarcely prepared to give Him the greater title. Lord, or Messiah. Unready with answer to His question they put another which may stand for an answer, ποῦ μένεις; where are you staying, where are you dwelling? So used in N.T., Lk. xix. 5, and in later Greek, Polybius, 30, 4, 10, and 34, 9, 9, of dwelling for a short time in a place; not so much implying, as Holtzmann suggests, that they wished to go to His lodging that they might have more uninterrupted talk with Him; for that scarcely fits Oriental habits; but rather implying that they were shy of prolonging intercourse and wished to know where they might find Him another time. From this unsatisfactory issue they are saved by His frank invitation (ver. 40) ἔρχεσθε καὶ ὄψεσθε. "Come and ye shall see." Use the opportunity you now have. Christ's door is ever on the latch: He is always accessible.—ἤλθαν οὖν . . . ὡς δεκάτη. The two men remained in conversation with Jesus during the remainder of the day [but Grotius gives the sense as “ibidem pernoctarunt, quia jam serum erat”], a day so memorable to John that he recalls the very hour when they first approached Jesus, four o’clock in the afternoon. It seems that at this time throughout the Græco-Roman world one system of reckoning the hours prevailed. There is indisputable evidence that while the Romans calculated their civil day, by which leases and contracts were dated, as extending from midnight to midnight, the hours of each day were reckoned from sunrise to sunset. Thus on the Roman sun-dials noon is marked VI. (see Becker’s Gallus, p. 319). Martial’s description of the manner in which each hour was spent (Ep., iv., 8) leads to the same conclusion; and for proof that no different method was followed in the provinces, see Prof. Ramsay’s paper “On the Sixth Hour” in the Expositor, 1893. Cf. also paper by Mr. Cross in Classical Review, June, 1891.—Ver. 41. ἦν Ἀνδρέας . . . Σίμωνος. One of the two who thus first followed Christ was Andrew, known not so much in his own name as being the brother of Simon.—Πέτρον is here proleptic. We are left to infer that the other disciple was the evangelist.—Ver. 42. εὕρισκει οὗτος πρῶτος. If with T. R. and Tischendorf we read πρῶτος, the meaning is that Andrew, before John, found his brother; if with W. H. we read πρῶτον the meaning is that before Andrew did anything else, and perhaps especially before the other men afterwards named were called, he first of all finds his own brother. Reading πρῶτον, we cannot gather that John went in search also of his brother, and as there is no mention of him at this time the probability is that he was not at hand. πρῶτον is the note of warning that this was but the beginning of a series of calls.—εὕρηκαμεν τὸν Μεσσίαν. “We have found,” perhaps, as Weiss suggests, with reference to the expectations produced by the Baptist’s teaching. The result of their conversation with Jesus is summed up in these words. They were now convinced that He was the Christ. In Jewish lips “we have found the Messiah” was the most comprehensive of all Eureka’s. That John gives the actual words, though he has immediately to translate one of them for his Greek readers, is not without significance in regard to his accuracy in reporting.—Ver. 43. καὶ ἤγαγεν αὐτὸν πρὸς τὸν Ἰησοῦν. He was not content to allow his report to work in his brother’s mind, but induced him there and then, though probably on the following day, as now it must have been late, to go to Jesus.—ἐμβλέψας . . . Πέτρος. Jesus may have known Simon previously, or may have been told his name by Andrew. “Thou art Simon, Jonah’s son, or better, John’s son. Thou shalt be called Kephas.” This name, Kephas or Peter, stone or mass of rock, Simon did receive at Caesarea Philippi on his confession of Jesus as the Christ (Mt. xvi. 17, 18); a confession prompted not by “flesh and blood,” that is, by his brother’s experience, but by his own inwrought and home-grown conviction. The reason of this utterance to Simon is understood when it is considered that the name he as yet bore, Simon Barjona, was identified with a character full of impulsiveness; which might well lead him to suppose he would only bring mischief to the Messiah’s kingdom. But, says Christ, thou shalt be called Rock. Those who enter Christ’s kingdom believing in Constr. vide Burton, M. and T., 341. Mk. i. 16. r vi. 45.

Οἱ δὲ εἶπον αὐτῷ, “Ραββί,” (ὃ λέγεται ἐρμηνευόμενον, Διδάσκαλε,) “ποῦ μένεις;” 40. λέγει αὐτοῖς, “Ἐρχεσθε καὶ ἴδετε.” Ἦλθον καὶ εἶδον <sup>2</sup> ποῦ μένει· καὶ παρ’ αὐτῷ ἔμειναν τὴν ἡμέραν ἐκείνην· <sup>3</sup> ὦρα δὲ ἦν ὡς δεκάτη. 41. Ἦν <sup>4</sup> Ἀνδρέας ὁ ἀδελφὸς Σίμωνος Πέτρου, εἰς ἐκ τῶν δύο τῶν ἀκουσάντων <sup>5</sup> παρὰ Ἰωάννου, καὶ ἀκολουθησάντων αὐτῷ. 42. εὕρισκει οὗτος πρῶτος <sup>1</sup> τὸν ἀδελφὸν τὸν ἴδιον Σίμωνα, καὶ λέγει αὐτῷ, “Εὕρηκαμεν τὸν Μεσσίαν,” (ὃ ἐστὶ μεθερμηνευόμενον, ὁ Χριστός·) 43. καὶ ἤγαγεν αὐτὸν πρὸς τὸν Ἰησοῦν. ἐμβλέψας δὲ αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπε, “Σὺ εἶ Σίμων ὁ υἱὸς Ἰωάνᾳ <sup>2</sup>. σὺ κληθήσῃ <sup>1</sup> Κηφᾶς·” ὃ ἐρμηνεύεται Πέτρος.

<sup>1</sup> πρῶτον in  $\aleph^2$ ABM.

<sup>2</sup> T.R. in AB<sup>3</sup>, etc.; ἰωανου in  $\aleph$ B\*L 33.

Acts x. 38. Mt. xvi. 18. Here only in John. 8 times in Paul.

α Freg. In 44. Τῇ ἐπαύριον ἠθέλησεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐξελθεῖν εἰς τὴν Γαλιλαίαν.
John.
 ν Is. lxx. 1. καὶ εὗρίσκει Φίλιππον, καὶ λέγει αὐτῷ, “Ἀκολουθεῖ μοι.” 45.
 w xii. 21.
 x xxi. 2. Ἦν δὲ ὁ Φίλιππος ἀπὸ Βηθσαϊδᾶ, ἐκ τῆς πόλεως Ἀνδρέου καὶ y Gen. xlix.
 10. Deut. Πέτρου. 46. Εὗρίσκει Φίλιππος τὸν Ἐπιφάνη, καὶ λέγει αὐτῷ, xviii. 18. “Ἦν δὲ ὁ Φίλιππος ἀπὸ Βηθσαϊδᾶ, ἐκ τῆς πόλεως Ἀνδρέου καὶ 15. ix. 6. Πέτρου. 46. Εὗρίσκει Φίλιππος τὸν Ἐπιφάνη, καὶ λέγει αὐτῷ, Mic. v. 2. “Ἦν δὲ ὁ Φίλιππος ἀπὸ Βηθσαϊδᾶ, ἐκ τῆς πόλεως Ἀνδρέου καὶ Constr. vide Rom. x. 3.

Him receive a character fitting them to be of service.

Vv. 44-52. Further manifestations of Jesus as Messiah.—Vv. 44. τῇ ἐπαύριον . . . Γαλιλαίαν. “The day following He would go forth,” that is, from the other side of Jordan, into Galilee, probably to His own home.—καὶ εὗρίσκει Φίλιππον, “and He finds,” “lights upon,” Philip (cf. vi. 5, xii. 21, xiv. 3). To him He utters the summons, ἀκολουθεῖ μοι, which can hardly have the simple sense, “accompany me,” but must be taken as the ordinary call to discipleship (Lk. ix. 59, Mt. xix. 21, etc.).—Ver. 45. ἦν δὲ ὁ Φίλιππος . . . Πέτρου. This is inserted to explain how Jesus happened to meet Philip: he was going home also; and to explain how Philip’s mind had been prepared by conversation with Andrew and Peter. The exact position of Bethsaida is doubtful. There was a town or village of this name (Fisher-Home) on the east bank of Jordan, slightly above its fall into the Sea of Galilee. This place was rebuilt by Philip and named Julias, in honour of the daughter of Augustus. Many good authorities think that this was the only Bethsaida (see Dr. G. A. Smith’s Hist. Geog. of Palestine, p. 457). Others, however, are of opinion that the manner in which Bethsaida, here and in xii. 21, is named with an added note of distinction, “the city of Andrew,” “of Galilee,” requires us to postulate two Bethsaidas. This is further confirmed by the movements recorded in vi. 16-22. Cf. Mk. vi. 45. Those who accept two Bethsaidas locate the one which is here mentioned either opposite Bethsaida Julias and as a kind of suburb of it or farther south at Ain Tabigha (see Rob Roy on the Jordan, 342-392).—Ver. 46. εὗρίσκει . . . Ναζαρέτ. Philip in turn finds Nathanael, probably on the road from the Bethany ford homewards. Nathanael is probably the same person as is spoken of in the Synoptical Gospels as Bartholomew, i.e., Bar Tolmai, son of Ptolemy. This is usually inferred from the following: (1) Both here and in chap. xxi. 2 he is classed with apostles; (2) in the lists of apostles given in the Synoptical Gospels Bartholomew is coupled with Philip; (3) while Nathanael is never mentioned by the Synoptists, Bartholomew is not mentioned by John. The two names might quite well belong to one man, Bartholomew being a patronymic. Nathanael means “God’s gift,” Theodore, or, like Augustine’s son, Adeodatus. Philip announces the discovery in the words ὃν ἔγραψεν . . . Ναζαρέτ. On which Calvin remarks: “Quam tenuis fuerit modulus fidei in Philippo hinc patet, quod de Christo quatuor verba profari nequit, quin duos crassos errores permisceat. Facit illum filium Joseph, et patriam Nazareth falso illi assignat.” This is too stringent. He draws the conclusion that where there is a sincere purpose to do good and to proclaim Christ, success will follow even where there is error. Nazareth lies due west from the south end of the Sea of Galilee, and about midway between it and the Mediterranean.—Ver. 47. Philip’s announcement is received with incredulity.—Ἐκ Ναζαρέτ δύναται τι ἀγαθὸν εἶναι; “Can anything good be from Nazareth.” Cf. viii. 52, “out of Galilee ariseth no prophet”. Westcott, representing several modern interpreters, explains: “Can any blessing, much less such a blessing as the promised Messiah, arise out of a poor village like Nazareth, of which not even the name can be found in the O.T.?” But probably Nathanael was influenced by the circumstance that he himself was of Cana (xxi. 2), only a few miles from Nazareth, and with the jealousy which usually exists between neighbouring villages (inter accolat odium) found it hard to believe that Nazareth could produce the Messiah (cf. Is. liii. 2, “a root out of a dry ground”). From this remark of Nathanael’s light is reflected on the obscurity and unobtrusiveness of the youth of Jesus. Though living a few miles off, Nathanael never heard of Him. To his incredulity Philip wisely replies, ἔρχου καὶ ἴδε; as

'Ιησοῦν τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ Ἰωσήφ τὸν ἀπὸ Ναζαρέτ." 47. Καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ Ναθαναήλ, "Ἐκ Ναζαρέτ δύναται τι ἀγαθὸν εἶναι;" Λέγει αὐτῷ Φίλιππος, "Ἐρχου καὶ ἴδε." 48. Εἶδεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς τὸν Ναθαναήλ ἔρχόμενον πρὸς αὐτὸν, καὶ λέγει περὶ αὐτοῦ, "Ἴδε ἄληθῶς Gen. xxv 26 Ἰσραηλῆτης, ἐν ᾧ δόλος οὐκ ἔστι." 49. Λέγει αὐτῷ Ναθαναήλ, "Πόθεν με γινώσκεις;" Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, "Πρὸ τοῦ σε Φίλιππον φωνῆσαι, ὄντα ὑπὸ τὴν συκῆν, εἰδόν σε." 50. Ἀπεκρίθη Ναθαναήλ καὶ λέγει αὐτῷ, "Ῥαββί, σὺ εἶ ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ

Bengel says, "optimum remedium contra opiniones praeconceptas". And Nathanael shows himself to be willing to have his preconceptions overcome. He goes with Philip.—Ver. 48. εἶδεν . . . δόλος οὐκ ἔστιν. The honesty shown in his coming to Jesus is indicated as his characteristic. He had given proof that he was guileless. In Gen. xxvii. 35 Isaac says to Esau, "Thy brother has come and μετὰ δόλου ἔλαβε τὴν εὐλογίαν σου". And it was by throwing off this guile and finding in God his dependence that Jacob became Israel. So that in declaring Nathanael to be a guileless Israelite, Jesus declares him to be one who does not seek to win blessing by earthly means but by prayer and trust in God.—Ver. 49. The significance of this utterance is further shown by what follows. Naturally Nathanael is surprised by this explicit testimony from one with whom he has had no acquaintance and who has notwithstanding truly described him, and he asks, πόθεν με γινώσκεις; "how do you know me?" perhaps imagining that some common friend had told Jesus about him. But Jesus ascribes it to another cause: πρὸ τοῦ σε Φίλιππον φωνῆσαι ὄντα ὑπὸ τὴν συκῆν εἶδόν σε, I saw thee under the fig tree before Philip called thee (not, I saw thee somewhere else before Philip called thee when you were under the fig tree). "Under the fig tree" is obviously significant. Such trees were planted by the wayside (Mt. xxi. 19), and the large thick leaf afforded shade. It was the favourite garden tree of the Jews, so that "sitting under one's fig tree" meant being at home (Micah iv. 4, Zech. iii. 10). The tree formed a natural harbour affording shade and privacy. Thus Schoettgen quotes that it is related of Rabbi Jose and his disciples, "solebant summo mane surgere et sedere et studere sub ficu". And Lightfoot (Hor. Heb., in loc.) says that Nathanael was "aut orans, aut legens, aut meditans, aut aliquid religiosum praestans, in secessu sub aliquâ ficu et extra conspectum hominum". But evidently Nathanael understood that Jesus had not only seen him when he thought he was unobserved, but had penetrated his thought in retirement, and understood and sympathised with his prayer under the fig tree, for the impression made upon him by this knowledge of Jesus is profound.—Ver. 50. Ῥαββεί, he exclaims, σὺ εἶ ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ θεοῦ, σὺ βασιλεὺς εἶ τοῦ Ἰσραήλ. Nathanael had been praying for the manifestation of the Messiah: now he exclaims Thou art He. That Nathanael used both expressions, Son of God, and King of Israel, we may well believe, for he found both in the second Psalm. And it is probable that he used both as identifying Jesus with the Messiah (see chap. xi. 27, xii. 13-15). It is not likely that he would pass from a higher designation to a lower; more probable that by the second title he means more closely to define the former. Thou art the Son of God, fulfilling the ideal of sonship and actually realising all that prophecy has uttered regarding the Son of God: Thou art the ideal, long-expected King of Israel, in whom God's reign and kingdom are realised on earth. "The words are an echo of the testimony of the Baptist. Nothing can be more natural than to suppose that the language of John had created strange questionings in the hearts of some whom it had reached, and that it was with such thoughts Nathanael was busied when the Lord 'saw' him. If this were so, the confession of Nathanael may be an answer to his own doubts" (Westcott).—Ver. 51. ἀπεκρίθη . . . ὄψη. In accordance with the habit of this evangelist, who calls attention to the moving cause of faith in this or that individual, the source of Nathanael's faith is indicated with some surprise that it should have proved sufficient; and with the announcement that his nascent

- <sup>a</sup> Rarely act. = stand open, vide Veitch. θεοῦ, σὺ εἶ ὁ βασιλεὺς τοῦ Ἰσραήλ. 51. Ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, “Ὅτι εἶπόν σοι, εἶδόν σε ὑποκάτω τῆς σικκῆς, πιστεύεις; μεῖζω τούτων ὄψει.” 52. Καὶ λέγει αὐτῷ, “Ἀμήν ἀμήν λέγω ὑμῖν, ἀπ’ ἄρτι <sup>1</sup> ὄψεσθε τὸν οὐρανὸν <sup>a</sup> ἀνεωγῶτα, καὶ <sup>b</sup> τοὺς ἀγγέλους τοῦ <sup>c</sup> θεοῦ ἀναβαίνοντας καὶ καταβαίνοντας ἐπὶ τὸν οὐδὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου.”
- <sup>b</sup> Gen. xxviii. 12. ἀπ’ ἄρτι <sup>1</sup> ὄψεσθε τὸν οὐρανὸν <sup>a</sup> ἀνεωγῶτα, καὶ <sup>b</sup> τοὺς ἀγγέλους τοῦ <sup>c</sup> θεοῦ ἀναβαίνοντας καὶ καταβαίνοντας ἐπὶ τὸν οὐδὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου.”
- <sup>b</sup> Esth. v. 12. I Cor. II. I. ΚΑΙ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ τῇ τρίτῃ γάμος ἐγένετο ἐν <sup>a</sup> Κανᾷ τῆς <sup>x</sup> Γαλιλαίας καὶ ἦν ἡ μήτηρ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ ἐκεῖ. 2. <sup>b</sup> ἐκλήθη δὲ καὶ ὁ <sup>3</sup>

<sup>2</sup> ἀπ ἄρτι rejected by Tr. T.W.H.R. on authority of NBL vet. Lat. vulg., etc.

faith will find more to feed upon: μεῖζω τούτων ὄψει.—Ver. 52. What these things are is described in the words ὄψεσθε . . . ἀνθρώπου, introduced by the emphatic ἀμήν, ἀμήν λέγω ὑμῖν, used in this double form twenty-five times in this Gospel (always single in Synop.) and well rendered “verily, verily”. Christ as the Faithful and True Witness is Himself called the Amen in Rev. iii. 14. The words ἀπ’ ἄρτι are omitted by recent editors. The announcement describes the result of the incarnation of Christ as a bringing together of heaven and earth, a true mediation between God and man, an opening of what is most divine for the satisfaction of human need. It is made in terms of Jacob’s dream (Gen. xxviii. 10 ff.). In his dream Jacob saw a ladder fixed on earth with its top in heaven, οἱ ἄγγελοι τοῦ θεοῦ ἀνέβαινον καὶ κατέβαινον ἐπ’ αὐτῇ. What Jacob had dreamt was in Christ realised. The Son of Man, the Messiah or actual representative of God on earth, brings God to man and makes earth a Bethel, and the gate of heaven. What Nathanael under his fig tree had been longing for and unconsciously preparing, an open communication with heaven, a ladder reaching from the deepest abyss of an earth submerged in sin to the highest heaven of purity, Jesus tells him is actually accomplished in His person. “The Son of Man” is the designation by which Jesus commonly indicates that He is the Messiah, while at the same time He suggests that His kingdom is not founded by earthly power or force, but by what is especially human, sympathy, reason, self-sacrifice.

CHAPTER II.—Vv. I-II. The marriage at Cana. The first manifestation of Christ’s glory to His disciples.—Ver. 1. As usual John specifies time and place and circumstance. The time was τῇ ἡμέρᾳ τῇ τρίτῃ. The Greeks reckoned σήμερον, αὔριον, τῇ τρίτῃ ἡμέρᾳ. So

Lk. xiii. 32, ἰάσεις ἐπιτελῶ σήμερον καὶ αὔριον, καὶ τῇ τρίτῃ τελειοῦμαι. The “third day” was therefore what we call “the day after to-morrow”. From what point is this third day calculated? From i. 41 or i. 44? Probably the latter. Naturally one refers this exact specification of time to the circumstance that the writer was present. The place was ἐν Κανᾷ τῆς Γαλιλαίας, “of Galilee” to distinguish it from another Cana, as in all countries the same name is borne by more than one place (Newcastle; Tarbet; Cleveland, Ohio, and Cleveland, N.Y.; Freiburg). This other Cana, however, was not the Cana of Josh. xix. 28 in the tribe of Asher (Weiss, Holtzmann); but more probably Cana in Judaea (cf. Henderson’s Palestine, p. 152; Josephus, Antiq., xiii., 15, 1; and Lightfoot’s Disq. Chorog. Joh. præmissa). Opinion is now in favour of identifying “Cana” with Kefr Kenna, five miles north-east of Nazareth on the road to the Sea of Galilee. Robinson (Researches, iii., 108 and ii., 346) identified it with Khurbet Kâna, three hours north of Nazareth, because ruins there were pointed out to him as bearing the name Kâna el Jelil, Cana of Galilee. Dr. Zeller, however, who resided at Nazareth, declares that Khurbet Kâna is not known to the natives as Kâna el Jelil. Major Conder (Tent Work, i., 153), although not decided in favour of Kefr Kenna, shows that the alteration in the form of the name can be accounted for, and that its position is in its favour (Henderson’s Palestine, 151-3).—γάμος ἐγένετο, a marriage took place. Jewish marriage customs are fully described in Trumbull’s Studies in Oriental Social Life.—καὶ ἦν ἡ μήτηρ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ ἐκεῖ. This is noticed to account for the invitation given to Jesus and His disciples. Joseph is not mentioned, probably because already dead. Certainly he was dead before the crucifixion.—Ver. 2. ἐκλήθη δὲ καὶ ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ εἰς τὸν

Ἰησοῦς καὶ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ εἰς τὸν γάμον. 3. καὶ ὑστερήσαντος οἴνου,<sup>1</sup> λέγει ἡ μήτηρ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ πρὸς αὐτὸν, "Οἶνον οὐκ ἔχουσι." <sup>c</sup> Jud. xi. 12
 4. Λέγει αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Τί ἐμοὶ καὶ σοί, ἄ γύναι; * οὐπω ἦκει <sup>2</sup> Sam. xvi. 10.
 ἡ ὥρα μου." 5. Λέγει ἡ μήτηρ αὐτοῦ τοῖς διακόνοις, "Ὁ τι ἂν <sup>d</sup> xix. 26.
<sup>e</sup> vii. 6.

<sup>1</sup> T.R. in  $\aleph$ ABL vulg. cop. syr.; but  $\aleph^*$  and some vet. Lat. read οἶνον οὐκ εἶχον ὅτι συντελεσθη ὁ οἶνος τοῦ γάμου, εἶτα, "they had no wine because the wine of the marriage was finished; then . . .".

γάμον. "And both Jesus was invited and His disciples to the marriage." To translate ἐκλήθη as a pluperfect "had been invited" is grammatically possible, but it is impossible that the disciples should have been previously invited, because their existence as disciples was not known. They were invited when they appeared. The collective title οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ is anticipatory: as yet it could not be in use. The singular verb (ἐκλήθη) with a plural nominative is too common to justify Holtzmann's inference that it indicates, what of course was the fact, that the disciples were asked only in consequence of Jesus being asked. Cf. Lk. ii. 33. In this instance Jesus "came unto His own" and His own received Him, at any rate as a friend.—Ver. 3. Through this unexpected addition to the number of guests the wine began to fail, ὑστερήσαντος οἴνου. ὑστερέω, from ὑστερος, signifies "to be late," and hence "to come short of" "to lack," and also "to be awaiting". Cf. Mt. xix. 20, τί ἐπι ὑστερῶ; and Mk. x. 21, ἐν σοὶ ὑστερεῖ. Here the meaning is "the wine having failed," or "given out". Consequently λέγει ἡ μήτηρ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ πρὸς αὐτὸν, Οἶνον οὐκ ἔχουσι. Bengel supposes she wished him to leave "velim discedas, ut ceteri item discedant, antequam penuria patefiat". Calvin suggests "fieri potest, ut [mater] tale remedium [miraculum] non expectans eum admonuerit, ut pia aliqua exhortatione convivis taedium eximeret, ac simul levaret pudorem sponsi". Lampe says: "Obscurum est". Lücke thinks Jesus had given proof of His miracle-working previously. The Greek commentators and Godet suppose that when she saw Him recognised as Messiah the time for extraordinary manifestation of power had arrived. The words show that she was on terms of intimacy with the family of the bridegroom, that she knew of the failure of the wine and wished to relieve the embarrassment. She naturally turns to her oldest son, who had always in past emergencies proved helpful in counsel and practical aid. But from the words of Jesus in reply, "Mine hour is not yet come," it certainly would seem as if she had suggested that He should use Messianic powers for the relief of the wedding guests.—Ver. 4. His complete reply is, τί ἐμοὶ καὶ σοί, γύναι; οὐπω ἦκει ἡ ὥρα μου. γύναι is a term of respect, not equivalent to our "woman". See chap. xix. 26, xx. 13, Lk. xiii. 12. In the Greek tragedians it is constantly used in addressing queens and persons of distinction. Augustus addresses Cleopatra as γύναι (Dio, quoted by Wetstein). Calvin goes too far when he says that this term of address was used to correct the superstitious adoration of the Virgin which was to arise. But while there is neither harshness nor disrespect, there is distance in the expression. Wetstein hits the point when he says: "Non poterat dicere: quid mihi tecum est, mater?"—τί ἐμοὶ καὶ σοὶ represents the Hebrew מַהֲלִי רְחֵם (Judges xi. 12), and means: What have we in common? Trench gives the sense: "Let me alone; what is there common to thee and me; we stand in this matter on altogether different grounds". Or, as Holtzmann gives it, Our point of view and interests are wholly diverse; why do you mingle them?—οὐπω ἦκει ἡ ὥρα μου, not as Bengel, "discedendi hora," but, mine hour for bringing relief. This implies that He too had observed the failure of the wine and was waiting a fitting opportunity to interfere. That the same formula is more than once used by Jesus of His death (see chap. vii. 30, viii. 20) merely indicates that it could be used of any critical time. Euthymius says it here means "the hour of miracle working". Wetstein quotes from R. Sira "non quavis hora fit miraculum". Especially true is this of the first miracle of the Messiah, which would commit Him to a life of publicity ending in an ignominious death. That Mary found hope in the οὐπω is obvious from ver. 5. She did not find His reply wholly refusal.

1 iv. 28. 1 λέγει ὑμῖν, ποιήσατε." 6. Ἦσαν δὲ ἐκεῖ ὕδριαι λίθιναι ἑξ ἑκείμεναι King<sup>s</sup>
 xviii. 23. κατὰ τὸν καθαρισμὸν τῶν Ἰουδαίων, ἠωροῦσαι ἄνα μετρητὰς δύο 2 Cor. iii.
 ἢ τρεῖς. 7. λέγει αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Γεμίσατε τὰς ὕδριας ὕδατος."
 3.
 h Mk. vii. 3.
 i 2 Chron. Καὶ ἐγένισαν αὐτὰς ἕως ἄνω. 8. Καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς, "Ἀντλήσατε
 iv. 5.
 j Rev. iv. 8. Winer, p. 496. k 2 Chron. xxvi. 8.

She therefore says to the servants (ver. 5), ὃ τι ἂν λέγη ὑμῖν ποιήσατε. The διακόνοι, or servants waiting at table, might not otherwise have obeyed an unimportant guest. His orders might perhaps be of an unusual kind.—Ver. 6. There were there, hard by or in the feast-room, there were ὕδριαι λίθιναι ἑξ κείμεναι, "six stone water jars standing". Stone was believed to preserve the purity and coolness of the water. [According to Plutarch, Tib. Gracchus, these jars were sometimes used for drawing lots, wooden tablets being put in the jars and shaken.] Similar stone jars are still used in Cana and elsewhere. They were κείμεναι, set; "in purely classical Greek κείμαι is the recognised passive perfect of τίθεμαι" (Holden, Plutarch's Themist., p. 121).—κατὰ τὸν καθαρισμὸν τῶν Ἰουδαίων. For the washing of hands and vessels. Cf. Mk. vii. "Abluendi quidem ritum habebant ex Lege Dei, sed ut mundus semper nimius est in rebus externis, Judaei praescriptā a Deo simplicitate non contenti continuis aspersionibus ludebant: atque ut ambitiosa est superstitio, non dubium est quin hoc etiam pompae serviret, quemadmodum hodie in Papatu videmus, quaecunque ad Dei cultum pertinere dicuntur, ad meram ostentationem esse composita," Calvin. The number and size are given that the dimensions of the miracle may appear. There were six χωροῦσαι ἄνα μετρητὰς δύο ἢ τρεῖς, "holding two or three firkins each".—ἄνα is here distributive, a classical use; cf. also Mt. xx. 9, 10, Mk. vi. 40. Accordingly the Vulgate translates "capientes singulae metretas binas". The Attic μετρητής held about nine gallons, so that averaging the jars at twenty gallons the six would together contain 120 gallons. The English translation has firkin, that is, vierkin, the fourth of a barrel, a barrel being thirty imperial gallons. It is difficult to assign any reason for giving the number and capacity of these jars, except that the writer wished to convey the idea that their entire contents were changed into wine. This prodigality would bring the miracle into closer resemblance to the gifts of nature. Also it would furnish proof, after the marriage was over, that the transformation had been actual. The wedding guests had not dreamt it. There was the wine. It was no mesmeric trick. Holtzmann, in a superior manner, smiles at the prosaic interpreters who strive to reduce the statement to matter of fact.—Ver. 7. The first order Jesus gives to the διακόνοις is one they may unhesitatingly obey.—Γεμίσατε τὰς ὕδριας ὕδατος, "Fill the water jars with water," the water being specified in view of what was to follow.—καὶ ἐγένισαν αὐτὰς ἕως ἄνω, "and they filled them up to the brim". The corresponding expression, ἕως κάτω, is found in Mt. xxvii. 51. ἕως ἔσω and ἕως ἔξω are also found in N.T. to indicate more precisely the terminus ad quem. In this usage ἕως is not perceptibly different from a preposition. "Up to the brim" is specified not so much to indicate the abundant supply as to suggest that no room was left for adding anything to the water. The servants did all their part thoroughly, and left no apparent room for Jesus to work. Thus they became instrumental to the working of a miracle.—Ver. 8. The second order might stagger them more, Ἀντλήσατε νῦν, καὶ φέρετε τῷ ἀρχιτρικλίνῳ. The ἀρχιτρικλίνος was originally the person who had charge of the triclinium or triple couch set round a dining table: "praefectus cui instruendi ornandique triclinii cura incumbit"; a butler or head waiter whose duty it was to arrange the table and taste the food and wine. Petron. Arb. 22, "Jam et Tricliniarches expectrectus lucernis occidentibus oleum infuderat". But apparently the person indicated in this verse is rather the συμποσιάρχης or συμποσιάρχος, the chairman elected by the company from among the guests, sometimes by lot. Cf. Horace's "Arbiter bibendi," Od., ii., 7. The requirements in such an official are described in Ecclus. xxxii. 1; Plato, Laws, p. 640; see also Reid's edition of Cicero, De Senect., p. 131. In general he regulated the course of the feast and the conduct of the guests. [Holtzmann and Weiss both retain the proper meaning of

νῦν, καὶ φέρετε τῷ ἀρχιτρικλίνῳ.” Καὶ ἤνεγκαν. 9. ὃς δὲ ἐγεύσατο <sup>1</sup>Constr. see i. 40.
 ὁ ἀρχιτρικλίνος τὸ ὕδωρ οἶνον γεγεννημένον, καὶ οὐκ ἦδει <sup>1</sup>πόθεν <sup>m</sup> i. 49.
 ἐστίν· (οἱ δὲ διάκονοι ἦδισαν οἱ ἠντληκότες τὸ ὕδωρ·) <sup>m</sup> φωνεῖ τὸν <sup>n</sup> Here
 νυμφίον ὁ ἀρχιτρικλίνος, 10. καὶ λέγει αὐτῷ, “ Πᾶς ἄνθρωπος πρῶτον <sup>only, but</sup> τὸν καλὸν οἶνον <sup>cp. Bel</sup> τίθησι, καὶ ὅταν μεθυσθῶσι, τότε τὸν <sup>and the</sup> ἐλάσσω· σὺ <sup>Dracon,</sup> <sup>ver 14.</sup>
<sup>o Inferior,</sup>
<sup>cp. Wisd. ix. 5.</sup>

ἀρχιτρικλίνος.] Westcott suggests that the ἀντλήσατε νῦν may refer to drawing from the well, and that “the change in the water was determined by its destination for use at the feast”. “That which remained water when kept for a ceremonial use became wine when borne in faith to minister to the needs, even to the superfluous requirements of life,” a suggestive interpretation, but it evacuates of all significance the clause “they filled them up to the brim”. The servants obeyed, possibly encouraged by seeing that what they had poured in as water flowed out as wine; although if the words in the end of the ninth verse are to be taken strictly, it was still water when drawn from the water jars. But some refer the οἱ ἠντληκότες to drawing from the well. It is, however, more natural to refer it to the ἀντλήσατε νῦν of the eighth verse. Besides, drawing water from the well would be the business rather of the women than of the διάκονοι.—Ver. 9. The architriklinos, then, when he had tasted the water which had now become wine, and did not know whence it had been procured, and was therefore impartially judging it merely as wine among wines, φωνεῖ τὸν νυμφίον, “calls the bridegroom,” or simply “addresses the bridegroom,” and says to him πᾶς ἄνθρωπος... The usage referred to was natural: and is illustrated by the ἐωλοκρασία, the mixture of all the heeltaps with which the harder heads dosed the drunken at the end of a debauch.—ὅταν μεθυσθῶσι, “when men have drunk freely,” R.V. The Vulgate more accurately has “cum inebriati fuerint”. And if the word does not definitely mean “when men are intoxicated,” it at least must indicate a condition in which they are unfit to discriminate between good wine and bad. The company then present was not in that condition, because they were able to appreciate the good wine; but the words of the architriklinos unquestionably imply that a good deal had already been drunk. The ἕως ἄρτι involves this. The significance of the remark consists in the certificate thus given to the quality of the wine. Bengel felicitously says: “Ignorantia vini: architriclini comprobata bonitatem vini: scientia ministrorum veritatem miraculi”. Judging it by his natural taste and comparing it with the wine supplied by the host, the architriklinos pronounces this fresh supply better. What Christ introduces into the world will stand comparison with what is already in it. Christian grace must manifest itself not in sanctimonious and unpractical displays, but must stand comparison with the rough natural virtues, the courage, generosity, and force which are called for in the practical affairs of life.—Ver. 11. No answer of the bridegroom is recorded, nor any detail of the impression made, but John notes the incident as “the beginning of signs”.—ταύτην ἐποίησεν ἀρχήν, deleting the article with Tisch. and W.H., and rendering “This as a beginning of signs did Jesus,” from which it can scarcely be gathered that no insight mentioned in the first chapter was considered by John to be supernatural. It is characteristic of this Gospel that the miracles are viewed as signs, or object lessons. The feeding of the five thousand presents Jesus as the bread of God; the strengthening of the impotent man exhibits Him as the giver of spiritual life; and so forth. So that when John here says that by this miracle Jesus ἐφάνερωσε τὴν δόξαν αὐτοῦ, we are prompted to ask what particular aspect of His glory was manifested here. What was there in it to elicit the faith and reverence of the disciples? (1) He appears as King in physical nature. He can use it for the furtherance of His purposes and man's good. He is, as declared in the Prologue, that One in whom is life. (2) A hint is given of the ends for which this creative power is to be used. It is, that human joy may be full. These disciples of the Baptist perceive a new kind of power in their new Master, whose goodness irradiates the natural joys and domestic incidents of human life. (3) When John recorded this miracle he saw how fitly it stood as the first rehearsing as it did the entire τετήρηκας τὸν καλὸν οἶνον ἕως ἄρτι." 11. Ταύτην ἐποίησε τὴν ἄρχὴν τῶν ὁσημείων ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐν Κανᾷ τῆς Γαλιλαίας, καὶ ἐφάνερωσε τὴν δόξαν αὐτοῦ· καὶ ἐπίστευσαν εἰς αὐτὸν οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ.

 12. ΜΕΤΑ τούτου κατέβη εἰς Καπερναοῦμ,<sup>1</sup> αὐτὸς καὶ ἡ μήτηρ αὐτοῦ, καὶ οἱ ἄδελφοὶ αὐτοῦ, καὶ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ· καὶ ἐκεῖ ἔμειναν p John

passim, and freq.
 in Synopt.

q Mt. xii.
 46.

<sup>1</sup> Καφαρναοῦμ in NBX, adopted by T. Tr. W. H.

work of Christ, who came that human happiness might not untimely close in shame. Wine had become the symbol of that blood which brought reconciliation and renewal. Seeing this sign and the glory manifested in it ἐπίστευσαν εἰς αὐτὸν οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ. "Testimony (i. 36) directs those who were ready to welcome Christ to Him. Personal intercourse converts followers into disciples (ii. 2). A manifestation of power, as a sign of divine grace, converts discipleship into personal faith" (Westcott). "Crediderunt amplius" (Bengel). The different grades, kinds, and types of faith alluded to in this Gospel are a study. Sanday remarks on the unlikelihood of a forger making such constant allusion to the disciples. That they believed would seem a truism. If they had not, they would not have been disciples. It would have been more to the point to tell us the effect on the guests, and a forger would hardly have failed to do so. But John writes from the disciples' point of view. Not happy are the attempts to interpret this seeming miracle as a cleverly prepared wedding jest and gift (Paulus); or as a parable (Weisse), or as a hastened natural process (Augustine, Olshausen). Holtzmann finds here an artistic Lehrdichtung, an allegory rich in suggestion. Water represents all that is mere symbol as contrasted with spirit and reality. The period of symbolism is represented by the water baptism of John: this was to find its realisation in Jesus. The jars which had served for the outward washings of Judaism were by Jesus filled with heart-strengthening wine. The O.T. gift of water from the rock is superseded by the gift of wine. Wine becomes the symbol of the spiritual life and joy of the new kingdom. With this central idea the details of the incident agree: the helplessness of the old oecumeny, "they have no wine"; the mother of the Messiah is the O.T. community; and so forth. The historical truth consists simply in the joyful character ascribed to the beginning of Christ's ministry. (1) Against all these attempts it is the obvious intention of John to relate a miracle, a surprising and extraordinary manifestation of power. (2) Where allegory exists he directs attention to it; as in this chapter, ver. 21; also in chapters x., xv., etc. (3) That the incident can be allegorised is no proof that it is only allegory and not history. All incidents and histories may be allegorised. The life and death of Caesar have been interpreted as a sun myth.

Few, if any, incidents in the life of Jesus give us an equal impression of the width of His nature and its imperturbable serenity. He was at this juncture fresh from the most disturbing personal conflict, His work awaited Him, a work full of intense strife, hazard, and pain; yet in a mind occupied with these things the marriage joy of a country couple finds a fit place.

Ver. 12. From Nazareth to Capernaum and thence to Jerusalem. At ver. 12, as Calvin says, "transit Evangelista ad novam historiam". This new section runs to the end of the fourth chapter, and gives an account of the first great series of public manifestations on the part of Christ (1) in Jerusalem, (2) in Judaea, (3) in Samaria, (4) in Galilee. These are introduced by the note of time. μετὰ τούτου, commonly used by John when he wishes merely to denote sequence without definitely marking the length of the interval. The interval in the present case was probably long enough at any rate to allow of the Nazareth family returning home, although this is not in the text. The motive for a fresh movement was probably the desire of the fishermen to return home. Accordingly κατέβη εἰς Καφαρναοῦμ, down from the higher lands about Nazareth to the lake side, 680 feet below sea level. His destination was Καφαρναοῦμ, the site of which is probably to be found at Khan Minyeh (Minia), at the north end of the plain of Gennesareth, where the great road to Damascus leaves the lake side and strikes north. [The most valuable comparison of the two competing sites, οὐ πολλὰς ἡμέρας. 13. Καὶ ἐγγὺς ἦν τὸ πάσχα τῶν Ἰουδαίων, καὶ ἀνέβη εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα ὁ Ἰησοῦς. 14. καὶ εὗρεν ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ τοὺς πωλοῦντας βόας καὶ πρόβατα καὶ περιστερὰς, καὶ τοὺς κερματιστὰς καθημένους. 15. καὶ ποιήσας φραγέλλιον ἐκ σχοινίων, πάντας ἐξέβαλεν ἐκ τοῦ ἱεροῦ, τὰ τε πρόβατα καὶ τοὺς βόας. καὶ τῶν κολλυβιστῶν ἐξέχεε τὸ κέρμα, καὶ τὰς τραπέζας ἀνέστρεψε.

Exod. xii.
14. Ch. v
1; vi. 4;
xi. 55.

Tell Hum and Khan Minyeh, will be found in the Rob Roy on the Jordan. Mr. Macgregor spent several days sounding along the shore, measuring distances, comparing notes, and making careful examination, and concluded in favour of Khan Minyeh. Tell Hum was thought to represent Kefr Nahum (Nahumston); which, when it ceased to be a town and became a heap of ruins, might have been called Tell Nahum, and hence Tell Hum. Authoritative opinion is, however, decidedly in favour of Khan Minyeh.] With Jesus there went to Capernaum ἡ μήτηρ αὐτοῦ καὶ οἱ ἀδελφοὶ αὐτοῦ καὶ . . . αὐτοῦ. From the manner in which His brothers are here mentioned along with His mother the natural inference is that they were of the same father and probably of the same mother. At Capernaum no long stay was made, the reason being given in ver. 13, ἐγγὺς ἦν τὸ πάσχα τῶν Ἰουδαίων, the Passover was approaching, here called "of the Jews," either for the sake of Gentile readers or because the Christian Easter was sometimes called πάσχα, and John wished to distinguish it.—καὶ ἀνέβη . . . ὁ Ἰησοῦς, the disciples also went, as appears from ver. 17. "Went up" because Jerusalem was the capital, and because of its height (2500 feet) above sea level. On these movements Prof. Sanday (Fourth Gospel, p. 53) makes the remark: "If it is all an artificial composition with a dogmatic object, why should the author carry his readers thus to Capernaum—for nothing? The apparent aimlessness of this statement seems to show that it came directly from a fresh and vivid recollection and not from any floating tradition."—Ver. 14. On reaching Jerusalem Jesus as a devout Jew visited the Temple καὶ εὗρεν ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, that is, in the outer court of the Temple, the court of the Gentiles.—τοὺς πωλοῦντας βόας καὶ πρόβατα καὶ περιστερὰς, cattle and sheep and doves, the sacrificial animals. It was of course a great convenience to the worshippers to be able to procure on the spot all requisites for sacrifice. Some of them might not know what sacrifice was required for their particular offence, and though the priest at their own home might inform them, still the officiating examiner in the Temple might reject the animal they brought as unfit; and probably would, if it was his interest to have the worshippers buying on the spot. That enormous overcharges were sometimes made is shown by Edersheim, who relates that on one occasion Simeon, the grandson of Hillel, interfered and brought down the price of a pair of doves from a gold denar, 15s. 3d., to half a silver denar, or 4d. This Temple tyranny and monopoly and these exorbitant charges naturally tended to make the Temple worship hateful to the people; and besides, the old charm of sacrifice, the free offering by a penitent of what he knew and cherished, the animal that he valued because he had watched it from its birth, and had tested its value in the farm work—all this was abolished by this "convenient" abuse. That the abuse was habitual is shown by John Lightfoot, who quotes: "Veniens quadam die Bava Ben Buta in atrium, vacuum pecoribus illud reperit," as an extraordinary thing. It was not the presence of oxen and sheep which was offensive, for such animals must pass into the Temple with their usual accompaniments. But it was an aggravation to have these standing all day in the Temple, and to have the haggling and chaffering of a cattle market mingling with the sounds of prayer. But especially was it offensive to make the Temple service a hardship and an offence to the people of God. Not only were there those who provided sacrificial animals but also τοὺς κερματιστὰς καθημένους, money changers seated, at their tables, for a regular day's business—not a mere accidental or occasional furnishing with change of some poor man who had hitherto not been able to procure it.—κέρμα is a small coin, from κείρω, to cut short.—τὸ κέρμα used collectively in the next verse would be in Attic τὰ κέρματα.—κερματιστής is one who gives small change, a money changer (such as may be seen sitting on the open street at a table in Naples or elsewhere). In the

• With obj. 16. καὶ τοῖς τὰς περισσερὰς πωλοῦσιν εἶπεν, “Ἄρατε ταῦτα ἐντεῦθεν· in gen.,
 Rom. x. 2.
 Cr. Ps.
 Ixi. 9. μὴ ποιεῖτε τὸν οἶκον τοῦ πατρὸς μου οἶκον ἐμπορίου.” 17. Ἐμνήσθησαν δὲ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ, ὅτι γεγραμμένον ἐστίν, ‘Ὁ ζῆλος ἁ τοῦ fifteenth verse they are called κολυβισταί, from κόλλυβος, a small coin, this again from κολοβός, docked, snipped short. Maimonides, quoted by Lücke, says the κόλλυβος was the small coin given to the money changer for exchanging a shekel into two half-shekels. The receiver of the change “dat ipsi aliquid superabundans,” gives the changer something over and above, and this aliquid superabundans vocatur collybus. In fact the word was transliterated, and in the Hebrew characters was read “kolbon”. This kolbon was about 2d., which was pretty high for providing the sacred half-shekel, which could alone be received into the Temple treasury and which every Jew had to pay. It was not only on the exchange of foreign money brought up to Palestine by Jews of the dispersion these money changers must have made a good percentage; but especially by exchanging the ordinary currency of Galilee and Judaea into the sacred half-shekel, which was the poll-tax or Temple tribute exacted from every Jew. This tax was either paid a week or two before Passover in the provinces or at the Passover in the Temple itself. To Jesus the usage seemed an intolerable abuse. καὶ ποιήσας φραγέλιον ἐκ σχοινίων. φραγέλιον is the Latin flagellum. Many commentators represent the matter as if Jesus made a whip of the litter; but John does not say ἐκ σχοιῶν, “of rushes,” but ἐκ σχοινίων, of ropes made of rushes. In the account of Paul’s shipwreck (Acts xxvii. 32) σχοίνια are the ropes which held the boat to the ship; so that it is impossible on this ground to say with Dr. Whitelaw that “the whip could only have been designed as an emblem of authority”. It is quite probable it was not used; as Bengel says: “neque dicitur hominibus ictum infixisse; terrore rem perfecit”.—πάντας ἐξέβαλεν. Holtzmann and Weiss consider that the following clause is expegetical of the πάντας, as, grammatically, it is; and that πάντας therefore refers to the sheep and oxen, not to the men. In the Synoptical Gospels πάντας ἐξέβαλεν certainly refers to the men, and as the masculine is here retained it is difficult to refer it to the πρόβατα. After driving out the oxen and their owners, ἐξέχεε τὸ κέρμα καὶ τὰς τραπέζας ἀνέστρεψεν, or as W.H. read ἀνέστρεψεν.—τραπέζας were specifically “bankers’ tables,” hence τραπέζιται, bankers, so that we might translate “counters”. These He overturned, and poured the coin on the ground. We cannot evacuate of forcible meaning these plain terms. It was a scene of violence: the traders trying to protect their property, cattle rushing hither and thither, men shouting and cursing, the money changers trying to hold their tables as Jesus went from one to another upsetting them. It was indeed so violent a scene that the disciples felt somewhat scandalised until they remembered, then and there, not afterwards, that it was written: ‘Ὁ ζῆλος τοῦ οἴκου σου καταφάγεταί με, words which are found in the sixty-ninth Psalm, the aorist of the LXX being changed into the future. In ordinary Greek ἐσθίω has for its future ἔδομαι, but in Hellenistic Greek it has φάγομαι for its future. See Gen. iii. 3, Lk. xvii. 8. The disciples saw in their Master’s act a consuming zeal for God’s house. It was this zeal which always governed Christ. He could not stand by and wash His hands of other men’s sins. It was this which brought Him to this world and to the cross. He had to interfere. It might have been expected that the words of Malachi would rather have been suggested to them, “The Lord whom ye seek shall suddenly come to His temple: but who may abide the day of His coming? for He shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver”. Their interpretation of His act was suggested by His words: μὴ ποιεῖτε τὸν οἶκον τοῦ πατρὸς μου οἶκον ἐμπορίου. At His first visit to the Temple He had called it His Father’s house. There is, no doubt, in the μόν an appropriation from which others are excluded. He does not say “your Father’s house” nor “our Father’s,” but “my Father’s”. In this word and in His action His Messiahship was implied, but directly the act and even the word were no more than a reforming prophet might have felt to be suitable. Weiss (Life of Jesus, ii., 6) says: “He felt Himself to be the Son of Him who in a unique way had consecrated this place for His temple, and He exercised the authority of a Son against the turmoil which defiled His Father’s house. Those οἴκου σου κατέφαγέ<sup>1</sup> με.' 18. Ἀπεκρίθησαν οὖν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι καὶ εἶπον αὐτῷ, "Τί σημεῖον δεικνύεις ἡμῖν, ὅτι ταῦτα ποιεῖς;" <sup>τvi. 30. Mt. xii. 38 and xvi. 1. 1 Cor. i. 22.</sup>

19. Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, "Λύσατε τὸν ναὸν τοῦτον, who looked deeper must ultimately have seen that the Messiah alone had a right to feel Himself in this sense the Chosen of Jehovah. As yet, however, there were no such observers. The followers by whom He was already surrounded did not require to deduce His Messiahship from this: they knew He was the Messiah." Make not my Father's house οἶκον ἐμπορίου. In Mk. xi. 17 the words are given as running, "Is it not written, My house shall be called of all nations the house of prayer? but ye have made it a den of thieves"; which seems to be a combination of Is. lvi. 7, "Mine house shall be called a house of prayer for all people," and Jer. vii. 11, "Is this house which is called by my name become a den of robbers in your eyes?" In the οἶκος ἐμπορίου there may be a reminiscence of Zech. xiv. 21.

<sup>1</sup> καταφάγεται in all uncials.

At ver. 18 the cleft begins to open between faith and unbelief. In the act in which the disciples had seen the fulfilment of a Messianic Psalm, the Jews see only an unauthorised interference and assumption of authority. Characteristically they ask for a sign.—οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, as frequent in John, means "the Jewish authorities"; and ἀπεκρίθησαν is used as elsewhere of a reply to what has been suggested or affirmed not by word but by deed.—τί σημεῖον δεικνύεις ἡμῖν, ὅτι ταῦτα ποιεῖς; ὅτι is used similarly in ix. 17 = εἰς ἐκεῖνο ὅτι. The blindness of the Jews is enough to put external evidence for ever out of repute. They never will see the sign in the thing itself. The fact that Jesus by one blow accomplished a much needed reform of an abuse over which devout men must often have sighed and which perhaps ingenuous Levites had striven to keep within limits, the fact that this unknown youth had done what none of the constituted authorities had been able to do, was surely itself the greatest σημεῖον. Might they not rather have said: Here is one who treats things radically, who does not leave grievances to mend themselves but effectively puts His hand to the work? But this blindness is characteristic. They never see that Jesus Himself is the great sign, but are always craving for some extraneous testimony. This Gospel throughout is an exhibition of the comparative value of external and internal evidence. To their request Jesus could not answer, "I am the Messiah". He wished that to be the people's discovery from their knowledge of Him. He therefore answers (ver. 19), Λύσατε τὸν ναὸν τοῦτον, καὶ ἐν τρισὶν ἡμέραις ἐγερῶ αὐτόν. The saying was meant to be enigmatical. Jesus spoke in parables when He wished to be understood by the spiritual and to baffle the hostile. Those who cross-question Him and treat Him as a subject to be investigated find no satisfaction. John tells us (ver. 21) that here He spoke of the "temple of His body". Bengel suggests that He may have indicated this, "adhbito nutu gestu"; others suggest that He may have given such an emphasis to τοῦτον as to suggest what He intended; but this is excluded by ver. 22, which informs us that it was only after the resurrection that the disciples themselves understood what was meant. Those who heard considered it an idle challenge which He knew could not be put to the proof. He knew they would not destroy their unfinished Temple. His words then had one meaning for Himself; another for those who heard. For Himself they meant: "Destroy this body of mine in which dwells the Father and I will raise it in three days". He said this, knowing they would not now understand Him, but that this would be the great sign of His authority. Paul refers the resurrection of Christ to the Father or to the Spirit; John here, as in x. 17, 18, refers it directly to Christ Himself.

Holtzmann suggests, as had previously been suggested by others, that "to do anything in three days" merely meant to do it quickly. Reference is made to Hos. vi. 2, Mt. xiii. 40. This may be. Holtzmann further maintains that such an announcement as Jesus is here represented as making was impossible at so early a period of the ministry, that it must have been uttered on some other occasion and have been inserted here to suit John's purpose. The origin of the expression he finds in the Pauline-Alexandrian conception of the body as the temple of God. If this was believed

- ▮ Of building: see Kypke, in loc.
 ▽ Col. ii. 9.
 1 Cor. iii.
 16.
- καὶ ἐν τρισὶν ἡμέραις ἔγερῶ αὐτόν." 20. Ἐἶπον οὖν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι,
 "Τεσσαράκοντα καὶ ἕξ ἔτεσιν ᾠκοδομήθη ὁ ναὸς οὗτος, καὶ σὺ ἐν τρισὶν ἡμέραις ἐγερεῖς αὐτόν;" 21. Ἐκείνος δὲ ἔλεγε περὶ τοῦ ναοῦ τοῦ σώματος αὐτοῦ. 22. Ὅτε οὖν ἠγέρθη ἐκ νεκρῶν, ἐμνήσθησαν οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ ὅτι τοῦτο ἔλεγεν αὐτοῖς<sup>1</sup>. καὶ ἐπίστευσαν τῇ γραφῇ, καὶ τῷ λόγῳ ᾧ εἶπεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς. 23. ὡς δὲ ἦν ἐν Ἱεροσο-λύμοις ἐν τῷ πάσχα, ἐν τῇ ἑορτῇ, πολλοὶ ἐπίστευσαν εἰς τὸ ὄνομα of ordinary men much more must that body be the temple in which dwelt all the fulness of the Godhead bodily (Col. ii. 9).

<sup>1</sup> Omit αυτοῖς with  $\aleph$ ABL it. vulg.

That the saying itself was historical is put beyond doubt by its quotation at the trial of Jesus, Mk. xiv. 58; cf. xv. 29. There were those who had heard Him say that He would destroy the Temple; which gives this saying with just the kind of misunderstanding and perversion one would expect. But if the saying itself is historical, can Jesus have meant anything else by it than John tells us He meant? That He considered His body the Temple of God goes without saying.

It is indeed extremely unlikely that Jesus should at the very beginning of His ministry have spoken of His death and resurrection openly. Hence even Weiss seems to think that the words meant: Destroy this Temple, as you are doing by allowing such abuses in it, prohibit me from those reforms on the Temple which can alone save it, and eventually this Temple must be completely destroyed, its purpose gone, and its services extinct. But I will in its place raise a spiritual temple, the living Church. But if already Jesus had thought out the Messianic career, then He already was sure both that He would die and that He would rise again. Being in perfect fellowship with the living God He knew that He must be hated of men, and He knew that He could never fall from that fellowship but must conquer death. At no time then after His baptism and temptation could it be impossible to Him to speak covertly as here of His death and resurrection. On this point see Schwartzkopff, Die Weissagungen Christi.

Ver. 20. The Jews naturally saw no reference to His own body or to its resurrection, and replied to the letter of His words, τεσσαράκοντα. . . . The Temple was begun to be rebuilt in the eighteenth year of Herod's reign that is the autumn of 734-735. In Jewish reckoning the beginning of a year was reckoned one year. Thus forty-six years might bring us to the autumn of 779 and the Passover of 780, i. e., 27 A. D. would be regarded as forty-six years from the rebuilding; and this is Edersheim's calculation. But several accurate chronologists think the following year is meant.

The Synoptical Gospels insert a similar incident at the close of Christ's ministry, and there alone. Harmonists accordingly understand that the Temple was twice cleansed by Him. "Bis ergo Christus templum . . . purgavit" (Calvin). It is easy to find reasons for such action either at the beginning or at the close of the ministry. On the whole it seems more appropriate at the beginning. The Messiah might be expected to manifest Himself at the Temple.

The next paragraph extends from ii. 23 to iii. 21, and contains (1) a brief description of the general result of Christ's manifestation in Jerusalem (ii. 23-25), and (2) a longer description of an instance of the kind of faith and inquiry which were produced by this manifestation and of the manner in which Christ met it.—Ver. 23. Time, place, and circumstance are again given, ὡς δὲ ἦν ἐν τοῖς Ἱεροσολύμοις ἐν τῷ πάσχα ἐν τῇ ἑορτῇ. The last clause is added with a reference to ver. 13. Then the feast was near, now it had arrived. We are to hear what happened while Jesus resided in Jerusalem during the feast.—πολλοὶ ἐπίστευσαν εἰς τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ, which can scarcely mean less than that they believed He was the Messiah. Nicodemus, however, seems willing only to admit He is "a teacher come from God". Their belief was founded on the miracles they saw.—θεωροῦντες αὐτοῦ τὰ σημεῖα ἃ ἐποίει, seeing day by day the signs He was doing, and of which John relates none. This faith, resting on miracles, is in this Gospel never commended as the highest kind of faith, αὐτοῦ, θεωροῦντες αὐτοῦ τὰ σημεῖα ἃ ἐποίει. 24. αὐτὸς δὲ ὁ x I k. xvi. 11, etc. Ἰησοῦς οὐκ ἐπίστευεν ἑαυτὸν αὐτοῖς, διὰ τὸ αὐτὸν γινώσκειν πάντας ὁ γ xvi. 30; see Burton, 216. 25. καὶ ὅτι οὐ χρεῖαν εἶχεν ἵνα τις μαρτυρήσῃ περὶ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου αὐτὸς γὰρ ἐγίνωσκε τί ἦν ἐν τῷ ἀνθρώπῳ. z I Sam. xvi. 7. 2 Sam. xiv 17. Mt. ix. 4. a = τῆς, Mt xvii, 14, etc.; with τῆς, Mt. xviii. 12. Jo. v. 5; 31; ix. 31.

III. 1. ἮΝ δὲ ἄνθρωπος ἐκ τῶν Φαρισαίων, Νικόδημος ὄνομα αὐτῷ, ἀρχων τῶν Ἰουδαίων. 2. οὗτος ἦλθε πρὸς τὸν Ἰησοῦν ἠρυκτὸς, καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, “Ραββί, οἶδαμεν ὅτι ἀπὸ Θεοῦ ἐλήλυθας διδάσκαλος ὡς οὐδεὶς γὰρ ταῦτα τὰ σημεῖα δύναται ποιεῖν ἃ σὺ ποιεῖς, cp. Thayer. b Job i. 1; cp. Ch. i. 6. c vii. 50; xix. 39. d vii. 31; ix. 31.

<sup>1</sup> T. R. in EFGH. αὐτον in ῥABKL, etc.

although it is by no means despised. It is what Luther calls “milk faith” and may grow into something more trustworthy. Accordingly, although Jesus had at once committed Himself to the men who were attracted without miracle by His personality and the testimony of the Baptist, to these αὐτὸς Ἰησοῦς οὐκ ἐπίστευεν ἑαυτὸν, “Jesus on His part did not commit Himself”. It is necessary to consider not only whether we have faith in Christ but whether Christ has faith in us. Thoroughgoing confidence must always be reciprocal. Christ will commit Himself to the man who thoroughly commits himself to Him. The reason of this reserve is given in a twofold expression: positive, διὰ τὸ αὐτὸν γινώσκειν πάντας, “because He Himself knew all men”; negative, καὶ ὅτι οὐ χρεῖαν εἶχεν ἵνα τις μαρτυρήσῃ περὶ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, “and because He had no need that any one should witness concerning man”. Holtzmann, following Winer, thinks that the article is inserted because reference is made to the individual with whom Jesus had on each occasion to do. This seems quite unnecessary. ὁ ἀνθρωπος is here, as in A. V., “man,” the ordinary generic use of the article. The reason for this again is given in the closing words, αὐτὸς γὰρ . . . “For He Himself knew what was in man,” knew human nature, the motives, governing ideas, and ways of man. This knowledge was not supernatural. Westcott has an important note on this point, in which he points out that John describes the knowledge of Jesus “both as relative, acquired (γινώσκειν) and absolute, possessed (εἰδέναι)”. Each constitutes a higher degree of the kind of knowledge found among men. Reynolds says: “There are many other indications of this thought mastery, which the evangelists appear to regard as proofs of divine power; so that I think the real significance of the passage is an ascription to Jesus of Divine power. The supernatural in mind, the superhuman mental processes of Jesus, are part of the proof we have that though He was man He created the irresistible impression that He was more than man.”

CHAPTER III. Vv. 1-21. A specimen is given of the kind of belief produced in the Jews of Jerusalem and of the manner in which Jesus dealt with it.— ἦν δὲ ἀνθρωπος, the Syriac adds “there,” i. e., at Jerusalem. ἀνθρωπος is simply equivalent to τις, and does not point back to the ἀνθρωπος of the preceding verse. He is described as ἐκ τῶν Φαρισαίων that we may the better understand what follows. He belonged to that party which with all its bigotry contained a salt of true patriotism and could rear such cultured and high-toned men as Gamaliel and Paul. It is a mistake to suppose that all who belong to a mischievous party in a Church are themselves mischievous: it is also a mistake to ascribe without inquiry the goodness of individuals to the influence of their party.— Νικόδημος ὄνομα αὐτῷ. Many Jews had now Greek names. Lightfoot quotes from the Talmud passages which show that a certain Bonai surnamed Nicodemus was a disciple of Jesus, and that he lived through the destruction of Jerusalem, but lost in it all his wealth. He is, however, very doubtful whether this is the Nicodemus of this passage. He is further described as ἀρχων τῶν Ἰουδαίων, a member of the Sanhedrim. See vii. 50, where he appears in the Sanhedrim. Lk. xiv. 1 speaks of one τῶν ἀρχόντων τῶν Φαρισαίων. See also Lk. xviii. 18, viii. 41; Mt. ix. 18.—Ver. 2. οὗτος ἦλθε πρὸς αὐτὸν. The pronoun instead of the name Jesus, as Holtzmann remarks, shows the close connection with the closing verses of the last chapter. Nicodemus came to the fountain head, dissatisfied with the way in which his colleagues were dealing with Jesus, and c Acts vii. ἔάν μὴ ἦ ὁ Θεὸς * μετ' αὐτοῦ." 3. Ἀπεκρίθη δ' Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν 9; x. 38.

 1 Kings αὐτῷ, "Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω σοι, ἔάν μὴ τις γεννηθῆ ἄνωθεν, οὐ
 x. 10.
 f Gal. vi. 15. 1 Pet. i. 23.

resolved to judge for himself. Nothing could be more hopeful than such a state of mind. When a man says, I will see for myself what Jesus is, not influenced by what other men say; before I sleep I will settle this matter, the result is fairly certain to be good. See chap. vii. 50, xix. 39. He came νυκτὸς, certainly with the purpose of secrecy, and yet for a man in his position to come at all was much. No timidity is shown in vii. 50. In xix. 39 John still identifies him as "he that came to Jesus by night," but adds "at the first" in contrast to the courage he afterwards showed. Similarly, as Grotius tells us, Euclid of Megara visited Socrates by night when Athens was closed by edict against the Megarians. Modestly and as if not presuming to speak as an individual but as representing a party however small (ii. 32), he says, "Ραββεί οἶδαμεν ὅτι ἀπὸ θεοῦ ἐλήλυθας διδάσκαλος," "Rabbi, we know that Thou art come from God as a teacher". We need not see in the words anything either patronising or flattering, but merely the natural first utterance of a man wishing to show the state of his mind. He was convinced that Jesus was a divinely commissioned teacher. He came to hear what He had to teach. His teaching, in the judgment of Nicodemus, was divinely authenticated by the miracles; but to Nicodemus at any rate the teaching was that for which the miracles existed. They were σημεῖα, and though not recorded, they must have been of a kind to strike a thoughtful mind ταῦτα τὰ σημεῖα ἃ σὺ ποιεῖς, the emphatic pronoun, as if other miracles might not have been so convincing. At the same time the reply of Jesus shows that behind this cautious designation of "teacher" there lay in the mind of Nicodemus a suspicion that this might be the Messiah. Nicodemus may have taken to heart the Baptist's proclamation. Grotius supposes the conversation is abridged, and that Nicodemus had intimated that he wished to learn something about the kingdom which formed the subject of our Lord's teaching. "Responso tacite innuit, quod adjectum a Nicodemo fuerat, nempe, velle se scire, quandoquidem Jesus Regni coelestis inter docendum mentionem saepe faceret, quae ratio esset eo perveniendi." But with the introduction to this incident (ii. 23-25) in our mind, it seems gratuitous to suppose that part of the conversation is here omitted. Jesus speaks to the intention and mental attitude of His interlocutor rather than to his words. He saw that Nicodemus was conceiving it as a possible thing that these miracles might be the signs of the kingdom; and in this visit of Nicodemus He sees what may be construed into an overture from the Pharisaic party. And so He cuts Nicodemus remorselessly short. As when the Pharisees (Lk. xvii. 20) demand of Him when the Kingdom of God should come, He replied: The Kingdom of God cometh not with observation, not with signs which the natural man can measure, it comes within you; so here in strikingly similar language He says, ἔάν μὴ τις γεννηθῆ ἄνωθεν, οὐ δύναται ἰδεῖν τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ θεοῦ. This allusion to the kingdom, which is not a favourite idea of John's, is one of the incidental marks of his historical trustworthiness. —ἄνωθεν is sometimes local = ἐξ οὐρανοῦ, from above; sometimes temporal = ἐξ ἀρχῆς, de novo. The former meaning is advocated here by Baur, Lücke, Meyer, and others. But the use of παλιγγενεσία and the difficulty stated by Nicodemus in ver. 4 rather indicate that the Syriac and Vulgate [nisi quis renatus fuerit], Augustine, Calvin, and among many others Weiss are right in adopting the temporal meaning and rendering with R.V. "anew". [Wetstein, in proof of this meaning, quotes from Artemidorus, who tells of a father who dreamt that there was born to him a child exactly like himself; "he seemed," he says, "to be born a second time," ἄνωθεν. And in the touching story which gave rise to the Domine quo vadis Church at Rome where Peter met Christ, the words of the Lord, as given in the Acta Pauli, are ἄνωθεν μέλλω σταυρωθῆναι.] The answer of Nicodemus might seem to indicate that he had understood ἄνωθεν as equivalent to his own δέυτερον. But it is impossible to determine with certainty which is the correct meaning. A man must be born again, says our Lord, because otherwise οὐ δύναται ἰδεῖν τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ θεοῦ. Is ἰδεῖν here to be taken in the sense of "seeing" or of "enjoying," "partaking"? Meyer and Weiss, resting on δύναται ἰδεῖν τὴν "βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ." 4. Λέγει πρὸς αὐτὸν ὁ Only here Νικόδημος, "Πῶς δύναται ἄνθρωπος γεννηθῆναι γέρων ὢν; μὴ and ver. 5 δύναται εἰς τὴν κοιλίαν τῆς μητρὸς αὐτοῦ δεῦτερον εἰσελθεῖν καὶ in John. 5 γεννηθῆναι;" 5. Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Ἄμην ἄμην λέγω σοι, εἰάν h β. η ἐμὴ μὴ τις γεννηθῆ ἢ ἐξ ὕδατος καὶ Πνεύματος, οὐ δύναται εἰσελθεῖν εἰς Mk. i. 8.

 36. Ezek.
 xxxvi. 25.

such expressions as ἰδεῖν θάνατον (Lk. ii. 26, Heb. xi. 5), διαφθοράν (Acts ii. 27), ἡμέρας ἀγαθᾶς (1 Pet. iii. 10), understand that "participation" is meant. So Calvin, "videre regnum Dei idem valet ac ingredi in regnum Dei," and Grotius, "participem fieri". Confirmation of this view is at first sight given by the εἰσελθεῖν of ver. 5. But it is of "signs" Nicodemus has been speaking, of observing the kingdom coming; and Christ says: To see the kingdom you must be spiritual, born anew, for the signs are spiritual. In this language there should have been nothing to stumble Nicodemus. All Jerusalem was ringing with the echoes of the Baptist's preaching, the essence of which was "ye must be born again". To be children of Abraham is nothing. There is nothing moral, nothing spiritual, nothing of the will, nothing related to the Kingdom of God in being children of Abraham. As regards your fleshly birth you are as passive as stones and as truly outside the kingdom. In fact John had excommunicated the whole nation, and expressly told them that they must submit to baptism, like Gentile proselytes, if they were to be prepared for the Messiah's reign. The language may not have puzzled Nicodemus. Had our Lord said: "Every Gentile must be born again," he would have understood. It is the idea that staggers him. His bewilderment he utters in the words:—Ver. 4. πῶς δύναται ἄνθρωπος γεννηθῆναι γέρων ὢν; μὴ δύναται, etc. In this reply there is no attempt to fence with Jesus, but merely an expression of the bewilderment created by His statement. The emphasis is on πῶς, which asks for further explanation. The μὴ of the second clause shows that Nicodemus understood that Jesus could not mean a second physical birth (see Lücke). On γέρων ὢν Grotius remarks: "Exemplum in se ponit, qui senex jam erat". That our Lord understood Nicodemus' words as a request for further explanation appears from His at once proceeding to give it.—Ver. 5. Ἄμην, ἄμην λέγω σοι, εἰάν μὴ τις γεννηθῆ ἐξ ὕδατος καὶ πνεύματος, οὐ δύναται εἰσελθεῖν εἰς τὴν

β. To remove as far as possible the difficulty of Nicodemus as to the πῶς of the second birth our Lord declares that the two great factors in it are "water" and "spirit". Calvin thinks this is a ἐν διὰ δυοῖν, and that the two names cover one reality. "Spiritum et aquam pro eodem posuit." "Aqua nihil aliud est quam interior Spiritus sancti purgatio et vegetatio." And he defends this by a reference to the Baptist's announcement that the Messiah would baptise with the spirit and fire. Grotius takes the same line, but cautiously adds: "Si quis tamen malit ista decernere, ut aqua significet mali fugam, spiritus vero impetum ad optima quaeque agenda, inveniet quo hanc sententiam fulciet". Lk. (vii. 30) tells us that the Pharisees, to whom belonged Nicodemus, were not baptised of John; their reason being that to submit to the same rite as Gentiles and acknowledge the insufficiency of their Jewish birth was a humiliation they could not suffer. To receive the Spirit from the Messiah was no humiliation; on the contrary, it was a glorious privilege. But to go down into Jordan before a wondering crowd and own their need of cleansing and new birth was too much. Therefore to this Pharisee our Lord declares that an honest dying to the past is as needful as new life for the future. To be born of the Spirit involves a dying to the past, and therefore it is only the Spirit that is spoken of in the subsequent verses; but it is essential that our past be recognised as needing cleansing and forgiveness. These two factors, water and spirit, are not strictly co-ordinate. Water is not an actual spiritual agency in the second birth; it is only a symbol. But in every true second birth there is a negative as well as a positive side, a renunciation of the past as well as a new life created. The same idea is found in Titus iii. 3-5, "We were [of the flesh] but He saved us by the bath of regeneration and the renewal of the Holy Ghost". The same combination is found in Ezek. xxxvi. 25-27, "Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you and ye shall be clean: from all your filthiness and from all your idols

i 1 Cor. ii. τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ. 6. <sup>1</sup> τὸ γεγεννημένον ἐκ τῆς σαρκός, σὰρξ
 12. Gal. ἔστι· καὶ τὸ γεγεννημένον ἐκ τοῦ πνεύματος, πνεῦμά ἐστι. 7. μή
 v. 16. ἔστι· καὶ τὸ γεγεννημένον ἐκ τοῦ πνεύματος, πνεῦμά ἐστι. 7. μή jiv. 27. Lk. θαυμάσης <sup>1</sup> ὅτι εἶπόν σοι, Δεῖ ἡμᾶς γεννηθῆναι ἄνωθεν. 8. τὸ πνεῦμα
 xi. 38. ὅπου θέλει πνεῖ, καὶ τὴν φωνὴν αὐτοῦ ἀκούεις, ἀλλ' οὐκ οἶδας πόθεν
 Gal. i. 6; with εἰ ἔρχεται καὶ τοῦ ὑπάγει· οὕτως ἔστι πᾶς ὁ γεγεννημένος ἐκ τοῦ
 Mk. xv. πνεύματος." 9. Ἀπεκρίθη Νικόδημος καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, " Πῶς δύναται
 4; and i πνεύματος." 9. Ἀπεκρίθη Νικόδημος καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, " Πῶς δύναται Jo. iii. 13. Burton, 313.

will I cleanse you. A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you." The water, then, is considered as that which cleanses from sin: the Spirit as the principle of the new life.—Ver. 6. The necessity of the new birth is further exhibited by a comparison of the first and second birth: τὸ γεγεννημένον ἐκ τῆς σαρκός, σὰρξ ἔστι· καὶ τὸ γεγεννημένον ἐκ τοῦ πνεύματος, πνεῦμά ἐστι. The neuter is used because the speaker "wishes to make His statement altogether general" (Winer, 27, 5), whatever is born. The law is laid down in Aristotle (Eth. Maj., i., 10), "Every nature generates its own substance," flesh, flesh; spirit, spirit.—Ver. 7. Therefore it was no cause for wonder that a new birth was required for entrance into the spiritual kingdom. The argument implies that natural birth produces only σὰρξ, not spirit. By his natural birth man is an animal, with a nature fitting him to live in the material world in which he finds himself and with capacities for spiritual life in a spiritual world. These capacities may or may not be developed. If they are developed, the Spirit of God is the Agent, and the change wrought by their development may fitly be called a new birth, because it gives a man entrance into a new world and imparts new life to live in it. (Cf. the second birth and second life of many insects.)—Ver. 8. τὸ πνεῦμα ὅπου θέλει πνεῖ. Two renderings of these words are possible: "The wind bloweth where it listeth," as in A.V.; "The Spirit breatheth where He will," as in margin of R.V. By the one rendering a comparison is instituted between the unseen but powerful operation of the Spirit in regeneration and the invisible but mighty power of the wind. You hear the voice of the wind but cannot see where it comes from nor where it goes to. So in the new birth the Spirit moves and works unseen. Similarly Socrates (Xen., Mem., iv., 3) says: The thunder as it comes and goes is not seen: the winds also are invisible though their effects are manifest; the soul of man is itself unseen, therefore despise not the unseen but honour God. In favour of the other rendering it may be urged that there is nothing to warn us that we are now to understand that by the word πνεῦμα "wind" is meant. It occurs about 370 times in the N.T., and never means "wind" except once in a quotation from the O.T. The Vulgate renders "Spiritus ubi vult spirat," and if we could not only say "expire," "inspire," but also "spire," the best translation might be "the Spirit spires". As this cannot be, we may render: "The Spirit breathes where He will," that is to say, there is no limitation of His power to certain individuals, classes, races. Cf. v. 21, ὁ υἱὸς οὓς θέλει ζωοποιεῖ. The thought here is similar: there need be no despair regarding the second birth: the Spirit breathes where He will. So Bengel, "Spiritus, proprie, nam huic, non vento voluntas et vox est".—καὶ τὴν φωνὴν αὐτοῦ ἀκούεις, the Spirit makes Himself audible in articulate and intelligible sounds. The breathing of the Spirit is like man's breath, not mere air, but articulated and significant voice. The Spirit works intelligible results. He does not roar like the wind and toss men in unavailing contortions as the wind tosses the trees. It is a voice and the result is full of reason, in harmony with human nature and vivifying it to higher life. But for all this, οὐκ οἶδας πόθεν ἔρχεται καὶ τοῦ ὑπάγει, you cannot observe and regulate the Spirit's approach and departure.—οὕτως ἔστι πᾶς ὁ γεγεννημένος ἐκ τοῦ πνεύματος, thus it is in the case of every one who is born of the Spirit. You cannot see the process of regeneration; the process is secret and invisible, the results are apparent.—Ver. 9. This explanation did not satisfy Nicodemus. He falls back upon his bewilderment, πῶς δύναται ταῦτα γενέσθαι; This question stirs Jesus to a fuller explanation, which is reported in vv. 10-15.—Ver. 10. He opens with an exclamation of surprise, Σὺ εἰ ὁ διδάσκαλος τοῦ Ἰσραὴλ καὶ ταῦτα οὐ γινώσκεις; perhaps there is more of ταῦτα γενέσθαι;” 10. Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, “Σὺ εἶ

 ὁ ἰδιδάσκαλος τοῦ Ἰσραὴλ, καὶ ταῦτα οὐ γινώσκεις; 11. ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω σοι, ὅτι ὁ οἶδαμεν λαλοῦμεν, καὶ ὁ ἔωράκαμεν μαρτυροῦμεν· καὶ τὴν μαρτυρίαν ἡμῶν οὐ λαμβάνετε. 12. εἰ τὰ ἐπίγεια εἶπον ὑμῖν, καὶ οὐ πιστεύετε, πῶς, ἐὰν εἴπω ὑμῖν τὰ ἐπουράνια, πιστεύσετε; 13. καὶ οὐδεὶς ἀναβέβηκεν εἰς τὸν οὐρανὸν, εἰ μὴ ὁ ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ καταβάς, ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ὁ ὢν ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ<sup>1</sup>.

1 Rom. ii. 20.
 m 1 Cor. xv.
 40. 2 Cor.
 v. 1. Phil.
 iii. 19.
 n 1 Cor. xv.
 43. Phil.
 ii. 10.
 o Deut. xxx.
 12. Baruch
 iii. 29.
 Prov.
 xxx. 4.
 p vi. 33. 38.

<sup>1</sup> ο ὢν ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ is found in ΑΓΔ vet. Lat. vulg. syr., but is omitted in BBL 33 memph. Cyr.-Alex.

sadness than either of indignation or irony in the words. Is this the state of matters I have to confront? If the teacher is so obtuse what must the taught be? The presence of the article is usually taken as indicating that Nicodemus was recognised as a great teacher, perhaps held the official position of Chakam in the Sanhedrim. But Westcott is right: “the definite article marks the official relation of Nicodemus to the people generally”. It is used to bring out sharply, not the relation he held to other teachers, but the relation he held to the people. “Art thou the teacher of Israel and knowest not these things?” Bad enough for an Israelite to be blind to such things, but how much worse for one who teaches! But should a teacher of Israel have known these things? Westcott overleaps the difficulty by saying that γινώσκεις refers to the knowledge of perception, and that Jesus is surprised that Nicodemus should not have been able during this conversation to apprehend what was said.—Ver. 11. ἀμὴν, ἀμὴν . . . οὐ λαμβάνετε. From this point dialogue ceases, and we have now an unbroken utterance of Jesus. It starts with a certification of the truth of what Nicodemus had professed himself unable to understand.—ὁ οἶδαμεν λαλοῦμεν. Why plural? Were the disciples present and are they included? Or does it mean Jesus and the prophets, or Jesus and the Baptist, or Jesus and the Father, or is it the rhetorical “we”? Possibly it is merely an unconscious transition to the plural, as in this same verse the σοι of the first clause becomes a plural in λαμβάνετε in the last clause. Or there may be an indefinite identification of Himself with all who had apprehended the nature of the new birth—the Baptist and the best of his disciples. Jesus does not wish to represent Himself as alone able to testify of such matters. Weiss’ view is peculiar. He thinks that the contents of the μαρτυροῦμεν consist of what John and Jesus saw at the Baptism, when the Spirit’s descent indicated Jesus as the Baptist with the Spirit.—Ver. 12. εἰ τὰ ἐπίγεια . . . πιστεύετε; The reference of τὰ ἐπίγεια is fixed by the εἶπον ὑμῖν. They are such things as Jesus had been speaking of: things verified in human, earthly experience, the necessity of a spiritual birth and the results of it. Regeneration was a change made in this earthly life. The kingdom of regenerate men was to be established on earth, as apprehensible in certain of its aspects as the kingdom Nicodemus was proposing to found. The ἐπουράνια are matters not open to human observation, matters wholly in the unseen, the nature and purposes of God. Cf. the remarkable parallel in Wisd. ix. 16.—Ver. 13. καὶ οὐδεὶς ἀναβέβηκεν . . . καταβάς. The connection is: You have not believed earthly things, much less will you believe those which are heavenly; for not only are they in their own nature more difficult to understand, but there is none to testify of them save only that One who came down out of heaven. The sentence may be paraphrased thus: No one has gone up to heaven and by dwelling there gained a knowledge of the heavenly things: One only has dwelt there and is able to communicate that knowledge—He, viz., who has come down from heaven. “Presence in heaven” is considered to be the ground and qualification for communicating trustworthy information regarding “heavenly things”. Direct knowledge and personal experience of heavenly things alone justify authoritative declarations about them; as in earthly things one may expect to be believed if he can say, “we speak that we do know and testify that we have seen”. But this “presence in heaven” Jesus declares to be the qualification exclusively of one

q Num. xxi. 14. καὶ ἡ καθὼς Μωσῆς ὕψωσε τὸν ὄφιν ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ, οὕτως
 r viii. 28; ὕψωθῆναι δεῖ τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου. 15. ἵνα πᾶς ὁ πιστεύων εἰς
 xii. 32. αὐτὸν μὴ ἀπόληται, ἀλλ' ἔχη ζωὴν αἰώνιον. 16. οὕτω γὰρ ἠγάπησεν ὁ Θεὸς τὸν κόσμον, ὥστε τὸν υἱὸν αὐτοῦ τὸν μονογενῆ ἔδωκεν, ἵνα πᾶς ὁ πιστεύων εἰς αὐτὸν μὴ ἀπόληται, ἀλλ' ἔχη ζωὴν

<sup>1</sup> μη ἀποληται ἀλλ omitted in NBL I, 33 vet. Lat.

person. This person He describes as "He that came down out of heaven," adding as a further description "the Son of Man" [who is in heaven]. This description identifies this person as Jesus Himself. He claims therefore to have a unique qualification for the declaration of truth about heavenly things, and this qualification consists in this, that He and He alone has had direct perception of heavenly things. He has been in heaven. By "heaven" it is not a locality that is indicated, but that condition which is described in the prologue as πρὸς τὸν θεόν. And when He speaks of coming down out of heaven He can only mean manifesting Himself to those who are on that lower level from which they had not been able to ascend to the knowledge of heavenly things. In short, we have here the basis in Christ's own words of the statement in the prologue that the Word was in the beginning with God, and became flesh to be a light to men. Why is ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου introduced? It identifies the person spoken of, and it suggests that He who alone had the knowledge of heavenly things now wore human nature, was accessible, and was there for the purpose of communicating this knowledge. The words added in the T.R., ὁ ὢν ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ, affirm that although He had come out of heaven He was still in it, and they show that a condition of being, not a locality, was meant by "heaven".—Ver. 14. If the Son of Man alone has this knowledge, how is it to be disseminated and become a light to all men? This is answered in the words, καὶ καθὼς Μωσῆς . . . τοῦ ἀνθρώπου [modern editors read Μωσῆς; so also in LXX]. The emphatic word is ὕψωσε. When Moses made the brazen serpent, he did not secrete it in his tent and admit a few selected persons to view it, but ὕψωσε τὸν ὄφιν, gave it an elevation at which all might see it. So must the Son of Man, the bearer of heavenly light and healing, ὕψωθῆναι, that all may see Him. The "lifting up" of the Son of Man is interpreted in xii. 33 to mean His lifting up on the cross. It was this which drew human observation and human homage. The cross is the throne of Christ. In the phrase δεῖ ὕψωθῆναι the aorist is used in accordance with Greek usage by which an aorist infinitive is employed to express the action of the verb even though future after verbs signifying to hope, to expect, to promise, and such like. Thus Iph. in Aul., 462, οἶμαι γὰρ νιν ἰκετεύσαι, where Markland needlessly changes the aorist into the future. Nicodemus could not see the significance with which these words were filled by the crucifixion. What would be suggested to him by the comparison of the Messiah with the brazen serpent might be something like this: The Son of Man is to be lifted up. Yes, but not on a throne in Herod's palace. He was to be conspicuous, but as the brazen serpent had been conspicuous, hanging on a pole for the healing of the people. His elevation was certain, but it was an elevation by no mere official appointment, or popular recognition, or hereditary right, but by plumbing the depths of human degradation in truest self-sacrifice. There is no royal road to human excellence, and Jesus reached the height He attained by no blare of heralds' trumpets or flaunting of banners or popular acclaim, but by being subjected to the keenest tests by which character can be searched, by passing through the ordeal of human life in this world, and by being found the best, the one only perfectly faithful servant of God and man.—Ver. 15. The words μὴ ἀπόληται ἀλλ' of the T.R. are omitted by Tisch., W.H., and R.V. Further, the same editors replace the words εἰς αὐτὸν by ἐν αὐτῷ, and the R.V. translates "that whoever believeth may in Him have eternal life," in accordance with Johannine usage, which does not support the rendering "believeth in Him". This is the object to be accomplished by the "elevation" of the Son of Man, viz., that whoever, Jew or Gentile, believes that there is life in Him that is thus exalted, may have life eternal.—Ver. 16. Several conservative theologians, αἰώνιον. 17. οὐ γὰρ ἀπέστειλεν ὁ Θεὸς τὸν υἱὸν αὐτοῦ εἰς τὸν κόσμον, ἵνα κρίνῃ τὸν κόσμον, ἀλλ' ἵνα σωθῇ ὁ κόσμος δι' αὐτοῦ.

18. ὁ πιστεύων εἰς αὐτὸν οὐ κρίνεται· ὁ δὲ μὴ πιστεύων ἤδη κέκριται, ὅτι ἢ μὴ πεπίστευκεν εἰς τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ μονογενοῦς υἱοῦ τοῦ Θεοῦ. 19. ἡ αὕτη δὲ ἐστὶν ἡ κρίσις ὅτι τὸ φῶς ἐλλήλυθεν εἰς τὸν κόσμον, καὶ ἠγάπησαν οἱ ἄνθρωποι μᾶλλον τὸ σκότος, ἢ τὸ φῶς·

Exceptional constr.; see Burton, 474, Winer, 594, 602. t. 1 Jo. v. 11.

Neander, Tholuck, Westcott, are of opinion that the words of Jesus end with ver. 15, and that from vv. 16-21 we have an addition by the evangelist. There is much to be said in favour of this idea. The thoughts of these verses are explanatory rather than progressive. Vv. 16 and 17 repeat the object of Christ's mission, which has already been stated. Vv. 18 and 19 declare the historic results in faith and unbelief, results which at the date of the conversation were not conspicuous. Vv. 20 and 21 exhibit the causes of faith and unbelief. The tenses also forbid us to refer the passage directly to Jesus. In His lips the present would have been more natural. To John looking back on the finished story aorists and perfects are natural. Also, the designation "only begotten son" is not one of the names by which Jesus designates Himself, but it is used by the evangelist, i. 18 and 1 John iv. 9.—οὕτω γὰρ ἠγάπησεν . . . ζῶνι αἰώνιον. The love of God for the world of men is the source of Christ's mission with all its blessings. It was this which prompted Him to "give," that is, to give not solely to the death of the cross alluded to in ver. 14, but to all that the world required for salvation, His only begotten Son. "The change from the aorist (ἀπόληται) to the present (ἔχη) is to be noted, the utter ruin being spoken of as an act, the possession of life eternal as an enduring experience" (Meyer, Weiss, Holtzmann).—Ver. 17. οὐ γὰρ ἀπέστειλεν . . . δι' αὐτοῦ. For whatever the result of Christ's coming has been, in revealing a love of sin and bringing heavier judgment on men, this was not God's purpose in sending His Son. The Jewish idea was that the Messiah would come "to judge," i. e., to condemn the world.—κρίνω and κατακρίνω, though originally distinct, are in the N.T. sometimes identical in meaning, the result of judgment so commonly being condemnation; cf. crime. But although the result is judgment, the bringing to light a distinction among men and the resulting condemnation of many, yet the object was ἵνα σωθῇ ὁ κόσμος. John repeats his favourite word κόσμος three times in this verse that there may be no possibility of missing his point, that so far as God's purpose was concerned, it was one of unmixed love, that all men might be saved. The emphasis was probably due to the ordinary Messianic expectation which limited and misrepresented the love of God. Westcott remarks on this verse: "The sad realities of present experience cannot change the truth thus made known, however little we may be able to understand in what way it will be accomplished". It might on similar grounds be argued that because God wills that all men be holy in this life, all men are holy.—Ver. 18. ὁ πιστεύων . . . τοῦ θεοῦ. Expansion of previous verse. God sent His Son not to judge but to save; and whoso accepts the Son and His revelation is not judged. It is no longer "every Jew," nor "every one chosen by God," but every one that believeth. All here is spiritual. Although judgment was not the object it is the necessary result of Christ's presence in the world. But it is a judgment very different from that which the Jews expected. It is determined by the attitude towards Christ, and this again, as afterwards shown, is determined by the moral condition of the individual.—ὁ μὴ πιστεύων ἤδη κέκριται, "he that believeth not is already judged": not only is left under the curse of his own evil actions; but, as the next clause shows, lies under the condemnation of not believing.—ἤδη κέκριται, he is already judged: it is not some future assize he doubtfully awaits and which may or may not convict. He is judged, and on a ground which to John seems to indicate monstrous depravity, ὅτι μὴ πεπίστευκεν . . . τοῦ θεοῦ. Not to perceive the glory of this august Being whom John so adored, not to receive the revelation made by the Only Begotten, is proof not merely of human infirmity and passion, but of wickedness chosen and persisted in presence of revealed goodness.—Ver. 19. This is further explained in the following, αὕτη . . . τὸ φῶς. The ground of the con-

u Prov. xxii. ἦν γὰρ ποιηρὰ αὐτῶν τὰ ἔργα. 20. πᾶς γὰρ ὁ φαῦλα πράσσειν
 8. Eph. μισεῖ τὸ φῶς, καὶ οὐκ ἔρχεται πρὸς τὸ φῶς, ἵνα μὴ ἐλεγχθῆ τὰ ἔργα
 v. 13.
 v Tobit xiii. αὐτοῦ. 21. ὁ δὲ ποιῶν τὴν ἀλήθειαν ἔρχεται πρὸς τὸ φῶς, καὶ
 6. φανερωθῆ αὐτοῦ τὰ ἔργα, ὅτι ἐν Θεῷ ἐστὶν εἰργασμένα."

demnation lies precisely in this, that since the coming of Christ and His exhibition of human life in the light of the holiness and love of the Father, human sin is no longer the result of ignorance, but of deliberate choice and preference. Nothing can be done for a man who says, "Evil, be thou my good". The reason of this preference of darkness and rejection of Christ is that the life is evil, ἦν γὰρ κ. τ. λ.—Ver. 20. The principle is explained in this verse. Underlying the action of men towards Christ during His historical manifestation was a general law: a law which operates wherever men are similarly invited to walk in the light. The law which governs the acceptance or refusal of light is given in the words πᾶς γὰρ ὁ φαῦλα . . . ἔργα αὐτοῦ. φαῦλος, originally "poor," "paltry," "ugly"; οἱ φαῦλοι, "the vulgar," "the common sort". In Polybius, φαῦλα πλοῖα, πολιτεία φαῦλα, badly constructed; φαῦλος ἡγεμῶν, a foolish general, and in xvii. 15, 15 it is opposed to deliberate wickedness. Dull, senseless viciousness seems to be denoted. Here and in ver. 29 πράσσειν is used with φαῦλα, and ποιεῖν in the next verse with ἀλήθειαν, on which Bengel remarks: "Malitia est irrequieta; est quiddam operosius quam veritas. Hinc verbis diversis notantur". Where a distinction is intended, πράσσειν expresses the reiterative putting forth of activities to bring something to pass, ποιεῖν the actual production of what is aimed at. Hence there is a slight hint of the busy fruitlessness of vice. Paul, as well as John, uses πράσσειν, in certain passages, of evil actions. The person thus defined μισεῖ τὸ φῶς, "hates the light," instead of delighting in it, καὶ οὐκ ἔρχεται πρὸς τὸ φῶς, and does not bring himself within its radiance, does not seek to use it for his own enlightenment; ἵνα μὴ ἐλεγχθῆ τὰ ἔργα αὐτοῦ, "lest his works be convicted" and so put to shame. According to John there is moral obliquity at the root of all refusal of Christ. Obviously there is, if Christ be considered simply as "light". To refuse the ideal he presents is to prefer darkness.—Ver. 21. ὁ δὲ ποιῶν . . . "On the other hand, he who does the truth" . . . This is one of John's comprehensive phrases which perhaps lose by definition. "To do the truth" is at any rate to live up to what one knows; to live an honest, conscientious life. John implies that men of this type are to be found where the light of Christ has not dawned; but when it dawns they hail it with joy. He that doeth the truth comes to the light that his deeds may be manifested, ὅτι ἐν Θεῷ ἐστὶν εἰργασμένα. Is ὅτι expressive of a fact or declarative of a reason? Must we translate "manifested, that they are," etc., or "manifested, because they are," etc.? The R.V. has "that" in the text, and "because" in the margin. Godet and Westcott prefer the former; Lücke, Meyer, Weiss and Weizsäcker the latter. It is not easy to decide between the two. On the whole, the latter interpretation is to be preferred. This clause gives the reason of the willingness shown by the man to have his deeds made manifest: and thus it balances the clause ἦν γὰρ ποιηρὰ αὐτῶν τὰ ἔργα, which gives the reason for evil doers shunning the light. He who does the truth is not afraid of the light, but rather seeks increased light because his deeds have been done ἐν Θεῷ; that is, he has not been separated from God by them, but has done what he has done because he conceived that to be the will of God. Where such light as exists has been conscientiously used, more is sought, and welcomed when it comes. "Plato was like a man shut into a vault, running hither and thither, with his poor flickering Taper, agonizing to get forthe, and holding himself in readiness to make a spring forward the moment a door should open. But it never did. 'Not manie wise are called.' He had clomb a Hill in the Darke, and stood calling to his companions below, 'Come on, come on, this way lies the East: I am avised we shall see the sun rise anon'. But they never did. What a Christian he would have made. Ah! he is one now. He and Socrates, the veil long removed from their eyes, are sitting at Jesus' feet. Sancte Socrates, ora pro nobis" (Erasmus to More in Sir T. More's Household). Holtzmann quotes from Hausrath: "As a magnet attracts the metal while the dead stone lies unmoved: so are the children of God drawn

22. Μετὰ ταῦτα ἦλθεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ εἰς τὴν Ἰουδαίαν γῆν. καὶ ἐκεῖ διέτριβε μετ' αὐτῶν καὶ ἐβάπτισεν. <sup>w</sup> Adj. with γῆ here and in Mk. i. 5 only. Cp Acts xvi. 1; xxiv. 24.

23. ἦν δὲ καὶ Ἰωάννης βαπτίζων ἐν Αἰνῶν ἐγγὺς τοῦ Σαλείμ, ὅτι ὕδατα πολλὰ ἦν ἐκεῖ· καὶ παρεγίνοντο καὶ ἐβαπτίζοντο. 24. οὐπω γὰρ ἦν βεβλημένος εἰς τὴν φυλακὴν ὁ Ἰωάννης. 25. Ἐγένετο οὖν ζήτησις ἐκ τῶν μαθητῶν Ἰωάννου μετὰ Ἰουδαίων<sup>1</sup> περὶ καθαρισμοῦ.

26. καὶ ἦλθον πρὸς τὸν Ἰωάννην, καὶ εἶπον αὐτῷ, “Ραββί, ὃς ἦν μετὰ σοῦ πέραν τοῦ Ἰορδάνου, ᾧ σὺ μεμαρτύρηκας, ἶδε οὗτος by the Logos and come to the Light”. Cf. chap. xviii. 37.

<sup>x</sup> Ps. xxxii. 6. Nah. i. 12. Rev. i. 15.
<sup>y</sup> Mt. iv. 12 xiv. 3.

<sup>1</sup> Ἰουδαίου in  $\aleph^c$ ABL, adopted by T.Tr.W.H.R.

Vv. 22-36. The ministry of Jesus in Judaea after He left Jerusalem. This falls into three parts: (1) a brief account of the movements and success of Jesus and the Baptist which provoked a comparison between them, 22-26; (2) the Baptist's acceptance of the contrast and final testimony to Jesus, 27-30; (3) the expansion by the evangelist of the Baptist's words, 31-36.—Ver. 22. μετὰ ταῦτα, subsequent to the ministry in Jerusalem Jesus and His disciples came εἰς τὴν Ἰουδαίαν γῆν, “into the Judæan country,” the rural parts in contradistinction to the metropolis. “Nam quum ex Judæae metropoli exiret Jesus, non poterat simpliciter dici proficisci in Judæam; . . . maluimus ergo territorium convertere quam terram,” Beza. So in Josh. viii. 1 (Codex Ambrosianus), “I have given into thy hand the King of Gai καὶ τὴν πόλιν αὐτοῦ καὶ τὴν γῆν αὐτοῦ”. Cf. also John xi. 54.—καὶ εἰὲκ διέτριβεν, “and there He spent some time with them”; whether weeks or months depends on the interpretation of iv. 35.—καὶ ἐβάπτισεν, that is, His disciples baptised, iv. 2.—Ver. 23. ἦν δὲ καὶ . . . ἐκεῖ. And John also was baptising, although he had said that he was sent to baptise in order that the Messiah might be identified; which had already been done. But John saw that men might still be prepared for the reception of the Messiah by his preaching and baptism. Hence, however, the questioning which arose, ver. 25. The locality is described as Αἰνῶν ἐγγὺς τοῦ Σαλείμ. “The Salim of this place is no doubt the Shalem of Genesis xxxiii. 18, and some seven miles north is 'Ainûn [= Springs], at the head of the Wady Fâr'ah, which is the great highway up from the Damieh ford for those coming from the east by the way of Peniel and Succoth” (Henderson's Palestine, p. 154). The reason for choosing this locality was ὅτι ὕδατα πολλὰ ἦν ἐκεῖ, “because many waters were there,” or much water; and therefore even in summer baptism by immersion could be continued. It is not “the people's refreshment” that is in view. Why mention this any more than where they got their food?—καὶ παρεγίνοντο, the indefinite third plural, as frequently in N.T. and regularly in English, “they continued coming”.—Ver. 24. οὐπω γὰρ . . . ὁ Ἰωάννης, “for not yet had John been cast into prison”: a clause inserted for the sake of those who might have gathered from the synoptic narrative that John was cast into prison immediately after the temptation of Jesus, Mk. i. 14, Mt. iv. 12. John having been present with Jesus through all this period can give the sequence of the events with chronological precision.—Ver. 25. ἐγένετο οὖν ζήτησις . . . There arose therefore—that is, in consequence of the proximity of these two baptisms—on the part of John's disciples [ἐκ, cf. Herod. v. 21 and Dionys. Hal. viii. p. 556] a questioning, or discussion, with a Jew about purifying, that is, generally, including the relation of those two baptisms to one another, and to the Jewish washings, and the significance of each. The trend of the discussion may be gathered from the complaint to the Baptist, ver. 26. As the discussion was begun by the disciples of John, it would seem as if they had challenged the Jew for seeking baptism from Jesus. For their complaint is (ver. 26) Ῥαββί . . . πρὸς αὐτόν. That Jesus should baptise as well as John they could not understand. Really, the difficulty is that Jesus should have allowed John to go on baptising, and that John should not himself have professed discipleship of Jesus. But so long as John saw that men were βαπτίζει, καὶ πάντες ἔρχονται πρὸς αὐτόν." 27. Ἀπεκρίθη Ἰωάννης καὶ εἶπεν, "Οὐ δύναται ἄνθρωπος λαμβάνειν οὐδὲν, ἐὰν μὴ ἢ δεδομένον αὐτῷ ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ. 28. αὐτοὶ ὑμεῖς μοι μαρτυρεῖτε ὅτι εἶπον, Οὐκ εἰμὶ ἐγὼ ὁ Χριστὸς, ἀλλ' ὅτι ἀπεσταλμένος εἰμὶ ἡ. 18. εἰμὶ ἔμπροσθεν ἐκείνου. 29. ὁ ἔχων τὴν νύμφην, νυμφίος ἐστίν." liv. 5. Eph. v. 25. ὁ δὲ φίλος τοῦ νυμφίου, ὁ ἐστηκὼς καὶ ἀκούων αὐτοῦ, χαρᾷ χαίρει διὰ τὴν φωνὴν τοῦ νυμφίου. 30. αὕτη οὖν ἡ χαρὰ ἣ ἐμὴ πεπλήρωται.

led by his preaching to accept the Messiah he might well believe that he served Christ better thus than by following in His train.—Ver. 27. His answer sufficiently shows that it was not rivalry that prompted him to continue his baptism.—οὐ δύναται . . . οὐρανοῦ. The general sense is obvious (cf. Ps. lxxv. 6, 7, cxxvii. 1; Jas. i. 17; 1 Cor. iii. 7), but did John mean to apply the principle directly to himself or to Jesus? Wetstein prefers the former: "non possum mihi arrogare et rapere, quae Deus non dedit". So Calvin, Beza ["quid conamini meae conditioni aliquid adjicere?"], Bengel ["quomodo audeam ego, inquit, homines ad me adstringere?"], and Lücke. But, as Weiss points out, it is a justification of Jesus which the question of the disciples demands, and this is given in John's statement that His popularity is God's gift. But John avails himself of the opportunity to explain the relation he himself holds to Jesus.—Ver. 28. αὐτοὶ ὑμεῖς . . . ἐκείνου. John's disciples should have been prepared for what they now see happening. He had emphatically declared that he was not the Christ, but only His forerunner (i. 19-27, 30).—Ver. 29. ὁ ἔχων τὴν νύμφην . . . The bride is the familiar O.T. figure expressive of the people in their close relation to God (Is. liv. 5, Hos. ii. 18, Ps. xlv.). This figure passes into N.T. Cf. Mt. xxii. 2, Eph. v. 32, Jas. iv. 4.—ὁ ἔχων, he that has and holds as a wife. Cf. Mk. vi. 18, Is. liv. 1. lxii. 5.—νυμφίος ἐστίν, it is the bridegroom, and no one else, who marries the bride and to whom she belongs. There is only one in whom the people of God can find their permanent joy and rest; one who is the perennial spring of their happiness and life.—ὁ δὲ φίλος τοῦ νυμφίου, the friend, par excellence, the groomsman, παρανύμφιος, νυμφάγωγος, or in Hebrew Shoshben, who was employed to ask the hand of the bride and to arrange the marriage. For the standing and duties of the Shadchan and Shoshben see Abraham's Jewish Life in the Middle Ages, pp. 170, 180. The similar function of the Hindu go-between or ghatak is fully described in The City of Sunshine. The peculiar and intense gratification [χαρᾷ χαίρει, intensely rejoices, see especially Lücke, who renders "durch und durch"; Weizsäcker, "freut sich hoch"; R.V., "rejoiceth greatly"] of this functionary was to see that his delicate task was crowned with success; and of this he was assured when he stood and heard the bridegroom directly welcoming his bride ["voice of bridegroom" as symbol of joy, Jer. vii. 34, xvi. 9].—αὕτη οὖν ἡ χαρὰ ἣ ἐμὴ πεπλήρωται. This is the joy which John claims for himself, the joy of the bridegroom's friend, who arranges the marriage, and this joy is attained in Christ's welcoming to Himself the people whom John has prepared for Him and directed to Him. Cf. 2 Cor. xi. 2, where Paul uses similar language. It is not John's regret that men are attracted to Jesus: rather it is the fulfilment of his work and hope. This was the God-appointed order.—Ver. 30. ἐκείνου δεῖ αὐξάνειν, ἐμὲ δὲ ἐλαττοῦσθαι. Paley translates, "it is for Him to go on growing and for me to be ever getting less," and adds, "the language seems to be solar". In the Church Calendar, no doubt, John the Baptist's day is Midsummer Day, while our Lord's "natalitia" is midwinter, but scarcely founded on solar considerations of the day's increase after Christmas and decrease after 24th June. Rather John is the morning star "fidelis Lucifer" whose light is eclipsed in that of the rising sun (cf. Bernardus "Lucet ergo Johannes, tanto verius quanto minus appetit lucere," and Euthymius, ἐλαττοῦσθαι ὡς ἡλίου ἀνατέλλαντος ἐωσφόρον). If the style of the following verses is any clue to their authorship we must ascribe them to the evangelist. Besides, some of the expressions are out of place in the Baptist's lips: e.g., τὴν μαρτυρίαν αὐτοῦ οὐδεὶς λαμβάνει could scarcely have been said at the very time when crowds were ἐκεῖνον δεῖ * αὐξάνειν, ἐμὲ δὲ ἐλαττοῦσθαι. 31. ὁ ἄνωθεν ἐρχόμενος, <sup>a</sup> Intrans. in * ἐπάνω πάντων ἐστίν. ὁ ὢν ἐκ τῆς γῆς, ἐκ τῆς γῆς ἐστι, καὶ ἐκ <sup>b</sup> Mt. vi. 28;

 τῆς γῆς λαλεῖ. ὁ ἄ ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ ἐρχόμενος, ἐπάνω πάντων ἐστίν, <sup>c</sup> xiii. 32, 32. καὶ ὁ ἐώρακε καὶ ἤκουσε, τοῦτο μαρτυρεῖ· καὶ τὴν μαρτυρίαν <sup>d</sup> etc.; trans αὐτοῦ * οὐδεὶς λαμβάνει. 33. ὁ λαβὼν αὐτοῦ τὴν μαρτυρίαν, <sup>e</sup> in 1 Cor.
 ἐσφράγισεν ὅτι ὁ Θεὸς ἀληθὴς ἐστίν. 34. ὃν γὰρ ἀπέστειλεν ὁ <sup>f</sup> i. Cor. xv Θεὸς, τὰ ῥήματα τοῦ Θεοῦ λαλεῖ· οὐ γὰρ ἐκ μέτρου δίδωσιν ὁ Θεὸς <sup>g</sup> viii. 23.
 in Gospp. d xvi. 28. e i. ix. Is. liii. i. f vii. 18. <sup>h</sup> i. Cor. xv sense freq. Rom. iii. 3.

<sup>1</sup> ἐπάνω πάντων ἐστίν omitted in  $\aleph$ D vet. Lat., etc., but found in  $\aleph$ ABL. The words are omitted by W.H., but are almost necessary as a balance to ἐκ τῆς γῆς ἐστίν.

<sup>2</sup> ὁ θεὸς omitted in  $\aleph$ BC<sup>2</sup>L 1, 33, and therefore by Tisch., W.H. and Weiss; T.R. in AC<sup>2</sup>D vet. Lat.

flocking to Him. The precise point in the Baptist's language to which the evangelist attaches this commentary or expansion ["theils erklärende, theils erweiternde Reflexion," Lücke] is his affirmation of the Messiah's superiority to himself. To this John adds (ver. 31): He is superior not only to the Baptist but to all, ἐπάνω πάντων ἐστίν, the reason being that He comes from above, ἄνωθεν; which is the equivalent of ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ in the latter part of the verse. These expressions are contrasted with ἐκ τῆς γῆς, the ordinary earthly origin of men, and they refer Christ's origin to a higher and unique source: unique because the result of this origin is that He is supreme over all, ἐπάνω πάντων. His origin is superior to that of all, therefore His supremacy is universal (cf. ver. 13). The results of origin, whether earthly or heavenly, are traced out in a twofold direction: in the kind of life lived and in the words spoken. On the one hand ὁ ἐκ τῆς γῆς . . . ἐστίν. The first ἐκ expresses origin: the second moral connection, as in xviii. 37, xv. 19: he whose origin is earthly is an earthly person, his life rises no higher than its source, his interests and associations are of earth. Another result is given in the words ἐκ τῆς γῆς λαλεῖ, from the earth his ideas and his utterance of them spring. A man's talk and teaching cannot rise above their source. So far as experimental knowledge goes he is circumscribed by his origin. In contrast to persons of earthly origin stands ὁ ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ ἐρχόμενος; ἐρχ. is added that not only his origin but his transition to his present condition may be indicated. His origin in like manner determines both his moral relationships and his teaching. The one is given in ἐπάνω πάντων ἐστίν. He lives in a higher region than all others and is not limited by earthly conditions.—Ver. 32. The result is ὁ ἐώρακε . . . μαρτυρεῖ. Seeing and hearing are equivalent to having direct knowledge. The man who is of earth may be trusted when he speaks of earth: he who is from heaven testifies to that of which he has had experimental knowledge (cf. ver. 13), and might therefore expect to be listened to, but τὴν μαρτυρίαν αὐτοῦ οὐδεὶς λαμβάνει. The καὶ which connects the clauses implies the meaning "and yet". This statement could not have been made when crowds were thronging to Jesus' baptism. They are the reflection of the evangelist, who sees how sporadically the testimony of Christ has been received. Yet it has not been universally rejected: ὁ λαβὼν . . . ἀληθὴς ἐστίν. He who received His testimony sealed that God is true. σφραγ. means to stamp with approval, to endorse, to give confirmation. Wetstein quotes from Aristides, Platonic, i., p. 18: Αἰσχίνης μαρτυρεῖ Πλάτωνι . . . καὶ τὴν τοῦδε μαρτυρίαν ὡς περ ἐπισφραγίζεται. But he who believes Christ not only confirms or approves Christ's truthfulness, but God's. ὃν γὰρ ἀπέστειλεν . . . λαλεῖ. For Christ is God's ambassador and speaks God's words. This is a thought which pervades this Gospel, see viii. 26, 28; xv. 5, etc. "He that sent me," or "the Father that sent me," is a phrase occurring over twenty times in the Gospel and is characteristic of the aspect of Christ presented in it, as revealing the Father.—Ver. 34. The reason assigned for the truth and trustworthiness of Christ's words is scarcely the reason we expect: οὐ γὰρ . . . Πνεῦμα. John has told us that Christ is to be believed because He

g v. 20; xiii. τὸ Πνεῦμα. 35. ὁ πατὴρ ἀγαπᾷ τὸν υἱόν, καὶ πάντα δέδωκεν ἔν ἡ
 h Jud. iii. 28. τῇ χειρὶ αὐτοῦ. 36. ὁ πιστεύων εἰς τὸν υἱὸν ἔχει ζωὴν αἰώνιον· ὁ
 i Ps. xlix. δὲ ἀπειθῶν τῷ υἱῷ οὐκ ἔσται ζωὴν, ἀλλ' ἡ ὀργὴ τοῦ Θεοῦ μένει 10;
 lxxxix. 48.
 j Rom. i. 18. ἐπ' αὐτόν."

testifies of what He hath seen and heard: now, because the Spirit is given without measure to Him. The meaning of the clause is contested. The omission of ὁ θεός does not materially affect the sense, for ὁ θεός would naturally be supplied as the nominative to δίδωσι from τοῦ θεοῦ of the preceding clause. There are four interpretations. (1) Augustine, Calvin, Lücke, Alford, suppose the clause means that God, instead of giving occasional and limited supplies of the Spirit as had been given to the prophets, gives to Christ the fulness of the Spirit. (2) Meyer thinks that the primary reference is not to Christ but that the statement is general, that God gives the Spirit freely and abundantly, and does thus dispense it to Christ. (3) Westcott, following Cyril, makes Christ the subject and understands the clause as meaning that He proves His Messiahship by giving the Spirit without measure. (4) Godet makes τὸ πνεῦμα the subject, not the object, and supposes the meaning to be that the Spirit gives to Christ the words of God without measure. The words of ver. 35 seem to weigh in favour of the rendering of A.V.: "God giveth not the Spirit by measure unto Him". The R.V. is ambiguous. ἐκ μέτρου, out of a measure, or, by measure, that is, sparingly. So ἐν μέτρῳ in Ezek. iv. 11. Wetstein quotes: "R. Achan dixit: etiam Spiritus S. non habitavit super Prophetas nisi mensura quadam: quidam enim librum unum, quidam duos vaticiniorum ediderunt". The Spirit was given to Jesus not in the restricted and occasional manner in which it had been given to the O.T. prophets, but wholly, fully, constantly. It was by this Spirit His human nature was enlightened and guided to speak things divine; and this Spirit, interposed as it were between the Logos and the human nature of Christ, was as little cumbersome in its operation or perceptible in consciousness as our breath which is interposed between the thinking mind and the words which utter it.—Ver. 35. ὁ πατὴρ . . . αὐτοῦ. These absolute expressions, "the Father," "the Son," are more naturally referred to the evangelist than to the Baptist. This absolute use of "the Son" as a designation of Christ certainly suggests, if it does not prove, the proper Divinity of Christ. It is the favourite designation in this Gospel. The love of the Father for the Son is the reason for His giving to Him the Spirit: nay, it accounts for His committing all things to His hand; πάντα δέδωκεν ἐν τῇ χειρὶ αὐτοῦ, that is, to possess and to rule. "Facit hic amor, quo Filium amplexus nos quoque in eo amplectitur, ut per illius manum nobis bona sua omnia communicet"—Calvin. But Calvin does not make the mistake of supposing that the words signify "by means of His hand"; cf. Beza. God has made Christ His plenipotentiary for this world and has done so because of His love. It was a boon then to Christ to come into this world and win it to Himself. There is no history, movement, or life of God so glorious as the history of God incarnate.—Ver. 36. ὁ πιστεύων . . . ἐπ' αὐτόν. Christ has been represented as Sovereign, commissioned with supreme powers, especially for the purpose of saving men and restoring them to God. Hence "he that believeth on the Son hath eternal life". He who through the Son finds and accepts the Father has life in this very vision and fellowship of the Supreme; cf. xvii. 3. But "he that refuses to be persuaded," lit. "he that disobeyeth". Beza points out that in N.T. there is a twofold ἀπειθεια, one of the intellect, dissenting from truth presented, as here and in Acts xiv. 2; the other of the will and life, see Rom. xi. 30. But will enters into the former as well as the latter. ἡ ὀργὴ τοῦ θεοῦ, the wrath of God denotes "the fixed and necessary hostility of the Divine nature to sin"; what appears in a righteous man as indignation; and also the manifestation of that hostility in acts of retributive justice. This is the only place in the Gospel where it occurs; but in Rev. vi. 16, we have "the wrath of the Lamb"; also xvi. 19, "the wine of the fury of His wrath"; also xiv. 10, xi. 18, xix. 15. In Paul "the coming wrath" is frequently alluded to; as also "the day of wrath," "the children" or "vessels" of wrath. On the refuser of Christ the wrath of God, instead of removing from him, abides, μένει; not, as Theophylact reads, μενεῖ, "will abide".

IV. 1. Ὡς οὖν ἔγνω ὁ Κύριος, ὅτι ἤκουσαν οἱ Φαρισαῖοι, ὅτι α vi. 23; xi. 2, etc., freq. in Lk. Ἰησοῦς πλείονας β μαθητὰς ποιεῖ καὶ βαπτίζει ἢ Ἰωάννης. 2. (ὁ καί- cp. Acts ii. 36. Constr. cp. i. 4a Acts xiv. 17; xvii. 27 only. d i Cor. i. 13. τοιγε Ἰησοῦς δ αὐτὸς οὐκ ἐβάπτισεν, ἀλλ' οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ) 3. β ἠφῆκε τὴν Ἰουδαίαν, καὶ ἀπῆλθε πάλιν εἰς τὴν Γαλιλαίαν. 4. ἔδει δὲ αὐτὸν διέρχεσθαι διὰ τῆς Σαμαρείας.<sup>1</sup> 5. ἔρχεται c Acts xiv. 17; xvii. 27 only. d i Cor. i. 13. οὖν εἰς πόλιν τῆς Σαμαρείας λεγομένην Συχάρ, ἑ πλησίον τοῦ

<sup>1</sup> Σαμαρίας Tisch. and W.H.

CHAPTER IV. Vv. 1-42. Jesus leaves Salim and the south for Galilee, and is received by the Samaritans on His way.—Vv. 1-4 account for His being in Samaria; 5-26 relate His conversation with a Samaritan woman; 27-38 His consequent conversation with His own disciples; 39-42 the impression He made upon the Samaritans. The circumstances which brought our Lord into Samaria seem to be related as much for the sake of maintaining the continuity of the history and of exhibiting the motives which guided His movements as for the sake of introducing the incident at Sychar.—Ver. 1. The first verse gives the cause of His leaving Judaea, to wit, a threatened or possible collision with the Pharisees, who resented His baptising.—Ὡς οὖν ἔγνω . . . ἢ Ἰωάννης. οὖν continues the narrative with logical sequence, connecting what follows with what goes before; here it connects what is now related with the popularity of Jesus' baptism, iii. 22, 26.—ὁ κύριος, so unusual in this Gospel that some editors read Ἰησοῦς, for which there is scant authority. But where the evangelist is not reporting contemporary speech but speaking for his own person κύριος is natural.—ἔγνω rightly rendered in the modern Greek translation by ἔμαθεν; the knowledge that comes by information is meant.—ὅτι ἤκουσαν, that the Pharisees had heard, the aorist here, as frequently elsewhere, representing the English pluperfect. What they had heard is given in direct narration under an introductory ὅτι, and hence not the pronoun but Ἰησοῦς appears as subject: "Jesus is making and baptising more disciples than John".—μαθητὰς ποιεῖ (cf. μαθητεύσατε βαπτίζοντες, Mt. xxviii. 19), "disciples" being here used in the wider sense and not involving permanent separation from their employments. The Pharisees had resented John's baptising, much more that of Jesus, because more popular.—Ver. 2. Here John inserts a clause corrective of one impression which this statement would make: καίτοιγε . . . αὐτοῦ. καίτοιγε is slightly stronger than "although," rather "although indeed". Hoogveen (De Particulis, p. 322) renders "quanquam re vera"; see also Paley, Greek Particles, pp. 67-8. τοι is the old form of τῶ, "hereby," "truly," "in fact". The clause is inserted to remind us, as Bengel says, that "baptizare actio ministralis (cf. Paul's refusal to baptise). Johannes minister suâ manu baptizavit, discipuli ejus, ut videtur, neminem; at Christus baptizat spiritu sancto." So too Nonnus, who says that the king did not baptise with water. "By leaving the baptism of water to the apostles, He rendered the rite independent of His personal presence, and so provided for the maintenance of it in His Church after His departure," Godet.—Ver. 3. On this coming to the ears of Jesus ἠφῆκε τὴν Ἰουδαίαν, He forsook or abandoned Judaea. The verb is used of neglecting or dismissing from thought, hence of forgiving sin; but there is here no ethical sense in the word, and it may be translated "left".—καὶ ἀπῆλθε πάλιν, "again" in reference to the visit to Galilee already narrated, i. 44, ii. 1. Jesus feared a collision with the Pharisees at this early stage, because it could only mar His work. He refuses to be hurried, and remains master of the situation throughout. He therefore retired to Galilee, where He thought He would be hidden. Cf. ver. 44.—Ver. 4. ἔδει . . . Σαμαρείας. The ἔδει is explained by the position of Samaria interposed between Judaea and Galilee. Only the very sensitive Jews went round by Perea. The Galileans were accustomed to go through Samaria on their way to the feasts at Jerusalem (Josephus, Antiq., xx. 6, 1). Samaria took its name from the city Samaria or Shomron, built by Omri as the capital of the kingdom of Israel (1 Kings xvi. 24). After being destroyed by Hyrcanus, the city was rebuilt by Herod and called Sebaste in honour ε Gen. χωρίου *δ ἔδωκεν ἰακώβ ἰωσήφ τῷ υἱῷ αὐτοῦ. 6. ἦν δὲ ἐκεῖ xxxiii. 19;

 xlviii. 22. πηγῆ τοῦ ἰακώβ. ὁ οὖν Ἰησοῦς *κεκοπιακῶς ἐκ τῆς ὁδοπορίας h Is. xl. 31.
 i 1 Mac. vi. ἵεκαθέζετο οὕτως ἐπὶ τῇ πηγῇ. ὥρα ἦν ὡσεὶ ἕκτη. 7. Ἔρχεται
 41. 2 Cor. γυνὴ ἐκ τῆς Σαμαρείας *ἀντλήσαι ὕδωρ. λέγει αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, xi. 26.
 Heb. ii.
 19. j Exod. ii. 15. k Gen. xxiv. 20. Exod. ii. 16.

of Augustus. The territory of Samaria in the time of Christ was included in the tetrarchy of Archelaus and was under the procurator Pontius Pilate. Herod Antipas' domain marched with it north and east.—Ver. 5. ἔρχεται οὖν . . . τῷ υἱῷ αὐτοῦ. "So He comes to a city of Samaria called Sychar." λεγομένην, cf. xi. 16, xi. 54, xix. 13, etc. In the Itinerary of Jerusalem (A.D. 333) Sychar is identified with 'Askar, west of Salim and near Shechem, the modern Nablús. The strength of the case for 'Askar, according to Prof. G. A. Smith (Hist. Geog., p. 371), is this: "That in the fourth century two authorities independently describe a Sychar distinct from Shechem; that in the twelfth century at least three travellers, and in the thirteenth at least one, do the same, the latter also quoting a corrupt but still possible variation of the name; that in the fourteenth the Samaritan Chronicle mentions another form of the name; and that modern travellers find a third possible variation of it not only applied to a village suiting the site described by the authorities in the fourth century, but important enough to cover all the plain about the village". The difficulty regarding the initial Ayin in the name 'Askar is also removed by Prof. Smith. See further Conder's Tent-work, i. 71. Sychar is described as πησίον . . . αὐτοῦ, near the "parcel of ground" (particella, little part; the Vulgate has "praedium," estate) which Jacob gave to Joseph his son; according to Gen. xviii. 22, where Jacob says, "I have given thee one portion (Shechem) above thy brethren"; cf. Gen. xxxiii. 19. Shechem in Hebrew means "the shoulder," and some have fancied that the shoulder being the priest's portion, the word came to denote any allotment. Gesenius, however, is of opinion that the word was transferred to a portion of land, on account of the shape resembling the back across the shoulders.—Ver. 6. ἦν δὲ ἐκεῖ πηγῆ τοῦ ἰακώβ. Both πηγῆ and φρέαρ are used in this context; the former meaning the spring or well of water, the latter the dug and built pit or well. In ver. 11 φρέαρ is necessarily used. Whether in this verse 6 ἐπὶ τῇ πηγῇ is to be rendered "at," keeping πηγῇ in its strict sense, or "on" as if for φρέατι is doubted; but the former is certainly the more natural rendering; cf. Aristoph., Frogs, 191, where ἐπὶ with accus. gives rise to misunderstanding of sitting "on" an oar instead of "at" it. Jacob's well lies ten minutes south of the present village 'Askar, and a good spring exists in 'Askar. This has given rise to the difficulty: Why should a woman have come so far, passing good sources of water supply? Most probably the reason is that this well was Jacob's, and special virtue was supposed to attach to it; or because in the heat of summer other wells and streams were dry. The real difficulty is: Why was there a well there at all, in the neighbourhood of streams? Possibly Jacob may have dug it that he might have no quarrelling with his neighbours about water-rights. As a stranger with a precarious tenure he might find this necessary. Travellers agree in accepting as Jacob's well here mentioned the Ain-Jakub, or Bir-et-Jakub, some twenty minutes east of Nablús.—ὁ οὖν Ἰησοῦς . . . ἕκτη. It was "about," ὡς (Theophylact calls attention to this as a mark of accuracy), the sixth hour, that is, midday (the Jews dined on Sabbath at the sixth hour, see Josephus, Vita) (see on c. i. 40); and they had probably been walking for several hours, and accordingly Jesus was tired, κεκοπιακῶς (κόπος, excessive toil), fatigued (Wetstein quotes οὐ γὰρ ἐξ ὁδοπορίας τὰς φλέβας κοπιᾷ ἀλλὰ τὰ νεῦρα), and was sitting thus, tired as He was (οὕτως, in the condition in which He was, that is, tired as He was. Elsner thinks it only indicates consequence [nihil aliud quam consequentiam significat] and should be omitted in translating. So Kypke, who cites instructive instances, concludes: "solemne est Graecis, praecedente participio, voculam οὕτως pleonastice ponere". But in all his instances οὕτως precedes the verb), at the well (cf. Josephus, Ant., v. 1: στρατοπεδευσάμενους ἐπὶ τινι πηγῇ). As to the hour, two circumstances confirm the opinion that it was midday

“ Δός μοι πιεῖν. <sup>1</sup> 8. οἱ γὰρ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ ἀπεληλύθεισαν εἰς τὴν πόλιν, ἵνα <sup>m</sup> τροφὰς ἀγοράσωσι. 9. λέγει οὖν αὐτῷ ἡ γυνὴ ἡ Σαμαρείτις, “ Πῶς σὺ Ἰουδαῖος ὢν ὁ παρ’ ἐμοῦ πιεῖν αἰτεῖς, οὕσης γυναικὸς Σαμαρείτιδος; ” οὐ γὰρ συγχρῶνται Ἰουδαῖοι Σαμαρείταις. <sup>n</sup> 10. Ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῇ, “ Εἰ ᾔδεις τὴν δωρεὰν τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ τίς ἐστὶν ὁ λέγων σοι, Δός μοι πιεῖν, σὺ ἂν ᾔτησας αὐτὸν, ο

ix. 2. Jas. i. 5. [1 Jo. v. 15. Mt. xx. 20.] p Here only in Gosp. <sup>43.</sup> Pl. here only; cp. 2 Chron. xi. 23. <sup>n</sup> viii. 48. Ezra iv. 9. 2 Kings xvii. 24. <sup>o</sup> Only in Acts iii. 2;

<sup>1</sup> πιεῖν in Tisch., W.H.; πιν in Lachmann.

<sup>2</sup> This clause, a supposed gloss, omitted in  $\aleph^*D$ , found in  $\aleph^a$ ABCL.

First, that apparently there was no intention of halting here for the night, as there would have been had it been evening. And, second, while it is truly urged that evening is the common time for drawing water, it is obvious that only one woman had come at this time, and accordingly the probability is it was not evening. See also Josephus, Ant., ii. 11, 1, where he describes Moses sitting at the well at midday wearied with his journey, and the women coming to water their flocks.—Ver. 7. ἔρχεται . . . ὕδωρ, apparently this clause is prepared for by the preceding, “There comes a woman of Samaria,” that is, a Samaritan woman, not, of course, “from the city Samaria,” which is two hours distant from the well, ἀντλήσαι ὕδωρ, infinitive and aorist, both classical; cf. Rebecca in Gen. xxiv. 11, etc., having her ὕδρια on her shoulder or on her head, ἄγγος ἐπὶ τῇ κεφαλῇ ἔχουσα, Herod., v. 12; and Ovid’s “Ponitur e summa ficitilis urna coma”. [Elsner] ἄντλος is the hold of a ship where the bilge settles: ἀντλέω, to bale a ship; hence, to draw water. To her Jesus says, Δός μοι πιεῖν, the usual formula; cf. δώσω πιεῖν, Pherocrates, Frag., 67, and Aristoph., Pax, 49.—Ver. 8. οἱ γὰρ μαθηταὶ . . . ἀγοράσωσι. This gives the reason for the request. Had the disciples been present they would have made the request: an indication of the relations already subsisting between the disciples and the Lord. Probably the five first called were still with Him. That the disciples had gone to buy in Sychar, shows either that the law allowed trading with Samaritans, or that Jesus and His disciples ignored the law. But the woman is surprised at the request of Jesus.—Ver. 9. πῶς σὺ Ἰουδαῖος ὢν. How did she know He was a Jew? Probably there were slight differences in dress, feature and accent. Edersheim says “the fringes on the Tallith of the Samaritans are blue, while those worn by the Jews are white”. He also exposes the mistake of some commentators regarding the words uttered by Jesus: “Teni li lishtoth”. The reason of the woman’s surprise is given by the Evangelist in the words οὐ γὰρ συγχρῶνται Ἰουδαῖοι Σαμαρείταις. “For Jews have no dealings with Samaritans.” Συγχρᾶσθαι literally signifies “to use together with,” so that the sense here might be that the woman was surprised that Jesus should use the same vessel she used; rather it has the secondary meaning “to have intercourse” or “dealings with”; similarly to the Latin utor, see Hor., Ep., i. xii. 22, “utere Pompeio Grospho,” and xvii. 13, “regibus uti,” to make a friend of, or “be on terms of intimacy with”. The classical phrase is οἰσιν οὐκ ἐπιτροφαί, Eurip., Helena, 440. The later tradition said: “Samaritanis panem comedere aut vinum bibere prohibitum est”. Of course the hostile feeling ran back to the days of Nehemiah. And see Ecclus. i. 25, 26. “With two nations is my soul vexed, and the third is no nation: they that sit upon Mount Seir and the Philistines, and that foolish people that dwelleth in Sichem.” For the origin of the Samaritans see 2 Kings xvii., and cf. Farrar’s Life of Christ in loc. Tristram, Land of Israel, 134.—Ver. 10. Ἀπεκρίθη . . . ὕδωρ ζῶν. “If thou knewest;” the pathos of the situation strikes Jesus. The woman stands on the brink of the greatest possibilities, but is utterly unconscious of them. Two things she did not know: (1) τὴν δωρεὰν τοῦ θεοῦ, the free gift of God. This is explained in the last words of the verse to be “living water”; but in its first occurrence it is indefinite: “If thou knewest the freeness of God’s giving, and that to each of His children He has a purpose of good”. But in God’s direction the woman cherished no hope. (2) She did not know τίς ἐστὶν ὁ λέγων σοι, Δός μοι πιεῖν. So long as she thought Him an ordinary Jew she could expect nothing from Him. Had she known that Jesus

- q Gen. xxvi. καὶ ἔδωκεν ἄν σοι ὕδωρ ζῶν." 11. λέγει αὐτῷ ἡ γυνή, "Κύριε, οὔτε ἀντλημα ἔχεις, καὶ τὸ φρέαρ ἐστὶ βαθύ· πόθεν οὖν ἔχεις τὸ ὕδωρ τὸ ζῶν; 12. μὴ σὺ μείζων εἶ τοῦ πατρὸς ἡμῶν Ἰακώβ, ὃς ἔδωκεν ἡμῖν τὸ φρέαρ, καὶ αὐτὸς ἔξ αὐτοῦ ἔπιε, καὶ οἱ υἱοὶ αὐτοῦ, καὶ τὰ θρέμματα αὐτοῦ;" 13. Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῇ, "Πᾶς ὁ πίνων ἐκ τοῦ ὕδατος τούτου, διψήσει πάλιν· 14. ὃς δ' ἂν πῖνῃ ἐκ τοῦ ὕδατος οὗ ἐγὼ δώσω αὐτῷ, οὐ μὴ διψήσῃ<sup>1</sup> εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα· ἀλλὰ τὸ ὕδωρ ὃ δώσω αὐτῷ, γενήσεται ἐν αὐτῷ πηγὴ ὕδατος ἄλλομένου εἰς ζῶν αἰῶνιον." 15. λέγει πρὸς αὐτὸν ἡ γυνή, "Κύριε, δός μοι τοῦτο τὸ ὕδωρ, ἵνα μὴ διψῶ, μηδὲ ἔρχωμαι<sup>2</sup> ἐνθάδε ἀντλεῖν." 16. λέγει αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Ὑπαγε, φώνησον τὸν ἄνδρα σου, καὶ

<sup>1</sup> διψήσει in  $\Sigma$ ABDL.

<sup>2</sup> διερχομαι in Tisch., W.H., R.V.

was the bearer of God's free gift to men, she would have asked of Him. σὺ ἂν ἤτησας αὐτόν, σὺ is emphatic. You would have anticipated my request by a request on your own behalf. And instead of creating difficulties I would have given thee living water.—ὕδωρ ζῶν, by which the woman understood that He meant spring water. What He did mean appears immediately. Ver. 11. λέγει αὐτῷ . . . τὸ ζῶν; She addresses Him with κύριε, perhaps fancying from His saying, "If you had known who it is that says to you," that He was some great person in disguise. But her answer breathes incredulity: οὔτε ἀντλημα ἔχεις. She began her sentence meaning to say, "You neither have a bucket, nor is the well shallow enough for you to reach the water without one," but she alters its construction and puts the second statement in a positive form. The depth of the well is variously given. Conder found it 75 feet.—πόθεν . . . She is mystified. μὴ σὺ μείζων . . . θρέμματα αὐτοῦ. Jesus had spoken as if independently of the well He could procure living water: but even Jacob (claimed by the Samaritans as their father, and whose bones lay in their midst), great as he was, used this well.—θρέμματα. "What is nourished." Kypke adduces several instances in which it is used of "domestics". Plato, Laws, 953 E, uses it of "nurslings of the Nile," the Egyptians. But Wetstein adduces many instances of its use in the sense of "cattle". Theophylact thinks this points to the abundant supply of water.—Vv. 13, 14. Jesus in reply, though He does not quite break through the veil of figure, leads her on to think of a more satisfying gift than even Jacob had given in this well.—πᾶς ὁ πίνων . . . ζῶν αἰῶνιον. He contrasts the water of the well with the water He can give; and the two characteristic qualities of His living water are suggested by this contrast. The water of Jacob's well had two defects: it quenched thirst only for a time, and it lay outside the town a weary distance, and subject to various accidents. Christ offers water which will quench thirst lastingly, and which will be "in" the person drinking, ἐν αὐτῷ πηγὴ ὕδατος ἄλλομένου εἰς ζῶν αἰῶνιον. For this figure put to another though similar use, see Marcus Aurelius, vii. 59, and viii. 51, with Gataker's notes. The living water lastingly quenches human cravings and is within the man, inseparable from him, and always energetically and afresh shooting up.—Ver. 15. The woman, with her mind still running on actual water, says Κύριε . . . ἀντλεῖν. She is attracted by the two qualities of the water, and asks it (1) ἵνα μὴ διψῶ, (2) μηδὲ ἔρχωμαι ἐνθάδε ἀντλεῖν.—Ver. 16. To this request Jesus replies "Ὑπαγε, φώνησον . . . ἐνθάδε. His purpose in this has been much debated. Calvin thinks He meant to rebuke her scurrility in mockingly asking for the water. This does not show Calvin's usual penetration. Westcott says that in the woman's request "she confessed by implication that even the greatest gift was not complete unless it was shared by those to whom she was bound. If they thirsted, though she might not thirst, her toilsome labour must be con-

ἔλθε ἐνθάδε." 17. Ἀπεκρίθη ἡ γυνὴ καὶ εἶπεν, "Οὐκ ἔχω ἄνδρα." Λέγει αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Καλῶς εἶπας, ὅτι ἄνδρα οὐκ ἔχω." 18. πέντε γὰρ ἄνδρας ἔσχες· καὶ νῦν ὃν ἔχεις, οὐκ ἔστι σου ἀνὴρ· τοῦτο ἀληθὲς εἶρηκας." 19. Λέγει αὐτῷ ἡ γυνὴ, "Κύριε, θεωρῶ ὅτι προφήτης εἶ σύ." 20. οἱ πατέρες ἡμῶν ἐν τούτῳ τῷ ὄρει προσκύνησαν· καὶ ὑμεῖς λέγετε, ὅτι ἐν Ἱεροσολύμοις ἐστὶν ὁ τόπος, ὅπου δεῖ προσκυνεῖν." 21. Λέγει αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Γύναι, πιστευσόν μοι,<sup>1</sup> ὅτι ἔρχεται ὥρα, ὅτε οὔτε ἐν τῷ ὄρει τούτῳ οὔτε ἐν Ἱεροσολύμοις tinued still." Jesus, reading this thought, bids her bring the man for whom she draws water. The gift is for him also. But this meaning is too obscure. Meyer thinks the request was not seriously intended: but this detracts from the simplicity of Christ. The natural interpretation is that in response to her request Jesus gives her now the first draught of the living water by causing her to face her guilty life and bring it to Him. He cannot give the water before thirst for it is awakened. The sure method of awaking the thirst is to make her acknowledge herself a sinful woman (cf. Alford).—Ver. 17. The woman shrinks from exposure and replies οὐκ ἔχω ἄνδρα, "I have no husband". A literal truth, but scarcely honest in intention. Jesus at once veils her deceit, καλῶς εἶπας, etc., and disposes of her equivocation by emphasising the ἄνδρα. Thou hast well said, I have no husband.—πέντε γὰρ . . . εἶρηκας. "He whom thou now hast is not thy husband: in this [so far] you said what is true." In Malachi's time facility for divorce was producing disastrous consequences, and probably many women, not only in Samaria but among the poorer Jews, had a similar history to relate. The stringency with which our Lord speaks on this subject suggests that matters were fast approaching the condition in which they now are in Mohammedan countries. Lane tells us that "there are certainly not many persons in Cairo who have not divorced one wife if they have been long married," and that there are many who have in the course of ten years married twenty or thirty or more wives (cf. Lecky's European Morals for the state of matters in the Roman world). Jerome, Ep. ad Ageruch, 123, mentions a Roman woman who had had twenty-two husbands. Serious attention need scarcely be given to the fancy of "the critical school" that the woman with her five husbands is intended as an allegorical representation of Samaria with the [seven] gods of the five nations who peopled the country. See 2 Kings xvii. 24-31. Consistently the man with whom the woman now lived would represent Jehovah. Holtzmann, shrinking from this, suggests Simon Magus. Heracleon discovered in the husband that was not a husband the woman's guardian angel or Pleroma (Bigg's Neoplatonism, 150).—Ver. 19. The woman at once recognises this knowledge of her life as evidence of a supernatural endowment.—Κύριε θεωρῶ ὅτι προφήτης εἶ σύ. Cf. ver. 29 and ii. 24. θεωρῶ is used in its post-classical sense. It is not unnatural that the woman finding herself in the presence of a prophet should seek His solution of the standing problem of Samaritan religion. His answer would shed further light on his prophetic endowment, and would also determine whether He had any light and hope to give to a Samaritan. Josephus (Antiq., xiii. 3, 4) narrates that a disputation on this point before Ptolemy Philometor resulted in the death according to contract of the two Samaritan advocates, they not being able to prove their position.—Ver. 20. οἱ πατέρες . . . δεῖ προσκυνεῖν. Our fathers worshipped in this mountain, Gerizim, at whose base we are standing, etc. On Gerizim were proclaimed the blessings recorded Deut. xxviii. Sanballat erected on it a rival temple (but see the Bible Dict. and Josephus) which was rased by John Hyrcanus, B.C. 129. A broad flat surface of rock on the top of Gerizim is still held sacred by the few Samaritans who now represent the old race and customs. Especially consult G. A. Smith's Hist. Geog., p. 334, who shows that Shechem is the natural centre of Palestine, and adds: "It was

<sup>1</sup> T. R. in AC<sup>3</sup>, but πιστεψε μοι γυναὶ in SBC*DL.

- a With acc. ἢ προσκυνήσετε τῷ πατρὶ. 22. Ὑμεῖς προσκυνεῖτε ὃ οὐκ οἴδατε.
ver. 23, etc., and in older writers; sec Thayer. ἡμεῖς προσκυνοῦμεν ὃ οἴδαμεν. ὅτι ἡ ὠστηρία ἐκ τῶν Ἰουδαίων
v 2 Kings xvii. 27. ἐστίν. 23. ἀλλ' ἔρχεται ὥρα καὶ νῦν ἐστίν, ὅτε οἱ ἀληθινοὶ προσw Here only in John. Lk. i. 69, 71, 77; xix. 9; only in Gosp. κληταὶ προσκυνήσουσι τῷ πατρὶ ἐν πνεύματι καὶ ἀληθείᾳ· καὶ γὰρ x Here and i. 42 only. ὁ πατὴρ τοιούτους ζητεῖ τοὺς προσκυνούντας αὐτόν. 24. Πνεῦμα ὃ Θεός· καὶ τοὺς προσκυνούντας αὐτόν, ἐν πνεύματι καὶ ἀληθείᾳ, δεῖ προσκυνεῖν." 25. Λέγει αὐτῷ ἡ γυνή, "Οἶδα ὅτι Ἰησοῦς ἔρχεται." (ὁ λεγόμενος Χριστός.) "ὅταν ἔλθῃ ἐκεῖνος, ἀναγγελεῖ

by this natural capital of the Holy Land, from which the outgoings to the world are so many and so open, that the religion of Israel rose once for all above every geographical limit, and the charter of a universal worship was given". ἐν Ἱερουσαλήμοις may either mean that the place of worship, the temple, is in Jerusalem, or that Jerusalem is itself the place—more probably the latter.—Ver. 21. Γύναι, πιστευσόν μοι . . . τῷ πατρὶ. One of the greatest announcements ever made by our Lord; and made to one sinful woman, cf. xx. 16.—ἔρχεται ὥρα a time is coming; in ver. 23 καὶ νῦν ἐστίν is added. A great religious revolution has arrived. Localism in worship is abolished, οὔτε ἐν τῷ ὄρει τούτῳ, etc., "neither in this mountain nor in Jerusalem," exclusively or preferentially, "shall ye worship the Father". What determines inis "hour"? The manifestation of God in Christ, and the principle announced in ver. 24 and implied in τῷ πατρὶ; for God being absolutely "the Father" all men in all places must have access to Him, and being of a like nature to man's He can only receive a spiritual worship. Cf. Acts xvii. 29.—Ver. 22. Ὑμεῖς προσκυνεῖτε ὃ οὐκ οἴδατε. The distinction between Jewish and Samaritan worship lies not in the difference of place, but of the object of worship. The neuter refers abstractly to the object of worship. "You do not know the object of your worship;" suggested by the τῷ πατρὶ of the preceding clause. Cf. Acts xvii. 23. ἡμεῖς προσκυνοῦμεν ὃ οἴδαμεν. The Jews worshipped a God who had made Himself known to them in their history by His gracious and saving dealings with them. That it is this knowledge which is meant appears in the following clause: ὅτι ἡ ὠστηρία ἐκ τῶν Ἰουδαίων ἐστίν, that is to say, God has manifested Himself as Saviour to the Jews, and through them to all. "A powerful repudiation of the theory which makes the author of this Gospel a Gentile of the second century with a Gnostic antipathy to Judaism and Jews," Reynolds.—Ver. 23. There is this great distinction between Jew and Samaritan, ἀλλ' ἔρχεται ὥρα . . . καὶ ἀληθείᾳ, but notwithstanding that it is to the Jews God has especially revealed Himself as Saviour, the hour has now come when the ideal worshippers, whether Jew or Samaritan, shall worship the one universal Father in spirit, not in either Gerizim or Jerusalem, and in truth, not in the symbols of Samaritan or Jewish worship, ἐν πνεύματι καὶ ἀληθείᾳ. Two defects of all previous worship are aimed at; all that was local and all that was symbolic is to be left behind. Worship is to be (1) ἐν πνεύματι [on ἐν here, see Winer, 528], in the heart, not in this place or that. The essential thing is, not that the right place be approached, but that the right spirit enter into worship. And (2) it is to be ἐν ἀληθείᾳ, in correspondance with reality, both as regards the object and the manner of worship. The Samaritans had not known the object of their worship: the Jews had employed symbolism in worship. Both these defects were now to be removed. καὶ γὰρ ὁ πατὴρ . . . αὐτόν. καὶ γὰρ is not merely equivalent to γὰρ, but must be rendered, "For of a truth". The characteristics of the ideal worshippers have been declared; and now, in confirmation, Jesus adds, "For of a truth the Father seeks such for His worshippers".—Ver. 24. The reason of all this is found in the determining statement πνεῦμα ὃ θεός, God is Spirit. Cf. God is Light; God is Love. The predication involves much; that God is personal, and much else. But primarily it here indicates that God is not corporeal, and therefore needs no temple. Rarely is the fundamental fact of God's spirituality carried to all its conclusions. Cf. James i. 27; Rom. xii. 1.—Ver. 25. This ἡμῖν πάντα.” 26. Λέγει αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Ἐγὼ εἰμι, ὁ λαλῶν σοι.” 27. Καὶ ἐπὶ τούτῳ ἦλθον οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἐθαύμασαν <sup>1</sup> ὅτι μετὰ γυναικὸς ἐλάλει· οὐδεὶς μέντοι εἶπε, “Τί ζητεῖς;” ἢ, “Τί λαλεῖς μετ’ αὐτῆς;”

28. Ἀφήκεν οὖν τὴν ὑδρίαν αὐτῆς ἢ γυνῆ, καὶ ἀπῆλθεν εἰς τὴν πόλιν, καὶ λέγει τοῖς ἀνθρώποις, 29. “Δεῦτε, ἴδετε ἄνθρωπον, ὃς great statement rather overwhelms and bewilders the woman. Ἰλιγγίασε πρὸς τὸ πῶν ῥηθέντων ὕψος, Euthymius, after Chrysostom. Somewhat helplessly she appeals to the final authority, οἶδα ὅτι Μεσσίας . . . πάντα. The Samaritan expectation of a Messiah was based on their knowledge of Deut. xviii., and other allusions in the Pentateuch, and on their familiarity with Jewish ideas. He was known as Hashab or Hathab, the Converter, or as El Muhdy, the Guide. For the sources of information, see Westcott's Introd. to Gospels, chap. ii., note 2. “It appears from Josephus (Ant., xviii. 4, 1) that in the later years of the procuratorship of Pilate, there was an actual rising of the Samaritans, who assembled on Mount Gerizim, under the influence of these Messianic expectations. Who can say that they may not have been originally set in motion by the event recorded in the Fourth Gospel?” Sanday. It was His prophetic endowment which this woman especially believed in, “He will tell us all”; and for Him she was willing to wait.—Ver. 26. The woman's despairing bewilderment is at once dissipated by the announcement ἐγὼ εἰμι, ὁ λαλῶν σοι. “I that speak to thee am He.” This declaration He was free to make among a people with whom He could not be used for political ends. “I think, too, there will be felt to be something not only very beautiful, but very characteristic of our Lord, in His declaring Himself with greater plainness of speech than He had Himself hitherto done even to the Twelve, to this dark-minded and sin-stained woman, whose spiritual nature was just awakening to life under His presence and His words” (Stanton, Jewish and Christian Messiah, p. 275).—Ver. 27. But just at this critical juncture, ἐπὶ τούτῳ, “on this,” came His disciples καὶ ἐθαύμασαν. The imperfect better suits the sense; “they were wondering”: the cause of wonder being ὅτι μετὰ γυναικὸς ἐλάλει, “that He was speaking with a woman”; this being forbidden to Rabbis. “Samuel dicit: non salutant feminam omnino.” “The wise have said, Each time that the man prolongs converse with the woman [that is, his own wife] he causes evil to himself, and desists from words of Thorah and in the end inherits Gehinnom” (Taylor, Pirke Aboth, p. 29; see also Schoettgen in loc.). But although the disciples wondered οὐδεὶς μέντοι εἶπε, “no one, however, said” τί ζητεῖς, “what are you seeking?” nor even the more general question τί λαλεῖς μετ’ αὐτῆς, “why are you talking with her?” Their silence was due to reverence. They had already learned that He had reasons for His actions which might not lie on the surface.—Ver. 28. ἀφήκεν οὖν . . . ἢ γυνῆ. “The woman accordingly,” that is, because of the interruption, “left her pitcher,” forgetting the object of her coming, in the greater discovery she had made; and also unconsciously showing that she meant to return.—καὶ ἀπῆλθεν . . . ὁ Χριστός; and went to the city and says to the men, easily accessible because lounging in groups at the hottest hour of the day, “Come, see a man who told me all I ever did”. The woman's absorption in the thought of the prophet's endowment causes her to forget the shame of the declaration which had convinced her. She does not positively affirm that He is the Christ, but says μήτι οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ Χριστός; This is what grammarians call the “tentative” use of μήτι. The A.V. “Is not this the Christ?” is not so correct as R.V. “Can this be the Christ?” The Syriac has “Is not this perhaps the Christ?” The Vulgate has “Numquid ipse est Christus?” In some passages of the N.T. (Mt. vii. 16, Acts x. 47) μήτι is used in questions which expect a more decided and exclusive negative than the simple μῆ, “certainly not,” “not at all”. But here and in Mt. xii. 23 mere doubt expresses itself, doubt with rather a leaning to an affirmative answer (cf. Hoogeveen, Doctrina Partic., under μήτι; and Pape's Lexicon, where it is rendered “ob etwa”). The Greek commentators unite in lauding the skill with which the woman excites the curiosity of the men and leads without seeming to

<sup>1</sup> εθαυμαζον in ΞABCDGKL; T.R. in ESU.

Cr. Phil.
i. 3; ii. 17,
etc.
Thayer,
p. 233.
Gen. xxxvii. 15

- a xiii. 35. εἰπέ μοι πάντα ὅσα ἐποίησα· *μήτι οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ Χριστός;”
 30. Ἐξήλθον οὖν ἐκ τῆς πόλεως, καὶ ἦρχοντο πρὸς αὐτόν.
- b Only here with ἐν; cp. Acts xiii. 42.
 c Constr. ver. 7.
 d Constr. xv. 12.
 I. k. i. 43, etc., Burton, 213.
 e ἔτι... καὶ, Gen. vii.
 f vi. 5.
31. Ἐν δὲ <sup>b</sup>τῷ μεταξύ ἡρώτων αὐτὸν οἱ μαθηταὶ, λέγοντες, “Ραββὶ, φάγε.” 32. Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Ἐγὼ βρώσιν ἔχω φαγεῖν, ἢν ὑμεῖς οὐκ οἶδατε.” 33. Ἐλεγον οὖν οἱ μαθηταὶ πρὸς ἀλλήλους, “Μήτις ἦνεγκεν αὐτῷ φαγεῖν;” 34. Λέγει αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Ἐμὸν βρώμά ἐστιν, <sup>d</sup>ἵνα ποιῶ τὸ θέλημα τοῦ πέμψαντός με, καὶ τελειώσω αὐτοῦ τὸ ἔργον. 35. οὐχ ὑμεῖς λέγετε, ὅτι <sup>e</sup>ἔτι τετραμῆνόν ἐστι, καὶ ὁ θερισμὸς ἔρχεται; ἰδοῦ, λέγω ὑμῖν, <sup>f</sup>Ἐπάρατε τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς ὑμῶν, καὶ θεάσασθε τὰς χώρας, ὅτι lead. [Euthymius says: τὸ δὲ μήτι οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ Χριστός; ἀντὶ τοῦ, μήποτε οὗτός ἐστιν; ὑποκρίνεται γὰρ, οἷον ἐπιδιστάζειν, ὥστε παρ' αὐτῶν γενέσθαι γῆν κρίσιν.]—Ver. 30. ἐξήλθον οὖν . . . πρὸς αὐτόν. The men, moved by the woman's question, left the city and were coming to Jesus.—Ver. 31. But meanwhile ἐν τῷ μεταξύ, between the woman's leaving the well and the men's return to it, the disciples, having brought the purchased food, and observing that notwithstanding His previous fatigue Jesus does not share with them, say Ῥαββὶ φάγε. But in His conversation with the woman His fatigue and hunger had disappeared, and He replies (ver. 32) ἐγὼ βρώσιν . . . οὐκ οἶδατε. John does not distinguish between βρώσις and βρώμα, eating and the thing eaten, cf. ver. 34; Paul uses both words in their proper sense, 1 Cor. viii. 4, vi. 13. Weiss and others, strangely enough, maintain that βρώσις has here its proper meaning “an eating”. The pronouns are emphatic: I am refreshed by nourishment hidden from you. The proof of which they at once gave by asking one another Μήτις ἦνεγκεν αὐτῷ φαγεῖν; “Surely no one can have brought Him anything to eat?” Winer, p. 642, adds “especially here in Samaria”. Perhaps evidence that Jesus had such an appearance as would not forbid any one offering Him food. But we must keep in view the easier manners of Oriental life.—Ver. 34. Jesus answers their question though not put to Him: Ἐμὸν βρώμα . . . τὸ ἔργον. Westcott thinks the telic use of ἵνα can be discerned here; “the exact form of the expression emphasises the end and not the process, not the doing and finishing, but that I may do and finish”. Lücke acknowledges that it is not always easy to distinguish between the construction of αὐτῆ or τοῦτο with ἵνα and with ὅτι, but that here it is possible to discriminate; and translates “Meine Speise besteht in dem Bestreben,” etc. It is much better to take it as the Greek commentators and Holtzmann and Weiss take it, as equivalent to τὸ ποιῆσαι. See especially 3 John 4. [“Sometimes, beyond doubt, ἵνα is used where the final element in the sense is very much weakened—sometimes where it is hard to deny that it has altogether vanished.” Simcox, Grammar, 177.] The idea that mental or spiritual excitement acts as a physical stimulant is common. Cf. Plato's λόγος ἐστίασις, Tim., 27 B; Thucydides, i. 70, represents the Corinthian ambassadors as saying of the Athenians μήτε ἐορτῆν ἄλλο τι ἠγεῖσθαι ἢ τὸ τὰ δέοντα πράξαι. — See also Soph., Electra, 363, and the quotations in Wetstein; also Browning's Fra Lippo Lippi, “to find its [the world's] meaning is my meat and drink”. Jesus does not say that His meat is to bring living water to parched souls, but “to do the will of Him that sent me, and to accomplish His work”. First, because throughout it is His aim to make Himself a transparency through which the Father may be seen; and second, because the will of God is the ultimate stability by fellowship with which all human charity and active compassion are continually renewed.—Ver. 35. οὐχ ὑμεῖς λέγετε, etc. These words may either mean “Are you not saying?” or “Do you not say?” that is, they may either refer to an expression just used by the disciples, or to a common proverb. If the former, then the disciples had probably been speaking of the dearness of the provisions they had bought, and congratulating themselves that harvest would lower them. Or sitting by the well and looking round, some of them

λευκαί εἰσι πρὸς θερισμὸν ἤδη. 36. Καὶ ὁ θερίζων μισθὸν λαμβάνει, καὶ συνάγει καρπὸν εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον· ἵνα καὶ ὁ σπείρων ὁμοῦ χαίρῃ καὶ ὁ θερίζων. 37. ἐν γὰρ τούτῳ ὁ λόγος ἐστὶν ὁ ἀληθινός, ὅτι ἄλλος ἐστὶν ὁ σπείρων, καὶ ἄλλος ὁ θερίζων. 38. ἐγὼ ἀπέστειλα ὑμᾶς θερίζειν καὶ οὐχ ὑμεῖς κεκοπιάκατε· ἄλλοι κεκοπιάκασι, καὶ ὑμεῖς εἰς τὸν κόπον αὐτῶν εἰσεληλύθατε.” 39. Ἐκ δὲ τῆς πόλεως ἐκείνης πολλοὶ ἐπίστευσαν εἰς αὐτὸν τῶν Σαμαρειτῶν, διὰ τὸν λόγον τῆς γυναικὸς μαρτυρούσης, “Ὅτι εἶπέ μοι πάντα ὅσα

Acts iii.
10. Col.
ii. 23.
Lk. x. 7.
1 Cor. ix.
18. 2 Tim
ii. 6.
i Mic. vi. 15.
ix. 35. 2
Chron. ix.
5. k ἐπί in Josh.
xxiv. 13.

may have casually remarked that they were four months from harvest. In this case the time of year would be determined. Harvest beginning in April, it would now be December. But the phrase οὐχ ὑμεῖς λέγετε is not the natural introduction to a reference to some present remark of the disciples; whereas it is the natural introduction to the citation of a proverb (Matt. xvi. 2). That it is a proverb is also favoured by the metrical form ἔτι τετραμήνῳ ἐστὶ καὶ ὁ θερισμὸς ἔρχεται. No trace of such a proverb has been found, but that some such saying should be current was inevitable, the waiting of the husbandman being typical of so much of human life. (Wetstein quotes from Ovid (Heroid., xvi. 263), “adhuc tua messis in herba est,” and many other parallels.) If this was a proverbial expression to give encouragement to the sower, we cannot infer from its use here that the time was December. Our Lord quotes it for the sake of the contrast between the ordinary relation of harvest to seed-time, and that which they can recognise by lifting their eyes.—ἐπάρατε τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς ὑμῶν. . . . Your harvest is already here. What the disciples see when they lift their eyes from their food is the crowd of Samaritans ripe for the kingdom and now approaching them. In Samaria a long time might have been expected to elapse between sowing and reaping; but no!—λευκαί εἰσι . . . the fields are already ripe for cutting. [λευκαί Wetstein illustrates from Ovid, “maturis albescit messis aristas”.]—Ver. 36. καὶ ὁ θερίζων . . . W.H. close ver. 35 with θερισμὸν and begin 36 ἤδη ὁ θερίζων. Already, and not after four months waiting, the harvester has his reward and gathers fruit to life eternal. The reaper has not to wait, but even now and in one and the same action finds his reward (cf. 1 Cor. ix. 17) and gathers the great product of this world which nourishes not merely through one winter till next year's crop is gathered but to life eternal.—ἵνα ὁ σπείρων ὁμοῦ χαίρῃ καὶ ὁ θερίζων, “that sower and reaper may rejoice at one and the same time”. Here among the Samaritans this extraordinary spectacle was seen, Jesus the Sower and the disciples the reapers working almost simultaneously. So quickly had the crop sprung that the reapers trod on the heels of the Sower.—Ver. 37. ἐν γὰρ τούτῳ. For in this, i.e., in the circumstances explained in the following verse, namely, that I have sent you to reap what others sowed, is the saying verified, “one soweth and another reapeth”.—ὁ λόγος, “the saying”; cf. 1 Tim. i. 15, iii. 1, etc.—ἀληθινός without the article is the predicate and scarcely expresses that the saying receives in the present circumstances its ideal fulfilment, rather that the saying is shown to be genuine; and the saying is ἄλλος ἐστὶν ὁ σπείρων καὶ ἄλλος ὁ θερίζων, various forms of which are given by Wetstein; as, ἄλλοι μὲν σπείρουσιν, ἄλλοι δ' αὐτὴν ἀμήσουσιν, “sic vos non vobis”; cf. Job xxxi. 8; Micah vi. 15; Deut. vi. 11. [“It was objected to Pompey that he came upon the victories of Lucullus and gathered those laurels which were due to the fortune and valour of another,” Plutarch.]—Ver. 38. The exemplification in our Lord's mind is given in ver. 38, where the pronouns ἐγὼ and ὑμᾶς are emphatic. “I sent you to reap.” When? Holtzmann thinks the past tenses can only be explained as spoken by the glorified Lord looking back on His call of the twelve as Apostles. That is, the words were not spoken as John relates. But may not the reference be to the baptising of many by the disciples in the preceding months? This would be quite a natural and obvious reference. The work in Judaea which justifies the preterites was now alluded to, because now again the same division of labour is apparent. The Samaritans come not because of anything the disciples had said while making purchases in the town, but because of their Master's

- 11 k. v. 3. ἐποίησα." 40. Ὡς οὖν ἦλθον πρὸς αὐτὸν οἱ Σαμαρεῖται, ἡρώτων
 m i. 40. αὐτὸν <sup>m</sup> μείναι παρ' αὐτοῖς· καὶ <sup>n</sup> ἔμεινεν ἐκεῖ δύο ἡμέρας. 41. καὶ n i Mac. xi. πολλῶ πλείους ἐπίστευσαν διὰ τὸν λόγον αὐτοῦ, 42. τῇ τε γυναικὶ 40. ἔλεγον, "Ὅτι οὐκέτι διὰ τὴν σὴν λαλίαν πιστεύομεν· αὐτοὶ γὰρ ἀκηκόαμεν, καὶ οἶδαμεν ὅτι οὗτός ἐστιν ἀληθῶς ὁ σωτὴρ τοῦ κόσμου, ὁ Χριστός."<sup>1</sup>
 o Mk. i. 14. 43. Μετὰ δὲ τὰς δύο ἡμέρας ἐξῆλθεν ἐκεῖθεν, καὶ <sup>o</sup> ἀπῆλθεν <sup>2</sup> εἰς
 Mt. iv. 12. τὴν Γαλιλαίαν. 44. αὐτὸς γὰρ ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐμαρτύρησεν, ὅτι προφήτης

<sup>1</sup> ο Χριστος omitted in  $\aleph$ BC vulg. and Memph.; found in AC<sup>2</sup>DL.

<sup>2</sup> Omit καὶ ἀπῆλθεν with  $\aleph$ BCD, T., Ti., W.H.

talk with the woman.—Vv. 39-42 briefly sum up the results of the Lord's visit.—Ver. 39. Out of Sychar many of the Samaritans believed on Him. This faith was the result of the woman's testimony, διὰ τὸν λόγον τῆς γυναϊκὸς μαρτυροῦσῆς; her testimony being, εἰπέ μοι πάντα ὅσα ἐποίησα.—Ver. 40. Their faith showed itself in an invitation to Him to remain with them; in compliance with which invitation, impressive as coming from Samaritans, He remained two days.—Ver. 41. The result was that πολλῶ πλείους, a far larger number than had believed owing to the woman's report now believed διὰ τὸν λόγον αὐτοῦ, on account of what they heard from Jesus Himself. This is a faith approved by John, because based not on miracles but on the word of Christ.—οὐκέτι . . . καὶ οἶδαμεν. No longer do we believe on account of your talk [λαλίαν, not λόγον], for we ourselves have heard and know. This could only be said by those who went out first from the city, not by those many more who afterwards believed. They felt that their faith was now firmer and stronger, more worthy to be called faith. This mature belief expressed itself in the confession οὗτός ἐστιν ἀληθῶς ὁ σωτὴρ τοῦ κόσμου ὁ Χριστός. The title "Saviour of the World" was of course prompted by the teaching of Jesus Himself during His two days' residence. To suppose, with several interpreters, that it is put into the mouth of the Samaritans by the evangelist is to suppose that during these two days Jesus did not disclose to them that He was the Saviour of the World. ["It probably belongs not to the Samaritans but to the evangelist. At the same time it is possible that such an epithet might be employed by them merely as synonymous with 'Messiah'" —Sanday.]

Doubt has been cast on the historicity of this narrative by Baur, who thinks the woman is a type of susceptible heathendom; and by Strauss, who thinks it was invented for the purpose of showing that Jesus personally taught not only in Galilee, Judaea, and Perea, but also in Samaria. "How natural the tendency to perfect the agency of Jesus, by representing Him to have sown the heavenly seed in Samaria, thus extending His Ministry through all parts of Palestine; to limit the glory of the apostles and other teachers to that of being the mere reapers of the harvest in Samaria; and to put this distinction, on a suitable occasion, into the mouth of Jesus!" Holtzmann's idea of this section of the Gospel is similar. The fictitious character of the narrative seems to be mainly based on its great significance for the life of Christ. As if the actual events of His life were not significant. Stress too is laid on the circumstance that among simple peoples all striking incidents, conversations, recognitions, take place at wells. In other words, wells are common meeting-places, therefore this meeting at a well cannot have taken place.

Vv. 43-54. Jesus passes into Galilee and there heals the son of a nobleman.—Ver. 43. Μετὰ δὲ τὰς δύο ἡμέρας. "And after the two days," see ver. 40.—ἐξῆλθεν ἐκεῖθεν, "He departed thence," i.e., from Sychar.—εἰς τὴν Γαλιλαίαν, "into Galilee," carrying out the intention which had brought Him to Sychar, iv. 3.—Ver. 44. The reason for His proceeding to Galilee is given in ver. 44.—αὐτὸς γὰρ ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐμαρτύρησεν, "for Jesus Himself testified". The evangelist would not have presumed to apply to Jesus the proverbial expression, προφήτης . . . οὐκ ἔχει, but Jesus Himself used it. The saying embodies a common observation. Montaigne complained that ἐν τῇ ἰδίᾳ πατρίδι τιμὴν οὐκ ἔχει. 45. Ὅτε οὖν ἦλθεν εἰς τὴν Ρ. Lk. iv. 24. Γαλιλαίαν, ἔδεξαντο αὐτὸν οἱ Γαλιλαῖοι, πάντα ἑωρακότες ἃ ἐποίησεν ἐν Ἱεροσολύμοις ἐν τῇ ἑορτῇ· καὶ αὐτοὶ γὰρ ἦλθον εἰς τὴν ἑορτήν.

46. Ἦλθεν οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἄλλοτε εἰς τὴν Κανᾶ τῆς Γαλιλαίας, ὅπου ῥ. ii. 1. ἐποίησε τὸ ὕδωρ οἶνον. καὶ ἦν τις βασιλικὸς, οὗ ὁ υἱὸς ἠσθένει ἐν <sup>s Here only</sup> <sub>as subst.</sub> in his own country he had to purchase publishers: while elsewhere publishers purchased him. The difficulty lies in the present application of the saying. If Galilee was His "fatherland," how can He use this proverb as a reason for His going there? To escape the difficulty Cyril, followed by Calvin, Grotius, and many more, says Nazareth was His πατρίς, and here [ἀναγκαίαν ποιεῖται τὴν ἀπολογία τῆς παραδρομῆς] he assigns the reason for His passing by Nazareth. πατρίς can be used of a town as in Philo's Leg. ad Caium, Agrippa says ἔστι δέ μοι Ἱεροσόλυμα πατρίς (Κυρκε). See also Achilles Tat., 22; Lk. iv. 23. But the objection is that Lk. tells us He did go to Nazareth. Origen says Judaea was the πατρίς τῶν προφητῶν; and Lücke, Westcott, Reith, and others believe that Judaea is here meant; and that Jesus, by citing the proverb, gives the reason for His rejection in Jerusalem. But this is out of place, as He had long since left Jerusalem. Meyer thinks the meaning is that Jesus left Galilee in order to substantiate His Messianic claim in Jerusalem, and this having been accomplished, He returns with His credentials to His own country. This agrees with ver. 45, "having seen the miracles which He had done in Jerusalem". Weiss interprets the words as meaning that Jesus leaves Samaria, where honour had come unbidden, in order to evoke faith and honour where as yet He had none: thus continuing the hard work of sowing and leaving to the disciples the glad harvesting. This is ingenious; but the obvious interpretation is that which finds in the statement (vv. 43, 44) a resumption of the narrative of vv. 1-3, which had been interrupted by the account of the Lord's experience in Samaria. That narrative had assigned as the reason for our Lord's leaving Judaea and making for Galilee, His own over-popularity, which threatened a collision with the Pharisees. To avoid this He goes to Galilee, where, as He Himself said, there was little risk of His being too highly honoured.—Ver. 45. Neither is οὖν of ver. 45 inconsistent with this interpretation. It merely continues the narration: "when, then, He came into Galilee". The immediate result of His coming was not what He anticipated, and therefore ἔδεξαντο is thrust into the emphatic place, "a welcome was accorded to Him by the Galileans". And this unexpected result is accounted for by the fact stated, πάντα ἑωρακότες . . . εἰς τὴν ἑορτήν; they had been at the Passover at Jerusalem, and had seen all He had done there. "They received Him . . . on account of His fame in Jerusalem, the metropolis, which set them the fashion in their estimate of men and things" (Alford). According to John's usual method of distinguishing various kinds of faith, this note is inserted to warn the reader that the reception was after all not deeply grounded, and to prepare for the statement of ver. 48. [ἦλθον, and even ἐποίησεν, may be rendered by pluperfects.]—Ver. 46. ἦλθεν οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς. May we conclude from the circumstance that no mention is made of the disciples until vi. 3, "that they had remained in Samaria, and had gone home"? πάλιν ἐλθεῖν means "to return"; here with a reference to ii. 1. The further definition of Κανᾶ, ὅπου ἐποίησε τὸ ὕδωρ οἶνον, is to identify the place, to prepare for ver. 54, and to remind us He had friends there. Weiss and Holtzmann suppose the family of Jesus was now resident at Cana. That we have no reason to suppose. From the period of the ministry in Galilee now beginning, the Synoptists give many details: John gives but one. ἦν τις βασιλικὸς. Euthymius gives the meanings of βασιλικὸς thus: βασιλικὸς ἐλέγετο, ἢ ὡς ἐκ γένους βασιλικοῦ, ἢ ὡς ἀξίωμα τι κεκτημένος, ἀφ' οὐπερ ἐκαλεῖτο βασιλικὸς, ἢ ὡς ὑπέρτης βασιλικὸς. Kypke gives examples of its use by writers of the period to denote soldiers or servants of a king, or persons of royal blood, or of rank and dignity, and thinks it here means "vir nobilis, clarus, in dignitate quadam constitutus". Lampe thinks it may imply that this man was both in the royal service and of royal blood. Lightfoot suggests that this may

Καπερναούμ. 47. οὗτος ἀκούσας ὅτι Ἰησοῦς ἦκει ἐκ τῆς Ἰουδαίας εἰς τὴν Γαλιλαίαν, ἀπῆλθε πρὸς αὐτὸν, καὶ ἠρώτα αὐτὸν ἵνα καταβῆ
 12 Mac. vii. καὶ ἰάσῃται αὐτοῦ τὸν υἱόν. ἤμελλε γὰρ ἀποθνήσκειν. 48. εἶπεν 18.
 19 vi. 30. 1 οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς πρὸς αὐτὸν, “Ἐὰν μὴ σημεῖα καὶ τέρατα ἴδῃτε, οὐ
 Cor. i. 22. μὴ πιστεύσητε.” 49. λέγει πρὸς αὐτὸν ὁ βασιλικὸς, “Κύριε, κατάβηθι πρὶν ἀποθανεῖν τὸ παιδίον μου.” 50. λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Πορεύου· ὁ υἱός σου ζῆ.” Καὶ ἐπίστευσεν ὁ ἄνθρωπος τῷ λόγῳ ᾧ εἶπεν αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ ἐπορεύετο. 51. ἦδη δὲ αὐτοῦ v With acc. καταβαίνοντος, οἱ δούλοι αὐτοῦ ἀπήντησαν<sup>1</sup> αὐτῷ, καὶ ἀπήγγειλαν here and
 Acts xxiii. λέγοντες, “Ὅτι ὁ παῖς σου ζῆ.” 52. Ἐπύθετο οὖν παρ’ αὐτῶν
 20 only. τὴν ὥραν ἐν ἣ κομψότερον ἔσχε· καὶ εἶπον αὐτῷ, “Ὅτι χθὲς ὤραν

<sup>1</sup> ἀπήντησαν (always used in John, xi. 20, 30; xii. 18) found in  $\aleph$ BCDKL.

have been Chuza, Herod's chamberlain. Most probably he was an officer of Herod's court, civil or military. His prominent characteristic at this time is given in the words, οὐ ὁ υἱὸς ἠσθένει ἐν Καπερναούμ. The place is named because essential to the understanding of what follows.—Ver. 47. Having heard ὅτι Ἰησοῦς ἦκει, “that Jesus has come into Galilee,” he traces Him to Kana, and begs Him not simply to heal his son, but pointedly ἵνα καταβῆ, to go to Capernaum for the purpose. He considered the presence of Jesus to be necessary [“non putat verbo curare posse,” Melancthon] (contrast the centurion of Matt. viii.); and, being a person of standing, did not scruple to trouble Jesus. Jesus neither refuses nor grants the request at once, but utters the reflection: Ver. 48. ἐὰν μὴ σημεῖα . . . πιστεύσητε. Not as a prophet uttering truth, but as a miracle worker He is sought in His own country: Samaria had received Him without miracle, as a Prophet. To seek for a sign, says Melancthon, “est velle certificari alio modo quam per verbum”. τέρατα here only in John, though frequent in Acts. Faith rooted in “marvels” Jesus put in an inferior place. But the father in his urgent anxiety can only repeat his request (ver. 49) κατάβηθι πρὶν ἀποθανεῖν τὸ παιδίον μου. “Duplex imbecillitas rogantis, quasi Dominus necesse haberet adesse, nec posset aequè resuscitare mortuum” (Bengel). But Jesus, unable to prolong his misery, says πορεύου· ὁ υἱός σου ζῆ. He did not go with him. His cures are independent of material media and even of His presence.—Ver. 50. And now the man believed τῷ λόγῳ ᾧ [or ὃν] εἶπεν αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς. His first immature faith has grown into something better. The evident sincerity of Jesus quickens a higher faith. On Christ's word he departs home, believing he will find his son healed.—Ver. 51. And while already on his way down [ἦδη showing that he did not remain with Christ until from some other source he heard that his son was healed], his servants met him and gave him the reward of his faith.—ὁ παῖς σου ζῆ, an echo, as Weiss remarks, of the words of Jesus, ver. 50. The servants seeing the improvement in the boy and not ascribing it to miracle, set out to save their master from bringing Jesus to Capernaum.—Ver. 52. ἐπύθετο οὖν . . . κομψότερον ἔσχε. “Amoenum verbum, de convalescente, puero praeertim”—Bengel. Theophylact explains by ἐπὶ τὸ βέλτιον καὶ εὐρωστώτερον μετήλθεν ὁ παῖς: Euthymius by τὸ ῥαβότερον, τὸ κουφότερον, as we speak of a sick person being “easier,” “lighter”. The best illustration is Raphael's from Epictetus (Diss., 3, 10), who bids a patient not be too much uplifted if the physician says to him κομψῶς ἔχεις, you are doing well. The servants name the seventh hour, i. e., 1 p. m. of the previous day, as the time when the fever left him. [Accus. of time when, rare; Winer explains as if it meant the approximate time with a περί or ὥσει understood; Acts x. 3; Rev. iii. 3.] And this the father recognised as the time at which Jesus had said “Thy son liveth”. The distance between Cana and Capernaum is about twenty-five miles, so that it would appear as if the father had needlessly delayed on the road. But he may have had business for Herod or for himself on the road, or the beast he rode may have been unequal to the double ἐβδόμην ἀφήκεν αὐτὸν ὁ πυρετός.” 53. Ἔγνω οὖν ὁ πατήρ, ὅτι ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ὥρᾳ, ἐν ἣ εἶπεν αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Ὅτι ὁ υἱός σου ζῆ.” Καὶ ἐπίστευσεν αὐτὸς καὶ ἡ οἰκία αὐτοῦ ὅλη. 54. Ἐτοῦτο πάλιν w ii. 1-12 δεύτερον σημεῖον ἐποίησεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, ἐλθὼν ἐκ τῆς Ἰουδαίας εἰς τὴν Γαλιλαίαν.

V. 1. ΜΕΤΑ ταῦτα ἦν ἑορτὴ<sup>1</sup> τῶν Ἰουδαίων, καὶ ἀνέβη ὁ Ἰησοῦς

<sup>1</sup> ἡ εορτη Σ CEFHL Memph. Theb. Cyr.-Alex. Tisch. εορτη without article ABDGK Orig. Chrys. Tr.W.H.R.

journey. At any rate it seems illegitimate to say with Weiss that “yesterday” means before sundown; or to ascribe the father’s delay to the confidence he had in Jesus’ word. The discovery of the coincidence in point of time produces a higher degree of faith, ἐπίστευσεν αὐτὸς καὶ ἡ οἰκία αὐτοῦ ὅλη. The cure brings into prominence this distinctive peculiarity of a miracle that it consists of a marvel which is coincident with an express announcement of it.—Ver. 54. τοῦτο πάλιν . . . τὴν Γαλιλαίαν. πάλιν δεύτερον a common pleonasm, “again a second”; cf. xxi. 16. In Mt. xxvi. 42, πάλιν ἐκ δευτέρου; and Acts x. 15. By this note John connects this miracle with that at the wedding, ii. 1-10, of which he said (ii. 11) ταύτην ἐποίησε ἀρχὴν τῶν σημείων ὁ Ἰησοῦς. It does not mean that this was the second miracle after this return to Galilee, although the words might bear that interpretation. Why this note? Bengel thinks that attention is called to the fact that John relates three miracles wrought in Galilee and three in Judaea. Alford supposes that John wishes to note that as the former miracle had called forth the faith of the disciples, so this elicited faith from a wider circle.

Not only Strauss, Baur, and Keim but also Weiss and Sanday suppose that this is the same healing as is recorded in Mt. viii. 5-13. But the differences are too great. In the one it is a Gentile centurion whose servant is paralysed; in the other it is the son of a (probably Jewish) court official who is at the point of death from fever. In the one the centurion insists that Jesus shall not come under his roof; in the other the supplicant beseeches Him to do so. The half-faith of the father is blamed; the extraordinary faith of the centurion is lauded.

Chapters v.-xi. depict the growth of the unbelief of the Jews. In this part of the Gospel three Judæan miracles and one in Galilee are related in full, and the impulse given by each to the hatred of the Jews is pointed out. These miracles are the healing of the impotent man (chap. v.), the miraculous feeding (chap. vi.), the cure of the man born blind (chap. ix.), and the raising of Lazarus (chap. xi.). This section of the Gospel may be divided thus:—

1. Chaps. v. and vi., Christ manifests Himself as the Life first in Judæa, then in Galilee, but is rejected in both places.

2. Chaps. vii. to x. 21, He attends the Feast of Tabernacles and manifests Himself by word and deed but is threatened both by the mob and by the authorities.

3. Chaps. x. 22 to xi., Jesus withdraws from Jerusalem but returns to raise Lazarus, in consequence of which the authorities finally determine to slay Him.

CHAPTER V. Jesus in Jerusalem manifests Himself as the Life by communicating strength to an impotent man.

—Ver. 1. μετὰ ταῦτα, “after this”; how long after does not concern the narrative.—ἦν ἑορτὴ τῶν Ἰουδαίων. See critical note. Even if the article were the true reading, this would not, as Lücke has shown, determine the feast to be the Passover. Rather it would be Tabernacles, see W.H. ii. 76. We are thrown upon general considerations; and that these yield a very uncertain result is shown by the variety of opinion expressed by commentators. The feasts we have to choose from are: Purim in March, Passover in April, Pentecost in May, Tabernacles in October, Dedication in December. It is chiefly between Purim and Passover that opinion is divided, because some feast in spring is supposed to be indicated by iv. 35. Against Passover it is urged that in chap. vi. another Passover is mentioned; but this is by no means decisive, as John elsewhere passes over equally long intervals of time. Lampe, Lightfoot, Grotius, Whitelaw, and Wordsworth argue for Passover; Tischendorf, Meyer,

1. Neh. iii. 1. εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα. 2. Ἔστι δὲ ἐν τοῖς Ἱεροσολύμοις ἐπὶ τῇ Ἀπροβατικῇ κολυμβήθρα, ἣ ἐπιλεγομένη Ἑβραϊστὶ Βηθεσδᾶ,<sup>1</sup> πέντε
 1. Mk i 35. Acts ix. 35. στοὰς ἔχουσα. 3. ἐν ταύταις<sup>2</sup> κατέκειτο πλήθος πολλὸ τῶν ἀσθε-
 4. ἄγγελος γὰρ κατὰ καιρὸν κατέβαινεν ἐν τῇ κολυμβήθρα, καὶ ἑτάρασσε τὸ ὕδωρ· ὁ οὖν πρῶτος ἐμβὰς μετὰ τὴν ταραχὴν τοῦ ὕδατος, ὑγίης ἐγένετο, ᾧ δὴποτε κατείχετο νοσήματι.<sup>3</sup> 5. Ἦν δέ c iii. 1. d viii. 57; xi. 17. οἷς ἄνθρωπος ἐκεῖ τριακονταοκτῶ ἔτη<sup>4</sup> ἔχων ἐν τῇ ἀσθενείᾳ.
 6. τοῦτον ἰδὼν ὁ Ἰησοῦς κατακείμενον, καὶ γνοὺς ὅτι πολὺν ἤδη

<sup>1</sup> Βηθεσδα ACI Syr. Cur. Pesh. Orig. Chrys. Βηθζαθα (or Βηζαθα) NL 33. Βηθσαδα B vulg. Memph. Theb. Syr. Harcl.

<sup>2</sup> ἐκδεχομένων τὴν τοῦ ὕδατος κινήσιν in A<sup>2</sup>C<sup>2</sup>DI vet. Lat. codd. plur. syrr. (Pesh. Harcl. Hier.); omitted from NA<sup>2</sup>BC<sup>2</sup>L and by recent editors.

<sup>3</sup> Ver. 4 found in AC<sup>3</sup>EFGHKL vet. Lat., etc., but omitted from NBC<sup>2</sup>D vulg. Memph. Theb. Arm. and by recent editors. But Oscar Holtzmann pronounces it necessary for the understanding of the narrative; and it is quite in keeping with the Jewish conception of the ministry of angels.

Godet, Farrar, Weiss, and others strongly favour Purim; while Lücke seems to prove that no sure conclusion can be reached. [For a full and fair presentation of opinions and data see Andrew's Life of our Lord, p. 189 sqq.] The feast, whatever it was, is mentioned here to account for Jesus being again in Jerusalem.—Ver. 2. ἔστι δὲ ἐν τοῖς Ἱεροσολύμοις. From the use of the present tense Bengel concludes that this was written before the destruction of Jerusalem [“Scripsit Johannes ante vastationem urbis”]. But quite probably John considered the pool one of the permanent features of the city. Its position is more precisely defined in the words ἐπὶ τῇ προβατικῇ, rendered in A.V. “by the sheep market” and in R.V. “by the sheep gate”. Others read κολυμβήθρα, and render “by the sheep-pool a pool”; Weiss, adopting this reading, supplies οἰκία or some such word: “there is by the sheep-pool a building”. But this does some violence to the sentence; and as the “sheep gate” is mentioned in Neh. iii. 32, xiii. 39, the reading, construction, and rendering of R.V. are to be preferred.—ἣ ἐπιλεγομένη Ἑβραϊστὶ Βηθεσδᾶ. The pool has recently been identified. M. Clermont Ganneau pointed out that its site should not be far from the church of St. Anne, and in 1888 Herr Shick found in that locality two sister pools, one fifty-five and the other sixty feet long. The former was arched in by five arches, while five corresponding porches ran alongside the pool. By the crusaders a church had been built over this pool, with a crypt framed in imitation of the five porches and with an opening in the floor to get down to the water. That they regarded this pool as that mentioned here is shown by their having represented on the wall of the crypt the angel troubling the water. [Herr Shick's papers are contained in the Palestine Quarterly, 1888, pp. 115-134, and 1890, p. 19. See also St. Clair's Buried Cities, Henderson's Palestine, p. 180.] The pool had five porches. Bovet describes the bath of Ibrahim near Tiberias: “The hail in which the spring is found is surrounded by several porticoes in which we see a multitude of people crowded one upon another, laid on couches or rolled in blankets, with lamentable expressions of misery and suffering”. Here lay πλήθος τῶν ἀσθενούντων, and these were of three kinds, τυφλῶν, χωλῶν, ξηρῶν.—Ver. 3. ἐκδεχομένων . . . νοσήματι. See critical note.—Ver. 5. ἦν δέ τις ἄνθρωπος . . . ἀσθενείᾳ. “And there was a certain man there who had spent thirty-eight years in his infirmity:” ἔτη ἔχων, cf. v. 6 and viii. 57; and Achil. Tat., 24. How long he had lain by the water is not said. To find in the man's thirty-eight years' imbecility a symbol of Israel's thirty-eight years in the wilderness is itself an imbecility.—Ver. 6. Jesus when He saw the man lying and had ascertained (γνοὺς, having learned from the man or his friends) that already he had passed a long time (in that infirmity) says: θέλεις ὑγίης γενέσθαι; “Do you wish to become whole χρόνον ἔχει, λέγει αὐτῷ, “Θέλεις ὑγιῆς γενέσθαι;” 7. ἀπεκρίθη αὐτῷ ὁ ἀσθενῶν, “Κύριε, ἀνθρώπου οὐκ ἔχω, ἵνα ὅταν ὁ παραχθῆ τὸ ἐκ Ezech. xxxii. 2. ὕδωρ, βάλλῃ με εἰς τὴν κολυμβήθραν· ἐν ᾧ δὲ ἔρχομαι ἐγὼ, ἄλλος f Mk. ii. 19. πρὸ ἐμοῦ καταβαίνει.” 8. λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Ἔγειραι,<sup>1</sup> ἄρον g Mk. ii. 11 τὸν ἡ κράββατόν σου, καὶ περιπάτει.” 9. Καὶ εὐθέως ἐγένετο ὑγιῆς h Mk. ii. 4. ὁ ἀνθρώπος, καὶ ἦρε τὸν κράββατον αὐτοῦ, καὶ περιπάτει. ἦν i Mk. iii. 1. δὲ σάββατον ἔν ἐκεῖνῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ. 10. Ἐλεγον οὖν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι j Josh. vi. 26. τῷ τεθεραπευμένῳ, “Σάββατόν ἐστιν· οὐκ ἐξεστὶ σοι ἄραι τὸν κράββατον.” 11. Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτοῖς, “Ὁ κ ποιήσας με κ ὑγιῆ, k ver. 15; ἐκεῖνός μοι εἶπεν, Ἄρον τὸν κράββατόν σου, καὶ περιπάτει.” vii. 13. 12. Ἠρώτησαν οὖν αὐτόν, “Τίς ἐστιν ὁ ἀνθρώπος ὁ εἰπὼν σοι, Ἄρον τὸν κράββατόν σου, καὶ περιπάτει;” 13. Ὁ δὲ ἰαθεὶς οὐκ l i. 40. ἦδει τίς ἔστιν· ὁ γὰρ Ἰησοῦς m ἐξένευσε, ὄχλου ὄντος ἐν τῷ τόπῳ. m viii. 59. 2 Kings ii 24.

<sup>1</sup> εγειρε as in ABCD; restored by modern editors in all places of its occurrence. Intrans. in Eph. v. 14, etc.; vide Thayer, cp. ver. 21.

(healthy)?” This question was put to attract the man’s attention and awaken hope. But the man is hopeless: it is not a question of will, he says, but of opportunity. His very weakness enabled others to anticipate him; ἐν ᾧ ἔρχομαι ἐγὼ, “while I am coming,” he could, then, move a little, but not quickly enough. At each bubbling up of the water, apparently only one could be healed. The ἄλλος πρὸ ἐμοῦ καταβαίνει was a great aggravation of his case.—Ver. 8. The impotent man having declared his helplessness, Jesus says to him, “Ἔγειρε, a command to be obeyed on the moment by faith in Him who gave it. Cf. vi. 63, and Augustine’s “Da quod jubes, et jube quod vis”. ἄρον τὸν κράββατόν σου, “take up your pallet”. κράββατος is the Latin grabatus, and is late Greek; see Rutherford’s New Phryn., 137; and McLellan’s Greek Test., p. 106, for references and anecdote. He was commanded to take up his bed that he might recognise that the cure was permanent. No doubt many of the cures at the pool were merely temporary. περιπάτει “walk,” ability was given not merely to rise, but to walk. The cures wrought by Christ are perfect, and do not only give some relief.—Ver. 9. καὶ εὐθέως . . . Immediately on Christ’s word he became strong, and took up his bed and walked; ἦρε aorist of one act, περιπάτει imperfect of continued action. Ver. 10 should begin with the words ἦν δὲ σάββατον, as this is the starting-point for what follows.—Ver. 10. “It was a Sabbath on that day,” the Jews therefore said to him that had been healed, Σάββατόν ἐστιν, “It is Sabbath”. οὐκ ἐξεστὶ σοι ἄραι τὸν κράββατον. The law is laid down in Exod. xxiii. 12; Jer. xvii. 21. “Take heed to yourselves and bear no burden on the Sabbath day;” cf. Neh. xiii. 15. The rabbinical law ran: “Whosoever on the Sabbath bringeth anything in, or taketh anything out from a public place to a private one, if he hath done this inadvertently, he shall sacrifice for his sin; but if wilfully, he shall be cut off and shall be stoned” (Lightfoot in loc.).—Ver. 11. The man’s reply reveals a higher law than that of the Sabbath, the fundamental principle of all Christian obedience: Ὁ ποιήσας . . . περιπάτει. He that gives life is the proper authority for its use.—Ver. 12. As the healed man transferred the blame to another, ἠρώτησαν . . . περιπάτει. “Who is the man,” rather, “the fellow?” ὁ ἀνθρώπος used contemptuously. As Grotius says: “Quaerunt non quod mirentur, sed quod calumnietur”.—Ver. 13. But the man could give them no information. He did not know the name of his healer. ὁ γὰρ Ἰησοῦς ἐξένευσε, “for Jesus had withdrawn” or “turned aside”. ἐκνεύω, from νεύω, to bend the head, rather than ἐκνέω, to swim out. Cf. Judges iv. 18 (where, however, Dr. Swete reads ἐκκλινον), xviii. 26. See also Thayer and Wetstein. The reason why Jesus took Himself away, and the explanation of His doing so without observation, are both given in ὄχλου ὄντος ἐν τῷ τόπῳ. He did not wish observation and it was easy to escape in the crowd.—Ver. 14.

14. Μετὰ ταῦτα εὕρισκε αὐτὸν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, "Ἴδε ὑγίης γέγονας· μηκέτι ἀμάρτανε, ἵνα μὴ χειρὸν τί σοι γένηται." 15. Ἀπῆλθεν ὁ ἄνθρωπος, καὶ ἀγγέγειλε τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις, ὅτι Ἰησοῦς ἔστιν ὁ ποιήσας αὐτὸν ὑγίῃ.

l i. 40.
k ver. 15;
vii. 13.

16. Καὶ διὰ τοῦτο ἐδίωκον τὸν Ἰησοῦν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, καὶ ἐζήτουν αὐτὸν ἀποκτείνειν,<sup>1</sup> ὅτι ταῦτα ἐποίει ἐν σαββάτῳ. 17. ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς n ii. 10.

o vii. 23; x.
35. Mt.
v. 19.

ἀπεκρίνατο αὐτοῖς, "Ὁ πατὴρ μου ἕως ἄρτι ἐργάζεται, καγὼ ἐργάζομαι." 18. Διὰ τοῦτο οὖν μᾶλλον ἐζήτουν αὐτὸν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι ἀποκτείνειν, ὅτι οὐ μόνον ὤλυνε τὸ σάββατον, ἀλλὰ καὶ πατέρα

<sup>1</sup> The clause καὶ . . . ἀποκτείνειν is found in A, but not in  $\aleph$ BCDL, and is supposed to have been derived from ver. 18. But μᾶλλον in ver. 18 is pointless unless this clause be read.

Though the healed man had failed to keep hold of Jesus, Jesus does not lose hold of him, but εὕρισκε αὐτὸν ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, "finds him," as if He had been looking out for him, cf. i. 44, 46, "in the temple," where he may have gone to give God thanks. Jesus says to him "Ἴδε ὑγίης γέγονας . . . γένηται. μηκέτι ἀμάρτανε, present imperative, "continue no longer in sin". χειρὸν. There is then some worse consequence of sin than thirty-eight years' misery and uselessness. Apparently Jesus feared that health of body might only lead the man to further sin. His physical weakness was seemingly the result of sin, cf. Mark ii. 5-10. Jesus is not satisfied with giving him physical health. Oscar Holtzmann observes that we have here the two leading Pauline ideas, that the Saviour frees from many O.T. precepts, and yet that His emancipation is a call to strive against sin (Johan., p. 60).—Ver. 15. ἀπῆλθεν ὁ ἄνθρωπος. "The man went off and reported to the Jews that the person who healed him was Jesus. He had asked His name, and perhaps did not consider that in proclaiming it he was endangering his benefactor.—Ver. 16. The consequence however was that "the Jews persecuted Jesus," ἐδίωκον, not in the technical sense; but, as the imperfect also suggests, they began from this point to meditate hostile action; cf. Mark iii. 6. καὶ ἐζήτουν αὐτὸν ἀποκτείνειν, on the ground that He was a Sabbath-breaker, and therefore worthy of death; ὅτι ταῦτα ἐποίει ἐν σαββάτῳ. The plural and the imperfect show that the cure of the impotent man was not the only case they had in view. Their allies in the provinces had made them acquainted with similar cases. It would almost seem as if He was in the habit of thus signalling the Sabbath.—Ver. 17. In some informal way these accusations were brought to the ears of Jesus, and His defence was: "Ὁ πατὴρ μου . . . ἐργάζομαι. "My Father until now works, and I work"; as if the work of the Father had not come to an end on the seventh day, but continued until the present hour. Nay, as if the characteristic of the Father were just this, that He works. Philo perceived the same truth; παύεται οὐδέποτε ποιῶν ὁ θεὸς ἀλλ' ὡσπερ ἴδιον τὸ καίειν πυρὸς καὶ χιόνος τὸ ψύχειν, οὕτω καὶ Θεοῦ τὸ ποιεῖν. God never stops working, for as it is the property of fire to burn and of snow to be cold so of God to work (De allegor., ii. See Schoettgen in loc.). Jesus means them to apprehend that there is no Sabbath, such as they suppose, with God, and that this healing of the impotent was God's work. The Father does not rest from doing good on the Sabbath day, and I as the Father's hand also do good on the Sabbath. In charging Him with breaking the Sabbath (ver. 18), it was God they charged with breaking it. But this exasperated them the more "because He not only was annulling (ἐλυνε, 'laws, as having binding force, are likened to bonds, hence λύνειν is to annul, subvert, deprive of authority,' Thayer) the Sabbath, but also said that God was His own Father, making Himself equal to God". The Jews found in ὁ πατὴρ μου (ver. 17) and the implication in καγὼ ἐργάζομαι a claim to some peculiar and exclusive (ἴδιον) sonship on the part of Jesus; that He claimed to be Son of God not in the sense in which other men are, but in a sense which involved equality with God. Starting from this, Jesus took occasion to unfold His relation to the Father so far as it concerned men to know it.

Ἰδιον ἔλεγε τὸν Θεόν, ἴσον ἑαυτὸν ποιῶν τῷ Θεῷ. 19. ἀπεκρίνατο Rom. viii 32. 1 Cor vii. 2.
 οὐν ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “ Ἀμήν ἀμήν λέγω ὑμῖν, οὐ δύναται ὁ υἱὸς ποιεῖν ἄφ’ ἑαυτοῦ οὐδέν, ἐὰν μὴ τι βλέπη τὸν πατέρα q viii. 28; ix 4; x. 18.
 ποιούντα· ἃ γὰρ ἂν ἐκεῖνος ποιῇ, ταῦτα καὶ ὁ υἱὸς ὁμοίως ποιεῖ.
 20. ὁ γὰρ πατὴρ φιλεῖ τὸν υἱόν, καὶ πάντα δείκνυσιν αὐτῷ ἃ αὐτὸς rx xv. 9.
 ποιεῖ· καὶ μείζονα τούτων δείξει αὐτῷ ἔργα, ἵνα ὑμεῖς θαυμάζητε. ■ xiv. 12.
 21. Ὅσπερ γὰρ ὁ πατὴρ ἐγείρει τοὺς νεκροὺς καὶ ζωοποιεῖ, t xi. 25.
 καὶ ὁ υἱὸς οὕς θέλει ζωοποιεῖ. 22. οὐδὲ γὰρ ὁ πατὴρ κρίνει u Mt. xi. 27; xxv. 31.

The passage 19-30 divides itself thus: vv. 19, 20 exhibit the ground of the Son's activity in the Father's activity and love for the Son; vv. 21-23, the works given by the Father to the Son are, generally, life-giving and judging; vv. 24-27, these works in the spiritual sphere; vv. 28-29, in the physical sphere; and ver. 30, reaffirmation of unity with the Father.—Ver. 19. The fundamental proposition is οὐ δύναται ὁ υἱὸς ποιεῖν ἄφ’ ἑαυτοῦ οὐδέν. “The Son can do nothing of Himself.” This is not, as sometimes has been supposed, a general statement true of all sons, but is spoken directly of Jesus. δύναται is moral not physical ability—though here the one implies the other; but cf. ver. 26. So perfect is the Son's sympathy with the Father that He can only do what He sees the Father doing. He does nothing at His own instance. That is to say, in healing the impotent man He felt sure He was doing what the Father wished done and gave Him power to do.—ἃ γὰρ . . . ποιεῖ, as Holtzmann observes, the force of the repetition lies in ὁμοίως, pariter, “in like manner”.—Ver. 20. And the Son is enabled to see what the Father does, because He loves the Son and shows Him all that He Himself does. The Father is not passive in the matter, merely allowing Jesus to discover what He can of the Father's will; but the Father δείκνυσιν, shows Him, inwardly and in response to His own readiness to perceive, not mechanically but spiritually, all that He does; πάντα apparently without limitation, for ποιεῖ is habitual present as φιλεῖ in previous clause, and cannot be restricted to the things God was then doing in the case of the impotent man. Besides, a merely human sonship scarcely satisfies the absolute ὁ πατὴρ and ὁ υἱὸς of this passage.—καὶ μείζονα . . . θαυμάζητε, the Father through the Son will do greater works than the healing of the impotent man; cf. xiv. 12; “that ye may marvel”;

this seems an inadequate motive, but ver. 23 explains it. In the following passage, spiritual quickening is meant in vv. 21-27, while in vv. 28, 29, it is the bodily resurrection that is in view.—Ver. 21. Ὅσπερ γὰρ . . . ζωοποιεῖ. This is one of the “greater works” which the Father shows to the Son. The Jews believed in the power of God to give life and to raise the dead; see Deut. xxxii. 39; 1 Sam. ii. 6; Is. xxvi 19. In our Lord's time there was in use the following prayer: “Thou, O Lord, art mighty for ever; Thou quickenest the dead; Thou art strong to save; Thou sustainest the living by Thy mercy; Thou quickenest the dead by Thy great compassion; Thou makest good Thy faithfulness to them that sleep in the dust; Thou art faithful to quicken the dead. Blessed art Thou, O Lord, who quickenest the dead.” There is therefore no need to ask, what quickening of the dead is here meant? What was meant was that the power which they all believed to be in God was likewise in the Son. He quickens οὕς θέλει, i. e., no matter how dead the person is; even though he has lain as long useless as the impotent man. The question of the human will is not touched here, but it may be remarked that the will of the impotent man was consulted as the prime requisite of the cure.—Ver. 22. But not only does the Son quicken whom He will, but He also judges; οὐδὲ γὰρ . . . υἱῷ. “For not even does the Father judge any one, but has given all judgment to the Son.” “For since He knows Himself to be the sole mediator of true life for men, He can also declare that all those who will not partake through Him of this blissful life, just therein experience judgment whereby they sink into death.” Wendt, ii. 211; and cf. ver. 27. οὐδὲ γὰρ introduces the fresh statement, that He judges, not only as the reason for what goes before, but on its own account also, as an additional fact to be noticed. It would seem an astonishing thing that οὐδένα, ἀλλὰ τὴν κρίσιν πᾶσαν δέδωκε τῷ υἱῷ. 23. ἵνα πάντες τιμῶσι τὸν υἱὸν, καθὼς τιμῶσι τὸν πατέρα. ὁ μὴ τιμῶν τὸν υἱὸν, οὐ τιμᾷ τὸν πατέρα τὸν πέμψαντα αὐτόν. 24. Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι ὁ τὸν λόγον μου ἀκούων, καὶ πιστεύων τῷ πέμψαντί με, ἔχει ζωὴν αἰώνιον· καὶ εἰς κρίσιν οὐκ ἔρχεται, ἀλλὰ ἔμεταβέβηκεν ἐκ τοῦ θανάτου εἰς τὴν ζωὴν. 25. Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι ἔρχεται ὥρα καὶ νῦν ἐστίν, ὅτε οἱ νεκροὶ ἀκούσονται<sup>1</sup> τῆς φωνῆς

v 1 Jo. iii.
14.

v iv. 23.

<sup>1</sup> ἀκούσονται in ADG; ἀκουσουσιν in B, adopted by T.Tr.W.H.R. So in ver. 28.

even "judgment," the allotting of men to their eternal destinies, should be handed over to the Son. But so it is: and without exception, τὴν κρίσιν πᾶσαν, "all judgment," of all men and without appeal.—Ver. 23. This extreme prerogative is given to the Son ἵνα πάντες τιμῶσι τὸν υἱὸν . . . This is one purpose, though not the sole purpose, of committing judgment to the Son; that even those supremely and inalienably Divine prerogatives of giving life and judging may be seen to be in Him, and that thus Deity may be honoured in and through Him. The great peril threatening the Jews was that they should deny honour to the Son, and hereby incur the guilt of refusing honour to the Father. In denouncing Him for breaking the Sabbath they were really dishonouring the Father. ὁ μὴ τιμῶν . . . αὐτόν. μὴ τιμῶν a supposed case, therefore μή: οὐ τιμᾷ actual negation. To dishonour the Father's messenger is to dishonour the Father. Having explained the relation of His work to the Father's, and having declared that life-giving and judging are His prerogatives, Jesus now, in vv. 24-30, more definitely shows how these powers are to be exercised in the spiritual regeneration, and in the resurrection and final judgment of men. Vv. 24-26. The voice of Jesus gives life eternal. ἀμὴν, ἀμὴν, however incredible what I now say may seem.—Ver. 24. ὁ τὸν λόγον μου ἀκούων; it was through His word Jesus conveyed life to the impotent man, because that brought Him into spiritual connection with the man. And it is through His claims, His teaching, His offers, He brings Himself into connection with all. It is a general truth not confined to the impotent man. But to hear is not enough: καὶ πιστεύων τῷ πέμψαντί με, belief on Him that sent Jesus must accompany hearing. Not simply belief on Jesus but on God. The word of Jesus must be recognised as a Divine message, a word with power to fulfil it. In this case, by the very hearing and believing, ἔχει ζωὴν αἰώνιον. As the impotent man had, in his believing, physical life, so whoever believes in Christ's word as God's message receives the life of God into his spirit. Faith has also a negative result; εἰς κρίσιν οὐκ ἔρχεται [cf. οὐκ ἐθελόντων ὑμῶν ἐλθεῖν εἰς κρίσιν, quoted from Demosthenes by Wetstein. Herodotus also uses the expression]. Literally this means "he does not come to trial"; but has it not the fuller meaning "come under condemnation"? Meyer says "yes": Godet says "no". Meyer is right. This clause is the direct negative of the former: to come to judgment is to come under condemnation, cf. iii. 19, αὕτη δὲ ἐστὶν ἡ κρίσις, etc. ἀλλὰ μεταβέβηκεν ἐκ τοῦ θανάτου εἰς τὴν ζωὴν. The perfect shows (1) that the previous ἔχει is an actual present, and does not merely mean "has in prospect" or "has a right to"; and (2) that the result of the transition continues. Had the impotent man not believed and obeyed, he would have remained in his living death, in now a self-chosen and self-fixed condemnation: but accepting the life that was in Christ's command, he passed there and then from death to life.—Ver. 25. Ἀμὴν . . . introducing a confirmation of the preceding statement, in the form of an announcement of one characteristic of the new dispensation; ἔρχεται ὥρα καὶ νῦν ἐστίν, cf. iv. 3. In this already arrived "hour" or epoch, the message of God is uttered by the voice of Jesus, τῆς φωνῆς τοῦ υἱοῦ τοῦ Θεοῦ and οἱ νεκροὶ, they who have not made the transition spoken of in the preceding verse, ἀκούσονται, shall hear it; καὶ οἱ ἀκούσαντες ζήσονται [or ζήσουσιν], not "and having heard shall live," nor "and when they hear shall live"; but "and those who have heard [or hear] shall live". The insertion of the article indicates that not all, but only a certain class of the νεκροὶ are meant: all the τοῦ υἱοῦ τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ οἱ ἀκούσαντες ζήσονται.<sup>1</sup> 26. ὡςπερ γὰρ ὁ x i. 12.

 πατὴρ ἔχει ζωὴν ἐν ἑαυτῷ, οὕτως ἔδωκε καὶ τῷ υἱῷ ζωὴν ἔχειν ἐν xvii. 2.
 ἑαυτῷ. 27. καὶ ἔξουσίαν ἔδωκεν αὐτῷ καὶ κρίσιν ποιεῖν, ὅτι υἱὸς y Gen. xviii 25.

<sup>1</sup> Modern editors read ζήσουσι with WBDL 1, 22, 33.

dead hear but not all give ear (Weiss). ἀκουσούσιν in the former clause means hearing with the outward ear, ἀκούσαντες hearing with faith. The question, how can the spiritually dead hear and believe? is the question, how could the impotent man rise in response to Christ's word? Perhaps psychologically inexplicable, it is, happily, soluble in practice.—Ver. 26. The 26th verse partly explains the apparent impossibility.—ὡςπερ γὰρ . . . ἔχειν ἐν ἑαυτῷ. "The particles mark the fact of the gift and not the degrees of it" (Westcott). As the Father has in Himself, and therefore at His own command, life which He can impart as He will: so by His gift the Son has in Himself life which He can communicate directly to whom He will.—ἐν ἑαυτῷ [similarly used Mk. iv. 17, John iv. 14, etc.] excludes dependence for life on any external to self. From this it follows that what is so possessed is possessed with uninterupted fullness, and can at will be imparted.—ἔδωκε, "the tense carries us back beyond time," says Westcott. This is more than doubtful; although several interpreters suppose the eternal generation of the Son is in view. That is precluded both by the word "gave" [which "denotat id quod non per naturalem generationem, sed per benevolam Patris voluntatem est concessum," Mt. xviii. 18 Lk. i. 32; John iii. 34, vi. 37, Lampe] and by the context, especially by the last clause of ver. 27. The opinions of the Fathers and Reformers are cited in Lampe. See further Stevens, Johan. Theol., p. 60.—Ver. 27. Not only has the Father given to the Son this great prerogative, but καὶ ἔξουσίαν . . . ἀνθρώπου ἐστὶ. κρίσιν ποιεῖν, like judicium facere, and our do judgment, is used by Demosthenes, Xenophon, Polybius, etc., in the sense "to judge," "to act as judge". This climax of authority [although καὶ is omitted before κρίσιν by recent editors on good authority] is based upon the fact ὅτι υἱὸς ἀνθρώπου ἐστὶ. [Strangely enough, Chrysostom ascribes this punctuation to Paul of Samosata, and declares it to be an inconsequence. He himself begins ver. 28 with this clause, and reads "marvel not at this, that He is the Son of Man."] The absence of the article condemns all interpretations which render these words "the Son of Man" and understands that Jesus claims the prerogative of judgment as the Messiah. Where "the Son of Man" means the Messiah the articles regularly appear. Besides, direct allusion to the Messianic functions would here be out of place. The words must be rendered "because He is a son of man," that is, a man. How is this a reason for His being Judge of men? Various explanations are given; the Judge must be visible since the judgment is to take place with human publicity (Luther, Maldonatus, Witsius), because as man the Son carries out the whole work of redemption (Meyer, etc.), because men should be judged by the lowliest and most loving of men (Stier), because the Judge must share the nature of those who are brought before Him (Westcott), because only as man could Jesus enter into the sphere in which the judicial office moves or have the compassion which a judge of men should possess (Baur), because the judgment of humanity is to be a homage rendered to the holiness of God, a true act of adoration, a worship; and therefore the act must go forth from the bosom of humanity itself (Godet). But undoubtedly Beyschlag is right when he says: "The eternal love condemns no one because he is a sinner; as such it does not at all condemn; it leaves it to men to judge themselves, through rejection of the Saviour who is presented to them. The Son of Man is the judge of the world, just because He presents the eternal life, the kingdom of heaven to all, and urges all to the eternal decision, and thus urges those who continue unbelieving to a continuing self-judgment" (Neutest. Theol., i. 290). By His appearing in human form as God's messenger, and by His offer of life eternal, He necessarily judges men. As His offer of life to the impotent man tested him and showed whether he would abide in death or pass into life: so are all men judged precisely by that appearance among them in human form which stumbles them and tempts them to think His claims absurd, and which yet as the em-z Acc. of

obj. in Lk.
vii. 9;
xxiv. 12.
Jude 16.
Acts vii.
31. Commonly with ε-ι.
a iii. 20.
b Dan. xii.
c ver. 19.
d vii. 18;
viii. 50.

ἀνθρώπου ἐστί. 28. μὴ <sup>a</sup>θαυμάζετε τοῦτο· ὅτι ἔρχεται ὦρα, ἐν ἧ πάντες οἱ ἐν τοῖς μνημείοις ἀκούσονται τῆς φωνῆς αὐτοῦ, 29. καὶ ἐκπορεύσονται, οἱ τὰ ἀγαθὰ ποιήσαντες, εἰς ἀνάστασιν ζωῆς· οἱ δὲ τὰ <sup>b</sup>φάλα πράξαντες, <sup>c</sup>εἰς ἀνάστασιν κρίσεως. 30. οὐ δύναμαι ἐγὼ ποιεῖν ὁ ἀπ' ἐμαυτοῦ οὐδέν. καθὼς ἀκούω, κρίνω· καὶ ἡ κρίσις ἡ ἐμὴ δίκαια ἐστίν· ὅτι οὐ <sup>d</sup>ζητῶ τὸ θέλημα τὸ ἐμὸν, ἀλλὰ τὸ θέλημα τοῦ πέμψαντός με πατρός.<sup>1</sup> 31. Ἐὰν ἐγὼ μαρτυρῶ περὶ

<sup>1</sup> Modern editors omit πατρος in accordance with  $\Sigma$ ABDK.

bodied love and life of God necessarily judges men. Therefore μὴ θαυμάζετε τοῦτο.—Ver. 28. And another reason for restraining surprise is ὅτι ἔρχεται ὦρα, etc. It has been proposed to render this as if ὅτι were explanatory of τοῦτο, do not wonder at this, that an hour is coming. But (1) τοῦτο usually, though not invariably, refers to what precedes; and (2) when John says "Do not wonder that" so and so, he uses μὴ θαυμάσης ὅτι without τοῦτο; and (3) the ordinary rendering suits the passage better; Marvel not at this [that my voice gives life] because a time is coming when there will result from my voice that which if not really greater will strike you more sensibly. The bodily resurrection may be said to be greater than the spiritual as its consummation, completion, and exhibition in results. Besides, the Jews of our Lord's time looked upon the resurrection as the grand demonstration of God's power. But here the οἱ ἐν τοῖς μνημείοις shows that the surprise is to be occasioned by the fact that even the physically dead shall hear.—πάντες . . . κρίσεως. That the resurrection is alluded to is shown by the change from οἱ νεκροί of ver. 25 to οἱ ἐν τοῖς μνημείοις. Some rise to life, some to κρίσιν, which from its opposition to ζωῆν must here be equivalent to κατακρίσιν. If it is asked with regard to the righteous, With what body do they come? much more may it be asked of the condemned. The entrance into life and into condemnation are determined by conduct; how the conduct is determined is not here stated. For the expressions defining the two types of conduct see on chap. iii. 20, 21. That the present reception of life is the assurance of resurrection is put strikingly by Paul in 2 Cor. v. 5. The fact that some shall rise to condemnation discloses that even those who have not the Spirit of God in them have some kind of continuous life which maintains them in existence with their personal identity intact from the time of death to the time of resurrection. Also, that the long period spent by some between these two points has not been utilised for bringing them into fellowship with Christ is apparent. In what state they rise or to what condition they go, we are not here told. Beyond the fact of their condemnation their future is left in darkness, and was therefore probably meant to be left in darkness.—Ver. 30. This judgment claimed by Jesus is, however, engaged in, not in any spirit of self-exaltation or human arbitrariness, nor can it err, because it is merely as the executor of the Father's will He judges.—οὐ δύναμαι . . . οὐδέν. The first statement of the verse is a return upon ver. 19, "The Son can do nothing of Himself"; but now it is specially applied to the work of judgment.—καθὼς ἀκούω κρίνω. As He said of His giving life, that He was merely the Agent of God, doing what He saw the Father do: so now He speaks what He hears from the Father. His judgment He knows to be just, because He is conscious that He has no personal bias, but seeks only to carry out the will of the Father. In vv. 31-40 Jesus substantiates these great claims which He has made in the foregoing verses. He refers to the μαρτυρία borne by John the Baptist, by the works given Him by the Father, and by the Father in Scripture.—Ver. 31. Ἐὰν ἐγὼ μαρτυρῶ . . . ἀληθῆς. Jesus anticipates the objection, that these great claims were made solely on His own authority [ἔγνων τοὺς Ἰουδαίους ἐνθυμωμένους ἀντιθεῖναι, Euthym.]. The Jewish law is given by Wetstein, "Testibus de se ipsis non credunt," or "Homo non est fide dignus de se ipso," and cf. Deut. xix. 15. The same law prevailed among the Greeks, μαρτυρεῖν γὰρ οἱ νόμοι οὐκ ἐῶσιν αὐτὸν εἶναι (Demosth., De Cor., 2), and among the Romans, "more majorum comparatum est, ut in minimis

i Constr. cp. ὦραν ἐν τῷ φωτὶ αὐτοῦ. 36. ἐγὼ δὲ ἔχω τὴν μαρτυρίαν μείζω τοῦ Mt. v. 20. Ἰωάννου· τὰ γὰρ ἔργα ἃ ἔδωκε<sup>1</sup> μοι ὁ πατήρ ἵνα τελειώσω αὐτὰ, αὐτὰ τὰ ἔργα ἃ ἐγὼ ποιῶ, μαρτυρεῖ περὶ ἐμοῦ ὅτι ὁ πατήρ με ἀπέσταλκε· 37. καὶ ὁ πέμψας με πατήρ, αὐτὸς<sup>2</sup> μεμαρτύρηκε περὶ ἐμοῦ. οὔτε φωνὴν αὐτοῦ ἀκηκόατε πώποτε, οὔτε<sup>1</sup> εἶδος αὐτοῦ ἑώρακατε. 38. καὶ τὸν λόγον αὐτοῦ οὐκ ἔχετε μένοντα ἐν ὑμῖν, i Ps. cxix. 2. ὅτι ὄν ἀπέστειλεν ἐκεῖνος, τούτω ὑμεῖς οὐ πιστεύετε. 39. <sup>k</sup>Ἐρευ- l Mt. iii. 9. νάτε<sup>3</sup> τὰς γραφὰς, ὅτι ὑμεῖς<sup>1</sup> δοκεῖτε ἐν αὐταῖς ζῶν αἰώνιον ἔχειν,

<sup>1</sup> δεδωκεν in NBL 1, 33.

<sup>2</sup> εκεινος in NBL. The difference here is slight.

<sup>3</sup> εραυατε in NB*; Tr. Ti. W. H.

could have shown them the way to salvation, ver. 34" (Weiss). Others find a reference to Ps. cxxii. 17, ἠτοιμάσα λύχρον τῷ Χριστῷ σου. Grotius and Lücke think the reference is to Ecclus. xlviii. 1, καὶ ἀνέστη Ἐλίας προφήτης ὡς πῦρ καὶ ὁ λόγος αὐτοῦ ὡς λαμπὰς ἐκαίετο. In the mediæval Latin Hymns the Baptist is "non Lux iste, sed lucerna". [Cicero, pro Milone, 21, and elsewhere, calls certain illustrious citizens "lumina," but with a somewhat different significance.]—ὁ καίόμενος, "burning and shining are not two different properties," Meyer; a lamp must burn if it is to shine.—ὑμεῖς δὲ ἠθελήσατε ἀγαλλιασθῆναι πρὸς ὦραν ἐν τῷ φωτὶ αὐτοῦ; the expression seems intended to suggest the thoughtless and brief play of insects in the sunshine or round a lamp. ["Wie die Mücken im Sonnenschein spielen," Hausrath in Holtzmann.] Like children following in a bridal procession, dancing in the torchlight: the type of sentimental religionists revelling in their own emotions.—Ver. 36. ἐγὼ δὲ 33, ἔχω τὴν μαρτυρίαν μείζω, "have the witness which is greater," i.e., of greater weight as evidence than that of John.—τὰ γὰρ ἔργα . . . ἀπέσταλκε, "the works which the Father ἔδωκε [or as modern editors read δέδωκεν] to Him" comprise all that He was commissioned to do, but with a more special reference to His miracles. Lücke well says, "He who looked at the miracles as separate and individual displays of supernatural power and did not view the entire manifestation of Christ in its solidarity, was bound to find the miracles without significance and the latter incomprehensible". The ἔργα are cited as evidence, chaps. x. 25, 38, and xiv. 11; evidence as here to the fact that the Father had sent Him.—Ver. 37. But over and above the evidence of the works καὶ ὁ πέμψας με πατήρ, αὐτὸς μεμαρτύρηκε, "And the Father who sent me has Himself also testified". Where and how this testimony of the Father's separate from the works has been given, is explained, vv. 38 and 40. But, first, Jesus states how it has no been given: οὔτε φωνὴν αὐτοῦ . . ἑώρακατε. It is not by coming into your midst in a visible form and speaking as I speak that the Father has testified. "His voice you have never heard; His form you have never seen." It is not by sensible sights and sounds the Father has given His testimony. [This interpretation is however ignored by most: by Meyer, who thinks the reference is to their insensibility to the revelation of God in Scripture; by Westcott, who says "the Jews by their disbelief of Christ failed to hear and see Him"; by Godet, who finds "a declaration of man's natural impotence to rise to the immediate and personal knowledge of God". Reference to the baptism is put out of the question by πώποτε. The reference to the two chief forms of prophetic revelation (Weiss) is too remote.]—Ver. 38. καὶ τὸν λόγον . . you have not heard His voice—as you have heard mine (ver. 25)—and His word which you have heard, and which has been coming to you through all these centuries, you do not admit to an abiding and influential place within you.—τὸν λόγον αὐτοῦ is God's revelation, which the Jews were conscious they had received; but though the word of God had come to them, they did not have it "abiding in" them; cf. 1 John iii. 15; a phrase which in John denotes permanent possession and abiding influence. God's message does no good until it inwardly possesses those to whom it comes. The proof that the Jews had not thus received it is: ὅτι ὄν ἀπέστειλεν . . . "whom God καὶ ἔκειναί εἰσιν αἱ μαρτυροῦσαι περὶ ἐμοῦ· 40. καὶ οὐ θέλετε ἐλθεῖν πρὸς με, ἵνα ζῶν ἔχητε. 41. Δόξαν παρὰ ἀνθρώπων οὐ λαμβάνω· 42. ἀλλ' ἔγνωκα ὑμᾶς, ὅτι ὁ τὴν ἀγάπην τοῦ Θεοῦ οὐκ ἔχετε ἐν ἑαυτοῖς. 43. ἐγὼ ἐλήλυθα ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι τοῦ πατρὸς μου, καὶ οὐ λαμβάνετε με· ἐὰν ἄλλος ἔλθῃ ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι τῷ ἰδίῳ, ἐκείνον λήψετε.<sup>1</sup> 44. πῶς δύνασθε ὑμεῖς πιστεῦσαι, δόξαν παρὰ ἀλλήλων λαμβάνοντες, καὶ τὴν δόξαν τὴν παρὰ τοῦ ἰσχυροῦ Θεοῦ οὐ ζητεῖτε; 45. μὴ δοκεῖτε ὅτι ἐγὼ κατηγορήσω ὑμῶν πρὸς τὸν πατέρα· ἔστιν ὁ κατηγορῶν ὑμῶν, Μωσῆς, εἰς ὃν ὑμεῖς ἠλπίκατε. 46. εἰ γὰρ ἐπιστεύετε Μωσῆ, ἐπιστεύετε ἂν ἐμοί· περὶ γὰρ ἐμοῦ ἐκείνος ἔγραψεν. 47. εἰ δὲ τοῖς ἐκείνου ἑγράμμασιν οὐ πιστεύετε, πῶς τοῖς ἐμοῖς ῥήμασι πιστεύετε;”

<sup>1</sup> ληψέσθε in  $\aleph$ ABDL, adopted in modern editions.

hath sent, Him ye believe not". Had the revelation or word of God in law and prophets possessed them, they would inevitably have recognised Jesus as from the same source, and as the consummation of the message, the fulfilment of the promise. Not that the Jews held their Scriptures in no esteem, no, (ver. 39), ἐρευνᾶτε τὰς γραφάς, the indicative is to be preferred, "Ye search the Scriptures"; the reason being ὅτι ὑμεῖς δοκεῖτε ἐν αὐταῖς ζῶν αἰώνιον ἔχειν, "because you suppose that in them you have life eternal"—already it is hinted, by the emphatic ὑμεῖς implicitly opposed to a contrasted ἐγώ, and by the emphatic ἐν αὐταῖς suggesting another source, that eternal life was not to be had in the Scriptures, but in something else. But it is of me these Scriptures themselves into which you search testify. καὶ ἐκεῖναί . . . ἐμοῦ. "They testify that in me is life eternal; and yet you will not come to me that you may have life."—Ver. 40. καὶ οὐ . . . ἔχητε. The true function of Scripture is expressed in the words, ἐκεῖναί εἰσιν αἱ μαρτυροῦσαι περὶ ἐμοῦ: they do not give life, as the Jews thought; they lead to the life-giver. God speaks in Scripture with a definite purpose in view, to testify to Christ; if Scripture does that, it does all. But to set it on a level with Christ is to do both it, Him, and ourselves grave injustice.

This closes the description of the three-fold witness to Christ, and in vv. 41-47, He exposes the source of their unbelief. This exposure is introduced by a disclaimer on His part of any chagrin at the want of homage and acceptance He received.—Ver. 41. Δόξαν παρὰ ἀνθρώπων οὐ λαμβάνω, not "glory from men I am not receiving," not quite "glory from men I do not seek," but rather, that which is in my judgment glory, I do not receive from men; not what men yield me is my glory. Ambition is not my motive in making these claims.—Ver. 42. ἀλλ' ἔγνωκα . . . but I know you, etc.; that is, I know why you do not receive me; the reason is that you have not the love of God in yourselves, and therefore cannot appreciate or understand one who acts in concert with God; if therefore they did offer Him homage, it could not be God in Him they worshipped (Holtzmann). [The motive of Jesus in making His claims is a subject inviting inquiry and full of significance.]—Ver. 43. ἐγὼ ἐλήλυθα . . . It is just because I have come in the Father's name that you do not receive me. Not really loving God, they could not appreciate and accept Jesus who came in God's name, that is, who truly represented God. But ἐὰν ἄλλος ἔλθῃ . . . λήψετε, "if another come in his own name," and therefore seeking only such glory as the Jews could give, him ye will receive; cf. Matt. xxiv. 5, 23, 24. "He did not say, 'If I had come in my own name,' because the thing was so inconceivable." Mason, Conditions of our Lord's Life, etc., p. 90. Possibly Jesus had here in view Antichrist (see Bousset's Antichrist, 133); but neither Bar Cochba nor any other definite Pseudo-Christ. Schudt mentions sixty-four.—Ver. 44. The Jewish inability to believe arose from their earthly ambition: πῶς δύνασθε . . . οὐ ζητεῖτε. The root of their unbelief was their earthly idea of 1 Pet. i.

10, 12.
1 Thess.
ii. 6. Ch.
vi. 15.
0 xii. 13, 41
xvii. 2. 1
Tim. ii.
17. Jude
25. 1 Cor.
viii. 6.
q πρὸς, 2
Mac. x. 13.
2 Tim. iii.
15. Esth.
vi. 1.

a Deut. xxx. VI. 1. ΜΕΤΑ ταῦτα ἀπῆλθεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς * πέραν τῆς θαλάσσης τῆς 13; cp.
 Pera and Γαλιλαίας τῆς Τιβεριάδος. 2. καὶ ἠκολούθει αὐτῷ ὄχλος πολὺς, sec
 Sapietes ὅτι ἐώρων<sup>1</sup> αὐτοῦ<sup>2</sup> τὰ σημεῖα ἃ ἐποίει<sup>b</sup> ἐπὶ τῶν ἀσθενούντων.
 J. 44.
 b Here only. 3. ἀνῆλθε δὲ εἰς τὸ ὄρος ὃ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ ἐκεῖ ἐκάθητο μετὰ τῶν

<sup>1</sup> εωρων in ΞΓΔ Chrys.; εθεωρου in BDL.

<sup>2</sup> αὐτου omitted in ΞΑΒD it. vulg. syr.

glory, what they could win or bestow. This incapacitated them from seeing the glory of Christ, which was divine and heavenly, which men could not give or remove. The glory παρὰ ἀλλήλων is contrasted with that παρὰ τοῦ μόνου Θεοῦ from the only God, the only source, arbiter, and dispenser of praise. Seeking credit as religious men from one another, they necessarily habituated themselves to current ideas, and blotted out Divine glory from their mind.—Ver. 45. μὴ δοκεῖτε . . . These words bear in them the mark of truth. They spring from Jesus' own consciousness of His intimacy with the Father. To suppose that the Jews feared He would accuse them, is to suppose that they believed Him to have influence with God. Chiefly in view is the fact that Moses will accuse them. They thought they were defending Moses' law in accusing Christ for Sabbath-breaking; but, on the contrary, they were themselves open to the accusation of Moses; εἰς ὃν ὑμεῖς ἠλπικατε, in Vulgate "Moses in quo vos speratis".—Ver. 46. They will be accused by Moses because their unbelief in Christ convicts them of unbelief in Moses, εἰ γὰρ . . . ἐμοί. Had they believed the revelation made by Moses and understood it, they would necessarily have believed in Christ. "Disbelief in me is disbelief in him, in the record of the promises to the patriarchs, in the types of the deliverance from Egypt, in the symbolic institutions of the Law, in the promise of a prophet like to himself; for it was of me (the order is emphatic) he wrote," Westcott.—Ver. 47. The converse is true, and true with an a fortiori conveyed by the contrast between γράμμασιν and ῥήμασι. If the writings you have had before you for your study all your life, and which you have heard read in the Synagogues Sabbath after Sabbath, have not produced faith in you, and enabled you to see God and appreciate His glory, how shall ye believe the once heard words of one whose coming was prepared for, and His identification made easy by all that Moses wrote?

CHAPTER VI. Jesus miraculously furnishes a meal for 5000 men with women and children, and thus manifests Himself as the Bread from heaven. This provokes the crisis in Galilee.—Vv. 1-13. The miracle narrated.—Ver. 1. μετὰ ταῦτα, John's indefinite note of time. The interval between chap. v. and chap. vi. depends on the feast alluded to, v. 1. If it was Purim, only a month had elapsed; if it was Passover, a year. In any case Jesus had left Jerusalem, the reason being that the Jews sought to slay Him (vii. 1).—ἀπῆλθεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Jesus departed," but whence? Evidently from Capernaum and the neighbourhood; cf. Mt. xiv. 13, Mk. vi. 30, Lk. ix. 10.—πέραν . . . Τιβεριάδος, "to the other side of the Sea of Galilee, of Tiberias". In xxi. 1 it is called simply τῆς Τιβεριάδος. The second title may here be a gloss, either by the evangelist himself or by a later hand, to distinguish the lake from Merom, or possibly because the latter name was more familiar to some of John's readers than the former. [Pausanias, v. 7, 3, calls it λίμνη Τιβερις.] Grotius, followed by Meyer, says: "Proprius denotat lacus partem quae ab adsito oppido, ut fieri solet, nomen habet proprium". Consequently he thinks of Jesus as crossing the Jordan below the lake. This is groundless. The town Tiberias was only built by Herod about the year 20 A.D. (Smith's Hist. Geog., 448). The exact locality where the following scene is laid seems to have been at the north-east corner of the lake, not far from Bethsaida Julias.—καὶ ἠκολούθει . . . ἀσθενούντων. "A great crowd followed Him," out of Galilee into Gaulanitis, the reason being ὅτι ἐώρων [plural although ἠκολούθει is singular], "because they had seen the miracles which He was doing [imperfect of continuous action] on the sick".—ἐπὶ with genitive denotes the object towards which action is directed, ἐπὶ οἴκου, homewards, etc. Meyer, Weiss (and Holtzmann) take it as meaning "among".—ἀνῆλθε δὲ εἰς τὸ ὄρος ὃ Ἰησοῦς, "and Jesus went up," from the μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ. 4. ἦν δὲ ἐγγὺς ἑ το πάσχα ἡ ἑορτὴ τῶν Ἰουδαίων. c. ii. 13.

5. ἄπαρας οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς, καὶ θεασάμενος ὅτι πολὺς ὄχλος ἔρχεται πρὸς αὐτὸν, λέγει πρὸς τὸν Φίλιππον, "πόθεν ἀγοράσομεν ἄρτους, ἵνα φάγωσιν οὗτοι;" 6. Τοῦτο δὲ ἔλεγε πειράζων αὐτὸν· αὐτὸς γὰρ ᾔδει τί ἔμελλε ποιεῖν. 7. ἀπεκρίθη αὐτῷ Φίλιππος, "Διακοσίων δηναρίων ἄρτοι οὐκ ἀρκούσιν αὐτοῖς, ἵνα ἕκαστος αὐτῶν βραχὺ τι λάβῃ." 8. Λέγει αὐτῷ εἰς ἕκ τῶν d xvii. 1.

Gen. xiii.
10.
e Tense cp.
i. 40.
f Num. xi.
21. Mk.
vi. 37.
g 1 Sam.
xiv. 29.

<sup>1</sup> ἀγορασσομεν feebly authenticated; ἀγορασσομεν in ΞΑΒDEFG, etc.

<sup>2</sup> ΞΑΒL 33 omit αὐτῶν.

level of the Jordan and the lake, to the higher ground on the hill; καὶ ἐκεῖ . . . αὐτοῦ, "and there sat down with His disciples," having apparently left the crowd behind, for the sitting down with the disciples indicated that rest and peace were expected.—Ver. 4. But another crowd was to be accounted for, as ver. 4 intimates, ἦν δὲ ἐγγὺς . . . Ἰουδαίων, "now the Passover, the Jewish feast, was at hand". [Grotius says: "Hoc ideo interjicit, ut intelligatur tempus fuisse opportunum ad eliciendam multitudinem, et quo melius cohaerere quod de herba sequitur". Godet's account of the insertion of this clause, that it was meant to show that the nearness of the Passover suggested to Jesus the idea "we will keep a Passover here," is plainly out of the question.]—ἐπάρας οὖν . . . Jesus therefore (or better, "accordingly"; οὖν connects what He saw with the foregoing statement).—Ver. 5. πολὺς ὄχλος ἔρχεται, not the same crowd as was mentioned in ver. 2, else the article would have been inserted, but a Passover caravan coming from some other direction, and probably guided to Jesus' retirement by some of those who had followed in the first crowd. Seeing the crowd approaching, He initiates the idea of giving them a meal. The synoptic account is different.—λέγει πρὸς τὸν Φίλιππον. Why to Philip? The question was put to Philip not because he happened at the moment to be nearest to Jesus (Alford); nor, as Bengel suggests, because he had charge of the commissariat, "fortasse Philippus rem alimentariam curabat inter discipulos"; nor "because he knew the country best"; nor only, as Euthymius says, ἵνα τὴν ἀπορίαν ὁμολογήσας, ἀκριβέστερον καταμάθῃ τοῦ μέλλοντος γενέσθαι θαύματος τὸ μέγεθος; but Cyril is right who finds the explanation in the character of Philip and in the word πειράζων of

ver. 6 [γυμνάζων εἰς πίστιν τὸν μαθητήν]. Philip was apparently a matter-of-fact person (xiv. 8), a quick reckoner and good man of business, and therefore perhaps more ready to rely on his own shrewd calculations than on unseen resources. This weakness Jesus gives him an opportunity of conquering, by putting the question πόθεν ἀγοράσομεν ἄρτους; "Whence are we to buy bread?" [lit. loaves]. πόθεν may either mean "from what village," or "from what pecuniary resources". Cf. πόθεν γὰρ ἔσται βιοτά; Soph., Philoct., 1159.—Ver. 7. Philip swiftly calculating declares it impossible to provide bread for so vast a multitude, Διακοσίων . . . λάβῃ. "Two hundred denarii worth of loaves are not enough for them that each should receive a little." "Denarius" means containing ten; and originally the denarius contained ten asses. The as was originally an ingot of copper, aes, weighing one lb.; but long before imperial times it had been reduced to one ounce, and the denarius was reckoned as equal to sixteen asses or four sesterces, and taking the Roman gold piece like our sovereign as the standard, the denarius was equivalent to about 9½d., which at that time was the ordinary wage of a working man; sufficient therefore to support a family for a day. If half was spent in food, then, reckoning the family at five persons, one denarius would feed ten persons, and 200 would provide a day's rations for 2000; but as Philip's calculation is on the basis not of food for a whole day, but only for one meagre meal, a short ration (βραχὺ τι), it is approximately accurate. There were between five and ten thousand mouths. See Expositor, Jan., 1890.—Ver. 8. With the same matter-of-factness as Philip εἰς . . . Πέτρου, "one of His disciples, Andrew, the brother of Simon Peter," a description apparently inserted in forget μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ, Ἀνδρέας ὁ ἀδελφὸς Σίμωνος Πέτρου, 9. "Ἔστι

 h 2 Kings 15. 2. 1. h παιδάριον ἐν ᾧδε, ὃ ἔχει πέντε ἄρτους κριθίνους καὶ δύο ὀψάρια.
 Sam. xxi. 7. Tob. vi. 2. ἄλλα ταῦτα τί ἐστὶν εἰς τοσοῦτους;" 10. Ἐίπε δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, i Tob. i. 1. "Ποίησατε τοὺς ἀνθρώπους ἁναπεσεῖν." ἦν δὲ χόρτος πολὺς ἐν Judith xii. 15. τῷ τόπῳ. ἀνέπεσον<sup>1</sup> οὖν οἱ ἄνδρες τὸν ἀριθμὸν ὡσεὶ<sup>2</sup> πεντακισ-
 1 Mt. x. 6. χίλιοι. 11. ἔλαβε δὲ τοὺς ἄρτους ὁ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ ἑὺχαριστήσας
 Rom. xiv. 6, etc. διέδωκε τοῖς μαθηταῖς, οἱ δὲ μαθηταὶ<sup>8</sup> τοῖς ἀνακειμένους ὁμοίως

<sup>1</sup> ἀνεπεσαν in all good MSS.

<sup>2</sup> ὡσει in AΓΔ Cyr.; ὡς in ΞBDL.

<sup>8</sup> T.R. in ΞCD, but τοῖς μαθηταῖς, οἱ δε μαθηται omitted in Ξ*ABL 1, 33. The words apparently were added from the Synoptical Gospels.

fulness that it has already been given, i. 41, supplementing Philip's judgment, cf. xii. 22, λέγει αὐτῷ, "says to Him" [the dative still holds its place after λέγει, and has not quite been given way, as in modern Greek, to πρὸς with accusative, cf. ver. 5]. "Ἔστι παιδάριον ἐν ᾧδε. "There is here one little boy." [ἐν is rejected by modern editors. May it not have been rejected because unnecessary? At the same time it must be borne in mind that although in Mt. (viii. 19 and xxvi. 69) εἰς is used as an indefinite article—as in German, French, etc.—it is not so used in John. The Vulgate has "est puer unus hic". Meyer thinks it is inserted to bring out the meagreness of the resources, "but one small boy".]—Ver. 9. ὃ ἔχει . . . ὀψάρια. The Synoptic account speaks of these provisions as already belonging to the disciples.—κριθίνους, the cheapest kind of bread; see Ezek. xiii. 19, and the extraordinary profusion of illustrations in Wetstein, among which occurs one from the Talmud: "Jochanan dixit, hordeum factum est pulchrum. Dixerunt ei: nuncia equis et asinis"; and from Livy, "Cohortibus, quae signa amiserant, hordeum dari jussit".—καὶ δύο ὀψάρια, in Mt. xiv. 17, ἰχθύας, see also John xxi. 10.—ὀψάριον is whatever is eaten with bread as seasoning or "kitchen," hence, pre-eminently, fish. So Athenaeus, cited by Wetstein. In Numbers xi. 22 we have τὸ ὄψος τῆς θαλάσσης.—ἄλλα ταῦτα τί ἐστὶν εἰς τοσοῦτους; exhibiting the helplessness of the disciples and inadequacy of the means, as the background on which the greatness of the miracle may be seen.—Ver. 10. The moral ground for the miracle being thus prepared Jesus at once says, ποιήσατε τοὺς ἀνθρώπους ἀναπεσεῖν. [For the form of speech cf. Soph., Philoct., 925, κλύειν . . . με . . . ποιεῖ.] This order was given for two reasons: (1) that there might be no unseemly crowding round Him and crushing out of the weaker; and (2) that they might understand they were to have a full meal, not a mere bite they could take in their hand in passing. Obedience to this request tested the faith of the crowd. They trusted Jesus.—ἦν δὲ χόρτος πολὺς ἐν τῷ τόπῳ, "now there was much grass in the place," contrasting with the corn-lands and olive-yards of the opposite shore, where the large crowd could not easily have found a place to lie down. Mark rather brings out the contrast between the colours of the dresses and the green grass (vi. 39): ἐπέταξεν αὐτοῖς ἀνακλίναί πάντας συμπόσια συμπόσια ἐπὶ τῷ χλωρῷ χόρτῳ. καὶ ἀνέπεσαν πρασιαὶ πρασιαί, like beds of flowers.—ἀνέπεσον [better ἀνέπεσαν] οὖν οἱ ἄνδρες . . . the men reclined, not counting women and children (χωρὶς γυναικῶν καὶ παιδίων, Mt. xiv. 21), in number about five thousand; the women, though not specified, would take their places with the men. Some of the children might steal up to Jesus to receive from His own hand.—Ver. 11. Facing the vast and hungry crowd Jesus took up and gave thanks for the slender provision, ἔλαβε δὲ [better ἔλαβεν οὖν] τοὺς ἄρτους, the loaves already mentioned, καὶ εὐχαριστήσας [Phrynichus says εὐχαριστέειν οὐδεὶς τῶν δοκίμων εἶπεν, ἀλλὰ χάριν εἶδέναι; and Rutherford says Polybius is the first writer who uses the word in the sense of "give thanks"]. Pagans, by libation, or by throwing a handful on the household altar, gave thanks before a meal; Jews pronounced a blessing, ἁγιασμός or εὐλογία. (Luke xxiv. 30, Mt. xiv. 19, and especially 1 Tim. iv. 4. See also Grotius' note on Mt. xxvi. 27.) Having given thanks Jesus διέδωκε . . . τοῖς ἀνακειμένους. The words added from the Synoptists give a fuller account

καὶ ἐκ τῶν ὄψαριων ὅσον ἤθελον. 12. ὡς δὲ ἐνεπλήσθησαν, λέγει τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ, “Συναγάγετε τὰ περισσέσαντα <sup>k</sup> κλάσματα, <sup>k</sup> Ezech. xiii. ἵνα μὴ τι ἀπόληται.” 13. Συνήγαγον οὖν, καὶ ἐγέμισαν δώδεκα <sup>l</sup> 2 Kings. iv. 42. κοφίνους κλασμάτων ἐκ τῶν πέντε <sup>m</sup> 1 ἄρτων τῶν κριθίνων, ἃ <sup>m</sup> ἐπερίσσευσε τοῖς βεβρωκόσιν. 14. οἱ οὖν ἄνθρωποι ἰδόντες ὃ ἐποίησε σημεῖον ὃ Ἰησοῦς, <sup>1</sup> ἔλεγον, “Ὅτι οὗτός ἐστιν ἀληθῶς ὁ προφήτης ὁ ἐρχόμενος εἰς τὸν κόσμον.” 15. Ἰησοῦς οὖν γινούς ὅτι <sup>μ</sup> μέλλουσιν ὁ <sup>n</sup> ἔρχεσθαι καὶ ὀρπάζειν αὐτὸν, ἵνα ποιήσωσιν αὐτὸν βασιλέα, <sup>p</sup> <sup>39.</sup> Ezech. vi. 15. Hos. xii. 11. <sup>46.</sup> Mk. vi. 46. <sup>q</sup> ἀνεχώρησε πάλιν εἰς τὸ ὄρος αὐτὸς μόνος. Only in Gosp. in N.T. Judith xiii. 1.

16. Ὡς δὲ ὀψία γέγενετο, κατέβησαν οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ ἐπὶ τὴν θάλασσαν, 17. <sup>2</sup> καὶ ἐμβάντες εἰς τὸ πλοῖον, ἤρχοντο πέραν τῆς θαλάσσης εἰς Καπερναοῦμ. καὶ σκοτία ἤδη ἐγεγόνει, καὶ οὐκ <sup>3</sup> ἐληλύθει

<sup>1</sup> ο Ἰησοῦς omitted in  $\aleph$ BD.

<sup>2</sup> το omitted in  $\aleph$ BL 33.

<sup>3</sup> οὐτω in modern editions as in  $\aleph$ BDL 33.

of what actually happened. But curiosity as to the precise stage at which the multiplication occurred, or whether it could distinctly be seen, is not satisfied. They all received ὅσον ἤθελον, not the βραχὺ τι of Philip; and even this did not exhaust the supply; for (ver. 12) ὡς δὲ ἐνεπλήσθησαν, when no one could eat any more, there were seen to be κλάσματα περισσέσαντα, pieces broken off but not used. These Jesus directs the disciples to gather ἵνα μὴ τι ἀπόληται, “that nothing be lost”. The Father’s bounty must not be wasted. Infinite resource does not justify waste. Euthymius ingeniously supposes the order to have been given ἵνα μὴ δόξη φαντασία τις τὸ γενόμενον; but of course those who had eaten already knew that the provision was substantial and real.—Ver. 13. Συνήγαγον οὖν . . . βεβρωκόσιν, the superabundance, the broken pieces of the five loaves which were in excess of the requirements, ἃ ἐπερίσσευσε, filled δώδεκα κοφίνους, that is to say, far exceeded the original five loaves.—κόφινος [French, Coffin, petit panier d’osier; cf. our “coffin” and “coffer”], a large wicker basket or hamper used in many countries by gardeners for carrying fruit, vegetables, manure, soil; and identified with the Jew by Juvenal (iii. 14), “Judaeis quorum cophinus foenumque supellex”. (See further Mayor’s note on the line, and Sat., vi. 541.) This gives colour to the idea that each of the apostles may have carried such a basket, which would account for the twelve. But why they should have had the baskets with nothing to carry in them does not appear.

Vv. 14-25. The immediate impression made by the miracle and the consequent movements of Jesus and the crowd.—Ver. 14. The conclusion drawn from the miracle by those who had witnessed it, was that this was “the beginning of that reign of earthly abundance, which the prophets were thought to have foretold”. See Lightfoot, Hor. Heb., 552. This at once found expression in the words οὗτός ἐστιν . . . κόσμον. “This is indeed,” or “of a truth,” as if the subject had been previously debated by them, or as if some had told them He was “the prophet who should come into the world,” ὁ ἐρχόμενος, used of the Messiah by the Baptist (Matt. xi. 3) without further specification; but John adds his favourite expression εἰς τὸν κόσμον. That the people meant the Messiah (cf. Deut. xviii. 14-19) is shown by the action they were prepared to take.—Ver. 15. For Jesus perceived that they were on the point of coming and carrying Him off to make Him king. ὀρπάζειν, to snatch suddenly and forcibly (derived from the swoop of the falcon, the ἄρπη; hence, the Harpies). This scene throws light on the use of ὀρπάξουσιν in Matt. xi. 12. Their purpose was to make Him king. Their own numbers and their knowledge of the general discontent would encourage them. But Jesus ἀνεχώρησε πάλιν εἰς τὸ ὄρος αὐτὸς μόνος, “withdrew again (cf. ver. 3) to the mountain,” from which He may have come down some distance to meet the πρὸς αὐτοὺς ὁ Ἰησοῦς. 18. ἢ τε θάλασσα ἀνέμου μεγάλου πνέοντος

 r Cr. Jon. i. ἰδιωγέρετο. 19. ἠληλακότες οὖν ὡς σταδίου εἰκοσιπέντε ἢ 13.
 s Mk. vi. 48. τριάκοντα ἑθωροῦσι τὸν Ἰησοῦν περιπατοῦντα ἐπὶ τῆς θαλάσσης, Lk. viii.
 29. Jas. καὶ ἑγγὺς τοῦ πλοίου γινόμενον καὶ ἑφοβήθησαν. 20. ὁ δὲ
 iii. 4.
 t Mk. vi. 49. λέγει αὐτοῖς, "Ἐγὼ εἰμι· μὴ φοβεῖσθε." 21. ἠθελον οὖν λαβεῖν u Job ix. 8.
 v With gen. αὐτὸν εἰς τὸ πλοῖον, καὶ εὐθέως τὸ πλοῖον ἐγένετο ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς εἰς
 iii. 23; xi.
 18; cp. iv. ἦν ὑπήγον.
 w Lk. xxiv. 22. Τῆ ἑπαύριον ὁ ὄχλος ὁ ἑστηκὼς πέραν τῆς θαλάσσης, ἰδὼν<sup>1</sup> 37.
 ὅτι πλοῖαριον ἄλλο οὐκ ἦν ἐκεῖ εἰ μὴ ἐν ἐκείνῳ εἰς ὃ ἐνέβησαν οἱ
 μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ,<sup>2</sup> καὶ ὅτι οὐ συνεισῆλθε τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ ὁ Ἰησοῦς

<sup>1</sup> εἶδον read by T.Tr.W.H.R. as in ABL vet. Lat., etc.

<sup>2</sup> The clause ἐκεῖ . . . αὐτοῦ is deleted by modern editors with  $\aleph$  ABL.

crowd. Now He detached Himself even from His disciples. [μὴ παρέχων μηδὲ τούτοις ἀφορμῆν, Origen.] The Synoptic account is supplementary. The disciples remained behind with fragments of the crowd, but, when it became late, they went down to the sea, and having got on board a (not "the") boat, they were coming across to Capernaum [Mark says Jesus told them to go to Bethsaida, but that is quite consistent, as they may have meant to land at the one place and walk to the other] on the other side, and it had already become dark, and Jesus had not, or "not yet," come to them, and the sea was rising owing to a strong wind blowing.—Ver. 19. ἠληλακότες οὖν ὡς σταδίου εἰκοσιπέντε ἢ τριάκοντα. The Vulgate renders "cum remigassent ergo," and modern Greek ἐκωπηλάτησαν, rightly; see Aristoph., Frogs, 195; and other passages in Elsnor. The stadium was about 194 (Rich gives 202) yards, so that nine rather than eight would go to a mile. The disciples had rowed about three miles. [The best discussion of the direction they were taking is in the Rob Roy on the Jordan, p. 374.] θεωροῦσι τὸν Ἰησοῦν περιπατοῦντα ἐπὶ τῆς θαλάσσης "they see Jesus walking on the sea". It has been suggested that this may only mean that Jesus was walking "by" the sea, ἐπὶ being used in this sense in xxi. 1. But that ἐπὶ can mean "on" the sea is of course not questioned (see Lucian's Vera Historia, where this incident is burlesqued; also Job ix. 8, where, to signalise the power of God, He is spoken of as ὁ περιπατῶν ὡς ἐπ' εἰσάφου ἐπὶ θαλάσσης). Besides, why should the disciples have been afraid had they merely seen Jesus walking on the shore? They manifested their fear in some way, and He says to them, Ἐγὼ εἰμι, I am He, or It is I.—Ver. 20. Hearing this, ἠθελον οὖν λαβεῖν αὐτὸν εἰς τὸ πλοῖον, by which Lücke, Holtzmann, Weiss, Thayer, and others suppose it is meant, that they merely wished to take Him into the boat, but did not actually do so. The imperfect tense favours this sense; and so do the expressions ἠθελον πιάσαι αὐτόν, vii. 44; and ἠθελον αὐτὸν ἔρωτᾶν, xvi. 19; whereas two of the passages cited against this meaning by Alford are in the aorist, a tense which denotes accomplished purpose. On the other hand, the imperfect may here be used to express a continuous state of feeling, and accordingly the A.V., following the Geneva Bible, against Wiclif and Tindale, rendered "they willingly received Him". So Grotius "non quod non receperint, sed quod cupide admodum". So, too, Sanday: "The stress is really on the willingness of the disciples, 'Before they shrank back through fear, but now they were glad to receive Him'". And this seems right. The R.V. has "they were willing therefore to receive Him into the boat". The καί with which the next clause is introduced is slightly against the supposition that Jesus was not actually taken into the boat (but see Weiss in loc.); and the Synoptic account represents Jesus as getting into the boat with Peter. The immediate arrival at the shore was evidently a surprise to those on board. Sanday thinks that the Apostle was so occupied with his devout conclusions that he did not notice the motion of the boat.

Vv. 22, 23, and 24 form one sentence, in which John describes the observations made by the crowd the following morning and their consequent εἰς τὸ πλοιάριον, ἀλλὰ μόνοι οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ ἀπῆλθον, 23. ἀλλὰ δὲ ἠῆλε πλοιάρια ἐκ Τιβεριάδος ἐγγὺς τοῦ τόπου ὅπου ἔφαγον τὸν ἄρτον, εὐχαριστήσαντος τοῦ Κυρίου· 24. ὅτε οὖν εἶδεν ὁ ὄχλος ὅτι Ἰησοῦς οὐκ ἔστιν ἐκεῖ οὐδὲ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ, ἐνέβησαν καὶ αὐτοὶ x l. 4, etc. εἰς τὰ πλοῖα, καὶ ἦλθον εἰς Καπερναοὺμ, ζητοῦντες τὸν Ἰησοῦν. 25. καὶ εὐρόντες αὐτὸν πέραν τῆς θαλάσσης, εἶπον αὐτῷ, “Ραββί, πότε ὦδε ἔγένονας;” 26. Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν, y Lk. x. 32. “Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ἔζητεῖτέ με, οὐχ ὅτι εἶδετε σημεῖα, ἀλλ’ <sup>z</sup> iv. 48.

<sup>1</sup> δε omitted in BL 33.

action. The observations they made are described under ιδῶν, which never finds its verb, but is resumed in ὅτε οὖν εἶδεν of ver. 24; and their consequent action is described in the main verbs of the sentence ἐνέβησαν (ver. 24) καὶ ἦλθον. With the unconscious but accurate observation of a fishing population in such matters, the crowd had noticed that there was only one boat lying on the beach at that point, and further that the disciples had gone away in it and had not taken Jesus with them. But in the morning, having presumably passed the night in the open air, and having gathered at the lake-side below the scene of the miracle, they found that neither Jesus nor His disciples were there. Apparently they expected that the disciples would have returned for Jesus, and that they might find both Him and them on the shore. Disappointed in this expectation, and concluding that Jesus had returned by land as He had come, or had left in one of the Tiberias boats, they themselves entered the boats from Tiberias, which had been driven ashore by the gale of the previous night, and crossed to Capernaum. This account of the movements and motives of the crowd seems to give each expression its proper force. The fact parenthetically introduced, ver. 23, that boats from Tiberias had put in on the east shore, is an incidental confirmation of the truth that a gale had been blowing the night before. What portion of the belated crowd went back to Capernaum in these Tiberias boats we do not know.—εὐρόντες αὐτὸν πέραν τῆς θαλάσσης, having found Him on the other side of the lake, that is, on the Capernaum side, εἶπον . . . γέγονας, “they said to Him, Rabbi, when camest thou hither?” “Quaestio de tempore includit quaestionem de modo” (Bengel). For this use of γένονας cf. ver. 19; and Cebes, Tabula, πρὸς τὸν λατρὸν γινόμενος, and Lucian, Asinus, ἐπεὶ δὲ πλησίον τῆς πόλεως ἐγεγόνειμεν (Kyrke). They came seeking Him, but were surprised to find Him. To their question Jesus makes no direct reply. He does not tell them of His walking on the water.

In vv. 26-65 we have the conversation arising out of the miracle. The first break in it is at ver. 41. From ver. 26-40 Jesus explains that He is the Bread of Life.—Ver. 26. Ἀμὴν . . . ἐχορτάσθητε. In this pursuing crowd Jesus sees no evidence of faith or spiritual hunger, but only of carnality and misunderstanding. Ye follow me οὐχ ὅτι εἶδετε σημεῖα, “not because you saw signs,” not because in the feeding of the 5000 and other miracles you saw the Kingdom of God and glimpses of a spiritual world, ἀλλ’ ὅτι ἐφάγετε ἐκ τῶν ἄρτων καὶ ἐχορτάσθητε, but because you received a physical satisfaction. This gave the measure of their Messianic expectation. He was the true Messiah who could maintain them in life without toil. Sense clamours and spirit has no hunger.—χορτάζειν, from χόρτος, means “to give fodder to animals,” and was used of men only “as a depreciatory term”. In later Greek it is used freely of satisfying men; see Kennedy's Sources of N.T. Greek, p. 80; Lightfoot on Phil. iv. 12.—Ver. 27. ἐργάζεσθε . . . ὑμῖν δώσει. “Work not for the meat which perisheth.” ἐργάζομαι means “I earn by working,” “I acquire,” see passages cited by Thayer in voc. The food which He had given them the evening before He called βρῶσιν ἀπολλυμένην: they were already hungry again, and had toiled after Him for miles to get another meal. Rather must they seek τὴν βρῶσιν . . . αἰώνιον, the food which abides εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον, that is, which is not consumed in the eating but rather grows as it is enjoyed. Cf. iv. 14. This food ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ὑμῖν δώσει. He does not call Himself “the Prophet,”

- Mt. v. 6; ὅτι ἐφάγετε ἐκ τῶν ἄρτων καὶ ἔχορτάσθητε. 27. ὁ ἐργάζεσθε μὴ
xiv. 20.
 Jas. ii. 16.
 Rev. xix.
 21.
 τὴν βρῶσιν τὴν ἀπολλυμένην, ἀλλὰ τὴν βρῶσιν τὴν μένουσαν εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον, ἣν ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ὑμῖν δώσει· τοῦτον γὰρ ὁ πατὴρ ἔσφράγισεν ὁ Θεός." 28. Εἶπον οὖν πρὸς αὐτὸν, "Τί 2 Jo. 8
 only; cp.
 Weistein
 on Mt.
 xv. 16.
 c iii. 33.
 Exod.
 xxvii. 10.
 d Num. viii.
 11.
 e iv. 34; xv.
 12. Burton, M. and T., 213.
 f Exod. xvi.
 15. Heb.
 ix. 4.
 g Ps. lxxviii.
 24.
 ποιούμεν,<sup>1</sup> ἵνα ἔργαζώμεθα τὰ ἔργα τοῦ Θεοῦ;" 29. Ἀπεκρίθη
 ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, "Τοῦτό ἐστι τὸ ἔργον τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἵνα πιστεύσητε<sup>2</sup> εἰς ὃν ἀπέστειλεν ἐκείνος." 30. Εἶπον οὖν αὐτῷ, "Τί οὖν ποιεῖς σὺ σημεῖον, ἵνα ἴδωμεν καὶ πιστεῦσωμέν σοι; τί ἐργάζῃ;
 31. οἱ πατέρες ἡμῶν τὸ ἴμάννα ἔφαγον ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ, καθὼς ἐστι γεγραμμένον, Ἐἴπεν ὁ Θεὸς τῷ Ἰησοῦ, "Ἄρτον ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ ἔδωκεν αὐτοῖς φαγεῖν." 32.
 Εἶπεν οὖν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Ἄμην ἄμην λέγω ὑμῖν, Οὐ Μωσῆς ἔδωκεν<sup>3</sup> ὑμῖν τὸν ἄρτον ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ· ἀλλ' ὁ πατὴρ μου δίδωσιν

<sup>1</sup> ποιούμεν in all modern editions as in NABL.

<sup>2</sup> T. Tr. W. H. R. read πιστευητε following NABL I, 33.

<sup>3</sup> ἔδωκεν in BDL; δεδ. in NAT.

as they had called Him yesterday, because this would have excited false expectations; but in calling Himself the Son of Man He suggests His sympathy with all human wants and at the same time indicates to the initiated that He claims the Messiahship. The guarantee is given in the words τοῦτον γὰρ . . . ὁ θεός, "For Him hath the Father, God, sealed". By giving the Son the miracle of the previous day and other signs to do, the Father has sealed or authenticated Him as the Giver of that which nourishes life everlasting. [For the idea, approved by Delitzsch, that the seal refers to the stamping of loaves with the name of the maker, see O. T. Student, Sept., 1883, and Expositor, 1885. Elsner with more reason cites passages showing that a person ordering a banquet gave his seal to the slave or steward commissioned to provide it: and thus that Christ here declares "se a Patre constitutum esse ad suppeditandum Ecclesiae salutarem cibum". The various meanings of the word are given by Suicer.] Some at least of the crowd are impressed; and conscious that their toil was, as Jesus said, commonly misdirected, they ask Him (ver. 28) τί ποιούμεν [better, ποιώμεν] ἵνα ἐργαζώμεθα τὰ ἔργα τοῦ θεοῦ; that is, how can we so labour as to satisfy God? What precisely is it that God waits for us to do, and will be satisfied with our doing? To which Jesus, always ready to meet the sincere inquirer, gives the explicit answer (ver. 29) τοῦτό ἐστι

. . . ἐκείνος. If God has sent a messenger it is because there is need of such interposition, and the first duty must be to listen believingly to this messenger. To this demand that they should accept Him as God's ambassador they reply (ver. 30) τί οὖν ποιεῖς . . . "Judaeis proprium erat signa quaerere," 1 Cor. i. 22, Lampe, Grotius and Lücke think this asking for a sign could not have proceeded from those who saw the miracle of the previous day. But Lampe rightly argues that they were the same people, and that they did not consider either the miracle of the previous day or the ordinary cures wrought by Jesus to be sufficient evidence of His present claim.—Ver. 31. This is proved by the suggestion added in ver. 31. οἱ πατέρες . . . φαγεῖν; they demanded that He as Messiah should make good His claim by outdoing Moses. Schoettgen and Lightfoot quote from Rabbinical literature a relevant and significant saying: "Qualis fuit redemptor primus (Moses) talis erit redemptor ultimus (Messias). Redemptor prior descendere fecit pro iis Manna, sic et Redemptor posterior descendere faciet Manna, sicut scriptum est," Ps. lxxiii. 16. See other instructive passages in Lightfoot. According to this expectation that the Messiah would feed His people supernaturally the crowd now insinuate that though Jesus had given them bread He had not fulfilled the expectation and given them bread from heaven. (For the expression "bread of ὕμιν τὸν ἄρτον ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ τὸν ἠ ἀληθινόν. 33. ὁ γὰρ ἄρτος τοῦ ἡ i. 9. etc. Θεοῦ ἐστίν ἰο καταβαίνων ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, καὶ ζωὴν διδοὺς τῷ i iii. 13. κόσμῳ." 34. Εἶπον οὖν πρὸς αὐτὸν, "Κύριε, πάντοτε δὸς ἡμῖν τὸν ἄρτον τοῦτον." 35. Εἶπε δὲ αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Ἐγὼ εἰμι ὁ ἄρτος τῆς ζωῆς· ὁ ἐρχόμενος πρὸς με οὐ μὴ πεινάσῃ· καὶ ὁ πιστεύων εἰς ἐμέ ἰο οὐ μὴ διψήσῃ ἰ πρώποτε. 36. ἀλλ' εἶπον ὑμῖν ὅτι καὶ ἐωράκατέ ἰ iv. 14. με, καὶ οὐ πιστεύετε. 37. ἰ πάν ὁ δίδωσί μοι ὁ πατήρ, πρὸς ἐμέ ἰ xvii. 2.

1 διψήσει in T.Tr.W.H.R. following ἰ AB*D.

heaven" see Exod. xiv. 4 and Ps. lxxviii. 23, 24.) To this challenge to fulfil Messianic expectation by showing Himself greater than Moses Jesus replies (ver. 32), οὐ Μωσῆς . . . ἀληθινόν. A double denial; not Moses, but "my Father" s the giver, and although the manna was in a sense "bread from heaven" it was not "the true bread from heaven," τὸν ἄρτον ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ τὸν ἀληθινόν. This my Father is now giving to you; ὁ γὰρ ἄρτος . . . τῷ κόσμῳ.—Ver. 33. Moses therefore could not give this bread, since it comes down out of heaven. It is characterised by two attributes: (1) it is ὁ καταβαίνων ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, that which cometh down out of heaven—not, as Godet renders, "He who cometh down from heaven"; at least the request of ver. 34 shows that those who heard the words did not take them in this sense; (2) the other characteristic of the bread of God is that it giveth life to the world; a fuller life-giving power than that of the manna is implied; and it is of universal application and not merely to their fathers. Hearing this description of "the bread of God" the crowd exclaim (ver. 34) Κύριε, πάντοτε δὸς ἡμῖν τὸν ἄρτον τοῦτον, precisely as the woman of Samaria had exclaimed Κύριε δὸς μοι τοῦτο τὸ ὕδωρ, when Jesus had disclosed to her the properties of the living water. And as in her case the direct request brought the conversation to a crisis, so here it elicits the central declaration of all His exposition of the bearing of the miracle: Ἐγὼ εἰμι ὁ ἄρτος τῆς ζωῆς. [It is not impossible that some of them may have had a glimmering of what He meant and uttered their request with some tincture of spiritual desire; for among the Rabbis there was a saying, "In seculo venturo neque edunt neque bibunt, sed justi sedent cum coronis suis in capitibus et aluntur splendore majestatis divinae."] "I am the bread of life," "I am the living bread" (ver. 51, in a somewhat different sense), "I am the bread which came down from heaven" (ver. 41), or, "the true bread from heaven"—all these designations our Lord uses, and that the people may quite understand what is meant, He adds ὁ ἐρχόμενος . . . πρώποτε. The repetition of the required action ὁ ἐρχόμενος, and ὁ πιστεύων, and of the result οὐ μὴ πεινάσῃ, and οὐ μὴ διψήσῃ, is for clearness and emphasis, not for addition to the meaning. The "believing" explains the "coming"; and the "quenching of thirst" more explicitly conveys the meaning of "never hungering," that all innocent and righteous cravings and aspirations shall be gratified. The "coming" was not that physical approach which they had adopted in pursuing Him to Capernaum, but such a coming as might equally well be called "believing," a spiritual approach, implying the conviction that He was what He claimed to be, the medium through which God comes to man, and man to God.—Ver. 36. But although God and this perfect satisfaction were brought so near them, they did not believe: ἀλλ' εἶπον . . . πιστεύετε. Beza, Grotius, Bengel, Godet, Weiss, etc., understand that εἶπον refers to ver. 26. Euthymius, preferably, says εἰκὸς τοῦτο ῥηθῆναι μὲν, μὴ γραφῆναι δέ. Lampe gives the alternatives without determining. Undoubtedly, although the reference may not be directly to ver. 26, the ἐωράκατε means seeing Jesus in the exercise of His Messianic functions, doing the works given Him by the Father to do. But seeing is not in this case believing. It was found very possible to be in His company and to eat the provision He miraculously provided, and yet disbelieve. If so, what could produce belief? Might not His entire manifestation fail to accomplish its purpose?—Ver. 37. No; for πάν ὁ δίδωσι . . . ἰξει. "Everything which the Father gives"; the neuter is used as being more universal than the masculine and including everything ἤξει· καὶ τὸν ἐρχόμενον πρὸς με οὐ μὴ ἐκβάλω ἔξω· 38. ὅτι κατα-11v. 34. βέβηκα ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, ἵνα οὐχ ἵνα ποιῶ τὸ θέλημα τὸ ἐμὸν, ἀλλὰ τὸ θέλημα τοῦ πέμψαντός με. 39. τοῦτο δέ ἐστι τὸ θέλημα τοῦ m Constr. πέμψαντός με πατρὸς,<sup>1</sup> ἵνα πᾶν ὁ δέδωκέ μοι, μὴ ἀπολέσω ἐξ ver. 29. αὐτοῦ, ἀλλὰ ἀναστήσω αὐτὸ ἐν τῇ ἐσχάτῃ ἡμέρᾳ. 40. τοῦτο δέ<sup>2</sup>

 n vv. 40, 44, ἐστι τὸ θέλημα τοῦ πέμψαντός με,<sup>3</sup> ἵνα πᾶς ὁ θεωρῶν τὸν υἱὸν καὶ
 11. vii. πιστεύων εἰς αὐτὸν, ἔχη ζωὴν αἰώνιον, καὶ ἀναστήσω αὐτὸν ἐγὼ τῇ 37, etc. ἐσχάτῃ ἡμέρᾳ.” 41. Ἐγόγγυζον οὖν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι περὶ αὐτοῦ, ὅτι p ver. 29.

<sup>1</sup> πατρος omitted in  $\aleph^* \text{ABCD}$ , etc.

<sup>2</sup> All authorities read γαρ.

<sup>3</sup> του πεμψαντος με in AEGH; του πατρος μου in  $\aleph \text{BCD}$ .

which the Father determines to save from the world's wreck, viewed as a totality. Cf. ver. 39, ἀναστήσω αὐτό: and the collective neuter, as in Thucyd., iii. 16, τὸ ἐπιόν for τοὺς ἐπιόντας. Lampe thinks the neuter is used, "quia hae personae spectantur ut reale peculium, haereditas, merces, genus, semen, sacerdotium, sanctuarium Domini". What is meant by δίδωσι? It is an act on God's part prior to the "coming" on man's part; the coming is the result of the giving. Calvinistic interpreters have therefore identified the giving with election. "Donandi verbum perinde valet ac si dixisset Christus, quos elegit Pater, eos regenerat"—Calvin. "Patrem dare filio est eligere"—Melancthon; and similarly Beza and Lampe. On the other hand, Reynolds represents a number of interpreters when he says, "It is the present activity of the Father's grace that is meant, not a foregone conclusion". This identifies the Father's "giving" with His "drawing," ver. 44. It would rather seem to be that which determines the drawing, the assigning to Jesus of certain persons who shall form His kingdom. This perhaps involves election but is not identical with it. Cf. xvii. 6. Euthymius replies, from a Semi-Pelagian point of view, to the objections which arise from an Augustinian interpretation of the words. The purpose of the verse is to impart assurance that Christ's work will not fail. καὶ τὸν ἐρχόμενον . . . ἔξω. Grotius thinks the "casting out" refers to the School of Christ; Lücke thinks the kingdom is referred to. It is scarcely necessary to think of anything more than Christ's presence or fellowship. This strong asseveration οὐ μὴ ἐκβάλω, and concentrated Gospel which has brought hope to so many, is here grounded on the will of the Father.—Vv. 38, 39. ὅτι καταβέβηκα . . . ἡμέρᾳ. Everywhere

Jesus forestalls the idea that He is speaking for Himself, and is uttering merely human judgments, or is in any way regulated in His action by what is arbitrary; it is the Supreme Will He represents. And this will requires Him to protect and provide for all that is committed to Him. ἵνα πᾶν ὁ δέδωκέ μοι, on this nominative absolute, see Lücke or Raphel, who justify it by many instances. The positive and negative aspects of the Redeemer's work, and the permanence of its results, are indicated. On ἀναστήσω . . . ἡμέρᾳ, Bengel says: "Hic finis est ultra quem periculum nullum," and Calvin finely: "Sit ergo hoc animis nostris infixum porrectam esse nobis manum a Christo, ut nos minime in medio cursu deserat, sed quo ejus ductu freti secure ad diem ultimum oculos attollere audeamus". It is a perfect and enduring salvation the Father has designed to give us in Christ.—Ver. 40. In ver. 40 Jesus describes the recipients of salvation from the human side, πᾶς ὁ θεωρῶν τὸν υἱὸν καὶ πιστεύων εἰς αὐτόν, the latter, "believing," being necessary, as already shown, to complete the former. The neuter πᾶν necessarily gives place to the masculine. καὶ ἀναστήσω αὐτὸν ἐγὼ τῇ ἐσχάτῃ ἡμέρᾳ. This promise recurs like a refrain, vv. 39, 40, 44, 54; each time the ἐγὼ is expressed and emphatic, "I, this same person who here stands before you, I and no other". Christ gives His hearers the assurance that in this respect He is superior to Moses, that the life He gives is not confined to this present time. In itself it is a stupendous declaration.

Vv. 41-51. In this paragraph we are first told how the Jews were staggered by our Lord's affirming that He had come down from heaven; second, how Jesus explains that in order to understand and receive Him they must be εἶπεν, “Ἐγὼ εἶμι ὁ ἄρτος ὁ καταβάς ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ.” 42. καὶ ἔλεγον, “Οὐχ οὗτός ἐστιν Ἰησοῦς ὁ υἱὸς Ἰωσήφ, οὐ ἡμεῖς οἴδαμεν τὸν πατέρα καὶ τὴν μητέρα; πῶς οὖν λέγει οὗτος, Ὅτι ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ καταβέβηκα;” 43. Ἀπεκρίθη οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Μὴ γογγύζετε μετ’ ἀλλήλων. 44. οὐδεὶς δύναται ἐλθεῖν πρὸς με, ἐὰν μὴ ὁ πατὴρ ὁ πέμψας με ἔλκυσῃ αὐτὸν, καὶ ἐγὼ ἀναστήσω αὐτὸν τῇ ἐσχάτῃ ἡμέρᾳ. 45. ἔστι γεγραμμένον ἐν τοῖς προφήταις, ‘Καὶ ἔσονται πάντες ἰδιδασκτοὶ τοῦ Θεοῦ.’ Πᾶς οὖν ὁ p xii. 32; in phys. sense, xviii. 10; xxi. 6, 11 Acts xvi. 19. vv. 40, 44, 54; vii. 37, etc. 1 Cor. ii. 13.

taught of God; and third, how He reiterates His claim to be the Bread of Life, adding now the explanation that it is His flesh which He will give for the life of the world.—Ver. 41. Ἐγογγυζον . . . οὐρανοῦ. “The Jews,” not as we might expect, “the Galileans,” probably because John identifies this unbelieving crowd with the characteristically unbelieving Jews. ἐγογγυζον in Exod. xvi. 7-9, 1 Cor. x. 10, etc., has a note of malevolence, but in John vii. 32 no such note. “Murmur” thus corresponds to it, as carrying both meanings. The ground of their murmuring was His asserting Ἐγὼ εἶμι . . . οὐρανοῦ. Cf. ver. 33, ὁ καταβαίνων, and ver. 38, καταβέβηκα. Lücke says: “When John makes the descent from heaven the essential, inherent predicate of the bread, he uses the present: when the descent from heaven is regarded as a definite fact in the manifestation of Christ, the aorist”. They not merely could not understand how this could be true, but they considered that they had evidence to the contrary (ver. 42), καὶ ἔλεγον, Οὐχ . . . καταβέβηκα; the emphatic ἡμεῖς more clearly discloses their thought. We ourselves know where He comes from. The road from heaven, they argued, could not be through human birth. This was one of the real difficulties of the contemporaries of Jesus. The Messiah was to come “in the clouds,” suddenly to appear; but Jesus had quietly grown up among them. From this passage an argument against the miraculous birth of our Lord has been drawn. The murmures represent the current belief that He had a father and mother, and in His reply Jesus does not repudiate His father. But He could not be expected to enter into explanations before a promiscuous crowd. As Euthymius says: He passes by His miraculous birth, “lest in removing one stumbling block He interpose another”. To explain is hopeless.—Ver. 43. Therefore He merely says Μὴ γογγύζετε μετ’ ἀλλήλων. That was not the way to light. Nor could He expect to convince all of them, for οὐδεὶς . . . ἔλκυσῃ αὐτόν, “no one can come to me unless the Father who hath sent me draw him”. ἔλκυσθαι has the same latitude of meaning as “draw”. It is used of towing a ship, dragging a cart, or pulling on a rope to set sails. But it is also used, xii. 32, of a gentle but powerful moral attraction; “I, if I be lifted up, ἔλκυσσω, will draw, etc.”. Here, however, it is an inward disposing of the soul to come to Christ, and is the equivalent of the Divine teaching of ver. 45. And what is affirmed is that without this action of God on the individual no one can come to Christ. In order to apprehend the significance of Christ and to give ourselves to Him we must be individually and inwardly aided by God. [Augustine says: “Si trahitur, ait aliquis, invitus venit. Si invitus venit, non credit, si non credit, nec venit. Non enim ad Christum ambulando currimus, sed credendo, nec motu corporis, sed voluntate cordis accedimus. Noli te cogitare invitum trahi: trahitur animus et amore.” And Calvin says: “Quantum ad trahendi modum spectat, non est ille quidem violentus qui hominem cogat externo impulsu, sed tamen efficax est motus Spiritus Sancti, qui homines ex nolentibus et invitis reddit voluntarios”. All that Calvin objects to is that men should be said “proprio motu” to yield themselves to the Divine drawing. Cf. a powerful passage from Luther’s De libero Arbitrio quoted in Lampe; or as Beza concisely puts it: “Verum quidem est, neminem credere invitum, quum Fides sit assensus. Sed volumus quia datum est nobis ut velimus.”]—Ver. 45. In confirmation of His assertion in ver. 44, Jesus, as is His wont, cites Scripture: ἐστι γεγραμμένον ἐν τοῖς προφήταις, that is, it is written in that part of Scripture known as “the Prophets”. The passage cited is Is. liv. 13, where, in describing Messianic times, the prophet says, “Thy

- r 1. 18. ἀκούσας παρὰ τοῦ πατρὸς καὶ μαθὼν, ἔρχεται πρὸς με· 46. * οὐχ
 s vii. 29 ix. ὅτι τὸν πατέρα τις ἑώρακεν· εἰ μὴ * ὁ ὢν παρὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ, οὗτος 16. ἑώρακε τὸν πατέρα. 47. ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὁ πιστεῦων εἰς ἐμέ, t 1 Cor. x. 5. ἔχει ζωὴν αἰώνιον. 48. ἐγὼ εἰμι ὁ ἄρτος τῆς ζωῆς. 49. οἱ πατέρες ὑμῶν ἔφαγον τὸ μάννα ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ, καὶ ἀπέθανον· u vv. 26, 51. 50. οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ ἄρτος ὁ ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ καταβαίνων, ἵνα τις * ἐξ αὐτοῦ φάγῃ καὶ μὴ ἀποθάνῃ. 51. ἐγὼ εἰμι ὁ ἄρτος ὁ ζῶν, ὁ ἐκ τοῦ v viii. 16, 17.
 Mt. x. 18. οὐρανοῦ καταβάς· ἐάν τις φάγῃ ἐκ τούτου τοῦ ἄρτου, ζήσεται<sup>1</sup> εἰς
 Acts iii.
 24. τὸν αἰῶνα. * καὶ ὁ ἄρτος * δὲ ὃν ἐγὼ δώσω, ἡ σὰρξ μου ἐστίν, ἣν

<sup>1</sup> Here and in v. 58 ζῆσει is read in  $\Sigma$ DL 33.

children shall all be taught of God," ἔσονται πάντες διδασκτοὶ τοῦ Θεοῦ, and what this being taught of God means He more fully explains in the words πᾶς οὖν . . . μαθὼν, "every one who has heard from the Father and has learned comes to me". Both the hearing and the learning refer to an inward spiritual process. The outward teaching of Scripture and of Christ Himself was enjoyed by all the people He was addressing; but they did not come to Him. It is therefore an inward and individual illumination by the special operation of God that enables men to come to Christ. Whether these verses teach "irresistible grace" may be doubted. That they teach the doctrine which Augustine asserted against Pelagius, vis., that power to use grace must itself be given by God, is undeniable. That is affirmed in the statement that no one can come to Christ unless the Father draw him. But whether it is also true that every one whom God teaches comes is not here stated; the καὶ μαθὼν introduces a doubtful element. [Wetstein quotes from Polybius διαφέρει τὸ μαθεῖν τοῦ μόνον ἀκοῦσαι.]—Ver. 46. Lest His hearers should suppose that in Messianic times direct knowledge of God was to be communicated, He adds, οὐχ ὅτι τὸν πατέρα τις ἑώρακεν, it is not by direct vision men are to learn of God. One alone has direct perception of the Father, ὁ ὢν παρὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ, He whose origin is Divine; not ὁ ἀπεσταλμένος παρὰ Θεοῦ, a designation which belonged to all prophets, but He whose Being is directly derived from God. Similarly, in vii. 29, we find Jesus saying ἐγὼ οἶδα αὐτόν ὅτι παρ' αὐτοῦ εἰμι καὶ ἐκεῖνός με ἀπέστειλεν, where the source of the mission and the source of the being are separately mentioned. To refer this exclusive vision of the Father to any earthly experience seems out of the question. No one who was not more than man could thus separate himself from all men. See i. 18. Having thus explained that they could not believe in Him without having first been taught of God, He returns (ver. 47) to the affirmation of ver. 40, ἀμὴν . . . ζωῆς. Their unbelief does not alter the fact, nor weaken His assurance of the fact. This consciousness of Messiahship was so identified with His spiritual experience and existence that nothing could shake it. But now He adds a significant confirmation of His claim.—Vv. 49, 50. οἱ πατέρες . . . μὴ ἀποθάνῃ, "Your fathers ate the manna in the desert and died: this is the bread which comes down out of heaven, that a man may eat of it and not die". In other words: The manna which was given to your fathers to maintain them in physical, earthly life, could not assert its power against death, and maintain them continually in life. Your fathers died physically. The bread which comes down from heaven does not give physical life; it is not sent for that purpose, but the life which it is given to maintain, it maintains in continuance and precludes death. Taken in connection with the context, the words interpret themselves. Godet however says: "Jesus, both here and elsewhere, certainly denies even physical death in the case of the believer. Cf. viii. 51. That which properly constitutes death, in what we call by this name, is the total cessation of moral and physical existence. Now this fact does not take place in the case of the believer at the moment when his friends see him die." This seems to misrepresent the fact of death for the sake of misrepresenting the present passage.—Ver. 51. In ver. 51 Jesus adds two fresh terms in explanation of the living bread, which, however, through ἐγὼ δώσω ὑπὲρ τῆς τοῦ κόσμου ζωῆς.”<sup>1</sup> 52. Ἐμάχοντο οὖν ἔως πρὸς τὴν πύλιναν τῆς πόλεως, ἵνα εἰσέλθωσιν εἰς τὴν πόλιν, ἵνα φάγωσιν τὴν σάρκα τοῦ υἱοῦ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, καὶ πίωσιν τὸ αἷμα τοῦ υἱοῦ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, ἵνα ζήσιν. 53. εἶπεν οὖν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Ἄμην ἀμην λέγω ὑμῖν, ἐὰν μὴ φάγητε τὴν σάρκα τοῦ υἱοῦ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, καὶ πίητε αὐτοῦ τὸ αἷμα, οὐκ ἔχετε ζωὴν ἐν ἑαυτοῖς. 54. ὁ τρώγων μου τὴν σάρκα, καὶ πίνων μου τὸ αἷμα, ἔχει ζωὴν αἰώνιον, καὶ ἐγὼ πρὸς in II. xvii. 98, etc., ἐπί also used; commonly the simple dative. x xiii. 18 and Mt. xxiv. 38 only.

<sup>1</sup> Instead of ἡ σὰρξ μου . . . ζωῆς BCDL 33 read ἡ σὰρξ μου ἐστὶν ὑπὲρ τ. τοῦ κόσμου ζωῆς, adopted by W.H.R. Tisch. adopts the reading of ἡ, ὑπὲρ τῆς τοῦ κόσμου ζωῆς, ἡ σὰρξ μου ἐστὶν. Weiss is too positive in saying, “Die Worte sind unbedeutend und zu streichen”. T.R. gives the most intelligible sentence.

their want of apprehension, increased their difficulty. The first is ἐγὼ εἰμι . . . ζωῆς. In giving this explanation He slightly alters the designation of Himself as the Bread: He now claims to be not “the bread of life,” but ὁ ἄρτος ὁ ζῶν, “the living bread”. Godet says: “The manna, as not itself living, could never impart life. But Jesus, because He Himself lives, can give life.” That is correct, but is not the full meaning. ὁ ζῶν contrasts the bread with the βρῶσις ἀπολλυμένη; and as “living water” is water running from a fountain in perpetual stream, and not a measured quantity in a tank, so “living bread” is bread which renews itself in proportion to all needs like the bread of the miracle. The second fresh intimation now made is ὁ ἄρτος ὃν ἐγὼ δώσω ἢ σὰρξ μου ἐστὶν . . . This intimation is linked to the foregoing by a double conjunction καὶ ὁ ἄρτος δέ, “and besides” indicating, according to classical usage, a new aspect or expansion of what has been said. The new intimation is at first sight an apparent limitation: instead of “I am the bread,” He now says “My flesh is the bread”. Accordingly some interpreters suppose that by “flesh” the whole manifestation of Christ in human nature is meant. Cf. ὁ λόγος σὰρξ ἐγένετο. Thus Westcott says: “The life of the world in the highest sense springs from the Incarnation and Resurrection of Christ. By His Incarnation and Resurrection the ruin and death which sin brought in are overcome. The thought here is of support and growth, and not of Atonement.” To this there are two objections. (1) If σὰρξ is equivalent to the whole manifestation of Christ in the flesh, this is not a new statement, but a repetition of what has already been said. And (2) the δώσω compels us to think of a giving yet future. Besides, the turn taken by the conversation, vv. 53-57, seems to point rather to the atoning sacrifice of Christ. [So Euthymius: τὴν σταύρωσιν αὐτοῦ προσημαίνει. τὸ δὲ, ἦν ἐγὼ δώσω, τὸ ἐκούσιον ἐμφαίνει τοῦ τοιοῦτου πάθους. So too Cyril: Ἀποθνήσκω, φησὶν, ὑπὲρ πάντων, ἵνα πάντας ζωοποιήσω δι’ ἑμαυτοῦ, καὶ ἀντίλυτρον τῆς ἀπάντων σαρκὸς τῆν ἐμὴν ἐποιήσάμην. Bengel says: “Tota haec de carne et sanguine Jesu Christi oratio passionem spectat”. Beza even finds in δώσω the sense “offeram Patri in ara crucis”.] The giving of His flesh, a still future giving which is spoken of as a definite act, is, then, most naturally referred to the death on the cross. This was to be ὑπὲρ τῆς τοῦ κόσμου ζωῆς, “for the sake of the life of the world”. ὑπὲρ when used in connection with sacrifice tends to glide into ἀντὶ; see the Alcestis of Eurip. passim and Lampe’s note on this verse. Here, however, the idea of substitution is not present. It is only hinted that somehow the death of Christ is needed for the world’s life. This statement, however, only bewilders the crowd; and the next paragraph, vv. 52-59, gives expression to and deals with this bewilderment.—Ver. 52. Ἐμάχοντο . . . The further explanations sprang from a fresh question put not directly to Jesus, but to one or other of the crowd. They differed in their judgment of Him. Some impatiently denounced Him as insane; others suggesting that there was truth in His words. The discussion all tended to the question πῶς δύναται . . . φαγεῖν. He had only spoken of “giving” His flesh for the life of the world: but they not unreasonably concluded that if so, it must be eaten. Their mistake lay in thinking of a physical eating.—Vv. 53, 54. εἶπεν οὖν . . . ἡμέρα. Instead of explaining the mode Jesus merely reiterates the statement. The reason of this is that

- π v. 40, 44. ἀναστήσω αὐτὸν ἢ τῇ ἑσχάτῃ ἡμέρᾳ. 55. ἡ γὰρ σὰρξ μου ἀληθῶς ἔστι βρώσις, καὶ τὸ αἷμά μου ἀληθῶς ἔστι πόσις. 56. ὁ τρώγων μου τὴν σάρκα, καὶ πίνων μου τὸ αἷμα, ἔν ἐμοὶ μένει, καὶ γὼ ἐν αὐτῷ. 54: vii. 57. etc. Dan. i. 10. 2 Thees. in John. a Heb. iii. 12. 1 Thees. i. 10. Rom. ix. 26. 57. καθὼς ἀπέστειλέ με ὁ ζῶν πατήρ, καὶ γὼ ζῶ διὰ τὸν πατέρα. καὶ ὁ τρώγων με, καὶ κέινος ζήσεται δι' ἐμέ. 58. οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ ἄρτος ὁ ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ καταβάς· οὐ καθὼς ἔφαγον οἱ πατέρες ὑμῶν τὸ μάννα, καὶ ἀπέθανον· ὁ τρώγων τοῦτον τὸν ἄρτον ζήσεται εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα. b Gen. xxi. 11. Deut. i. 17. Jer. vi. 10. 59. Ταῦτα εἶπεν ἐν συναγωγῇ διδάσκων ἐν Καπερναούμ. 60. Πολλοὶ οὖν ἀκούσαντες ἐκ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ εἶπον, ὁ Σκλη-

<sup>1</sup> For αληθως in both occurrences αληθης is read in  $\aleph$ BC.

their attention was thus more likely to be fixed on the necessity of using Him as the living bread. The difficulty of the statement disappears when it is perceived that the figure of speech is not to be found in the words "flesh" and "blood," but in the words "eating" and "drinking". The actual flesh and blood, the human life of Christ, was given for men; and men eat His flesh and drink His blood, when they use for their own advantage His sacrifice, when they assimilate to their own being all the virtue that was in Him, and that was manifested for their sakes. As Lücke points out, the σὰρξ καὶ αἷμα form together one conception and are equivalent to the με of ver. 57. If αἷμα stood alone it might refer especially to the death of Christ, but taken along with σὰρξ it is more natural to refer the double expression to the whole manifestation of Christ; and the "eating and drinking" can only mean the complete acceptance of Him and union with Him as thus manifested. [τρώγω, originally the munching of herbivorous animals, was latterly applied to ordinary human eating.]—Vv. 55, 56. This is further shown in vv. 55, 56. ἡ γὰρ σὰρξ μου ἀληθῶς [better ἀληθῆς ἔστι βρώσις, "For my flesh is a genuine food and my blood is a genuine drink"; with an implied contrast to those things with which men ordinarily endeavour to satisfy themselves. The satisfying, genuine character of Christ as the bread consists especially in this, that ὁ τρώγων . . . ἐν ἐμοὶ μένει καὶ γὼ ἐν αὐτῷ. He becomes as truly assimilated to the life of the individual as the nourishing elements in food enter into the substance of the body. The believer abides in Christ as finding his life in Him (Gal. ii. 20); and Christ abides in the believer, continually imparting to him what constitutes spiritual life. For in Christ man reaches the source of all life in the Father (ver. 57), καθὼς ἀπέστειλέ με ὁ ζῶν πατήρ . . . δι' ἐμέ. The living Father has sent Christ forth as the bearer of life. He lives διὰ τὸν πατέρα, not equivalent to διὰ τοῦ πατρός, through or by means of the Father, but "because of," or "by reason of the Father". The Father is the cause of my life; I live because the Father lives. [Beza quotes from the Plutus of Aristoph., 470, the declaration of Penia that μόνην Ἀγαθῶν ἀπάντων οὖσαν αἰτίαν ἐμέ ὕμιν, δι' ἐμέ τε ζῶντας ὑμᾶς.] The Father is the absolute source of life; the Son is the bearer of that life to the world; cf. v. 26, where the same dependence of the Son on the Father for life is expressed. The second member of the comparison, introduced by καὶ (see Winer, p. 548; and the Nic. Ethics, passim), is not, as Chrys. and Euthymius suggest, καὶ γὼ ζῶ, but καὶ ὁ τρώγων με, καὶ κέινος ζήσεται (better ζήσσει) δι' ἐμέ. (For the form of the sentence cf. x. 14.) Every one that eateth Christ will by that connection participate in the life of God.—Ver. 58. οὗτός ἐστιν . . . αἰῶνα. These characteristics, now mentioned, identify this bread from heaven as something of a different and superior nature to the manna.—Ver. 59. With his usual exact specification of time and place John adds ταῦτα . . . ἐν Καπερναούμ. Lampe says: "Colligi etiam inde potest, quod haec acciderit in Sabbato"; but the synagogue was available for teaching on other days, and it is not likely that on a Sabbath so many persons would have followed Him across the lake.

Vv. 60-71. The crisis in Galilee.—Ver. 60. Πολλοὶ οὖν . . . ἀκούειν; many of His disciples [i.e., of the larger and more loosely attached circle of His followers, as distinct from the Twelve, ver.

ρός ἐστιν οὗτος ὁ λόγος· τίς δύναται αὐτοῦ ἀκούειν;” 61. *Εἰδὼς c xlii. i. Lk. xi. 17. Mk. v. 30. Gen. xviii. 12. δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐν ἑαυτῷ, ὅτι γογγύζουσι περὶ τούτου οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ, εἶπεν αὐτοῖς “Τοῦτο ὑμᾶς σκανδαλίζει; 62. ἐὰν οὖν θεωρῆτε τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἀναβαίνοντα ὅπου ἦν τὸ πρότερον; 63. τὸ πνεῦμά ἐστι τὸ ζωοποιοῦν, ἡ σὰρξ οὐκ ὠφελεῖ οὐδέν· τὰ ῥήματα δὲ ἐγὼ λαλῶ<sup>1</sup> ὑμῖν, πνεῦμά ἐστι καὶ ζωὴ ἐστιν. 64. ἀλλ’ εἰσὶν ἐξ ὑμῶν τινες οἱ οὐ πιστεύουσιν.” d xvi. 4 only. ἡπ’ ἀρχῆς freq. Ἥιδει γὰρ ἄξ ἀρχῆς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, τίνες εἰσὶν οἱ μὴ πιστεύοντες, καὶ τίς ἐστιν ὁ παραδώσων αὐτόν.

<sup>1</sup> λελαληκα in  $\Sigma$ BCD it. vulg., etc.

67] having heard the foregoing utterances, said Σκληρός ἐστιν οὗτος ὁ λόγος. Σκληρός is rather “hard to receive” than “hard to understand”. Abraham found the command to cast out Hagar σκληρός, Gen. xxi. 11. Euripides opposes σκληρὸν ἀληθῆ, distasteful, uncompromising truths to μαλθακὰ ψευδῆ, flattering falsehoods (Frag., 75, Wetstein). The λόγος referred to was especially, ver. 58, οὗτος ἐστιν ὁ ἄρτος ὁ ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ καταβάς as is proved by vv. 61, 62. But this must be taken together with His statement in ver. 51, that He would give His flesh, and the development of this idea in vv. 53, 54, τίς δύναται αὐτοῦ ἀκούειν; “who can listen to Him?”—Ver. 61. This apparently was said out of the hearing of Jesus, for ver. 61 says εἰδὼς δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐν ἑαυτῷ, “Jesus knowing in Himself,” that is, perceiving that they were murmuring, He intuitively understood what it was they were stumbling at, and said τοῦτο ὑμᾶς . . . πρότερον; “Does this saying stumble you? If then ye see the Son of Man ascending where He was before——” What are we to supply? Either, Will you not be much more scandalised? Or, Will you not then be convinced? According to the former, the sense would be: If now you say, how can this Man give us His flesh to eat? much more will you then say so when His flesh wholly disappears. But the second interpretation gives the better sense: You will find it easier to believe I came down from heaven, when you see me returning thither. Cf. iii. 13; xiii. 3. You will then recognise also in what sense I said that you must eat my flesh. τὸ πνεῦμα ἐστι τὸ ζωοποιοῦν, ἡ σὰρξ οὐκ ὠφελεῖ οὐδέν. It was therefore the spirit animating the flesh in His giving of it which profited; not the external sacrifice of His body, but the spirit which prompted it was efficacious. The acceptance of God’s judgment of sin, the devotedness to man and perfect harmony with God, shown in the cross, is what brings life to the world; and it is this Spirit men are invited to partake of. It is therefore not a fleshly but a spiritual transaction of which I have been speaking to you. [Bengel excellently: “Non sola Deitas Christi, nec solus Spiritus sanctus significatur, sed universe Spiritus, cui contradistinguitur caro”.] τὰ ῥήματα . . . ἐστιν, His entire discourse at Capernaum, and whatever other sayings He had uttered, were spirit and life. It was through what He said that He made Himself known and offered Himself to them. To those who believed His words, spirit and life came in their believing. By believing they were brought into contact with the life in Him.—Ver. 64. But τινες οὐ πιστεύουσιν, and therefore do not receive the life. This Jesus said ἦδει γὰρ . . . αὐτόν, for Jesus knew from the first who they were that believed not, and who it was who should betray Him. “Hoc ideo addidit Evangelista, ne quis putet temere judicasse Christum de suis auditoribus,” Calvin. Euthymius says it illustrates His forbearance. ἐξ ἀρχῆς, from the beginning of His connection with individuals. Weiss supposes it means from the beginning of their not believing. He gave utterance to this knowledge in ver. 26. He even knew who it was who should betray Him. This is said in anticipation of vv. 70, 71. This declaration raises the question, Why then did Jesus call Judas to the Apostolate? Holtzmann indeed supposes that this intimation is purely apologetic and intended to show that Jesus was not deceived in appointing Judas. It is unnecessary to increase the difficulty by supposing the ἐξ ἀρχῆς to refer to the time previous to his call. Jesus saw in Judas qualities fitting him to be an Apostle; but seeing him among the others He recognised that he was an

65. Καὶ ἔλεγε, “Διὰ τοῦτο εἶρηκα ὑμῖν, ὅτι οὐδεὶς δύναται ἐλθεῖν
 e Cp. iii. 27. πρὸς με, ἐὰν μὴ ἢ δεδομένον αὐτῷ ὁ ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς μου.” 66. Ἐκ
 f xix. 12; τούτου πολλοὶ ἀπήλθον τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ * εἰς τὰ ὀπίσω, καὶ οὐκέτι viii. 31. μετ’ αὐτοῦ περιεπάτου. 67. εἶπεν οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς τοῖς δώδεκα, “Μὴ g Heb. x. 38. καὶ ὑμεῖς θέλετε ὑπάγειν;” 68. Ἀπεκρίθη οὖν αὐτῷ Σίμων Πέτρος, xviii. 6; xx. 14. Mk. xiii. “Κύριε, πρὸς τίνα ἀπελευσόμεθα; ἢ ῥήματα ζωῆς αἰωνίου ἔχεις.”
 16. Gen. xix. 17. 69. καὶ ἡμεῖς πεπιστεύκαμεν, καὶ ἐγνώκαμεν ὅτι σὺ εἶ ὁ Χριστὸς ὁ h Acts v. 20. υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ τοῦ ζῶντος.”<sup>1</sup> 70. Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, i xv. 16; xiii. 18. “Ὁὐκ ἐγὼ ὑμᾶς τοὺς δώδεκα ἐξελεξάμην, καὶ ἐξ ὑμῶν εἰς διάβολός

<sup>1</sup> ὁ Χριστὸς . . . ζῶντος only in inferior authorities; ὁ ἅγιος τοῦ Θεοῦ (without τ. ζῶντος) in  $\aleph$ BC<sup>2</sup>DL. Cp. Mk. i. 24; Acts iii. 14.

unfaithful man. To suppose that He called him in the clear knowledge that he would betray Him is to introduce an unintelligible or artificial element into the action of Christ. [Neither Calvin nor Beza makes any remark on the clause. Bruce, Training of the Twelve; and Reith, in loc., should be consulted.] Jesus already recognised in what manner His death would be compassed: by treachery. The fact stated in ver. 64, that some of His own disciples could yet not believe in Him, illustrates the truth of what He had said, ver. 44, that no one can come to Him except the Father draw him.—Ver. 65. He therefore points this out, διὰ τοῦτο . . . πατρὸς μου. All that brings men to Christ is the Father’s gift.—Ver. 66. ἐκ τούτου, “on this”; neither exclusively “from this time” ἔκτοτε (Euthymius), “from this moment onwards” (Lücke), nor exclusively “on this account,” but a combination of both. Cf. xix. 12. Here the time is in the foreground, as is shown by the οὐκ ἔτι following. Lampe has: “Qui ab illo tempore Iesum deserebant, clare indicabant, quod propter hunc sermonem istud fecerint”. πολλοὶ ἀπήλθον εἰς τὰ ὀπίσω . . . περιεπάτου. Many of those who had up to this time been following Him and listening to His teaching, returned now to their former ways and no longer accompanied Jesus. [ὀπίσω δὲ νόει μοι, καὶ τὸν πρότερον βίον αὐτῶν, εἰς ὃν πάλιν ὑπέστρεψαν, Euthymius.] εἰς τὰ ὀπίσω occurs xviii. 6, xx. 14; also Mk. xiii. 16. But the most instructive occurrence is in Ps. xlv. 18, οὐκ ἀπέστη εἰς τὰ ὀπίσω ἡ καρδία ἡμῶν, where the literal sense passes into the spiritual meaning, apostasy, abandonment of God.—Ver. 67. This giving up of their adherence to Christ was probably manifested in an immediate and physical withdrawal from His presence. For He turned to the Twelve with the words: μὴ καὶ ὑμεῖς θέλετε ὑπάγειν; “Sciebat id non facturos,” Lampe, who adds six reasons for the question, of which the most important are: “ut confessionem illam egregiam eliceret, qua se genuinos discipulos Jesu esse mox probaturi erant”; and “ut edoceret, se non nisi voluntarios discipulos quaerere”. Probably also that they might be confirmed in their faith by the expression of it, and that He might be gladdened.—Ver. 68. Simon Peter answered in name of all, Κύριε . . . ζῶντος. He gives a threefold reason why they remained faithful while others left. (1) πρὸς τίνα ἀπελευσόμεθα; “To whom shall we go away?” implying that they must attach themselves to some one as a teacher and mediator in divine things. They cannot imagine that any one should be to them what already Jesus had been. (2) Especially are they bound to Him, because He has words of eternal life, ῥήματα ζωῆς αἰωνίου ἔχεις. They had experienced that His words were spirit and life, ver. 63. In themselves a new life had been quickened by His words, a life they recognised as the true, highest, eternal life. To have received eternal life from Christ makes it impossible to abandon Him. (3) καὶ ἡμεῖς (ver. 69), “we for our part,” whatever others think, πεπιστεύκαμεν καὶ ἐγνώκαμεν “have believed and know,” cf. 1 John iv. 16, ἡμεῖς ἐγνώκαμεν καὶ πεπιστεύκαμεν, which shows we cannot press the order [cf. Augustine’s “credimus ut intelligamus”] but must accept the double expression as a strong asseveration of conviction: we have believed and we know by experience ὅτι σὺ εἶ . . .

ἐστιν;” 71. Ἐλεγε δὲ τὸν Ἰούδαν Σίμωνος Ἰσκαριώτην· οὗτος γὰρ ἤμελλεν αὐτὸν παραδίδόναι, εἰς ὧν ἐκ τῶν δώδεκα.

VII. 1. ΚΑΙ ὁ περιπατεῖ ὁ Ἰησοῦς μετὰ ταῦτα ἐν τῇ Γαλιλαίᾳ· οὐ γὰρ ἤθελεν ἐν τῇ Ἰουδαίᾳ περιπατεῖν, ὅτι ἐξήτουν αὐτὸν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι ἀποκτεῖναι. 2. Ἦν δὲ ἐγγὺς ἡ ἑορτὴ τῶν Ἰουδαίων ἡ σκηνοπηγία. 3. εἶπον οὖν πρὸς αὐτὸν οἱ ἀδελφοὶ αὐτοῦ, “Μετάβηθι ἐντεῦθεν, καὶ ὑπαγε εἰς τὴν Ἰουδαίαν, ἵνα καὶ οἱ μαθηταὶ σου a xi. 54.

Mk. xi. 27.
b v. 16.
Exod. ii.
15. Jer.
xxxiii. 21.
Deut. xvi.
16. Lev.
xxiii. 34.
1 Macc. x.
21.

ὁ ἅγιος τοῦ Θεοῦ occurs in Mk. i. 24, Lk. vi. 34; cf. Acts iii. 14, iv. 27, 30; Rev. iii. 7. The expression is not Johannine; but the idea of the Messiah as consecrated or set apart is found in x. 36, ὃν ὁ Πατὴρ ἡγάσασε. Peter's confession here is equivalent to his confession at Caesarea Philippi, recorded in the Synoptic Gospels.—Ver. 70. ἀπεκρίθη . . . ἐστίν; this reply of Jesus to Peter's warm-hearted confession at first sight seems chilling. Peter had claimed for himself and the rest a perfect loyalty; but this confidence of Peter's carried in it a danger, and must be abated. Also it was well that the conscience of Judas should be pricked. Therefore Jesus says: Even in this carefully selected circle of men, individually chosen by myself from the mass, there is not the perfect loyalty you boast.—ἐξ ὑμῶν εἰς διάβολός ἐστιν. Even of you one is a devil. Lücke, referring to Esth. vii. 4 and viii. 1, where Haman is called ὁ διάβολος, as being “the slanderer,” or “the enemy,” suggests that a similar meaning may be appropriate here. But Jesus calls Peter “Satan” and may much more call Judas “a devil”. Besides in the present connection “traitor” is quite as startling a word as “devil”.—Ver. 71. Using the knowledge brought by subsequent events John explains that Judas was meant, ἔλεγε δὲ τὸν Ἰούδαν Σίμωνος Ἰσκαριώτην [better Ἰσκαριώτου, which shows that the father of Judas was also known as Iscariot], ἔλεγε with the accusative, meaning “He spoke of,” is classical, and see Mk. xiv. 71. The word “Iscariot” is generally supposed to be equivalent to קִרְיֹת שֵׁשֶׁן, Ish Keriyoth, a man of Kerieth in the tribe of Judah (Josh. xv. 25). Cf. Ishtob, a man of Tob (Joseph., Ant., vii. 6, 1, quoted in Smith's Dict.). The name Judas now needs no added surname.

CHAPTERS VII.—X. 21. Jesus at the Feast of Tabernacles, and subsequently in Jerusalem.

CHAPTER VII. At the Feast.—Vv. 1—13. The circumstances of His visit to Jerusalem.—Vv. 14—36. He teaches, and discussions regarding Him are evoked.—V. 37—end. His manifestation on the last day of the Feast, and the consequent action of the Sanhedrim.—Ver. 1. Having described the crisis in Galilee the evangelist proceeds to describe the various opinions and discussions held regarding Jesus in Jerusalem. See Sanday, p. 144. In chap. vi., a Passover was said to be at hand; but Jesus did not go to it, but continued to go about teaching in Galilee, περιπατεῖ ὁ Ἰησοῦς μετὰ ταῦτα ἐν τῇ Γαλιλαίᾳ. Although appropriate to a single school, περιπάτει denoted generally the going about of a teacher with his disciples; hence, “to dispute,” or “to discourse”. περίπατος in Aristotle, Frogs, 907 and 918, means “a philosophical discussion or argumentation”. John assigns a reason for Jesus remaining in Galilee; this, according to Holtzmann and Weiss, proves that he considered the Judaean ministry the rule, the Galilean the exception. But the assigning of a reason may be accounted for by the unlikelihood of Jesus remaining in Galilee after what was recorded in chap. vi. His reason for remaining in Galilee, even after His rejection there, was the active hostility of the Jews, ἐξήτουν αὐτὸν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι ἀποκτεῖναι. See ver. 18. Things were not yet ripe for His exposing Himself to the hostility of the authorities.—Ver. 2. But occasion arose for His abandoning His purpose to remain in Galilee. ἦν δὲ . . .

σκηνοπηγία. In Hebrew תּוֹכַחֵת הַגִּזְזִים

(Lev. xxiii. 34), the Feast of Succoth, or Booths, in Greek σκηνοπηγία, the fixing of tents; so called because in this Feast the Jews commemorated how their fathers had dwelt in tents, and been fed and cared for as if in a settled condition. It was one of the great Feasts, and as it fell in October and Jesus had not attended the previous Passover, it might seem desirable that He should go up to Jerusalem now.—Ver. 3. The desirableness of doing so is urged by His brothers. εἶπον . . . τῷ κόσμῳ. The reason they

ἔ Put indic. <sup>4</sup> θεωρήσωσι <sup>1</sup> τὰ ἔργα σου ἃ ποιεῖς· 4. οὐδεὶς γὰρ <sup>ο</sup> ἐν κρυπτῷ τι never in classics
 ποιεῖ, καὶ ζητεῖ αὐτὸς ἐν παρρησίᾳ εἶναι. εἰ ταῦτα ποιεῖς, after ora;
 freq. in N. φανέρωσον σεαυτὸν τῷ κόσμῳ.” 5. Οὐδὲ γὰρ <sup>ο</sup> οἱ ἀδελφοὶ αὐτοῦ T. Burton, 199.
 ἐπίστευον εἰς αὐτόν. 6. Λέγει οὖν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “<sup>h</sup> Ὁ καιρὸς ὁ e xviii. 20; commonly
 ἐμὸς οὕτω πάρεστιν· ὁ δὲ καιρὸς ὁ ὑμέτερος πάντοτε ἐστίν <sup>1</sup> ἔτοιμος.
 ἐν τῷ κ.
 f M 54. Col. 7. <sup>1</sup> οὐ δύναται ὁ κόσμος μισεῖν ὑμᾶς· ἐμὲ δὲ μισεῖ, ὅτι ἐγὼ μαρτυρῶ
 II. 15.
 g Mk. iii. 21. περὶ αὐτοῦ, ὅτι τὰ ἔργα αὐτοῦ πονηρὰ ἐστίν. 8. ὑμεῖς <sup>κ</sup> ἀνάβητε h II. 4; VIII.
 20.
 i x Pet. i. 5.
 j III. 19; xv. ὅτι ὁ καιρὸς ὁ ἐμὸς οὕτω <sup>1</sup> πεπλήρωται.” 9. Ταῦτα δὲ εἰπὼν αὐτοῖς, 19.
 k Zech. xiv. ἔμεινεν ἐν τῇ Γαλιλαίᾳ.
 18. Ch.
 12. 20.
 Mk. x. 32.
 I Mk. i. 15.
 IO. Ὡς δὲ ἀνέβησαν οἱ ἀδελφοὶ αὐτοῦ, τότε καὶ αὐτὸς ἀνέβη εἰς

<sup>1</sup> θεωρησουσι in  $\aleph^c B^* DL$ .

<sup>2</sup> ταυτην deleted in modern editions on authority of  $\aleph^a BDKL$ .

<sup>3</sup> ουκ is read in  $\aleph DKM$  vet. Lat. vulg. Memph. Arm. Tr. Ti. Meyer, Weiss; ουπω in BLT syr. Theb. Goth. vulg. codd. aliq. W.H. R.V.

advanced was “that Thy disciples also may see Thy works which Thou doest”. καὶ οἱ μαθηταὶ σου seems to imply that since the Feeding of the Five Thousand in April, Jesus had been living in comparative retirement, perhaps at Nazareth. At Jerusalem, all who were attached to Him would be found at the Feast; and the brothers recognise that He would then have an opportunity of putting His claims to the proof. “No one,” they say, “who seeks public recognition confines his activities to a hidden and private corner.” ἐν παρρησίᾳ, as in xi. 54, means “openly” or “in public,” and is in direct contrast to ἐν κρυπτῷ. Having laid down the general law, they then apply it to Him, “if (or ‘since,’ not expressing doubt) Thou doest these things, show Thyself to the world”. Lücke, following Euthymius, thinks doubt is implied in εἰ; but this implies an ignorance on the part of the brothers which is inconceivable.—Ver. 5. It is indeed added οὐδὲ γὰρ . . . αὐτόν, “For not even did His brothers believe in Him”; but this does not mean that they did not believe He wrought miracles, but that they had not submitted to His claim to be Messiah. They required to see Him publicly acknowledged before they could believe. Therefore this clause is introduced to explain why they urged Him to go to Jerusalem.—Ver. 6. His answer was ὁ καιρὸς ὁ ἐμὸς οὕτω πάρεστιν . . . ἔτοιμος. The time for my manifestation to the authorities as Messiah is not yet come; but no time is inappropriate or unsafe for you to show yourselves.—Ver. 7. The reason of the different procedure lies in the different relation to the world held by Jesus and His brothers. οὐ δύναται . . . ἐστίν. There is no danger of your incurring the world’s hatred by anything you do or say; because your wishes and actions are in the world’s own spirit. But me the world hates, and I cannot at random or on every occasion utter to it my claims and purpose, because the very utterance of these claims causes it to be conscious that its desires are earthly (see chap. vi. passim). This hatred of the world compelled Him to choose His time for manifesting Himself.—Ver. 8. ὑμεῖς . . . πεπλήρωται “Go ye up to the feast. I go not up yet to this Feast, for my time is not yet fulfilled.” His time for manifesting Himself publicly was not yet come, and therefore He did not wish to go up to the feast with His brothers, who were eager for some public display. Had He gone in their company He would have been proclaimed, and would have appeared to be the nominee of His own family. It was impossible He should go on any such terms.—Ver. 9. He therefore remained where He was.—Ver. 10. Ὡς δὲ ἀνέβησαν . . . κρυπτῷ. “But when His brothers had gone up, then He also went up to the Feast, not openly, but, as it were, in secret.” That is to say, He went up, but not at His brothers’ instigation, nor with the publicity they had recommended. [Of course if we read in ver. 8 ἐγὼ οὐκ ἀναβαίνω a change τὴν ἑορτὴν, οὐ φανερώς, ἀλλ' ὡς ἐν κρυπτῷ. 11. Οἱ οὖν Ἰουδαῖοι ἐξήτουν αὐτὸν ἐν τῇ ἑορτῇ, καὶ ἔλεγον, "Ποῦ ἐστὶν ἐκεῖνος;" 12. Καὶ ἰσχυροὶ γογγυσμὸς πολὺς περὶ αὐτοῦ ἦν ἐν τοῖς ὄχλοις. οἱ μὲν 11x. 16. ἔλεγον, "Ὅτι ἀγαθὸς ἐστίν." ἄλλοι δὲ ἔλεγον, "Οὐ· ἀλλὰ πλανᾷ τὸν ὄχλον." 13. Ὁ οὐδείς μέντοι παρρησία ἐλάλει περὶ αὐτοῦ, διὰ 11x. 22. τὸν φόβον τῶν Ἰουδαίων.

14. Ἦδη δὲ τῆς ἑορτῆς ὁ μεσοῦσης, ἀνέβη ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἰς τὸ ἱερὸν. ο Exod. xii. 29; xxxiv. 22. καὶ ἐδίδασκε. 15. καὶ ἐθαύμαζον οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι λέγοντες, "Πῶς οὗτος ῥ γράμματα οἶδε, μὴ μεμαθηκώς;" 16. Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν, "Ἡ ἐμὴ διδαχὴ οὐκ ἔστιν ἐμῇ, ἀλλὰ τοῦ πέμψαντός με· p Dan. i. 4. Is. xxix. 12. 2 Tim. iii. 15.

of mind must be supposed, although not the "inconstancia" alleged by Porphyry.]

Vv. 11-13. Disappointment at Jesus' non-appearance.—Ver. 11. Οἱ οὖν Ἰουδαῖοι . . . ἐκεῖνος; "the Jews," possibly, as usual in John, the authorities (so Meyer, Weiss, etc.), and thus in contrast to the ὄχλοι of ver. 12; but ver. 15 rather indicates that the term is used more generally. They looked for Him, expecting that He would appear at least at this third feast. They asked ποῦ ἐστὶν ἐκεῖνος; which Luther, Meyer, etc., think contemptuous; but ἐκεῖνος cannot thus be pressed. Cf. 1 John passim.—Ver. 12. Among the masses (ἐν τοῖς ὄχλοις) there was γογγυσμὸς πολὺς regarding Him; not "murmuring," as R.V., but rather "whispering," suppressed discussion in low tones, in corners, and among friends; "halbblaute Mittheilung entgegengesetzter Ansichten" (Holtzmann), "viel im Volke über ihn herumgeredet" (Weizsäcker). Specimens of this talk are given: οἱ μὲν . . . ὄχλον. "Some said, He is a good man," ἀγαθός, pure in motive and seeking to do good. "But others said, No: but He misleads the multitude" (Mt. xxvii. 63, Lk. xxiii. 5), that is, seeks to ingratiate Himself with the people to serve His own ends.—Οὐδείς . . . Ἰουδαίων. "No one, however, talked openly about Him, for fear of the Jews." Until the Jews, the authorities, gave their decision, neither party dared to utter its opinion openly.

Vv. 14-36. The teaching of Jesus at the Feast of Tabernacles. [Spitta supposes that the original place of paragraph vv. 15-24 was at the end of chap. v.] So far as reported this teaching is found in three short statements: (1) in justification of His authority as a teacher; (2) in assertion of His Divine origin; and (3) of His approaching departure. This threefold teaching elicited expressions of opinion from three parties:

(1) from "the Jews" (15-24); (2) from inhabitants of Jerusalem (25-31); (3) from the officers sent to apprehend Him (32-36).—Ver. 14. "Ἦδη δὲ τῆς ἑορτῆς μεσοῦσης." "But when it was now mid-feast," i.e., the fourth day. μεσοῦν is commonly used in this sense: ἡμέρα μεσοῦσα, midday; θέρος μεσοῦν, mid-summer.—ἀνέβη . . . ἐδίδασκε. "Jesus went up to the temple and taught"; see xviii. 20; He did not go to Jerusalem to seclude Himself and worship in private, nor did He go to proclaim Himself explicitly as Messiah. He went and taught. His teaching astonished the Jews, and they asked Πῶς οὗτος γράμματα οἶδε μὴ μεμαθηκώς; It is not His wisdom that astonishes them, for even uneducated men are often wise; but His learning or knowledge. γράμματα (Acts xxvi. 24) "included the whole circle of rabbinical training, the sacred Scriptures, and the comments and traditions which were afterwards elaborated into the Mishna and Gemara" (Plumptre, Christ and Christendom). But it cannot be supposed that Jesus made Himself acquainted with these comments. His skill in interpreting Scripture and His knowledge of it is what is referred to. What the scribes considered their prerogative, He, without their teaching, excelled them in.—Ver. 16. But though not received from them, it was a derived teaching. He is not self-taught. Ἡ ἐμὴ διδαχὴ . . . με. The teaching which I give has not its source in my knowledge but in Him that sent me. "Der Autodidakt in Wahrheit ein Theodidakt ist," Holtzmann. The truest self-renunciation is the highest claim. That this claim was true He proceeds to show (1) from the conviction of every one who desired to do God's will, ver. 17; and (2) from His own character, ver. 18.—Ver. 17. ἐάν τις . . . λαλῶ. "If any

- q Mt vii. 21. 17. εἰάν τις θέλη τὸ ἠθέλημα αὐτοῦ ποιεῖν, γνώσεται περὶ τῆς
 Wisd. i. 25. διδαχῆς, ἢ ἴτερον ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἔστιν, ἢ ἐγὼ ἀπ' ἐμαυτοῦ λαλῶ.
 r Here only in N.T., freq. in Job. 18. ὁ ἀφ' ἐαυτοῦ λαλῶν, τὴν δόξαν τὴν ἰδίαν ζητεῖ· ὁ δὲ ζητῶν τὴν δόξαν τοῦ πέμψαντος αὐτὸν, οὗτος ἀληθὴς ἔστι, καὶ ἀδικία ἐν αὐτῷ οὐκ ἔστιν. 19. οὐ Μωσῆς δέδωκεν<sup>1</sup> ὑμῖν τὸν νόμον, καὶ οὐδεὶς ἐξ ὑμῶν ποιεῖ τὸν νόμον; τί με ζητεῖτε ἀποκτείνειν;” 20. Ἰσχυρῶς ἀπεκρίθη ὁ ὄχλος καὶ εἶπε, “Δαιμόνιον ἔχεις· τίς σε ζητεῖ ἀποκτείνειν;” 21. Ἰσχυρῶς ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Ἐν ἔργον ἐποίησα, καὶ man willeth to do His will, he shall know concerning the teaching, whether it is of God (or from God) or I speak from myself.” As Jesus everywhere asserts (v. 46, xviii. 37), he who thirsts for God will recognise Him as God's messenger; he who hungers for righteousness is filled in Jesus; he who is of the truth hears His voice. The teaching of Jesus is recognised as Divine by those whose purpose and desire it is to be in harmony with God.—Ver. 18. There are also two different kinds of teachers: the one ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ λαλῶν, speaks his own mind, teaches his own ideas, does not represent God and reveal His mind; because he τὴν δόξαν τὴν ἰδίαν ζητεῖ, “seeks his own glory,” which of course cannot be reached by representing himself to be merely the herald of another's glory. The other style of teacher is described in the words ὁ δὲ ζητῶν . . . ἔστιν. Plainly He who seeks the glory of Him whose ambassador He is, has no interest in falsifying matters to advance His own interests. If His aim is to advance the glory of Him who has sent Him, He will truthfully deliver His message; ἀληθὴς ἔστι, καὶ ἀδικία . . . and injustice, dishonesty, is not in Him. The application of this general principle to Jesus was obvious.—Ver. 19. οὐ Μωσῆς . . . ἀποκτείνειν. The connection is not obvious, but seems to be this: You reject my teaching, but that is not surprising, for you reject Moses' also (cf. v. 39, 45-47). “Did not Moses give you the law?” or, “Hath not Moses given you the law?” [the point of interrogation should be after the first νόμον; none after the second]. “Yet none of you keeps it. If you did you would not seek to kill me.” Was there not a former revelation of God which should have prevented you from thus violently rejecting my teaching?—Ver. 20. This, some of the crowd think mere raving. He is a monomaniac labouring under a hallucination that people wish to kill Him.—Δαιμόνιον . . . ἀποκτείνειν; This question, repudiating the idea that any one seeks to slay Him, needs no answer and gets none.—Ver. 21. Jesus prefers to expose the unjustifiable character of the hostility which pursued Him (ver. 16). Referring to the miracle wrought at Bethesda, and which gave occasion to this hostility, He says ἐν ἔργον . . . σαββάτω. One single work I did and ye all marvel [are horrified or scandalised]; for this same object, of imparting health, Moses gave you circumcision, an ordinance that continues through all the generations and regularly sets aside the Sabbath law. If circumcision is performed, lest the law of Moses be broken, are ye angry at me for making a man every whit whole [or rather, for making an entire or whole man healthy] on the Sabbath day? The argument is obvious; and its force is brought out by the antithetical form of the sentence: the ἐν ἔργον of the healing of the impotent man is contrasted with the continuous ordinance of circumcision, and so the aorist is used of the one, the perfect of the other. In ver. 23 περιτομὴν λαμβάνει is contrasted with ὅλον ἄνθρωπον ὑγιή, the partial and symbolic with the complete and actual soundness. The argument is all the more telling because a “vis medicatrix,” as well as a ceremonial purity (but vide Meyer), was ascribed to circumcision [“praeputium est vitium in corpore”]. Wetstein quotes from a Rabbi a singularly analogous argument: “Si circumcisio, quae fit in uno membrorum 248 hominis, pellit Sabbatum, quanto magis verum est, conservationem vitae Sabbatum pellere?” The parenthesis in ver. 22, οὐχ ὅτι . . . πατέρων, is apparently thrown in for accuracy's sake, lest some captious persons should divert πάντες θαυμάζετε. 22. "διὰ τοῦτο Μωσῆς δέδωκεν ὑμῖν τὴν περι-<sup>a</sup> Lev. xii. τομήν, οὐχ ὅτι ἐκ τοῦ Μωσέως ἐστίν, ἀλλ' ἐκ τῶν πατέρων· καὶ ἐν <sup>3.</sup> Gen. xvii. 10. σαββάτῳ περιτέμνετε ἄνθρωπον. 23. εἰ περιτομὴν λαμβάνει ἄνθρωπος ἐν σαββάτῳ, ἵνα μὴ λυθῆ ὁ νόμος Μωσέως, ἐμοὶ ἔχολατε ὅτι <sup>v3</sup> Macc. iii ὄλον ἄνθρωπον ὑγιή ἐποίησα ἐν σαββάτῳ; 24. "μὴ κρίνετε κατ' <sup>w</sup> Deut. i. ὄψιν, ἀλλὰ τὴν δικαίαν κρίσιν κρίνατε."<sup>1</sup> 25. "Ἐλεγον οὖν τινες <sup>16.</sup> Zech vii. 9. ἐκ τῶν Ἱεροσολυμιτῶν, "Οὐχ οὗτός ἐστιν ὃν ζητοῦσιν ἀποκτεῖναι; 26. καὶ ἴδε παρρησία λαλεῖ, καὶ οὐδὲν αὐτῷ λέγουσι. <sup>x</sup> μήποτε <sup>Gen. xlvii. 18.</sup> Jud. iii. 24. ἀληθῶς ἐγνωσαν οἱ ἄρχοντες, ὅτι οὗτός ἐστιν ἀληθῶς <sup>2</sup> ὁ Χριστός; 27. ἀλλὰ τοῦτον οἶδαμεν πόθεν ἐστίν· ὁ δὲ Χριστὸς ὅταν ἔρχηται,

<sup>1</sup> εδωκεν in BD; δεδωκεν in NLT.

<sup>1</sup> κρίνετε in BDL; κρίνατε BXLG.

<sup>2</sup> ἀληθῶς deleted by modern editors as in BBDKL.

attention from the argument by objecting to the statement that Moses had "given" them circumcision. The reference of διὰ τοῦτο in the same verse is obscure. Some editors join these words with θαυμάζετε; but although in Mk. vi. 6 διὰ follows θαυμάζειν, this construction does not occur in John. Besides, John frequently begins his sentences with διὰ τοῦτο; and if ver. 22 begins with Μωσῆς, such a commencement is certainly abrupt. Retaining διὰ τοῦτο as part of ver. 22, the words might be understood thus: "I have done one work and ye all marvel: therefore (be it known unto you) Moses has given you," etc., i.e., "I will remove your astonishment; you yourselves perform circumcision," etc. See Winer, p. 68. So Holtzmann, and Weizsäcker, who renders: "Darum: Moses hat euch," etc. This gives a good sense, but surely the ellipsis is too severe. Holtzmann's reference to vi. 65 tells rather against it, for there εἶρηκα is added. May διὰ τοῦτο not mean, "on this account," i.e., for the same reason as I had in healing the impotent man, did Moses give you circumcision? I did one work of healing and ye marvel. But with a similar object Moses gave you circumcision. This seems best to suit the words and the context. He adds to His argument the comprehensive advice of ver. 24. μὴ κρίνετε κατ' ὄψιν . . . κρίνατε. "Judge not according to appearance;" κατ' ὄψιν, according to what presents itself to the eye; the Pharisaic vice. In appearance the healing of the impotent man was a breach of the Sabbath-law. No righteous judgment can be come to if appearances decide. For κρίσιν κρίνειν, cf. Plato Rep., 360 E;

and cf. οἰκίαν οἰκεῖν, βαδίζειν ὁδόν, πεσεῖν πτώματα, etc.

Vv. 25-31. Opinion of inhabitants of Jerusalem regarding Jesus. Knowing the hostility of the authorities, they express surprise that Jesus should be allowed to teach openly; and wonder whether the authorities themselves can have changed their opinion about Him. This they find it difficult to believe, because on the point of origin Jesus does not satisfy Messianic requirements.—Ver. 25. "Ἐλεγον οὖν, in consequence of the bold denunciation which they had heard from the lips of Jesus. τινες ἐκ τῶν Ἱεροσολυμιτῶν [or Ἱεροσολυμειτῶν, or Ἱεροσολυμειτῶν], distinct from the ὄχλος of ver. 20, which was unaware of any intention to kill Him; but themselves not so familiar as the Galileans with the appearance of Jesus, and therefore they asked: Οὐχ οὗτος . . . λέγουσι. Or the words may only be a strong way of expressing their astonishment at the inactivity of the authorities. μήποτε ἀληθῶς . . . ὁ Χριστός; "Can it be that the rulers indeed know that this man is the Christ?" But this idea, again, is at once dismissed, ἀλλὰ τοῦτον . . . ἐστίν. "Howbeit we know this man whence He is: but when the Christ comes, no one knows whence He is." There was a general belief that the Christ would spring from David's line and be born in Bethlehem; see ver. 42. The words "no one knows whence He is" must refer to the belief encouraged by the Apocalyptic literature that He would appear suddenly "in the clouds" or "from the sun". Cf. 4 Ezra vii. 28, xiii. 32, Apoc. Baruch xiii. 32; with Mr. Charles' note; and other passages cited in Drummond's

- y xii. 44. οὐδεὶς γινώσκει πόθεν ἐστίν." 28. Ὑἱ ἔκραξεν οὖν ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ διδασκῶν Exod. δ' Ἰησοῦς καὶ λέγων, "Κἀμὲ οἴδατε, καὶ οἴδατε πόθεν εἰμί· καὶ ἅπ'
 xxi. 23. ἔμαυτοῦ οὐκ ἐλήλυθα, ἀλλ' ἔστιν ἁ ἀληθινὸς ὁ πέμψας με, ὃν ὑμεῖς z v. 19. οὐκ οἴδατε· 29. ἐγὼ δὲ οἶδα αὐτὸν, ὅτι ἅ παρ' αὐτοῦ εἰμι, κἀκεῖνός a Heb. x. 22. οὐκ οἴδατε· 29. ἐγὼ δὲ οἶδα αὐτὸν, ὅτι ἅ παρ' αὐτοῦ εἰμι, κἀκεῖνός
 Rev. iii. οὐκ οἴδατε· 29. ἐγὼ δὲ οἶδα αὐτὸν, ὅτι ἅ παρ' αὐτοῦ εἰμι, κἀκεῖνός
 14. οὐκ οἴδατε· 29. ἐγὼ δὲ οἶδα αὐτὸν, ὅτι ἅ παρ' αὐτοῦ εἰμι, κἀκεῖνός b vi. 46, etc. ὅτι ἅ παρ' αὐτοῦ εἰμι, κἀκεῖνός
 c Freq. in ὅτι ἅ παρ' αὐτοῦ εἰμι, κἀκεῖνός
 John; also ὅτι ἅ παρ' αὐτοῦ εἰμι, κἀκεῖνός Acts iii. 7; ὅτι ἅ παρ' αὐτοῦ εἰμι, κἀκεῖνός
 xii. 4. ὅτι ἅ παρ' αὐτοῦ εἰμι, κἀκεῖνός
 Cor. xi. 32. ὅτι ἅ παρ' αὐτοῦ εἰμι, κἀκεῖνός
 d ii. 4. ὅτι ἅ παρ' αὐτοῦ εἰμι, κἀκεῖνός viii. 1. ὅτι ἅ παρ' αὐτοῦ εἰμι, κἀκεῖνός 20, etc. ὅτι ἅ παρ' αὐτοῦ εἰμι, κἀκεῖνός
 e Attrac. cp. ὅτι ἅ παρ' αὐτοῦ εἰμι, κἀκεῖνός
 Zeph. iii. ὅτι ἅ παρ' αὐτοῦ εἰμι, κἀκεῖνός
 11. ὅτι ἅ παρ' αὐτοῦ εἰμι, κἀκεῖνός f ver. 30. οἱ ἄρχιερεῖς ὑπηρέτας, ἵνα ἅ πιάσωσιν αὐτόν. 33. εἶπεν οὖν αὐτοῖς g Is. liv. 7. ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Ἐτι ἅ μικρὸν χρόνον μεθ' ὑμῶν εἰμι, καὶ ὑπάγω πρὸς τὸν

<sup>1</sup> μη in  $\aleph$ BDL.

<sup>2</sup> τούτων omitted in  $\aleph$ BDL.

Messiah, 279 ff. Different sections of the community may have had different expectations. The surmises of the Jerusalemites came to the ears of Jesus, and stirred Him to further and more emphatic statements, "Ἐκραξεν οὖν ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ. From the repetition of the words "in the Temple," Westcott gathers that a break occurred between this scene and the last; but this idea seems to be precluded by the continuity of the conversation. Jesus takes up the words of the doubters, Κἀμὲ οἴδατε . . . Some interpreters think there is a touch of irony in the first clauses; thus Weizsäcker translates: "So? to mich kennet ihr und wisset wo ich her bin? Und doch bin ich," etc. Similarly Lücke and Godet. But this is unnecessary. Jesus concedes their ability to identify Him as the carpenter of Nazareth. This knowledge they had; but the knowledge which they had not was of far greater importance. To know my native place and to be able to recognise me as Jesus is not enough; for I am not come at my own prompting. To deduce from your knowledge of my origin that I am a self-constituted prophet and therefore not the Messiah, is to mistake; for I am not come of myself. To know me apart from Him that sent me is empty knowledge. He that sent me has a real existence, and is not a fancy of mine. You indeed do not know Him; but I know Him because from Him I have my being and He has sent me. Weiss rightly observes that ὅτι (ver. 29) does not include κἀκεῖνός με ἀπέστειλεν under its government. Jesus knew the Father because He was from Him; but His being sent was the result, not the cause, of His knowledge. These statements exasperated the Jews, (ver. 30) Ἐζήτουν οὖν αὐτὸν πιάσαι. πιάσω, Doric and Hellenistic for πιέζω, "I press"; in later Greek "I catch" (xxi. 3), "I arrest," ver. 32, etc. But οὐδεὶς ἐπέβαλεν "no one laid hands [or, 'his hand,' R.V.] upon Him, for His hour was not yet come"; the immediate cause being that they were not all of one mind, and feared resistance on the part of some of the people.—Ver. 31. For, πολλοὶ . . . Here as usual alongside of the hostility evoked by the deeds and words of Jesus faith also was evoked; faith which suggested covertly that He might be the Messiah. ὁ Χριστὸς ὅταν ἔλθῃ, "When the Christ comes will He do more signs than this man has done?"

Vv. 32-36. The Sanhedrim takes action regarding Jesus.—Ver. 32. Ἦκουσαν . . . αὐτόν. The Pharisees, perceiving that many of the people were coming under the influence of Jesus, determined to put a stop to His teaching, and persuaded the Sanhedrim [οἱ ἄρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι] to send officers to apprehend Him.—Ver. 33. εἶπεν οὖν αὐτοῖς [αὐτοῖς omitted by modern editors] ἔτι μικρὸν χρόνον . . . πέμψαντά με. Seeing the servants of the Sanhedrim [οὖν], Jesus said to the crowd: "Yet a little while am I with you, and then I go to Him that sent me". The "little while" is prompted by the actively hostile step taken by the Sanhedrim. The utterance was a word of warning. ὑπάγω does not convey any sense of secrecy, as has been alleged. [It has been supposed that τὸν πέμψαντά πέμπαντά με. 34. <sup>h</sup>ζητήσατέ με, καὶ οὐχ εὐρήσατε· καὶ ὅπου εἰμί ἡ Hos. v. 6 ἐγὼ, ὑμεῖς οὐ δύνασθε ἐλθεῖν.” 35. Εἶπον οὖν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι πρὸς αὐτούς, “Ποῦ οὗτος μέλλει πορεύεσθαι, ὅτι ἡμεῖς οὐχ εὐρήσομεν αὐτόν; μὴ εἰς τὴν Ἰδιασπορὰν τῶν Ἑλλήνων μέλλει πορεύεσθαι, <sup>i Jas. i. 1. 1. Pet. i. 1. Deut. xxxii. 26. xii. 20. Is. ix. 12.</sup> καὶ διδάσκειν τοὺς Ἑλληνας; 36. τίς ἐστὶν οὗτος ὁ λόγος ὃν εἶπε, Ζητήσατέ με, καὶ οὐχ εὐρήσατε· καὶ, Ὅπου εἰμί ἐγὼ, ὑμεῖς οὐ δύνασθε ἐλθεῖν;”

37. Ἐν δὲ τῇ ἐσχάτῃ ἡμέρᾳ <sup>k τῇ</sup> μεγάλῃ τῆς ἐορτῆς εἰστήκει ὁ <sup>l</sup> <sup>xix. 31.</sup> Ἰησοῦς, καὶ ἔκραξε λέγων, “Ἐάν τις διψᾷ, ἐρχέσθω πρὸς με καὶ <sup>Exod. xii. 16.</sup> me is a Johannine addition; chiefly because of ver. 35. But this misunderstanding proves nothing; for the people never apprehended who was meant by “Him that sent Him”.—Ver. 34. In ver. 34 He views with pity (cf. “O Jerusalem, Jerusalem,” etc.) their too late awakening to a sense of their need: ζητήσατέ με καὶ οὐκ εὐρήσατε. “The tragic history of the Jewish people since their rejection of Jesus as Christ is condensed into these words,” Reith. Cf. Lk. xvii. 22, “The days will come when ye shall desire to see one of the days of the Son of Man, and ye shall not see it”; also Lk. xix. 43, 44; and Is. lv. 6. εἰκὸς γὰρ πολλοὺς . . . ζητεῖν αὐτὸν βοηθὸν καὶ μᾶλλον ἀλυσκομένων Ἱεροσολύμων, Euthymius. Even though they may then know where He has gone, they cannot follow Him, ὅπου εἰμί ἐγὼ ὑμεῖς οὐ δύνασθε ἐλθεῖν, “where I am” [not εἰμι, “I will go”], i. e., in the presence of Him that sent me, “ye cannot,” as ye now are and by your own strength, “come”. For the full meaning see chap. viii. 21-24.—Ver. 35. This was quite unintelligible to the Jews, εἶπον οὖν . . . ἐλθεῖν. The only meaning they could put upon His words was that, finding no reception among the Jews of Judaea and Galilee, He intended to go to the Jews of the Dispersion and teach them and the Greeks among whom they lived. The διασπορὰ τῶν Ἑλλήνων does not mean, as Chrysostom and Euthymius suppose, the Gentiles διὰ τὸ διασπάρθαι πανταχοῦ, but the Jews dispersed among the Gentiles, see Deut. xxviii. 25, Jer. xxxiv. 17, 1 Pet. i. 1, Jas. i. 1 (cf. Schürer, Div. II., vol. ii., and Morrison, Fews under Roman Rule). But the following clause, καὶ διδάσκειν τοὺς Ἑλληνας, indicates that they supposed He might teach the Greeks themselves; thus ignorantly anticipating the course Christianity took; what seemed unlikely and impossible to them became actual.—τίς ἐστὶν οὗτος ὁ λόγος . . . The saying has impressed itself on their memory, though they find it unintelligible. How they could not go where He could, they could not fathom. Cf. Peter’s “Lord, why can I not follow Thee now?” and the whole conversation, chap. xiii. 33-xiv. 6, “No one comes to the Father but through me”.

Vv. 37-44. Jesus proclaims His ability to quench human thirst with living water.—Ver. 37. ἐν δὲ τῇ ἐσχάτῃ ἡμέρᾳ . . . This exact specification of time is given that we may understand the significance of the words uttered by Jesus. The Feast of Tabernacles lasted for seven days (Lev. xxiii. 34, Neh. viii. 18), and on the eighth day was “an holy convocation,” on which the people celebrated their entrance into the holy land, abandoning their booths, and returning to their ordinary dwellings. On each of the seven feast days water was drawn in a golden pitcher from the pool of Siloam, and carried in procession to the Temple, in commemoration of the water from the rock with which their fathers in the desert had been provided. On the eighth day, which commemorated their entrance into “a land of springs of water,” this ceremony was discontinued. But the deeper spirits must have viewed with some misgiving all this ritual, feeling still in themselves a thirst which none of these symbolic forms quenched, and wondering when the vision of Ezekiel would be realised, and a river broad and deep would issue from the Lord’s house. Filled with these misgivings they suddenly hear a voice, clear and assured, Ἐάν τις διψᾷ, ἐρχέσθω πρὸς με καὶ πινέτω: that is, whatever natural wants and innocent cravings and spiritual aspirations men have, Christ undertakes to satisfy them every one. To this general invitation are added words so enigmatical that John finds it necessary

πινέτω· 38. ὁ πιστεύων εἰς ἐμὲ, καθὼς εἶπεν ἡ γραφή, ποταμοὶ
 1 Ezech. iii. 3. <sup>1</sup> ἐκ τῆς κοιτίας αὐτοῦ ῥεύσουσιν ὕδατος ζῶντος." 39. Τοῦτο δὲ Zech. xiv.
 3. Prov. εἶπε περὶ τοῦ Πνεύματος οὐ ἔμελλον λαμβάνειν οἱ πιστεύοντες εἰς
 xviii. 4.
 m xi. 16; αὐτόν· οὐπω γὰρ ἦν Πνεῦμα Ἅγιον,<sup>1</sup> ὅτι ὁ Ἰησοῦς οὐδέπω <sup>2</sup> ἔδοξάσθη.
 xiii. 31;
 xvii. 1. 40. πολλοὶ οὖν ἐκ τοῦ ὄχλου ἀκούσαντες τὸν λόγον,<sup>2</sup> ἔλεγον, "Οὗτός ἔστιν ἀληθῶς ὁ προφήτης." 41. Ἄλλοι ἔλεγον, "Οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ n Ps. cxxxii. Ἐρχεται; 42. οὐχὶ ἡ γραφή εἶπεν, ὅτι <sup>3</sup> ἐκ τοῦ σπέρματος Δαβίδ, 11. ἔρχεται; 42. οὐχὶ ἡ γραφή εἶπεν, ὅτι <sup>3</sup> ἐκ τοῦ σπέρματος Δαβίδ, o Heb. xiii. καὶ <sup>4</sup> ἀπὸ Βηθλεέμ, τῆς κώμης ὅπου ἦν Δαβίδ, ὁ Χριστὸς ἔρχεται;" 24.

1 πνευμα ἅγιον δεδομενον in B Syr. (Harcl.-Hier). πνευμα without addition in NKTP Memph. Arm. Aeth. Cyr.-Alex. adopted by T.Tr.W.H.

2 των λογων in all modern editions with BBDL it. vulg.

to explain their reference.—Ver. 38. ὁ πιστεύων . . . ζῶντος. [The nominative absolute is common.] No Scripture gives the words verbatim. Is. lviii. 11 has: "The Lord shall satisfy thy soul in drought; and thou shalt be like a watered garden, and like a spring of water whose waters fail not". Cf. John iv. 14. The words seem to intimate that the believer shall not only have his own thirst quenched, but shall be a source of new streams for the good of others (O. Holtzmann). A remarkably analogous saying is quoted by Schoettgen from the Talmud: "Quando homo se convertit ad Dominum suum, tanquam fons aquis vivis impletur, et fluentia ejus egrediuntur ad omnis generis homines et ad omnes tribus". At the same time it is not easy to see the relevancy of the saying if this meaning be attached to it, and the saying of John iv. 14 is so similar that it seems preferable to understand it in the same sense, of the inseparableness and inwardness of the living water. Those who advocate the other meaning can certainly find confirmation for their view in the explanation added by John.—Ver. 39. τοῦτο . . . ἔδοξάσθη, for these words apparently refer to Pentecost, the initial outpouring of the Spirit, when it once for all became manifest that the Spirit's presence did not turn men's thoughts in upon themselves, and their own spiritual anxieties and prospects, but prompted them to communicate to all men the blessings they had received. From the little group in the upper room "rivers" did flow to all. But the appended clause, οὐπω γὰρ ἦν Πνεῦμα Ἅγιον, is difficult. The best attested reading (see critical note) gives the meaning: "The Spirit was not yet, because Jesus was not yet [οὐπω, not οὐδέπω] glorified". ἔδοξάσθη with John signifies the entire process of glorification, beginning with and including His death (see chap. xii. 23, 32, 33); but especially indicating His recognition by the Father as exalted Messiah (see chap. xvii. 1, 5, xiii. 31). Until He thus became Lord the Spirit was not given: and the gift of the Spirit at Pentecost was recognised as the grand proof and sign that He had reached the position of supremacy in the moral universe. (See especially Acts ii. 32, 33.) The Spirit could not be given before in His fulness, because until Christ no man could receive Him in His fulness. Christ was the lens in whom all the scattered rays were gathered. And it is always and only by accepting Christ as perfect humanity, and by finding in Him our norm and ideal, that we receive the Spirit. It is by the work of the Spirit on the human nature of Christ that we are made aware of the fulness and beauty of that work. It is there we see what the Spirit of God can make of man, and apprehend His grace and power and intimate affinity to man.—Ver. 40. The immediate results of this declaration were twofold. In some faith was elicited: many of the crowd said: "This is of a truth the prophet"; others, going a step further, said: "This is the Christ". On the relation of "the prophet" to "the Christ," see on i. 21.—Ver. 41. But others, either honestly perplexed, or hostile to Christ, and glad to find Scripture on their side, objected, μὴ γὰρ ἐκ τῆς Γαλιλαίας ὁ Χριστὸς ἔρχεται; "But does the Christ come out of Galilee?" [Hoogveen explains the γὰρ by resolving the sentence into a double statement: "Others said this is not the Christ: for Christ will not come out of Galilee". The γὰρ assigns the reason for the denial γινώσκων τὸν νόμον, ἐπικατάρτοι<sup>1</sup> εἶσι.” 50. Λέγει Νικόδημος πρὸς αὐτοὺς, ὃ ἔλθων νυκτὸς<sup>2</sup> πρὸς αὐτὸν, εἰς ὧν ἐξ αὐτῶν, 51. “Μὴ ἰ. Mt. xv. 11 ὁ νόμος ἡμῶν κρίνει τὸν ἄνθρωπον, ἐὰν μὴ ἀκούσῃ παρ’ αὐτοῦ πρότερον,<sup>3</sup> καὶ γινῶ τί ποιεῖ;” 52. Ἀπεκρίθησαν καὶ εἶπον αὐτῷ, u 2 Kings x. “Μὴ καὶ σὺ ἐκ τῆς Γαλιλαίας εἶ;” Ἔρεύνησον καὶ ἶδε, ὅτι προ-<sup>23</sup> φήτης ἐκ τῆς Γαλιλαίας οὐκ ἐγγήγερται.”<sup>4</sup> 53. Καὶ<sup>5</sup> ἐπορεύθη ἕκαστος εἰς τὸν οἶκον αὐτοῦ.

επαρτοι adopted by T.Tr.W.H.R. as in SB I, 33, and as the word appears in the classics; but T.R. gives the word as used by the Sept. and in Gal. iii. 14.

<sup>2</sup> νυκτος omitted by T.Tr.W.H.R.; W.H. read ο ελθων προς αυτον προτερον; Tisch. omits the clause altogether; MS. authority is divided.

<sup>3</sup> πρωτον in SBDKL I, 33.

<sup>4</sup> εγγερεται read by T.Tr.W.H.R. after SBDK it. vulg. Pesh. syr. Aegypt. Goth. Arm. Aeth.

<sup>5</sup> The closing words of the chapter, καὶ ἐπορεύθη ἕκαστος εἰς τὸν οἶκον αὐτοῦ, belong to the next paragraph, which is rejected by recent editors, and ends with ver. 11 of chap. viii. at the words μηκετι αμαρτανε. The entire paragraph is wanting in ABCL (A and C are imperfect at this part, but a calculation of space required shows they cannot have contained the passage); about seventy cursives; a, f, q, Theb. Goth., best Pesh. MSS., Memph., Arm.; Chrys., Cyr.-Alex. The paragraph is first found in Codex Bezae, after which it appears in several uncials and more than 300 cursives, in b*, c, e; Vulg., Syr.-Hier., Aeth., etc. The Greek commentators, Origen, Theodor. Mops., Chrysostom, Cyril, Theophylact, pass it by, and Euthymius, although he comments on it, expressly says that in accurate MSS. the οὐχ ευρηται η ωβελισται. It rather interrupts the narrative at this point, and besides contains several words not elsewhere found in John: ορθρον, ο λαος, οι γραμματεις, αναμαρτητος. At the same time the incident may well be a genuine tradition, and, as Calvin says, “nihil apostolico spiritu indignum continet,” and therefore “non est cur eam in usum nostrum accommodare recusemus”. See further in Spitta, Zur Gesch. d. Urchristentums, i. 194; Conybeare's article in Expositor, 5th series, ii. 405.

the clause ὃ ἔλθων νυκτὸς πρὸς αὐτόν, and no doubt it has quite the appearance of a gloss. At the same time it is John's manner thus to identify persons named. And at xix. 39 the similar clause is not deleted.] This was a bold step. For he must have known it was useless; and he might have persuaded himself to evade all risk by silence. His remonstrance is based on their implied claim to know the law: μὴ ὁ νόμος . . . ποιεῖ; their own action is suspiciously like a violation of the law. “Does our law pass judgment on the suspected person before it first hears him and knows what he is guilty of doing?” For the law regarding trials see Deut. i. 16 and Stapfer's Palestine, p. 108, on the administration of justice. The construction is simple; “the law” which the Sanhedrim administered is the nominative throughout.—Ver. 52. This remonstrance is exasperatingly true, and turns the bitterness of the Pharisaic party on Nicodemus, μὴ καὶ . . .

ἐγγήγερται. “Art thou also, as well as Jesus, from Galilee, and thus disposed to befriending your countryman?” Cf. Mk. xiv. 70. By this they betray that their own hostility was a merely personal matter, and not founded on careful examination. “Search and see, because [or ‘that’] out of Galilee there arises no prophet.” That is, as Westcott interprets, “Galilee is not the true country of the prophets: we cannot look for Messiah to come from thence”. They overlooked the circumstance that one or two exceptions to this rule existed.

CHAPTER VIII.—Ver. 1. καὶ ἐπορεύθη ἕκαστος . . . The position of these words almost necessitates the understanding that the members of the Sanhedrim are referred to. But in this case the contrast conveyed in the next clause, Ἰησοῦς δὲ ἐπορεύθη, is pointless.—εἰς τὸ ὄρος τῶν ἐλαιῶν, to the Mount of Olives. Cf. Mt. xxiv. 3, xxvi. 30; Mk. xiii. 3. Lodging probably in the house of expression of deliberate silence or embarrassment. [ὅπερ εἰώθασι πολλάκις ποιεῖν οἱ μὴ θέλοντες ἀποκρίνεσθαι πρὸς τοὺς ἐρωτῶντας ἄκατρα καὶ ἀνάξια, Euthymius.] Interesting passages are cited by Wetstein and Kypke, in one of which Euripides is cited as saying: τὴν σιωπὴν τοῖς σοφοῖς ἀπόκρισιν εἶναι.—Ver. 7. The scribes, however, did not accept the silence of Jesus as an answer, but “went on asking Him”. For this use of ἐπιμένω with a participle cf. Acts xii. 16, ἐπέμενον κρούων; and see Buttman’s N.T. Gram., 257, 14. And at length Jesus lifting His head, straightening Himself, said to them: Ὁ ἀναμάρτητος . . . βαλέτω, “let the faultless one among you first cast the stone at her”. ἀναμάρτητος only here in N.T. In Sept. Deut. xxix. 19, ἵνα μὴ συναπολέσῃ ὁ ἁμαρτωλὸς τὸν ἀναμάρτητον. It can scarcely have been used on this occasion generally of all sin, but with reference to the sin regarding which there was present question; or at any rate to sins of the same kind, sins of unchastity. They are summoned to judge themselves rather than the woman.—Ver. 8. Having shot this arrow Jesus again stooped and continued writing on the ground, intimating that so far as He was concerned the matter was closed.—Ver. 9. οἱ δὲ . . . ἐσχάτων. “And they when they heard it went out one by one, beginning from the elders until the last.” [The words which truly describe the motive of this departure, καὶ ὑπὸ τῆς συνειδήσεως ἐλεγχόμενοι, are deleted by Tr.W.H.R.] πρεσβυτέρων refers not to the elders by office but by age. They naturally took the lead, and the younger men deferentially allowed them to pass and then followed. Thus κατελείφθη μόνος . . . ἐστῶσα. Jesus was left sitting and the woman standing before Him. But only those would retire who had been concerned in the accusation: the disciples and those who had previously been listening to Him would remain.—Ver. 10. ἀνακύψας . . . Jesus, lifting His head and seeing that the woman was left alone, says to her: Ἡ γυνή . . . κατέκρινεν; “Woman,” nominative for vocative, as frequently, but see critical note, “where are they? Did no man condemn thee?” That is, has no one shown himself ready to begin the stoning?—Ver. 11. And she said: “No one, Lord.”—Εἶπε . . . ἁμάρτανε. “Neither do I condemn thee,” that is, do not adjudge thee to stoning. That He did condemn her sin was shown in His words μηκέτι ἁμάρτανε. Therefore Augustine says: “Ergo et Dominus damnavit, sed peccatum, non hominem”.

δακτύλῳ ἔγραφεν εἰς τὴν γῆν· 7. ὡς δὲ ἐπέμενον ἐρωτῶντες αὐτὸν, ἀνακύψας εἶπε πρὸς αὐτοὺς, “Ὁ ἀναμάρτητος ὑμῶν, ἴπρωτος τὸν λίθον ἐπ’ αὐτῇ βαλέτω.” 8. καὶ πάλιν κάτω κύψας ἔγραφεν εἰς τὴν γῆν· 9. οἱ δὲ, ἀκούσαντες, καὶ ὑπὸ τῆς <sup>κ</sup>συνειδήσεως <sup>ι</sup>ἐλεγχόμενοι, ἐξήρχοντο <sup>ιι</sup>εἰς καθείς, ἀρξάμενοι ἀπὸ τῶν πρεσβυτέρων ἕως τῶν ἐσχάτων· καὶ κατελείφθη μόνος ὁ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ ἡ γυνὴ ἐν μέσῳ ἐστῶσα. 10. ἀνακύψας δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ μηδένα θεασάμενος πλὴν τῆς γυναικὸς, εἶπεν αὐτῇ, “Ἡ γυνή,<sup>1</sup> ποῦ εἰσιν ἐκεῖνοι οἱ κατηγοροὶ σου; οὐδεὶς σε κατέκρινεν;” 11. Ἡ δὲ εἶπεν, “Οὐδεὶς, κύριε.” Εἶπε δὲ αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Οὐδὲ ἐγὼ σε κατακρίνω· πορεύου καὶ <sup>ii</sup>μηκέτι ἁμάρτανε.”

<sup>1</sup> γυναί Tr.W.H.

<sup>2</sup> ἐκεῖνοι οἱ κατηγοροὶ σου omitted by W.H.R.

Vv. 12-20. Jesus proclaims Himself the Light of the World.—Ver. 12. Πάλιν οὖν. “Again therefore Jesus spake to them”; “again” refers us back to vii. 37. Lücke and others suppose that the conversation now reported took place on some day after the feast: but there is no reason why it should not have been on the same day as that recorded in chap. vii. The place, as we read in ver. 20, was ἐν τῷ θησαυρῷ, “in the Treasury,” which probably was identical with the colonnade round the “Court of the Women,” or γυναικωνίς, “in which the receptacles for charitable contributions, the so-called Shopharoth or ‘trumpets,’ were placed” (Edersheim, Life of Christ, ii. 165). Edersheim supposes that here the Pharisees would alone venture to speak. This seems scarcely consistent with the narrative. The announcement made by Jesus was, ‘Ἐγὼ εἶμι τὸ φῶς τοῦ κόσμου. Notwithstanding Meyer and Holtzmann it seems not unlikely that this utterance was prompted by the symbolism of the feast. According to the Talmud, on every night of the feast the Court of the Women was brilliantly illuminated, and the night, according to Wetstein and others, was spent in dancing and festivity. This brilliant lighting was perhaps a memorial of the Pillar of Fire which led the Israelites while dwelling in tents. This idea is favoured by the words which follow and which describe how the individual is to enjoy the light inherent in Jesus: ὁ ἀκολουθῶν ἐμοί, “he that follows me”. Like the basket of fire hung from a pole at the tent of the chief, the pillar of fire marked the camping ground and every movement of the host. And those who believe in Christ have not a chart but a guide; not a map in which they can pick out their own route, but a light going on before, which they must implicitly follow. Thus οὐ μὴ περιπατήσει ἐν τῇ σκοτίᾳ, “shall not walk in the dark”; cf. Mt. iv. 16. The Messiah was expected to scatter the darkness of the Gentiles, “Lux est nomen Messiae” (Lightfoot), ἀλλ’ ἐξεῖ τὸ φῶς τῆς ζωῆς, but shall have light sufficient for the highest form of life. The analogous ὁ ἄρτος τῆς ζωῆς, τὸ ὕδωρ τ. ζ. show that the light of life means the light which is needful to maintain spiritual life.—Ver. 13. To this the Pharisees, seeing only self-assertion, reply: Σὺ . . . ἀληθής. A formal objection; cf. v. 31. But the attempt to apply it here only shows how far the Pharisees were from even conceiving the conditions of a true revelation. They were still in the region of pedantic rules and external tests.—Ver. 14. Jesus replies: κὰν . . . ὑπάγω, “even if I witness of Myself, My witness is true”. The difference between καὶ εἰ and εἰ καὶ is clearly stated by Hermann on Viger, 822; Klotz on Devarius, 519; and is for the most part observed in N.T. On the law regulating testimony, which was meant merely for courts of law, see ver. 31. The expressed ἐγὼ indicates that He is an exception to the rule; the reason being because He knows whence He comes and whither He goes, ὅτι οἶδα . . . ὑπάγω. He knows His origin and His destiny. He knows Himself, and therefore the rule mentioned has no application to Him.—πόθεν ἦλθον cannot of course be restricted to His earthly origin. He knows He is from God, so ὑπάγω refers to His going to God. Cf. xiii. 3. Moreover, He is compelled to witness to Himself, because ὑμεῖς οὐκ οἴδατε . . . ὑπάγω. He alone knew the nature of His mission, yet it behoves to be known by all men; therefore He must declare Himself. They would no doubt have replied, as formerly, vii. 27, Mk. vi. 3, that they did know whence He was. Therefore He reminds them that they judge by appearances only: ὑμεῖς κατὰ τὴν σάρκα κρίνετε. They had constituted themselves His judges, and they decided against Him, because “according to the flesh” He was born in Galilee, vii. 52. “For my part,” He says, “I judge (condemn) no one”; ἐγὼ οὐ κρίνω οὐδένα. As if He said, “I confine myself (ver. 16) to witnessing, and do not sit in judgment,” cf. iii. 17. “But even if I do judge (as my very appearance among you results in judgment, iii. 18-19, v. 22), my judgment is true; there is no fear of its being merely superficial εἰμὶ, ἀλλ' ἐγὼ καὶ ὁ πέμψας με πατήρ. 17. καὶ ἐν τῷ νόμῳ δὲ τῷ ὑμετέρῳ γέγραπται, ὅτι δύο ἀνθρώπων ἡ μαρτυρία ἀληθῆς ἐστίν. 18. ἐγὼ εἰμι ὁ μαρτυρῶν περὶ ἑαυτοῦ, καὶ μαρτυρεῖ περὶ ἐμοῦ ὁ πέμψας με πατήρ." 19. "Ἐλεγον οὖν αὐτῷ, "Ποῦ ἐστὶν ὁ πατήρ σου;" Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Ὅτε ἐμεῖ οἴδατε, οὔτε τὸν πατέρα μου· εἰ ἐμεῖ ᾔδειτε, καὶ τὸν πατέρα μου ᾔδειτε ἄν." 20. Ταῦτα τὰ ῥήματα ἐλάλησεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐν τῷ ἁγαθοφυλακίῳ, διδάσκων ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ· καὶ οὐδεὶς ἔπίσασεν αὐτὸν, ὅτι ὁ οὐκ ἔληλυθει ἡ ὥρα αὐτοῦ. 21. Εἶπεν οὖν πάλιν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Ἐγὼ ὑπάγω, καὶ ζητήσετέ με, καὶ ἐν τῇ ἁμαρτίᾳ ὑμῶν ἀποθανεῖσθε· ὅπου ἐγὼ ὑπάγω, ὑμεῖς οὐ δύνασθε ἐλθεῖν." 22. "Ἐλεγον οὖν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, "Μῆτι ἀποκτενεῖ ἑαυτὸν, ὅτι λέγει, "Ὅπου ἐγὼ ὑπάγω, ὑμεῖς οὐ δύνασθε ἐλθεῖν;"

12. Πάλιν οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς αὐτοῖς ἐλάλησε λέγων, “Ἐγὼ εἶμι τὸ φῶς τοῦ κόσμου· ὁ ἀκολουθῶν ἐμοί, οὐ μὴ περιπατήσει<sup>1</sup> ἐν τῇ σκοτίᾳ, ἀλλ’ ἐξεῖ τὸ φῶς τῆς ζωῆς.” 13. Εἶπον οὖν αὐτῷ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι, “Σὺ περὶ σεαυτοῦ μαρτυρεῖς· ἡ μαρτυρία σου οὐκ ἔστιν ἀληθής.” 14. Ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Κὰν ἐγὼ μαρτυρῶ περὶ ἑμαυτοῦ, ἀληθής ἐστιν ἡ μαρτυρία μου· ὅτι οἶδα πόθεν ἦλθον, καὶ ποῦ ὑπάγω· ὑμεῖς δὲ οὐκ οἴδατε πόθεν ἔρχομαι, καὶ ποῦ ὑπάγω· 15. ὑμεῖς ὁ κατὰ τὴν σάρκα κρίνετε· ἐγὼ οὐ κρίνω οὐδένα. 16. ο 2 Cor. xi καὶ ἐὰν κρίνω δὲ ἐγὼ, ἡ κρίσις ἡ ἐμὴ ἀληθής<sup>2</sup> ἐστίν· ὅτι μόνος οὐκ

<sup>1</sup> περιπατηση in ΞBFGKL; T.R. in DEHM.

<sup>2</sup> αληθην in BDL 33; αληθης in Ξ.

or prejudiced, because I am not alone, but I am inseparably united to the Father who sent me." Cf. v. 30, "as I hear I judge". In Pirge Aboth, iv. 12, R. Ishmael is cited: "He used to say, judge not alone, for none may judge alone save One".—Ver. 17. καὶ ἐν τῷ νόμῳ . . . πατήρ. He returns from "judging" to "witnessing," and He maintains that His witness (ver. 18) satisfies the Mosaic law (Deut. xvii. 6, xix. 15) because what He witnesses of Himself is confirmed by the Father that sent Him. The nature of this witness was given fully at v. 37-47.—ἐγὼ εἰμι ὁ μαρτυρῶν . . . Field maintains the A.V. "I am one that beareth witness," against the R.V. "I am He that beareth witness"; ἐγὼ εἰμι being equivalent to "There is I" or "It is I". Misled perhaps by the Lord's use of ἀνθρώπων (ver. 17), the Pharisees ask (ver. 19): Ποῦ ἐστὶν ὁ πατήρ σου; "Patrem Christi carnaliter acceperunt" (Augustine), therefore they ask where He is that they may ascertain what He has to say regarding Jesus; as if they said: "It is all very well alleging that you have a second witness in your Father; but where is He?" The idea of Cyril that it was a coarse allusion to His birth is out of the question, and Cyril himself does not press it. Jesus replies: Ὅτε . . . ᾔδειτε ἄν [or ἄν ᾔδειτε]. They ought to have known who He meant by His Father and where He was; and their hopeless ignorance Jesus can only deplore. They professed to know Jesus, but had they known Him they would necessarily have known the Father in whom He lived and whom He represented. Their ignorance of the Father proves their ignorance of Jesus.—Ταῦτα . . . ἱερῷ. On ἁγαθῶφ., see ver. 12. Euthymius, as usual, hits the nail on the head:

"Ταῦτα" τὰ παρήσιαστικά. ἐπεσημνήματο γὰρ τὸν τόπον, δεικνύων τὴν παρήρησιαν τοῦ διδασκάλου. "But no one apprehended Him, because not yet was His hour come." His immunity was all the more remarkable on account of the proximity to the chamber where the Sanhedrim held its sittings, in the south-east corner of the Court of the Priests. See Edersheim's Life of Christ, ii. 165, note.

Vv. 21-30. Further conversation with the Jews, in which Jesus warns them that He will not be long with them, and that unless they believe they will die in their sins. They will know that His witness is true after they have crucified Him.—Ver. 21. Εἶπεν οὖν πάλιν. On another occasion, but whether the same day (Origen) or not we do not know, although, as Lücke points out, the αὐτοῖς favours Origen's view, Jesus said: Ἐγὼ ὑπάγω . . . ἐλθεῖν. This repeats vii. 34, with the addition "and ye shall die in your sin"; i.e., undelivered by the Messiah, in the bondage of sin and reaping its fruit. He adds the reason why they should not find Him (cf. vii. 34): ὅπου . . . ἐλθεῖν. He goes to His Father and thither they cannot come, if they do not believe in Him.—Ver. 22. As before, so now, the Jews fail to understand Him, and ask: Μῆτι . . . ἐλθεῖν; "Will He kill Himself, etc.?" They gathered from the ὑπάγω that the departure He spoke of was His own action, and thought that perhaps He meant to put Himself by death beyond their reach. Many interpreters, even Westcott and Holtzmann, suppose that the hell of suicides is meant by the place where they could not come. This is refuted by Edersheim (ii. 170, note); and, besides, the meaning obviously is, that as they had no intention of dying, His supposed death would put Him beyond their reach.—Ver. 23. But disregarding the interruption, and wishing more clearly to show why they could not follow Him, and what constituted the real separation in destiny between Him and them, He says: “Ὑμεῖς . . . τούτου, “You belong to the things below, I to the things above: you are of this world, I am not of this world”. The two clauses balance and interpret one another: “things below” being equivalent to “this world”. It was because this gulf naturally separated them from Him and His destiny and because their destiny was that of the world that He had warned them.—Ver. 24. εἶπον οὖν . . . ὑμῶν. “Therefore said I unto you, ye shall die in your sins.” The emphatic word is now ἀποθανεῖσθε (cf. ver. 12); the destruction is itself put in the foreground (Meyer, Holtzmann). “For unless ye believe that I am He, ye shall, etc.” What they were required to believe is not explicitly stated (see their question, ver. 15), it is ὅτι ἐγὼ εἰμι “that I am,” which Westcott supposes has the pregnant meaning “that I am, that in me is the spring of life and light and strength”; but this scarcely suits the context. Meyer supposes that He means “that I am the Messiah”. But surely it must refer directly to what He has just declared Himself to be, “I am not of this world but of the things above” [“nämlich der ἄνωθεν Stammende; die allentscheidende Persönlichkeit,” Holtzmann]. This belief was necessary because only by attaching themselves to His teaching and person could they be delivered from their identification with this world.—Ver. 25. This only adds bewilderment to their mind, and they, not “pertly and contemptuously” (Meyer, Weiss, Holtzmann), but with some shade of impatience, ask: Σὺ τίς εἶ; “Who art Thou?” To this Jesus replies: τὴν ἀρχὴν ὃ τι καὶ λαλῶ ὑμῖν. These words are rendered in A.V. “Even the same that I said unto you from the beginning”; and in R.V. “Even that which I have also spoken unto you from the beginning”. The Greek Fathers understood τὴν ἀρχὴν as equivalent to ὄλως, a meaning it frequently bears; and they interpret the clause as an exclamation, “That I should even speak to you at all!” [ὄλως, ὅτι καὶ λαλῶ ὑμῖν, περιττόν ἐστιν. ἀνάξιοι γὰρ ἐστε παντὸς λόγου, ὡς πειρασταί, Euthymius.] With this Field compares Achilles Tatius, vi. 20, οὐκ ἀγαπᾷς ὅτι σοι καὶ λαλῶ; Art thou not content that I even condescend to speak to thee? In support of this rendering Holtzmann quotes from Clem., Hom. vi. 11, εἰ μὴ παρακολουθεῖς οἷς λέγω, τί καὶ τὴν ἀρχὴν διαλέγομαι; He even supposes that this is an echo of John, so that we have here an indication of the earliest interpretation of the words. This meaning does no violence to the words, but it is slightly at discord with the spirit of the next clause and of Jesus generally (although cf. Mk. ix. 19). Another rendering, advocated at great length by Raphel (Annot., i. 637), puts a comma after τὴν ἀρχὴν and another after ὑμῖν, and connects τὴν ἀρχὴν with πολλὰ ἔχω; “omnino, quia et loquor vobis, multa habeo de vobis loqui”. Raphel’s note is chiefly valuable for the collection of instances of the use of τὴν ἀρχὴν. A third interpretation is that suggested by the A.V., and which finds a remarkable analogue in Plautus, Captivi, III. iv. 91, “Quis igitur ille est? Quem dudum dixi a principio tibi” (Elsner). But this would require λέγω, not λαλῶ. There remains a fourth possible interpretation, that of Melanchthon, who renders “plane illud ipsum verbum sum quod loquor vobiscum”. So Luther (see Meyer); and Winer translates “(I am ἤκουσα παρ' αὐτοῦ, ταῦτα λέγω εἰς τὸν κόσμον." 27. Οὐκ ἔγνωσαν ὅτι τὸν πατέρα αὐτοῖς ἔλεγεν. 28. Εἶπεν οὖν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, xiii. 14. "Ὅταν ὑψώσητε τὸν υἱὸν τῷ ἀνθρώπῳ, τότε γνώσεσθε ὅτι ἐγὼ εἶμι· καὶ ἀπ' ἑμαυτοῦ ποιῶ οὐδέν, ἀλλὰ καθὼς ἐδίδαξέ με ὁ πατήρ μου, ταῦτα λαλῶ. 29. καὶ ὁ πέμψας με, μετ' ἐμοῦ ἔστιν· οὐκ ἀφῆκέ y Exod. xv. 26. Gen. xvi. 6. Acts vi. 2. z ii. 11. a xv. 9, 10. b 2 Mac. i. 27. Rom. vi. 18. 31. "Ἐλεγε οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς πρὸς τοὺς πεπιστευκότας αὐτῷ Ἰουδαίους, "Ἐὰν ὑμεῖς * μείνητε ἐν τῷ λόγῳ τῷ ἐμῷ, ἀληθῶς μαθηταὶ μου ἐστέ· 32. καὶ γνώσεσθε τὴν ἀλήθειαν, καὶ ἡ ἀλήθεια <sup>b</sup> ἐλευθερώσει ὑμᾶς."

23. Καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Ὑμεῖς ἐκ τῶν κάτω ἐστέ, ἐγὼ ἐκ τῶν ἄνω εἰμί· ὑμεῖς ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου τούτου ἐστέ, ἐγὼ οὐκ εἰμί ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου τούτου. 24. εἶπον οὖν ὑμῖν ὅτι ἀποθανεῖσθε ἐν ταῖς ἁμαρτίαις ὑμῶν· ἐὰν γὰρ μὴ πιστεύσητε ὅτι ἐγὼ εἰμι, ἀποθανεῖσθε ἐν ταῖς ἁμαρτίαις ὑμῶν.” 25. Ἐλεγον οὖν αὐτῷ, “Σὺ τίς εἶ;” Καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Τὴν ἀρχὴν ὃ τι<sup>1</sup> καὶ λαλῶ ὑμῖν. 26. Ἐπολλὰ ἔχω περὶ<sup>v Gen. xliii. 20. Dan. viii. 1. w xvi. 12.</sup> ὑμῶν λαλεῖν καὶ κρίνειν· ἄλλ’ ὃ πέμψας με ἀληθῆς ἐστίν, ἀγῶν ἄ

<sup>1</sup> W.H. read οτι as one word and place point of interrogation at the end of the clause.

altogether that which in my words I represent myself as being". To this Meyer and Moulton (see his note on Winer) object that τὴν ἀρχὴν only means "omnino" "prorsus" when the sentence is negative. Elsner, however, admitting that the use is rare, gives several examples where it is used "sine addita negativa". The words, then, may be taken as meaning "I am nothing else than what I am saying to you: I am a Voice; my Person is my teaching".—Ver. 26. πολλὰ ἔχω . . . "many things have I to speak and to judge about you," some of which are uttered in the latter part of this chapter.—ἀλλ' ὁ πέμψας . . . But—however hard for you to receive—these things are what are given me to say by Him that sent me, and therefore I must speak them; and not to you only but to the world εἰς τὸν κόσμον.—Ver. 27. His hearers did not identify "Him that sent me" with "the Father": Οὐκ ἔγνωσαν . . . ἔλεγεν.—Ver. 28. Therefore (οὖν) Jesus said to them, "Ὅταν . . . εἶμι, "when ye have lifted up the Son of Man, then shall ye know that I am He". ὑψώσητε has the double reference of elevation on the cross and elevation to the Messianic throne, cf. iii. 14. The people were thus to elevate Him and then they would recognise Him, Acts ii. 37, etc.—ὅτι ἐγὼ εἶμι "that I am He," i.e., "the Son of Man". What follows is not dependent on ὅτι (against Meyer, Holtzmann, Westcott); the καὶ ἀπ' ἑμαυτοῦ begins a new statement, as the present, ποιῶ, shows. The sequence of thought is: ye shall know that I am Messiah: and indeed I now act as such, for of myself I do nothing, but as my Father has taught me, so I speak. This is the present proof that He was Messiah.—Ver. 29. καὶ ὁ πέμψας . . . πάντοτε. His fidelity to the purpose of the Father that sent Him secured His perpetual presence with Him. By His entire self-abnegation and freedom from self-will He gave room to the Spirit of the Father. Or, as Westcott supposes, the ὅτι clause may give the evidence or sign of the preceding rather than its cause; and the meaning may be that the result of the Father's presence is seen in the perfect correspondence of the conduct of the Son with the will of the Father.—Ver. 30. ταῦτα . . . αὐτόν. "As He spake these things many believed on Him," not only believed what He said, but accepted Him as the Messenger of God. The statement closes one paragraph and prepares for the next, in which it is shown what this faith amounted to (Holtzmann).

Vv. 31-59. Discussion between Jesus and the Jews regarding their paternity.—Ver. 31. To those who have just been described as believing on Him Jesus went on to say, "Ἐὰν ὑμεῖς . . . ὑμᾶς. "If you"—ὑμεῖς emphasised in distinction from those who had not believed—"abide in my word"—not content with making this first step towards faith and obedience—"then"—but not till then—"are ye really my disciples."—Ver. 32. καὶ γνώσεσθε . . . ὑμᾶς. By abiding in Christ's word, making it the rule of their life and accepting Him as their Guide and Teacher, they would come to that knowledge of the truth which only experimental testing of it can bring; and the truth regarding their relation to Him and to God would turn all service and all life into liberty. Freedom, a condition of absolute liberty from all outward constraint, is only attained when man attains fellowship with God (who is absolutely free) in the truth: when that prompts man to action which prompts God. [Cf. the striking parallel in Epictetus, iv. 7. εἰς ἐμὲ οὐδεὶς ἐξουσίαν ἔχει· ἠλευθέρωμαι ὑπὸ τοῦ θεοῦ, ἔγνωκα αὐτοῦ τὰς ἐντολάς, οὐκέτι οὐδεὶς δουλα

33. Ἀπεκρίθησαν αὐτῷ, “Σπέρμα Ἀβραάμ ἐσμεν, καὶ οὐδενὶ ὄδε· c vv. 37, 39. Gal. iii. 16. δουλεύκαμεν πάποτε· πῶς σὺ λέγεις, Ὅτι ἐλεύθεροι γενήσεσθε;” d Gen. xv.
 34. Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι ὁ πᾶς e 2 Pet. ii. ὁ ποιῶν τὴν ἁμαρτίαν, δούλος ἐστι τῆς ἁμαρτίας. 35. ὁ δὲ δούλος v. 15.
 ὁ οὐ μένει ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα· ὁ υἱὸς μένει εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα. f Gen. xxi. 10. Gal. iv. 22.
 36. εἰάν οὖν ὁ υἱὸς ὑμᾶς ἐλευθερώσῃ, ὄντως ἐλεύθεροι ἔσεσθε.
 37. οἶδα ὅτι σπέρμα Ἀβραάμ ἐστε· ἀλλὰ ἤζητεῖτέ με ἀποκτείνειν, g v. 44.
 ὅτι ὁ λόγος ὁ ἐμὸς οὐ χωρεῖ ἐν ὑμῖν. 38. ἠέγω ὁ ἐώρακα παρὰ τῷ h v. 19; xii. πατρὶ μου,<sup>1</sup> λαλῶ· καὶ ὑμεῖς οὖν ὁ ἐώρακατε<sup>2</sup> παρὰ τῷ πατρὶ<sup>3</sup> ὁ ὑμῶν,<sup>3</sup> ποιεῖτε.” 39. Ἀπεκρίθησαν καὶ εἶπον αὐτῷ, “Ὁ πατὴρ

<sup>1</sup> μου omitted in BCL.

<sup>2</sup> α ἠκουσατε with  $\aleph^c$ BCKL 1, 33.

<sup>3</sup> του πατρος without ὑμων in T.Tr.W.H.R.

γαγγῆσαί με δύναται.]—Ver. 33. But this announcement, instead of seeming to the Jews the culmination of all bliss, provokes even in the πεισιτευκότες (ver. 31) a blind, carping criticism: Σπέρμα . . . γενήσεσθε; we are the seed of Abraham, called by God to rule all peoples, and to none have we ever been slaves. “The episodes of Egyptian, Babylonian, Syrian, and Roman conquests were treated as mere transitory accidents, not touching the real life of the people, who had never accepted the dominion of their conquerors or coalesced with them,” Westcott. Sayings such as “All Israel are the children of kings” were current among the people. How then could emancipation be spoken of as yet to be given them?—Ver. 34. The answer is: ἀμὴν . . . ἁμαρτίας [τῆς ἁμαρτίας is bracketed by W.H.]. The liberty meant is inward, radical, and individual. “Every one who lives a life of sin is a slave.” Cf. Rom. vi. 16, 20; 2 Pet. ii. 19; Xen., Mem., iv. 5, 3; Philo’s tract “Quod omnis probus sit liber,” and the Stoic saying “solus sapiens est liber”. The relations subsisting ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ in the house of God, the Theocracy to which they boasted to belong, must be determined by what is spiritual, by likeness to the Head of the house; “this servitude would lead to national rejection,” Edersheim. It behoves them therefore to remember this result of the generally recognised principle that sin masters the sinner and makes him a slave (ver. 35), viz., “that the slave does not abide in the house,” does not permanently inherit the promises to Abraham, and the blessedness of fellowship with God; it is the Son who abides for ever. Cf. Heb. iii.

6. The slave has no permanent footing in the house: he may be dismissed or sold. The transition which Paul himself had made from the servile to the filial position coloured his view of the Gospel, Gal. iv. 1-7; but here it is not the servile attitude towards God but slavery to sin that is in view. From this slavery only the Son emancipates, εἰάν οὖν . . . ἔσεσθε. This implies that they were all born slaves and needed emancipation, and that only One, Himself the Son, could give them true liberty.—ὄντως ἐλεύθεροι in contrast to the liberty they boasted of in ver. 33. How the Son emancipates is shown in Gal. iv. 1-7. The superficial character of the liberty they enjoyed by their birth as Jews is further emphasised in ver. 37.—Ver. 37. οἶδα . . . ὑμῖν. “I know that you are Abraham’s seed; it is your moral descent which is in question, and your conduct shows that my word, which gives true liberty (vv. 31, 32), does not find place in you.”—οὐ χωρεῖ ἐν ὑμῖν. The Greek Fathers all understand these words in the sense of A.V., “hath no place in you”. Cyril has διὰ τὴν ἐνοικήσασαν ἐν ὑμῖν ἁμαρτίαν δηλαδὴ καὶ τόπον ὥσπερ οὐκ ἔωσαν, etc. So Euthymius and Theophylact. Beza renders “non habet locum,” citing a passage from Aristotle, which Meyer disallows, because in it the verb is used impersonally. But Field has found another instance in Alciphron, Epist., iii. 7, in which χωρεῖν is used in the sense of “locum habere” (Otium Norvic., p. 67). The common meaning of χωρεῖν, “to advance,” is also quite relevant and indeed not materially different. It is frequently used for prosperous, successful progress. See Aristoph., Pax, 694, and other passages ἡμῶν Ἀβραάμ ἐστι." Λέγει αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Εἰ τέκνα τοῦ Ἀβραάμ ἦτε,<sup>1</sup> τὰ ἔργα τοῦ Ἀβραάμ ἐποιεῖτε ἄν. 40. νῦν δὲ ζητεῖτέ με ἀποκτείνειν, ἄνθρωπον ὡς τὴν ἀλήθειαν ὑμῖν λελάληκα, ἦν ἠκουσα ἵ παρὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ· τοῦτο Ἀβραάμ οὐκ ἐποίησεν. 41. ὑμεῖς ποιεῖτε τὰ ἔργα τοῦ πατρὸς ὑμῶν." Εἶπον οὖν αὐτῶ, "Ἡμεῖς ἐκ πορνείας οὐ γεγεννήμεθα<sup>2</sup>. ἓνα πατέρα ἔχομεν, τὸν Θεόν." 42. Εἶπεν οὖν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Εἰ ὁ Θεὸς πατὴρ ὑμῶν ἦν, ἠγαπάτε j Num. xvi. ἄν ἐμέ· ἐγὼ γὰρ ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐξῆλθον καὶ ἦκω· οὐδὲ γὰρ ἵ ἀπ' κίν. 42. Mt. ἐμαυτοῦ ἐλήλυθα, ἀλλ' ἐκεῖνός με ἀπέστειλε. 43. διατὶ τὴν ἑλληνικὴν xxvi. 73. τὴν ἐμὴν οὐ γινώσκετε; ὅτι οὐ δύνασθε ἀκούειν τὸν λόγον τὸν ἐμόν.

<sup>1</sup> Instead of ἦτε . . . ἐποιεῖτε ἄν W.H. read εἴτε . . . ποιεῖτε. εἴτε is found in  $\aleph$ BDL; ἐποιεῖτε without ἄν in  $\aleph$ BDEFG, with ἄν in  $\aleph$ CCKL. Certainly the intrinsically probable reading is that of T.R., especially when the νῦν δε of ver. 40 is considered.

<sup>2</sup> T.R. in CΔ, but οὐκ ἐγεννηθῆμεν in BD, adopted by Tr.W.H.R.

in Kypke; and cf. 2 Thess. iii. 1, ἵνα ὁ λόγος τρέχη. "My word meets with obstacles and is not allowed its full influence in you."—Ver. 38. "And yet the word of Christ justly claimed acceptance, for it was derived from immediate knowledge of God," Westcott.—ἐγὼ δ [or ἄ ἐγὼ, as recent editors read] . . . ποιεῖτε. "What I have seen with my Father I speak; and what ye have seen with your father ye do." He makes the statement almost as if it were a necessary principle that sons should adopt their fathers' thoughts. The οὖν might be rendered "and so"; it was because Jesus uttered what He had learned by direct intercourse with His Father that the Jews sought to slay Him. See vv. 16-19. The ἑώρακα (cp. iii. 31, 32) might seem to indicate the knowledge He had in His pre-existent state, but the next clause forbids this.—ποιεῖτε, if it is to balance λαλῶ, must be indicative.—Ver. 39. To this ambiguous but ominous utterance the Jews reply: Ὁ πατὴρ ἡμῶν Ἀβραάμ ἐστι, thereby meaning to clear themselves of the suspicion of having learned anything evil from their father. To which Jesus retorts: Εἰ τέκνα . . . ἐποιεῖτε ἄν. "If ye were Abraham's children ye would do the works of Abraham"; according to the law of ver. 38. If their origin could be wholly traced to Abraham, then their conduct would resemble his.—νῦν δὲ . . . ἐποίησεν. "But now—as the fact really is—you seek to kill me; and this has not only the guilt of an ordinary murder, but your hostility is roused against me because I have spoken to you the truth

I heard from God. It is murder based upon hostility to God. This is very different from the conduct of Abraham."—ἄνθρωπον seems to be used simply as we might use "person"—a person who: certainly, as Lampe says, it is used "sine praeiudicio deitatis". Bengel thinks it anticipates ἀνθρωπόκτονος in ver. 44, and Westcott says it "stands in contrast with of God . . . and at the same time suggests the idea of human sympathy, which He might claim from them (a man), as opposed to the murderous spirit of the power of evil"—Ver. 41. ὑμεῖς . . . ἡμῶν. You do not the works of Abraham: you do the works of your father. And yet (ver. 37) He had acknowledged them to be the children of Abraham. The only possible conclusion was that besides Abraham some other father had been concerned in producing them. This idea they repudiate with indignation: Ἡμεῖς . . . Θεόν. "We were not born of fornication: we have one father, God"; not "Abraham," as might have been expected, but "God": i.e., they claim to be the children of the promise, within the Theocracy, children of God's house (ver. 35).—Ver. 42. But this claim Jesus explodes by the same argument: Εἰ ὁ θεὸς . . . ἀπέστειλε. Were God your Father you would love me, for I am from God.—ἐξῆλθον ἐκ τοῦ θεοῦ expresses "the proceeding forth from that essential pre-human fellowship with God, which was His as the Son of God, and which took place through the incarnation," Meyer. The meaning of the expression is fixed by that with which it is contrasted in xiii. 3, xvi. 28. ἦκω is

44. ὑμεῖς ἕκ ἑκ πατρὸς τοῦ διαβόλου ἐστὲ, καὶ τὰς ἐπιθυμίας τοῦ πατρὸς ὑμῶν θέλετε ποιεῖν. ἐκεῖνος ἄνθρωποκτόνος ἦν ἀπ' ἀρχῆς, καὶ ἐν τῇ ἀληθείᾳ οὐχ ἔστηκεν· ὅτι οὐκ ἔστιν ἀλήθεια ἐν αὐτῷ. ὅταν λαλήῃ τὸ ψεῦδος, ἐκ τῶν ἰδίων λαλεῖ· ὅτι ὁ ψεύστης ἐστὶ καὶ ὁ πατὴρ αὐτοῦ. 45. ἐγὼ δὲ ὅτι τὴν ἀλήθειαν λέγω, οὐ πιστεῦτέ μοι.

1 iii. 5, 6, 31.
m Gen. iv.
20.
n 1 Jo. iii.
15. Gen.
iii. 3.
Prov. xix.
22. 1 Jo.
i. 10, etc.
Gen. iii. 5.

added, as ἐλήλυθα εἰς τὸν κόσμον in xvi. 28, almost in the sense in which it is used in the Dramatists, announcing the arrival of one of the "personae" on the stage, "I am come from such and such a place and here I am". The coming itself was the result of God's action rather than of His own: οὐδὲ . . . ἀπέστειλε. This is His constant argument, that as He came forth from God and was sent by Him, they must have welcomed Him had they been God's children. Their misunderstanding had a moral root.—διατί . . . ἐμόν. They did not recognise His speech as Divine, because they were unable to receive the message He brought. "In λαλεῖν (= loqui) the fact of uttering human language is the prominent notion; in λέγειν (= dicere) it is the words uttered, and that these are correlative to reasonable thoughts within the breast of the utterer" (Trench, Synonyms, 271). All His individual expressions and the very language He used were misunderstood, because there was in them a moral incapacity to receive the truth He delivered.—Ver. 44. This was the result and evidence of their paternity: ὑμεῖς . . . [τοῦ πατρὸς is read by all recent editors]. "Ye are of the father who is the devil." The translation, "of the father of the devil," i.e., the (Gnostic) God of the Jews, is, as Meyer says, thoroughly un-Johannine. Perhaps a slight pause before the culminating words τοῦ διαβόλου would emphasise them and show that this had been in His mind throughout the conversation. Being of this parentage they deliberately purpose [θέλετε] and not merely unintentionally are betrayed into the fulfilment of his desires. Their origin is determined by the fact that "from the first the devil was a man-slayer". To what does ἀπ' ἀρχῆς refer? Since the beginning of the human race, or since men first were killed; not since the devil's beginning. Cyril and some others think it is the first murder, that of Abel, that is in view (cf. 1 John iii. 15), but far more probably it is the introduction of death through the first sin (Wisd. ii. 23, 24). So almost all recent commentators. Some think both references are admissible (see Lücke).—καὶ ἐν τῇ ἀληθείᾳ οὐχ ἔστηκεν, "and stands not in the truth". R.V. has "and stood not"; so the Vulgate "et in veritate non stetit". W.H. adopt the same translation, reading οὐκ ἔστηκεν, the imperfect of στήκω, I stand; but good reasons against this reading are given by Thayer s.v. ἔστηκεν is the usual perfect of ἵστημι with the sense of a present. The reference therefore is not to the fall of the angels, but to the constant attitude of the devil; οὐκ ἐμμένει, Euthymius. "The truth is not the domain in which he has his footing," Meyer, Weiss. He does not adhere to the truth and live in it. The reason being, ὅτι . . . αὐτῷ, "because truth is not in him". There is not in him any craving for the truth. He is not true to what he knows. His nature is so false that ὅταν λαλήῃ τὸ ψεῦδος ἐκ τῶν ἰδίων λαλεῖ, "whenever he speaks what is false, he speaks of his own". "But the article may mean 'the lie that is natural to him,' 'his lie'" (Plummer).—ἐκ τῶν ἰδίων means that he speaks out of that which is characteristically and peculiarly his (cf. Mt. xii. 34); "because he is"—this is his character and description—"a liar and his father," i.e., he is himself a liar and the father of all liars. This is added to reflect light on the first statement of this verse. So Holtzmann and most recent interpreters. But Weiss rightly defends the reference of αὐτοῦ to ψεῦδος as in A.V. Westcott proposes to translate: "Whenever a man speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own, for his father also is a liar". Paley renders: "When (one) utters . . . he is speaking from his own, because he is a liar, and (so is) his father". Westcott's translation makes excellent sense and suits the context and gives a good meaning to the ἰδίων, but, as he himself owns, the omission of the subject (ὅταν λαλήῃ) is certainly harsh; it may be said, impossible.—Ver. 45. ἐγὼ δὲ. "But I"—in contrast to the devil—"because I speak the truth you do not believe me." Had I spoken falsehood you would have believed me, because it is your nature to live in what is false (cf. Euthymius).—Ver. 46. τίς

ρ xvi. 8 π. 46. τίς ἐξ ὑμῶν ἔλέγχει με περὶ ἁμαρτίας; εἰ δὲ ἀλήθειαν λέγω, διατί ὑμεῖς οὐ πιστεύετε μοι; 47. ὁ ὢν ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ τὰ ῥήματα τοῦ Θεοῦ ἀκούει· διὰ τοῦτο ὑμεῖς οὐκ ἀκούετε, ὅτι ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ οὐκ ἐστέ." 48. Ἀπεκρίθησαν οὖν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι καὶ εἶπον αὐτῷ, "Οὐ καλῶς λέγομεν ἡμεῖς, ὅτι Σαμαρείτης εἶ σὺ, καὶ ἰδαιμόνιον ἔχεις;"
 ρ vii. 20. 49. Ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς, "Ἐγὼ δαιμόνιον οὐκ ἔχω, ἀλλὰ τιμῶ τὸν
 r Deut. xxvii. 16. πατέρα μου, καὶ ὑμεῖς ἄτιμάζετε με. 50. ἐγὼ δὲ οὐ ζητῶ τὴν Prov. xxviii. 7. etc. Rom. ii. 23. Lk. δόξαν μου· ἔστιν ὁ ζητῶν καὶ κρίνων. 51. ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, xx. 11. s Here only: ἐάν τις τὸν λόγον τὸν ἐμὸν τηρήσῃ, θάνατον οὐ μὴ ἰθεωρήσῃ εἰς τὸν
 cp. v. 52 and Ps. αἰῶνα." 52. Εἶπον οὖν αὐτῷ οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, "Νῦν ἐγνώκαμεν ὅτι t I Sam. xv. δαιμόνιον ἔχεις. Ἀβραὰμ ἀπέθανε καὶ οἱ προφήται, καὶ σὺ λέγεις, u Heb. ii. 9. Ἐάν τις τὸν λόγον μου ἰτηρήσῃ, οὐ μὴ ἰγεύσεται ἰ θανάτου εἰς τὸν

<sup>1</sup> γενησεται in SACDL.

. . . ἁμαρτίας; Alford, who represents a number of interpreters, says: "The question is an appeal to His sinlessness of life, as evident to them all, as a pledge for His truthfulness of word". Calvin is better: "Haec defensio ad circumstantiam loci restringi debet, ac si quicquam sibi posse obici negaret, quominus fidus esset Dei minister". Similarly Bengel.—εἰ δὲ . . . μοι; "If I speak truth, why do you not believe me?" It follows from their inability to convict Him of sin, that He speaks what is true: if so, why do they not believe Him?—Ver. 47. He is believed by those who have another moral parentage, ὁ ὢν . . . ἐστέ. "He that is of God listens to the words of God," implying that the words He spoke were God's words. Their not listening proved that they were not of God. At this point the Jews break in: Οὐ . . . ἔχεις; "Say we not well that Thou art a Samaritan and hast a demon?" "In the language in which they spoke, what is rendered into Greek by 'Samaritan' would have been either Cuthi, which, while literally meaning a Samaritan, is almost as often used in the sense of 'heretic,' or else Shomroni. The latter word deserves special attention. Literally, it also means 'Samaritan'; but the name Shomron is also sometimes used as the equivalent of Ashmedai, the prince of the demons. According to the Kabbalists, Shomron was the father of Ashmedai, and hence the same as Sammael or Satan. That this was a widespread Jewish belief appears from the circumstance that in the Koran Israel is said to have been seduced into idolatry by Shomron, while in Jewish tradition this is attributed to Sammael. If therefore the term applied by the Jews to Jesus was Shomroni—and not Cuthi, 'heretic'—it would literally mean 'Child of the Devil.'" Edersheim. The ordinary interpretation of "Samaritan" yields, however, quite a relevant meaning. To His refusal to own their true Abrahamic ancestry they retort that He is no pure Jew, a Samaritan.—Ver. 49. δαιμόνιον ἔχεις, possessed, or crazed. Cf. x. 20. To this Jesus replies: Ἐγὼ . . . αἰῶνα. The ἐγὼ is emphatic in contrast to the expressed ὑμεῖς of the last clause; "I am not out of my mind, but all I do and say springs from my desire to honour my Father, while you for your part and on this very account dishonour me". This dishonour does not stir His resentment, because (ver. 50) ἐγὼ . . . μου, "I am not seeking my own glory". Cf. v. 41. Nevertheless His glory is not to be carelessly slighted and turned into reproach (Ps. iv. 2) for ἔστιν ὁ ζητῶν καὶ κρίνων, "there is who seeketh it and judgeth" (vv. 22, 23).—Ver. 51. Therefore the emphasis in the next verse, precisely as in ver. 24 of chap. v., is on "my word".—ἐάν τις . . . αἰῶνα, "if any one keeps my word, he shall never see death". For τηρεῖν see xiv. 15-23, xv. 10-20, xvii. 6, 1 John and Rev. passim; it is exactly equivalent to "keep". θεωρεῖν θάνατον occurs only here. It is probably stronger than the commoner ἰδεῖν θάνατον (Lk. ii. 26, Heb. xi. 5), "expressing fixed contemplation and full acquaintance" (Plummer); although in John this fuller meaning is sometimes not apparent.—Ver. 52. This αἰῶνα. 53. Ὅ μὴ σὺ μείζων εἶ τοῦ πατρὸς ἡμῶν Ἀβραάμ, ὅστις ν ἰν. 12. ἀπέθανε; καὶ οἱ προφῆται ἀπέθανον· τίνα σεαυτὸν σὺ ποιεῖς;”<sup>w</sup> Eccles.iii. 19. 1 Cor. vii. 19. 54. Ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς, “Ἐὰν ἐγὼ δοξάζω<sup>1</sup> ἑμαυτὸν, ἢ δόξα μου οὐδέν ἐστιν· ἐστὶν ὁ πατὴρ μου ὁ δοξάζων με, ἔν ὑμεῖς λέγετε, y With gen. here only; cp. Herod iii. 37. ὅτι Θεὸς ὑμῶν<sup>2</sup> ἐστὶ, 55. καὶ οὐκ ἐγνώκατε αὐτόν, ἐγὼ δὲ οἶδα αὐτόν· καὶ ἐὰν<sup>3</sup> εἶπω ὅτι οὐκ οἶδα αὐτόν, ἔσομαι ὅμοιος ὑμῶν, ψεύστης· z Burton, 217. ἀλλ’ οἶδα αὐτόν καὶ τὸν λόγον αὐτοῦ τηρῶ. 56. Ἀβραάμ ὁ πατὴρ ἡμῶν ἠγαλλιάσατο ἵνα ἴδῃ ἁτὴν ἡμέραν τὴν ἐμήν· καὶ εἶδε καὶ ἐχάρη.” 57. Εἶπον οὖν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι πρὸς αὐτόν, “Πεντήκοντα ἔτη 12. Lam. ii. 16. Gen. xxii. 18.

<sup>1</sup> δοξασω in  $\aleph^*cbBC^*D$ .

<sup>2</sup> T.R. in  $\aleph BD$ , ἡμῶν in ACL.

<sup>3</sup> καὶ Tr. Ti. W. H.

confirms the Jews in their opinion that He is not in His right mind,  $\aleph$  ἔγνωκαμεν . . . they seem to have now got proof of what they had suspected; “antea cum dubitatione aliqua locuti erant,” Bengel. Their proof is that whereas Jesus says that those who keep His word shall never die, Abraham died and the prophets; therefore Jesus would seem to be making Himself greater than those most highly revered personages.—Ver. 53. What did He expect them to take Him for?—τίνα σεαυτὸν σὺ ποιεῖς; For the μὴ σὺ μείζων cf. iv. 12.—Ver. 54. To their question Jesus, as usual, gives no categorical answer, but replies first by repelling the insinuation contained in their question and then by showing that He was greater than Abraham (see Plummer).—Ἐὰν ἐγὼ δοξάζω. “If I shall have glorified myself, my glory is nothing; my Father is He who glorifieth me.” He cannot get them to understand that it is not self-assertion on His part which prompts His claims, but fulfilment of His Father’s commission. This “Father” of whom He speaks and who thus glorifies Him is the same ὃν ὑμεῖς λέγετε ὅτι . . . “of whom you say that He is your God.” His witness therefore you ought to receive; and the reason why you do not is this, οὐκ ἐγνώκατε αὐτόν, ἐγὼ δὲ οἶδα αὐτόν, “you have not learned to know Him, but I know Him”. The former verb denotes knowledge acquired, by teaching or by observation; in contrast to the latter, which denotes direct and essential knowledge.—καὶ ἐὰν εἶπω . . . τηρῶ. So far from the affirmations of Jesus regarding His connection with the Father being false, He would be false, a liar and like them, were He to deny that He enjoyed direct knowledge of God. “But, on the contrary, I know Him and all I do, even that which offends you, is the fulfilment of His commission, the keeping of His word.”—Ver. 56. And as regards the connection they claim with Abraham, this reflects discredit on their present attitude towards Jesus; for Ἀβραάμ ὁ πατὴρ ἡμῶν, “Abraham in whose parentage you glory,” ἠγαλλιάσατο ἵνα ἴδῃ τὴν ἡμέραν τὴν ἐμήν, “rejoiced to see my day”. The day of Christ is the time of His earthly manifestation; τῆς ἐπιδημίας αὐτοῦ τῆς μετὰ σαρκός, Cyril. See Lk. xvii. 22-26; where the plural expresses the same as the singular here. “To see” the day is “to be present” at it, “to experience” it; cf. Eurip., Hecuba, 56, δούλειον ἡμᾶρ εἶδες, and the Homeric νόστιμον ἡμᾶρ ἰδέσθαι. ἵνα ἴδῃ cannot here have its usual Johannine force and be exegetical (Burton, Moods, etc.), nor as Holtzmann says = ὅτι ὄψοιτο, because in this case the εἶδε καὶ ἐχάρη would be tautological. Euthymius gives the right interpretation; ἠγαλλ., ἤγουν, ἐπεθύμησεν (similarly Theophylact), and the meaning is “Abraham exulted in the prospect of seeing,” or “that he should see”. This he was able to do by means of the promises given to him.—καὶ εἶδε, “and he saw it,” not merely while he was on earth (although this seems to have been the idea the Jews took up from the words, see ver. 57); for this kind of anticipation Jesus uses different language, Mt. xiii. 17, and at the utmost the O.T. saints could be described as πόρρωθεν ἰδόντες, Heb. xi. 13; but he has seen it in its actuality. This involves that Abraham has not died so as to be unconscious, ver. 52, and cf. Mk. xii. 26.—Ver. 57. This, however, the Jews completely misunderstand. They think that by asserting that Abraham saw His day, Jesus means to say that His day and the life of Abraham on earth were contemporaneous.—Πεντήκοντα . . . ἑώρακας;

b v. 5 οὕτω ἔχεις, καὶ Ἀβραὰμ ἑώρακας;” 58. Εἶπεν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, πρὶν Ἀβραὰμ γενέσθαι, ἐγὼ εἰμι.” 59.
 c v. 9. Rev. xviii. 21. “Ἦραν οὖν λίθους ἵνα βάλωσιν ἐπ’ αὐτόν. Ἰησοῦς δὲ ἔκρῦβη, d xii. 36. καὶ ἐξῆλθεν ἐκ τοῦ ἱεροῦ, διελθὼν διὰ μέσου αὐτῶν· καὶ παρήγεν a Mk. i. 16; οὕτως.<sup>1</sup>
 ii. 14. Mt. ix. 9.
 b Lev. xxv. 47. IX. 1. Καὶ ἀπαράγων εἶδεν ἄνθρωπον τυφλὸν ἔκ γενετῆς. 2.
 καὶ ἠρώτησαν αὐτὸν οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ λέγοντες, “Ραββί, τίς

<sup>1</sup> Omit διελθὼν . . . οὕτω as in  $\aleph$ BD vet. Lat. vulg. T.R. is found in  $\aleph$ cACL.

“Fifty years” may be used as a round number, sufficiently exact for their purpose and with no intention to determine the age of Jesus. But Lightfoot (Hor. Heb., 1046) thinks the saying is ruled by the age when Levites retired, see Num. iv. 3, 39: “Tu non adhuc pervenisti ad vulgarem annum superannuationis, et tunc vidisti Abrahamum?” Irenaeus (ii. 22, 5) records that the Gospel (presumably this passage) and the Presbyters of Asia Minor who had known John, testified that Jesus taught till He was forty or fifty. This idea is upheld by E. v. Bunsen (Hidden Wisdom of Christ), and even Keim is of opinion that Jesus may have lived to His fortieth year.—Ver. 58. The misunderstanding of His words elicits from Jesus the statement: πρὶν Ἀβραὰμ γενέσθαι, ἐγὼ εἰμι. “Before Abraham was born I am.” “Antequam Abraham fieret, Ego sum,” Vulgate. Plummer aptly compares Ps. xc. 2, πρὸ τοῦ ὄρη γεννηθῆναι . . . σὺ εἶ. Before Abraham came into existence I am, eternally existent. No stronger affirmation of pre-existence occurs, and Beyschlag’s subtle attempt to evade the meaning is unsuccessful.—Ver. 59. What the Jews thought of the assertion appeared in their action: ἦραν . . . αὐτόν. Believing that He was speaking sheer blasphemy and claiming equality with the great “I Am,” they sought to stone Him. For this purpose there was material ready to hand even in the Temple court, for, as Lightfoot reminds us, the building was still going on. “A stoning in the temple is mentioned by Josephus, Ant., xvii. 9, 3,” Meyer.—Ἰησοῦς δὲ ἐκρύβη καὶ ἐξῆλθεν. “But Jesus went out unperceived”; on this usage vide Winer, and cf. Thayer. Why it should be supposed that there is anything miraculous or doketic in this (Holtzmann and others) does not appear. Many in the crowd would favour the escape of Jesus. The remaining words of the chapter are omitted by recent editors

CHAPTER IX. 1—X. 22. The healing of a man born blind and the discussions arising out of this miracle.

Vv. 1-7. The cure narrated.—Ver. 1. Καὶ ἀπαράγων. “And as He passed by,” possibly, as Meyer and Holtzmann suppose, on the occasion just mentioned (viii. 59), and as He passed the gate of the Temple where beggars congregated; but the definite mention that it was a Sabbath (ver. 14) rather indicates that it was not the same day. See on x. 22.—εἶδεν . . . γενετῆς. “He saw a man blind from birth,” an aggravation which plays a prominent part in what follows. And first of all it so impresses the disciples that they ask τίς . . . γεννηθῆ; Their question implies a belief, repudiated by Jesus here and in Lk. xiii. 1-5, that each particular sickness or sorrow was traceable to some particular sin; see Job passim and Weber’s Lehren d. Talmud, p. 235. Their question seems also to imply that they supposed even a natal defect might be the punishment of the individual’s own sin. This has received five different explanations: (1) that the pre-existence of souls had been deduced from Wisd. viii. 20, “being good, I came into a body undefiled”; (2) that metempsychosis was held by some Jews (so Calvin, Beza, and see Lightfoot, p. 1048); or (3) that the unborn babe might sin, see Gen. xxv. 26, Lk. i. 41-44; or (4) that the punishment was anticipatory of the sin; or (5) that the question was one of sheer bewilderment, putting all conceivable possibilities, but without attaching any very definite meaning to the one branch of the alternative. A combination of the two last seems to fit the mental attitude of the disciples. The alternative that the man suffered for his parents’ sin was an idea which would naturally suggest itself. See Exod. xx. 5, etc.—ἵνα τυφλὸς γεννηθῆ; ἵνα expresses result, not purpose; and the form of expression is “the product of false analogy, arising from

ἡμαρτεν, οὗτος ἢ οἱ γονεῖς αὐτοῦ, ὅτι τυφλὸς γεννηθῆι ;” 3. Ἄπ- c Burton, εκρίθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Οὕτε οὗτος ἡμαρτεν οὔτε οἱ γονεῖς αὐτοῦ· ἀλλ’ ἵνα <sup>d</sup> φανερωθῆι τὰ ἔργα τοῦ Θεοῦ <sup>d</sup> ἐν αὐτῷ. 4. ἐμὲ <sup>1</sup> δεῖ ἐργάζεσθαι <sup>d</sup> τὰ ἔργα τοῦ πέμψαντός με ὅτι ἕως ἡμέρας ἐστίν· ἔρχεται νῦν, ὅτε οὐδεὶς δύναται ἐργάζεσθαι. 5. ὅταν ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ ᾧ, φῶς εἰμι τοῦ κόσμου.” 6. Ταῦτα εἰπὼν, ἔπτυσε χαμαί, καὶ ἐποίησε πηλὸν ἐκ τοῦ πτύσματος, καὶ ἐπέχρισε <sup>2</sup> τὸν πηλὸν ἐπὶ τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς τοῦ τυφλοῦ, 7. καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, “Ὑπαγε νίψαι εἰς τὴν κολυμβήθραν τοῦ Σιλωάμ,” ὃ ἐρμηνεύεται, ἀπεσταλμένος. ἀπήλθεν οὖν καὶ ἐνίψατο, καὶ ἦλθε βλέπων.

<sup>1</sup> ημας in NBD, adopted by recent editors.

<sup>2</sup> επεθηκεν in BC. W.H.R. add αυτου with NABL and delete του τυφλου, which may have been introduced to make the sense clearer.

imitation of a construction which really expresses purpose” (Burton, Moods, 218, 219).—Ver. 3. Both alternatives are rejected by Jesus, Οὕτε . . . αὐτοῦ. And another solution is suggested, ἵνα . . . αὐτῷ. Evil furthers the work of God in the world. It is in conquering and abolishing evil He is manifested. The question for us is not where suffering has come from, but what we are to do with it. Ver. 4. The law which is binding on all men Jesus enounces.—ἐμὲ δεῖ ἐργάζεσθαι . . . Work, active measures to remove suffering, are more incumbent on men than resentful speculation as to the source of suffering. As to God’s connection with evil, the practical man need only concern himself with this, that God seeks to abolish it. The time for doing so is limited, it is ἕως ἡμέρας ἐστίν, “so long as it is day,” that is, as the next clause shows, so long as life lasts. [On ἕως in N.T. see Burton, Moods, 321-330.]—ἔρχεται νῦν, suggested by the threats (vii. 59, etc.) and by the presence of the blind man.—Ver. 5. ὅταν . . . κόσμου. We should have expected ἕως and not ὅταν, and the Vulgate renders “quamdiu”. But the “when” seems to be used to suggest a time when He should not be in the world: “when I am in the world, I am the Light of the World,” as He immediately illustrated by the cure of the blind man.—Ver. 6. Ταῦτα εἰπὼν, i.e., “in this connection,” ἔπτυσε χαμαί . . . “He spat on the ground and made clay of the spittle,” “quia aqua ad manum non erat,” says Grotius; but that spittle was considered efficacious Lightfoot proves by an amusing anecdote and Wetstein by several citations. Tacitus (Hist., iv. 81) relates that the blind man who sought a cure from Vespasian begged “ut . . . oculorum orbis dignaretur respergere oris excremento”. Probably the idea was that the saliva was of the very substance of the person. Tylor (Prim. Culture, ii. 400) is of opinion the Roman Catholic priest’s touching with his spittle the ears and nostrils of the infant at baptism is a survival of the custom in Pagan Rome in accordance with which the nurse touched with spittle the lips and forehead of the week-old child. Virtue was also attributed to clay in diseases of the eye. A physician of the time of Caracalla prescribes “turgentes oculos vili circumline coeno”. That Jesus supposed some virtue lay in the application of the clay is contradicted by the fact that in other cases of blindness He did not use it. See Mk. x. 46. But if He applied the clay to encourage the man to believe, as is the likely solution, the question of accommodation arises (see Lücke). The whole process of which the man was the subject was apparently intended to deepen his faith.—Ver. 7. The application of the clay was not enough. Jesus further said: Ὑπαγε . . . ἀπεσταλμένος. Elser shows that “wash into,” νίψαι εἰς, is not an uncommon construction. But ver. ix, which gives the same command in a different form, shows that the man understood that εἰς followed ὕπαγε and not νίψαι. The pool of Siloam, supplied from the Virgin’s fountain (Is. viii. 6), lay at the south-east corner of Jerusalem in the Kidron Valley. On the opposite side of the valley lies a village Silwan representing the old name. The name is here interpreted as meaning "Sent"

8. Οἱ οὖν γείτονες καὶ οἱ θεωροῦντες αὐτὸν τὸ πρότερον ὅτι τυφλὸς ἦν, ἔλεγον, "Οὐχ οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ καθήμενος καὶ προσαιτῶν;" 9. Ἄλλοι ἔλεγον, "Ὅτι οὗτός ἐστιν." ἄλλοι δέ, "Ὅτι ὁμοίος αὐτῷ ἐστιν." Ἐκεῖνος ἔλεγεν, "Ὅτι ἐγὼ εἶμι." 10. Ἐλεγον οὖν αὐτῷ, <sup>b Mt. ix. 30.</sup> "Πῶς <sup>b</sup> ἀνεώχθησάν σου οἱ ὀφθαλμοί;" 11. Ἀπεκρίθη ἐκεῖνος καὶ εἶπεν, "Ἄνθρωπος λεγόμενος Ἰησοῦς πηλὸν ἐποίησε, καὶ ἐπέχρισέ μου τοὺς ὀφθαλμούς, καὶ εἶπέ μοι, Ὑπαγε εἰς τὴν κολυμβήθραν τοῦ Σιλῶμ, καὶ νίψαι. ἀπελθὼν δὲ καὶ νιψάμενος, ἀνέβλεψα." 12. Εἶπον οὖν αὐτῷ, "Ποῦ ἐστιν ἐκεῖνος;" Λέγει, "Οὐκ οἶδα." 13. Ἄγουσιν αὐτὸν πρὸς τοὺς Φαρισαίους, τὸν ποτε τυφλόν. 14. ἦν δὲ σάββατον, ὅτε τὸν πηλὸν ἐποίησεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ ἀνέωξεν αὐτοῦ τοὺς ὀφθαλμούς. 15. πάλιν οὖν ἡρώτων αὐτὸν καὶ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι, πῶς ἀνέβλεψεν. ὁ δὲ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, "Πηλὸν ἐπέθηκεν

<sup>1</sup> Considerable variety of reading occurs in this clause; W.H.R. adopt ἄλλοι ἐλεγον Ουχι, ἀλλα ὁμοιος αὐτω ἐστιν.

<sup>2</sup> ἠνεωχθησαν read by Tr.Ti.W.H.R. with BCDEF.

[πηλῶν, missus; not πηλῶν, missio sc. aquarum, Meyer]. The word ἀπεσταλμένος is so frequently used by Jesus of Himself that, notwithstanding what Meyer says, we naturally apply it here also to Himself, as if the noiseless Stream which their fathers had despised (Is. vii. 6) and which they could trace to its source, was a fit type of Him whom the Jews rejected because they knew His origin and because he had no external force. His influence consisted in this, that He was ἀπεσταλμένος. The blind man obeyed and received his sight. Cf. Elisha and Naaman. From the succeeding γείτονες several interpreters conclude that ἦλθε means "came" home. Needlessly.

Vv. 8-12. The people discuss the man's identity.—Ver. 8. Οἱ οὖν γείτονες . . . προσαιτῶν; "The neighbours, then," who might or might not be at that time near the man's home, "and those who formerly used to see him, that he was blind" [but προσαιτῆς is read instead of τυφλὸς by recent editors], "said, Is not this he that sits and begs?"—Ver. 9. "Others" but evidently of the same description "said, This is he". Besides those who were doubtful and those who were certain of his identity there was a third opinion uttered: "He is like him". Naturally the opened eyes would alter his appearance. The doubts as to his identity were scattered by the man's decisive ἐγὼ εἶμι.—Ver. 10. This being ascertained the next question was, Πῶς ἀνεώχθησάν σου οἱ ὀφθαλμοί; In reply the cured man relates his experience. He had ascertained Jesus' name from some bystander; and it is noticeable that he speaks of Him as one not widely known: ἄνθρωπος λεγόμενος Ἰησοῦς. ἀνέβλεψα, "I recovered sight". The man, who now saw for the first time, "uses the ordinary language of men, though in strictness it was not applicable to his own case," Watkins.

Vv. 13-34. The man is examined by the Pharisees, who eventually excommunicate him.—Ver. 13. Ἄγουσιν . . . τυφλόν. "They," some of the neighbours and others already mentioned, "bring him who had formerly been blind to the Pharisees," not to the Sanhedrim, but to an informal but apparently authoritative (ver. 34) group of Pharisees, who were members of the court.—Ver. 14. The reason of this action was that the cure had been wrought on a Sabbath. ["Prohibitum erat sputum oculo illinere Sabbato, sub notione aliquâ medicinali," Lightfoot.]—Ver. 15. πάλιν . . . ἀνέβλεψεν. πάλιν looks back to the same question put by the people, ver. 10; the καὶ serving the same purpose. Their first question admits the man's original blindness. The man's reply is simple and straightforward.—Ver. 16. And then the Pharisees introduce their charge and its implication, Οὗτος . . .

ἐπὶ τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς μου, καὶ ἐνιψάμην, καὶ βλέπω.” 16. Ἔλεγον οὖν ἐκ τῶν Φαρισαίων τινές, “Ὁὗτος ὁ ἄνθρωπος οὐκ ἔστι παρὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ, ὅτι τὸ σάββατον οὐ ἵτηρεῖ.” Ἄλλοι ἔλεγον, “Πῶς δύναται ἄνθρωπος ἀμαρτωλὸς τοιαῦτα σημεῖα ποιεῖν;” Καὶ σχίσμα ἦν ἐν αὐτοῖς. 17. Λέγουσι τῷ τυφλῷ πάλιν, “Σὺ τί λέγεις περὶ αὐτοῦ, ὅτι ἤνοιξέ σου τοὺς ὀφθαλμούς;” Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν, “Ὅτι προφήτης ἐστίν.” 18. Οὐκ ἐπίστευσαν οὖν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι περὶ αὐτοῦ, ὅτι τυφλὸς ἦν καὶ ἀνέβλεψεν, ἕως ὅτου ἐφώνησαν τοὺς γονεῖς αὐτοῦ τοῦ ἀναβλέψαντος, 19. καὶ ἠρώτησαν αὐτοὺς λέγοντες, “Οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ υἱὸς ἡμῶν, ἃν ὑμεῖς λέγετε ὅτι τυφλὸς ἐγεννήθη; πῶς οὖν ἄρτι βλέπει;” 20. Ἀπεκρίθησαν αὐτοῖς οἱ γονεῖς αὐτοῦ καὶ εἶπον, “Ὅσδαμεν ὅτι οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ υἱὸς ἡμῶν, καὶ ὅτι τυφλὸς ἐγεννήθη.” 21. πῶς δὲ νῦν βλέπει, οὐκ οἶδαμεν· ἢ τίς ἤνοιξεν αὐτοῦ τοὺς ὀφθαλμούς, ἡμεῖς οὐκ οἶδαμεν· αὐτὸς ἠλικίαν ἔχει· αὐτὸν ἐρωτήσατε, αὐτὸς περὶ αὐτοῦ λαλήσει.” 22. Ταῦτα εἶπον οἱ γονεῖς αὐτοῦ, ὅτι ἐφοβοῦντο τοὺς Ἰουδαίους· ἦδη γὰρ συνετέθειντο οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, ἵνα ἐάν τις αὐτὸν ὁμολογήσῃ Χριστὸν, ἀποσυνάγωγος γένηται. 23. διὰ τοῦτο οἱ γονεῖς αὐτοῦ εἶπον, “Ὅτι ἠλικίαν ἔχει,

1 v. 16.
Cr. Lev. xxvi. 2.

1 Eph. iv. 13.
m viii. 57;
cp. Job xxix. 18.
Dan. ii. 9.
Lk. xxii. 5.
Acts xxiii. 20.
xxiv. 9.

τηρεῖ. The miracle is not denied, rather affirmed, but it cannot be a work of God, for it has been done on Sabbath. Cf. iii. 2 and v. 16. Some of their party, however, inclined to a different conclusion, Πῶς . . . ποιεῖν; How can such a work be done at all, whether on Sabbath or any other day, by a sinner? This breach of the Sabbath law must admit of explanation. It cannot arise from opposition to God.—καὶ σχίσμα ἦν ἐν αὐτοῖς, as before among the people, vii. 43, so now among the authorities a pronounced and permanent cleft was apparent.—Ver. 17. Differing among themselves, they refer the question to the man, Σὺ τί λέγεις . . . “You, what do you say about Him, on account of His opening your eyes?” The question is not one of fact, but of inference from the fact; the ὅτι means “in that,” “inasmuch as,” and the Vulgate simply renders “Tu quid dicis de illo, qui aperuit oculos tuos?” Promptly the man replies, προφήτης ἐστίν.—Ver. 18. It now appears that their previous admission of the fact of the miracle was disingenuous and that they suspected fraudulent collusion between Jesus and the man; Οὐκ ἐπίστευσαν, “they did not believe” his account (ver. 19), ἕως ὅτου . . . βλέπει; “until they summoned his parents”.—Ver. 20. To them they put virtually three questions:

Is this your son? Was he born blind? (for though you say this of him, ὑμεῖς emphatic, we do not believe it). How does he now see? The first two questions they unhesitatingly answer: This is our son who was born blind. This answer explodes the idea of collusion.—Ver. 21. The third question they have not the means of answering, or as ver. 22 indicates, they shammed ignorance to save themselves; and refer the examiners to the man himself.—ἠλικίαν ἔχει, his parents are no longer responsible for him. Examples of the Greek phrase are given by Kypke and Wetstein from Plato, Aristophanes, and Demosthenes. αὐτὸς περὶ αὐτοῦ [better εαυτοῦ] λαλήσει.—Ver. 22. Ταῦτα . . . ἐρωτήσατε. The reluctance of the parents to answer brings out the circumstance that already the members of the Sanhedrim had come to an understanding with one another that any one who acknowledged Jesus as the Messiah should be excommunicated, ἀποσυνάγωγος γένηται. Of excommunication there were three degrees: the first lasted for thirty days; then followed “a second admonition,” and if impenitent the culprit was punished for thirty days more; and if still impenitent he was laid under the Cherem or ban, which was of indefinite duration, and which entirely cut him off from intercourse with others. He was treated

o ver. 18.
p Zech. iv.
22 times in
N. F.

αὐτὸν ἐρωτήσατε.” 24. Ἐφώνησαν οὖν ἕκ δευτέρου τὸν ἄνθρωπον ὃς ἦν τυφλὸς, καὶ εἶπον αὐτῷ, “Δὸς δόξαν τῷ Θεῷ· ἡμεῖς οἶδαμεν ὅτι ὁ ἄνθρωπος οὗτος ἀμαρτωλὸς ἐστίν.” 25. Ἀπεκρίθη οὖν ἐκεῖνος καὶ εἶπεν, “Εἰ ἀμαρτωλὸς ἐστίν, οὐκ οἶδα· ἐν οἶδα, ὅτι τυφλὸς ὦν, ἄρτι βλέπω.” 26. Εἶπον δὲ αὐτῷ πάλιν, “Τί ἐποίησέ σοι; πῶς ἤνοιξέ σου τοὺς ὀφθαλμούς;” 27. Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτοῖς, “Εἶπον ὑμῖν ἤδη, καὶ οὐκ ἤκούσατε· τί πάλιν θέλετε ἀκούειν; μὴ καὶ ὑμεῖς θέλετε αὐτοῦ μαθηταὶ γενέσθαι;” 28. Ἐλοιδόρησαν οὖν αὐτὸν, καὶ εἶπον, “Σὺ εἰ μαθητὴς ἐκείνου· ἡμεῖς δὲ τοῦ Μωσέως ἐσμὲν μαθηταί. 29. ἡμεῖς οἶδαμεν ὅτι Μωσῆς λελάληκεν ὁ Θεός· τοῦτον δὲ οὐκ οἶδαμεν πόθεν ἐστίν.” 30. Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ ἄνθρωπος καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Ἐν γὰρ τούτῳ θαυμαστόν ἐστιν, ὅτι ὑμεῖς οὐκ οἶδατε πόθεν ἐστίν, q Jas. iv. 3;

v. 16.

καὶ ἀνέφξέ μου τοὺς ὀφθαλμούς. 31. Ὁ οἶδαμεν δὲ ὅτι ἀμαρτωλῶν ὁ Θεὸς οὐκ ἀκούει· ἀλλ’ ἐάν τις θεοσεβῆς ἢ, καὶ τὸ θέλημα αὐτοῦ

r Here only;
cp. Lk. i.
70, etc.

ποιῆ, τούτου ἀκούει. 32. Ἐκ τοῦ αἰῶνος οὐκ ἠκούσθη, ὅτι ἠνοιξέ τις ὀφθαλμούς τυφλοῦ γεγεννημένου. 33. εἰ μὴ ἦν οὗτος παρὰ as if he were a leper. This, to persons so poor as the parents of this beggar, would mean ruin and death (see Edersheim, Life of Christ, ii. 183-4).—Ver. 24. Baffled by the parents the Pharisees turn again, ἐκ δευτέρου, a second time to the man and say: Δὸς δόξαν τῷ Θεῷ . . . ἐστίν. They no longer deny the miracle, but bid the man ascribe the glory of it to the right quarter; to God: not to Jesus, because they can assure him on knowledge of their own, ἡμεῖς οἶδαμεν, that He is a sinner.—Ver. 25. But they find in the man a kind of independence and obstinacy they are not used to. Εἰ ἀμαρτωλὸς . . . βλέπω. He does not question their knowledge, and he draws no express inferences from what has happened, but of one thing he is sure, that he was blind and that now he sees.—Ver. 26. Thwarted by the man's boldness and perceiving that it was hopeless to deny the fact, they return to the question of the means used. Τί ἐποίησέ σοι; At this the man loses patience. Their crafty and silly attempt to lead him into some inconsistent statement seems to him despicable, and he breaks out (ver. 27): Εἶπον . . . γενέσθαι. No more galling gibe could have been hurled at them than this man's "Are you also wishing to become His disciples?"—Ver. 28. It serves its purpose of exasperating them and bringing them to the direct expression of their feelings. Ἐλοιδόρησαν . . . ἐστίν. "They reviled him." On ἐκείνου Bengel has: "Hoc vocabulo remouent Jesum a sese".—Ver. 29. We know that

Moses was a prophet, commissioned by God to speak for Him (for λελάληκεν see Heb. i. 1); and if this man is commissioned He must show proof of His being sent from God, and not leave us in ignorance of His origin.—Ver. 30. This, in the face of the miracle, seems to the man a surprising statement: Ἐν γὰρ τούτῳ, "why, herein is that which is marvellous". τὸ θαυμαστόν is the true reading. For the use of γὰρ in rejoinders see Winer, p. 559, and Klotz, p. 242. It seems to imply an entire repudiation of what has just been said: "You utter an absurdity, for . . ." The marvel was that they should hesitate about the origin of one who had such power as was manifest in the cure wrought on him.—Ver. 31. This is elaborated in ver. 31: οἶδαμεν . . . ἀκούει. They themselves had owned it a work of God, ver. 24; but God is not persuaded or induced to give such power to sinners, but only to those who do His will. This man therefore, were He a sinner, would have been unable to do anything, not to speak of such a work as has never before been done. Watkins expresses it as a syllogism. (1) God heareth not sinners but only those who worship Him and do His will; (2) That God heareth this man is certain, for such a miracle could be performed only by divine power; (3) This man, therefore, is not a sinner but is from God.—Ver. 32. ἐκ τοῦ αἰῶνος, rather "from of old" than "since the world began". Cf. Lk. i. 70, τῶν ἀπ' αἰῶνος προφητῶν, and Acts. iii. 21, xv. 18. To this there is no reply but abuse and dismissal.—Ver. 34. Ἐν ἁμαρτίαις . . . ἔξω. "In sins thou wast wholly born, and dost thou teach us?" They refer his blindness to sin, and reproach him with his calamity. Sin, they say, was branded on the whole man; he was manifestly a reprobate. Yet we, the pure and godly, are to be taught by such a man!—ἐξέβαλον αὐτὸν ἔξω, "they cast him out," not merely from the chamber, but from communion. This is implied both in ver. 35 and all that Jesus says of the shepherds in the following paragraph.

Θεοῦ, οὐκ ἠδύνατο ποιεῖν οὐδέν." 34. Ἀπεκρίθησαν καὶ εἶπον αὐτῷ, "Ἐν ἁμαρτίαις σὺ ἐγεννήθης ὄλος, καὶ σὺ διδάσκεις ἡμᾶς;" <sup>a</sup> Ps. li. 5. Καὶ ἐξέβαλον αὐτὸν ἔξω. <sup>t</sup> vii. 23. 35. Ἦκουσεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ὅτι ἐξέβαλον <sup>u</sup> 2 Chron. αὐτὸν ἔξω· καὶ εὐρῶν αὐτὸν, εἶπεν αὐτῷ, "Σὺ πιστεύεις εἰς τὸν <sup>xxix. 16.</sup> υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ<sup>1</sup>;" 36. Ἀπεκρίθη ἐκεῖνος καὶ εἶπε, "Τίς ἐστι, <sup>I. k. xv. 12</sup> <sup>Ch. vi. 37.</sup> <sup>v</sup> i. 42, 44. κύριε, ἵνα πιστεῦσω εἰς αὐτόν;" 37. Εἶπε δὲ αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Καὶ <sup>v</sup> in. 26. ἑώρακας αὐτόν, καὶ ὁ λαλῶν μετὰ σοῦ, ἐκεῖνός ἐστιν." 38. Ὁ δὲ εἶφη, "Πιστεύω, κύριε." 39. καὶ προσεκύνησεν αὐτῷ. καὶ εἶπεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Εἰς κρίμα ἐγὼ εἰς τὸν κόσμον τοῦτον ἦλθον, ἵνα οἱ μὴ βλέποντες βλέπωσι, καὶ οἱ βλέποντες τυφλοὶ γένωνται." 40. Καὶ ἤκουσαν ἐκ τῶν Φαρισαίων ταῦτα οἱ ὄντες μετ' αὐτοῦ, καὶ εἶπον αὐτῷ, "Μὴ καὶ ἡμεῖς τυφλοὶ ἐσμεν;" 41. Εἶπεν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Εἰ τυφλοὶ ἦτε, οὐκ ἂν εἶχετε ἁμαρτίαν· νῦν δὲ λέγετε, Ὅτι <sup>xv. 22, 24.</sup> βλέπομεν· ἡ ὅν ἁμαρτία ὑμῶν μένει.

<sup>1</sup> Θεου in Al. XΓΔ Lat. (vet. vulg.) Syrr. (Pesh. Harcl. Hier.) Memph. Goth. Arm. Aeth., but ἀνθρώπου in ἘΑΒ Theb., adopted by Ti. W. H.

Ver. 35-X. 21. The good and the hireling shepherds.—Ver. 35. Ἦκουσεν . . . The action of the Pharisees threw the man on the compassion of Jesus: "He heard that they had cast him out," and He knew the reason; therefore, εὐρῶν αὐτόν, "when He found him," as He wished and sought to do, His first question was: Σὺ . . . Θεοῦ; Perhaps a slight emphasis lies in the Σὺ. "Dost thou believe in the Messiah?"—Ver. 36. The man's answer shows that he was willing to believe in the Messiah if he could identify Him; and having already declared Jesus to be a prophet, he believed that He could tell him who the Messiah was. It may be taken for granted that although he had not seen Jesus since recovering his sight, he knew somehow that he was speaking to the person who had healed him; and was perhaps almost prepared for the great announcement (ver. 37): Καὶ ἑώρα-κας αὐτόν, "Thou hast both seen Him," no doubt with a reference to the blessing of restored eyesight; καὶ . . . ἐστιν. This direct revelation, similar to that given to the Samaritan woman (iv. 26), was elicited by the pitiable condition of the man as an outcast from the Jewish community, and by the perception that the man was ripe for faith.—Ver. 38. Ὁ δὲ . . . αὐτῷ. He promptly uttered his belief and "worshipped" Jesus. In this Gospel προσκυνεῖν is used of the worship of God: the word is, however, susceptible of a somewhat lower degree of adoration (Mt. xviii. 26); but it includes the acknowledgment of supremacy and a complete submission.—Ver. 39. Summing up the spiritual significance of the miracle Jesus said: Εἰς κρίμα . . . γένωνται. "For judgment," for bringing to light and exhibiting in its consequences the actual inward state of men; "that those who see not may see," that is, that those who are conscious of their blindness and grieved on account of it may be relieved; while those who are content with the light they have lose even that. With a kind of sad humour He points out how easily felt blindness is removed, but how obstinately blind is presumed knowledge. The blind man now saw, because he knew he was blind and used the means Jesus told him to use: the Pharisees were stone-blind to the world Jesus opened to them, because they thought that already they knew much more than He did.—Ver. 40. Some of the Pharisees overheard His words, and unconsciously a 3 Mac. i. 7. X. 1. "ΑΜΗΝ ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὁ μὴ εἰσερχόμενος διὰ τῆς θύρας

 b Ubad. 5. εἰς τὴν αὐλήν τῶν προβάτων, ἀλλὰ ἀναβαίνων ἂ ἄλλαχόθεν, ἐκεῖνος c Gen. 31. 2. κλέπτῃς ἐστὶ καὶ ληστής. 2. ὁ δὲ εἰσερχόμενος διὰ τῆς θύρας, 1 Pet. ii. 25. ποιμὴν ἐστὶ τῶν προβάτων. 3. τοῦτῳ ὁ ἄθυρρός ἀνοίγει, καὶ τὰ d xviii. 16, 17. πρόβατα τῆς φωνῆς αὐτοῦ ἀκούει, καὶ τὰ ἴδια πρόβατα καλεῖ ὁ κατ' 3 Jo. 15. ἔζεκ. xx. ὄνομα, καὶ ἔξάγει αὐτά. 4. καὶ ὅταν τὰ ἴδια πρόβατα <sup>1</sup> ἐκβάλῃ, f 6. Cf. Zech. ix. 16. ἔμπροσθεν αὐτῶν πορεύεται· καὶ τὰ πρόβατα αὐτῷ ἀκολουθεῖ, ὅτι
 h Mk. i. 12. οἶδασι τὴν φωνὴν αὐτοῦ. 5. ἂ ἄλλοτρίῳ δὲ οὐ μὴ ἀκολουθήσωσιν, 1 Job xix. 13; 1 Kings viii. 41, etc. ἀλλὰ φεύξονται ἀπ' αὐτοῦ· ὅτι οὐκ οἶδασι τῶν ἀλλοτρίων τὴν φωνήν."

<sup>1</sup> T. R. in ΑΓΔ, but πάντα in Ξ<sup>ca</sup>BDLX 1, 33.

proved their truth by saying with indignant contempt: μὴ καὶ ἡμεῖς τυφλοὶ ἐσμεν; To which Jesus, taking them on their own ground, replies: Εἰ τυφλοὶ ἦτε, οὐκ ἂν εἴχετε ἁμαρτίαν. If ye were ignorant, as this blind man was, aware of your darkness and anxious to be rid of it, your ignorance would excuse you; but now by all your words and actions you proclaim that you are satisfied with the light you have, therefore you cannot receive that fuller light which I bring and in which is deliverance from sin, and must therefore remain under its bondage. Cf. viii. 21.

CHAPTER X.—Vv. 1-21. The Good Shepherd and the hirelings. This paragraph is a continuation of the conversation which arose out of the healing of the blind man. Instead of being introduced by any fresh note of time, it is ushered in by ἀμὴν ἀμὴν, which is never found in this Gospel at the commencement of a discourse. The subject also is directly connected with the miracle and its consequences. Jesus explains to the excommunicated man who it is that has power to give entrance to the true fold or to exclude from it. As usual, the terms and tenor of the teaching are interpreted by the incident which gave rise to it.—Ver. 1. Ἀμὴν . . . ληστής. The αὐλή, or sheepfold, into which the sheep were gathered for safety every night, is described as being very similar to folds in some parts of our own country; a walled, unroofed enclosure. The θύρα, however, is not as with us a hurdle or gate, but a solid door heavily barred and capable of resisting attack. This door is watched by a θυρωρός [door-guard, for root "or" vide Spratt's Thucyd., iii. p. 132], who in the morning opened to the shepherd. He who does not appeal to the θυρωρός but climbs up over the wall by some other way (lit.

from some other direction: ἀλλαχόθεν, which is used in later Greek for the Attic ἄλλοθεν) is κλέπτῃς καὶ ληστής, a "thief" who uses fraud and a "robber" who is prepared to use violence. That is to say, his method of entrance, being illegitimate, declares that he has no right to the sheep.—Ver. 2. On the other hand, ὁ δὲ εἰσερχόμενος . . . προβάτων, "but he that entereth by the door is shepherd of the sheep". The shepherd is known by his using the legitimate mode of entrance. What that is, He does not here explicitly state. The shepherd is further recognised by his treatment of the sheep, τὰ ἴδια πρόβατα καλεῖ [better φωνεῖ] κατ' ὄνομα, "his own sheep he calls by name", ἴδια perhaps as distinguished from others in the same fold; perhaps merely a strong possessive. As we have names for horses, dogs, cows, so the Eastern shepherds for their sheep. ["Many of the sheep have particular names," Van Lennep, Bible Lands, i. 189. It was also a Greek custom to name sheep, and Wetstein quotes from Longus, ὁ δὲ Δάφνης ἐκάλεσέ τινας αὐτῶν ὀνομαστί.]—ὅταν . . . αὐτοῦ. When he has put all his own out of the fold, they follow him, because they know his voice: the shepherd walking in front as is still the custom in the East. This method cannot be adopted by strangers "because the sheep know not the voice of strangers". "There is a story of a Scotch traveller who changed clothes with a Jerusalem shepherd and tried to lead the sheep; but the sheep followed the shepherd's voice and not his clothes." Plummer. So that the shepherd's claim is justified not only by his method of entrance but by his knowledge of the names of the individual sheep and by their knowledge of him and confidence in him. The different methods are illustrated in Andrewes and Laud, the former saying:

6. Ταύτην τὴν <sup>1</sup> παροιμίαν εἶπεν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς· ἐκαίνοι δὲ οὐκ ἔγνωσαν τίνα ἦν ἃ ἐλάλει αὐτοῖς. xvi. 25. 2
Pet. ii. 22

7. Εἶπεν οὖν πάλιν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Ἀμήν ἀμήν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι ἐγὼ εἰμι ἡ θύρα τῶν προβάτων. 8. πάντες ὅσοι πρὸ ἐμοῦ ἦλθον, κλέπται εἰσὶ καὶ λησταί· ἀλλ’ οὐκ ἤκουσαν αὐτῶν τὰ πρόβατα. j Num. xxvii. 17. Acts x. 17. xi. 7. L. xv. 23. Mac. vii. 19.

9. ἐγὼ εἰμι ἡ θύρα· δι’ ἐμοῦ ἐάν τις εἰσέλθῃ, σωθήσεται, <sup>1</sup> καὶ κ εἰσελεύσεται καὶ ἐξελεύσεται, καὶ νομὴν εὐρήσει. 10. ὁ κλέπτης οὐκ ἔρχεται εἰ μὴ ἵνα κλέψῃ καὶ <sup>2</sup> θύσῃ καὶ ἀπολέσῃ· ἐγὼ ἦλθον

“Our guiding must be mild and gentle, else it is not duxisti, but traxisti, drawing and driving and no leading”; the latter, of whom it was said that he “would never convince an opponent if he could suppress him”. See Ottley’s Andrewes, 159.—Ver. 6. The application of the parable was sufficiently obvious; but ταύτην . . . αὐτοῖς. παροιμία [παρά, οἶμος, out of the way or wayside] seems more properly to denote “a proverb”; and the Book of Proverbs is named in the Sept. αἱ παροιμίαι or παροιμίαι Σαλωμώντος; and Aristotle, Rhetor., 3, 11, defines παροιμίαι as μεταφοραὶ ἀπ’ εἶδους ἐπ’ εἶδος. But παροιμία and παραβολή came to be convertible terms, both meaning a longer or shorter utterance whose meaning did not lie on the surface or proverbial sayings: the former term is never found in the Synoptic Gospels, the latter never found in John. [Further see Hatch, Essays in Bibl. Greek, p. 64; and Abbot’s Essays, p. 82.] This parable the Pharisees did not understand. They might have understood it, for the terms used were familiar O.T. terms; see Ezek. xxxiv., Ps. lxxx. But as it had been spoken for their instruction as well as for the encouragement of the man whom they had cast out of the fold, (ver. 7) εἶπεν οὖν πάλιν, Jesus therefore began afresh and explained it to them.—ἐγὼ εἰμι ἡ θύρα τῶν προβάτων. I, and no other, am the door of the sheep. [Cf. the Persian reformer who proclaimed himself the “Bâb,” the gate of life.] Through me alone can the sheep find access to the fold. Primarily uttered for the excommunicated man, these words conveyed the assurance that instead of being outcast by his attachment to Jesus he had gained admittance to the fellowship of God and all good men. But the Pharisees but Jesus could admit to or reject from the fold of God.—Ver. 8. In contrast to Jesus, πάντες . . . λησταί, “all who came before me,” i.e., all who came before me, claiming to be what I am and to give to the sheep what I give. The prophets pointed forward to Him and did not arrogate to themselves His functions. Only those could be called “thieves and robbers” who had come before the Shepherd came, as if in the night and without His authority. It must have been evident that the hierarchical party was meant. [The inexactness of contrasting the “door” rather than the Shepherd with the “thieves and robbers” who came before Jesus, only emphasises the fact that the reality was more prominent than the figure in the mind of the speaker.] Those, however, who had tried to assume the functions of the Shepherd had failed; because οὐκ ἤκουσαν αὐτῶν τὰ πρόβατα, the people of God had not listened to them. They no doubt assumed authority over the people of God and compelled obedience, but the true children of God did not find in their voice that which attracted and led them to pasture.—Ver. 9. ἐγὼ . . . εὐρήσει. With emphasis He reiterates: “I am the door: through me, and none else, if a man enter he shall be saved, and shall go in and out and find pasture”. Meyer and others supply “any shepherd” as the nominative to εἰσέλθῃ, which may agree better with the form of the parabolic saying, but not so well with the substance. Jesus is the Door of the sheep, not of the shepherd; and the blessings promised, σωθήσεται, κ. τ. λ., are proper to the sheep. These blessings are three: deliverance from peril, liberty, and sustenance. For the phraseology see the remarkable passage Num. xxvii. 15-21, which Holtzmann misapplies, neglecting the twenty-first verse. To “go out and in” is the common O.T. expression to denote the free activity of daily life, Jer. xxxvii. 4, Ps. cxxi. 8, Deut. xxviii. 6.—Ver. 10. The tenth verse introduces a new contrast, between the good

1 vñ. 15, 17, ἵνα ζῶν ἔχωσι, καὶ περισσὸν ἔχωσιν. 11. Ἐγὼ εἰμι ὁ ποιμὴν ὁ
 18; xlii.
 37; xv. 13. καλὸς· ὁ ποιμὴν ὁ καλὸς τὴν ἰψυχὴν αὐτοῦ τίθησιν ὑπὲρ τῶν
 m Gen. xlix. 27. προβάτων. 12. ὁ μισθωτὸς δὲ, καὶ οὐκ ᾧν ποιμὴν, οὐ οὐκ εἰσὶ τὰ Ecclus. xlii. 17. πρόβατα ἴδια, θεωρεῖ τὸν λύκον ἐρχόμενον, καὶ ἀφήσει τὰ πρόβατα, n Jer. x. 21. καὶ φεύγει· καὶ ὁ μ<sup>m</sup> λύκος ἀρπάξει αὐτὰ, καὶ ὁ σ<sup>s</sup> σκορπίζει τὰ πρόβατα.
 1 Mac. vi. 54. Jer. xlii. 1. 13. ὁ δὲ ὁ μισθωτὸς φεύγει,<sup>1</sup> ὅτι μισθωτὸς ἐστὶ, καὶ οὐ ἔμελει αὐτῷ Mt. xii. 30; and see Thayer. o Exod. xii. 45. Lev. xxii. 10, etc. Mk. i. 20. p Wisd. xii. 13. Tob. x. 5.

<sup>1</sup> The verse closes at σκορπίζει, the following six words being deleted in  $\mathfrak{N}$ B $\mathfrak{D}$ L 1, 33, but the clause must at any rate be mentally supplied.

shepherd and the thieves and hirelings. —ὁ κλέπτης . . . ἀπολέση. The thief has but one reason for his coming to the fold: he comes to steal and kill and destroy; to aggrandise himself at the expense of the sheep. θύση has probably the simple meaning of "kill," as in Acts x. 13, Mt. xxii. 4; cf. Deut. xxii. 1. With quite other intent has Christ come: ἐγὼ ἦλθον . . . ἔχωσιν, that instead of being killed and perishing the sheep "may have life and may have abundance". This may mean abundance of life, but more probably abundance of all that sustains life. περιττὸν ἔχειν in Xen., Anab., vii. 6, 31, means "to have a surplus". "The repetition of ἔχωσιν gives the second point a more independent position than it would have had if καὶ alone had been used. Cf. ver. 18; Xen., Anab., i. 10, 3, καὶ ταύτην ἔσωσαν καὶ ἄλλα . . . ἔσωσαν," Meyer. Cf. Ps. xxiii. 1.—Vv. 11-18. In these verses Jesus designates Himself "the Good Shepherd" and emphasises two features by which a good shepherd can be known: (1) his giving his life for the sheep, and (2) the reciprocal knowledge of the sheep and the shepherd. These two features are both introduced by the statement (ver. 11) ἐγὼ εἰμι ὁ ποιμὴν ὁ καλός, "the good shepherd"; "good" probably in the sense in which we speak of a "good" painter or a "good" architect; one who excels at his business. The definite article claims this as a description applicable to Himself alone. Cf. Ps. xxiii., Is. xl. 11, Ezek. xxxiv., etc. For other descriptions of the ideal shepherd, see Plato's Repub., p. 345, and the remarkable passage in the Politicus, 271-275, and Columella (in Wetstein), "Magister autem pecoris acer, durus, strenuus, laboris patientissimus, alacer atque audax esse debet; et qui per rupes, per solitudines atque vepres facile vadat".—ὁ ποιμὴν ὁ καλός, the good shepherd, whoever he is, τὴν ψυχὴν . . . προβάτων, "lays down his life for the sheep". τίθεται τὴν ψυχὴν is not a classical phrase, but in Hippocrates occurs a similar expression, Μαχάων γέ τοι ψυχὴν κατέθετο ἐν τῇ Τρωάδι, Kyprke. Ponere spiritum occurs in Latin. Of the meaning there is no doubt. Cf. xiii. 37.—ὑπὲρ τῶν προβάτων, "for the good of the sheep," that is, when the welfare of the sheep demands the sacrifice of life, that is freely made. Here it is evident Jesus describes "the good shepherd" as revealed in Himself.—Ver. 12. ὁ μισθωτὸς δὲ [δὲ is omitted by recent editors] . . . πρόβατα. In contrast to the good shepherd stands now not the robber but a man in some respects better, a hireling or hired hand (Mark i. 20), not a shepherd whose instincts would prompt him to defend the sheep, and not the owner to whom the sheep belong. So long as there is no danger he does his duty by the sheep for the sake of his wages, but when he sees the wolf coming he abandons the sheep and flees. "The wolf" includes all that threatens the sheep. In Xen., Mem., ii. 7, 14, the dog says to the sheep: ἐγὼ γάρ εἰμι ὁ καὶ ὑμᾶς αὐτὰς σώζων, ὥστε μῆτε ὑπ' ἀνθρώπων κλέπτεσθαι, μῆτε ὑπὸ λύκων ἀρπάζεσθαι.—καὶ ὁ λύκος . . . σκορπίζει, "and the wolf carries them off and scatters them"; cf. Mt. ix. 36; a general description careless of detail. Bengel says "lacerat quas potest, ceteras dispergit".—Ver. 13. ὁ δὲ μισθωτὸς φεύγει, not, as in ver. 12, ὁ μισθ. δὲ, "because the antithesis of the hireling was there first brought forward and greater emphasis was secured by that position". Meyer. Klotz, p. 378, says that δὲ is placed after more words than one "ubi quae praeposita particulae verba sunt aut aptius inter se conjuncta sunt aut ita comparata, ut summum pondus in ea sententia obtineant". He flees ὅτι μισθωτὸς ἐστὶ, his nature is περὶ τῶν προβάτων. 14. ἐγὼ εἰμι ὁ ποιμὴν ὁ καλὸς· καὶ γινώσκω τὰ ἐμά, καὶ γινώσκονται ὑπὸ τῶν ἐμῶν,<sup>1</sup> 15. καθὼς γινώσκει με ὁ πατήρ, καὶ γὰρ γινώσκω τὸν πατέρα· καὶ τὴν ψυχὴν μου τίθημι ὑπὲρ τῶν προβάτων. 16. καὶ ἄλλα πρόβατα ἔχω, ἃ οὐκ ἔστιν ἐκ τῆς αὐλῆς ταύτης· κἀκεῖνά με δεῖ ἄγαγεῖν, καὶ τῆς φωνῆς μου ἀκούσ-σῃσι· καὶ γενήσεται μία ποίμνη, ἑῖς ποιμὴν. 17. διὰ τοῦτο ὁ πατήρ με ἀγατᾷ, ὅτι ἐγὼ τίθημι τὴν ψυχὴν μου, ἵνα πάλιν λάβω

Is. ix. 9.
Ezek. xxxvii. 24.

<sup>1</sup> T. R. is authenticated by AXΓΔ 33, syr., etc.; the active γινώσκουσιν με τα εμα is the reading of ῥBL, it. vulg. "cognoscunt me meae". This gives a better balanced sentence, though the sense is the same.

betrayed by his conduct. He does not care for the sheep but for himself. He took the position of guardian of the sheep for his own sake, not for theirs; and the presence of the wolf brings out that it is himself, not the sheep, he cares for.—Ver. 14. The second mark of the good shepherd is introduced by a repetition of the announcement: ἐγὼ . . . καλός. And this second mark is not stated in general terms applicable to all good shepherds, but directly of Himself: ἐγὼ εἰμι . . . καὶ γινώσκω τὰ ἐμά, καὶ γινώσκονται ὑπὸ τῶν ἐμῶν. There is a mutually reciprocal knowledge between Jesus and His sheep. And the existence of this knowledge is the proof that He is the Shepherd. The shepherd's claim is authenticated by his knowledge of the marks and ways of the sheep, and by its knowledge of him as shown in its coming to his voice and submission to his hand. Augustine says: "They sometimes do not know themselves, but the shepherd knows them".—Ver. 15. This reciprocal knowledge is so sure and profound that it can only be compared to the mutual knowledge of the Father and the Son: καθὼς . . . πατέρα. He then applies to Himself what had been stated in general of all good shepherds in ver. 11; and ver. 16 might suitably have begun with the words "And my life I lay down for the sheep". This statement is, however, prompted by His reference to His knowledge of the Father. He knows it is the Father's will that He should lay down His life. See vv. 17 and 18.—Ver. 16. But the mention of His death suggests to Him the wide extent of its consequences. ἄλλα πρόβατα ἔχω, "other sheep I have"; not that they are already believers in Him, but "His" by the Father's design and gift. Cf. xvii. 7 and Acts xviii. 10. They are only negatively described: ἃ οὐκ ἔστιν ἐκ τῆς αὐλῆς ταύτης; "this fold" is evidently that which contained the Jews who already had received Him as their Shepherd; and the other sheep which are not "of" (ἐκ, as frequently in John, "belonging to"; not as Meyer renders) this fold are the Gentiles.—κἀκεῖνα . . . ποιμὴν "those also I must bring and they shall listen to my voice, and they shall so amalgamate with the Jewish disciples that there shall be one flock, one shepherd". The listening to Christ's voice brings the sheep to Him, and this being what constitutes the flock, the flock must be one as He is one. But nothing is said of unity of organisation. There may be various folds, though one flock.—μία ποίμνη, εἷς ποιμὴν, the alliteration cannot be quite reproduced in English. For the emphasis gained by omitting καὶ cf. Eurip., Orestes, 1244, τρισσοῖς φίλοις γὰρ εἷς ἀγὼν, δίκη μία. The A. V. wrongly translated "one fold," following the Vulgate, which renders both αὐλή and ποιμὴν by "ovile" ["qua voce non grex ipse sed ovium stabulum declaratur; quod unum vix unquam fuit, et non modo falso, sed etiam stulte impudenter Romae collocatur". Beza]. This is corrected in R. V. The old Latin versions had "unus grex"; see Wordsworth's and White's Vulg.—Ver. 17. At this point the exposition of the functions of the good shepherd terminates; but as a note or appendix Jesus adds διὰ τοῦτο, "on this account," i.e., because I lay down my life for the sheep (ver. 15 and following clause) does my Father love me. The expressed ἐγὼ serves to bring out the spontaneity of the surrender. And this free sacrifice or death is justified by the object, ἵνα πάλιν λάβω αὐτήν. He dies, not to remain in death and so leave the sheep defenceless, but to live again, to resume life in pursuance of the object for which He had given it. The freedom of the sacrifice is proved by His taking

- s v. 19. αὐτήν. 18. οὐδείς αἶρει αὐτήν ἀπ' ἐμοῦ, ἀλλ' ἐγὼ τίθημι αὐτήν ἄπ' ἐμαυτοῦ. ἔξουσίαν ἔχω θεῖναι αὐτήν, καὶ ἐξουσίαν ἔχω πάλιν λαβεῖν αὐτήν. ταύτην τὴν ἐντολὴν ἔλαβον παρὰ τοῦ πατρός μου." 19. Ὁ Σχίσμα οὖν πάλιν ἐγένετο ἐν τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις διὰ τοὺς λόγους τούτους. 20. ἔλεγον δὲ πολλοὶ ἐξ αὐτῶν, "Δαιμόνιον ἔχει καὶ μαίνεται· τί αὐτοῦ ἀκούετε;" 21. Ἄλλοι ἔλεγον, "Ταῦτα τὰ ῥήματα οὐκ ἔστι δαιμονιοζομένου· μὴ δαιμόνιον δύναται τυφλῶν ὀφθαλμοὺς ἀνοίγειν;" 22. ἘΓΕΝΕΤΟ Δὲ<sup>1</sup> τὰ ἐγκαίνια ἐν τοῖς Ἱεροσολύμοις, καὶ χειμῶν ἦν· 23. καὶ περιεπάτει ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ ἐν τῇ ὄστῳα τοῦ Σολομῶντος. 24. Ἐκύκλωσαν οὖν αὐτὸν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, καὶ ἔλεγον αὐτῷ, "Ἄ"Εως πότε τὴν ψυχὴν ἡμῶν αἶρες; εἰ σὺ εἶ ὁ Χριστὸς, εἰπέ" Mt. xvii. 17. Rev. vi. 10, only in N.T. b Ezek. xxiv. 25.

<sup>1</sup> τοτε is read instead of δε by W.H. on the authority of BL 33 and some versions. This reading would connect this paragraph with the foregoing, and the interval of two months between the Feast of Tabernacles and Dedication would be placed between chs. viii. and ix. It has been suggested that τα εγκαίνια may here mean the Dedication of Solomon's Temple, which coincided with the Feast of Tabernacles. This is not likely. The reading of T.R. is strongly authenticated, being found in MSAD and most other uncials, vulg. goth. syr., etc.

His life again. He was not compelled to die.—Ver. 18. οὐδείς . . . ἐμαυτοῦ. He did not succumb to the machinations of His foes. To the last He was free to choose another exit from life; Mt. xxvi. 53. He gave His life freely, perceiving that this was the Father's will: ἐξουσίαν . . . μου. Others have only power to choose the time or method of their death, and not always that: Jesus had power absolutely to lay down His life or to retain it. Others have no power at all to resume their life after they had laid it down. He has. This freedom, as Weiss remarks, does not clash with the instrumentality of the Jews in taking His life, nor with the power of God in raising Him again.—ταύτην τὴν ἐντολὴν. "This commandment" thus to dispose of His life and to resume it He has received from the Father. In this as in all else He is fulfilling the will and purpose of God.

Vv. 19-21. The result of this discourse briefly described.—Ver. 19. As usual, diverse judgments were elicited, and once more a division of opinion appeared, Σχίσμα οὖν πάλιν ἐγένετο . . . Many thought Him possessed and mad, as in Mk. iii. 21; cf. οὐ μαίνομαι of Paul, Acts xxvi. 24. Others took the more sensible view. These words they had heard were not the wild exclamations and ravings they usually heard from demoniacs; and His acts, such as opening the blind man's eyes, were not within the compass of a demon.

Vv. 22-39. Sayings of Jesus at the Feast of Dedication.—Ver. 22. Ἐγένετο δὲ τὰ ἐγκαίνια. The ἐγκαίνια (Ezra vi. 16) was the annual celebration of the re-consecration of the Temple by Judas Maccabaeus after its defilement by Antiochus Epiphanes (i Macc. i. 20-60, iv. 36-57).—ἐν Ἱεροσολύμοις. The feast might be celebrated elsewhere, and the place may be specified because Jesus had been absent from Jerusalem and now returned.—χειμῶν ἦν, not "it was stormy weather" (Plummer) but "it was winter"; inserted for the sake of Gentile readers and to explain why Jesus was teaching under cover. The feast was held in December, the 25th, Chisleu. See Edersheim, Life of Jesus, ii. 226.—καὶ περιεπάτει . . . Σολομῶντος [better Σολομῶνος].—Ver. 23. For the sake of shelter Jesus was walking with His disciples [περιεπάτει] in Solomon's Porch, a cloister on the east side of the Temple area (Joseph., Antiq., xx. 9, 7) apparently reared on some remaining portions of Solomon's building.—Ver. 24. Here the Jews ἐκύκλωσαν αὐτόν, "ringed Him round," preventing His escape and with hostile purpose; cf. Plutarch's Them., xii. 3. Their attitude corresponded to the peremptory ἡμῖν ἑπαρρησία.” 25. Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Εἶπον ὑμῖν, c xi. 14; xvi. 25.

καὶ οὐ πιστεύετε. τὰ ἔργα ἃ ἐγὼ ποιῶ ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι τοῦ πατρὸς μου, ταῦτα μαρτυρεῖ περὶ ἐμοῦ· 26. ἀλλ’ ὑμεῖς οὐ πιστεύετε· οὐ γὰρ ἔστε ἐκ τῶν προβάτων τῶν ἐμῶν, καθὼς εἶπον ὑμῖν. 27. τὰ πρόβατα τὰ ἐμὰ τῆς φωνῆς μου ἀκούει, καὶ γὰρ γινώσκω αὐτὰ· καὶ ἀκολουθοῦσί μοι, 28. καὶ γὰρ ζωὴν αἰώνιον δίδωμι αὐτοῖς· καὶ οὐ μὴ ἀπόλωνται εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα, καὶ οὐχ <sup>d</sup> ἄρπάσει τις αὐτὰ ἐκ τῆς χειρὸς d Ps. vii. 2.
2 Sam.
xxiii. 21.
Jo. vi. 15.
μου. 29. ὁ πατὴρ μου ὃς δέδωκέ μοι, μεῖζων<sup>1</sup> πάντων ἐστί· καὶ οὐδεὶς δύναται ἄρπάξαι ἐκ τῆς χειρὸς τοῦ πατρὸς μου. 30. ἐγὼ

<sup>1</sup> Instead of ος and μεῖζων of T.R. ο and μεῖζον are read by Tr. Ti. W. H. following [for ο] ℵBL and [for μεῖζον] AB and versions. This reading seems exegetically impossible. See Weiss. It gives a sense irrelevant to the passage. “That which my Father has given me is greater than all.” Very possibly μεῖζον was originally read, cp. Mt. xii. 6, and ος may have been changed into ο through a misunderstanding of μεῖζον.

character of their demand: Ἔως πότε τὴν ψυχὴν ἡμῶν αἰρεῖς; Beza renders αἰρεῖς by “suspensis, i.e., anxiam et suspensam tenes?” For which Elsner blames him and prefers “why do you kill us with delay?” But αἰρω occurs not infrequently in the sense of “disturb”. Soph., Oed. Tyr., 914, αἰρεῖ θυμὸν Οἰδίπους, Oedipus excites his soul; Eurip., Hecluba, 69, τί ποτ’ αἰρομαι ἔννοχος οὕτω δέμασι; cf. Virgil, Aeneid, iv. 9, “quae me suspensam insomnia terrent?” “Why do you keep us in suspense?” is a legitimate translation. “If Thou art the Christ tell us plainly.”—παρρησία, in so many words, devoid of all ambiguity; cf. xvi. 29. This request has a show of reasonableness and honesty, as if they only needed to hear from Himself that He was the Christ. But it is never honest to ask for further explanation after enough has been given. Nothing more surely evinces unwillingness to believe. Besides, there was always the difficulty that, if He categorically said He was the Christ, they would understand Him to mean the Christ of their expectation.—Ver. 25. Therefore He replies: “I told you and ye believe not. The works which I do in my Father’s name, these witness concerning me.” These works tell you what I am. They are works done in my Father’s name, that is, wholly as His representative. These show what kind of Christ He sends you and that I am He.—Ver. 26. “But you on your part do not believe”—the reason being that you are not of the number of my sheep. Had you been of my sheep you must have believed; because my sheep have these two characteristics, (ver. 27) they hear my voice and they follow me: (ver. 28) and these characteristics meet a twofold response in me, “I know them” and “I give them life eternal”. καὶ γὰρ in each case emphatically exhibits the response of Christ to believers. They acknowledge Him by hearing His voice; He acknowledges them, “knows them”. Cf. ver. 14. They follow Him, and He leads them into life eternal. “Sequela et vita arcte connectuntur,” Bengel. This mention of the gift of life leads Him to enlarge on its perpetuity and its security.—οὐ μὴ ἀπόλωνται εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα, “they shall never perish” (cf. ver. 10), but shall enjoy the abundant life I am come to bestow.—καὶ οὐχ ἄρπάσει τις αὐτὰ ἐκ τῆς χειρὸς μου, “and no one shall carry them off (ver. 12) out of my hand” or keeping. Throughout He uses the phraseology of the “Shepherd” parable.—Ver. 29. These strong assertions He bases, as always, on the Father’s will and power. ὁ πατὴρ μου . . . ἔσμεν. “My Father who has given me these sheep is greater than all: and therefore no one can snatch them out of my Father’s hand. But this is equivalent to my saying no one can snatch them out of my hand, for I and the Father are one.”—ἐγὼ καὶ ὁ Πατὴρ ἓν ἔσμεν. Cf. xvii. 21, 22, 23, ἵνα πάντες ἓν ᾦσι. Bengel says: “Unum, non solum voluntatis consensu, sed unitate potentiae, adeoque naturae. Nam omnipotentia est attributum naturale; et sermo est de unitate Patris et Filii. In his verbis Jesu plus viderunt caeci Judaei, quam hodie vident Antitrinitarii.” But Calvin is right when

e xvii. 21. καὶ ὁ πατὴρ *ἐν ἑσμεν." 31. Ἐβάστασαν οὖν πάλιν λίθους οἱ f viii. 59; Ἰουδαῖοι, ἵνα λιθάσωσιν αὐτόν. 32. ἀπεκρίθη αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς,
 xi. 8.
 g Mt. v. 16. " Πολλὰ * καλὰ ἔργα ἔδειξα ὑμῖν ἐκ τοῦ πατρός μου· διὰ τοῖον h vide αὐτῶν ἔργον λιθάζετε με;" 33. Ἀπεκρίθησαν αὐτῷ οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι i viii. 53; v. λέγοντες, " Ἐπεὶ καλοῦ ἔργου οὐ λιθάζομέν σε, ἀλλὰ ἠ περὶ βλασ-18. φημίας, καὶ ὅτι σὺ ἄνθρωπος ὢν ἵποιεις σεαυτὸν Θεόν." 34.
 j Ps. lxxxii. Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, " Οὐκ ἔστι ἡ γεγραμμένον ἐν τῷ νόμῳ k vi. 25. Ἰονῆ i. 1. ἡμῶν, ' Ἐγὼ εἶπα, θεοὶ ἐστε; ' 35. Εἰ ἐκείνους εἶπε θεοὺς, πρὸς l Mt. v. 19. m Wisd. οὗς ὁ λόγος τοῦ Θεοῦ * ἐγένετο, καὶ οὐ δύναται ἡ λυθῆναι ἡ γραφή· xlix. 7. Ch. xvii. 17. Mk. i. 24. 36. ὃν ὁ πατὴρ ἡγάγησε καὶ ἀπέστειλεν εἰς τὸν κόσμον, ὑμεῖς λέγετε, he denies that the words carry this sense: "Abusi sunt hoc loco veteres ut probarent Christum esse Patri ὁμοούσιον. Neque enim Christus de unitate substantiae disputat, sed de consensu quem cum Patre habet: quicquid scilicet geritur a Christo Patris virtute confirmatum iri." An ambassador whose demands were contested might quite naturally say: "I and my sovereign are one"; not meaning thereby to claim royal dignity, but only to assert that what he did his sovereign did, that his signature carried his sovereign's guarantee, and that his pledges would be fulfilled by all the resources of his sovereign. So here, as God's representative, Jesus introduces the Father's power as the final guarantee, and claims that in this respect He and the Father are one. Whether this does not involve metaphysical unity is another question. Cf. Tertullian, adv. Praxeam, 22; Hippolytus, c. Noctum, 7, δύο πρόσωπα ἔδειξεν, δύναμιν δὲ μίαν.—Ver. 31. Ἐβάστασαν οὖν . . . αὐτόν. In chap. viii. 59, ἦραν λίθους, so now once more, πάλιν, they lifted stones to stone Him.—Ver. 32. Jesus anticipating them says: Πολλὰ . . . με; "Many excellent works ['praeclara opera,' Meyer] have I shown you from my Father; for what work among these do ye stone me?" Which of them deserves stoning? (Holtzmann). As it could only be a work differing in character from the καλὰ ἔργα which deserved stoning, ποῖον is used, although in later Greek its distinctive meaning was vanishing. Wetstein quotes from Dionys. Halicar., viii. 29, an apposite passage in which Coriolanus says: οἱ μὲ ἀντὶ πολλῶν καὶ καλῶν ἔργων, ἐφ' οἷς τιμᾶσθαι προσῆκεν . . . αἰσχυρῶς ἐξήλασαν ἐκ τῆς πατρίδος.—Ver. 33. The irony is as much in the situation as in the words. The answer is honest enough, blind as it is: Περὶ . . . Θεόν. "For a praiseworthy work we do not stone Thee, but for blasphemy, and because Thou being a man makest Thyself God." For περὶ in this sense cf. Acts xxvi. 7. The καὶ ὅτι does not introduce a second charge, but more specifically defines the blasphemy. On the question whether it was blasphemy to claim to be the Christ see Deut. xviii. 20, Lev. xxiv. 10-17, and Treffry's Eternal Sonship. It was blasphemy for a man to claim to be God. And it is noteworthy that Jesus never manifests indignation when charged with making Himself God; yet were He a mere man no one could view this sin with stronger abhorrence.—Ver. 34. On this occasion He merely shows that even a man could without blasphemy call himself "Son of God"; because their own judges had been called "gods".—Οὐκ ἔστι γεγραμμένον ἐν τῷ νόμῳ ὑμῶν, "Is it not written in your law, I said 'ye are Gods'?" In Ps. lxxxii. the judges of Israel are rebuked for abusing their office; and God is represented as saying: "I said, Ye are gods, and all of you are children of the Most High." "The law" is here used of the whole O.T. as in xii. 34, xv. 25, Rom. iii. 19, i Cor. xiv. 21.—Εἰ ἐκείνους . . . "If it [that ὁ νόμος is the nominative to εἶπε is proved by the two following clauses, although at first sight it might be more natural to suppose the nearer and more emphatic ἐγὼ supplied the nominative] called them gods, to whom the word of God came," that is, who were thus addressed by God at their consecration to their office and by this word lifted up to a new dignity—"and that they were so called is certain because Scripture cannot be denied or put aside—then do you, shutting your eyes to your own Scriptures, declare Him whom the Father consecrated and sent into the world to be a blasphemer because He said, I am God's Son?"

Ἔτι βλασφημεῖς, ὅτι εἶπον, Υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ εἰμι; 37. εἰ οὐ ποιῶ τὰ ἔργα τοῦ πατρὸς μου, μὴ πιστεύετε μοι. 38. εἰ δὲ ποιῶ, κἂν ἔμοι μὴ πιστεύητε, τοῖς ἔργοις πιστεύσατε· ἵνα γνῶτε καὶ πιστεύσητε,<sup>1</sup> ὅτι ἐν ἔμοι ὁ πατήρ, καὶ γὰρ ἐν αὐτῷ.” 39. Ἐξήτουν οὖν πάλιν αὐτὸν n vii. 30.

o “escaped”
vide
Thayer, 223.
p iii. 23;
q xii. 16;
xix. 39.

ἠπιᾶσαι· καὶ ὁ ἐξῆλθεν ἐκ τῆς χειρὸς αὐτῶν.
40. ΚΑΙ ἀπήλθε πάλιν πέραν τοῦ Ἰορδάνου, εἰς τὸν τόπον ὅπου ἦν Ἰωάννης ἁπλοῦς βαπτίζων· καὶ ἔμεινεν ἐκεῖ. 41. καὶ πολλοὶ ἦλθον πρὸς αὐτὸν, καὶ ἔλεγον, “Ὅτι Ἰωάννης μὲν σημεῖον ἐποίησεν οὐδέν· πάντα δὲ ὅσα εἶπεν Ἰωάννης περὶ τούτου, ἀληθῆ ἦν.” 42. Καὶ ἐπίστευσαν πολλοὶ ἐκεῖ εἰς αὐτόν.

<sup>1</sup> For πιστεύσητε BLX, cursives and versions read γινώσκητε, “that ye may attain to knowledge and permanently know”. The T.R. is read in SA.

The a fortiori element in the argument lies in this, that the judges were made “gods” by the coming to them of God’s commission, which found them engaged otherwise and itself raised them to their new rank, whereas Jesus was set apart by the Father and sent into the world for the sole object of representing the Father. If the former might be legitimately called “gods,” the latter may well claim to be God’s Son. The idea of the purpose for which Christ was sent into the world is indicated in the emphatic use of ὁ πατήρ; and this is still further accentuated in ver. 37.—Vv. 37, 38. εἰ οὐ ποιῶ . . . πιστεύσατε. “If I do not the works of my Father, do not believe me: but if I do them, even though you do not believe me, believe the works.” That is, if you do not credit my statements, accept the testimony of the deeds I do. And this, not to give me the glory but “that ye may know and believe [cf. vi. 69] that the Father is in me, and I in the Father.” [for αὐτῷ read τῷ πατρὶ].—Ver. 39. Ἐξήτουν . . . αὐτῶν. His words so far convinced them that they dropped the stones, but they sought to arrest Him. The πάλιν refers to vii. 30, 44. But He escaped out of their hand, and departed again beyond Jordan to the place where John at first was baptising, i.e., Bethany. Cf. i. 28, also iv. 1. Holtzmann considers that the πρῶτον is intended to differentiate the earlier from the later ministry of the Baptist. It might rather seem to point to the beginning of the ministry of Jesus, especially as following πάλιν.—καὶ ἔμεινεν ἐκεῖ, “and He remained there” until xi. 7, that is, for a little more than three months.—Ver. 41. There He was still busy; for πολλοὶ ἦλθον πρὸς αὐτόν, “many came to Him and said,” that is, giving this as their reason for coming, that “although John himself had done no miracle, all he had said of Jesus was found to be true”. The reference to John is evidently suggested by the locality, and probably means that the “many” alluded to as coming to Jesus belonged to the district and had been impressed by John. The correspondence between what they had heard from the Baptist and what they saw in Jesus, as well as the intrinsic evidence of the works He did, engendered belief in Him (ver. 42) Καὶ ἐπίστευσαν πολλοὶ ἐκεῖ εἰς αὐτόν.

CHAPTER XI.—Vv. 1-16. Lazarus’ death recalls Jesus to Judaea.—Ver. 1. Ἦν δὲ τις ἀσθενῶν. “Now a certain man was ill;” δὲ connects this narrative with the preceding, and introduces the cause of our Lord’s leaving His retirement in Peraea. “Lazarus,” the Greek form of Eleazar = God is my Help (cf. Lk. xvi. 20), “of Bethany”. ἀπό is commonly used to designate residence or birthplace, see i. 45, Heb. xiii. 24, etc.; ἐκ is used similarly, see Acts xxiii. 34. Bethany lay on the south-east slope of Olivet, nearly two miles from Jerusalem, ver. 18; it is now named El-Aziriyeh, after Lazarus; “from the village of Mary and Martha her sister,” a description of Bethany added not so much to distinguish it from the Bethany of i. 28 (cf. x. 40) as to connect it with persons already named in the evangelic tradition, Lk. x. 38.—Ver. 2. In order further to identify Lazarus it is added: “Now it was (that) Mary who anointed the Lord with ointment and wiped His feet with her hair, whose brother Lazarus was ill”. This act of Mary’s has not yet

- a Lk. x. 38. XI. 1. Ἦν δὲ τις ἀσθενῶν Ἰαζαρος ἀπὸ Βηθανίας, ἐκ τῆς κώμης
 b xii. 3. Μαρίας καὶ Μάρθας τῆς ἀδελφῆς αὐτῆς. 2. Ἦν δὲ Μαρία<sup>1</sup> ἢ ἀλεΐc 1 k vii 28 φασα τὸν Κύριον μύρω, καὶ ἔκμαξασα τοὺς πόδας αὐτοῦ ταῖς θριξίν
 Ch. xiii. αὐτῆς, ἧς ὁ ἀδελφὸς Λάζαρος ἰσθénéι. 3. ἀπέστειλαν οὖν αἱ
 5. Wisd. αὐτῆς, πρὸς αὐτὸν λέγουσαι, "Κύριε, ἶδε ὃν φιλεῖς ἀσθενεῖ."
 xii. 11. ἀδελφαὶ πρὸς αὐτὸν λέγουσαι, "Κύριε, ἶδε ὃν φιλεῖς ἀσθενεῖ."
 d iv. 35. Cp. 4. Ἀκούσας δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν, "Αὕτη ἡ ἀσθένεια οὐκ ἔστι<sup>4</sup> πρὸς 2 Kings θάνατον, ἀλλ' ὑπὲρ τῆς δόξης τοῦ Θεοῦ, ὅτινα δοξασθῆ ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ
 xx. 1. Θεοῦ δι' αὐτῆς." 5. Ἠγάπα δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς τὴν Μάρθαν καὶ τὴν e ix. 3. ἀδελφὴν αὐτῆς καὶ τὸν Λάζαρον. 6. ὡς οὖν ἤκουσεν ὅτι ἄσθενεῖ, f i. 40. τότε μὲν ἔμεινεν ἐν ᾧ ἦν τόπω δύο ἡμέρας. 7. Ἐπειτα μετὰ τοῦτο
 g ver. 15. λέγει τοῖς μαθηταῖς, "Ἔγωμεν εἰς τὴν Ἰουδαίαν πάλιν." 8.
 Mk. i. 38. Mt. xxvi. 46. Ἀκούσας δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν, "Ἔγωμεν εἰς τὴν Ἰουδαίαν πάλιν."
 h With im- λέγει τοῖς μαθηταῖς, "Ἔγωμεν εἰς τὴν Ἰουδαίαν πάλιν." 8.
 perf. here only. λέγουσιν αὐτῷ οἱ μαθηταί, "Ῥαββί, ἔγωμεν εἰς τὴν Ἰουδαίαν πάλιν."
 λέγουσιν αὐτῷ οἱ μαθηταί, "Ῥαββί, ἔγωμεν εἰς τὴν Ἰουδαίαν πάλιν."

<sup>1</sup> Recent editors read Μαριαμ instead of Μαρία, but, as Meyer remarks, the genitive presupposes the form Μαρία, and while in some versions Μαριαμ is well supported, in others it is poorly authenticated. Generally T.R. is supported by MSAD, Μαριαμ by BC.

been narrated by John (see xii. 3), but it was this which distinguished her at the time John was writing; cf. Mt. xxvi. 13.—Ver. 3. The sisters were so intimate with Jesus that they naturally turn to Him in their anxiety, and send Him a notice of the illness, which is only a slightly veiled request that He would come to their relief: "Lord, behold, he whom Thou lovest is ill," "Sufficit ut noveris. Non enim amas et deseris." Augustine.—Ver. 4. Ἀκούσας δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν. "And Jesus when He heard said," i.e., to His disciples. It was not the reply sent to the sisters. "This illness is not to death," πρὸς θάνατον, death is not the end towards which it is making. But that Jesus knew that death had already taken place (ver. 6 and ver. 17) or was imminent is evident from the following clause, but He knew what He would do (vi. 6) and that death was not to be the final result of this illness. The illness and death were ὑπὲρ τῆς δόξης τοῦ Θεοῦ, for the sake of glorifying God (cf. ix. 3), "gloriae divinae illustrandae causa," Winer, p. 479. This is further explained in the clause "that the Son of God may be glorified by means of it," i.e., by means of this illness; cf. xiii. 31. "In two ways; because the miracle (1) would lead many to believe that He was the Messiah; (2) would bring about His death. Δοξάζεσθαι is a frequent expression of this Gospel for Christ's death regarded as the mode of His return to glory (vii. 39, xii. 16, xiii. 31), and this glorification of the Son involves the glory of the Father (v. 23, x. 30-38)." Plummer, Bengel.—Ver. 5. Ἠγάπα δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς . . . It is quite true that φιλεῖν denotes the more passionate love, and ἀγαπᾶν the more reasoning; but it is doubtful whether this distinction is observed in this Gospel. Passages proving the distinction are given by Wetstein.—Ver. 6. Jesus loved the family, ὡς οὖν ἤκουσεν . . . τότε μὲν ἔμεινεν. We expect another consequence: "Jesus loved them, therefore He immediately went to Bethany". But the consequence indicated in οὖν is found in λέγει, ver. 7, and the whole sentence should read: "When, therefore, He had heard that he was ill, for the present indeed [τότε μὲν = tum quidem], He remained for two days where He was; then after this He says to His disciples, Let us go into Judaea again". The μὲν after τότε suggests a δέ after ἔπειτα and unites the two clauses. For the dropping of δέ after ἔπειτα or its absorption see Winer, 720; and for the pleonastic ἔπειτα μετὰ τοῦτο and for ἄγωμεν in the sense "let us go" see Kypke, who gives instances of both from post-Macedonian authors. Jesus remained two days inactive, not to test the faith of the sisters, which Holtzmann justly characterises as "grausam"; but, as Godet, Holtzmann, and Weiss agree, because He awaited the prompting of the Father, cf. ii. 4, vii. 1-10.—Ver. 8. The announcement of His intention is received with astonishment: Ῥαββί . . . ἐκεῖ. "Rabbi, the men of Judaea were but now seeking to stone

Ἰουδαῖοι, καὶ πάλιν ὑπάγεις ἐκεῖ ;” 9. Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Οὐχὶ δώδεκά εἰσιν ὥραι τῆς ἡμέρας ; ἴάν τις περιπατῆ ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ, οὐ <sup>i</sup> προσκόπτει, ὅτι τὸ φῶς τοῦ κόσμου τούτου βλέπει. 10. ἐὰν δέ τις περιπατῆ ἐν τῇ νυκτὶ, προσκόπτει, ὅτι τὸ φῶς οὐκ ἔστιν ἐν αὐτῷ.” 11. Ταῦτα εἶπε, καὶ μετὰ τοῦτο λέγει αὐτοῖς, “Λάζαρος ὁ φίλος ἡμῶν <sup>j</sup> κεκοίμηται· ἀλλὰ πορεύομαι ἵνα ἐξυπνίσω αὐτόν.” 12. Εἶπον <sup>j</sup> οὖν οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ, “Κύριε, εἰ κεκοίμηται, σωθήσεται.” 13. Εἰρήκει δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς περὶ τοῦ θανάτου αὐτοῦ· ἐκεῖνοι δὲ ἔδοξαν ὅτι περὶ τῆς <sup>k</sup> κοιμήσεως τοῦ ὑπνου λέγει. 14. τότε οὖν εἶπεν αὐτοῖς ὁ <sup>k</sup> Ἰησοῦς <sup>l</sup> παρρησίᾳ, “Λάζαρος ἀπέθανε· 15. καὶ χαίρω δι’ ὑμᾶς, ἵνα <sup>l</sup> πιστεύσητε, ὅτι οὐκ ἦμην ἐκεῖ· ἀλλ’ ἄγωμεν πρὸς αὐτόν.” 16. Εἶπεν οὖν Θωμᾶς, <sup>m</sup> ὁ λεγόμενος <sup>m</sup> Δίδυμος, τοῖς συμμαθηταῖς, “Ἄγωμεν καὶ ἡμεῖς, ἵνα ἀποθάνωμεν μετ’ αὐτοῦ.”

<sup>i</sup> Burton, 240, 260.

<sup>j</sup> Kings xv. 8. <sup>1</sup> Thess iv 13.

<sup>k</sup> Wisd. xvii. 14. <sup>l</sup> xvi. 29. <sup>m</sup> iv. 25; xix. 13. <sup>n</sup> Mt. xxvii 17. <sup>o</sup> xx. 24; xxi. 2.

Thee, and goest Thou thither again?” “They think of the danger to Him, and are not without thought of the danger to themselves (ver. 16).” Watkins. The νῦν shows that they had not been long in Peræa. To this remonstrance Jesus replies, as in ix. 4, that while His day, appointed to Him by the Father, continued, He must work, and nothing could hinder Him.—Ver. 9. Οὐχὶ . . . ἡμέρας, i.e., each man’s day, or term of work, is a defined quantity. [τὰ δώδεκα μέρεα τῆς ἡμέρης παρὰ Βαβυλωνίων ἔμαθον Ἑλληνας, Herod., ii. 109; and see Rawlinson’s Appendix to his Translation.]—ἐὰν τις . . . βλέπει. So long as this day lasts, a man may go confidently forward to the duties that call him; οὐ προσκόπτει “he does not stumble,” he can walk erect and straight on amid dangers, cf. Mt. iv. 6, “because he sees the light of the world”; as the sun makes all causes of stumbling manifest and saves the walker from them, so the knowledge of God’s will, which is man’s moral light, guides him; and to follow it is his only safety.—Ver. 10. On the other hand, ἐὰν δέ τις . . . ἐν αὐτῷ, if a man prolongs his day beyond God’s appointment, he stumbles about in darkness, having lost his sole guide, the will of God. His prolonged life is no longer a day but mere night.—Ver. 11. Ταῦτα εἶπε . . . αὐτόν. “These things spake He, and after this,” how long after we do not know; but ver. 15, “let us go to him,” indicates that the two days here intervened. There is, however, difficulty introduced by this supposition. He now makes the definite announcement: “Our friend Lazarus is fallen asleep, but I go to awake him”.—κεκοίμηται cf. Mt. ix.

24, xxvii. 52, Acts. vii. 60, 1 Thess. iv. 13, 1 Cor. xv. 6. “Mortuos dormientes appellat Scripturæ veracissima consuetudo, ut cum dormientes audimus, evigilaturus minime desperemus.” Augustine. The heathen idea of the sleep of death is very different, cf. Catullus, “Nox est perpetua una dormienda”. ἐξυπνίσω is later Greek: ἐξυπνισθῆναι οὐ χρὴ λέγειν, ἀλλ’ ἀφυπνισθῆναι, Phrynichus (Rutherford, p. 305). The disciples misunderstood Him, and said: Κύριε . . . σωθήσεται. “Lord, if he sleep, he will recover,” implying that in this case they need not take the dangerous step of returning to Judæa [cf. Achilles Tatius, iv., ὕπνος γὰρ πάντων νοσημάτων φάρμακον]. How He knows that Lazarus sleeps they do not inquire, accustomed as they are to His exercise of gifts they do not understand. σωθήσεται, cf. Mk. v. 28, 34, vi. 56, etc. Their misunderstanding was favoured by His having said (ver. 4) that the illness was “not to death”; naturally when Jesus spoke of Lazarus sleeping they understood Him to speak (ver. 13) περὶ τῆς κοιμήσεως τοῦ ὑπνου, “of the κοιμήσις of sleep”. —Ver. 14. τότε οὖν. “At this point, accordingly, Jesus told them plainly,” παρρησίᾳ “without figure or ambiguity,” “expressly in so many words,” cf. x. 24, removing all possibility of misunderstanding, “Lazarus is dead,” but instead of grieving (ver. 15) καὶ χαίρω δι’ ὑμᾶς, “I am glad for your sakes,” although grudging the pain to Lazarus and his sisters, ὅτι οὐκ ἦμην ἐκεῖ, “that I was not there,” implying that had He been there Lazarus would not have died. This gives us a glimpse into the habitual and absolute confidence of Jesus in the ο ν. 5. viii. 17. Ἐλθὼν οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς εὗρεν αὐτὸν τέσσαρας ἡμέρας ἤδη 27. ix. 20.

p i. 23; vi. ἔχοντα ἐν τῷ μνημείῳ. 18. ἦν δὲ ἡ Βηθανία<sup>p</sup> ἔγγυς τῶν Ἱεροσολύ-23.
q xxi. 8. μων, ὡς<sup>a</sup> ἀπὸ σταδίων δεκαπέντε. 19. καὶ πολλοὶ ἐκ τῶν Ἰουδαίων
Rev. xiv. ἔληλυθεισαν πρὸς τὰς περὶ Μάρθαν καὶ Μαρίας,<sup>1</sup> ἵνα παραμυθῆσωνται 20. αὐτὰς περὶ τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ αὐτῶν. 20. ἡ οὖν Μάρθα ὡς ἤκουσεν ὅτι ὁ r i. 40. Ἰησοῦς ἔρχεται, ὑπήντησεν αὐτῷ. Μαρία δὲ ἐν τῷ οἴκῳ ἔκαθεζέτο.
s Gen. xxxviii.
11. 2Sam. vii. 1.
 21. εἶπεν οὖν ἡ Μάρθα πρὸς τὸν Ἰησοῦν, "Κύριε, εἰ ἦς ὡδε, ὁ

<sup>1</sup> T.R. is supported by AC*ΓΔ; but ΞBC*LX 33, it. vulg., read προς την Μαρθαν κ. τ. λ. Tisch. retains T.R. W.H.R. adopt the other and better authenticated reading, although it is the easier, while the T.R. might naturally present difficulty. Wetstein's examples show that τας περι κ. τ. λ. would in classical Greek mean "Martha and Mary and those with them"; in later Greek it might mean "Martha and Mary". In Acts xiii. 13 the older usage obtains: here αδελφου αυτων seems to point to the later usage.

presence with Him of an almighty power, ἵνα πιστεύσῃτε "that ye may believe," go on to firmer faith. "Faith can neither be stationary nor complete. 'He who is a Christian is no Christian,' Luther," Westcott.—Ver. 16. Εἶπεν οὖν Θωμᾶς ὁ λεγόμενος Δίδυμος Θωμᾶς is the transliteration and Δίδυμος the translation of ΔΩΔΑ, a twin. He is the pessimist among the disciples, and now takes the gloomy, and, as it proved, the correct view of the result of this return to Judaea, but his affectionate loyalty forbids the thought of their allowing Jesus to go alone. "To his mind there is nothing left for Jesus but to die. But now comes the remarkable thing. He is willing to take Jesus at the lowest, uncrowned, unseated, disrobed, he loves Him still." Matheson. If Thomas is stiff and obstinate in his incredulity, he is also stiff and obstinate in his affection and allegiance. "In him the twins, unbelief and faith, were contending with one another for mastery, as Esau and Jacob in Rebecca's womb." Trench. συμμαθηταῖς occurs only here.—ἵνα ἀποθάνωμεν μετ' αὐτοῦ, i.e., with Jesus. The expression is well illustrated by

Vv. 17-44. The raising of Lazarus.—Ver. 17. Ἐλθὼν οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς εὗρεν. "When, then, Jesus came, He found," implying that He did not know before, but learned from some in Bethany, αὐτὸν τέσσαρας ἡμέρας ἤδη ἔχοντα ἐν τῷ μνημείῳ "that he had been four days already in the tomb". Raphael and Wetstein give instances of this construction, and see v. 5. According to Jewish custom burial took place on the day of death, so that, allowing somewhat more than one day for the journey from the one Bethany to the other, it seems probable that Lazarus died about the time the messenger reached Jesus. At ver. 39 the time which had elapsed since death is mentioned for a different reason. Here it seems to be introduced to account for ver. 19; as also is the statement ἦν δὲ Βηθανία [ἡ deleted by Tisch. and W.H.] ἔγγυς τῶν Ἱεροσολύμων, ὡς ἀπὸ σταδίων δεκαπέντε, within easy walking distance of Jerusalem, about fifteen furlongs off. The form is a Latinism, used in later Greek instead of ὡς σταδίου δεκαπέντε ἀπὸ τῶν Ἱεροσολύμων; cf. xii. 1, xxi. 8, Rev. xiv. 20. The nearness of Bethany accounts for the fact that πολλοὶ . . . αὐτῶν, "many of the Jews had come out to Martha and Mary". Of visits of condolence we have a specimen in Job. "Deep mourning was to last for seven days, of which the first three were those of 'weeping'. During these seven days it was, among other things, forbidden to wash, to anoint oneself, to put on shoes, to study, or to engage in any business. After that followed a lighter mourning of thirty days." Edersheim, Jewish Social Life, an interesting chapter on In Death and after Death. Cf. Gen. 1. 3; Num. xx. 29; 1 Sam. xxviii. 13. Specimens of the manifestations of grief in various heathen countries and of the things said ὑπὸ τῶν παραμυθουμένων are given by Lucian in his tract Concerning Grief.—Ver. 20. ἡ οὖν Μάρθα . . . ἔκαθεζέτο. Martha as the elder sister and mistress of the house (Lk. x. 38-40) goes out to meet Jesus, while Mary remained seated in the house. "After the body is carried out of the house all chairs and couches are reversed, and the mourners sit on the ground on a low stool." Edersheim, loc. cit. On ἀδελφός μου οὐκ ἂν ἐτεθνήκει.<sup>1</sup> 22. ἀλλὰ καὶ νῦν οἶδα ὅτι ὅσα ἂν αἰτήσῃ τὸν Θεόν, δώσει σοι ὁ Θεός." 23. Λέγει αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Ἄναστῆσεται ὁ ἀδελφός σου." 24. Λέγει αὐτῷ Μάρθα, "Οἶδα τ Is. xxvi. 19. 2 ὅτι ἀναστῆσεται, ἐν τῇ ἀναστάσει ἐν τῇ ἐσχάτῃ ἡμέρᾳ." 25. <sup>Mac. vii. 9, 14.</sup> Εἶπεν αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Ἐγὼ εἰμι ἡ ἀνάστασις καὶ ἡ ζωὴ. <sup>9, 14.</sup> ὁ <sup>vi. 39</sup> πιστεύων εἰς ἐμὲ, κἀν ἀποθάνῃ, ζήσεται. 26. καὶ πᾶς ὁ ζῶν καὶ πιστεύων εἰς ἐμὲ, οὐ μὴ ἀποθάνῃ εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα. πιστεύεις τοῦτο;" 27. Λέγει αὐτῷ, "Ναὶ, κύριε· ἐγὼ πεπίστευκα, ὅτι σὺ εἶ ὁ Χριστός, ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ, ὁ εἰς τὸν κόσμον ἔρχόμενος." 28. Καὶ ταῦτα <sup>2 v Mt. xi. 3</sup> εἰπούσα ἀπήλθε, καὶ ἐφώνησε Μαρίαν τὴν ἀδελφὴν αὐτῆς λάθρα,

<sup>1</sup> οὐκ ἂν ἀπεθανεν ο ἀδελφος μου is the reading of  $\aleph$ BCDKL 33.

<sup>2</sup> Instead of ταυτα  $\aleph$ BCL read τουτο.

sitting as an attitude of grief see Doughty, Analecta Sacra, on Ezek. viii. 14.—Ver. 21. Martha's first words to Jesus, Κύριε . . . ἐτεθνήκει, "hadst Thou been here my brother had not died," are "not a reproach but a lament," Meyer. Mary uses the same words (ver. 32), suggesting that this had been the burden of their talk with one another; and even, as Bengel says, before the death "utinam adisset Dominus Jesus".—Ver. 22. But Martha not only believed that Jesus could have prevented her brother's death but also that even now He could recall him from the grave: καὶ νῦν οἶδα . . . "Even now I know that what thing soever you ask of God, God will give you." Cf. ix. 31. Jesus referred all His works to the Father, and spoke as if only faith were required for the working of the greatest miracles. See Mt. xiv. 31, xvii. 20. On the use of αἰτεῖν and ἐρωτᾶν see Ezra Abbot's Critical Essays, in which Trench's misleading account of their difference is exposed.—Ver. 23. λέγει . . . σου. "Thy brother shall rise again." "The whole history of the raising of Lazarus is a parable of life through death. . . . Here, then, at the beginning the key-note is struck." Westcott. Whether the words were meant or not to convey only the general truth of resurrection, and that death is not the final state, Martha did not find in them any assurance of the speedy restoration of Lazarus.—Ver. 24. "I know," she says, "that he will rise again, in the resurrection at the last day." On the terms used see v. 28, vi. 39, 40, 54. Belief in the resurrection had been promoted through Dan. xii. 2, and, as Holtzmann remarks, Martha must have heard more than enough about it during the last four days, and fears perhaps that even Jesus is offering the merely conventional consolation. To one who yearns for immediate re-union the "last day" seems invisible. It was small consolation for Martha to know that her brother would lie for ages in the tomb, no more to exchange one word or look till the last day.—Ver. 25. Nor does this faith satisfy Jesus, who at once replaces it by another in the words, "Ἐγὼ εἰμι ἡ ἀνάστασις καὶ ἡ ζωὴ. Resurrection and life are not future only, but present in His person; she is to trust not in a vague remote event but in His living person whom she knew, loved, and trusted. Apart from Him there was neither resurrection nor life. He carried with Him and possessed there and then as He spoke with her all the force that went to produce life and resurrection. Therefore ὁ πιστεύων εἰς ἐμὲ . . . αἰῶνα (ver. 26), "He that believeth on me, even though he die, shall live; and every one who liveth and believeth on me shall never die". Belief in Him or acceptance of Him as the source of true spiritual life, brings the man into vital union with Him, so that he lives with the life of Christ and possesses a life over which death has no power.—Ver. 27. Martha believed this, as implicitly included in her belief in Jesus as the Messiah, Ναὶ, Κύριε . . . ἐρχόμενος. Resurrection and life were both Messianic gifts, but it is doubtful whether Martha fully understood what our Lord had said. Rather she falls back on what she did understand and believe. She will not claim to believe more than she is sure of; but if His statement is only an elaboration of His Messianic function, then she can truly say: Ναὶ, Κύριε.—

w i. 49. ii. 10. εἰπούσα, "Ὁ διδάσκαλος πάρεστι καὶ φωνεῖ σε." 29. Ἐκείνη ὡς ἤκουσεν, ἐγείρεται ταχὺ καὶ ἔρχεται<sup>1</sup> πρὸς αὐτόν. 30. οὐπω δὲ x ver. 1. ἐληλύθει ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἰς τὴν κώμην, ἀλλ' ἦν ἐν τῷ τόπῳ ὅπου y ver. 20. ὑπήντησεν αὐτῷ ἡ Μάρθα. 31. οἱ οὖν Ἰουδαῖοι οἱ ὄντες μετ' αὐτῆς z Mk. xii. 34. ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ καὶ παραμυθούμενοι αὐτήν, ἰδόντες τὴν Μαρίαν ὅτι ταχέως ἀνέστη καὶ ἐξῆλθεν, ἠκολούθησαν αὐτῇ, λέγοντες,<sup>2</sup> "Ὅτι ὑπάγει εἰς τὸ μνημεῖον, ἵνα κλαύσῃ ἐκεῖ." 32. Ἡ οὖν Μαρία ὡς a Here only. ἤλθεν ὅπου ἦν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, ἰδοῦσα αὐτόν, ἔπεσεν εἰς<sup>3</sup> τοὺς πόδας Gen. προς αὐτοῦ, λέγουσα αὐτῷ, "Κύριε, εἰ ἦς ὧδε, οὐκ ἂν ἀπέθανέ μου or ἐπι. ὁ ἀδελφός." 33. Ἰησοῦς οὖν ὡς εἶδεν αὐτὴν κλαίουσαν, καὶ
 b ver. 38. ὁ ἀδελφός." 33. Ἰησοῦς οὖν ὡς εἶδεν αὐτὴν κλαίουσαν, καὶ Mk. i. 43. Lam. ii. 6. τοὺς συνελθόντας αὐτῇ Ἰουδαίους κλαίοντας ἐνεβριμήσατο τῷ

<sup>1</sup> NBCLX 33 read ηγερθη ταχυ και ηρχετο, "rose quickly and went," aorist and imperfect.

<sup>2</sup> For λεγοντες W.H. read δοξαντες, "having supposed," with NSB*DL 1, 33.

<sup>3</sup> προς is read in NSBDLX.

ἐγὼ πεπίστευκα, I have come to believe, I have reached the belief.—Ver. 28. καὶ ταῦτα εἰπούσα ἀπῆλθε, "and when she had said this," and when some further conversation had taken place (cf. φωνεῖ σε), "she went and called Mary her sister, secretly saying to her: The Teacher is here and asks for you". The secrecy was due not so much to the presence of Jesus' enemies as to Martha's desire that Mary should meet Jesus alone, unaccompanied even by friends. For the same purpose Jesus remained in the place where He had met Martha.—Ver. 29. On the delivery of His message Mary springs up from her attitude of broken-hearted grief and comes to meet Him.—Ver. 31. But she was not allowed to go alone: οἱ οὖν . . . ἐκεῖ. The Jews who were with her in the house comforting her interpreted her sudden movement as one of those urgent demands of grief which already, no doubt, they had seen her yield to, and in sincere sympathy (ver. 33) followed her.—Ver. 32. Consequently when she reaches Jesus she has only time to fall at His feet and exclaim, in Martha's words, Κύριε . . . ἀδελφός. The sight of Jesus, ἰδοῦσα αὐτόν, produced a more vehement demonstration of grief than in Martha. Cf. Cicero, in Verrem, v. 39. "Mihi obviam venit et . . . mihi ad pedes misera jacuit, quasi ego excitare filium ejus ab inferis possem." Wetstein.—Ver. 33. Ἰησοῦς οὖν . . . αὐτόν. "Jesus, then, when He saw her weeping [κλαίειν is stronger than δακρύνειν and might be rendered 'wailing'. It is joined with ἀλαλάζειν, Mk. v. 38; ὀλολύζειν, Jas. v. 1; θορυβεῖν, Mk. v. 39; πενθεῖν, Mk. xvi. 10. Cf. Webster's Synonyms and the Jews who accompanied her wailing, ἐνεβριμήσατο τῷ πνεύματι, "was indignant in spirit". The word ἐμβριμᾶσθαι occurs again in ver. 38 and in three other passages of the N.T., Mt. ix. 30, Mk. i. 43, and xiv. 5. In those passages it is used in its original sense of the expression of feeling, and might be rendered "sternly charged"; and it is in each case followed by an object in the dative. In Mt. ix. 30 Jesus sternly charged or with strong feeling charged the healed blind man not to make Him known. In Mk. i. 43 the leper is similarly charged. In Mk. xiv. 5 the bystanders express strong feeling [of indignation, ἀγανακτοῦντες] against Mary for her apparent extravagance. In all three passages it is used of the expression of strong feeling; but no indignation enters into its meaning in the former two passages. Here in John it is not feeling expressed, but τῷ πνεύματι, inwardly felt; and with only such expression as betrayed to observers that He was moved (cf. Mk. viii. 12, ἀναστενάξας τῷ πνεύματι), for τῷ πνεύματι cannot be the object, for this does not give a good sense and it is contradicted by πάλιν ἐμβριμ. ἐν ἑαυτῷ of ver. 38. It would seem, then, to mean "strongly moved in spirit". This meaning quite agrees with the accompanying clause, ταραξεν ἑαυτόν, "and disturbed Himself"; precisely as we speak a man "distressing himself," or "troubling

πνεύματι, καὶ *ἐτάραξεν ἑαυτὸν, 34. καὶ εἶπε, “Ποῦ <sup>d</sup>θεΐκατε c xii. 27. αὐτόν;” 35. Λέγουσιν αὐτῷ, “Κύριε, *ἔρχου καὶ ἴδε.” <sup>d</sup>Ἐδάκρυσεν e i. 40. ὁ Ἰησοῦς. 36. ἔλεγον οὖν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, “Ἴδε πῶς ἐφίλει αὐτόν.” 37. Τινὲς δὲ ἐξ αὐτῶν εἶπον, “Οὐκ ἠδύνατο <sup>1</sup>οὗτος <sup>f</sup>ὁ ἀνοίξας τοὺς <sup>g</sup>fix. 10. ὀφθαλμοὺς τοῦ τυφλοῦ, ποιῆσαι *ἓνα καὶ οὗτος μὴ ἀποθάνῃ;” <sup>g</sup>Not μή simply; see Bur- ton, 206. 38. Ἰησοῦς οὖν <sup>h</sup>πάλιν ἐμβριμώμενος ἐν ἑαυτῷ, ἔρχεται εἰς τὸ <sup>h</sup>ver. 33. μνημεῖον. ἦν δὲ σπήλαιον, καὶ λίθος <sup>i</sup>ἐπέκειτο ἐπ’ αὐτῷ. 39. <sup>i</sup>xxi. 9. λέγει ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Ἄρατε τὸν λίθον.” Λέγει αὐτῷ ἡ ἀδελφὴ τοῦ <sup>j</sup>Exod. viii. 14. τεθηγκότος <sup>2</sup>Μάρθα, “Κύριε, ἤδη ὄξει *τεταρταῖος γὰρ ἐστὶ.” <sup>Ps. xxxviii. 5.</sup>

<sup>1</sup> εδυνατο in BCDK.

<sup>2</sup> τετελευτηκotos in ΞABC*DKLP 33.

himself,” or “making himself anxious”. To say that the active with the reflexive pronoun indicates that this was a voluntary act on Christ’s part is to introduce a jarring note of Doketism. His sympathy with the weeping sister and the wailing crowd caused this deep emotion. To refer His strong feeling to His indignation at the “hypocritical” lamentations of the crowd is a groundless and unjust fancy contradicted by His own “weeping” (ver. 34) and by the remark of the Jews (ver. 35).—Ver. 34. His intense feeling prompts Him to end the scene, and He asks, Ποῦ θεΐκατε αὐτόν; He asks because He did not know. They reply, but probably with no expectation of what was to happen, ἔρχου καὶ ἴδε. As He went ἐδάκρυσεν, “He shed tears”. To assert that such tears could only be theatrical because He knew that shortly Lazarus would live, is to show profound ignorance of human nature. And it also shows ignorance of the true sympathy requisite for miracle. “It is not with a heart of stone that the dead are raised.”—Ver. 36. These tears evoked a very natural exclamation, “Ἴδε πῶς ἐφίλει αὐτόν,” “see how He loved him”.—Ver. 37. But this again suggested to the more thoughtful and wary the question, Οὐκ . . . ἀποθάνῃ; The tears of Jesus, which manifest His love for Lazarus, puzzle them. For if He opened the eyes of a blind man, He was able to prevent the death of His friend. The question with οὐκ expects an affirmative answer. Euthymius and the Greek interpreters in general think the question was ironical and scoffing. Thus Cyril, Ποῦ ἡ ἰσχὺς σου ὧ θαυματουργέ; But there is nothing in the words to justify this.—Ver. 38. Ἰησοῦς οὖν πάλιν ἐμβριμώμενος. “Jesus, then, being again deeply moved.” “Quia non accedit Christus ad sepulcrum tanquam otiosus spectator, sed athleta

qui se ad certamen instruit, non mirum est si iterum fremat.” Calvin. To refer the renewed emotion to the sayings of the Jews just reported is to take for granted that Jesus heard them, which is most unlikely. The tomb ἦν σπήλαιον . . . αὐτῷ, “was a cave,” either natural, as that which Abraham bought, Gen. xxiii. 9, or artificial, hewn out of the rock, as our Lord’s, Mt. xxvii. 60.—λίθος ἐπέκειτο ἐπ’ αὐτῷ, “a stone lay upon it,” i. e., on its mouth to prevent wild animals from entering. The supposed tomb of Lazarus is still shown and is described by several travellers.—Ver. 39. The detail, that Jesus said, Ἄρατε τὸν λίθον, is mentioned because it was an unexpected step and quickened inquiry as to what was to follow, but also because it gave rise to practical Martha’s quick objection, ἤδη ὄξει. [“He employed natural means to remove natural obstructions, that His Divine power might come face to face with the supernatural element. He puts forth supernatural power to do just that which no less power could accomplish, but all the rest He bids men do in the ordinary way.” Laidlaw, Miracles, p. 360.]—ἤδη ὄξει shows that Lazarus had not been embalmed or even wrapped in spiced grave-clothes; which, some suppose, sheds light on xii. 3. The fact is mentioned, however, to show how little Martha expected what Jesus was going to do: evidently she supposed He wished to take a last look at His friend, and she [ἡ ἀδελφὴ τοῦ τετελευτηκότος] the sister of the deceased, and therefore jealous of any exposure, interposes, knowing what He would see.—τεταρταῖος γὰρ ἐστὶ, “for he is four days [dead]”. Herodotus, ii. 89, tells us that the wives of men of rank were not at death given to the embalmers at once, ἀλλ’ ἐπέαν τριταῖαι ἢ τεταρταῖαι γίνονται. Lightfoot quotes a remarkable tradition of Ben Kaphra:

20. λέγει αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Οὐκ εἶπόν σοι, ὅτι ἐὰν πιστεύσῃς, ὄψει τὴν δόξαν τοῦ Θεοῦ;" 41. Ἦραν οὖν τὸν λίθον, οὗ ἦν ὁ τεθνηκώς
 35. P. κείμενος.<sup>1</sup> Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς κῆρε τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς ἄνω, καὶ εἶπε, XXI. 1. "Πάτερ, εὐχαριστῶ σοι ὅτι ἤκουσάς μου. 42. ἐγὼ δὲ ᾔδειν ὅτι πάντοτέ μου ἀκούσις· ἀλλὰ διὰ τὸν ὄχλον τὸν περιστώτα εἶπον, ἵνα πιστεύσωσιν ὅτι σύ με ἀπέστειλας." 43. Καὶ ταῦτα εἰπὼν, φωνῇ μεγάλη ἐκραύγασε, "Λάζαρε, ἴδευρο ἔξω." 44. Καὶ ἐξῆλθεν ὁ τεθνηκώς, δεδεμένος τοὺς πόδας καὶ τὰς χεῖρας <sup>m</sup>κειρίαις, καὶ ἦ ὄψις αὐτοῦ σουδαρίῳ περιδέδετο. λέγει αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Λύσατε αὐτὸν, καὶ ἄφετε ὑπάγειν."
 45. Πολλοὶ οὖν ἐκ τῶν Ἰουδαίων οἱ ἐλθόντες πρὸς τὴν Μαρίαν, καὶ θεασάμενοι ἃ ἐποίησεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, ἐπίστευσαν εἰς αὐτόν. 46. τινὲς δὲ ἐξ αὐτῶν ἀπήλθον πρὸς τοὺς Φαρισαίους, καὶ εἶπον αὐτοῖς ἃ

1. Dan. xii.
 9. Acts
 vii. 34.
 21 Prov. vii.
 16 only.
 1 Jer. iii. 3.
 Song ii.
 14. Rev.
 i. 16.

* The clause ου . . . κειμενος is obviously a gloss and is not found in NBC*DL 33.

"Grief reaches its height on the third day. For three days the spirit hovers about the tomb, if perchance it may return to the body. But when it sees the fashion of the countenance changed, it retires and abandons the body."—Ver. 40. But Martha's incredulity is mildly rebuked, Οὐκ εἶπόν σοι . . . Θεοῦ; "Did I not say to you, that if you believed, you would see the glory of God?" recalling rather what He had said (ver. 4) to the disciples than what He had said to Martha (vv. 23-26); but the conversation is, as already noted, abridged.—Ver. 41. Accordingly, notwithstanding her remonstrance, and because it was now perceived that Jesus had some end in view that was hidden from them, they lifted the stone, ἦραν οὖν τὸν λίθον.—Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς . . . ἀπέστειλας. "But Jesus lifted His eyes upwards and said, Father, I thank Thee that Thou hast heard me." No pomp of incantation, no wrestling in prayer even; but simple words of thanksgiving, as if already Lazarus was restored. [Origen thinks that the spirit of Lazarus had already returned. Ἐντὶ εὐχῆς ἠὲ χαριστήσῃ, κατανοήσας τὴν Λαζάρου ψυχὴν εἰσελθοῦσαν εἰς τὸ σῶμα.] The prayer which He thanks the Father for hearing had been offered during the two days in Peraea. And the thanksgiving was more likely to impress the crowd now than in the excitement following the resurrection of Lazarus. Therefore He thanks the Father because it was essential that the miracle should be referred to its real source, and that all should recognise that it was the Father who had sent this power among men.—

Ver. 43. Having thus turned the faith of the bystanders to the Father, φωνῇ μεγάλη ἐκραύγασε, "He cried with a great voice," "that all might hear its authoritativeness" (Euthymius). "Talis vox opposita est omni magico murmuri, quale incantatores in suis praestigiijs adhibere solent." Lampe. More probably, as Lampe also suggests, it was the natural utterance of His confidence, and of the authority He felt. κραυγάζω is an old word, see Plato, Rep., 607 B, but is principally used in late Greek (Rutherford's New Phryni., 425).—Λάζαρε δευρο ἔξω. "Lazarus, come forth," or as Weiss renders, "hier heraus," "huc foras," "hither, out"; but on the whole the E.V. is best. Sometimes an imperative is added to δευρο, as χώρει σὺ δευρο (Paley's Com. Frag., p. 16).—Ver. 44. Καὶ ἐξῆλθεν ὁ τεθνηκώς, "And out came the dead man," δεδεμένος . . . περιδέδετο, "bound feet and hands with grave-bands," κειρίαις, apparently the linen bandages with which the corpse was swathed. Opinions are fully given in Lampe. "And his face was bound about with a napkin." Cf. xx. 7. "The trait marks an eye-witness," Westcott.—λέγει . . . ὑπάγειν. "Jesus says to them, 'Loose him and let him go away'." He did not require support, and he could not relish the gaze of the throng in his present condition.

Vv. 45-54. The consequences of the miracle.—Ver. 45. Πολλοὶ οὖν . . . αὐτόν. "Many therefore of the Jews, viz., those who had come to Mary and seen what Jesus did, believed on Him." That is to say, all the Jews who thus ἐποίησεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς. 47. συνήγαγον οὖν οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι ὁ συνέδριον, καὶ ἔλεγον, “Τί ποιούμεν; ὅτι οὗτος ὁ ἄνθρωπος πολλὰ σημεῖα ποιεῖ. 48. ἐὰν ῥαῶμεν αὐτὸν οὕτω, πάντες πιστεύουσιν εἰς αὐτόν· καὶ ἐλεύσονται οἱ Ῥωμαῖοι καὶ ἀρούσιν ἡμῶν καὶ τὸν τόπον καὶ τὸ ἔθνος.” 49. Εἰς δέ τις ἐξ αὐτῶν Καϊάφας, ἀρχιερεὺς ὧν τοῦ ἐνιαυτοῦ ἐκείνου, εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Ἦμεῖς οὐκ οἶδατε οὐδέν· 50. οὐδὲ διαλογίσεσθε,<sup>1</sup> ὅτι συμφέρει ἡμῖν,<sup>2</sup> ἵνα εἰς ἄνθρωπος

o Jer. xv. 17

See

Thayer.

p Mt. xv. 14,

xxvii. 49.

q xvi. 7.

Mt. v. 29.

Lk. xvii.

2. 1 Cor.

iv. 3.

<sup>1</sup> λογίσεσθε in *Σ*ABDL 1, 22. T.R. poorly authenticated.

<sup>2</sup> ἡμιν in BDLM. ἡμιν in AEGHP.

came and saw believed.—Ver. 46. But of this number [it may be “of the Jews” generally, and not of those who had been at Bethany] some went away to the Pharisees and told them, His recognised enemies, what He had done. Whether they did this in good faith or not does not appear.—Ver. 47. The Pharisees at once acted on the information, συνήγαγον . . . συνέδριον. The chief priests, who were Sadducees, and the Pharisees, their natural foes, but who together composed the supreme authority, “called together a meeting of the Sanhedrim”. The keynote of the meeting was struck in the words τί ποιούμεν; “What are we doing?” i.e., why are we doing nothing? The indicative, not the deliberative subjunctive. The reason for shaking off this inertia is ὅτι . . . ποιεῖ. The miracles are not denied, but their probable consequence is indicated.—Ver. 48. ἐὰν ἀφώμεν . . . ἔθνος. “If we let Him thus alone,” i.e., if we do no more to put an end to His miracles than we are doing, “all will believe on Him; and the Romans will come and take away both our place and our nation”. ἡμῶν emphatic. The raising of Lazarus and the consequent accession of adherents to Jesus made it probable that the people as a whole would attach themselves to Him as Messiah; and the consequence of the Jews choosing a king of their own would certainly be that the Romans would come and exterminate them.—τὸν τόπον one would naturally render “our land” as co-ordinate with τὸ ἔθνος [“Land und Leute,” Luther], and probably this is the meaning; although in 2 Macc. v. 19 in a very similar connection ὁ τόπος means the Temple: οὐ διὰ τὸν τόπον τὸ ἔθνος, ἀλλὰ διὰ τὸ ἔθνος τὸν τόπον ὁ Κύριος ἐξέλεξατο. Others, with less warrant, think the holy city is meant.—Ver. 49. Εἰς δέ τις ἐξ αὐτῶν Καϊάφας. “But a certain one of them, Caiaphas.”

Winer (p. 146) says that τις does not destroy the arithmetical force of εἰς. This may be so; but the use of εἰς in similar forms is a peculiarity of later Greek. Caiaphas (Mt. xxvi. 3) is a surname = Kephas, added to the original name of this High Priest, Joseph. He held office from A.D. 18 to 36, when he was deposed by Vitellius.—ἀρχιερεὺς ὧν τοῦ ἐνιαυτοῦ ἐκείνου, “being High Priest that year,” not as if the writer supposed the high priesthood was an office held for a year only, but desiring to emphasise that during that marked and fatal year of our Lord’s crucifixion Caiaphas held the position of highest authority; as if he said “during the year of which we speak Caiaphas was High Priest”. “Non vocat anni illius pontificem, quod annum duntaxat esset munus, sed quum venale esset transferretur ad varios homines praeter Legis praescriptum.” Calvin. And Josephus (Ant., xx. 10) reminds us that there were twenty-eight high priests in 107 years.—Ἦμεῖς οὐκ οἶδατε οὐδέν. “Ye [contemptuous] know nothing at all,” οὐδὲ λογίσεσθε, “nor do ye take account that it is expedient for you that one man die for the people, and the whole nation perish not”. The ἵνα clause is the subject of the sentence, “that one man die for the people is expedient”; as frequently, cf. Mt. x. 25, xviii. 6, John xvi. 7, 1 Cor. iv. 3. On the use of ἵνα in this Gospel see Burton’s Moods and Tenses, 211-219. Caiaphas enounced an unquestionably sound principle (see Wetstein’s examples); but nothing could surpass the cold-blooded craft of his application of it. He saw that an opportunity was given them of at once getting rid of an awkward factor in their community, a person dangerous to their influence, and of currying favour with Rome, by putting to death one who was claiming to be king of the Jews. “Why!” he says, “do you not see that ἀποθάνῃ ὑπὲρ τοῦ λαοῦ, καὶ μὴ ὄλον τὸ ἔθνος ἀπόληται." 51. Τοῦτο δὲ ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ οὐκ εἶπεν, ἀλλὰ ἀρχιερεὺς ὢν τοῦ ἐνιαυτοῦ ἐκείνου, προεφήτευσεν<sup>1</sup> ὅτι ἔμελλεν<sup>2</sup> ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἀποθνήσκειν ὑπὲρ τοῦ ἔθνους, 52. καὶ οὐχ ὑπὲρ τοῦ ἔθνους μόνον, ἀλλ' ἵνα καὶ τὰ τέκνα τοῦ Θεοῦ τὰ διεσκορπισμένα συναγάγῃ<sup>3</sup> εἰς ἓν. 53. ἀπ' ἐκείνης οὖν τῆς ἡμέρας συνεβουλευσαντο<sup>4</sup> ἵνα ἀποκτείνωσιν αὐτόν. 54. Ἰησοῦς οὖν οὐκ ἔτι παρρησία περιεπάτει ἐν τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις, ἀλλὰ ἀπῆλθεν ἐκείθεν εἰς τὴν χώραν ἕγγυς τῆς ἐρήμου, εἰς Ἐφραῖμ λεγομένην πόλιν, κακεὶ διέτριβε<sup>4</sup> μετὰ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ. 55. ἦν δὲ ἐγγὺς τὸ πάσχα τῶν Ἰουδαίων· καὶ ἀνέβησαν πολλοὶ εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα ἐκ τῆς χώρας πρὸ τοῦ πάσχα, ἵνα ἀγνίσωσιν ἑαυτοῦς.

† Not a h
δοκίμ.
See Acts
xxi. 13. 2
Cor. viii.
10. Burton. 481.
Mt. xxvi.
31.
† Is. lvi. 8.
u xvii. 23.
v vii. 1.
w ver. 18.
x Acts xxi.
24; xxiv.
28.

<sup>1</sup> ἐπροφήτευσεν in ΣBDLX 33. The usage is given in Winer, p. 84.

<sup>2</sup> ἔμελλεν in ABDL 1, 33. See Winer, p. 82.

<sup>3</sup> ἐβουλευσαντο in ΣBD 13, 69.

<sup>4</sup> ἐμεινεν in ΣBL; cp. iii. 22.

this man with His eclat and popular following, instead of endangering us and bringing suspicion on our loyalty, is exactly the person we may use to exhibit our fidelity to the empire? Sacrifice Jesus, and you will not only rid yourselves of a troublesome person, but will show a watchful zeal for the supremacy of Rome, which will ingratiate you with the imperial authorities."—Ver. 51. Τοῦτο δὲ ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ οὐκ εἶπεν . . . προεφήτευσεν. ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ, "at his own instigation," is contrasted with "at the instigation of God" implied in ἐπροφήτευσεν. [Kypke gives interesting examples of the use of ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ in classical writers]. "None but a Jew would be likely to know of the old Jewish belief that the high priest by means of the Urim and Thummim was the mouth-piece of the Divine oracle." Plummer. Calvin calls him "bilingual," and compares his unconscious service to that of Balaam. John sees that this unscrupulous diplomatist, who supposed that he was moving Jesus and the council and the Romans as so many pieces in his own game, was himself used as God's mouth-piece to predict the event which brought to a close his own and all other priesthood. In the irony of events he unconsciously used his high-priestly office to lead forward that one sacrifice which was for ever to take away sin and so make all further priestly office superfluous. He prophesied "that Jesus was to die for the nation, and not for the nation only, but that also the children of God who were scattered in various places should be gathered into one". ὅτι is rendered "because" by Weiss and others. Jesus was to die ὑπὲρ τὸ ἔθνος, although not in Caiaphas' sense; and His death had the wider object of bringing into one whole, of truer solidarity than the nation, all God's children wherever at present scattered. Cf. x. 16, Eph. ii. 14. The expression τὰ τέκνα τοῦ Θεοῦ is used proleptically of the Gentiles who were destined to become God's children. So Euthymius. For the phrase συναγεῖν εἰς ἓν Meyer refers to Plato, Phileb., 378, C, and Eurip., Orestes, 1640.—Ver. 53. This utterance of Caiaphas brought sudden light to the members of the Sanhedrim, and so influenced their perplexed mind that ἀπ' ἐκείνης ἡμέρας συνεβουλευσαντο ἵνα ἀποκτείνωσιν αὐτόν. This was the crisis: what hitherto they had desired (v. 16, 18, vii. 32, x. 39) they now determined in council.—Ver. 54. Jesus accordingly, Ἰησοῦς οὖν, not to precipitate matters, οὐκ ἔτι . . . αὐτοῦ, "no longer went about openly among the Jews, but departed thence (i.e., from Bethany or Jerusalem and its neighbourhood) to the country near the desert (χώραν in contrast to the city; the particular part being the wilderness of Bethaven, a few miles north-east of Jerusalem) to a city called Ephraim (now Et-Taiyibeh, anciently Ophrah, see Smith's Hist. Geog., 256, 352; 'perched on a conspicuous eminence and with an extensive view, thirteen miles north of Jerusalem,' Henderson's Palestine, p. 161), and there He spent some time with His disciples". Vv. 55-57. Approach of the Passover.—Ver. 55. ἦν δὲ ἑαυτοῦς. "Now

56. ἐξήτουν οὖν τὸν Ἰησοῦν, καὶ ἔλεγον μετ' ἀλλήλων ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ ἑστηκότες, "Τί δοκεῖ ὑμῖν, ὅτι οὐ μὴ ἔλθῃ εἰς τὴν ἑορτήν;"
 57. Δεδώκεισαν δὲ καὶ οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι ἐντολὴν,<sup>1</sup> ἵνα εἰάν τις γνῶ ποῦ ἐστὶ, μνηύσῃ, ὅπως πιάσωσιν αὐτόν.

XII. 1. Ὁ ΟΥΝ Ἰησοῦς ἄπρὸ ἐξ ἡμερῶν τοῦ πάσχα ἦλθεν εἰς <sup>a</sup> Amos i. 1. Βηθανίαν, ὅπου ἦν Λάζαρος ὁ τεθνηκώς,<sup>2</sup> ὃν ἤγειρεν ἐκ νεκρῶν. <sup>b</sup> ἐποίησαν οὖν αὐτῷ δεῖπνον ἐκεῖ, καὶ ἡ Μάρθα διηκόνει· ὁ δὲ <sup>c</sup> Dan. v. 1. Λάζαρος εἰς τὴν τῶν συνακακειμένων<sup>3</sup> αὐτῷ. 3. Ἡ οὖν Μαρία <sup>d</sup> Mk. vi. 21. λαβοῦσα ἄλιτραν μύρου νάρδου πιστικῆς πολυτίμου, ἠλείψε τοὺς <sup>e</sup> c. xix. 39. πόδας τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, καὶ ἠδέμαξε ταῖς θριξίν αὐτῆς τοὺς πόδας αὐτοῦ. <sup>d</sup> xi. 2.

<sup>1</sup> ἐντολὴν in ADL, it. vulg., etc.; ἐντολας in ΞB 1.

<sup>2</sup> ο τεθνηκως omitted by Ti.W.H.R. with ΞBLX. T.R. in ADIGΔ. The words have some appearance of a gloss for greater perspicuity.

<sup>3</sup> ανακειμενων συν in ΞABDILΠ.

the Passover of the Jews was at hand, and many went up to Jerusalem out of the country before the Passover to purify themselves." Cf. xviii. 28, Num. ix. 10, 2 Chron. xxx. 17. Some purifications required a week, others consisted only of shaving the head and washing the clothes. See Lightfoot in loc.—Ver. 56. ἐξήτουν . . . ἑορτήν; Jesus was one main topic of conversation among those who stood about in groups in the Temple when their purifications had been got through; and the chief point discussed was whether He would appear at this feast. Cf. vii. 10-13.—Ver. 57. There was room for difference of opinion, for Δεδώκεισαν . . . αὐτόν, "the Sanhedrim had issued instructions that if any knew where He was he should intimate this, that they might arrest Him".

CHAPTER XII.—Vv. 1-II. Jesus anointed in the love of His intimates.—Ver. 1. Ὁ οὖν Ἰησοῦς . . . Βηθανίαν. οὖν takes us back to xi. 55; the Passover being at hand, Jesus therefore came to Bethany.—πρὸ ἐξ ἡμερῶν τοῦ πάσχα, not, as Vulgate, "ante sex dies Paschae," but with Beza "sex ante Pascha diebus". So Amos i. 1, πρὸ δύο ἐτῶν τοῦ σεισμοῦ. Josephus, Antiq., xv. 14, πρὸ μιᾶς ἡμέρας τῆς ἑορτῆς. Other examples in Kypke; cf. x. 18, xxi. 8, and see Viereck's Sermo Graecus, p. 81. Six days before the Passover probably means the Sabbath before His death. According to John Jesus died on Friday, and six days before that would be a Sabbath. But it is difficult to ascertain with exactness what day is intended. Bethany is now described as the place ὅπου ἦν Λάζαρος ὁ τεθνηκώς. This description is given to explain what follows.—Ver. 2. ἐποίησαν . . . αὐτῷ. ἐποίησαν is the indefinite plural: "they made Him" a supper; δεῖπνον, originally any meal, came to be used invariably of the evening meal.—καὶ ἡ Μάρθα διηκόνει, "and Martha waited at table," which was her peculiar province (Lk. x. 40).—ὁ δὲ Λάζαρος . . . αὐτῷ. This is mentioned, not to show that Lazarus was still alive and well, but because the feast was not in his house but in that of Simon the leper (Mk. xiv. 3, Mt. xxvi. 6). That this was the same feast as that mentioned by the Synoptists is apparent; the only discrepancy of any consequence being that the Synoptists seem to place the feast only two days before the Passover. But they introduce the feast parenthetically to present the immediate motive of Judas' action, and accordingly disregard strict chronology.—Ver. 3. Ἡ οὖν Μαρία . . . The third member of the Bethany family appears also in character, λαβοῦσα λίτραν μύρου νάρδου πιστικῆς πολυτίμου. λίτρα (Lat. libra), the unit of weight in the Roman empire, slightly over eleven ounces avoirdupois. μύρον (from μύρω, to trickle, or from μύρρα, myrrh, the juice of the Arabian myrtle) is any unguent, more costly and luxurious than the ordinary ἔλαιον. Cf. Lk. vii. 46, and Trench, Synonymys. νάρδος, "the head or spike of a fragrant East Indian plant belonging to the genus Valeriana, which yields a juice of delicious odour which the ancients used in the preparation of a most precious ointment". Thayer. πιστικῆς is sometimes derived from ε With ἐκ ἡ δὲ οἰκία *ἐπληρώθη ἐκ τῆς ὀσμῆς τοῦ μύρου. 4. λέγει οὖν εἰς ἐκ here only. τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ, Ἰούδας Σίμωνος Ἰσκαριώτης, ὁ μέλλων αὐτὸν

 f Mk xiv. 5. παραδιδόναι, 5. "Διατί τοῦτο τὸ μύρον οὐκ ἐπράθη ἑτριάκοσιων F x. 13. δηναρίων, καὶ ἐδόθη πτωχοῖς;" 6. εἶπε δὲ τοῦτο, οὐχ ὅτι *περὶ
 h xiii. 20. 2 Chron. xxxiv 10. τῶν πτωχῶν *ἐμελεν αὐτῷ, ἀλλ' ὅτι κλέπτῃς ἦν, καὶ τὸ ὄ γλωσσόκομον πίστις, and rendered "genuine," γνήσιος, δόκιμος. Thus Euthymius, ἀκράτου καὶ καταπεπιστευμένης εἰς καθαρότητα, un-adulterated and guaranteed pure. But πιστός is the common form; cf. Θρησκείας πιστὸν τέκνον, Theopomp. in Com. Frag. Some suppose it indicates the name of the place where the nard was obtained. Thus Augustine: "Quod ait 'pistici,' locum aliquem credere debemus, unde hoc erat unguentum pretiosum". Similarly some modern scholars derive it from Opis (sc. Opistike), a Babylonian town. In the Classical Review (July, 1890) Mr. Bennett suggests that it should be written πιστακῆς, and that it refers to the Pistacia Terebinthus, which grows in Cyprus, Chios, and Palestine, and yields a turpentine in such inconsiderable quantities as to be very costly. The word is most fully discussed by Fritzsche on Mk. xiv. 3, who argues at great length and with much learning for the meaning "drinkable". He quotes Athenaeus in proof that some ointments were drunk, mixed with wine. πιστός is the word commonly used for "potable," as in Aesch., Prom. Vincit., 480, where Prometheus says man had no defence against disease οὔτε βρώσιμον, οὐ χριστὸν, οὔτε πιστόν. And Fritzsche holds that while πιστός means "qui bibi potest," πιστικός means "qui facile bibi potest". The weight and nature of the ointment are specified to give force to the added πολυτίμου; see ver. 5.—ἤλειψε τοὺς πόδας τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, Mt. and Mk. say "the head," which was the more natural but less significant, and in the circumstances less convenient, mode of disposing of the ointment.—κα ἐξέμαξε . . . αὐτοῦ, "and wiped His feet with her hair". Holtzmann thinks this an infelicitous combination of Mk. xiv. 3 and Lk. vii. 38; infelicitous b cause the anointing of the feet which was appropriate in the humbled penitent was not so in Mary's case; and the drying with her hair which was suitable where tears had fallen was unsuitable where anointing had taken place, for the unguent should have been allowed to remain. This, however, is infelicitous criticism. In Aristoph., Wasps, 607, the daughter anoints her father's feet: ἡ θυγάτηρ . . . τῷ πόδι' ἀλείφῃ; and if, as Fritzsche supposes, the ointment was liquid, there is nothing inappropriate but the reverse in the wiping with the hair.—ἡ δὲ οἰκία ἐπληρώθη ἐκ τῆς ὀσμῆς τοῦ μύρου, at once attracting attention and betraying the costliness of the offering.—Ver. 4. Hence the οὖν in ver. 4, λέγει οὖν εἰς . . . πτωχοῖς; "one" of His disciples. Matthew (xxvi. 8) leaves all the disciples under the reproach, which John transfers to Judas alone. On the designation of Judas see vi. 71. Westcott, however, with a harmonising tendency, says "Judas expressed what others felt". But this is contradicted by the motive which John ascribes to Judas, ver. 6.—Διατί . . . δηναρίων. Three hundred denarii would equal a day labourer's wage for one year.—Ver. 6. εἶπε δὲ τοῦτο . . . ἐβάσταζεν. "This he said, not because he cared for the poor, but because he was a thief." Before John could make this accusation, he must have had proof; how or when we do not know. But the next clauses, being in the imperfect, imply that his pilfering was habitual.—τὸ γλωσσόκομον, "the bag," better "the purse," or "box," "loculus habens," Vulgate. In the form γλωσσόκομεῖον (which Phrynichus declares to be the proper form, see Rutherford, p. 181) the word occurs in the Bacchae of Lysippus to denote a case for holding the tongue pieces of musical instruments (γλώσσαι, κομέω). Hence it came to be used of any box, chest, or coffer. In Sept. it occurs in 2 Sam. vi. 11 (Codd. A, 247, and Aquila) of the Ar of the Lord; in 2 Chron. xxiv. 8 of the chest for collections in the Temple. This chest had a hole in the lid, and the people cast in (ἐνέβαλον, cf. τὰ βαλλόμενα here) their contributions. (Further see Hatch, Essays in Biblical Greek, p. 42, and Field's Ōtium Norvic., 68.)—τὰ βαλλόμενα ἐβάσταζεν. The R.V. renders "took away what was put therein", Certainly, to say that Judas had the money box and carried what was put therein is flat and tautological. And that ἐβάσταζεν can bear the sense of "take

εἶχε, καὶ<sup>1</sup> τὰ βαλλόμενα<sup>2</sup> ἐβάσταζεν. 7. εἶπεν οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, i xx. 15.

"1" Ἄφες αὐτήν· εἰς τὴν ἡμέραν τοῦ ἐνταφιασμοῦ μου τετήρηκεν<sup>2</sup> αὐτό. 8. τοὺς πτωχοὺς γὰρ πάντοτε ἔχετε μεθ' ἑαυτῶν, ἐμὲ δὲ οὐκ<sup>3</sup> πάντοτε ἔχετε."
See Simcox, Gram. p. 63.

9. Ἐγὼ οὖν ὄχλος<sup>3</sup> πολὺς ἐκ τῶν Ἰουδαίων ὅτι ἐκεῖ ἔστι· καὶ ἰ. 40.

ἦλθον οὐ διὰ τὸν Ἰησοῦν μόνον, ἀλλ' ἵνα καὶ τὸν Λάζαρον ἴδωσιν, ὃν m xi. 52.

ἔγειρεν ἐκ νεκρῶν. 10 ἐβουλεύσαντο δὲ οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς, ἵνα καὶ τὸν n Burton, Λάζαρον ἀποκτείνωσιν· 11. ὅτι πολλοὶ δι' αὐτὸν ὑπήγον τῶν Ἰουδαίων, 205.

καὶ ἐπίστευον εἰς τὸν Ἰησοῦν.

<sup>1</sup> For εἶχε, καὶ ᾤBD 33 read εχων.

<sup>2</sup> T.R. in AIGΔ; ἵνα (inserted after αὐτήν) . . . τηρηση in ᾤBDKL 33, it. vulg. Aegypt. Arm. Goth. So Ti.W H.R. T.R. gives the better meaning; the difficulty invited alteration.

<sup>3</sup> ᾤB*L insert ο; adopted by Ti.W.H.R.

away" or "make away with" is beyond dispute. The passages cited by Kypke and Field (Soph., Philoct., 1105; Josephus, Antiq., ix. 2; Diog., Laert., iv. 59) prove that it was used of "taking away by stealth" or "purloining"; and cf. the use of φέρειν in Eur., Hec., 792. Liddell and Scott aptly compare the Scots use of "lift" in "cattle-lifting" and so forth. Mary found a prompt champion in Jesus: "Ἄφες αὐτήν," "let her alone". R.V. renders: "Suffer her to keep it against the day of my burying"; and in margin: "Let her alone: it was that she might keep it". This Westcott understands as meaning "suffer her to keep it—this was her purpose, and let it not be disturbed—for my preparation for burial". But, however we understand it, there is a palpable absurdity in our Lord's requesting that which had already been poured out to be kept for His burial. On the other hand, if the reading of A adopted in T.R. τετήρηκεν was the original reading, it might naturally be altered owing to the scribe's inability to perceive how this day of anointing could be called the day of His ἐνταφιασμός, and how the ointment could be said to have been kept till that day (cf. Field, Otium Norvic., p. 69). τετήρηκεν is opposed to ἐπράθη (ver. 5); she had not sold, but kept it; and she kept it, perhaps unconsciously, against the day of His entombment or preparation for burial. ἐνταφιασμός is rather the preparation for burial than the actual interment. Vide especially Kypke on Mk. xiv. 8. This anointing was His true embalming. Mary's love was representative of the love of His intimate friends in whose loyal affection He was embalmed so that His memory could never die. The significance of the incident lies precisely in this, that Mary's action is the evidence that Jesus may now die, having already found an enduring place for Himself in the regard of His friends. It is possible that Mary herself, enlightened by her love, had a presentiment that this was the last tribute she could ever pay her Lord.—Ver. 8. As for Judas' suggestion, He disposes of it, τοὺς πτωχοὺς . . . ἔχετε. "For the poor ye have always with you," and every day, therefore, have opportunities of considering and relieving them, "but me ye have not always," and therefore this apparent extravagance, being occasional only, finds justification. Occasional lavish expenditure on friends is justified by continuous expenditure on the real necessities of the poor.—Ver. 9. Ἐγὼ οὖν ὄχλος πολὺς ἐκ τῶν Ἰουδαίων. "A great crowd of the Jews"; ὄχλος is generally used by John in contrast to the Jewish authorities, and R.V. renders "the common people". When they knew that Jesus was in Bethany they went out from Jerusalem to see Him and Lazarus: an easily accessible and undoubted sensation. The result was that many of the Jews, on identifying Lazarus, believed on Jesus. Accordingly ἐβουλεύσαντο . . . ἀποκτείνωσιν. The high priests, being Sadducees, could not bear to have in their neighbourhood a living witness to the possibility of living through death, and a powerful testimony to the power of Jesus. And so, to prevent the people believing on Jesus, they made the monstrous proposal to put Lazarus,

12. Τῇ ἐπαύριον ὄχλος πολὺς ὁ ἐλθὼν εἰς τὴν ἑορτὴν, ἀκούσαντες ὅτι ἔρχεται ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα, 13. ἔλαβον τὰ βατὰ τῶν φοινίκων, καὶ ἐξῆλθον εἰς ὑπάντησιν αὐτῷ, καὶ ἔκραζον,<sup>1</sup>
o Ps cxviii. 25, 26. "Ὁσαννά· εὐλογημένος ὁ ἐρχόμενος ἐν ὀνόματι Κυρίου, ὁ βασιλεὺς τοῦ Ἰσραὴλ." 14. Εὐρῶν δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς ὀνάριον, ἐκάθισεν ἐπ' αὐτό, p Zech. ix. 9. καθὼς ἐστὶ γεγραμμένον, 15. 'Μὴ φοβοῦ, θύγατερ Σιών· ἰδοὺ, ὁ βασιλεὺς σου ἔρχεται, καθήμενος ἐπὶ πῶλον ὄνου.' 16. ταῦτα δὲ q x. 40. r vii. 39 reff. οὐκ ἔγνωσαν οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ τὸ πρῶτον· ἀλλ' ὅτε ἔδοξάσθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς, τότε ἐμνήσθησαν ὅτι ταῦτα ἦν ἐπ' αὐτῷ γεγραμμένα, καὶ ταῦτα ἐποίησαν αὐτῷ. 17. ἐμαρτύρει οὖν ὁ ὄχλος ὁ ὢν μετ' αὐτοῦ, ὅτε v ver. 1. τὸν Λάζαρον ἐφώνησεν ἐκ τοῦ μνημείου, καὶ ἤγειρεν αὐτὸν ἐκ νεκρῶν·

<sup>1</sup> ἐκραυγάζον in  $\mathfrak{B}^{\delta}DL$ .

an entirely innocent person, to death. In Mary John has shown faith and devotion at their ripest: in this devilish proposal the obduracy of unbelief is exhibited in its extreme form.

Vv. 12-19. The triumphal entry into Jerusalem.—Ver. 12. Τῇ ἐπαύριον, i.e., probably on Sunday, called Palm Sunday in the Church year [κυριακὴ τῶν βατῶν, dominica palmarum, or, in ramis palmarum]. Four days before the Passover the Jews were required to select a lamb for the feast.—ὄχλος πολὺς ὁ ἐλθὼν εἰς τὴν ἑορτὴν, and therefore not Jerusalem, ἀκούσαντες . . . ἔλαβον τὰ βατὰ τῶν φοινίκων "took the fronds of the palms," the palms which every one knew as growing on the road from Jerusalem to Bethany. The βατὰ (from Coptic βαί) were recognised as symbols of victory or rejoicing. Cf. 1 Macc. xiii. 51, μετὰ αἰνέσεως καὶ βατῶν. So Pausanias (viii. 48), ἐς δὲ τὴν δεξιάν ἐστι καὶ πανταχοῦ τῷ νικῶντι ἐστιθέμενος φοινίξ. Cf. Hor., Odes, I. i. 5, "palma nobilis". This demonstration was evidently the result of recent events, especially, as stated in ver. 18, of the raising of Lazarus.—Ver. 13. εἰς ὑπάντησιν αὐτῷ. "Substantives derived from verbs which govern a dative are sometimes followed by this case, instead of the ordinary genitive." Winer, 264. They left no doubt as to the meaning of the demonstration, ἔκραζον Ὁσαννά . . . Ἰσραὴλ. These words are taken from Ps. cxviii. 25, 26; written as the Dedication Psalm of the second Temple. Ὁσαννά is the Hebrew נָצַב נַגְיָהָה, "save now".

The words were originally addressed to approaching worshippers; here they designate the Messiah; but that no mistake might be possible as to the present reference, the people add, ὁ βασιλεὺς τοῦ Ἰσραὴλ.—Ver. 14. Jesus being thus hailed as king by the people, εὐρῶν ὀνάριον . . . ὄνου, i.e., He accepted the homage and declared Himself king by adopting the prediction of Zech. ix. 9 (ver. 15), "Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion (χαῖρε σφόδρα instead of μὴ φοβοῦ), proclaim it aloud, O daughter of Jerusalem; behold the king is coming to thee, just and saving, He is meek and riding on a beast of burden and a young foal". The significance of the "ass" is shown in what follows: "He shall destroy the chariots out of Ephraim and the horse out of Jerusalem, and the war-bow shall be utterly destroyed: and there shall be abundance and peace". By riding into Jerusalem as king but on an ass, not on a war horse, He continued to claim to be Messiah but ruling by spiritual force for spiritual ends.—Ver. 16. The significance of His action was not at that time perceived by the disciples: ταῦτα . . . πρῶτον, but when Jesus had been glorified, then they remembered that this had been written concerning Him and that the people had made this demonstration in His favour, καὶ ταῦτα ἐποίησαν αὐτῷ.—Ver. 17. In verses 17 and 18 this demonstration is carefully traced to the raising of Lazarus: "the crowd which was with Him when He summoned Lazarus from the tomb, and raised him from the dead, testified [that He had done so], and on this account the crowd went out to meet Him, because they had heard this testimony". The demonstration is thus rendered intelligible. In the Synoptists it is not accounted for. He is represented as

18. διὰ τοῦτο καὶ ὑπήντησεν αὐτῷ ὁ ὄχλος, ὅτι ἤκουσε τοῦτο αὐτὸν πεποικέναι τὸ σημεῖον. 19. οἱ οὖν Φαρισαῖοι εἶπον πρὸς ἑαυτοὺς, “Θεω- i iv 19. ρεῖτε ὅτι οὐκ ὠφελεῖτε οὐδέν; ἴδε ὁ κόσμος <sup>v</sup> ὀπίσω αὐτοῦ ἀπήλθεν.” u Mk. i. 29

20. Ἦσαν δέ τινες Ἕλληνες ἐκ τῶν ἄναβαινόντων, ἵνα προσκυνή- v Zech. xiv. 16. σωσιν ἐν τῇ ἑορτῇ. 21. οὗτοι οὖν προσῆλθον Φιλίππῳ τῷ ἀπὸ Βηθσαϊδᾶ τῆς Γαλιλαίας, καὶ ἠρώτων αὐτὸν λέγοντες, “Κύριε, θέλομεν τὸν Ἰησοῦν ἰδεῖν.” 22. Ἐρχεται Φίλιππος καὶ λέγει τῷ Ἀνδρέᾳ· καὶ πάλιν Ἀνδρέας καὶ Φίλιππος λέγουσι τῷ Ἰησοῦ. 23. ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς ἀπεκρίνατο <sup>1</sup> αὐτοῖς λέγων, “Ἐλήλυθεν ἡ ὥρα <sup>w i. 27; ii. 25, etc.</sup> ἵνα <sup>x</sup> δοξασθῇ ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου. 24. ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, <sup>y</sup> εἰάν μὴ ὁ <sup>31.</sup> κόκκος τοῦ σίτου πεσῶν εἰς τὴν γῆν ἀποθάνῃ, αὐτὸς μόνος <sup>xv. 37.</sup> μένει· εἰάν δὲ ἀποθάνῃ, πολὺν καρπὸν φέρει. 25. ὁ φιλῶν τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ ἀπολέσει <sup>2</sup> αὐτήν· καὶ ὁ μισῶν τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ ἐν

<sup>1</sup> αποκρινεται in ℣BLX 33.

<sup>2</sup> T.R. in ADX, it. vulg.; απολλυει in ℣BL 33.

entering the city with the pilgrims, and no reason is assigned for the sudden outburst of feeling. See Mk. xi. 1, etc.—Ver. 19. The effect on the Pharisees is, as usual, recorded by John; they said one to another, Θεωρεῖτε . . . ἀπήλθεν. “Do you see how helpless you are? The world is gone after Him.” For ὁ κόσμος see 4 Macc. xvii. 14 and French “tout le monde”. For ὀπίσω αὐτοῦ see 2 Sam. xv. 13.

Vv. 20-36. The Greeks inquire for Jesus.—Ver. 20. Ἦσαν δέ τινες Ἕλληνες ἐκ τῶν ἀναβαινόντων . . . Among the crowds who came up to worship in the feast were some Greeks; not Hellenists, but men of pure Greek extraction; proselytes belonging to Decapolis, Galilee, or some country more remote.—Ver. 21. οὗτοι οὖν προσῆλθον Φιλίππῳ, “these came therefore to Philip,” probably because they had learned that he knew their language; or, as indicated in the addition, τῷ . . . Γαλιλαίας, because they had seen him in Galilee. Their request to Philip was, Κύριε . . . ἰδεῖν. “Sir, we would see Jesus”; not merely to see Him, for this they could have managed without the aid of a disciple, but to interview the person regarding whom they found all Jerusalem ringing. Philip does not take the sole responsibility of this introduction on himself, because, since they, as Apostles, had been forbidden to go to the Gentiles, Philip might suppose that Jesus would decline to see these Greeks. He therefore tells Andrew (cf. i. 44; vi. 7, 8), his fellow-townsmen, and together they venture to make known to Jesus the request.—Ver.

23. ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς ἀπεκρίνατο αὐτοῖς, “Jesus answers them,” i.e., the two disciples, but probably the Greeks had come with them and heard the words: Ἐλήλυθεν ἡ ὥρα ἵνα δοξασθῇ ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου. ἔρχεται ὥρα is followed by ὅτε in iv. 21, v. 25, and by ἐν ᾗ in v. 28. Burton calls it “the complementary” use of ἵνα. “The hour is come that the Son of Man should be glorified.” Directly the glorification of the Son of Man or Messiah consisted in His being acknowledged by men; and this earnest inquiry of the Greeks was the evidence that His claims were being considered beyond the circle of the Jewish people.—Ver. 24. But second to the thought of His enthronement as Messiah comes the thought of the way to it: ἀμὴν . . . φέρει, “except the grain of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abides itself alone; but if it die, it bears much fruit”. The seed reaches its full and proper development by being sown in the ground and dying. It is this process, apparently destructive, and which calls for faith in the sower, which disengages the forces of the seed and allows it to multiply itself. To preserve the seed from this burial in the ground is to prevent it from attaining its best development and use. The law of the seed is the law of human life.—Ver. 25. ὁ φιλῶν . . . αὐτήν, he that so prizes his life [φιλοψυχεῖν is used in the classics of excessive love of life. See Kypke] that he cannot let it out of his own hand or give it up to good ends checks its growth and it withers and dies: whereas he who treats his life as if he hated it, giving it up freely to the needs of other men, shall τῷ κόσμῳ τούτῳ, εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον φυλάξει αὐτήν. 26. ἐὰν ἐμοὶ

 2 Mt xxv. ἡ διακονῆ τις, ἐμοὶ ἀκολουθείτω· καὶ ὅπου εἰμὶ ἐγὼ, ἐκεῖ καὶ ὁ 11 διάκονος ὁ ἐμὸς ἔσται· καὶ ἐάν τις ἐμοὶ διακονῆ, τιμήσει αὐτὸν ὁ πατήρ.

2 Gen. xli. 8. 27. “Νῦν ἡ ψυχὴ μου ἡ τετάραται· καὶ τί εἶπω; πᾶτερ, σώσον
 b Heb. v. 7. με ἕκ τῆς ὥρας ταύτης. ἀλλὰ διὰ τοῦτο ἦλθον εἰς τὴν ὥραν ταύτην.
 Jas. v. 20. 28. πᾶτερ, δόξασόν σου τὸ ὄνομα.” Ἦλθεν οὖν φωνὴ ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, “Καὶ ἐδόξασα, καὶ πάλιν δοξάσω.” 29. Ὁ οὖν ὄχλος ὁ ἐστὼς καὶ ἀκούσας ἔλεγε βροντῆν γεγονέναι. ἄλλοι ἔλεγον, “Ἄγγελος αὐτῷ λελάληκεν.” 30. Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν, “Οὐ δι’ ἐμὲ αὕτη ἡ φωνὴ γέγονεν, ἀλλὰ δι’ ὑμᾶς. 31. νῦν κρίσις ἐστὶ τοῦ κόσμου

keep it to life eternal. φυλάξει, “shall guard,” suggested by the apparent lack of guarding and preserving in the μισῶν. He has not guarded it from the claims made upon it in this world, but thus has guarded it to life eternal.—Ver. 26. This law is applicable not to Jesus only, but to all: ἐὰν ἐμοὶ . . . ἀκολουθείτω. The badge of His servants is that they adopt His method and aim and truly follow Him. The result of following necessarily is that ὅπου . . . ἔσται, “where I am, as my eternal state, there shall also my servant be”. διάκονος is especially a servant in attendance, at table or elsewhere; a δούλος may serve at a distance: hence the appropriateness of διάκονος in this verse. The office of διάκονος may seem a humble and painful one, but ἐάν τις [omit καὶ] . . . πατήρ, to be valued or honoured by the Father crowns life.—Ver. 27. The distinct and near prospect of the cross as the path to glory which these Greeks called up in His thoughts prompts Him to exclaim: Νῦν ἡ ψυχὴ μου τετάραται, “Now is my soul troubled”. ψυχὴ is, as Weiss remarks, synonymous with πνεῦμα, see xiii. 21. A conflict of emotions disturbs His serenity. “Concurrebat horror mortis et ardor obedientiae.” Bengel. καὶ τί εἶπω; “And what shall I say?” This clause certainly suggests that the next should also be interrogative, “Shall I say, Father, save me from this hour? But for this cause (or, with this object) came I to this hour.” That is, if He should now pray to be delivered from death this would be to stultify all He had up to this time been doing; for without His death His life would be fruitless. He would still be a seed preserved and not sown.—Ver. 28. Therefore He prays: Πᾶτερ δόξασόν σου τὸ ὄνομα. “Father, glorify Thy name.” Complete that manifestation of Thy holiness and love which through me Thou art making; complete it even at the cost of my agony.—Ἦλθεν οὖν φωνὴ . . . δοξάσω. “There came, therefore, a voice out of heaven: I have both glorified it and will again glorify it.” However Jesus might seem in the coming days to be tossed on the sea of human passions, the Father was steadily guiding all to the highest end. The assurance that His death would glorify God was, of course, that which nerved Jesus for its endurance. He was not throwing His life away.—Ver. 29. Ὁ οὖν ὄχλος . . . λελάληκεν. The mass of the people which was standing by and heard the voice did not recognise it as a voice, but said it thundered. Others caught, if not the words, yet enough to perceive it was articulate speech, and said that an angel had spoken to Him.—Ver. 30. Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς. Jesus, hearing these conjectures, explained to them that not on His account but on theirs this voice had been uttered. It was of immense importance that the disciples, and the people generally, should understand that the sudden transition from the throne offered by the triumphal acclamation of the previous day to the cross, was not a defeat but a fulfilment of the Divine purpose. The voice furnished them against the coming trial.—Ver. 31. It was a trial not so much of Him as of the world: νῦν κρίσις ἐστὶ τοῦ κόσμου τούτου. In the events of the next few days the world was to be judged by its treatment of Jesus. Cf. iii. 18, v. 27. Calvin, adopting the fuller meaning given to the Hebrew word “judge,” thinks that the restoration of the world to its legitimate rule and order is signified. A fuller explanation follows in the clauses, νῦν ὁ ἄρχων . . . ἐμαυτόν.

- τούτου· νῦν * ὁ ἄρχων τοῦ κόσμου τούτου ἐκβληθήσεται ἔξω· 32. ε xiv. 30; xvi. 11. d iii. 14; viii. 28. e vi. 14. f xviii. 32; g viii. 35. Ps. x. 16.
- καθὼ ἐὰν ὁ ὑψωθῶ ἐκ τῆς γῆς, πάντας * ἐλκύσω πρὸς ἑαυτόν.”
33. Τοῦτο δὲ ἔλεγε, ἰσημαίνων ποίῳ θανάτῳ ἤμελλεν ἀποθνήσκειν.
34. ἀπεκρίθη αὐτῷ ὁ ὄχλος, “Ἡμεῖς ἠκούσαμεν ἐκ τοῦ νόμου, ὅτι ὁ Χριστὸς * μένει εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα· καὶ πῶς σὺ λέγεις, “Ὅτι δεῖ ὑψωθῆναι τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου; τίς ἐστιν οὗτος ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου;”
35. εἶπεν οὖν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Ἔτι μικρὸν χρόνον τὸ φῶς μεθ’ ὑμῶν ἔστι. περιπατεῖτε ἕως ἕως τὸ φῶς ἔχετε, ἵνα μὴ σκοτία ὑμᾶς καταλάβῃ· καὶ ὁ περιπατῶν ἐν τῇ σκοτίᾳ οὐκ οἶδε ποῦ ὑπάγει.”
36. ἕως τὸ φῶς ἔχετε, πιστεύετε εἰς τὸ φῶς, ἵνα ἰ υἱοὶ φωτὸς γένησθε.”
- Ταῦτα ἐλάλησεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ ἀπελθὼν ἔκρῦβη ἀπ’ αὐτῶν.

<sup>1</sup> εν υμιν in  $\aleph$ BDKL.

<sup>2</sup> For εως ABDKLP 33 read ως, translating “walk as ye have the light”. So in ver. 36. εως is supported by  $\aleph$  and several versions, and gives the better sense.

Two rulers are represented here as contending for supremacy, the ruler who is spoken of as in possession and Jesus. The ruler in possession, Satan, shall be ejected from his dominion by the cross, but Jesus by the cross shall acquire an irresistibly attractive power. “Si quis roget, quomodo dejectus in morte Christi fuerit Satan, qui assidue bellare non desinit, respondeo ejectionem hanc non restringi ad exiguum aliquod tempus, sed describi insignem illum mortis Christi effectum qui quotidie apparet.” Calvin. The πάντας is a general expression looking to the ultimate issue of the contention between the rival rulers. ἐλκύσω Hellenistic for Attic ἔλξω.—Ver. 32. ὑψωθῶ ἐκ τῆς γῆς is explained as indicating or hinting, σημαίνων, “by what death He was to die,” i.e., that He was to be raised on the cross. Cf. iii. 14. It was the cross which was to become His throne and by which He was to draw men to Him as His subjects. In ὑψωθῶ therefore, although the direct reference is to His elevation on the cross, there is a sub-suggestion of being elevated to a throne. “σημαίνειν notat aliquid futurum vaticinando cum ambiguitate quadam atque obscuritate innuere.” Kypke. So Plutarch says of the Oracle, οὔτε λέγει οὔτε κρύπτει ἀλλὰ σημαίνει.—Ver. 34. The crowd apparently understood the allusion to His death, for they objected: Ἡμεῖς ἠκούσαμεν . . . ἀνθρώπου; “we have heard out of the law,” i.e., out of Scripture (cf. x. 34, xv. 25, and Schechter, Studies in Judaism, p. 15: “under the word Torah were comprised not only the Law, but also the contributions of later times expressing either the thoughts or the emotions of holy and sincere men”), “that the Christ abides for ever”; this impression was derived from Ps. cx. 4; Is. ix. 7, Ezek. xxxvii. 25, Dan. vii. 14. A different belief was also current. Their belief regarding the Messiah seemed so to contradict His allusion to death that it occurred to them that after all “the Son of Man” might not be identical with “the Messiah” as they had been supposing. So they ask, τίς ἐστιν οὗτος ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου; This among other passages shows that the “Son of Man” was a title suggestive of Messiahship, but not quite definite in its meaning and not quite identical with “Messiah”.—Ver. 35. εἶπεν οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς. In replying Jesus vouchsafes no direct solution of their difficulty. It is as if He said: Do not entangle yourselves in sophistries. Do not seek such logical proofs of Messiahship. Allow the light of truth and righteousness to enter your conscience and your life. “Yet a little while is the light with you.” “Walk while ye have the light, lest darkness overtake you” (cf. 1 Thess. v. 4), that is, lest Jesus, the light of the world, be withdrawn.—καὶ ὁ περιπατῶν . . . ὑπάγει, cf. xi. 10.—Ver. 36. In ver. 36 it becomes evident that under τὸ φῶς He refers to Himself. He urges them to yield to that light in Him which penetrates the conscience. Thus they will become υἱοὶ φωτός, see 1 Thess. v. 5, “children of light,” not “of the Light”. The expression is the ordinary form used by the Hebrews to indicate κ Cr. xx. 30. 37. Τοσαῦτα δὲ αὐτοῦ σημεῖα πεποιηκότος ἔμπροσθεν αὐτῶν, Mt. v. 16. 1 Is. liii. 1. οὐκ ἐπίστευον εἰς αὐτόν· 38. ἵνα ὁ λόγος Ἰσαΐου τοῦ προφήτου πληρωθῆ, ὃν εἶπε, 'Κύριε, τίς ἐπίστευσε τῇ ἀκοῇ ἡμῶν; καὶ ὁ βραχίων Κυρίου τίνοι ἀπεκαλύφθη;' 39. Διὰ τοῦτο οὐκ ἠδύναντο πιστεῦναι, ὅτι πάλιν εἶπεν Ἰσαΐας, 40. 'Τετύφλωκεν αὐτῶν τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς, καὶ πεπώρωκεν<sup>1</sup> αὐτῶν τὴν καρδίαν, ἵνα μὴ ἴδωσι τοῖς ὀφθαλμοῖς, καὶ νοήσωσι τῇ καρδίᾳ καὶ ἐπιστραφῶσι, καὶ ἰάσωμαι αὐτούς.' 41. Ταῦτα εἶπεν Ἰσαΐας, ὅτε<sup>2</sup> εἶδε τὴν δόξαν αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἐλάλησε περὶ αὐτοῦ· 42. ὅμως μέντοι καὶ ἐκ τῶν ἀρχόντων πολλοὶ ἐπίστευσαν εἰς αὐτόν· ἀλλὰ διὰ τοὺς Φαρισαίους οὐχ ὠμολό-m Here only.

n iii. 1; vii. 48.

<sup>1</sup> For πεπώρωκεν recent editors read επωρωσεν with ABKL 33; στραφωσιν with NBD* 33, although επιστραφωσι is well supported; and ιασομαι with NABDΠ.

<sup>2</sup> οτι in NABL 33. The words of Isaiah were uttered not only "when," but "because he saw the glory".

close connection; see Mt. viii. 12, ix. 15, Mk. iii. 17, Lk. xvi. 8, etc. To be not φωτός is to be such as find their true life in the truth, recognising and delighting in all that Christ reveals. "These words Jesus spoke and departed and was hidden from them." His warning that the Light would not always be available for them was at once followed by its removal. Where He was hidden is not said.

Vv. 37-43. In the verses which follow, 37-43, John accounts for the unbelief of the Jews. This fact that the very people who had been appointed to accept the Messiah had rejected Jesus needed explanation. This explanation is suitably given at the close of that part of the Gospel which has described His manifestation.—Ver. 37. Τοσαῦτα . . . αὐτόν. The difficulty to be solved is first stated. "Although He had done so many signs before them, yet they did not believe on Him." A larger number of miracles is implied than is narrated, vii. 31, xi. 47, xxi. 25. The quality of the miracles is also alluded to once and again, iii. 2, ix. 32. They had not been done "in a corner," but ἔμπροσθεν αὐτῶν, cf. ἐνώπιον xx. 30. Yet belief had not resulted. The cause of this unbelief was that the prediction of Is. liii. 1 had to be fulfilled. Certainly this mode of statement conveys the impression that it was not the future event which caused the prediction but the prediction which caused the event. The form of expression might in some cases be retained although the natural order was perceived. The purpose of God was always in the foreground of the Jewish mind. The prophecy of Isaiah was relevant; the "arm of the Lord" signifying the power manifested in the miracles, and τῇ ἀκοῇ referring to the teaching of Jesus. In the time of Jesus as in that of Isaiah the significance of Divine teaching and Divine action was hidden from the multitude.—Ver. 39. Διὰ τοῦτο seems to have a double reference, first to what precedes, second to the οτι following, cf. viii. 47.—οὐκ ἠδύναντο, "they were not able," irrespective of will; their inability arose from the fulfilment in them of Isaiah's words, vi. 10 (ver. 40), Τετύφλωκεν . . . αὐτούς. τετύφλωκεν refers to the blinding of the organ for perceiving spiritual truth, επώρωσεν (from πῶρος, a callus) to the hardening of the sensibility to religious and moral impressions. This process prevented them from seeing the significance of the miracles and understanding with the heart the teaching of Jesus. By abuse of light, nature produces callousness; and what nature does God does.—Ver. 41. John's view of prophecy is given in the words Ταῦτα . . . αὐτοῦ. "The Targum renders the original words of Isaiah 'I saw the Lord' by 'I saw the Lord's glory'. St. John states the truth to which this expression points, and identifies the Divine Person seen by Isaiah with Christ." Westcott. This involves that the Theophanies of the O.T. were mediated by the pre-existent Logos.—Ver. 42. Although unbelief was so commonly the result of Christ's manifestation, ὅμως μέντοι, cf. Herodot., i. 189, "nevertheless, however, even of the rulers many believed on Him, but on account of the Pharisees they did not confess Him γουν, ἵνα μὴ ἄποσυνάγωγοι γένωνται. 43. ἠγάπησαν γὰρ τὴν ο ix. 22.

δόξαν τῶν ἀνθρώπων μᾶλλον ἢ ἤπερ τὴν δόξαν τοῦ Θεοῦ. p 2 Mac. xiv.

44. Ἰησοῦς δὲ ἔκραξε καὶ εἶπεν, “Ὁ πιστεύων εἰς ἐμέ, οὐ πιστεύει 42.
εἰς ἐμέ, ἀλλ’ εἰς τὸν πέμψαντά με· 45. καὶ <sup>9</sup> ὁ θεωρῶν ἐμέ, θεωρεῖ q xiv. 9.
τὸν πέμψαντά με. 46. ἐγὼ φῶς εἰς τὸν κόσμον ἐλήλυθα, ἵνα πᾶς ὁ πιστεύων εἰς ἐμέ, ἐν τῇ σκοτίᾳ μὴ μείνη. 47. καὶ ἐάν τις μου ἀκοῦσῃ τῶν ῥημάτων καὶ μὴ πιστεύσῃ,<sup>1</sup> ἐγὼ οὐ κρίνω αὐτόν· <sup>1</sup> οὐ γὰρ iii. 17.
γὰρ ἦλθον ἵνα κρίνω τὸν κόσμον, ἀλλ’ ἵνα σώσω τὸν κόσμον. 48. ὁ ἄθετῶν ἐμέ καὶ μὴ λαμβάνων τὰ ῥήματά μου, ἔχει τὸν κρίνοντα s i Thess.
αὐτόν· ὁ λόγος ὃν ἐλάλησα, ἐκεῖνος κρινεῖ αὐτόν <sup>1</sup> ἐν τῇ <sup>1</sup> ἐσχάτῃ iv. 8. 1a.
ἡμέρᾳ. 49. ὅτι ἐγὼ ἐξ ἑμαυτοῦ οὐκ ἐλάλησα· ἀλλ’ ὁ πέμψας με i. 2; xxi.
πατὴρ, αὐτός μοι ἐντολὴν ἔδωκε, τί εἶπω καὶ τί λαλήσω· 50. καὶ 2, etc.
οἶδα ὅτι ἡ ἐντολὴ αὐτοῦ ζωὴ αἰώνιος ἐστίν. ἃ οὖν λαλῶ ἐγὼ, καθὼς vi. 39 reff.
εἶρηκέ μοι ὁ πατὴρ, οὕτω λαλῶ.”

<sup>1</sup> φυλαξῆ in  $\Sigma$ ABDKLP 33 and most versions. See Mt. xix. 20, Lk. xi. 28.

(ὠμολόγουν, imperfect, their fear to confess Him was continued) lest they should be put out of the synagogue”. The inherent truth of the teaching of Jesus compelled response even in those least likely to be influenced. Westcott says: “This complete intellectual faith (so to speak) is really the climax of unbelief. The conviction found no expression in life.” This is true of the bulk of those referred to (see ver. 43), but cannot apply to all (see vii. 50, xix. 38, 39). For ἀποσυνάγωγοι see ix. 22, xvi. 2.—ἠγάπησαν . . . Θεοῦ. As in v. 44 an excessive craving for the glory which men can bestow is noted as the cause of unbelief.

Vv. 44-50. A summary of the teaching of Jesus regarding the nature and consequences of faith and unbelief.—Ver. 44. Ἰησοῦς δὲ ἔκραξε, “but Jesus cried aloud”. δὲ suggests that this summary is intended to reflect light on the unbelief and the imperfect faith which have just been mentioned. ἔκραξε would of itself lead us to suppose that Jesus made the following statement at some particular time, but as ver. 36 has informed us, He had already withdrawn from public teaching. It is therefore natural to suppose that we have here the evangelist’s reminiscences of what Jesus had publicly uttered at a previous time.—Ὁ πιστεύων . . . με. This sums up the constant teaching of Jesus that He appeared solely as the ambassador of the Father (see v. 23, 30, 43, vii. 16, viii. 42); and that therefore to believe on Him was to believe on the Father.—Ver. 45. Here He adds καὶ ὁ θεωρῶν ἐμέ θεωρεῖ τὸν πέμψαντά με: “he who beholds me, beholds Him that sent me”; so xiv. 9; cf. vi. 40. Jesus was the perfect transparency through whom the Father was seen: the image in whom all the Father was represented.—Ver. 46. ἐγὼ φῶς . . . μείνη. “I am come into the world as light,” and in the connection, especially as light upon God and His relation to men. The purpose of His coming was to deliver men from their native darkness: ἵνα . . . ἐν τῇ σκοτίᾳ μὴ μείνη, “should not abide in the darkness”; cf. i. 9, viii. 12; iii. 18, 19, ix. 41; also i John ii. 9, 11.—Ver. 47. But “if any one should hear my words and not keep them I do not judge him, for I came not to judge,” etc. See iii. 17.—Ver. 48. Not on that account, however, is the unbeliever scatheless: ὁ ἀθετῶν . . . ἡμέρα, “he that rejecteth me”; ἀθετεῖν here only in John but used in a similar connection and in the same sense in Lk. x. 16; cf. i Thess. iv. 8. For the sense cf. i. 11. The rejecter of Christ “has one to judge him; the word which I spake, it will judge him in the last day”. Nothing personal enters into the judgment: the man will be judged by what he has heard, by his opportunities and light.—Ver. 49. This word will judge him, “because” though spoken here on earth it is divine “I have not spoken at my own instance nor out of my own resources”; ἐξ ἑμαυτοῦ, not as in v. 30, vii. 16-18, ἀπ’

XIII. 1. ΠΡΟ ΔΕ ΤΗΣ ΕΟΡΤΗΣ ΤΟΥ ΠΑΣΧΑ, ΕΙΔΩΣ Δ' ΙΗΘΗΣ ΟΤΙ
 ἠλήλυθεν<sup>1</sup> αὐτοῦ ἡ ὥρα, ἵνα<sup>2</sup> μεταβῆ ἔκ τοῦ κόσμου τούτου πρὸς
 τὸν πατέρα, ἀγαπήσας τοὺς ἰδίους τοὺς ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ, ° εἰς τέλος ἠγάπησεν αὐτούς. 2. καὶ δείπνον γενομένου,<sup>2</sup> τοῦ διαβόλου ἦδη βεβληκότος εἰς τὴν καρδίαν Ἰούδα Σίμωνος Ἰσκαριώτου, ἵνα αὐτὸν

<sup>1</sup> Mt. x. 23; vi. 4; xi. 55.
<sup>2</sup> Mt. x. 23.
 c vii. 3.
 d i. 11.
 e Mt. x. 22.
 f Job i. 6.
 Zech. iii.
 1. Mt. iv.
 1. g Philo, de Abrahamo, p. 377.

<sup>1</sup> ἠλθεν in ΞΑΒΚΛΠ.

<sup>2</sup> γενομένου in ΞΑΔΠ, vet. Lat. vulg. (coena facta) Pesh.; γινομένου in ΒΙ, X, four times in Origen. Ξ* has γεινομ. The present participle is adopted by Tr. Ti. W. H., but the reasons assigned by Holtzmann and Weiss are insufficient. T. R. gives the better sense.

ἔμαντοῦ, but indicating somewhat more strictly the origin of the utterances. He did not create His teaching, ἀλλ' ὁ πέμψας . . . λαλήσω, "but the Father who sent me Himself gave me commandment what I should say and what I should speak". The former designates the doctrine according to its contents, the latter the varying manner of its delivery. Meyer and Westcott.—Ver. 50. καὶ οἶδα . . . ἐστίν. "And I know that His commandment is life eternal," that is, the commandment which Jesus had received (ver. 49) was to proclaim life eternal. This was His commission; this was what He was to speak. He was to announce to men that the Father offered through Him life eternal. "Therefore whatever I speak, as the Father hath said to me, so I speak."

CHAPTER XIII. Here commences the closing part of the gospel. It exhibits the manifestation of Christ's glory in suffering and death. The first division embraces xiii.-xvii., in which the faith of the believing is confirmed and unbelief [Judas] cast out.

Vv. 1-20. Jesus washes the disciples' feet and explains His action.—Ver. 1. Πρὸ δὲ τῆς εορτῆς τοῦ Πάσχα, "before the feast of the Passover," and therefore it was not the Paschal supper which is now described. According to John, though not in agreement with the Synoptists, Jesus suffered as the Paschal Lamb on the day of the Passover, which in all Jewish households was terminated by the Paschal supper. How long before the Feast the supper here mentioned occurred is not explicitly stated, but the narrative shows it was the eve of the Passover. The note of time has an ethical rather than an historical intention. It is meant to mark that this was the last night of Jesus' life. Therefore it is followed up by a full description of the entire situation and motives. The main action is expressed in ἐγείρεται of the fourth verse; but to set his reader in the right point of view for perceiving the significance of this action the Evangelist points out three particulars regarding the mind and feeling of Jesus, and two external circumstances. (1) εἰδὼς . . . αὐτούς, "Jesus, knowing that the hour had come that He should pass [for the construction ὥρα ἵνα see xii. 23; μεταβῆ emphasises the change in condition implied] out of this world to the Father, having loved His own who were in the world [τοὺς ἰδίους, a more restricted and more sympathetic class than the οἱ ἴδιοι of i. 11. His especial and peculiar friends. The designation τοὺς ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ is added in contrast to ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου which described His future condition, and it suggests the difficulties they are left to cope with and the duties they must do. They are to represent Him in the world; and this appeals to Him], He loved them" εἰς τέλος, which is translated "in the highest degree" by Chrys., Euthymius [σφόδρα], Cyr.-Alex. [τελειοτάτην ἀγάπησιν], Godet, Weiss; but Godet is wrong in saying that εἰς τέλος never means "unto the end," see Mt. x. 22. Melancthon renders "perduravit donec pateretur". He loved them through all the sufferings and to all the issues to which His love brought Him. The statement is the suitable introduction to all that now looms in view. His love remained steadfast, and was now the ruling motive. The statement is further illustrated by the disappointing state of the disciples. [Wetstein quotes from Eurip., Troad., 1051, οὐδεὶς ἐράσσης ὄστις οὐκ αἰεὶ φιλεῖ; and from the Anthol., τούτους ἐξ ἀρχῆς μέχρι τέλους ἀγαπῶ, and cf. Shakespeare's Sonnets, cxvi., "Love . . . bears it out even to the edge of doom".] (2) καὶ δείπνον γενομένου, παραδῶ, 3. εἰδὼς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, ὅτι πάντα δέδωκεν αὐτῷ ὁ πατήρ εἰς τὰς χεῖρας, καὶ ὅτι ἀπὸ Θεοῦ ἐξῆλθε καὶ πρὸς τὸν Θεὸν ὑπάγει, 4. <sup>h</sup> ἐγεί- h xi. 29. ρεται ἐκ τοῦ δείπνου, καὶ τίθησι τὰ ἱμάτια, καὶ λαβὼν λέντιον <sup>l</sup> διέζωσεν ἑαυτόν· 5. εἶτα βάλλει ὕδωρ εἰς τὸν νιπτῆρα, καὶ ἤρξατο i Cr. xxi. 7 <sup>l</sup> νίπτειν τοὺς πόδας τῶν μαθητῶν, καὶ <sup>k</sup> ἐκμάσσειν τῷ λεντίῳ <sup>q</sup> ἧν j Gen. xliiii. διεζωσμένους. 6. ἔρχεται οὖν πρὸς Σίμωνα Πέτρον· καὶ λέγει αὐτῷ k xii. 3.

"supper having arrived," "supper having been served," cf. γενομένου σαββάτου, the Sabbath having come, πρώτας γενομένης, Mt. xxvii. 1, morning having dawned. In x. 22 the phrase ἐγένετο τὰ ἐγκαίρια means "the Dedication had arrived". So here the meaning is "supper having come," and not "supper being ended," or "while supper was proceeding". If we read γενομένου the meaning is substantially the same, "supper arriving," "at supper time". This also is essential to the understanding of the incident. Feet-washing, pleasant and customary before a meal, would have been disagreeable and out of place in the course of it. [The custom is abundantly illustrated by Wetstein, Doughty and others. See especially Becker's Charicles.] The feet, either bare, or sandalled, or with shoes, were liable to be heated by the fine dust of the roads, and it was expected that the host would furnish means of washing them, see Lk. vii. 44. When our Lord and His disciples supped together, this office would be discharged by the youngest, or by the disciples in turn; but this evening the disciples had been disputing which of them was the greatest, Lk. xxii. 24, and consequently no one could stoop to do this menial office for the rest. (3) τοῦ διαβόλου . . . παραδῶ [or παραδοῖ], "the devil having now put into the heart," etc. For the expression βεβληκός εἰς τὴν καρδίαν see especially Pindar, Olymp., xiii. 16, πολλὰ δ' ἐν καρδίαις ἀνδρῶν ἔβαλον Ὠραὶ κ. τ. λ. Similar expressions are frequent in Homer. It is perhaps rather stronger than "suggest," "the devil having already put in the heart"; the idea had been entertained, if we cannot say that the purpose was already formed. His presence was another disturbing element in the feast. But had Jesus unmasked him before such fiery spirits as John and Peter, Judas would never have left that room alive. Peter's sword would have made surer work than with Malchus. Judas therefore is included in the feet-washing. "Jesus at the feet of the traitor, what a picture, what lessons for us" (As-tie).—Ver. 3. (4) εἰδὼς . . . χεῖρας, this consciousness on the part of Jesus is mentioned to bring out the condescension of the action to be related. (5) So too is the accompanying consciousness, ὅτι ἀπὸ Θεοῦ . . . ὑπάγει. It was not in forgetfulness of His true dignity but because conscious that He was supreme and God's ambassador that He did what He did. ["All things," says Melancthon, "condere testamentum promissum in Scripturis": "omnia, adeoque peccatum et mortem".]—Ver. 4. This person, and in this mood and in these circumstances, on the brink of His own passion, is free to attend to the wants of unworthy men, and ἐγείρεται . . . διεζωσμένους. "He rises," having reclined at the table in expectation that one or other of the disciples would do the feet-washing,—καὶ τίθησι τὰ ἱμάτια, "and lays aside His garments," i.e., His Tallith, appearing in His χιτών, similar to our "in His shirt sleeves". τίθημι is similarly used in τίθημι τὴν ψυχὴν, x. 11, etc. [See also Kypke on Lk. xix. 21.]—καὶ λαβὼν λέντιον διέζωσεν ἑαυτόν, "and having taken a lintheum," a towel or long linen cloth, "He girt Himself," tying the towel round Him. Cf. ἐγκομβώσασθε, 1 Pet. v. 5. The middle διεζώσατο is used in xxi. 7; the expression here more emphatically indicates that He was the sole Agent. The condescension is understood in the light of what Suetonius tells of Caligula (Cal. 26), that he was fond of making some of the senators wait at his table "succinctos linteo," that is, in the guise of waiters.—Ver. 5. εἶτα . . . νιπτῆρα. Each step in the whole astounding scene is imprinted on the mind of John. "Next He pours water into the basin," the basin which the landlord had furnished as part of the necessary arrangements. [νιπτῆρα is only found here; but ποδανιπτῆρ is not so rare; see Plut., Phocion, 20, where ποδανιπτῆρες filled with wine were provided for the guests.]—καὶ ἤρξατο νίπτειν . . . "nihil ministerii omittit" (Grotius). [Plutarch says of Favonius that he did for Pompey ὅσα δεσπότης δοῦλοι μεχρὶ νίψεως ποδῶν.] He "began" to wash the feet of the disciples; "began," ἐκεῖνος, “Κύριε, σὺ μου νίπτεις τοὺς πόδας;” 7. Ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς

 1 ver. 12 καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, “Ὁ ἐγὼ ποιῶ, σὺ οὐκ οἶδας ἄρτι, γνώση δὲ ἰμετὰ ταῦτα.” 8. Λέγει αὐτῷ Πέτρος, “Ὁ μὴ νίψῃς τοὺς πόδας μου εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα.” Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Ἐὰν μὴ νίψω σε, οὐκ m Deut. xiv. ἔξεις μέρος μετ’ ἐμοῦ.” 9. Λέγει αὐτῷ Σίμων Πέτρος, “Κύριε, 27. Rev. xx. 6. μὴ τοὺς πόδας μου μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὰς χεῖρας καὶ τὴν κεφαλὴν.”
 n Lev. xvi. 10. Λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Ὁ ἰαλουμένος οὐ χρεῖαν ἔχει ὅτι τοὺς
 4. Acts ix. 37. πόδας ἰνίψασθαι, ἀλλ’ ἔστι καθαρός ὅλος· καὶ ὑμεῖς καθαροὶ ἔστε, o Cp. Winer p. 638. ἀλλ’ οὐχὶ πάντες.” 11. “Ἦιδει γὰρ τὸν παραδιδόντα αὐτόν· διὰ p Ps. li. 7. τοῦτο εἶπεν, “Οὐχὶ πάντες καθαροὶ ἔστε.”

· Σ omits η τους ποδας, but these words are found in ABCEGKL.

perhaps because, as Meyer suggests, the washing was interrupted, but this is not certain.—Ver. 6. ἔρχεται οὖν, apparently in the order in which they happened to be sitting, and having first washed some of the other disciples, He comes to Simon Peter, who draws up his feet out of reach and exclaims, Κύριε, σὺ μου νίπτεις τοὺς πόδας; The σὺ μου are brought together for the sake of the contrast.—Ver. 7. This was a right impulse and honourable to Peter; and therefore Jesus treats it tenderly. ὁ ἐγὼ ποιῶ . . . μετὰ ταῦτα, “what I am doing thou dost not at present comprehend, but thou shalt learn as soon as I am finished”. The pronouns are emphatic, that Peter may understand that Jesus may have much to do which the disciple cannot comprehend. The first requisite in a disciple or follower is absolute trust in the wisdom of his Master. μετὰ ταῦτα refers to the immediate future; see ver. 12, where the explanation of the action is given. [οὐκ εἰς μακρὰν ἐρεῖ, Euthymius.]—Ver. 8. Peter, however, cannot accept the disciple’s attitude, but persists, Ὁ μὴ νίψῃς μου τοὺς πόδας εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα, “never shalt Thou wash my feet”. The εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα was prompted by the μετὰ ταῦτα. No future explanation can make this possible. Peter’s humility is true enough to allow him to see the incongruity of Jesus washing his feet: not deep enough to make him conscious of the incongruity of his thus opposing and dictating to his Master. To this characteristic utterance Jesus, waiting with the basin, replies, ἐὰν μὴ νίψω σε . . . ἐμοῦ. Superficially these words might mean that unless Peter allowed Jesus to wash him, he could not sit at table with Him. But evidently Peter found in them a deeper significance, and understood them as meaning: Unless I wash you, you are outcast from my fellowship and cease to share in my kingdom and destiny. Here the symbolic significance of the eating together and of the washing begins dimly to appear. That Peter saw that this deeper meaning was intended appears from the eagerness of his answer.—Ver. 9. Κύριε . . . κεφαλὴν. A moment ago he told his Master He was doing too much; now he tells Him He is doing too little. Self-will gives place slowly. Yet this was the unmistakable expression of devotion. If washing is any requirement for fellowship with Thee, wash me wholly. [Non pedes solum, quos soli ministri vident; sed manus et caput, quod convivae adspiciunt.] Wetstein.] He is still in error.—Ver. 10. Ὁ ἰαλουμένος . . . ὅλος. “He that has been in the bath has no need to wash save his feet, but is all clean.” His feet may be soiled by walking from the public bath to the supper chamber, and it is enough that they be washed. “Ad convivium vocati solebant prius in balneo lavari; in domo vero convivoris nonnisi pedes, quibus in via pulvis aut sordes adhaeserant, a servis abluebantur, ne lecti, super quibus accumbant, macularentur.” Wetstein. He supports the statement by many references. The added clause discloses that a spiritual sense underlies the symbol: ὑμεῖς καθαροὶ ἔστε, ἀλλ’ οὐχὶ πάντες, “ye are clean, but not all”. All had been washed: the feet of Judas were as clean as those of Peter. But Judas was not clean.—Ver. 11. That Judas was meant is at once said in ver. 11. “Ἦιδει . . . ἔστε. Jesus thus shows that He distinguishes between the offence of the rest and the sin of Judas. All that they required was to have the soil of

12. Ὅτε οὖν ἔνιψε τοὺς πόδας αὐτῶν, καὶ ἔλαβε τὰ ἱμάτια αὐτοῦ, q 1. 17. 18.
 ἄναπεσῶν<sup>1</sup> πάλιν, εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Γινώσκετε τί πεποίηκα ὑμῖν; r Lk. xi. 37.
 13. ὑμεῖς φωνεῖτέ με, Ὁ διδάσκαλος, καὶ ὁ κύριος· καὶ καλῶς s iv. 17; viii.
 λέγετε, εἰμὶ γάρ. 14. εἰ οὖν ἐγὼ ἔνιψα ὑμῶν τοὺς πόδας, ὁ κύριος <sup>48</sup> καὶ ὁ διδάσκαλος, καὶ ὑμεῖς ὀφείλετε ἀλλήλων νίπτειν τοὺς πόδας· 15. ὑπόδειγμα γὰρ ἔδωκα ὑμῖν, ἵνα καλῶς ἐγὼ ἔποιήσα ὑμῖν, καὶ t Jas. v. 10.
 ὑμεῖς ποιήτε. 16. ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, οὐκ ἔστι δοῦλος ἢ μείζων u 2 Pet. ii. 6.
 τοῦ κυρίου αὐτοῦ, οὐδὲ ἀπόστολος μείζων τοῦ πέμψαντος αὐτόν. v Exod. xiv.
 11.
 17. εἰ ταῦτα οἴδατε, μακάριοί ἐστε ἐὰν ποιήτε αὐτά. 18. οὐ περὶ w Mt. x. 24.
 πάντων ὑμῶν λέγω· ἐγὼ οἶδα οὐς<sup>2</sup> ἢ ἐξελεξάμην· ἄλλ’ ἵνα ἡ γραφὴ x Lk. vi. 40.
 πληρωθῆ, Ὁ ἰσχυρὸς μετ’ ἐμοῦ<sup>3</sup> τὸν ἄρτον, ἐπῆρεν ἐπ’ ἐμὲ τὴν y w vi. 70.
 ψ. xli. 9. z Constr. i.
 8.

<sup>1</sup> και ανεπεσεν in N*BC*.

<sup>2</sup> Better τινας with N BCL 33.

<sup>3</sup> μετ’ ἐμοῦ in NAD vet. Lat. vulg.; μου in BCL, adopted by W.H. The clause is thus closer to the Hebrew.

their present evil temper and jealousy removed: they were true in heart, they had been in the bath and had only contracted a slight stain. But Judas had not been in the bath: he had no genuine and habitual loyalty to Christ.—Ver. 12. Ὅτε . . . ὑμῖν: “when, then, He had washed their feet and taken His garments [cf. τίθησι τὰ ἱμάτια of ver. 4] and reclined again He said to them: Know ye what I have done to you?” Do you perceive the meaning of this action? By washing their feet He had washed their heart. By stooping to this menial service He had made them all ashamed of declining it. By this simple action He had turned a company of wrangling, angry, jealous men into a company of humbled and united disciples.—Ver. 13. ὑμεῖς φωνεῖτέ με, “ye call me,” in addressing me (φωνεῖν, not καλεῖν), ὁ διδάσκαλος καὶ ὁ Κύριος, “Teacher” and “Lord”; the nomina-tivus tituli, see Winer, 226. Perhaps “Rabbi” would convey better the respect involved in διδάσκαλος. καὶ καλῶς λέγετε, εἰμὶ γάρ. Jesus, humble and self-suppressing as He was, clearly recognised His own dignity and on occasion asserted it. Here the point of the lesson lay in His consciousness of being their Lord.—Ver. 14. Hence the a fortiori argument: εἰ οὖν ἐγὼ ἔνιψα . . . πόδας, “if I then, Lord and Teacher, washed your feet, ye also ought (ὀφείλετε denoting moral obligation) to wash one another’s feet”. “It is not the act itself, but its moral essence, which after His example He enjoins upon them to exercise.” Meyer. This has sometimes been considered a command enjoining the literal washing of the feet of poor saints: and was practised in England until 1731 by the Lord High Almoner, and is still practised by the Pope on Maundy Thursday (Dies Mandati), the day before Good Friday. See also Church’s Anselm, p. 49. The ancient practice is discussed in Augustine’s Letters, 55, to Januarius, c. 33. It at once took its place as symbolic of all kindly care of fellow-Christians, see 1 Tim. v. 10.—Ver. 15. ὑπόδειγμα . . . ποιήτε. ὑπόδειγμα is condemned by Phrynichus, who recommends the Attic παράδειγμα. See Rutherford’s interesting note, New Phryn., p. 62. The purpose, ἵνα, of His action was that they might act in the same humble, loving spirit, in all their conduct to one another.—Ver. 16. And as confirmatory of this example and in rebuke of their pride, He adds: οὐκ ἔστι δοῦλος . . . αὐτόν. In Mt. x. 24 a similar saying occurs; cf. also Lk. vi. 40, and Lk. xxii. 27. The slave whose function it is to serve is not “greater,” μείζων, than his lord, who may expect to receive service, and therefore the slave may well stoop to the offices which the lord himself discharges and count on no exemptions the lord does not claim.—Ver. 17. These are obvious first principles in Christian discipleship, but the mere knowledge of them is not enough: εἰ ταῦτα οἴδατε, μακάριοί ἐστε ἐὰν ποιήτε αὐτά. ταῦτα refers to what Jesus had just declared to be the significance of His action. εἰ οἴδατε, “if ye know,” as you do know; ἐὰν ποιήτε, a supposition. “The knowing is objectively granted,

2. xiv. 7. πτέρναν αὐτοῦ. 19. ἅπ' ἄρτι λέγω ὑμῖν πρὸ τοῦ γενέσθαι, ἵνα
 Rev. xiv.
 18. Cp. ὅταν γένηται, πιστεύσητε ὅτι ἔγώ εἰμι. 20. ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν,
 Mt. xxvi. Ὁ ὕλαμβάνων ἕάν τινα πέμψω, ἐμὲ λαμβάνει· ὁ δὲ ἐμὲ λαμβάνων,
 Ga. λαμβάνει τὸν πέμψαντά με."

21. Ταῦτα εἶπὼν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ὁ ἔταράχθη τῷ πνεύματι, καὶ ἐμαρτύρησε 24; xviii. 5, 8.
 b 1. 12. καὶ εἶπεν, "Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι ἔεις ἐξ ὑμῶν παραδώσει με."
 c xii. 27.
 d Acts 1. 17.

22. Ἔβλεπον οὖν εἰς ἀλλήλους οἱ μαθηταί, ἀπορούμενοι περὶ τίνος
 e Lk. xvi. 22. λέγει. 23. ἦν δὲ ἀνακείμενος εἰς τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ ἐν τῷ κόλπῳ

the doing subjectively conditioned." Meyer. On the double protasis see Burton, 268. μακάριοι is usually translated "blessed," Mt. v. 3, John xx. 29, and should be so here.—Ver. 18. This blessedness, He knew, could not attach to all of them: οὐ περὶ πάντων ὑμῶν λέγω, "I speak not of you all," I do not expect all of you to fulfil the condition of blessedness. ἐγὼ οἶδα οὓς ἐξελεξάμην, "I for my part (in contrast to the disciples who were in ignorance) know the men whom I have chosen as Apostles," and am therefore not taken by surprise by the treachery of Judas of them. For the choice of Judas see vi. 70, where the same word ἐξελεξάμην is used. ἀλλ' ἵνα . . . The simplest construction is: "but I chose Judas in order that," etc. This may not, however, involve that Jesus consciously chose Judas for this purpose. That is not said, and can scarcely be conceived. The Scripture which waited for fulfilment is Ps. xl. 9, ὁ ἐσθίων ἄρτους μου ἐμεγάλυνεν ἐπ' ἐμὲ περιρισμόν. Eating bread together is in all countries a sign, and in some a covenant or pledge of friendship. Cf. Kypke on ὁμοτράπεζος and Trumbull's Blood Covenant, p. 313, and Oriental Life, p. 361. Here the fact of Judas' eating bread with Jesus is introduced as aggravating his crime. "To lift the heel" is to kick, whether originally used of a horse or not; and expresses violence and contempt.—Ver. 19. This grave announcement was made at this point and not previously, ἅπ' ἄρτι, "from henceforth" (as if the knowledge resulting from the announcement rather than the announcement itself were dictating the expression) "I tell you before it happens, that when it has happened you may know that I am He," i.e., the Messiah in whom these predictions were destined to be fulfilled.—Ver. 20. But lest this announcement should weaken their confidence in one another and in their own call to the Apostolate ("probabile est voluisse Christum offendiculo mederi". Calvin) He hastens to add: ἀμὴν . . . πέμψαντά με [ἂν τινα better than ἕάν τινα]. He gives the assurance that those whom He sends as His apostles will be identified with Himself and with God.

Vv. 21-30. Judas is eliminated from the company.—Ver. 21. Ταῦτα εἶπὼν . . . παραδώσει με. Two elements in the company had prevented Jesus from freely uttering His last counsels to the Twelve. (1) They had manifested dissension which would prevent them from acting together when He was gone, and a temper which would prevent them from receiving His words. And (2) there was among them a traitor. The first element of discord had been removed by the feet-washing. He now proceeds to eliminate the second. But to have at once named the traitor would have been fatal. Peter and the rest would have taken steps to defeat, if not to put an end to Judas. Therefore He merely says, εἰς ἐξ ὑμῶν παραδώσει με. This it was which troubled His spirit, that one of the Twelve whom He had so cherished should turn traitor, using the familiarity and knowledge of intimacy to betray Him.—Ver. 22. The disciples had no idea who was meant. "Ἐβλεπον . . . λέγει, Judas could scarcely be "at a loss to know of whom He spoke".—Ver. 23. ἦν . . . Ἰησοῦς, the disciple whom Jesus loved lay next Him, ἐν τῷ κόλπῳ. Two arrangements of guests at a table were in vogue. They either lay at right angles to the table and parallel to one another, each resting on his left elbow and having his right hand free (see Rich's Dict., s. v. Triclinium, Lectus, Accubo); or they lay obliquely, the second reaching with his head to "the sinus of the girdle (κόλπος)" of the first, and with the feet of the first at his back; while the third occupied the same posture relatively to the second (see the engraving in Becker's Charicles, 327, and Lightfoot, p. 1095, who says that this second arrangement prevailed in Palestine in the time of Christ). John τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, ἴδὼν ἡγάπα δὲ Ἰησοῦς· 24. ἠνεύει οὖν τούτῳ Σίμων Πέτρος (xix. 26; xx. 2; xxi. 7. Acts xxiv. 10.)

 πυθέσθαι τίς ἂν εἴη περὶ οὗ λέγει. 25. ἐπιπεσὼν<sup>1</sup> δὲ ἐκείνος ἐπὶ τὸ στήθος τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, λέγει αὐτῷ, “Κύριε, τίς ἐστιν;” 26. ἀποκρίνεται ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Ἐκεῖνος ἐστὶν ᾧ ἐγὼ ἠβάψας τὸ ψωμίον ἐπιδώσω.”<sup>2</sup> ἢ Ruth ii. 14
 καὶ ἠέμβάψας τὸ ψωμίον, δίδωσιν Ἰούδα Σίμωνος Ἰσκαριώτη. 27. καὶ μετὰ τὸ ψωμίον, τότε εἰσῆλθεν εἰς ἐκείνον ὁ Σατανᾶς. λέγει οὖν αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Ὁ ποιεῖς, ποιήσον τάχιον.” 28. Τοῦτο δὲ οὐδεὶς ἔγνω τῶν ἀνακειμένων πρὸς τί εἶπεν αὐτῷ. 29. τινὲς γὰρ ἐδόκουν, ἐπεὶ τὸ ἄγλωσσόκομον εἶχεν ὁ Ἰούδας, ὅτι λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, 1 xii. 6 “Ἀγόρασον ὧν χρεῖαν ἔχομεν εἰς τὴν ἑορτὴν.” ἢ τοῖς πτωχοῖς ἴνα τι δῶ. 30. λαβὼν οὖν τὸ ψωμίον ἐκείνος, εὐθέως ἐξῆλθεν<sup>3</sup>. ἦν δὲ νύξ,<sup>4</sup> ὅτε οὖν ἐξῆλθε.

<sup>1</sup> ἀναπεσων in  $\aleph^c$ BC\*KL. οὕτως added after ἐκείνος in BCEF 33, “as he was”.

<sup>2</sup> T.R. in  $\aleph$ AD, it. vulg.; βαψω και δωσω αυτω in BCL copt. arm. aeth. adopted by Tr. Ti. W. H. R.

<sup>3</sup> ἐξῆλθεν ευθως in  $\aleph$ BCD.

<sup>4</sup>  $\aleph$ BCD 1, 33, it. vulg. place full stop after νύξ, and commence next paragraph with οτε ουν ἐξῆλθεν λεγει. So Tisch. and W. H.

was lying, then, next to Jesus, his position being inside that of Jesus. To him Peter νεύει, “beckons” (cf. νεύσω μὲν τοι ἐγὼ κεφαλῇ, Od., xvi. 283), taking the initiative as usual, but not himself asking, perhaps because he had made so many mistakes that evening already, perhaps because a private matter might better be transacted in a whisper from John.—Ver. 25. That disciple, ἐκείνος, when thus appealed to, ἀναπεσὼν ἐπὶ τὸ στήθος τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, “having leant back towards the breast of Jesus,” so as to speak more directly to Him and to be heard only by Him. On the difference between ἀνακειμένος and ἀναπεσὼν see Origen in Evangel. Jo., ii. 191, Brooke.—Ver. 26. But even in answer to John’s question, τίς ἐστιν; Jesus does not name Judas, but merely gives a sign by which John may recognise the traitor: Ἐκεῖνος . . . ἐπιδώσω, “he it is for whom I shall dip the sop and give it him”. Some argue from the insertion of the article τὸ ψωμίον that this was the sop made up of a morsel of lamb, a small piece of unleavened bread, and dipped in the bitter sauce, which was given by the head of the house to each guest as a regular part of the Passover; and that therefore John as well as the Synoptists considered this to be the Paschal Supper. But not only is the article doubtful, see W. H., but it is an ordinary Oriental custom for the host to offer such a mid-bit to any favoured guest; and we are rather entitled to see in the act the last appeal to Judas’ better feeling. The very mark Jesus chooses to single him out is one which on ordinary occasions was a mark of distinctive favour. At any rate he is thus all the more effectually screened from the others.—Ver. 27. But instead of moving Judas to compunction μετὰ τὸ ψωμίον, τότε εἰσῆλθεν εἰς ἐκείνον ὁ Σατανᾶς. μετὰ “after,” not “with,” “non cum offula,” Bengel and Cyril, who also says, οὐ γὰρ ἐτι σύμβουλον ἔχει τὸν σατανᾶν, ἀλλ’ ὅλης ἤδη τῆς καρδίας δεσπότην. On ἐκείνον Bengel also has: “Jam remote notat Judam”. Morally he is already far removed from that company. But what was it that thus finally determined Judas? Perhaps the very revulsion of feeling caused by taking the sop from Jesus: perhaps the accompanying words, “Ὁ ποιεῖς, ποιήσον τάχιον, “what thou doest, do quickly”. τάχιον: “to Attic writers θάσσων (θάπτων) was the only comparative, and τάχιστος the only superlative”. Rutherford, New Phryn., p. 150. The idea in the comparative is “with augmented speed,” see Donaldson’s Greek Gram., p. 390.—Ver. 28. Τοῦτο . . . αὐτῷ. All heard the command given to Judas, but none of them knew its object, not even John; for although he was now aware that Judas was the traitor he did not connect the command “Do it quickly” with the actual work of betrayal.—Ver. 29. τινὲς

j vii. 39; xii. 16. 31. λέγει δ' Ἰησοῦς, "Νῦν ἰδοξάσθη ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, καὶ ὁ Θεὸς ἰδοξάσθη ἐν αὐτῷ. 32. εἰ ὁ Θεὸς ἰδοξάσθη ἐν αὐτῷ,<sup>1</sup> καὶ ὁ Θεὸς δοξάσει αὐτὸν ἐν ἑαυτῷ, καὶ εὐθὺς δοξάσει αὐτόν. 33. <sup>k</sup> Τεκνία, ἔτι μικρὸν μεθ' ὑμῶν εἰμι. Ζητήσετέ με, καὶ καθὼς εἶπον τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις, Ὅτι ὅπου ὑπάγω ἐγώ, ὑμεῖς οὐ δύνασθε ἔλθειν, καὶ ἔτι εἰμι μεθ' ὑμῶν ἄρτι. 34. <sup>m</sup> ἐντολὴν καινὴν δίδωμι ὑμῖν, ἵνα ἀγαπάτε ἀλλήλους· καθὼς ἠγάπησα ὑμᾶς, ἵνα καὶ ὑμεῖς ἀγαπάτε ἀλλήλους. 35. <sup>n</sup> ἐν τούτῳ γνώσκονται πάντες ὅτι ἐμοὶ μαθηταὶ ἔστε, ἐὰν ἀγάπη γὰρ ἐδόκουν. Some supposed that Judas being treasurer of the company had been sent to buy what they needed for the feast, or to give something to the poor. That it was possible at so late an hour to make purchases appears from Mt. xxv. 9-11 (Holtzmann).—Ver. 30. Judas on his part, having accepted the sop, ἐξῆλθεν εὐθὺς, the εὐθὺς answering to τᾶχιον, ver. 27; he went out immediately, taking the purse with him no doubt. ἦν δὲ νύξ, "and it was night". The sudden darkness succeeding sunset in the East suddenly fell on the room, impressing John's sensitive spirit and adding to the perturbation of the company. The note of time may however only result from John's desire to keep his narrative exact.

<sup>1</sup> This clause omitted in  $\aleph^*BC^*DL$  (and by W.H.R.); found in  $\aleph^cAC^*G$  and many versions.

Ver. 31—XIV. 31 comprise one continuous conversation, introduced by Jesus' announcement (vv. 31-35) of His speedy departure.—Ver. 31. Ὅτε οὖν ἐξῆλθεν. As soon as Judas had gone out, the spirit of Jesus rose, and with a note of triumph He explains the situation to the disciples. Two points He emphasises: His work is done, and He must leave them. The former He announces in the words Νῦν ἰδοξάσθη . . . αὐτῷ. "This 'now' with which the Lord turns to the faithful eleven, expresses at once the feeling of deliverance from the traitor's presence and His free acceptance of the issues of the traitor's work." Westcott. ἰδοξάσθη the aorist is used because the traitor is considered to have "as it were already completed his deed". Winer, p. 346. The Son of Man is "glorified" by accomplishing the work of His life by being accepted as the manifestation of God, and by being acknowledged by the Father as having revealed Him; see xvii. 1, 4, 5, xii. 23, xi. 4. Cf. Milligan's Ascension of our Lord, p. 79.—Ver. 32. Necessarily therefore when He is glorified

ὁ Θεὸς ἰδοξάσθη ἐν αὐτῷ. καὶ ὁ Θεὸς δοξάσει αὐτόν ἐν ἑαυτῷ. God is more definitely named as the source of the glorification of the Son of Man; and as God was glorified "in" Jesus, so shall Jesus be glorified "in" God. It is not only παρὰ σεαυτῷ, as in xvii., 5, but ἐν ἑαυτῷ, which does not merely mean that He will be taken up into the eternal blessedness of God, but that His glory will be the Divine glory itself.—Ver. 33. This result was to be forthwith achieved: εὐθὺς δοξάσει αὐτόν, which at once is interpreted to the disciples in the explicit statement Τεκνία, ἔτι μικρὸν μεθ' ὑμῶν εἰμι. Τεκνία is frequent in 1 John; here only in the Gospel. Lightfoot (p. 1098) says: "Discipulus cujusvis vocatur ejus filius"; but here there is a tenderness in the expression not so accounted for. ἔτι μικρὸν, "yet a little," i.e., it is only for a little longer; cf. vii. 33. This announcement, formerly made to the Jews (vii. 33, viii. 21, 24), He now, ἄρτι, makes to the disciples; arousing their attention to what follows, as His last injunctions. In view of the temper they had that evening displayed and the necessity for united action and unanimous testimony He first lays upon them the commandment to love one another.—Ver. 34. ἐντολὴν καινὴν δίδωμι ὑμῖν, ἵνα ἀγαπάτε ἀλλήλους: "one another," not "all men," which is a different commandment. So, rightly, Grotius: "Novum autem dicit quia non agit de dilectione communi omnium . . . sed de speciali Christianorum inter se qua tales sunt," and Holtzmann: "Es ist die φιλαδελφία im Unterschied von der allgemeinen ἀγάπη". The necessity of love among those who were to carry on Christ's work had that night become apparent. It was "new," because the love of Christ's friends for Christ's sake was a new thing in the world. There-ἔχητε ὁ ἐν ἀλλήλοις." 36. Λέγει αὐτῷ Σίμων Πέτρος, "Κύριε, ποῦ ὁ ὑπάγεις;" ἀπεκρίθη αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Ὅπου ὑπάγω, οὐ δύνασαι μοι νῦν ἀκολουθῆσαι· ὕστερον δὲ ἀκολουθήσεις μοι." 37. Λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Πέτρος, "Κύριε, διατί οὐ δύναμαί σοι ἀκολουθῆσαι ἄρτι; τὴν ψυχὴν μου ὑπὲρ σοῦ ἠθήσω." 38. Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Τὴν ψυχὴν σου ὑπὲρ ἐμοῦ θήσεις; ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω σοι, οὐ μὴ ἀλέκτωρ ἠ φωνήσει ἕως οὐ ἀπαρνήσῃ με τρίς.

XIV. 1. "Μὴ ἁταρασσέσθω ὑμῶν ἡ καρδιά· πιστεύετε εἰς τὸν Θεόν, καὶ εἰς ἐμὲ πιστεύετε. 2. ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ τοῦ πατρὸς μου μοναὶ πολλαὶ εἰσιν· εἰ δὲ μὴ, εἶπον ἂν ὑμῖν· πορεύομαι ἔτοιμάσαι fore the kind rather than the degree of love is indicated in the clause καθὼς ἠγάπησα ὑμᾶς κ. τ. λ.—Ver. 35. And this Christian love is to be the sole sufficing evidence of the individual's Christianity: ἐν τούτῳ (emphatic) γνώσκονται . . . ἀλλήλοις. Cf. Acts iv. 32, 1 John iii. 10; also Tertull., Apol., 39, "vide, inquit, ut invicem se diligant"; Clem. Alex., Strom., ii. 9; Min. Felix, Octavius, 9.—Ver. 36. On this announcement of Jesus that He was shortly to leave them follow four characteristic utterances of the disciples. First as usual, λέγει αὐτῷ Σίμων Πέτρος, Κύριε ποῦ ὑπάγεις; "Lord, where are you going?" referring to ver. 33. The Vulgate renders "Domine, quo vadis?" the words which the legend ascribes to Peter when withdrawing from persecution in Rome he met Jesus entering the city. Jesus does not needlessly excite them by plainly telling them of His death, for He has much to say to them which He wishes them to listen to undisturbed. He assures Peter that though he cannot now accompany his Master, he will afterwards follow, and so rejoin Him; cf. xxi. 19.—Ver. 37. This does not satisfy Peter. He sees it is some dangerous enterprise Jesus is undertaking, and he feels his courage discredited by the refusal to be allowed to accompany Him. Κύριε διατί . . . θήσω. "Putasne ulla itineris molestia me terri?" Grotius. "In the zeal of love he mistakes the measure of his moral strength." Meyer. Mt. and Mk. represent all the disciples as making the same declaration (Mt. xxvi. 35, Mk. xiv. 31); which made it all the more necessary to expose its unconscious hollowness, painful as it must have been to Jesus to do so. Τὴν ψυχὴν σου . . . τρίς. "Wilt thou lay down . . . ? So far from that, you will deny me thrice before the morning." οὐ μὴ ἀλέκτωρ φωνήσει. "Cock-crow" was used among the Jews as a designation of time (Lightfoot on Mt. xxvi. 34); cf. Mk. xiii. 35, where the night is divided into δύο, μεσονύκτιον, ἀλεκτοροφωνία, πρωί. At the equinox cock-crow would be between 2 and 4 A.M. See Greswell's Dissert., iii. 216. This was incomprehensible; how the night could bring circumstances so appalling as to tempt any of them, and compel the hardest to deny Jesus, they could not conceive.—CHAPTER XIV. Ver. 1. But as they sat astounded and perplexed, He continues, Μὴ ἁταρασσέσθω ὑμῶν ἡ καρδιά. Let not your heart be tossed and agitated like water driven by winds; cf. Liddell and S. and Thayer. He not only commands them to dismiss their agitation, but gives them reason: πιστεύετε . . . πιστεύετε. "Trust God, yea, trust me." Trust Him who overrules all events, He will bring you through this crisis for which you feel yourselves incompetent; or if in your present circumstances that faith is too difficult, trust me whom you see and know and whose word you cannot doubt. It is legitimate to construe the first πιστεύετε as an indicative, and the second as imperative: but this gives scarcely so appropriate a sense.—Ver. 2. As an encouragement to this trust, He adds, ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ . . . ὑμῖν. He is going home to His Father's house, but had there been room in it only for Himself He would necessarily have told them that this was the case, because the very reason of His going was to prepare a place for them. ὅτι assigns the reason for the necessity of explanation: the reason being that His purpose or plan and xv. 5.

<sup>1</sup> φωνήση in ὩABG.

<sup>2</sup> ὅτι is inserted before πορευομαι in ὩABC*DKL.

Rom. i. 12

p x. 11, 17.
q Mk. xiv.
30. Zeph.
ii. 14.
a xi. 33. Ps.
lv. 4.
b Cp. ii. 16;
2 Cor. v. 1.
c Cp. 1 Mac.
vii. 38.
d Gen. xxx.
1.

τόπον ὑμῖν. 3. καὶ ἐὰν πορευθῶ καὶ ἐτοιμάσω ὑμῖν τόπον, πάλιν
 e Mt. xvii. ἔρχομαι καὶ ἴ παραλήψομαι ὑμᾶς πρὸς ἑμαυτὸν· ἵνα ὅπου εἰμι ἐγώ, 11. Acts καὶ ὑμεῖς ἦτε. 4. καὶ ὅπου ἐγὼ ὑπάγω οἴδατε, καὶ τὴν ὁδὸν
 i. 11 οἴδατε.”<sup>1</sup> 5. Λέγει αὐτῷ Θωμᾶς, “Κύριε, οὐκ οἶδαμεν ποῦ ὑπάγεις· f Song viii. Mt. καὶ πῶς δυνάμεθα<sup>2</sup> τὴν ὁδὸν εἰδέναί;” 6. Λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, xvii 1. “Ἐγὼ εἰμι ἡ ὁδὸς καὶ ἡ ἀλήθεια καὶ ἡ ζωὴ· οὐδεὶς ἔρχεται πρὸς

<sup>1</sup> Omit καὶ before and οἴδατε after τὴν ὁδὸν with NBLX. The words occur in AD, probably inserted for clearness.

<sup>2</sup> Instead of δυνάμεθα εἰδέναί Tr. Ti. W. H. R. read οἶδαμεν with BC* D.

for His future would require to be entirely altered had there been no room for them in His Father's house. "My Father's house" is used in ii. 16 of the Temple: here of the immediate presence of the Father and of that condition in which His love and protection are uninterruptedly and directly experienced. This is most naturally thought of as a place, but with the corrective that "it is not in heaven one finds God, but in God one finds heaven". Cf. Godet. In this house, as in a great palace, cf. Iliad, vi. 242, μοναὶ πολλαὶ εἰσιν. μονὴ (μένειν), only here and in ver. 23, means a place to abide in, and was used of a station on a journey, a resting place, quarters for the night, and in later ecclesiastical Greek a monastery. See Soph., Lexicon. "Mansions" reproduces the Vulgate "mansiones". See further Wright's Bible Word-Book. εἰ δὲ μὴ . . . "were it not so, I would have told you," "ademissem vobis spem inanem," Grotius. Had there been no such place and no possibility of preparing it, He necessarily would have told them, because the very purpose of His leaving them was to prepare a place for them. ἐτοιμάσαι τόπον, a figure derived from the custom of sending forward one of a party to secure quarters and provide all requisites. Cf. the Alcestis, line 363: ἀλλ' οὖν ἐκέισε προσδόκα μ', ὅταν θάνω, καὶ δῶμ' ἐτοίμαί, ὡς συνοικήσουσά μοι. What was involved in the preparation here spoken of is detailed in Hebrews. Cf. Selby's Ministry of the Lord, 275.—Ver. 3. Neither will He prepare a place and leave them to find their own way to it.—καὶ ἐὰν πορευθῶ . . . ἦτε. "If I go"; that is, the commencement of this work as their forerunner was the pledge of its completion. And its completion is effected by His coming again and receiving them to Himself, or "to His own home," πρὸς ἑμαυτὸν. Cf. xx. 10.—πάλιν ἔρχομαι καὶ παραλήψομαι, "I come again and will receive". The present is used in ἔρχομαι as if the coming were so certain as to be already begun, cf. v. 25. For παραλήψομαι see Cant. viii. 2. The promise is fulfilled in the death of the Christian, and it has changed the aspect of death. The personal second coming of Christ is not a frequent theme in this Gospel. The ultimate object of His departure and return is ἵνα ὅπου εἰμι ἐγώ, καὶ ὑμεῖς ἦτε. Cf. 1 Thess. iv. 17, 2 Cor. v. 8, Phil. i. 23. The object of Christ's departure is permanent reunion and the blessedness of the Christian.

Vv. 4-7. A second interruption occasioned by Thomas.—Ver. 4. καὶ ὅπου ἐγὼ ὑπάγω οἴδατε τὴν ὁδὸν. The ἐγὼ is emphatic: the disciples knew the direction in which He was going.—Ver. 5. But this statement bewilders the despondent Thomas, who gloomily interjects: Κύριε . . . εἰδέναί; Thomas' difficulty is that not knowing the goal they cannot know the way. In the reply of Jesus both the goal and the way are disclosed.—Ver. 6. ἐγὼ εἰμι . . . ἐμοῦ. "I am the way and the truth and the life: no one comes to the Father save through me." I do not merely point out the way and teach the truth and bestow life, but I am the way and the truth and the life, so that by attachment to me one necessarily is in the way and possesses the truth and the life. "The way" here referred to is the way to the Father. He is the goal of all human aspiration: and there is but one way to the Father, "no one comes," etc.—καὶ ἡ ἀλήθεια, "and the truth," primarily about God and the way to Him, but also as furnishing us with all knowledge which we now require for life. Thomas craved knowledge sufficient to guide him in the present crisis. Jesus says: You have it in me.—καὶ ἡ ζωὴ, "and the life"; the death which casts its shadow over the eleven and Himself is itself to be swallowed up in life. Those who

τὸν πατέρα, εἰ μὴ δι' ἐμοῦ. 7. εἰ ἐγνώκετέ με, καὶ τὸν πατέρα μου ἐγνώκετε ἂν<sup>1</sup>· καὶ<sup>g</sup> ἂπ' ἄρτι γινώσχετε αὐτὸν, καὶ ἐωράκατε αὐτόν." <sup>g</sup> xiii. 19 reif. h<sup>h</sup> ἀρκεῖ h<sup>h</sup> xxx. 16.

8. Λέγει αὐτῷ Φίλιππος, "Κύριε, δεῖξον ἡμῖν τὸν πατέρα, καὶ ἡμῖν." 9. Λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Τοσοῦτον χρόνον μεθ' ὑμῶν εἰμι, καὶ οὐκ ἐγνωκάς με Φίλιππε; ὁ ἐωρακὼς ἐμὲ, ἐώρακε τὸν πατέρα· καὶ πῶς σὺ λέγεις, Δεῖξον ἡμῖν τὸν πατέρα; 10. οὐ πιστεύεις ὅτι ἐγὼ ἐν τῷ πατρὶ, καὶ ὁ πατὴρ ἐν ἐμοί ἐστι; τὰ ῥήματα ἃ ἐγὼ λαλῶ ὑμῖν, ἂπ' ἐμαυτοῦ οὐ λαλῶ· ὁ δὲ πατὴρ ὁ ἐν ἐμοί μένων, <sup>i</sup> v. 19 reif. <sup>j</sup> vi. 50, etc.

αὐτὸς ποιεῖ τὰ ἔργα. 11. πιστεúετε μοι ὅτι ἐγὼ ἐν τῷ πατρὶ, καὶ ὁ πατὴρ ἐν ἐμοί· εἰ δὲ μὴ, διὰ τὰ ἔργα αὐτὰ πιστεúετε μοι. 12. Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὁ πιστεúων εἰς ἐμὲ, τὰ ἔργα ἃ ἐγὼ ποίω, κάκεινος ποιήσει, καὶ <sup>k</sup> μείζονα τούτων ποιήσει· ὅτι ἐγὼ πρὸς τὸν <sup>k</sup> Mt. xxi. 21.

<sup>1</sup> Instead of ἐγνώκετε ἂν W.H. read ἂν ἤδειτε with BCL 33.

are one with Jesus cannot die. They are possessed of the source of life. Further see Hort's The Way, etc., and Bernard's Central Teaching.— οὐδεὶς ἔρχεται, "no one comes to the Father save through me" as the way, the truth, the life. It is not "through believing certain propositions regarding me" nor "through some special kind of faith," but "through me".—Ver. 7. He is the essential knowledge, εἰ ἐγνώκετέ με . . . Some press the distinction between ἐγνώκετε and ἤδειτε, "the first representing a knowledge acquired and progressive; the second a knowledge perceptive and immediate". But this discrimination is here inappropriate. The clause explains the foregoing. The Father is in Jesus, and to know Him is to know the Father. They had unconsciously been coming to the Father and living in Him. Now they were to do so consciously: ἂπ' ἄρτι γινώσχετε . . . αὐτόν. The repeated αὐτόν brings out the point, that it was the Father that was henceforth to be recognised by them when they saw and thought of Jesus: "ye know Him and have seen Him".

Vv. 8-14. A third interruption by Philip; to which Jesus replies, appending to His answer a promise which springs out of what He had said to Philip.—Ver. 8. Λέγει . . . ἡμῖν. Philip, seizing upon the ἐώρακατε αὐτόν of ver. 7, utters the universal human craving to see God, to have the same indubitable direct knowledge of Him as we have of one another. Perhaps Philip supposed some appearance visible to the eye would be granted. Always there persists the feeling that more might be done to make God known than has been done.—Ver. 9. Jesus corrects the error, and guides the craving to its true satisfaction. Τοσοῦτον χρόνον . . . πατέρα [τοσοῦτον χρόνον may be a gloss for the dative which is found in  $\aleph$ DL]. The manifestation which Philip craves had been made, and made continuously for some considerable time; for so long that it was matter of surprise and regret to Jesus that Philip needed still to be taught that he who saw Jesus saw the Father. It is implied that not to see the Father in Jesus was not to know Him.—Ver. 10. οὐ πιστεύεις . . . ἐστι; This unbelief was involved in Philip's question, but when the question of the mutual indwelling of the Father and Jesus was thus directly put to him, he would have no doubt as to the answer. cf. x. 38. The fact of the union is indisputable; the mode is inexplicable; some of the results are indicated in the words: τὰ ῥήματα . . . τὰ ἔργα. See vii. 16-18 and v. 19. The mutual indwelling is such that everything Jesus says or does is the Father's saying or doing. This was so obvious that Jesus could appeal to the works He did in case His assertion was disbelieved.—Ver. 11. πιστεúετε μοι . . . πιστεúετε. "Believe me," i.e., my assertion, not my manifestation, "or if you find that difficult, believe on account of the works themselves". The mention of His works and the evidence they afford that He is in the Father suggests to Him a ground of comfort for His disciples in view of His departure. And from this point onwards in this chapter it is to the comforting of the disciples our Lord addresses Him-

1 xv. 16. πατέρα μου πορεύομαι. 13. καὶ ὃ τι ἂν αἰτήσητε ἔν τῳ ὀνόματί μου, τοῦτο ποιήσω· ἵνα δοξασθῇ ὁ πατήρ ἐν τῳ υἱῳ. 14. ἕάν τι αἰτήσητε ἐν τῳ ὀνόματί μου, ἐγὼ ποιήσω.

m Burton, 15. "Ἐὰν ἀγαπᾷτέ με, τὰς ἐντολὰς τὰς ἐμὰς ἡ τηρήσατε.<sup>1</sup> 16. <sup>250.</sup> καὶ ἐγὼ ἐρωτήσω τὸν πατέρα, καὶ ἄλλον ἢ παράκλητον δώσει ὑμῖν, n ver. 26; xv. 26; xvi. 7. 1 ἵνα μένη μεθ' ὑμῶν εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα, 17. ὁ τὸ πνεῦμα τῆς ἀληθείας, ὃ ὃ Jo. ii. 1; o xv. 26; xvi. 13. 1 ὁ κόσμος οὐ δύναται λαβεῖν, ὅτι οὐ θεωρεῖ αὐτὸ, οὐδὲ γινώσκει αὐτό· Jo. iv. 6. 1 ὑμεῖς δὲ γινώσκετε αὐτὸ, ὅτι παρ' ὑμῖν μένει,<sup>2</sup> καὶ ἐν ὑμῖν ἔσται.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>1</sup> τηρήσατε is read in BL 54, 73, "ye will keep". This is adopted by Tr. Ti. W. H. R. τηρήσατε, "keep," is found in ADQ, it. vulg. and other versions.

<sup>2</sup> The vulg. has "manebit," having read μενεῖ. So Arm. and Aeth. versions.

<sup>3</sup> T. R. supported by  $\Sigma$ AD<sup>2</sup>LP 33. εστιν by BD\* 1, 22, and is adopted by Tr. and W. H.

self. First, in vv. 12-14; second, in vv. 15-17; third, in vv. 18-21. The mention of the Paraclete in connection with this third item of encouragement gives rise to a fourth interruption, this time by Judas, vv. 22-24; and at ver. 25 Jesus resumes His explanation of the Paraclete's function, and closes with several considerations calculated to remove their fears.—Ver. 12. ἀμὴν . . . ποιήσει. The first encouragement is the assurance that through Christ's absence the disciples would be enabled to do greater works than Jesus Himself had done. These "greater" works were the spiritual effects accomplished by the disciples, especially the great novel fact of conversion. See this developed in Parker's The Paraclete. Such works were to be possible ὅτι . . . πορεύομαι. It was by founding a spiritual religion and altering men's views of the spiritual world Christ enabled His followers to do these greater works. Here this is explained on the plane of the disciples' thoughts and in this form: "I go to my Father, the source of all power, and whatever you ask in my name I will do it".—Ver. 13. τοῦτο ποιήσω, so what they do is still His doing; one condition being attached to their prayers, that they ask ἐν τῳ ὀνόματί μου. The name of a person can only be used when we seek to enforce his will and further his interests. This gives the condition of successful prayer: it must be for the furtherance of Christ's kingdom. For the end of all is ἵνα δοξασθῇ ὁ πατήρ ἐν τῳ υἱῳ, that is, that the fulfilment of God's purpose in sending forth His Son may be manifest in Christ's people and in their beneficent work in the world.—Ver. 14. In ver. 14 the promise is repeated, as Euthymius says, for confirmation: τὸ αὐτὸ λέγει βεβαιῶν μάλιστα τὸν λόγον. Perhaps, too, additional significance is given to His agency by introducing ἐγὼ. Cf. Bengel and Meyer.

Vv. 15-17. The second encouragement: the promise of another Paraclete.—Ver. 15. ἕάν . . . τηρήσατε. The fulfilment of the promise He is about to give depends upon their condition of heart and life. This therefore He announces as the preamble to the promise. On their side there would be a constant endeavour to carry out His instructions: on His side καγὼ ἐρωτήσω . . . During His ministry Jesus has said little of the Spirit. Now on the eve of His departure He directs attention to this "alter ego". He designates Him ἄλλον παράκλητον, implying that Jesus Himself was a Paraclete. See 1 John ii. 1. παράκλητος is literally advocatus, called to one's aid, especially in a court of justice. [Cf. παραστάτης in Arist., Thesm., 369; Ecc., 9.] See especially Hatch, Essays in Bibl. Greek, p. 82, and Westcott's "Additional Note". "Comforter" in A. V. is used in its original sense of "strengthened" (con, fortis); as in Wicliff's version of Phil. iv. 13, "I may all things in him that comforteth me" (see Wright's Bible Word-Book). This Paraclete should remain with them forever, and He is specifically designated (ver. 17) τὸ πνεῦμα τῆς ἀληθείας, cf. xvi. 13, 14; He would enable them to understand the new truths which were battling with their old conceptions, and to readjust their beliefs round a new centre. He would explain the departure of Christ, and the principles of the new economy under which they were henceforth to live. This spirit was to be peculiarly theirs, ὁ ὁ κόσμος οὐ δύναται λαβεῖν, the characteristically worldly cannot receive that which can only be apprehended by spiritually prepared persons. It has been proposed to render λαβεῖν, "seize" or "apprehend," as if a contrast to the world's apprehension and dismissal of Jesus were intended. But λαμβάνειν τὸ πνεῦμα is regularly used in N.T. to express "receiving the Spirit," Gal. iii. 2; 1 Cor. ii. 12. The world cannot receive the Spirit ὅτι οὐ θεωρεῖ αὐτό, . . . Outward sense cannot apprehend the invisible Spirit; and the world has no personal experience of His presence and power; but ye, ὑμεῖς, have this experimental knowledge, "because He is even now abiding with you (has already begun His ministry; or, rather, has this for His characteristic that He remains with you, making you the object of His work), and shall be within you". With the entire statement cf. 1 Cor. ii. 8-14.

18. οὐκ ἀφήσω ὑμᾶς ὀρφανούς· ἔρχομαι πρὸς ὑμᾶς. 19. ἔτι πρὸς ἡμᾶς ἔτι μικρὸν καὶ ὁ κόσμος με οὐκ ἔτι θεωρεῖ, ὑμεῖς δὲ θεωρεῖτέ με· ὅτι ἐγὼ ζῶ, καὶ ὑμεῖς ζήσεσθε. 20. ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ γνώσεσθε ὑμεῖς ὅτι ἐγὼ ἐν τῷ πατρὶ μου, καὶ ὑμεῖς ἐν ἐμοί, καὶ ἐγὼ ἐν ὑμῖν. 21. ὁ ἔχων τὰς ἐντολάς μου καὶ τηρῶν αὐτάς, ἐκεῖνός ἐστιν ὁ ἀγαπῶν με· ὁ δὲ ἀγαπῶν με, ἀγαπηθήσεται ὑπὸ τοῦ πατρὸς μου· καὶ ἐγὼ

Vv. 18-21. The third encouragement: that Jesus Himself will come to them and make Himself known to them.—Ver. 18. Great as was the promise of this other helper, this spirit of truth, it did not seem to compensate for the departure of Jesus. "Another," any other, was unable to fill the blank; it was Himself they craved. Therefore He goes on, οὐκ ἀφήσω ὑμᾶς ὀρφανούς· ἔρχομαι πρὸς ὑμᾶς, "I will not abandon you as orphans," ὀρφανός (orbus) "bereaved," used of fathers bereft of children (1 Thess. ii. 17, Dionys. Hal., i.); as well as of children bereft of parents. See Elsner. πατρικῆς εὐσπλαχνίας τὸ ῥῆμα, Euthymius. Cf. Ps. ix. 14, ὀρφανῶ σὺ ἦσθα βοηθός. Wetstein quotes Rabbi Akiba as lamenting the death of Rabbi Eleazar, "Vae mihi . . . quia totam hanc generationem reliquisti orphanam". The utter helplessness of the disciples without their Master is indicated. ἔρχομαι πρὸς ὑμᾶς. From the absence of ἐγὼ it may be gathered that Jesus means to point out not so much that it is He who is coming through the spirit to them, as that His apparent departure is really a nearer approach.—Ver. 19. In a short time, ἔτι μικρὸν, the world would no longer see Him, but His disciples would be conscious of His presence, ὑμεῖς δὲ θεωρεῖτέ με, present for immediate future. His presence would be manifested in their new life which they would trace to Him, ὅτι ἐγὼ ζῶ, καὶ ὑμεῖς ζήσεσθε. This is confirmed by Paul's "No longer I, but Christ liveth in me". Gal. ii. 20. The grand evidence of Christ's continued life and presence is the Christian life of the disciple.—Ver. 20. ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ, "in that day," which does not mean Pentecost, but the new Christian era which was to be characterised by these experiences. Cf. Holtzmann. The sense of a new life produced by Christ would compel the conviction ὅτι ἐγὼ ἐν τῷ πατρὶ . . . "that I am in the Father" in vital union with the source of all life, "and that you are in me," vitally connected with me so as to receive that life that I live, "and I in you," filling you with all the fulness that is in myself, living out my own life in and through you, and finding in you room for the output of all I am.—Ver. 21. The conditions on which depended the manifestation of the departed Christ are then exhibited, ὁ ἔχων . . . ἐμαντόν. The love to which Christ promises a manifestation of Himself is not an idle sentiment or shallow fancy, but a principle prompting obedience, ὁ ἔχων τὰς ἐντολάς μου, cf. 1 John ii. 7, iv. 21, 2 John 5; it means more than "hearing," and is yet not equivalent to τηρῶν; it seems to point to the permanent possession of the commandments in consciousness. This finds its appropriate expression in τηρῶν αὐτάς—"keeping them," observing them in the life. This is the expression and proof of love, and this love finds its response and reward in the love of the Father and of the Son, and in the manifestation of the Son to the individual. The appropriateness of introducing the Father and His love appears in ver. 24. The love of Christ is that which prompts the manifestation. ἐμφανίσω, the word is used by Moses in Exodus xxxiii. 13. Reynolds says: "This remarkable word implies that the scene or place of the higher manifestation ἀγαπήσω αὐτὸν, καὶ ἐμφανίσω αὐτῷ ἐμαυτόν." 22. Δέγει αὐτῷ Ἰούδας, οὐχ ὁ Ἰσκαριώτης, "Κύριε, τί γέγονεν ὅτι ἡμῖν μέλλεις ἐμφανίζειν σεαυτὸν, καὶ οὐχὶ τῷ κόσμῳ;" 23. Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, "Ἐάν τις ἀγαπᾷ με, τὸν λόγον μου τηρήσει, καὶ ὁ πατήρ μου ἀγαπήσει αὐτὸν, καὶ πρὸς αὐτὸν ἐλευσόμεθα, καὶ ἡ μονὴν παρ' αὐτῷ ποιήσομεν.<sup>1</sup> 24. ὁ μὴ ἀγαπῶν με, τοὺς λόγους μου οὐ τηρεῖ· καὶ ὁ λόγος ὃν ἀκούετε, οὐκ ἔστιν ἐμὸς, ἀλλὰ τοῦ πέμψαντός με πατρός.

25. "Ταῦτα λελάληκα ὑμῖν παρ' ὑμῖν μένων· 26. ὁ δὲ ἑπαράκλητος, τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ Ἅγιον, ὃ πέμψει ὁ πατήρ ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί μου, ἐκεῖνος ὑμᾶς διδάξει πάντα, καὶ ὑπομνήσει ὑμᾶς πάντα ἃ εἶπον ὑμῖν.

r Exod.
xxxiii. 13.
Mt. xxvii.
53. Heb.
ix. 24.
s ver. 2.

t ver. 16.

<sup>1</sup> ποιησομεθα has the stronger attestation, being read in  $\zeta$ BLX 33.

will be in (ἐν) the consciousness of the soul". The word however is currently used for outward manifestation; although here the manifestation alluded to is inward. Cf. Judas' words. The nature of the manifestation has already been explained, ver. 19.

Vv. 22-24. A fourth interruption, by Judas.—Ver. 22. All that Jesus has said has borne more and more clearly in upon the mind of the disciples the disappointing conviction that the manifestation referred to is not to be on the expected Messianic lines. Accordingly Judas, not Iscariot, but Thaddaeus or Lebbaeus (Mt. x. 3; Lk. vi. 16), says: τί γέγονεν κ. τ. λ. "What has happened that," etc. ? or, "What has occurred to determine you," etc. ? Kypke quotes from Arrian apposite instances of the use of this expression. Judas expresses, no doubt, the thought of the rest. Was there to be no such public manifestation of Jesus as Messiah, as would convince the world?—Ver. 23. To this Jesus replies ἐάν τις . . . ποιήσομεν. The answer explains that the manifestation, being spiritual, must be individual and to those spiritually prepared. "It contemplates not a public discovery of power, but a sort of domestic visitation of love." Bernard. πρὸς αὐτὸν ἐλευσόμεθα, "to him we will come"; Jesus without scruple unites Himself with the Father. μονὴν . . . ποιησομεθα, a classical expression see Thuc., i. 131, μονὴν . . . ποιούμενος. "We will make our abode with him, will be daily his guests, yea, house and table companions." Luther in Meyer. μονή is here used in a sense different from that of ver. 2, where it means a place to abide in.—Ver. 24. The necessity of love as a condition of this manifested presence is further emphasised by stating the converse, ὁ μὴ ἀγαπῶν με . . . πατρός. The κόσμος of ver. 22 is here more closely defined by ὁ μὴ ἀγαπῶν με. See Holtzmann.

Vv. 25-31. The conversation closed by bequest of peace. The genuineness of this report of the last words of Jesus is guaranteed by the frequency with which He seems to be on the point of breaking off. The constant resumption, the adding of things that occur on the moment, these are the inimitable touch of nature. At this point the close seems imminent.—Ver. 25. Ταῦτα λελάληκα . . . μένων, implying that this abiding and teaching were now at an end.—Ver. 26. But His teaching would be continued and completed by the Paraclete: ὁ δὲ παράκλητος . . . ὑμῖν. The Paraclete is now identified with τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον, and His connection with Christ is further guaranteed by the clause ὁ πέμψει ὁ πατήρ ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί μου, "which the Father will send in my name," that is, as representing me and promoting my interests. And this He will accomplish by teaching: ἐκεῖνος "He," and no longer the visible Christ, "will teach you all things," πάντα in contrast to the ταῦτα (ver. 25) with which Christ had to be satisfied; but πάντα must itself be limited by the needs and capacities of the disciples.—καὶ ὑπομνήσει . . . "and will bring to your remembrance all that I said to you," that is, the teaching of the Spirit should so connect itself with the teaching of Christ as to revive the memory of forgotten words of His, and give them a new meaning. Cf. especially xvi. 12-14.—Ver. 27. εἰρήνην ἀφήμι ὑμῖν, "peace I bequeath to you". The usual farewell was given with the word

27. εἰρήνην ἀφήμι ὑμῖν, εἰρήνην τὴν ἐμὴν δίδωμι ὑμῖν· οὐ καθὼς ὁ κόσμος δίδωσιν, ἐγὼ δίδωμι ὑμῖν. ἢ μὴ ταρασσέσθω ὑμῶν ἡ καρδιά, ἢ ver. 1. μηδὲ ὄδειλιάτω. 28. ἤκούσατε ὅτι ἐγὼ εἶπον ὑμῖν, Ὑπάγω καὶ ἔρχομαι πρὸς ὑμᾶς. εἰ ἠγαπήτέ με, ἐχάρητε ἂν ὅτι εἶπον, Πορεύομαι πρὸς τὸν πατέρα· ὅτι ὁ πατὴρ μου μείζων μου ἐστί. 29. καὶ νῦν εἶρηκα ὑμῖν ἢ πρὶν γενέσθαι· ἵνα ὅταν γένηται, πιστεύσητε. 30. “Οὐκ ἔτι πολλὰ λαλήσω μεθ’ ὑμῶν· ἔρχεται γὰρ ὁ τοῦ κόσμου τούτου ἄρχων, καὶ ἐν ἐμοὶ οὐκ ἔχει οὐδέν· 31. ἀλλ’ ἵνα γνῶ ὁ κόσμος, ὅτι ἀγαπῶ τὸν πατέρα, καὶ καθὼς ἐνετείλατό μοι ὁ πατήρ, οὕτω ποιῶ. ἐγείρεσθε, ἵ ἀγωμεν ἐντεῦθεν.

v Is. xlvii.
10. Ecclus.
xlviii. 25.
x xii. 31
refl.

y xi. 7

“peace”. And Jesus uses the familiar word, but instead of uttering a mere wish He turns it into a bequest, intimating His power not only to wish but to give peace in the further description εἰρήνην τὴν ἐμὴν δίδωμι ὑμῖν, “my peace I give unto you”; the peace which He had attained by means of all the disturbance and opposition He had encountered. Leaving them His work, His view of life, His Spirit, He necessarily left them His peace.—οὐ καθὼς ὁ κόσμος δίδωσιν, ἐγὼ δίδωμι ὑμῖν, “not as the world gives give I to you”. This is referred by Grotius to the difference between the empty form of salutation and Christ’s gift of peace. (“Mundus, i.e., major pars hominum, salute alios impertit sono vocis, nihil saepe de re cogitans; et si cogitet, tamen id alteri nihil prodest.”) So too Holtzmann and Bernard. Meyer considers this “quite out of relation to the profound seriousness of the moment,” and understands the allusion to be to the treasures, honours, pleasures which the world gives. There is no reason why the primary reference should not be to the salutation, with a secondary reference to the wider contrast. This gift of peace, if accepted, would secure them against perturbation, and so Jesus returns to the exhortation of ver. 1, μὴ ταρασσέσθω . . . “Observing that the opening sentence of the discourse is here repeated and fortified, we understand that all enclosed within these limits is to be taken as a whole in itself, and that the intervening words compose a divine antidote to that troubling and desolation of heart which the Lord’s departure would suggest.” Bernard. He now adds a word, μηδὲ δευλιάτω, which carries some reproach in it. Theophrastus (Char., xxvii.) defines δειλία as ὑπεῖς τις ψυχῆς ἔμφοβος, a shrinking of the soul through fear. With this must be taken Aristotle’s description, Nic. Eth., iii. 6, 7, ὁ δὲ τῷ ἀοβείσθαι ὑπερβάλλον δειλός. It may be rendered “neither let your heart timidly shrink”.—Ver. 28. On the contrary quite other feelings should possess them: joy in sympathy with Him in His glorification and in expectation of the results of His going to the Father: ἤκούσατε . . . πατέρα. “If ye loved me,” an almost playful way of reproaching their sadness. There was no doubt of their love, but it was an unintelligent love. They failed to consider the great joy that awaited Him in His going to the Father. This going to the Father was cause for rejoicing, ὅτι ὁ πατήρ μου [μου is not well authenticated and should be deleted] μείζων μου ἐστί, “because the Father is greater than I”; and can therefore fulfil all the loving purposes of Christ to His disciples. “The life which He has begun with them and for them will be raised to a higher level.” They had seen the life He had lived and were disturbed because it was coming to an end: but it was coming to an end because absorbed in the greater life He would have with the Father. The theological import of the words is discussed by Westcott, who cites patristic opinions and refers to Bull and Pearson. In all that Jesus did, it was the Father’s will He carried out, and with powers communicated by the Father: the Father is the Originator and End of all His work in the world. Throughout the ministry of Jesus the Father is represented as “greater” than the Son. That it should require to be explicitly affirmed, as here, is the strongest evidence that He was Divine.—Ver. 29. καὶ νῦν . . . πιστεύσητε. “I have told you now before it came to pass,” i.e., He has told them of His departure, that they might not be terrified or depressed by its occurrence, but might recognise it as foretold by Him as the consummation of His work and so might have their faith increased.

1 Ps lxxx.
8 Jer. ii.
21
b Rom. xi.
17.

XV. 1. "ἘΓΩ εἰμι ἡ ἄμπελος ἡ ἄληθινή, καὶ ὁ πατήρ μου ὁ γεωργός ἐστι. 2. πᾶν κλῆμα ἐν ἐμοὶ μὴ φέρον καρπὸν, αἶρει αὐτό· καὶ πᾶν τὸ καρπὸν φέρον, καθαίρει αὐτό, ἵνα πλείονα καρπὸν φέρῃ.

Cf. xiii. 19.—Ver. 30. οὐκ ἔτι . . . ὑμῶν. "I will no longer speak much with you"; "temporis angustiae abripiunt verba," Grotius.—ἐρχεται . . . οὐδέν. "The ruler of this world" is Satan, see xii. 31. He "comes" in the treachery of Judas (xiii. 27) and all that followed. But this coming was without avail, because ἐν ἐμοὶ οὐκ ἔχει οὐδέν, "in me he hath nothing," nothing he can call his own, nothing he can claim as his, and which he can use for his purposes. He is ruler of the world, but in Christ has no possessions or rule. A notable assertion of sinlessness.—Ver. 31. Jesus goes to death not crushed by the machinations of Satan, "but that the world may know that I love the Father and as the Father has commanded me," οὕτω ποιῶ, "thus I do," applies to His whole life, which was throughout ruled by regard to the Father's commandment, but in the foreground of His thought at present is His departure from the disciples, His death.—ἐγείρεσθε, ἄγωμεν ἐντεῦθεν, "arise, let us go hence," similar to the summons in Mt. xxvi. 46, but the idea of referring so common an expression to a reminiscence of the Synoptic passage is absurd. On the movement made in consequence of the summons, see on xv. 1.

In chapters xv. and xvi. Jesus (1) explains the relation He holds to those who continue His work, xv. 1-17; (2) the attitude the world will assume to His followers, xv. 18-25; (3) the conquest of the world by the Spirit, 26-xvi. 11; and (4) adds some last words, encouragements and warnings, xvi. 12-33. In this last conversation, which extends from chap. xiii. to chap. xvi. inclusive, the closing words of chap. xiv., ἐγείρεσθε ἄγωμεν ἐντεῦθεν, form the best marked division. At this point Jesus and His disciples rose from table. Whether the conversation was continued in the house or after they left it may be doubtful; but probabilities are certainly much in favour of the former alternative. A party of twelve could not conveniently talk together on the street. In xviii. 1 we read that when Jesus had uttered the prayer recorded in xvii. ἐξῆλθε σὺν τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ πέραν τοῦ χειμάρρου τῶν Κέδρων. This, however, may refer to their leaving the city, not the house.

Bengel thinks they may have paused in the courtyard of the house.

CHAPTER XV.—Vv. 1-17. The relation between Jesus and His disciples represented by the relation of the vine and its branches.—Ver. 1. Ἐγώ εἰμι ἡ ἄμπελος ἡ ἄληθινή, "I am the true vine." ἡ ἄληθινή suggests a contrast to other vines to which this title could not be applied: but not to a vine trailing across the window of the room where they were, nor to the golden vine on the Temple gate, nor to the vines on the slopes of Olivet; but to Israel, the stock which God had planted to bring forth fruit to Him, see Ps. lxxx., Is. v., Jer. ii. 21. ἐγὼ δὲ ἐφύτευσά σε ἄμπελον καρποφόρον πάσαν ἄληθινήν. The vine was a recognised symbol also of the Messiah, see Delitzsch in Expositor, third series, iii., p. 68, and in his Iris, pp. 180-190, E. Tr. On the Maccabean coinage Israel was represented by a vine. It was the present situation which here suggested the figure. As Jesus rose to depart the disciples crowd round Him with anxiety on every face. Their helplessness and trouble appeal to Him, and He encourages them by reminding them that, although left to do His work in the world, they would still be united to Him as truly as the branches to the vine. He and His together are the true Vine of God. καὶ ὁ πατήρ μου ὁ γεωργός ἐστι, "and my Father is the vine-dresser". What is now happening is the Father's doing, and, therefore, tends to the well-being and fruitfulness of the vine. ["Pater qui cum diligit me, certe servabit totum fruticem." Melancthon.]—Ver. 2. The function of the vine-dresser is at once described: πᾶν κλῆμα . . . φέρῃ. κλῆμα, or more fully as in Xen., Oecon., xix. 8, κλῆμα ἄμπελου, is the shoot of the vine which is annually put forth. It is from κλάω, "I break," as also is κλάδος, but Wetstein quotes Pollux to show that κλάδος was appropriated to the shoots of the olive, while κλῆμα signified a vine-shoot. Of these shoots there are two kinds, the fruitless, which the vine-dresser αἶρει: "Inutilesque falce ramos amputans," Hor. Epid., ii. 13; and the fruitful, which He καθαίρει ["suavis rhythmus," Bengel]. The full meaning of αἶρει is described in ver. 6; καθαίρει here denotes

3. ἦδη ὑμεῖς καθαροί ἐστε, διὰ τὸν λόγον ὃν λελάληκα ὑμῖν. c xiii. 10, 11;
xvii. 17.
4. μέινετε ἐν ἐμοί, κἀγὼ ἐν ὑμῖν. καθὼς τὸ κλῆμα οὐ δύναται καρπὸν φέρειν ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ, ἐὰν μὴ μείνη ἐν τῇ ἀμπέλῳ, οὕτως οὐδὲ ὑμεῖς, ἐὰν μὴ ἐν ἐμοί μείνητε. 5. ἐγὼ εἰμι ἡ ἀμπελος, ὑμεῖς τὰ κλήματα. ὁ μένων ἐν ἐμοί, κἀγὼ ἐν αὐτῷ, οὗτος φέρει καρπὸν πολὺν· ὅτι χωρὶς ἐμοῦ οὐ δύνασθε ποιεῖν οὐδέν. 6. ἐὰν μὴ τις μείνη<sup>1</sup> ἐν ἐμοί, ἐβλήθη ἔξω ὡς τὸ κλῆμα, καὶ ἐξηράνθη, καὶ d Mt. iii. 10 and vii. 19.
e iv. 36. Mt.
xiii. 47.
*συνάγουσιν αὐτὰ καὶ εἰς πῦρ βάλλουσι, καὶ καίεται. 7. ἐὰν ἐν ἐμοί μείνητε ἐν ἐμοί, καὶ τὰ ῥήματά μου ἐν ὑμῖν μείνη, ὁ ἐὰν θέλητε especially the pruning requisit e for concentrating the vigour of the tree on the one object, ἵνα πλείονα καρπὸν φέρη, that it may continually surpass itself, and yield richer and richer results. The vine-dresser spares no pains and no material on his plants, but all for the sake of fruit. [Cf. Cicero, De Senec., xv. 53.] The use of καθαίρει was probably determined by the καθαροί of ver. 3.—Ver. 3. ἦδη ὑμεῖς καθαροί ἐστε: “Already ye are clean”. καθαροί here means “in a condition fit to bear fruit”; in xiii. 10, 11, it is suggested by the feet-washing, and means “free from inward stain”. It is similarly used even in classical writers. διὰ τὸν λόγον ὃν λελάληκα ὑμῖν, “on account of the word which I have spoken unto you”. For διὰ in this sense as indicating the source, see vi. 67. The word which Jesus had spoken to them, i.e., the whole revelation He had made, had brought spiritual life, and, therefore, cleansing. But this condition they must strive to maintain, μέινετε ἐν ἐμοί, κἀγὼ ἐν ὑμῖν. μὲνῶ must be understood after κἀγὼ. Maintain your belief in me, your attachment to me, your derivation of hope, aim, and motive from me: and I will abide in you, filling you with all the life you need to represent me on earth. All the divine energy you know to be in me will now pass through you.—Ver. 4. It is in and through you I live henceforth. καθὼς τὸ κλῆμα . . . μείνητε [or μένητε]; illustrating by the figure the necessity of the foregoing injunction. A branch that falls to the ground, and no longer abides in the vine as a living part of it, cannot bear fruit, so neither can ye except ye abide in me. That is, ye cannot bear the fruit my Father, the vine-dresser, looks for, and by which He will be glorified, ver. 8.—Ver. 5. ἐγὼ . . . κλήματα—“I am the Vine, ye are the branches,” together forming one tree and possessed by one common life. The stock does not bear fruit, but only the branches; the branches cannot live without the stock. Therefore it follows ὁ μένων . . . οὐδέν. The one thing needful for fruit-bearing is that we abide in Christ, and He in us; that the branch adhere to the vine, and the life of the vine flow into the branch. χωρὶς ἐμοῦ, “in separation from me”. See Eph. ii. 12. Grotius gives the equivalents “seorsim,” “separatim,” κατὰ μονάς, κατ’ αὐτό. οὐ δύνασθε ποιεῖν οὐδέν, “ye cannot do anything,” absolutely nothing according to i. 3, 4; but here the meaning is, “ye cannot do anything which is glorifying to God, anything which can be called fruit-bearing,” ver. 8.—Ver. 6. ἐὰν μὴ τις μείνη, “if any one shall not have abided in me”. ἐβλήθη . . . ἐξηράνθη, the gnomic aorist, cf. 1 Peter i. 24; and see Burton, M. and T., 43, and Grotius: “Hi aoristi sine designatione temporis significant quid fieri soleat, pro quo et praesens saepe usurpatur”. The whole process undergone by the fruitless branch is described in these six verbs, αἶρει ver. 2, ἐβλήθη, ἐξηράνθη, συνάγουσιν, βάλλουσι, καίεται, and each detail is thus given for the sake of emphasising the inevitableness and the completeness of the destruction. ἐβλήθη ἔξω ὡς τὸ κλῆμα, “is cast out,” i.e., from the vineyard, as the next words show; here this means hopeless rejection. The result is ἐξηράνθη, the natural capacity for fruit-bearing is destroyed. The figure derived from the treatment of the fruitless branch is continued in συνάγουσιν . . . καίεται, cf. Mt. xiii. 49, 50; and 41, 42. On καίεται, Euthymius remarks οὐ μὴ κατακαίονται “but are not consumed”. And in Exod. iii. 2, the bush καίεται, but οὐ κατεκαίετο “burns, but was not consumed”. But this only shows that without the

<sup>1</sup> μνη is better authenticated, being found in  $\aleph^a$  ABD.

αἰτήσεσθε,<sup>1</sup> καὶ γενήσεται ὑμῖν. 8. ἐν τούτῳ ἔδοξάσθη ὁ πατήρ
 ἰν. 34; xv. μου, ἵνα καρπὸν πολλὸν φέριτε· καὶ γενήσεσθε<sup>2</sup> ἐμοὶ μαθηταί.
 12, etc.
 See Burton, 213.
 π viii. 31. 9. Καθὼς ἠγάπησέ με ὁ πατήρ, κἀγὼ ἠγάπησα ὑμᾶς· ἵνα μέναιτε ἐν τῇ ἀγάπῃ τῇ ἐμῇ. 10. ἐὰν τὰς ἐντολάς μου τηρήσητε, μενεῖτε ἐν τῇ ἀγάπῃ μου· καθὼς ἐγὼ τὰς ἐντολάς τοῦ πατρὸς μου τητήρηκα, καὶ μένω αὐτοῦ ἐν τῇ ἀγάπῃ. 11. ταῦτα λελάληκα ὑμῖν, ἵνα ἡ χαρὰ ἣ ἐμὴ ἐν ὑμῖν μείνη,<sup>3</sup> καὶ ἡ χαρὰ ὑμῶν πληρωθῇ. 12. αὕτη
 h ver. 8 reff. ἐστὶν ἡ ἐντολὴ ἣ ἐμὴ, ἵνα ἀγαπᾶτε ἀλλήλους, καθὼς ἠγάπησα

<sup>1</sup> αἰτήσεσθε, although supported by  $\aleph$  and  $\Pi$ , must give place to the imperative αἰτήσασθε found in ABDL.

<sup>2</sup> T.R. in  $\aleph$ A. γενησθε in BDLM adopted by Tr.W.H., "and that ye be my disciples".

<sup>3</sup> η in ABD 33; μείνη in  $\aleph$ LXΠ.

miraculous interposition it would have been consumed.—Ver. 7. From the fate of those who do not abide in Him, Jesus turns to the results of faithful adherence—ἐὰν μέναιτε . . . ὑμῖν. The expression is altered from that of vv. 3 and 5, instead of "and I in you," we now have "and my words abide in you"; it is by means of His teaching and His commandments that Christ abides in His people, ἀνά by His word they are fitted for fruit-bearing, ver. 3. Not that His words are a substitute for His personal presence, but its medium. But His presence is not to energise in them as if they were machines; they are to consider the exigencies that arise, and, giving play to judgment and conscience, are to ask for appropriate manifestations of grace: ὃ ἐὰν θέλητε αἰτήσασθε, "ask what ye will". Petitions thus prompted by the indwelling word of Christ will necessarily be answered: καὶ γενήσεται ὑμῖν.—Ver. 8. Further assurance of an answer is given in the fact that the γεωργός is glorified in the fruit-bearing branches: ἐν τούτῳ, "in this pre-eminently," i.e., in your bearing much fruit, cf. vi. 29, 30, 40. So, rightly, Weiss and Holtzmann. For construction with ἵνα see Burton on Subject, Predicate and Appositive clauses introduced by ἵνα.—ἔδοξάσθη ὁ πατήρ μου, ἵνα, etc. ἔδοξάσθη, proleptic; cf. xiii. 31. The Father is glorified in everything which demonstrates that through Christ His grace reaches and governs men.—καὶ γενήσεσθε ἐμοὶ μαθηταί, "and ye shall become my disciples". The ἐμοὶ μαθηταί seems to mean: This is the relation you will hold to me, viz., that of discipleship. "A Christian never 'is,' but always 'is becoming' a Christian.

And it is by his fruitfulness that he indicates his claim to the name." Westcott.

Vv. 9-17. The disciples are urged to fulfil Christ's purposes in the world, and are assured that if they abide in the love of Christ they will receive all they need for fruit-bearing.—Ver. 9. Καθὼς ἠγάπησε . . . ἐμῇ. Love is the true bond which gives unity to the moral world, and inspires discipleship. All that Christ experiences is the result of the Father's love: all that the disciples are called to be and to do is the outcome of Christ's love. This love of Christ was to be retained as their possession by their conforming themselves to it: μέναιτε ἐν τῇ ἀγάπῃ τῇ ἐμῇ, "abide in my love," no longer "abide in me," but specifically "in my love". Abide in it, for there is a possibility of your falling away from its enjoyment and possession.—Ver. 10. That possibility is defeated, ἐὰν τὰς ἐντολάς μου τηρήσητε. To encourage them in keeping His commandments He reminds them that He also has been subject to the same conditions, and by keeping the Father's commandments has remained in His love.—Ver. 11. The great joy of His life had been found in the consciousness of the Father's love and in the keeping of His commandments: this joy He desires that they may inherit, ταῦτα λελάληκα ὑμῖν ἵνα ἡ χαρὰ ἣ ἐμὴ ἐν ὑμῖν μείνη, "my joy," i.e., the joy I have enjoyed, the joy which I habitually feel in accomplishing the Father's will. This joy is not an incommunicable monopoly.—καὶ ἡ χαρὰ ὑμῶν πληρωθῇ, "and your joy be full," which it could not be until they, like Him, had the spring of full joy in the consciousness of His love, and perfect obedience to Him; standing in ὕμᾱς. 13. μείζονα ταύτης ἀγάπην οὐδεὶς ἔχει, ἵνα τις τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ ἴθῃ ὑπὲρ τῶν φίλων αὐτοῦ. 14. ὑμεῖς ἵ φίλοι μου ἐστέ, ἐὰν ποιήτε ὅσα ἐγὼ ἐντέλλομαι ὑμῖν. 15. οὐκέτι ὑμᾶς λέγω δούλους, ὅτι ὁ δούλος οὐκ οἶδε τί ποιεῖ αὐτοῦ ὁ κύριος· ὑμᾶς δὲ εἶρηκα φίλους, ὅτι πάντα ἃ ἤκουσα ἵ παρὰ τοῦ πατρὸς μου, ἐγνώρισα ὑμῖν. 16. οὐχ ὑμεῖς με ἐξελέξασθε, ἀλλ' ἐγὼ ἐξελεξάμην ὑμᾶς, καὶ ἔθηκα ὑμᾶς, ἵνα ὑμεῖς ὑπάγητε καὶ καρπὸν φέρητε, καὶ ὁ καρπὸς ὑμῶν μένη· ἵνα ὁ ὅτι ἂν αἰτήσητε τὸν πατέρα ἔν τῷ ὀνόματί μου, δῶ ὑμῖν. 17. ταῦτα ἐντέλλομαι ὑμῖν, ἵνα ἀγαπᾶτε ἀλλήλους.

the same relation to Him as He to the Father.—Ver. 12. And that they might know definitely what His commandment (ver. 10) is, He says, αὕτη . . . ὑμᾶς. "This is my commandment, that ye love one another as I have loved you." Perhaps they expected minute, detailed instructions such as they had received when first sent out (Matt. x.). Instead of this, love was to be their sufficient guide. καθὼς ἠγάπησα ὑμᾶς.—His love was at once the source and the measure of theirs. In His love for them they were to find the spring of love to one another, and were to become transparencies through which His love would shine.—Ver. 13. And that they might not underrate the measure of this exemplary love, He says, μείζονα ταύτης ἀγάπην . . . αὐτοῦ. Ταύτης is explained by ἵνα . . . αὐτοῦ as in ver. 8; and does not directly mean "than this which I have shown and still show," as understood by Westcott and White-law. It is a general statement, the application of which is suggested in ver. 14. Self-sacrifice is the high water mark of love. Friends can demand nothing more: there is no more that love can do to exhibit devotedness to friends, cf. Rom. v. 6, 8, 10.—Ver. 14. Then comes the application: ὑμεῖς . . . ὑμῖν. "Ye are my friends, if ye do what I command you." You may expect of me this greatest demonstration of love, and therefore every minor demonstration of it which your circumstances may require, "if ye do," etc. This condition was added not to chill and daunt, but to encourage: when you find how much suffering the completion of my work entails upon you, assure yourselves of my love. It is copartnery in work that will give you assurance that you are my friends.—Ver. 15. "Friends" who may expect all the good offices of their Friend, not "slaves," is the character in which alone you can carry on my work:

οὐκέτι ὑμᾶς λέγω δούλους . . . ὑμῖν. The designation "slave" is no longer (οὐκέτι) appropriate, cf. xiii. 16 and Jas. i. 1, Phil. i. 1, etc. It is not appropriate, because ὁ δούλος οὐκ οἶδε τί ποιεῖ αὐτοῦ ὁ κύριος "the slave knows not what his lord is doing," he receives his allotted task but is not made acquainted with the ends his master wishes to serve by his toil ("servus tractatur ut ὄργανον". Bengel). He is animated by no sympathy with his master's purpose nor by any personal interest in what he is doing. Therefore "friends" is the appropriate designation, ὑμᾶς δὲ εἶρηκα φίλους, "but I have called you friends". Schoettgen quotes from Jalkut Rubeni, r64, "Deus Israelitas prae nimio amore primo vocat servos, deinde filios, Deut. xiv. 1". Other remarkable passages on God's calling the Israelites "friends" are also cited by him in loc. For the peculiar use of εἶρηκα, cf. x. 35 and 1 Cor. xii. 3; and for parallels in the classics, see Rose's Parkhurst's Lexicon. ὅτι πάντα ἃ ἤκουσα παρὰ τοῦ πατρὸς μου, ἐγνώρισα ὑμῖν. Jesus had opened to them the mind of the Father in sending Him to the world, and as this purpose of the Father had commended itself to Jesus, and fired Him with the desire to fulfil it, so does He expect that the disciples will intelligently enter into His purposes, make them their own, and spend themselves on their fulfilment.—Ver. 16. οὐχ ὑμεῖς . . . ὑμῖν. This is added to encourage them in taking up and prosecuting the work of Jesus. Euthymius says it is ἄλλο τεκμήριον τοῦ ἔχειν αὐτοὺς φίλους ἑαυτοῦ; but it is more. They are invited to depend on His will, not on their own. They had not discovered Him, and attached themselves to Him, as likely to suit their purposes. "It is not ye who chose me." But "I chose you," as a king selects his officers, to fulfil my purposes. καὶ ἔθηκα ὑμᾶς, "and I set (or, appointed) you," cf. 1 Cor. xii. 28, Acts xx. 28, etc., see Con-

π 1. 15. 18. "Εἰ ὁ κόσμος ὑμᾶς μισεῖ, γινώσκετε ὅτι ἐμὲ "πρῶτον ὑμῶν ο 1 Jo. iv. 5. μεμίσηκεν. 19. ° εἰ ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου ἦτε, ὁ κόσμος ἂν τὸ ἴδιον ἐφίλει· Jas. iv. 4. ὑπὲρ Acts ὅτι δὲ ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου οὐκ ἐστὲ, ἀλλ' ἐγὼ ἐξελεξάμην ὑμᾶς ἐκ τοῦ
 v. 41, xv. 16; xxi. κόσμου, διὰ τοῦτο μισεῖ ὑμᾶς ὁ κόσμος. 20. μνημονεύετε τοῦ λόγου 13, etc.; οὐ ἐγὼ εἶπον ὑμῖν, Οὐκ ἔστι δούλος μείζων τοῦ κυρίου αὐτοῦ. εἰ ἐμὲ ἐρεκεν Mt. ἐδίωξαν, καὶ ὑμᾶς διώξουσιν· εἰ τὸν λόγον μου ἐτήρησαν, καὶ τὸν xix. 20. Lk. xxi. 12, etc. ἐδίωξαν, καὶ ὑμᾶς διώξουσιν. 21. ἀλλὰ ταῦτα πάντα ποιήσουσιν ὑμῖν " διὰ
 qix. 41; xix. 11. 1 Jo. ὑμέτερον τηρήσουσιν. 21. ἀλλὰ ταῦτα πάντα ποιήσουσιν ὑμῖν " διὰ
 i. 8. τὸ ὄνομά μου, ὅτι οὐκ οἶδασιν τὸν πέμψαντά με. 22. εἰ μὴ ἦλθον r Phil. i. 18. Mt. xxiii. 13. καὶ ἐλάλησα αὐτοῖς, ἡ ἁμαρτίαν οὐκ ἔχον<sup>θ</sup>. νῦν δὲ ἔ' πρόφασιν οὐκ cordance. The purpose of the appointment is ἵνα ὑμεῖς ὑπάγητε, "that you may go away" from me on your various missions, and thus (resuming the original figure of the vine and branches) καρπὸν φέρητε, may bear fruit in my stead, and supplied by my life. Or to express this purpose in a manner which reveals the source of their power to bear fruit, ἵνα ὅτι ἂν αἰτήσητε . . . δω ὑμῖν, see ver. 7, and xiv. 13.—Ver. 17. ταῦτα ἐντέλλομαι ὑμῖν. "These things" which I have now spoken "I enjoin upon you," ἵνα ἀγαπάτε ἀλλήλους, "in order that ye may love one another".

Vv. 18-25. The relation of the disciples to the world.—Ver. 18. Εἰ ὁ κόσμος . . . μεμίσηκεν, "If the world hates you," as it does (indicative); "the world" is contrasted with "one another" of ver. 17, with the disciples who were to love. γινώσκετε, "ye know," or, if it be taken as an imperative, "know ye," that it has hated me, πρῶτον ὑμῶν, "before you," and, as in i. 15 where also the superlative is found, not only "before" in point of time, but as the norm or prototype.—Ver. 19. εἰ ἐκ . . . ἐφίλει, "If ye were of the world, the world would love [that which is] its own"; not always the case, but generally. ὅτι δὲ . . . ὁ κόσμος, "but because ye are not of the world," do not belong to it, and are not morally identified with it, "but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hates you". So that the hatred of the world, instead of being depressing, should be exhilarating, as being an evidence and guarantee that they have been chosen by Christ.—Ver. 20. μνημονεύετε τοῦ λόγου . . . αὐτοῦ. μνημονεύετε (from μνήμων, mindful), "be mindful of," sometimes used pregnantly, as in 1 Thess. i. 3; Gal. ii. 10; "the words which I said to you," viz., in xiii. 16, and Mt. x. 24, 25. The outcome of the principle is seen in 2 Tim. ii. 11, and 1 Peter iv. 13. That He should speak of them as

"servants," so shortly after calling them "friends," shows how natural and appropriate both designations are, how truly service characterises His friends, and how He must at all times be looked upon as Supreme Lord. εἰ ἐμὲ ἐδίωξαν . . . τηρήσουσιν. "If they persecuted me, you also will they persecute; if they kept my word, yours too will they keep." In so far as they are identified with Him, their experience will be identical with His. The attitude of the world does not alter. Bengel takes ἐτήρησαν in a hostile sense, "in fensis modis observare," referring to Mt. xxvii. 36, but in John τὸν λόγον τηρεῖν is regularly used of "observing" in the sense of "keeping," practising, see viii. 51, ix. 16, xiv. 23; 1 John ii. 3, 4, 5, etc.; Apoc. i. 3, iii. 8, etc.—Ver. 21. ἀλλά. "But" be not dismayed at persecution, for "all these things they will do to you for my name's sake". ταῦτα πάντα seems to involve that details had been given (cf. Mt. x. 16 ff.) which were omitted by the reporter; or that xvi. 2 had been already uttered; or that John, writing when the persecutions of the Christians were well known, uses "all these things" from his own point of view, διὰ τὸ ὄνομά μου. The efficacy of this consolation appears everywhere in the Apostolic age; Acts v. 41; Phil. i. 29, and cf. Ramsay's Church in the Roman Empire. The "name" of Christ was hateful to the world, ὅτι οὐκ οἶδασιν τὸν πέμψαντά με. They did not believe He was sent, because they did not know the sender. Had they known God, they would have recognised Christ as sent by Him. Cf. vii. 28, v. 38, εἰ μὴ ἦλθον . . . αὐτῶν.—Ver. 22. "If I had not come and spoken to them," as the revealer of the Father, "they would not have sin," they would still be ignorant of the Father, but would not have incurred the guilt which attaches to ignorance maintained in the presence of light. ἔχιν ἁμαρτίαν is Johannine, see ver. 24'

έχουσι περὶ τῆς ἁμαρτίας αὐτῶν. 23. ὁ ἐμὲ μισῶν, καὶ τὸν πατέρα μου μισεῖ. 24. εἰ τὰ ἔργα μὴ ἐποίησα ἐν αὐτοῖς, ἀ οὐδεὶς ἄλλος πεποίηκεν, ἁμαρτίαν οὐκ εἶχον<sup>1</sup>. νῦν δὲ καὶ ἔωράκασι, καὶ μεμισή- s xiv. 9. κασι καὶ ἐμὲ καὶ τὸν πατέρα μου. 25. ἀλλ' ἵνα πληρωθῇ ὁ λόγος ὁ γεγραμμένος ἐν τῷ νόμῳ αὐτῶν, "Ὅτι ἐμίσησάν με δωρεάν." 26. ἰ Ps. xxxv. "Ὅταν δὲ ἔλθῃ ὁ<sup>2</sup> παρακλήτος, ὃν ἐγὼ πέμψω ὑμῖν παρὰ τοῦ πατρὸς, u xiv. 16. ἰ 19; lxi. 4. τὸ πνεῦμα τῆς ἀληθείας, ὃ<sup>3</sup> παρὰ τοῦ πατρὸς<sup>4</sup> ἔκπορεύεται, ἐκείνος v More freq. with ἐκ; cp. xvi. 28. μαρτυρήσει περὶ ἐμοῦ. 27. καὶ ὑμεῖς δὲ μαρτυρεῖτε, ὅτι ἀπ' ἀρχῆς μετ' ἐμοῦ ἔστε.

<sup>1</sup> ειχοσαν in  $\aleph$ B; ειχον in AD<sup>3</sup>.

xix. 11; 1 John i. 8. νῦν δὲ πρόφασιν οὐκ ἔχουσι περὶ τῆς ἁμαρτίας αὐτῶν. "But now," as I have come, "they have no excuse for," etc., πρόφασιν, cf. Ps. cxl. 4: "Incline not my heart προφασίζεσθαι προφάσεις ἐν ἁμαρτίαις".—Ver. 23. In hating me, they hate my Father whom I represent, ὁ ἐμὲ μισῶν . . . μισεῖ. In hating and persecuting me, it is God they hate.—Ver. 24. εἰ τὰ ἔργα . . . οὐκ εἶχον. This repeats in a slightly varied form the statement of ver. 22. He had not only come and spoken, but had done works which none other had done, cf. iii. 2; ix. 32; vii. 31. The miracles wrought by Christ were themselves of a kind fitted to produce faith. In them men were meant to see God, v. 17, 19, 20. So that He could say, νῦν δὲ καὶ ἔωράκασι . . . μου. This is their guilt, that they have both seen and hated both me and my Father. This does not imply that they had been conscious of seeing the Father in Christ, but only that in point of fact they had done so. Cf. xiv. 9; i. 18.—Ver. 25. This almost incredible blindness and obduracy is accounted for, as in xii. 37, by the purpose of God disclosed in O.T. Scripture. "Their law" is here, as in x. 34, etc., used of O.T. Scripture as a whole. αὐτῶν is inserted, as ὑμετέρῳ in viii. 17, to suggest that the very Scripture in which they had prided themselves would condemn them; see also v. 45, v. 39. The words ἐμίσησάν με δωρεάν do not occur in O.T.; but similar expressions are found in Ps. xxxiv. 19, οἱ μισοῦντές με δωρεάν, and cviii. 3, ἐπολέμησάν με δωρεάν. Entirely gratuitous was their hatred and rejection of Christ, so that they were inexcusable.

Ver. 26—xvi. 11. The conquest of the world by the Spirit.—Ver. 26. But the work of the Apostles was not to be wholly fruitless, nor was their experience to be wholly comprised in fruitless persecution. "Ὅταν δὲ ἔλθῃ . . . περὶ ἐμοῦ. The Spirit of Truth will witness concerning me. The Spirit is here designated, as in xiv. 16, "the Paraclete," and the Spirit of Truth. There, and in xiv. 26, it is the Father who is to give and send Him in Christ's name: here it is ὃν ἐγὼ πέμψω παρὰ τοῦ πατρὸς, as if the Spirit were not only dwelling with the Father, but could only be sent out from the Father as the source of the sending. This is still further emphasised in the added clause, ὃ παρὰ τοῦ πατρὸς ἔκπορεύεται. To define the mode of being of the Spirit, or His essential relation to the Father, would have been quite out of place in the circumstances. These words must be understood of the mission of the Spirit. What the disciples needed to know was that He came out from the Father, and of this they are here assured. ἐκείνος μαρτυρήσει περὶ ἐμοῦ, "He," that person thus elaborately described, who is truth and who comes out from Him who sent me, "will witness concerning me".—Ver. 27. καὶ ὑμεῖς δὲ μαρτυρεῖτε, "and do ye also witness," or, if indicative, "and ye also witness". Most prefer the indicative. "The disciples were already the witnesses which they were to be in the future." Meyer. This agrees with the ἔστε following. They were able to act as witnesses ὅτι ἀπ' ἀρχῆς μετ' ἐμοῦ ἔστε, "because from the beginning," of the Messianic activity, "ye are with me". The present, ἔστε, is natural as Jesus is looking at their entire fellowship with Him, and that was still continuing. Cf. Mk. iii. 14, ἐποίησε δώδεκα, ἵνα ᾧσι μετ' αὐτοῦ; also Acts i. 21, iv. 13.—CHAPTER XVI. ver. 1. Ταῦτα λελάλικα ὑμῖν, I have warned you of persecution, and have told you of the encouragements you will have, ἵνα μὴ σκανδαλισθῆτε, "that ye be not

- Mt. xi. 6. XVI. 1. "Ταῦτα λελάληκα ὑμῖν, ἵνα μὴ *σκανδαλισθῆτε. 2. <sup>b ix. 22. xii.</sup> ἀποσυναγωγῶν ποιήσουσιν ὑμᾶς· ἀλλ' ἔρχεται ὥρα, ὅτι πᾶς ὁ <sup>42.</sup> <sup>c xii. 23</sup> ἀποκτείνῃς ὑμᾶς, δόξῃ λατρεῖαν προσφέρειν τῷ Θεῷ. 3. καὶ ταῦτα <sup>v. 25</sup> ποιήσουσιν ὑμῖν, ὅτι οὐκ ἔγνωσαν τὸν πατέρα οὐδὲ ἐμέ. 4. ἀλλὰ ταῦτα λελάληκα ὑμῖν, ἵνα ὅταν ἔλθῃ ἡ ὥρα, μνημονεύητε αὐτῶν, ὅτι <sup>v. 64 only:</sup> ἐγὼ εἶπον ὑμῖν· ταῦτα δὲ ὑμῖν <sup>cr. xv. 27.</sup> ἐξ ἀρχῆς οὐκ εἶπον, ὅτι μεθ' ὑμῶν ἤμην. 5. νῦν δὲ ὑπάγω πρὸς τὸν πέμψαντά με, καὶ οὐδεὶς ἐξ ὑμῶν <sup>e xiii. 36.</sup> ἐρωτᾷ με, ὅπου ὑπάγεις; 6. ἀλλ' ὅτι ταῦτα λελάληκα ὑμῖν, ἡ λύπη πεπλήρωκεν ὑμῶν τὴν καρδίαν. 7. ἀλλ' ἐγὼ τὴν ἀλήθειαν <sup>f xi. 50;</sup> λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι συμφέρει ὑμῖν ἵνα ἐγὼ ἀπέλθω. ἔάν γὰρ μὴ ἀπέλθω, <sup>xviii. 14.</sup> ὁ παράκλητος οὐκ ἐλεύσεται πρὸς ὑμᾶς· ἔάν δὲ πορευθῶ, πέμψω staggered," or stumbled, i. e., that the troubles that fall upon you may not induce you to apostatise. See Thayer and Parkhurst, and Wetstein on Mt. v. 29. Cf. also Mt. xi. 6.—Ver. 2. ἀποσυναγωγῶν ποιήσουσιν ὑμᾶς. For the word ἀποσυν. see ix. 22, xii. 42; "they will put you out of their synagogues," they will make you outcasts from their synagogues. ἀλλ', "yea," or "yea more"; used in this sense Rom. vii. 7, 2 Cor. vii. 11, where it occurs six times. Cf. Acts xix. 2.—ἔρχεται . . . Θεῷ. ἔρχεται ὥρα ἵνα, cf. xii. 23, ἐλήλυθεν ἡ ὥρα ἵνα . . . and Burton, Moods and Tenses, 216, on the complementary limitation by ἵνα of nouns signifying set time, etc. And for πᾶς ὁ ἀποκτείνῃς, the aorist indicating those "who once do the act the single doing of which is the mark of the class," see Burton, 124, cf. 148.—δόξῃ λατρεῖαν προσφέρειν, "may think that he offers sacrificial service". λατρεία is used in Exod. xii. 25, etc., of the Passover; apparently used in a more general sense in 1 Macc. ii. 19, 22; and defined by Suicer "quicquid fit in honorem et cultum Dei," and by Theophylact as θεάρεστον ἔργον, a work well pleasing to God. Cf. Rom. xii. 1. Meyer and others quote the maxim of Jewish fanaticism, "Omnis effundens sanguinem improborum aequalis est illi qui sacrificium facit".—Ver. 3. This fanatical blindness is traced to its source, as in xv. 21, to their ignorance of God and of Christ: καὶ ταῦτα . . . ἐμέ. And He forewarns them that they might not be taken unawares.—Ver. 4. ἀλλὰ ταῦτα . . . ὑμῖν. This repeats ver. 1, but He now adds an explanation of His silence up to this time regarding their future: ταῦτα δὲ ὑμῖν . . . ἤμην. ἐξ ἀρχῆς = ἀπ' ἀρχῆς of xv. 27, Holtzmann. If there is a difference, ἐξ ἀρχῆς indicates rather the point of time (cf. its only other occurrence, vi. 64) while ἀπ' ἀρχῆς indicates continuity. The fact of the silence has been disputed: but no definite and full intimations have hitherto been given of the future experience of the Apostles, as representing an absent Lord. The reason of His silence was ὅτι μεθ' ὑμῶν ἤμην, "because I was with you". While He was with them they leant upon Him and could not apprehend a time of weakness and of persecution. See Mt. ix. 15.—Ver. 5. νῦν δὲ, "but now," in contrast to ἐξ ἀρχῆς, ὑπάγω, "I go away," in contrast to μεθ' ὑμῶν ἤμην, πρὸς . . . με, "to Him that sent me," as one who has discharged the duty committed to Him. καὶ οὐδεὶς ἐξ ὑμῶν . . . ὑπάγεις, "and no one of you asks me, Where are you going?" They were so absorbed in the thought of His departure and its consequences of bereavement to themselves that they had failed to ascertain clearly where He was going. ἀλλ' ὅτι . . . καρδίαν. The consequence of their absorption in one aspect of the crisis which He had been explaining to them was that grief had filled their heart to the exclusion of every other feeling. Cf. xiv. 28.—Ver. 7. ἀλλ' ἐγὼ . . . ἀπέλθω. "But," or "nevertheless I tell you the truth," I who see the whole extent tell you "it is to your advantage" and not to your loss "that I go away". This statement, incredible as it seemed to the disciples, He justifies: ἔάν γὰρ μὴ ἀπέλθω . . . ὑμᾶς. The withdrawal of the bodily presence of Christ was the essential condition of His universal spiritual presence.—Ver. 8. καὶ ἐλθὼν ἐκείνιος . . . "and when He" (with some emphasis, "that person") "has come, He will reprove, or as in R.V., "convict the world" "Reprove," reprobate, to rebut or refute, as in Henry VI., iii., l. 40, "Reprove no αὐτὸν πρὸς ὑμᾶς· 8. καὶ ἔλθὼν ἐκεῖνος ἔλεγξει τὸν κόσμον περὶ ἁμαρτίας καὶ περὶ δικαιοσύνης καὶ περὶ κρίσεως. 9. περὶ ἁμαρτίας μὲν, ὅτι οὐ πιστεύουσιν εἰς ἐμέ· 10. περὶ δικαιοσύνης δὲ, ὅτι πρὸς τὸν πατέρα μου ὑπάγω, καὶ οὐκ ἔτι θεωρεῖτέ με. 11. περὶ δὲ κρίσεως, ὅτι ὁ ἄρχων τοῦ κόσμου τούτου κέκριται. 12. Ἔτι πολλὰ ἔχω λέγειν ὑμῖν, ἀλλ' οὐ δύνασθε βασιτάζειν ἄρτι· 13. ὅταν δὲ ἔλθῃ ἐκεῖνος, τὸ πνεῦμα τῆς ἀληθείας, ὀδηγήσει ὑμᾶς εἰς πᾶσαν τὴν ἀλήθειαν· οὐ γὰρ λαλήσει ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ, ἀλλ'

viii. 46. 1
Cor. xiv.
24.
h xii. 31.
i Rev. ii. 2.
Mt. xx. 12
1 Cor. iii
2.
xiv. 26.
Acts viii.
31. Mt.
xv. 14.

<sup>1</sup> εν τη αληθεια παση in ΞDL, possibly originating in the common occurrence of οδηγειν with dative in Sept., see Ps. xxv. 5.

allegation if you can," is no longer used in this sense. The verb ἔλεγξει expresses the idea of pressing home a conviction. The object of this work of the Spirit is "the world" as opposed to Christ; and the subjects regarding which (περὶ) the convictions are to be wrought are "sin, righteousness and judgment". Regarding these three great spiritual facts, new ideas are to be borne in upon the human mind by the spirit.—Ver. 9. In detail, new convictions περὶ ἁμαρτίας are to be wrought, ὅτι οὐ πιστεύουσιν εἰς ἐμέ. Each of the three clauses introduced by ὅτι is in apposition with the foregoing substantive, and is explanatory of the ground of the conviction, "Concerning sin, because they do not believe on me". Unbelief will be apprehended to be sin. The world sins "because" it does not believe in Christ, i.e., the world sins inasmuch as it is unbelieving, cf. iii. 18, 19, 36; xv. 22. περὶ δικαιοσύνης δὲ . . . "And concerning righteousness, because I go to my Father and ye see me no longer." The world will see in the exaltation of Christ proof of His righteousness [δικαίου γὰρ γνῶρισμα τὸ πορεύεσθαι πρὸς τὸν θεὸν καὶ συνεῖναι αὐτῷ, Euthymius] and will accordingly cherish new convictions regarding righteousness. The clause καὶ οὐκ ἔτι θεωρεῖτέ με is added to exhibit more clearly that it was a spiritual and heavenly life He entered upon in going to the Father; and possibly to remind them that the invisibility which they lamented was the evidence of His victory.—Ver. 11. περὶ δὲ κρίσεως, "and concerning judgment (between sin and righteousness, and between Christ and the prince of this world, xii. 31, xiv. 30), because the ruler of this world has been judged," or "is judged". The distinction between sin and righteousness was, under the Spirit's teaching, to become absolute. In the crucifixion of Christ the influences which move worldly men—ὁ ἄρχων τοῦ κόσμου—were finally condemned. The fact that worldliness, blindness to the spiritually excellent, led to that treatment of Christ, is its condemnation. The world, the prince of it, is "judged". To adhere to it rather than to Christ is to cling to a doomed cause, a sinking ship.

Vv. 12-15. The Spirit will complete the teaching of Jesus.—Ver. 12. Ἔτι πολλὰ ἔχω λέγειν ὑμῖν, "I have yet many things to say to you"; after all I have said much remains unsaid. There is, then, much truth which it is desirable that Christians know and which yet was not uttered by Christ Himself. His words are not the sole embodiment of truth, though they may be its sole criterion. ἀλλ' οὐ δύνασθε βασιτάζειν ἄρτι, "but you cannot bear them now," therefore they are deferred; truth can be received only by those who have already been prepared for its reception. "'Tis the taught already that profit by teaching" (Ecclus. iii. 7; 1 Cor. iii. 1; Heb. v. 11-14). The Resurrection and Pentecost gave them new strength and new perceptions. βασιτάζειν, similarly used in 2 Kings xvii. 14, ὃ ἐὰν ἐπιθῆς ἐπ' ἐμέ, βαστάσω. To those who wish to become philosophers Epictetus gives the advice, Ἄνθρωπε, σκέψαι τί δύνασαι βαστάσαι (Diss. iii. 15, Kypke).—Ver. 13. What was now withheld would afterwards be disclosed, ὅταν . . . ἀλήθειαν. The Spirit would complete the teaching of Christ and lead them "into all the truth". ὀδηγήσει ὑμᾶς "shall lead you," "as a guide leads in the way, by steady advance, rather than by sudden revelation". Bernard. This function of the Spirit He still exercises. It is the Church at large He finally leads into all truth through centuries of error. οὐ γὰρ

- ὅσα ἂν ἀκούσῃ λαλήσει, καὶ τὰ ἐρχόμενα ἀναγγελεῖ ὑμῖν. 14.
 κ i. 16. ἐκεῖνος ἐμέ δόξασει, ὅτι * ἐκ τοῦ ἐμοῦ λήψεται, καὶ ἀναγγελεῖ ὑμῖν.
 15. πάντα ὅσα ἔχει ὁ πατήρ, ἐμὰ ἐστὶ· διὰ τοῦτο εἶπον, ὅτι * ἐκ τοῦ
 I vii 33: ἐμοῦ λήψεται,<sup>1</sup> καὶ ἀναγγελεῖ ὑμῖν. 16. <sup>1</sup>Μικρὸν καὶ οὐ<sup>2</sup> θεωρεῖτέ xiii. 33. με, καὶ πάλιν μικρὸν καὶ ὄψεσθέ με, ὅτι ἐγὼ ὑπάγω πρὸς τὸν πατέρα."<sup>3</sup> 17. Εἶπον οὖν ἐκ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ πρὸς ἀλλήλους, "Τί ἐστὶ τοῦτο ὃ λέγει ἡμῖν, Μικρὸν καὶ οὐ θεωρεῖτέ με, καὶ πάλιν μικρὸν καὶ

<sup>1</sup> λαμβανει in BDEG adopted by Tr.Ti.W.H.R.

* ουκετι in ΞBD 33.

<sup>3</sup> This clause ὅτι . . . πατέρα is not found in ΞBDL, and is deleted by Tr.Ti.W.H.R. It seems to have been inserted because of ver. 17, last clause; but this may be a reminiscence of ver. 10.

λαλήσει . . . ὑμῖν, "for He shall not speak from Himself, but whatever He shall have heard He will speak, and the things that are coming He will announce to you". This is the guarantee of the truth of the Spirit's teaching, as of Christ's, vii. 17, xiv. 10. What the Father tells Him, He will utter. Particularly, τὰ ἐρχόμενα ἀναγγελεῖ ὑμῖν, "the things that are coming He will declare to you". τὰ ἐρχόμενα means "the things that are now coming," not "the things which at any future stage of the Church's history may come". It might include the events of the succeeding day, but in this case ἀναγγελεῖ could not be used; for although these events might require to be explained, they did not need to be "announced". The promise must therefore refer to the main features of the new Christian dispensation. The Spirit would guide them in that new economy in which they would no longer have the visible example and help and counsel of their Master. It is not a promise that they should be able to predict the future. ["Maxime huc spectat apocalypsis, scripta per Johannem." Bengel.] In enabling them to adapt themselves to the new economy the centre and norm would be Christ.—Ver. 14. ἐκεῖνος ἐμέ δόξασει, "He will glorify me". The fulfilment of this promise is found in every action and word of the Apostles. Under the Spirit's guidance they lived wholly for Christ: the dispensation of the Spirit was the Christian dispensation. This is further explained in ὅτι ἐκ τοῦ ἐμοῦ λήψεται . . . "because He shall take of that which is mine, and declare it unto you". The Spirit draws from no other source of information or inspiration. It is always "out of that which is Christ's" He furnishes the Church.

So only could He glorify Christ. Not by taking the Church beyond Christ, but by more fully exhibiting the fullness of Christ, does He fulfil His mission.—Ver. 15. There is no need that the Spirit go beyond Christ and no possibility He should do so, because πάντα ὅσα ἔχει ὁ Πατήρ ἐμὰ ἐστὶ, "all things whatsoever the Father has are mine," cf. xvii. 10 and xiii. 3; 1 Cor. xv. 24-28; Heb. ii. 8. The Messianic reign involved that Christ should be truly supreme and have all things at His disposal. So that when He said that the Spirit would take of what was His, that was equivalent to saying that the Spirit had the unlimited fullness of the Godhead to draw upon.

Vv. 16-22. The sorrow occasioned by Christ's departure turned into joy at His return.—Ver. 16. Μικρὸν καὶ οὐ θεωρεῖτέ με καὶ πάλιν μικρὸν καὶ ὄψεσθέ με. The first "little while" is the time till the following day; the second "little while," the time till the resurrection, when they would see Him again. The similar expression of xiv. 19 has induced several interpreters to understand our Lord as meaning, "Ye shall see me spiritually"; thus Bernard says: "The discrimination in the verbs employed affords sufficient guidance, and leads us to interpret as follows. A little while (it was but a few hours), and then 'ye behold me no longer' (οὐκέτι θεωρεῖτέ με); I shall have passed from the visible scene, and from the observation of spectators (that is the kind of seeing which the verb intends). 'Again, a little while' (of but little longer duration), and 'ye shall see me' (ὄψεσθέ με), with another kind of seeing, one in which the natural sight becomes spiritual vision." This distinction, however, is not maintained in xiv. 19.—Ver. 17. Εἶπον οὖν ἐκ τῶν ὄψεσθέ με ; καὶ, Ὅτι ἐγὼ ὑπάγω πρὸς τὸν πατέρα ;” 18. Ἐλεγον οὖν, “Τοῦτο τί ἐστὶν ὃ λέγει, τὸ μικρὸν ; οὐκ οἶδαμεν τί λαλεῖ.” 19. Ἐγγὼ οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ὅτι ἤθελον αὐτὸν ἐρωτᾶν, καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Περὶ τούτου ζητεῖτε μετ’ ἀλλήλων, ὅτι εἶπον, Μικρὸν καὶ οὐ θεωρεῖτέ με, καὶ πάλιν μικρὸν καὶ ὄψεσθέ με ; 20. Ἄμην ἄμην λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι <sup>m</sup> κλαύσετε καὶ θρηνήσετε ὑμεῖς, ὃ δὲ κόσμος χαρήσεται. <sup>n</sup> ὑμεῖς δὲ λυπηθήσεσθε, ἀλλ’ ἡ λύπη ὑμῶν <sup>10.</sup> εἰς χαρὰν γενήσεται. <sup>11.</sup> 21. ἡ γυνὴ ὅταν τίκῃ, λύπην ἔχει, ὅτι ἤλθεν ἡ ὥρα αὐτῆς· ὅταν δὲ γενήσῃ τὸ παιδίον, οὐκ ἔτι μνημονεῖ τῆς θλίψεως, διὰ τὴν <sup>o</sup> χαρὰν, ὅτι ἐγενήθη ἄνθρωπος εἰς τὸν κόσμον. 22. καὶ ὑμεῖς οὖν λύπην μὲν νῦν ἔχετε· πάλιν δὲ ὄψομαι ὑμᾶς, καὶ χαρήσεται ὑμῶν ἡ καρδιά, καὶ τὴν χαρὰν ὑμῶν οὐδεὶς αἶρει<sup>1</sup> ἀφ’ ὑμῶν. 23. καὶ εἰ

<sup>1</sup> αρει, future, in BD*Γ, vulg. “tollet”. αρει in ΞACD<sup>2</sup>LP.

μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ. A pause is implied ; during which some of the disciples (τινὲς understood, as in vii. 40 ; see Simcox, Gram. of N.T., p. 84) expressed to one another their bewilderment. They were alarmed, but could not attach their alarm to any definite object of dread.—Ver. 19. Jesus, perceiving their embarrassment, and that they wished to interrogate Him—ὅτι ἤθελον αὐτὸν ἐρωτᾶν—said to them: Περὶ τούτου . . . “Are you inquiring among yourselves?”—μετ’ ἀλλήλων, not as in ver. 17, πρὸς ἀλλήλους, “about this that I said,” etc. ? —Ver. 20. ἄμην . . . ὅτι κλαύσετε καὶ θρηνήσετε ὑμεῖς, “ye shall weep and lament”; θρηνέω is commonly used of lamentation for the dead, as in Jer. xxi. 10, μὴ κλαίετε τὸν θενηκότα, μηδὲ θρηνεῖτε αὐτόν ; 2 Sam. i. 17 ; Mt. xi. 17 ; Lk. vii. 32. Here it is weeping and lamentation for the dead that is meant. ὃ δὲ κόσμος χαρήσεται, but while you mourn, the world shall rejoice, as achieving a triumph over a threatening enemy. ὑμεῖς δὲ λυπηθήσεσθε, “and ye shall be sorrow-stricken, but your sorrow shall become joy”. Cf. ἀπὸ πένθους εἰς χαρὰν, Esth. ix. 22, and especially xx. 20, ἐχάρησαν οἱ μαθηταὶ ἰδόντες τὸν Κύριον.—Ver. 21. He adds an illustration of the manner in which anxiety and dread pass into joy : ἡ γυνὴ “the woman,” the article is generic, cf. ὁ δοῦλος, xv. 15, Meyer, ὅταν τίκῃ, “when she brings forth,” λύπην . . . αὐτῆς, “hath sorrow because her hour”—the critical or appointed time of her delivery—“is come”. The woman in travail is the common figure for terror-stricken anguish in O.T.: Ps. xlviii. 6 ; Jer. iv. 31 ; vi. 24, etc. ὅταν δὲ γενήσῃ τὸ παιδίον . . . “but when the child is born, she no longer remembers the distress, for the joy that a man is born into the world”. The comparison, so far as explicitly used by our Lord in ver. 22, extends only to the sudden replacement of sorrow with joy in both cases. But a comparison of Is. lxvi. 7-9, Hos. xiii. 13, and other O.T. passages, in which the resurrection of a new Israel is likened to a difficult and painful birth, warrants the extension of the metaphor to the actual birth of the N.T. church in the resurrection of Christ. Cf. Holtzmann. —Ver. 22. καὶ ὑμεῖς . . . ὑμῶν, “and you accordingly,” in keeping with this natural arrangement conspicuous in the woman's case, “have at present sorrow”. This is the time when the results are hidden and only the pain felt: “but I will see you again and your heart shall rejoice and your joy no one takes from you”. This joy was felt in the renewed vision of their Lord at the Resurrection. “All turns on the Resurrection; and without the experiences of that time there would have been no beholding Christ in the Spirit.” Bernard.

Vv. 23-28. Future accessibility of the Father.—Ver. 23. καὶ ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ, “and in that day” of the Resurrection and the dispensation it introduces, see xiv. 20, in contrast to this present time when you wish to ask me questions, ver. 19, “ye shall not put any questions to me”. Cf. xxi. 12. He was no longer the familiar friend and visible teacher to whom at any moment they might turn. But though this accustomed intercourse terminated, it was only that they might learn a more direct communion with the ἐκεῖνη τῇ ἡμέρᾳ ἐμὲ οὐκ ἐρωτήσετε οὐδέν. Ἄμην ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὅτι ὅσα ἂν αἰτήσητε τὸν πατέρα ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί μου, δώσει ὑμῖν.<sup>1</sup> p il. 10. Mt. 24. Ἐως ἄρτι οὐκ ᾔτήσατε οὐδέν ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί μου. ἂ αἰτεῖτε, καὶ

 xi. 12.
 q Mt. vii. 7. λήψετε, ἵνα ἡ χαρὰ ὑμῶν ᾖ ἡ πληρωμένη. 25. ταῦτα ἐν ἁ παροι-
 ii. 7-10.
 s ver. 29. μίαις λελάληκα ὑμῖν· ἀλλ' ἔρχεται ὥρα ὅτε οὐκ ἔτι ἐν παροιμίαις Prov. i. 1.
 Ecclus. ληλήσω ὑμῖν, ἀλλὰ ἡ παρρησία περὶ τοῦ πατρὸς ἀναγγελοῦ ὑμῖν.
 xvii. 17.
 Cp. Hatch, 26. ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί μου αἰτήσεσθε· καὶ οὐ λέγω Essays, p. ὑμῖν ὅτι ἐγὼ ἐρωτήσω τὸν πατέρα περὶ ὑμῶν· 27. αὐτὸς γὰρ ὁ 64.
 v. 25. πατὴρ φιλεῖ ὑμᾶς, ὅτι ὑμεῖς ἐμὲ πεφιλήκατε, καὶ πεπιστεύκατε ὅτι a x. 24.

<sup>1</sup> Δώσει ὑμῖν before ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί μου in  $\Sigma$ BC<sup>1</sup>LX. T.R. in AC<sup>3</sup>D, it. vulg. Cp. iiv. 13, 14.

<sup>2</sup> For the ἀναγγελοῦ of EGH ἀπαγγελοῦ is read in ABC<sup>1</sup>D, while  $\Sigma$  reads ἀπαγγελλῶ.

Father: ἀμὴν . . . δώσει ὑμῖν. The connection is somewhat obscure. The words may either be taken in connection with those immediately preceding, in which case they intimate that the information they can no longer get from a present Christ they will receive from the Father: or they may begin a distinct paragraph and introduce a fresh subject, the certainty of prayer being heard.—Ver. 24. Ἐως ἄρτι οὐκ ᾔτήσατε οὐδέν ἐν τ. . . . “Until now ye have asked nothing in my name.” They had not yet realised that it was through Christ and on the lines of His work all God’s activity towards man and all man’s prayer to God were to proceed.—αἰτεῖτε . . . πληρωμένη, “ask and ye shall receive, that your joy may be full,” or “fulfilled,” or “completed”. The joy they were to experience on seeing their Lord again, ver. 22, was to be completed by their continued experience of the efficacy of His name in prayer. Prayer must have been rather hindered by the visible presence of a sufficient helper, but henceforth it was to be the medium of communication between the disciples and the source of spiritual power.—Ver. 25. Another great change would characterise the economy into which they were passing. Instead of dark figurative utterances which only dimly revealed things spiritual, direct and intelligible disclosures regarding the Father would be made to the disciples: ταῦτα ἐν παροιμίαις . . . ὑμῖν. παροιμία. See x. 6; “dark sayings” or “riddles” expresses what is here meant. It is opposed to παρρησία, open, plain, easily intelligible, meant to be understood. He does not refer to particular utterances, such as xv. 1, xvi. 21, etc.

but to the reserved character of the whole evening’s conversation, and of all His previous teaching. “The promise is that the reserve imposed by a yet unfinished history, by a manifestation in the flesh, by the incapacity of the hearers, and by their gradual education, will then be succeeded by clear, full, unrestricted information, fitted to create in those who receive it that ‘full assurance of understanding’ which contributes so largely to the ‘full assurance of faith.’” Bernard. περὶ τοῦ πατρὸς, the Father is the central theme of Christ’s teaching, both while on earth and above.—Ver. 26. ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ. “In that day,” in which I shall tell you plainly of the Father (ver. 25, ἔρχεται ὥρα), “ye shall ask in my name”; this is the natural consequence of their increased knowledge of the Father. καὶ οὐ λέγω . . . ἐξῆλθον “And I do not say to you that I will ask the Father concerning you”—περὶ, almost equivalent to ὑπέρ, here and in Matt. xxvi. 28; 1 John iv. 10, “in relation to,” almost “in behalf of”—(ver. 27) “for the Father Himself loves you, because ye have loved me, and have believed that I came forth from God”. The intention of the statement is to convey fuller assurance that their prayers will be answered. The Father’s love needs no prompting. Yet the intercession of Christ, so emphatically presented in the Epistle to the Hebrews and in Rom. viii. 34, is not ignored. Jesus says: “I do not base the expectation of answer solely on my intercession, but on the Father’s love, a love which itself is quickened and evoked by your love for me”. “I do not say that I will ask” means “I do not press this,” “I do not bring this forward as the sole reason why you

ἐγὼ ὦ παρὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ<sup>1</sup> ἐξῆλθον. 28. ἐξῆλθον ὦ παρὰ τοῦ πατρὸς,<sup>2</sup> ὡς ἐκρίθην.
καὶ ἐλήλυθα εἰς τὸν κόσμον· πάλιν ὦ ἀφήμι τὸν κόσμον, καὶ ὡς ἐκρίθην.
πορεύομαι πρὸς τὸν πατέρα.”

29. Λέγουσιν αὐτῷ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ, “Ἴδε νῦν<sup>3</sup> παρρησία λαλεῖς, καὶ ὡς παροιμίαν οὐδεμίαν λέγεις. 30. νῦν οἶδαμεν ὅτι οἶδας πάντα, ὡς ἐκρίθην.
καὶ οὐ χρεῖαν ἔχεις ὡς ἵνα τίς σε ἐρωτᾷ. ὡς ἐκρίθην ἐν τούτῳ πιστεύομεν ὅτι ἀπὸ Θεοῦ ἐξῆλθες.” 31. Απεκρίθη αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Ἄρτι πιστεύετε; 32. ἰδοῦ, ἔρχεται ὥρα καὶ νῦν<sup>4</sup> ἐλήλυθεν, ὡς ἵνα ὡς σκορπισ-θῆτε ἕκαστος εἰς τὰ ὡς ἴδια, καὶ ἐμὲ μόνον ἀφήτε· καὶ ὡς οὐκ εἰμί μόνος, ὅτι ὁ πατήρ μετ’ ἐμοῦ ἐστι. 33. ταῦτα λελάληκα ὑμῖν, ὡς ἵνα ἐν ἐμοῖ ἐιρήνην ἔχητε. ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ θλίψιν ἔξετε<sup>5</sup>· ἀλλὰ θαρσεῖτε, ἐγὼ ὡς νενίκηκα τὸν κόσμον.”

<sup>1</sup> πατρός is read by W.H.R. following  $\aleph^{ca}BC^*D$ . θεοῦ is found in  $\aleph^*AC^3$ , it. vulg.

<sup>2</sup> T.R. in  $\aleph AC^2$ , εκ in  $BC^*L$  33. εκ follows ἐξῆλθον in viii. 42; απο in ver. 30, xiii. 3, xvi. 30; παρα in ver. 27 and in xvii. 8. εκ conveys the idea of origin, παρα of starting point, απο of the agency of the sender.

<sup>3</sup> εν with  $\aleph BCD$  nowhere else in John with λαλειν, but in Ep. μετα is used in Acts.

<sup>4</sup> νυν deleted by Tr. Ti. W.H.R. following  $\aleph ABC^*D^*L$  33.

<sup>5</sup> εχετε in  $\aleph ABCL$ , etc.

may expect to be heard”. The mediation of Christ has here its incidence at an earlier stage than in the Apostolic statements. The love of God is represented as intensified towards those who have accepted Christ as the revealer of the Father.—Ver. 28. ἐξῆλθον . . . πατέρα. “I came forth from the Father and am come into the world; again (reversing the process) I leave the world and go to the Father.” There is a sense in which any man can use these words, but it is a loose not an exact sense. The latter member of the sentence—“I leave the world and go to the Father”—gives us the interpretation of the former—“I came forth,” etc. For to say “I leave the world” is not the same as to say “I go to the Father”; this second expression describes a state of existence which is entered upon when existence in this world is done. And to say “I came forth from the Father” is not the same as to say “I am come into the world”: it describes a state of existence antecedent to that which began by coming into the world.

Vv. 29-33. Last words.—Ver. 29. The Lord's last utterance, vv. 25-28, the disciples find much more explicit than His previous words: “Ἴδε νῦν παρρησία λαλεῖς, “Behold, now (at length) Thou speakest plainly,” explicitly, καὶ παροιμίαν οὐδεμίαν λέγεις, “and utterest no obscure saying,” ver. 25. Almost universally νῦν, in vv. 29, 30, is understood to denote the present time in contrast to the future promised in ver. 25. As if the disciples meant: “Already Thou speakest plainly; we do not need to wait for that future time”. It seems simpler to take it as signifying a contrast to the past time in which He had spoken in dark sayings.—Ver. 30. νῦν οἶδαμεν . . . ἐρωτᾷ. The reference is to ver. 19, where they manifested dissatisfaction with the obscurity of His utterances. Here in ver. 30 two things are stated, that Jesus has perfect knowledge, οἶδας πάντα, and that He knows how to communicate it, οὐ χρεῖαν ἔχεις ἵνα τίς σε ἐρωτᾷ. Convinced that He possessed these qualifications, they felt constrained to accept Him as a teacher come from God, ἐν τούτῳ (“herein,” or “by this,” ἐκ τούτου in modern Greek version) πιστεύομεν ὅτι ἀπὸ Θεοῦ ἐξῆλθες, cf. iii. 2.—Ver. 31. To this enthusiastic confession Jesus makes the sobering and pathetic reply: “Ἄρτι πιστεύετε; Do ye now believe that I am God's Representative? Is this your present attitude? ἰδοῦ, ἔρχεται ὥρα καὶ νῦν ἐλήλυθεν, “Behold, the hour is coming and is come,” so imminent is it that the perfect may be used.—ἵνα σκορπισθῆτε . . . ἀφήτε. Cf. I Macc. vi. 54.

a xi. 41. 1 XVII. 1. ΤΑΥΤΑ ἐλάλησεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ * ἐπήρῃ<sup>1</sup> τοὺς ὀφθαλ-Chron. μούς αὐτοῦ εἰς τὸν οὐρανόν, καὶ εἶπε, " Πάτερ, ἐλήλυθεν ἡ ὥρα ·
 xxi. 16. δόξασόν σου τὸν υἱόν, ἵνα καὶ<sup>2</sup> ὁ υἱός σου δοξάσῃ σε · 2. καθὼς
 Is. xiv. 14. b Writ δέωκας αὐτῷ<sup>b</sup> ἐξουσίαν πάσης σαρκός, ἵνα ὁ πᾶν ὁ δέωκας αὐτῷ,
 gen. of ἔδωκας αὐτῷ<sup>b</sup> ἐξουσίαν πάσης σαρκός, ἵνα ὁ πᾶν ὁ δέωκας αὐτῷ, obj. here and Mt.
 x. 1, Mk. vi. 7: usually with infin. or ἐπί with gen. or acc. c vi. 39.

<sup>1</sup> T.R. in AC<sup>3</sup> and most versions, except vulg. επαρας, without καὶ before εἶπε, in NBC*DL 33. Lücke says this is "offenbar eine stylistische correctur".

<sup>2</sup> Omit καὶ with NABC*D.

ἐσκορπίσθησαν ἕκαστος εἰς τὸν τόπον αὐτοῦ. In x. 12 the wolf σκορπίζει τὰ πρόβατα. Cf. especially Mk. xv. 27. εἰς τὰ ἴδια frequently of one's own house, cf. xix. 27; Acts xxi. 6; Esth. v. 10, vi. 12. Here perhaps it is somewhat less definite, "to his own" is better than "to his own house". It includes "to his own interests," or "pursuits," or "familiar surroundings," or "private affairs," or all these together. Those whom He had gathered round Him and who believed in Him were yet destined to fail Him in the critical hour, and were to scatter each to his own, for the time abandoning the cause and Person who had held them together, leaving their loved Master (ver. 27) alone.—καὶ οὐκ εἰμι μόνος . . . ἐστὶ, "and (yet) I am not alone, because the Father is with me". This presence supplies the lack of all other company. He was destined to lose for a time the consciousness even of this presence, Mt. xxvii. 46.—Ver. 33. ταῦτα . . . κόσμον. ταῦτα embraces the whole of the consolatory utterances from xiv. 1 onwards. His aim in uttering them was "that in me" (cf. Paul's use of "in Christ") "ye may have peace". ἐν ἐμοί and ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ are the two spheres in which at one and the same time the disciples live, xvii. 15, Col. iii. 1 and 5. So long as they "abode in Christ" and His words abode in them, xv. 7, they would have peace, xiv. 27. So long as they were in the world they would have tribulation, θλίψιν ἔχετε, "in the world ye have tribulation".—ἀλλὰ θαρσεῖτε, "but be of good courage". Cf. θάρσει τέκνον, Mt. ix. 2, xiv. 27.—ἐγὼ νενίκηκα τὸν κόσμον. νικᾶν occurs only here in the Gospel, but twenty-two times in the Johannine Epistles and Apocalypse; only four times in the other N.T. writings; cf. especially 1 John v. 4, 5. "I (emphatic) have overcome the world," have proved that its most dangerous assaults can be successfully resisted; and in me you are sharers in my victory; in me you also overcome.

CHAPTER XVII.—Vv. 1-26. The closing prayer of Jesus ["precatio summi sacerdotis," Chytraeus]. Vv. 1-5, with reference to Himself; vv. 6-19, for His disciples; vv. 20-26, for all who should afterwards believe on Him.—Ver. 1. Ταῦτα ἐλάλησεν . . . καὶ ἐπήρῃ. The connection of ἐλάλησεν with ἐπήρῃ by καὶ shows that the prayer followed immediately upon the discourse, and was, therefore, uttered in the hearing of the disciples. ἐπήρῃ . . . οὐρανόν, so 1 Chron. xxi. 16. ἦρα τ. ὀφθ., Ps. cxxi. 1, and cxxiii. 1. From οὐρανόν it cannot be argued that they were in the open air. "Für das Auge des Geistes is der freie Himmel überall." Lücke. "The eye of one who prays is on all occasions raised toward heaven." Meyer. Πάτερ, ἐλήλυθεν ἡ ὥρα, "Father," the simplest and most intimate form of address, cf. xi. 41, xii. 27. "The hour is come," i.e., the hour appointed for the glorification of the Son; cf. ii. 4, xii. 23. That this hour is meant is shown by the petition which follows: δόξασόν σου τὸν υἱόν, "glorify Thy Son". σου, in position of emphasis. This glorification embraced His death, resurrection, and session at God's right hand, as accredited Mediator, cf. vii. 39, xii. 16, 23. But this glorification itself had an object, ἵνα ὁ υἱός σου δοξάσῃ σε, "that the Son may glorify Thee". The Father is glorified by being known in His love and holiness.—Ver. 2. This is the object of Christ's manifestation and reign. This glorification of the Son, which is now imminent, is in accordance with the purpose of the Father in giving the Son power over men: καθὼς ἔδωκας αὐτῷ ἐξουσίαν . . . αἰώνιον. Only by His being glorified could the Son give this eternal life, and so fulfil the commission with which He was entrusted. ἐξουσίαν ἔδωκας is explained in ver. 27 and the verses preceding: Mt. xi. 27; Heb. i. 2. πάσης σαρκός represents ἡ βρῆ-כָּל־בְּרֵית, Gen. vi. 12, Is. xl. 6, etc., and denotes the human race as possessed

δόξη<sup>1</sup> αὐτοῖς ζωὴν αἰώνιον. 3. αὕτη δέ ἐστιν ἡ αἰώνιος ζωὴ, <sup>4</sup> ἵνα δ vi. 29 reff.
 γινώσκωσί σε τὸν μόνον ἄληθινὸν Θεόν, καὶ ὃν ἀπέστειλας Ἰησοῦν <sup>e 1 Thess. i.</sup> Χριστόν. 4. ἐγὼ σε ἐδόξασα ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς· τὸ ἔργον <sup>9. Heb.</sup> <sup>ix. 14 (A)</sup> <sup>cp. 1 Jo. v.</sup> <sup>20. Rev.</sup> <sup>iii. 7.</sup> <sup>f Neh. vi. 16.</sup> <sup>g v. 36.</sup> <sup>h xiii. 33.</sup> <sup>Ps. lxxi. 5</sup>
 δέδωκάς μοι ἵνα ποιήσω· 5. καὶ νῦν <sup>b</sup> δόξασόν με σὺ, πάτερ, ἵνα παρὰ σεαυτῷ, τῇ δόξῃ ἣ εἶχον ἵπρὸ τοῦ τὸν κόσμον εἶναι παρὰ σοί.

i Prov. ii. 1; iii. 13. j Prov. viii. 24. Ps. lxxi. 5

<sup>1</sup> For δωση and γινώσκωσι some read δώσει and γινώσκουσι, but vide Simcox, Gram., p. 109, and W.H., Appendix, p. 171.

<sup>2</sup> τελείωσας in ὩABCLΠ 33 adopted by Tr.Ti.W.H.R.

of a frail, terrestrial existence, lacking ζωὴν αἰώνιον. ἵνα πᾶν ὃ δέδωκάς αὐτῷ, the neuter, as in vi. 39, resolved into the individuals in αὐτοῖς; and on the nominative absolute, see Buttmann's N.T. Gram., 379; and Kypke in loc.—Ver. 3. αὕτη δέ ἐστιν ἡ αἰώνιος ζωὴ ἵνα . . . On ἵνα in this construction, see Burton, 213, and cf. xv. 8; ὅτι in iii. 19 is not quite equivalent. In Is. xxxvii. 20 God is designated ὁ Θεὸς μόνος, and in Exod. xxxiv. 6 ἀληθινός; cf. 2 Thess. i. 10. He is the only true God in contrast to many that are "called gods," 1 Cor. viii. 5, 6. But cf. especially 1 John v. 20. It was by making known to them this God, and thus glorifying the Father, that Christ "gave men eternal life". The life He gave consisted in and was maintained by this knowledge. But to the knowledge of the Father, the knowledge of "Him whom Thou didst send, Jesus Christ," was necessary, i. 18, xiv. 6. As in i. 17, so here, Ἰησοῦν Χριστόν is the double name which became common in Apostolic times, and not (as Meyer and others) "an appellative predicate," "Jesus as the Messiah". Whether Jesus' naming of Himself as a third person can be accounted for by the solemnity of the occasion ("der feierliche Gebetstyl," Lücke), or is to be ascribed to John, is much debated. Westcott seems justified in saying that "the use of the name 'Jesus Christ' by the Lord Himself at this time is in the highest degree unlikely. . . . It is no derogation from the truthfulness of the record that St. John has thus given parenthetically, and in conventional language (so to speak), the substance of what the Lord said at greater length."—Ver. 4. ἐγὼ σε . . . ποιήσω. This is a fresh ground for the petition of ver. 1 renewed in ver. 5: "glorify Thou me". The ground is "I have glorified Thee on the earth; having finished perfectly accomplished, cf. τετέλειται of the cross] the work which Thou gavest me to do". But it is not the idea of reward that is prominent here, although that idea is found in Phil. ii. 6-11; Heb. ii. 9-11; v. 4-10; the immediate thought here is of the necessary progress which the hour demanded. There remained no longer any reason for His continuance on earth. He did not desire, and did not need, any prolongation of life below. Beyschlag's objection (N.T. Theol., i. 254) is therefore baseless, as also is Grotius' "ostendit, non iniquum se petere".—Ver. 5. καὶ νῦν δόξασον . . . σοί. The precise character of the glorification He looks for is here presented. It is παρὰ σεαυτῷ, and it is a restoration to the glory He had enjoyed πρὸ τοῦ τὸν κόσμον εἶναι. By παρὰ σεαυτῷ it is rendered impossible to understand παρὰ σοί of an "ideal" pre-existence; because these two expressions are here equivalents, and Christ cannot be supposed to have prayed for an "ideal" glory when He asked that God would glorify Him παρὰ σεαυτῷ. "There is, consequently, here, as in vi. 62, viii. 58, a continuity of the consciousness of the historical Christ with the Logos." Tholuck. On this verse Beyschlag remarks (i. 254): "The possibility of such a position was first won by Jesus through His life and death on earth, so that, in point of fact, it forms the divine reward of that life and death; how then could He have possessed it realiter before the world was?" But the representation given by Paul in Phil. ii. is open to the same objection. Christ is represented as leaving a glory He originally enjoyed and returning to it when His work on earth was done and as the result of that work. The humanity was now to share in and to be in some way the organ of that divine glory; and this it could not be until it had been perfected by the experience of a human life. Wendt (Teaching of Jesus, ii. 169) says: "Ac-ording to the mode of speech and conception prevalent in the N.T., a heavenly good, and so also a heavenly glory, can be conceived and spoken of as existing with God, and belonging to a person, not because this person already exists, and is invested with glory, but because the glory of God is in some way deposited and preserved for this person in heaven". The passages, however, on which he depends for this principle do not sustain it. Such expressions as i. 14, ii. 11, which indicate that already while on earth a divine glory was manifest in Christ, in no degree contradict but rather confirm such statements as the present.

6. Ἐφανερώσά σου τὸ ὄνομα τοῖς ἀνθρώποις οὓς δέδωκάς<sup>1</sup> μοι ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου· σοὶ ἦσαν, καὶ ἐμοὶ αὐτοὺς δέδωκάς· καὶ τὸν λόγον σου ἐτέθηράκασι. 7. νῦν ἔγνωκαν ὅτι πάντα ὅσα δέδωκάς μοι, παρὰ σου ἐστίν<sup>2</sup>. 8. ὅτι τὰ ῥήματα ἃ δέδωκάς μοι, δέδωκα αὐτοῖς· καὶ αὐτοὶ ἔλαβον, καὶ ἔγνωσαν ἀληθῶς, ὅτι παρὰ σοῦ ἐξήλθον, καὶ ἐπίστευσαν ὅτι σύ με ἀπέστειλας. 9. ἐγὼ περὶ αὐτῶν ἐρωτῶ· οὐ περὶ τοῦ κόσμου ἐρωτῶ, ἀλλὰ περὶ ὧν δέδωκάς μοι, ὅτι σοὶ εἰσι. 10. καὶ τὰ ἐμὰ πάντα σὰ ἐστίν, καὶ τὰ σὰ ἐμὰ· καὶ δεδόξασμαι ἐν

<sup>1</sup> For δεδωκάς in both occurrences in ver. 6 εδωκάς is read in ΣABDK. In ver. 7 δεδωκάς is found in ΣCDL, εδωκάς in AB. In ver. 8 δεδωκάς in ΣL, εδωκάς in ABCD.

<sup>2</sup> εἰσιν in ΣBCL 33.

Vv. 6-19. Prayer for the disciples.—Ver. 6. Ἐφανερώσά σου. . . κόσμου. Ver. 4 is resumed and explained. "I have glorified Thee and finished my work by manifesting," etc. To manifest the name here means to make God known as the holy and loving Father. This had been accomplished by Christ not in the case of all, but of those whom the Father had given Him; cf. vi. 37-44. Out of the world some were separated by the Father and allotted to Christ as His disciples. σοὶ ἦσαν, "Thine they were," before they attached themselves to Jesus they already belonged to God in a special sense; as, e.g., Nath. i. 48.—Holtzmann, καὶ τὸν λόγον σου τετήρηκασι, "and they have kept Thy word," the revelation of God which has come to them through various channels; in contrast to those mentioned in v. 38.—Ver. 7. As the result of this keeping of God's truth, νῦν ἔγνωκαν. . . ἐστίν, "they have now"—in presence of this final revelation—"known that all things whatsoever Thou hast given me are from Thee". The object of the manifestation in Christ has been attained: the Father has been seen in and through Him. All the wisdom and power of Christ have been recognised as from God.—Ver. 8. ὅτι τὰ ῥήματα. . . ἀπέστειλας. The result achieved, ver. 7, was due to the fidelity of the messenger, τὰ ῥήματα. . . δέδωκα αὐτοῖς, and to the receptiveness of those prepared by God, αὐτοὶ ἔλαβον, etc. cf. xvi. 30. ἐγὼ περὶ αὐτῶν ἐρωτῶ. He desires solemnly to commit to the Father's keeping those who have believed. He prays for them in distinction from the world, and for the present sets the world aside, οὐ περὶ τοῦ κόσμου. The petitions now presented are only applicable to disciples, not to the world. Melancthon says: "Vide horrendum iudicium Christi de mundo, cum negat se orare pro mundo, damnatque quicquid est mundi, quantumvis speciosum". But Luther more justly says: "To pray for the world, and not to pray for the world, must both be right and good. For soon after He says Himself: 'Neither pray I for those alone, but for them also who shall believe on me'." He prayed too for His crucifiers, Lk. xxiii. 34. His reason for praying for those who have received Him is ὅτι σοὶ εἰσι, "because they are Thine". God's interest in them and work upon them have already been manifested, and are the promise of His further operation.—Ver. 10. καὶ τὰ ἐμὰ πάντα σὰ ἐστίν, καὶ τὰ σὰ ἐμὰ, the community of property and therefore of interest is unlimited, absolute; extending not only to the persons of the disciples, but to all that Christ has spoken and done on earth. καὶ δεδόξασμαι ἐν αὐτοῖς, "and I have been glorified in them," i.e., in the dis-

αὐτοῖς. 11. καὶ οὐκ ἔτι εἰμί ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ, καὶ οὗτοι ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ
 εἰσὶ, καὶ ἐγὼ πρὸς σε ἔρχομαι. πᾶτερ ἅγιε, * τήρησον αὐτοὺς ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί σου, οὓς<sup>1</sup> δέδωκάς μοι, ἵνα ὡσιν ἔν, καθὼς ἡμεῖς.
 12. ὅτε ἤμην μετ' αὐτῶν ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ,<sup>2</sup> ἐγὼ ἔτήρουν αὐτοὺς ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί σου· οὓς<sup>3</sup> δέδωκάς μοι ἑφύλαξα, καὶ οὐδεὶς ἐξ αὐτῶν ἀπώλετο, εἰ μὴ ὁ * υἱὸς τῆς ἀπωλείας, ἵνα ἡ γραφὴ, πληρωθῇ.
 13. νῦν δὲ πρὸς σε ἔρχομαι, καὶ ταῦτα λαλῶ ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ, ἵνα ἔχωσι * τὴν χαρὰν τὴν ἐμὴν πεπληρωμένην ἐν αὐτοῖς. 14. ἐγὼ δέδωκα αὐτοῖς τὸν λόγον σου, καὶ ὁ κόσμος ἐμίσησεν αὐτοὺς, ὅτι οὐκ εἰσὶν ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου, καθὼς ἐγὼ οὐκ εἰμί ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου. 15. οὐκ ἐρωτῶ ἵνα ἄρῃς αὐτοὺς ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου, ἀλλ' ἵνα τηρήσῃς αὐτοὺς ἔκ n Josh.xxiv.

 19.
 o 1 Thess.v.
 23.
 p x. 30.
 q Prov. xix.
 16. Wisd.
 x. 5; xix.
 6. 1 Pet.
 i. 5.
 r 2 Kings
 xii. 5. Is.
 lvii. 4. 7
 Thess. ii.
 3.
 s xv. 11.
 t Rev. iii.
 10; ἀπό
 common.

<sup>1</sup> οὓς D<sup>2</sup> and a few cursives; ο in D*XU and a few cursives; ω in ΞABCL, etc., Syrr. Theb. Arm. Tr.Ti.W.H.R.

<sup>2</sup> Omit εν τω κοσμω with ΞBC*DL.

<sup>3</sup> ω read here also by BC*L, and και inserted before εφυλαξα.

ciples. In them it had been manifested that Christ was the messenger of God and had the words of eternal life.—Ver. 11. καὶ οὐκέτι εἰμί ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ. The circumstances necessitating the prayer are now stated. Jesus is no longer in the world, already He has bid farewell to it, but the disciples remain in it, exposed without His accustomed counsel and defence. πᾶτερ ἅγιε, “Holy Father”; this unique designation is suggested by the Divine attribute which would naturally assert itself in defending from the world’s corruptions those who were exposed to them. τήρησον αὐτοὺς ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί σου ὦ δέδωκάς μοι, “preserve them in [the knowledge of] Thy name, which Thou gavest me”. φ is attracted into dative by ὀνόματι. This was the fundamental petition. The retention of the knowledge which Christ had imparted to them of the Father would effect ἵνα ὡσιν ἐν καθὼς ἡμεῖς. Without harmony among themselves, so that they should exist as a manifest unity differentiated from the world, their witness would fail; xv. 8, 12. καθὼς ἡμεῖς is explained by xv. 9, 10.—Ver. 12. The protection now asked had been afforded by Christ so long as He was with the disciples. ὅτε ἤμην μετ’ αὐτῶν, ἐγὼ ἐτήρουν . . . “when I was with them, I kept them in Thy name which Thou hast given me; and I guarded them, and not one of them perished, but the son of perdition, that the Scripture might be fulfilled”. On the detail of educative care spent on the disciples, and covered by ἐτήρουν, see Bernard, Central Teaching, p. 370. ὁ υἱὸς τῆς ἀπωλείας, cf. 2 Thess. ii. 3, in accordance with the usual Hebrew usage, the person identified with perdition, closely associated with it. Cf. Is. lvii. 4; xxxiii. 2; Mt. xxiii. 15. Rāphel quotes from Herodotus, viii., ὕβριος υἱόν, with the remark, “nec Graecis plane ignotus est hic loquendi modus”. The Scripture referred to is Ps. xli. 10, as in xiii. 18.—Ver. 13. As He Himself goes to the Father, He utters this petition aloud, and while yet with the disciples—ταῦτα λαλῶ ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ—that they might recognise that the power of God was engaged for their protection, and might thus have repeated and perfected in themselves the same joy with which Christ had overcome all the trials and fears of life. Cf. xv. 11, xvi. 24.—Ver. 14. ἐγὼ δέδωκα . . . κόσμου. Additional reason for soliciting in behalf of the disciples the protection of the Father consists in this, that the world hates them because they have received the revelation of God in Christ, and are thereby separated from the world as their Teacher was not of the world. Cf. ver. 6.—Ver. 15. The simplest escape from the anger of the world was removal from it, but for this He would not ask: οὐκ ἐρωτῶ ἵνα ἄρῃς αὐτοὺς ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου. They had a work to do which involved that they should be in the world. It also involved the fulfilment of the petition, ἵνα τηρήσῃς αὐτοὺς ἐκ τοῦ πονηροῦ. Luther, Calvin, etc., take πονηροῦ as neuter; recent interpreters in general consider it to be masculine, “from the evil one,” as in 1 John ii. 13, iv. 4, v. 18; cf. Mt. vi.

τοῦ πονηροῦ. 16. ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου οὐκ εἰσὶ, καθὼς ἐγὼ ἐκ τοῦ
 α x. 36. κόσμου οὐκ εἰμί. 17. <sup>a</sup> ἀγιάσον αὐτοὺς ἐν τῇ ἀληθείᾳ σου <sup>1</sup>. ὁ λόγος
 Exod. xiii. ὁ σὸς ἀλήθειά ἐστι. 18. καθὼς ἐμέ ἀπέστειλας εἰς τὸν κόσμον,
 2. ἐν. Ecclus. καγὼ ἀπέστειλα αὐτοὺς εἰς τὸν κόσμον. 19. καὶ ὑπὲρ αὐτῶν ἐγὼ
 xiv. 4. καγὼ ἀπέστειλα αὐτοὺς εἰς τὸν κόσμον. 19. καὶ ὑπὲρ αὐτῶν ἐγὼ v i. Psal. i. <sup>a</sup> ἀγιάζω ἑμαυτὸν, ἵνα καὶ αὐτοὶ ᾧσιν ἡγιασμένοι ἐν ἀληθείᾳ. 20.
 3. Οὐ περὶ τούτων δὲ ἐρωτῶ μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ περὶ τῶν πιστευσόντων <sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup> σου omitted in  $\S^*ABC^*D$ , it. vulg.

<sup>2</sup> πιστευόντων in  $\S ABCD$ .

13. "The evil one" as the prince of this world and "a murderer from the beginning" (viii. 44) was the instigator of persecution.—Ver. 16. For τηρεῖν ἐκ see Rev. iii. 10. The reason of the world's hatred and persecution is given here, as in xv. 19, ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου . . . "They do not belong to the world, as I am out of the world."—Ver. 17. But besides this negative qualification for representing Christ, they must possess also a positive equipment, ἀγιάσον αὐτοὺς ἐν τῇ ἀληθείᾳ σου. "Consecrate them by thy truth." ἀγιάζω is to render sacred, to set apart from profane uses; as in Exod. xiii 1, ἀγιάσον μοι πᾶν πρωτότοκον; Exod. xx. 8, ἀγ. ἡμέραν; Exod. xxviii. 37, ἀγιάσεις αὐτοὺς ἵνα ἱερατεύσῃ μοι; Mt. xxiii. 17; Heb. ix. 13. In x. 36 it is used of the Father's setting apart of Christ to His mission. Here it is similarly used of the setting apart or consecration of the disciples as Christ's representatives. Meyer includes their "equipment with Divine illumination, power, courage, joyfulness, love, inspiration, etc., for their official activity". Wetstein's definition is good; "Sanctificare est aliquem eligere ad certum munus obendum, eumque prae- parare atque idoneum reddere". "The truth," as the element in which they now lived, was to be the efficient instrument of their consecration, cf. xiv. 16, xvi. 7-13; the truth specifically which became theirs through the revelation of the Father, ὁ λόγος ὁ σὸς ἀλήθειά ἐστι, "the word which is Thine," ver. 14, but here emphatically distinguished as being the Word of the Father and no other. The article is absent before ἀλήθεια, as in iv. 24, because ἀλήθ. is abstract. "Thy word is" not only "true" but "truth".—Ver. 18. καθὼς ἐμέ ἀπέστειλας . . . "As Thou didst send me into the world, I also sent them into the world." καθὼς seems to imply "in prosecution of the same purpose and therefore with similar equipment", εἰς τὸν κόσμον is not otiose, but suggests that as Christ's presence in the world was necessary for the fulfilment of God's purpose, so the sphere of the disciples' work is also "the world," cf. v. 15. ἀπέστειλα, aorist, because already they had served as apostles, see iv. 38 and Mark iii. 14.—Ver. 19. The crowning plea is that it was for this end, their consecration, Jesus consecrated Himself: καὶ ὑπὲρ αὐτῶν, "and in their behalf, that they may be consecrated in truth, do I consecrate myself". "Ἀγιάζω in the present with ὑπὲρ can only be understood of Christ's self-consecration to His sacrificial death." Tholuck. ἐγὼ ἐκουσίως θυσιάζω ἑμαυτὸν, Euthymius; so Meyer, Reynolds and others. This however is needlessly to limit the reference and to introduce an idea somewhat alien to this context and to x. 36. Calvin is right: "Porro sanctificatio haec quamvis ad totam Christi vitam pertineat, in sacrificio tamen mortis ejus maxime illustris fuit". ἵνα . . . The object of Christ's consecration to His work was the severance of His disciples from the world and their inspiration with the same spirit of self-sacrifice and devotedness to sacred uses. ἐν ἀλήθειᾳ, understood by the Greek commentators as "real" in contrast to what is symbolic, cf. iv. 23. Thus Euthymius, ἵνα καὶ αὐτοὶ ᾧσι τεθυμένοι ἐν ἀληθινῇ θυσίᾳ, ἣ γὰρ νομικῆ θυσία τύπος ἦν, οὐκ ἀλήθεια. "Discernit a sanctificationibus legis." Melancthon. Similarly Godet. Meyer renders "truly" and remarks: "As contrasted with every other ἀγιότης in human relations, that wrought through the Paraclete is the true consecration". But is it possible to neglect the reference to ἀλήθεια, ver. 17? As Lücke points out, John (3 John 3, 4) does not always distinguish between ἀλήθεια and ἡ ἀλήθεια. The object of Christ's consecration was to bring the truth by and in which the disciples might be consecrated.

Vv. 20-26. Prayer for future believers.—Ver. 20. Οὐ περὶ τούτων δὲ ἐρωτῶ μόνον . . . The consecration of the disciples and His sending them forth natu-διὰ τοῦ λόγου αὐτῶν εἰς ἐμέ· 21. ἵνα πάντες ἐν ᾧσι· καθὼς σὺ, πᾶτερ,<sup>1</sup> ἐν ἐμοί, καὶ ἐν σοί, ἵνα καὶ αὐτοὶ ἐν ἡμῖν ἐν<sup>2</sup> ᾧσιν· ἵνα ὁ κόσμος πιστεύσῃ ὅτι σὺ με ἀπέστειλας. 22. καὶ ἐγὼ ᾧ τὴν δόξαν <sup>w i. 14. Num. xxii. 20. x x. 30. Zech x v 1.</sup> ἦν, δέδωκάς μοι, δέδωκα αὐτοῖς, ἵνα ᾧσιν ἐν, καθὼς ἡμεῖς ᾧ ἐσμὲν· 23. ἐγὼ ἐν αὐτοῖς, καὶ σὺ ἐν ἐμοί, ἵνα ᾧσι τετελειωμένοι εἰς ἐν, καὶ ἵνα γινώσκῃ ὁ κόσμος ὅτι σὺ με ἀπέστειλας, καὶ ἠγάπησας αὐτοὺς, καθὼς ἐμὲ ἠγάπησας. 24. Πᾶτερ,<sup>3</sup> οὓς<sup>4</sup> δέδωκάς μοι, θέλω ἵνα ὅπου εἰμί ἐγὼ, κἀκεῖνοι ᾧσι μετ' ἐμοῦ· ἵνα θεωρῶσι τὴν δόξαν τὴν ἐμήν, ἦν ἔδωκάς μοι, ὅτι ἠγάπησάς με ᾧ πρὸ καταβολῆς κόσμου. 25. Πᾶτερ ᾧ δίκαιε, καὶ ὁ κόσμος σε οὐκ ἔγνω, ἐγὼ δέ σε ἔγνω, καὶ οὗτοι ἔγνωσαν ὅτι σὺ με ἀπέστειλας· 26. καὶ ἐγνώρισα αὐτοῖς τὸ ὄνομά σου, καὶ γνωρίσω· ἵνα ἡ ἀγάπη, ἦν ἠγάπησάς με, ἐν αὐτοῖς ᾧ, καὶ ἐν αὐτοῖς.” <sup>y πρὸ only here and Eph. i. 4. i Pet. i. 20; apo seven times. Here only with πατερ, but cp. i Jo. i. 9; ii. 29. Rev. xvi. 5.</sup>

<sup>1</sup> πατερ in  $\mathfrak{N}$ ACL; πατηρ in BD. <sup>2</sup> εν omitted in BC\*D, read in  $\mathfrak{N}$ AC<sup>3</sup>L.

<sup>3</sup> πατηρ in AB, πατερ  $\mathfrak{N}$ CDL. So in ver. 25. <sup>4</sup> ους in ACL, it.; ο in  $\mathfrak{N}$ BD.

rally suggests the enlargement of the Church and of His care.—Ver. 21. For those who through their preaching believe on Him He prays that they may be one. Naturally the extension of the Church imperils its unity, the ἐνότης τοῦ πνεύματος, Eph. iv. 3. “This unity is infinitely more than mere unanimity, since it rests upon unity of spirit and life.” Tholuck. This unity of all believers finds its ideal in the unity of the Father and the Son: καθὼς σὺ, πᾶτερ κ. τ. λ., and not only its ideal but its unifying principle and element, ἐν ἡμῖν. This unity of all believers is to result in the universal belief in Christ’s mission, ἵνα ὁ κόσμος . . . ἀπέστειλας.—Ver. 22. That the unity of believers in the Father and the Son might be perfect, it was needful that even the glory which Christ possessed by the Father’s gift (ver. 5) should be given to His people. The perfect tense is used, because the gift had already been determined. The nature of the glory spoken of is interpreted both by ver. 5 and by ver. 24. It could not be completely and actually bestowed until the point indicated in ver. 24 was reached.—Ver. 23. ἵνα ᾧσιν ἐν of ver. 22 becomes in ver. 23 ἵνα ᾧσι τετελειωμένοι εἰς ἐν, “that they may be perfected into one”. They are perfected by being wrought to a Divine unity. The work of Christ is accomplished when men are one by Christ dwelling in them. God is in Him, He is in each believer, and thus a true and final unity is formed. One result is the conviction wrought in the world, ὅτι σὺ με ἀπέστειλας . . . ἠγάπησας. The mission of Christ and its results prove not only the Father’s love of the Son but His love for men.—Ver. 24. Πᾶτερ, ὁ δέδωκάς μοι, “that which Thou hast given me,” i. e., the community of believers; θέλω, “I will,” no longer, ἐρωτῶ, “that where I am, there they may be also”; ὅ resolved into individuals. To share in the destiny of Christ has already been promised to His followers, x. 26; cf. xiv. 3. This is the consummation of Christian blessedness. They are not only in the same condition as their Lord, but enjoy it in fellowship with Him, μετ' ἐμοῦ.—ἵνα θεωρῶσι τὴν δόξαν τὴν ἐμήν. To see Christ honoured and supreme must ever be the Christian’s joy. But this glory of Christ resulting from the eternal love of the Father is not only seen but shared in by the disciples in the measure of their capacity, v. 22, 2 Tim. ii. 12, Rev. iii. 21.—Ver. 25. Πᾶτερ δίκαιε, “Righteous Father”. The appeal is now to God’s justice; “ut tua bonitas me miserat servandis si qua fieri potuisset, omnibus; ita tui, justitia non patietur ob quorundam incredulitatem frustrari vota credentium”. Erasmus. The Father’s justice is appealed to, that the believing may not share the fate of the unbelieving world καὶ ὁ κόσμος Elsner translates “quamvis,” and Lampe says all difficulty thus disappears. But Elsner’s examples are irrelevant. Meyer renders “Righteous Father—(yea, such Thou art!) and (and yet) the world knew Thee not”. Simcox suggests that the first καὶ is correlative not to the immediately following δέ, but to the second καί, the effect being something like: "While the world knew Thee not, though I knew Thee, these on their part knew". . . . Similarly Westcott; "it serves to co-ordinate the two main clauses. . . . The force of it is as if we were to say: Two facts are equally true; it is true that the world knew Thee not; it is true that these knew that Thou didst send me." May the καί not be intended to connect this clause with the preceding  $\delta\tau\iota$  . . . κόσμου, and to mark the contrast between the love that was in God before the foundation of the world and the world's ignorance of Him, and especially of His love? But "I knew Thee and these knew," etc. They did not know God directly as Christ did, but they knew they could accept Him as the Revealer of God. And to them who were willing to receive my message, because they knew I was sent by Thee, I made known Thy name and will make it known by my death (Weiss) and by sending the Spirit of truth (Westcott). The end in view in this manifestation by Christ was that the love with which the Father had loved the Son might rest on the disciples. ἵνα ἡ ἀγάπη ἣν ἠγάπησάς με. The construction is found in Eph. ii. 4, and is frequent in the classics; ἡ κρίσις ἦν ἐκρίθη, Lysias; τῆ νίκη ἦν ἐνίκησε, Arrian.—See Kypke. κἀγὼ ἐν αὐτοῖς. This is the end and crown of all. That He should desire this intimate communion with men, and should seek above all else to live in and through His disciples, is surprising proof of His love.

XVIII. 1. ΤΑΥΤΑ εἰπὼν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐξῆλθε σὺν τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ ἵπέραν τοῦ β<sup>h</sup>χειμάρρου τῶν Κέδρων,<sup>1</sup> ὅπου ἦν κήπος, εἰς ὃν εἰσηλθεν αὐτὸς καὶ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ. 2. ἦδει δὲ καὶ Ἰουδας, ὁ παραδιδούς αὐτὸν, τὸν τόπον· ὅτι πολλάκις ὁ συνήχθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐκεῖ μετὰ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ. 3. ὁ οὖν Ἰουδας λαβὼν τὴν σπείραν, καὶ ἐκ τῶν ἀρχιερέων καὶ Φαρισαίων ἄπηρέτας, ἔρχεται ἐκεῖ μετὰ

<sup>1</sup> τῶν Κεδρων in  $\aleph^c$ BCLXΓ, Orig. Chrys. Cyr.-Alex. Tr.W.H.R. [cp. 2 Sam. xv. 23]. του Κεδρον in  $\aleph^d$ , Ti.; του Κεδρων in A(S)Δ, vet. lat. vulg. Meyer, Weiss, Holtzmann, who understand it as =  $\text{כֶּדְרוֹן}$  black, a name frequently given to streams. "If the original reading was του Κεδρων it is easy to understand how each of the two corruptions came to be substituted for it by copyists knowing only Greek." Sanday.

CHAPTER XVIII. — Friedrich Spitta (Zur Geschichte und Litteratur des Urchristentums, i. 157 ff.) believes that the second section of this chapter has been accidentally dislocated, and that its original order was as follows: (1) 12, 13, Jesus is brought to Annas; (2) 19-23, He is examined before the high priest; (3) 24, 14, He is passed on to Caiaphas; (4) 15-18, 25b-27, the triple denial of Peter; (5) 28, Jesus is sent to the Praetorium.

But this arrangement also has its difficulties. It requires us to suppose that Caiaphas had come to the house of Annas and conducted the examination recorded in 19-23, and that when it is said that Annas sent the prisoner to Caiaphas, after this examination, it is only meant that he sent Him to the house or palace of Caiaphas where the Sanhedrim sat.

Vv. 1-12. The arrest of Jesus.—Ver. 1. Having finished His prayer and His discourse, Jesus ἐξῆλθε, "went out" from the city, as is suggested by πέραν τοῦ χειμάρρου, "to the other side of the torrent," cf. vi. 1. χειμάρρος sc. χειμάρρος ποταμός, a stream that flows in winter, a torrent; of Jabbok, Gen. xxxii. 35; of Kidron, 2 Sam. xv. 23. τῶν Κέδρων, "the Kidron," described in Henderson's Palestine, 90. ὅπου ἦν κήπος "where was a garden," in Mark xiv. 32, described as χωρίον (a country place, or estate), and called Γεθσημανῆ. The owner was probably a friend of Jesus. Into this garden He went with His disciples.—Ver. 2. ἦδει δὲ καὶ Ἰουδας. "And Judas also knew the place, because Jesus and His disciples had frequently assembled there" on previous visits to Jerusalem, Lk. xxi. 37. This is inserted to account for what follows, and to remind the reader of the voluntariness of the surrender. There was no attempt to escape or hide.—Ver. 3. ὁ οὖν Ἰουδας λαβὼν τὴν σπείραν καὶ . . . ἄπηρέτας. σπείρα (Spira), anything rolled up or folded together), a Roman cohort (Polyb., xi. 23, 1) or tenth φανῶν καὶ λαμπάδων καὶ ὄπλων. 4. Ἰησοῦς οὖν εἰδὼς πάντα τὰ ἔρχόμενα ἐπ' αὐτὸν, ἐξελθὼν εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, "Τίνα ζητεῖτε;" 5. Ἀπεκρίθησαν αὐτῷ, "Ἰησοῦν τὸν Ναζωραῖον." Λέγει ὑτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Ἐγώ εἰμι." Εἰστήκει δὲ καὶ Ἰούδας ὁ παραδιδούς αὐτὸν μετ' αὐτῶν. 6. Ὡς οὖν εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, "Ὅτι ἐγώ εἰμι," ἀπήλθον ἔως τὰ ὀπίσω, καὶ ἔπεσον χαμαί. 7. πάλιν οὖν αὐτοὺς ἐπηρώτησε, "Τίνα ζητεῖτε;" Οἱ δὲ εἶπον, "Ἰησοῦν τὸν Ναζωραῖον." 8. Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Εἶπον ὑμῖν, ὅτι ἐγώ εἰμι. εἰ οὖν ἐμὲ ζητεῖτε, ἄφετε τούτους ὑπάγειν." 9. ἵνα πληρωθῇ ὁ λόγος ὃν εἶπεν, "Ὅτι οὗς δέδωκάς μοι, οὐκ ἀπώλεσα ἐξ αὐτῶν οὐδένα." 10. Σίμων οὖν Πέτρος ἔχων μάχαιραν, εἴλκυσεν αὐτήν, καὶ ἔπαισε τὸν τοῦ ἀρχιερέως δοῦλον, καὶ ἀπέκοψεν αὐτοῦ τὸ ὠτίον τὸ δεξιόν, part of a legion, and therefore containing about 600 men. The cohort denotes the garrison of the castle Antonia, which, during the Passover, was available to assist the Sanhedrim in maintaining order. Part of it was now used in case "the servants of the Sanhedrim," ἐκ τῶν . . . ὑπηρέτας, should not prove sufficient. A considerable body of troops would obviate the risk of a popular rising, vii. 32-49, xii. 42; especially Mk. xiv. 2. They were furnished with φανῶν καὶ λαμπάδων καὶ ὄπλων. φανός was a link or torch, consisting of strips of resinous wood tied together, and in late Greek was used for λυχνούχος, a lantern; λαμπάς was the open torch. See Rutherford's New Phryn., p. 131, and Wetstein. Both open lights and lanterns were in use in the Roman army, and would be at hand. "The soldiers rushed out of their tents with lanterns and torches." Dion. Hal., xi. 5. It was new moon, but it might be cloudy, and it would certainly be shady in the garden.—Ver. 4. Jesus, then, not with the boldness of ignorance, but knowing πάντα τὰ ἐρχόμενα ἐπ' αὐτόν, "all that was coming upon Him," cf. Lk. xiv. 31, ἐρχομένῳ ἐπ' αὐτόν, "went out" from the garden, or more probably, ver. 26, from the group of disciples, "and says, Whom seek ye?" to concentrate attention on Himself and prevent a general attack.—Ver. 5. Ἰησοῦν τὸν Ναζωραῖον "Jesus the Nazarene," cf. Acts xxiv. 5, Ναζαρηθός occurs Mk. xiv. 67, etc. ἐγώ εἰμι, "I am He". He had already been identified by Judas' kiss, Mt. xxvi. 47, but Jesus wished to declare Himself as one who did not fear identification. That the kiss was superfluous is, however, no proof that it was not given. Εἰστήκει δὲ καὶ Ἰούδας . . . This remark is inserted not to bring out that Judas fell to the ground with the rest (Holtzmann), but to point out that Judas had not only given directions, but had actually come, and now confronted his Lord and companions.—Ver. 6. The immediate effect of His calm declaration was: ἀπήλθον εἰς τὰ ὀπίσω καὶ ἔπεσον χαμαί, "they went backwards and fell to the ground". Job i. 20, πεσὼν χαμαί; similarly used by Homer, etc., as = χαμάζε. This might have been considered a fulfilment of Ps. xxvii. 2, οἱ θλίβοντές με . . . ἔπεσαν. The recoil, which necessarily causes stumbling and falling in a crowd, was natural, especially if the servants here employed were the same as those who had been sent to take Him on a former occasion, vii. 46. No one wished to be the first to lay hands on Him. Similar effects were produced by Mohammed (when Durthur stood over him with drawn sword), Mark Antony, Marius, Coligny. But the object in narrating the circumstance may have been to illustrate the voluntariness of Christ's surrender.—Ver. 7. Declaring His identity a second time, Jesus explicitly reminds the officials that by their own acknowledgment they are instructed to arrest none but Himself. εἰ οὖν ἐμὲ ζητεῖτε . . . οὐδένα. In thus protecting His companions, Jesus, according to John, fulfils xvii. 12; although here the fulfilment is more superficial than that which was intended. (Cf. 2 Sam. xxiv. 17).—Ver. 10. Peter did not wish to be thus dissociated from the fate of his Master, xiii. 38, and thinks a rescue

<sup>1</sup> ἀπηλθον, επεσαν in  $\mathfrak{SBD}$ .

<sup>3</sup> ὠταριον in  $\mathfrak{SBC}^*L$ , vulg. "auriculum".

- ἦν δὲ ὄνομα τῷ δούλῳ Μάλχος. 11. εἶπεν οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς τῷ Πέτρῳ, j Ezek. "Βάλε τὴν μάχαιράν σου<sup>1</sup> εἰς τὴν θήκην. τὸ ποτήριον δὲ δέδωκε
 xxiii. 31.
 Ps. xvi. 5. μοι ὁ πατήρ, οὐ μὴ πῶ αὐτό; "
 Mt. xx.
 23, etc. 12. Ἡ οὖν σπεῖρα καὶ ὁ χιλιάρχος καὶ οἱ ὑπηρέται τῶν Ἰουδαίων k Acts i. 16. <sup>k</sup> συνέλαβον τὸν Ἰησοῦν, καὶ ἔδησαν αὐτὸν, 13. καὶ ἀπήγαγον<sup>2</sup> αὐτὸν
 2 Kings
 x. 14. πρὸς Ἄνναν πρῶτον· ἦν γὰρ<sup>1</sup> πενθερὸς τοῦ Καϊάφα, ὃς ἦν ἀρχιερεὺς l Gen.
 xxxviii. 13. τοῦ ἐνιαυτοῦ ἐκείνου. 14. ἦν δὲ Καϊάφας ὁ <sup>m</sup> συμβουλευσας τοῖς
 m xi. 49. Ἰουδαίοις, ὅτι συμφέρει ἓνα ἄνθρωπον ἀπολέσθαι<sup>3</sup> ὑπὲρ τοῦ λαοῦ.
 n Ps.
 lxxxviii. 8.
 Acts i. 19. 15. Ἠκολούθει δὲ τῷ Ἰησοῦ Σίμων Πέτρος, καὶ ὁ<sup>4</sup> ἄλλος μαθητῆς.
 ὁ δὲ μαθητῆς ἐκεῖνος ἦν <sup>a</sup> γνωστὸς τῷ ἀρχιερεῖ, καὶ συνεισηλθε τῷ

<sup>1</sup> σου omitted in  $\aleph$  ABCDLΠ.

<sup>2</sup> ηγαγον without αυτον in  $\aleph^*$  BD. So in Tr. Ti. W. H. R.

<sup>3</sup> αποθανειν in  $\aleph$  BC\* D 33.

<sup>4</sup> ο omitted in  $\aleph^*$  ABD, inserted in  $\aleph^b$  CLΠ. The article is out of place here, though appropriate in xx. 3, 4.

possible, as only the Sanhedrim officials would enter the garden, leaving the soldiers outside. ἔχων μάχαιραν, "having a sword," "pro more peregrinatum in iis locis," Grotius, and cf. Thucyd., i. 6; Luke xxii. 36. He struck τὸν τοῦ ἀρχιερέως δούλον, "the high priest's servant". The δούλοι are distinguished from the ὑπηρέται, ver. 18. John, being acquainted with the high priest's household, both identified the man and knew his name, which was a common one, see Wetstein, and cf. Neh. x. 4; also, Porphyry, Life of Plotinus, 17. "In my native dialect I (Porphyry) was called Malchus, which is interpreted, king." ἀπέκοψεν αὐτοῦ τὸ ἄτιον τὸ δεξιόν. In Mark xiv. 47 ἀφέιλεν τὸ ἄτιριον. τὸ δεξιόν indicates eye-witness or subsequent intimate knowledge. Peter meant, no doubt, to cleave the head.—Ver. 11. Peter's action, however, was not commended. βάλε . . . θήκην. "Res evangelica non agitur ejusmodi praesidiis." Erasmus. θήκη, a receptacle; sometimes ξιφοθήκη; usually κολεός. τὸ ποτήριον . . . αὐτό. For the figure of the cup, see Ezek. xxiii. 31-34; Mt. xx. 22, and xxvi. 39. Shall I refuse the lot appointed me by the Father?—Ver. 12. Ἡ οὖν σπεῖρα . . . αὐτόν. The Roman soldiers, ἡ σπεῖρα, under the orders of their Chiliarch (Tribune, Colonel), abetted the officers of the Sanhedrim, ὑπηρέται τῶν Ἰουδαίων, in the apprehension of Jesus. As a matter of course and following the universal practice ἔδησαν αὐτόν, "they bound Him," with His hands shackled behind His back.

Vv. 13-24. Examination before Annas.—Ver. 13. καὶ ἀπήγαγον αὐτόν, "and they led Him to Annas first". πρῶτον refers to the subsequent examinations, vv. 24, 28. The reason for taking Him to Annas first was that he was father-in-law of the actual high priest, Caiaphas, and was a man of commanding influence. He had himself been high priest from A.D. 7-14, while five of his sons occupied the office in succession. Caiaphas held office till 37 A.D. Ὁν ἀρχιερεῖς τοῦ ἐνιαυτοῦ ἐκείνου see xi. 49.—Ver. 14. The attitude Caiaphas was likely to assume towards the prisoner is indicated by his identification with the person who uttered the principle, xi. 50, ὅτι συμφέρει . . . ἀπολέσθαι.—Ver. 15. Ἠκολούθει . . . μαθητῆς. "There followed Jesus Simon Peter"—with whom the narrative is now concerned—"and another disciple," in all probability John. He is mentioned to explain how Peter found access to the high priest's residence. "That disciple was known to the high priest," i.e., probably to Caiaphas, and accordingly went in with Jesus εἰς τὴν αὐλήν τοῦ ἀρχιερέως, "into the palace (or court) of the high priest". αὐλή, originally the court or quadrangle round which the house was built, was used of the residence itself. Apparently, and very naturally, Annas had apartments in this official residence now occupied by Caiaphas.—Ver. 16. Peter, not being known to the household, was excluded and stood outside at the door, πρὸς τῇ θύρᾳ ἔξω, cf. xx. 11. John, missing him, spoke to the doorkeeper and introduced Ἰησοῦ εἰς τὴν αὐλὴν τοῦ ἀρχιερέως· 16. ὁ δὲ Πέτρος εἰστήκει πρὸς τῇ θύρᾳ ἔξω. ἐξῆλθεν οὖν ὁ μαθητὴς ὁ ἄλλος ὃς ἦν γνωστὸς τῷ ἀρχιερεῖ, καὶ εἶπε τῇ θυρωρῷ, καὶ εἰσήγαγε τὸν Πέτρον. 17. λέγει οὖν ἡ "παιδίσκη ἡ θυρωρὸς τῷ Πέτρῳ, "Μὴ καὶ σὺ ἐκ τῶν μαθητῶν ο Gal. iv. 22. Gen. xx. 17. εἶ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου τούτου;" Λέγει ἐκεῖνος, "Οὐκ εἰμί." 18. Εἰστήκεισαν δὲ οἱ δούλοι καὶ οἱ ὑπηρέται <sup>p</sup> ἀνθρακίαν πεποιηκότες, ὅτι <sup>p</sup> xxi. 9. Ecclus. xi. 32. 4. Macc. ix. 20. ψύχος ἦν, καὶ ἐθερμαίνοντο· ἦν δὲ μετ' αὐτῶν ὁ Πέτρος ἐστῶς καὶ θερμαίνόμενος. 19. Ὁ οὖν ἀρχιερεὺς ἠρώτησε τὸν Ἰησοῦν περὶ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ, καὶ περὶ τῆς διδαχῆς αὐτοῦ. 20. ἀπεκρίθη αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Ἐγὼ <sup>q</sup> παρρησίᾳ ἐλάλησα <sup>1</sup> τῷ κόσμῳ· ἐγὼ πάντοτε <sup>q</sup> vii. 4. reff. ἐδίδαξα ἐν τῇ <sup>2</sup> συναγωγῇ καὶ ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, ὅπου πάντοτε <sup>3</sup> οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι συνέρχονται, καὶ <sup>2</sup> ἐν κρυπτῷ ἐλάλησα οὐδέν. 21. Τί με ἐπερωτᾷς; <sup>r</sup> vii. 4. ἐπερωτήσον τοὺς ἀκκοότας, τί ἐλάλησα αὐτοῖς· ἴδε οὗτοι οἶδασιν ἃ εἶπον ἐγώ." 22. Ταῦτα δὲ αὐτοῦ εἰπόντος, εἰς τῶν ὑπηρετῶν παρεστηκῶς <sup>s</sup> ἔδωκε <sup>s</sup> ῥάπισμα τῷ Ἰησοῦ, εἰπὼν, "Οὕτως ἀποκρίνη <sup>s</sup> xix. 3. Is. 1. 6. τῷ ἀρχιερεῖ;" 23. Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Εἰ κακῶς ἐλάλησα, him. τῇ θυρωρῷ, female doorkeepers appear 2 Sam. iv. 6, Acts. xii. 13, and see Wetstein.—Ver. 17. Naturally he concluded from John's introducing him that Peter was also a disciple, and as a mere innocent and purposeless remark says: Μὴ καὶ σὺ . . . τούτου; "Are you also one of this man's disciples?" He says, οὐκ εἰμί, "I am not".—Ver. 18. Εἰστήκεισαν . . . θερμαίνόμενος. The household servants and the Sanhedrim servitors had made a fire in the open court of the house and were standing round it warming themselves. Peter, unabashed by his lie, joined himself to this group and stood in the light of the fire. Cf. Lk. xxii. 56, πρὸς τὸ φῶς. Jerusalem, lying 2500 feet above sea-level, is cold at night in spring.—Ver. 19. Ὁ οὖν ἀρχιερεὺς ἠρώτησε . . . "The high priest then interrogated Jesus about His disciples and about His teaching," apparently wishing to bring out on what terms He made disciples, whether as a simple Rabbi or as Messiah. But Jesus answered: Ἐγὼ παρρησίᾳ ἐλάλησα . . . οὐδέν. The high priest's question was useless. Jesus had nothing to tell which He had not publicly and frequently proclaimed. Similarly Socrates replied to his judges (Plato, Apol., 33), "If any one says that he has ever learned or heard anything from me in private which the world has not heard, be assured he says what is not true". παρρησίᾳ "without reserve," rückhaltlos, Holtzmann. τῷ κόσμῳ, "to everybody," to all who cared to hear; cf. Socrates' δημοσίᾳ. "I always taught in synagogue and in the temple"; the article dropped as we drop it in the phrase "in church"; "where," i.e., in both synagogue and temple, πάντες "all the Jews assemble".—Ver. 21. "Why do you interrogate me? Ask those who have heard, what I said to them." Similarly Socrates appeals to his disciples. The οὗτοι might be construed as if Jesus looked towards some who were present.—Ver. 22. Ταῦτα . . . ἀρχιερεῖ; ῥάπισμα. The older meaning of ῥαπίζειν was "to strike with a rod" sc. ῥαβδίζειν; but in later Greek it meant "to give a blow on the cheek with the open hand". This is put beyond doubt by Field, Otium Norv., p. 71; cf. Rutherford's New Phryn., p. 257. R.V. marg. "with a rod" is not an improvement on R.V. text.—Ver. 23. The calmness and reasonableness of Jesus' retort to this blow impressed it on the memory of John, whose own blood would boil when he saw his Master struck by a servant.—Ver. 24. As nothing was to be gained by continuing the examination, Jesus is handed on to Caiaphas, Ἀπέστειλεν . . . ἀρχιερέα.

<sup>1</sup> λελαληκα in ΨABC*L.

<sup>2</sup> Omit τη with ΨABCD.

<sup>3</sup> παντες in ΨABC*L and most versions.

Ver. 25 resumes the narrative inter-

- 1 Heb. v. 14. μαρτύρησον περὶ τοῦ ἑκακοῦ· εἰ δὲ ἑκαλωσ, τί με δέσει;” 24
 Ch. iv. 17.
 I. 11. 28.
 xxii. 28. Ἀπέστειλεν<sup>1</sup> αὐτὸν ὁ Ἄννας δεδεμένος πρὸς Καϊάφαι τὸν ἀρχιερέα.
25. Ἦν δὲ Σίμων Πέτρος ἐστὼς καὶ θερμαινόμενος· εἶπον οὖν αὐτῷ, “Μὴ καὶ σὺ ἐκ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ εἶ;” Ἠρήσατο ἐκεῖνος, καὶ εἶπεν, “Οὐκ εἰμί.” 26. Λέγει εἰς ἐκ τῶν δούλων τοῦ ἀρχιερέως,
- 2 I k. i. 36
 Rom. xvi.
 7. etc. ὁ συγγενὴς ὢν οὐ ἀπέκοψε Πέτρος τὸ ὠτίον, “Οὐκ ἐγὼ σε εἶδον ἐν τῷ κήπῳ μετ’ αὐτοῦ;” 27. Πάλιν οὖν ἠρήσατο ὁ Πέτρος, καὶ εὐθέως
- v xiii. 38. ἀλέκτωρ ἑφώνησεν.
- w xix. 9.
 Acts xxiii.
 35. I. 11. Ἦν δὲ πρωῖα<sup>2</sup>· καὶ αὐτοὶ οὐκ εἰσῆλθον εἰς τὸ πραιτώριον, ἵνα μὴ
- x Lev. v. 3.
 Heb. xii.
 15. Tit. 1. 15.
 Jude 8. ἁμιαθῶσιν, ἀλλ’ ἵνα φάγωσι τὸ πάσχα. 29. ἐξῆλθεν οὖν ὁ Πιλάτος<sup>3</sup> πρὸς αὐτοὺς, καὶ εἶπε, “Τίνα κατηγορίαν<sup>4</sup> φέρετε κατὰ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου τούτου;” 30. Ἀπεκρίθησαν καὶ εἶπον αὐτῷ, “Εἰ μὴ ἦν οὗτος
- y Acts xxv.
 18. 2Pet. ii. 11. κακοποιός,<sup>4</sup> οὐκ ἄν σοι παρεδώκαμεν αὐτόν.” 31. Εἶπεν οὖν αὐτοῖς ὁ Πιλάτος, “Λάβετε αὐτὸν ὑμεῖς, καὶ κατὰ τὸν νόμον ὑμῶν κρίνατε αὐτόν.” Εἶπον οὖν αὐτῷ οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, “Ἡμῖν οὐκ ἔξοστιν ἀποκτείνειν

<sup>1</sup> οὖν inserted in BC*L 33, which compels the translation “Annas therefore sent Him,” and forbids the meaning “Annas had sent Him”.

<sup>2</sup> Better πρωι as in NABCD.

<sup>3</sup> Πειλάτος in ABC, Πιλάτος in ND. It represents the Latin pilatus, “armed with a javelin”. εἶω is added in NBC*L 33.

<sup>4</sup> κακον ποιων read by Tr.Ti.W.H. on the authority of N<sup>c</sup>BL 33. The Vulgate has “malefactor”.

rupted at vv. 18-19, and resumes by repeating the statement that Simon Peter was standing and warming himself. While he did so the servants and officers, ver. 18, who were round the fire said, Μὴ καὶ σὺ . . . “Are you also of His disciples?”—Ver. 26. Λέγει εἰς ἐκ τῶν δούλων . . . ὠτίον, “one of the servants of the high priest, who was a kinsman of him,” etc., “a detail which marks an exact knowledge of the household (ver. 15),” Westcott.—Ver. 27. Πάλιν οὖν . . . ἐφώνησεν . . . A cock crew, the dawn approaching, and the warning of xiii. 38 was fulfilled. See on xiii. 38.

Vv. 28—xix. 16. Jesus before Pilate.—Ver. 28. Ἄγουσιν, “They lead,” i.e., the Sanhedrists who had assembled lead: in Luke xxiii. 1, ἀναστὰν ἅπαν τὸ πλῆθος αὐτῶν, ἀπὸ τοῦ Καϊάφα. Field prefers translating “from the house of Caiaphas,” cf. Mark v. 35; Acts xvi. 40. πραιτώριον, praetorium, lit. “the general’s tent”; here probably the governor’s quarters in Antonia, but possibly the magnificent palace of Herod used by the Roman governor while in Jerusalem; see especially Keim, Jesus of Nazareth, vi.

79 E. Tr. ἦν δὲ πρωῖα καὶ αὐτοὶ οὐκ εἰσῆλθον . . . “It was early morning (the fourth watch, from 3 to 6 A.M., see Mark xiii. 35; see on xiii. 38) and they themselves entered not into the palace that they might not be defiled but might eat the passover.” The dawning of the day seems to have reminded them of its sacred character. To enter a house from which all leaven had not been removed was pollution. Probably too the mere entrance into the house of a Gentile was the gnat these men strained at. The plain inference from the word is that the Paschal Supper was yet to be eaten. But see Edersheim’s Life of Jesus, ii. 566.—Ver. 29. ἐξῆλθεν οὖν ὁ Πιλάτος . . . The examination began therefore in the open air in front of the building; cf. xix. 13. Pilate opened the case with the formal inquiry, Τίνα κατηγορίαν κ. τ. λ.; To this reasonable demand the Sanhedrists evasively and insolently reply (ver. 30): “Had He not been a κακοποιός we should not have delivered Him to you”. It appears therefore that having already condemned Him to death (see Mt. xxvi. 61. ἕνοχος οὐδένα·” 32. ἵνα ὁ λόγος τοῦ Ἰησοῦ πληρωθῆ, ὃν εἶπε ἡ σημαίων 2 κτλ. 33. ποίῳ θανάτῳ ἤμελλον ἀποθνήσκειν. 33. Εἰσῆλθεν οὖν εἰς τὸ πραιτώριον πάλιν ὁ Πιλάτος, καὶ ἠέφωνησε τὸν Ἰησοῦν, καὶ εἶπεν αἰ. 49; ii. 10. αὐτῷ, “Σὺ εἶ ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων;” 34. Ἀπεκρίθη αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Ἄφ’ ἐαυτοῦ σὺ τοῦτο λέγεις, ἢ ἄλλοι σοι εἶπον περὶ β. 19. ἐμοῦ;” 35. Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Πιλάτος, “Ὁ μῆτι ἐγὼ Ἰουδαῖός εἰμι; τὸ c. iv. 29. ἔθνος τὸ σὸν καὶ οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς παρέδωκάν σε ἐμοί. ἃ τί ἐποίησας;” d i Sam. xx. 36. Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Ἡ βασιλεία ἡ ἐμὴ οὐκ ἔστιν ἕκ τοῦ e iii. 31. κόσμου τούτου· εἰ ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου τούτου ἦν ἡ βασιλεία ἡ ἐμὴ, οἱ ὑπῆρται ἂν οἱ ἐμοὶ ἀγωνίζοντο, ἵνα μὴ παραδοθῶ τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις· θανάτου ἐστὶ. Mk. xiv. 64) they handed Him over—παρέδωκαμεν—to Pilate, not to have their judgment revised, but to have their decision confirmed and the punishment executed. κακοποιός is found in Arist., Eth., iv. 9, Polybius, and frequently in 1 Peter.—Ver. 31. This does not suit Roman ideas of justice; and therefore Pilate, ascribing their reluctance to lay a definite charge against the prisoner and to have the case reopened to the difficulty of explaining to a Roman the actual law and transgression, bids them finish the case for themselves, λάβετε αὐτὸν ὑμεῖς . . . cf. Acts xviii. 14.—Ver. 32. This, however, they decline to do, because it is the death penalty they desire, and this they have no right to inflict: ἡμῖν οὐκ ἔξεστιν ἀποκτείνειν οὐδένα. In the Roman provinces the power of life and death, the jus gladii, was reserved to the governor. See Arnold's Roman Prov. Administration, pp. 55, 57; and Josephus, Bell. Jud., ii. 8, 1, who states that when the territory of Archelaus passed to the provincial governor, Coponius, the power of inflicting capital punishment was given to him, μέχρι τοῦ κτείνειν λαβὼν παρὰ τοῦ Καίσαρος ἐξουσίαν. See also Stapfer's Palestine, p. 100. By being thus handed over to the Roman magistrate it came about that Jesus was crucified, a form of capital punishment which the Jews never inflicted even when they had power; and thus the word of Jesus was fulfilled which He spake intimating that He would die by crucifixion, xii. 32, 33.

Vv. 33-37. Jesus examined by Pilate in private.—Ver. 33. Pilate, being thus compelled to undertake the case, withdraws within the Praetorium to conduct it apart from their prejudices and clamours. He calls Jesus and says to Him, Σὺ εἶ ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων; How did Pilate know that this was the κατηγορία against Jesus? John omits the information given in Lk. xxiii. 2 that the Sanhedrists definitely laid this accusation. And the answer of Jesus implies that He had not heard this accusation made in Pilate's presence. The probability therefore is that Pilate had privately obtained information regarding the prisoner. There is some contempt as well as surprise in Pilate's Σύ. “Art Thou,” whose appearance so belies it, “the king of the Jews?”—Ver. 34. Jesus answers by asking: Ἀφ’ ἐαυτοῦ σὺ τοῦτο λέγεις . . . ; Pilate's reply, “Am I a Jew?” precludes all interpretations, however inviting (see especially Alford and Oscar Holtzmann), but the simple one: “Do you make this inquiry from any serious personal interest and with any keen apprehension of the blessings attached to the Kingdom of God, or are you merely echoing a formal charge brought against me by others?”—Ver. 35. To this Pilate with some heat and contempt replies: Μῆτι ἐγὼ Ἰουδαῖός εἰμι; “Am I a Jew?” How can you suppose that I have any personal interest in such a matter?—τὸ ἔθνος τὸ σὸν . . . ἐμοί. “Your own nation and the chief priests handed you over to me.” It is their charge I repeat. τί ἐποίησας; “what hast Thou done?” He scouts the idea that he should take any interest in the Jewish Messiah, and returns to the practical point, “what have you done?”—Ver. 36. But Jesus accepts the allegation of the Jews and proceeds to explain in what sense He is king: Ἡ βασιλεία ἡ ἐμὴ κ. τ. λ. My kingdom is not of a worldly nature, nor is it established by worldly means. Had it been so, my servants would have striven to prevent my being surrendered to the Jews. But as things are, νῦν, since it is indisputable that no armed resistance or rescue has been attempted, it is put beyond question that my kingdom is not from hence. “The substitution of ‘hence’ for ‘of this world’ in the last ῶν δὲ ἡ βασιλεία ἡ ἐμὴ οὐκ ἔστιν ἐντεῦθεν." 37. Εἶπεν οὖν αὐτῷ ὁ Πιλάτος, "Οὐκοῦν βασιλεὺς εἶ σύ;" Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Σὺ λέγεις ὅτι βασιλεὺς εἰμι ἐγώ. ἐγὼ εἰς τοῦτο γεγέννημαι, καὶ εἰς τοῦτο ἐλήλυθα εἰς τὸν κόσμον, ἵνα μαρτυρήσω τῇ ἀληθείᾳ. πᾶς ὁ ὢν ἐκ τῆς ἀληθείας ἀκούει μου τῆς φωνῆς." 38. Λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Πιλάτος, "Τί ἐστὶν ἀλήθεια;" Καὶ τοῦτο εἰπὼν, πάλιν ἐξῆλθε πρὸς τοὺς Ἰουδαίους, καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς, "Ἐγὼ οὐδεμίαν αἰτίαν εὐρίσκω ἐν αὐτῷ. 39. ἔστι δὲ συνήθεια ὑμῖν, ἵνα ἓνα ὑμῖν ἀπολύσω ἐν τῷ πάσχα· βούλεσθε οὖν ὑμῖν ἀπολύσω τὸν βασιλέα τῶν Ἰουδαίων;" 40. Ἐκραύγασαν οὖν πάλιν πάντες, λέγοντες, "Μὴ τοῦτον, ἀλλὰ τὸν Βαραββᾶν." ἦν δὲ ὁ Βαραββᾶς ληστής.

clause appears to define the idea of the world by an immediate reference to the representatives of it close at hand." Westcott. Perhaps this rather limits the reference. Jesus uses ἐντεῦθεν as one who has other worlds than this in view.—Ver. 37. Pilate understands only so far as to interrupt with Οὐκοῦν . . . σύ; "So then you are a king?" On οὐκοῦν see Klotz's Devarius, p. 173. To which Jesus replies with the explicit statement: Σὺ λέγεις . . . ἐγώ. "Thou sayest." This, says Schoettgen (Mt. xxvi. 25), is "solennis adfirmantium apud Judaeos formula"; so that ἔτι must be rendered with R.V. marg. "because" I am a king. Erasmus, Westcott, Plummer, and others render, "Thou sayest that I am a king," neither definitely accepting nor rejecting the title. But this interpretation seems impossible in the face of the simple σὺ λέγεις of the synoptists, Mt. xxvii. 11, Mark xv. 2, Luke xxiii. 3. We must then render, "Thou art right, for a king I am". In what sense a king, He explains: ἐγὼ εἰς τοῦτο γεγέννημαι κ. τ. λ. "For this end have I been born, and for this end am I come into the world;" the latter expression, by being added to the former, certainly seems to suggest a prior state. Cf. i. 9. The end is expressed in ἵνα μαρτυρήσω τῇ ἀληθείᾳ, "that I might witness to the truth," especially regarding God and His relation to men. The consequence is that every one who belongs to the truth (moral affinity expressed by ἐκ) obeys Him, ἀκούει in a pregnant sense, cf. x. 8-16. They become His subjects, and form His kingdom, a kingdom of truth. For which Pilate has only impatient scorn: τί ἐστὶν ἀλήθεια;—"Tush, what is Aletheia?" It was a kingdom which could not injure the empire. What have

I to do with provinces that can yield no tribute, and threaten no armed rebellion? Vv. 38-40. Pilate declares the result of his examination.—Ver. 38. Pilate waited for no reply to his question, but τοῦτο εἰπὼν, πάλιν ἐξῆλθε. The noting of each movement of Pilate suggests the eye-witness, and brings out his vacillation. Ἐγὼ οὐδεμίαν αἰτίαν . . . "I for my part find no fault, or ground of accusation in Him." Naturally, therefore, Pilate will acquit and dismiss Him; but no. He attempts a compromise: ἔστι δὲ συνήθεια ὑμῖν "You have a custom," of which we have no information elsewhere; although Josephus (Antiq., xx. 9, 3) relates that at a passover Albinus released some robbers. Analogies in other countries have been produced. This custom Pilate fancies they will allow him to follow in favour of Jesus: βούλεσθε . . . Ἰουδαίων; ἀπολύσω, aorist subjunctive; cf. Mt. xiii. 28, θέλεις συλλέξωμεν; Lk. ix. 54, θέλεις εἰπώμεν; βούλεσθε καλῶμεν; βούλεσθε εἶπω, etc., commonly occur in Aristophanes and other classical writers. Ἐκραύγασαν . . . Μὴ τοῦτον, ἀλλὰ τὸν Βαραββᾶν, "They shouted," showing their excitement: πάλιν, previous shoutings have not been mentioned by John, but this word reflects light on the manner in which the accusations had been made. ἦν δὲ ὁ Βαραββᾶς ληστής. Bar-Abbas, son of a father, or of a Rabbi, διδασκάλου υἱός. In Mt. xxvii. 16, Origen read Ἰησοῦν τὸν Βαρ., but added "in multis exemplaribus non continetur". He found a mystery in the circumstance that both prisoners were called "Jesus, the Son of the Father". Barabbas is designated ληστής, or, as Luke (xxiii. 19) more definitely says, he had been imprisoned for sedition in the city and for murder. John does not bring out the irony of the Jews' choice, which freed

XIX. 1. Τότε οὖν <sup>a</sup> ἔλαβεν ὁ Πιλάτος τὸν Ἰησοῦν, καὶ <sup>b</sup> ἔμαστί- <sup>a</sup> Mt. xiii. γωσε. 2. καὶ οἱ στρατιῶται *πλέξαντες στέφανον ἐξ ἀκανθῶν, <sup>b</sup> Is. 1. 6. ἐπέθηκαν αὐτοῦ τῇ κεφαλῇ καὶ ἱμάτιον πορφυροῦν <sup>c</sup> περιέβαλον αὐτὸν, <sup>c</sup> Is. xxviii. 3. καὶ ἔλεγον, “Χαῖρε, ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων.” καὶ <sup>d</sup> ἐδίδουν <sup>d</sup> Mt. xv. 5z αὐτῷ <sup>e</sup> ῥαπίσματα. <sup>e</sup> xviii. 22. 4. Ἐξῆλθεν οὖν πάλιν ἔξω ὁ Πιλάτος, καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς, “Ἴδε ἄγω ὑμῖν αὐτὸν ἔξω, ἵνα γνῶτε ὅτι <sup>f</sup> ἐν αὐτῷ οὐδεμίαν <sup>f</sup> xviii. 38. αἰτίαν εὐρίσκω.” 5. Ἐξῆλθεν οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἔξω, <sup>g</sup> φορῶν τὸν ἀκάν- <sup>g</sup> Eccus. xi. θιον στέφανον, καὶ τὸ πορφυροῦν ἱμάτιον. καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς, “Ἴδε <sup>h</sup> <sup>h</sup> ὁ ἄνθρωπος.” 6. Ὅτε οὖν εἶδον αὐτὸν οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ ὑπηρέται, ἐκραύγασαν λέγοντες, “Σταύρωσον, σταύρωσον.” Λέγει αὐτοῖς ὁ Πιλάτος, “Λάβετε αὐτὸν ὑμεῖς καὶ σταυρώσατε· ἐγὼ γὰρ <sup>i</sup> οὐχ the real and crucified the pretended mover of sedition.

<sup>1</sup> Insert καὶ ἤρχοντο πρὸς αὐτὸν with  $\aleph$ BL 33, omitted in AD by homoioteleuton.

<sup>2</sup> Ἴδου in  $\aleph$ BL 33.

CHAPTER XIX.—Vν. 1-6. Pilate, after scourging Jesus, again pronounces Him guiltless.—Ver. 1. Τότε οὖν . . . ἔμαστίγωσε. Keim (vi. 99) thinks that Pilate at this point pronounced his “condemno” and “ibis in crucem,” and that the scourging was preparatory to the crucifixion. This might seem to be warranted by Mark’s very condensed account, xv. 15. φραγελλώσας ἵνα σταυρωθῇ (according to the Roman law by which, according to Jerome, it was decreed “ut qui crucifigeretur, prius flagellis verberaretur”; so Josephus, B. J., v. 11, and Philo, ii. 528). But according to John the scourging was meant as a compromise by Pilate; as in Lk. xxiii. 22: “what evil hath He done? I found in Him nothing worthy of death; I will therefore scourge Him and let Him go.” Neither, then, as part of the capital punishment, nor in order to elicit the truth (quaestio per tormenta); but in the ill-judged hope that this minor punishment might satisfy the Jews, Pilate ordered the scourging. The victim of this severe punishment was bound in a stooping attitude to a low column (column of the Flagellation, now shown in Church of Holy Sepulchre) and beaten with rods or scourged with whips, the thongs of which were weighted with lead, and studded with sharp-pointed pieces of bone, so that frightful laceration followed each stroke. Death frequently resulted. καὶ οἱ στρατιῶται . . . ῥαπίσματα, “and the soldiers plaited a crown of thorns” in mockery of the claim to royalty (for a similar instance, see Keim, vi. 121). Of the suggestions regarding the particular species of thorn, it may be said with Bynaeus (De Morte Christi, iii. 145) “nemo attulit aliquid certi”. ἱμάτιον πορφυροῦν, “a purple robe,” probably a small scarlet military cloak, or some cast-off sagum, or paludamentum, worn by officers and subject kings.—Ver. 3. καὶ ἤρχοντο πρὸς αὐτόν, “and they went on, coming to Him,” imperfect of continued action; “and hailing Him king,” χαῖρε κ. τ. λ., as they were accustomed to shout “Ave, Caesar”. At the same moment they struck Him on the face with their hands.—Ver. 4. Pilate, judging that this will content the Jews, brings Jesus out that they may see Him and ἵνα γνῶτε . . . εὐρίσκω, that Pilate may have another opportunity of pronouncing Him guiltless.—Ver. 5. Still wearing (φορῶν) the mocking symbols of royalty, an object of derision and pity, Jesus is led out, and the judge pointing to Him says, “Ἴδε ὁ ἄνθρωπος, Ecce Homo, “Lo! the man,” as if inviting inspection of the pitiable figure, and convincing them how ridiculous it was to try to fix a charge of treason on so contemptible a person. ὁ ἄνθρωπος is used contemptuously, as in Plutarch, Them., xvi. 2, “the fellow,” “the creature”. Other instances in Holden’s note in Plut., Them. The result is unexpected.—Ver. 6. Instead of allowing him to release the prisoner, “the chief priests and their officers,” not “the people,” who were perhaps moved with pity (Lücke), “roared” (ἐκραύγασαν) “Crucify, crucify”; “To the cross”. To this demand Pilate, “in angry sarcasm” (Reynolds), but perhaps rather merely wishing strongly to assert, for the third time, that he εὐρίσκω ἐν αὐτῷ αἰτίαν." 7. Ἀπεκρίθησαν αὐτῷ οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, h xiii. 14. "Ἡμεῖς νόμον ἔχομεν, καὶ κατὰ τὸν νόμον ἡμῶν ἠδφείλει ἀποθανεῖν, i v. 18. ὅτι ἑαυτὸν υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐποίησεν."

8. Ὅτε οὖν ἤκουσεν ὁ Πιλάτος τοῦτον τὸν λόγον, μᾶλλον ἐφοβήθη, j xviii. 28. 9. καὶ εἰσῆλθεν εἰς τὸ πραιτώριον πάλιν, καὶ λέγει τῷ Ἰησοῦ, k vii. 27; "κ Πόθεν εἶ σύ;" Ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς ἀπόκρισιν οὐκ ἔδωκεν αὐτῷ.

1 i. 22. 10. λέγει οὖν αὐτῷ ὁ Πιλάτος, "Ἐμοὶ οὐ λαλεῖς; οὐκ οἶδας ὅτι m xviii. 39. ἔξουσίαν ἔχω σταυρῶσαί σε, καὶ ἔξουσίαν ἔχω ἀπολύσαί σε;"

11. Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Οὐκ εἶχες ἔξουσίαν οὐδεμίαν κατ' ἐμοῦ, n iii. 27. ἢ εἰ μὴ ἦν σοι δεδομένον ἄνωθεν. διὰ τοῦτο ὁ παραδιδούς<sup>1</sup> μέ σοι for his part would not condemn Jesus to death, "If He is to be crucified, it is you who must do it," retorts, λάβετε . . . αἰτίαν, "Take ye Him and crucify Him, for I find no fault in Him".

<sup>1</sup> παραδούς in  $\aleph$ BE, it, vulg.

Vv. 7-12a. Second private examination by Pilate.—Ver. 7. The Jews are as determined that Pilate shall condemn Jesus as he is resolved not to condemn Him, and to his declaration of the prisoner's innocence they reply, Ἡμεῖς νόμον ἔχομεν . . . ἐποίησεν. He may have committed no wrong of which your Roman law takes cognisance, but "we have a law (Lev. xxiv. 16), and according to our law He ought to die, because He made Himself God's Son". For the construction see v. 18. The occasion they refer to is His profession to the Sanhedrim recorded in Mk. xiv. 62. υἱὸν Θεοῦ here means more than "Messiah," for the claim to be Messiah was not apparently punishable with death (see Trefry's Eternal Sonship), and, moreover, such a claim would not have produced in Pilate the state of mind suggested by (ver. 8) μᾶλλον ἐφοβήθη, words which imply that already mingling with the governor's hesitation to condemn an innocent man there was an element of awe inspired by the prisoner's bearing and words. The words also imply that this awe was now deepened, and found utterance in the blunt interrogation (ver. 9), Πόθεν εἶ σύ; "Whence art Thou?" What is meant by your claim to be of Divine origin? To this question Jesus ἀπόκρισιν οὐκ ἔδωκεν αὐτῷ, "did not give him an answer". Pilate had no right to prolong the case; because already he had three times over pronounced Jesus innocent. He needed no new material, but only to act on what he had. Jesus recognises this and declines to be a party to his vacillation. Besides, the charge on which He was being tried was, that He had claimed to be King of the Jews. This charge had been answered. Legal procedure was degenerating into an unregulated wrangle. Jesus therefore declines to answer.—Ver. 10. At this silence Pilate is indignant; Ἐμοὶ οὐ λαλεῖς; "To me do you not speak?" It is intelligible that you should not count it worth your while to answer the charges of that yelling mob; but do you not know that I have power to crucify you and have power to release you?—Ver. 11. Jesus answered, Οὐκ εἶχες . . . ἔχει. ἄνωθεν, "from above," i.e., from God. Pilate must be reminded that the power he vaunts is not inherently his, but is given to him for God's purposes. From this it follows, διὰ τοῦτο, that ὁ παραδιδούς μέ σοι, "he that delivered me unto thee," to wit, Caiaphas (although the designation being that which is constantly used of Judas it has not unnaturally been referred to him), μεῖζονα ἁμαρτίαν ἔχει, "hath greater sin," not than you, Pilate (as understood by most interpreters), but greater than in other circumstances it would have been. Had Pilate been a mere irresponsible executioner their sin would have been sufficiently heinous; but in using the official representative of God's truth and justice to fulfil their own wicked and unjust designs, they involve themselves in a darker criminality. So Wetstein: "Comparatur ergo, nisi fallor, peccatum Judaeorum cum suis circumstantiis, cum eodem peccato sine istis circumstantiis: hoc Judaeos aggravat, eosque atrocioris delicti reos agit, quod non per tumultum sed per Praesidem, idque specie juris, me quaerunt de medio tollere".—Ver. 12. In consequence of μείζονα ἄμαρτίαν ἔχει." 12. Ἐκ τούτου ἐξήτει ὁ Πιλάτος οἱ αὐτῶν ἀπολύσαι αὐτόν. οἱ δὲ Ἰουδαῖοι ἔκραζον λέγοντες, "Ἐὰν τοῦτον ἀπολύσῃς, οὐκ εἶ φίλος τοῦ Καίσαρος. πᾶς ὁ βασιλεὺς αὐτῶν ποιῶν, ἀντιλέγει τῷ Καίσαρι." 13. Ὁ οὖν Πιλάτος ἀκούσας τοῦτον τὸν λόγον, ἤγαγεν ἔξω τὸν Ἰησοῦν, καὶ ἐκάθισεν ἐπὶ τοῦ βήματος, εἰς τόπον λεγόμενον Λιθόστρωτον, Ἑβραϊστὶ δὲ Γαββαθᾶ. 14. ἦν δὲ παρασκευὴ τοῦ πάσχα, ὧρα δὲ ὡσεὶ ἕκτη.<sup>2</sup> καὶ λέγει τοῖς this and from this point, ἐκ τούτου, as in vi. 66, "upon this," with a causal as well as a temporal reference, ἐξήτει ὁ Πιλάτος ἀπολύσαι αὐτόν, Pilate sought (ineffectually, imperfect) to set Him free.

<sup>1</sup> κραυγαζον is adopted by Tisch. after AIL; κραυγασαν by W.H. after BD 33.

<sup>2</sup> Ti.W.H. read ὦρα ἦν ὡς with NAB. τριτη is found NCDsupplX and some cursives.

Vv. 12b-16. Fresh assault upon Pilate and his final surrender.—Ver. 12. οἱ δὲ Ἰουδαῖοι, "but the Jews," a new turn was at this point given to the case by the cunning of the Sanhedrists, who cried out, ἔκραζον λέγοντες Ἐὰν . . . Καίσαρι. φίλος τοῦ Καίσαρος. Wetstein says: "Legati, praesides, praefecti, consilarii, amici Caesaris dicebantur," but it is not in this titular sense the expression is here used. The meaning is: Thou dost not show thyself friendly to Caesar. The reason being that every one who makes himself a king, ἀντιλέγει τῷ Καίσαρι, "speaks against Caesar". Euthymius, Field, Thayer, etc., prefer "setteth himself against Caesar," "resisteth his authority". And as Jesus made Himself a king, Pilate would aid and abet Him by pronouncing Him innocent. This was a threat Pilate could not despise. Tiberius was suspicious and jealous. ["Judicia majestatis . . . atrocissime exercuit." Suetonius, Tib., 58. Treason was the makeweight in all accusations. Tacitus, Annals, iii. 38.]—Ver. 13. Pilate therefore, when he heard this, brought Jesus out, καὶ ἐκάθισεν ἐπὶ τοῦ βήματος. In the Gospel according to Peter, ἐκάθισεν is understood transitively: καὶ ἐκάθισαν αὐτὸν ἐπὶ καθέδραν κρίσεως λέγοντες Δικαίως κρίνε, βασιλεῦ τοῦ Ἰσραήλ. Similarly in Justin, I. Apol., i. 35. This rendering presents a strikingly dramatic scene, and admirably suits the "behold your king" of ver. 14. (See Expositor for 1893, p. 296 ff., and Robinson and James' Gospel according to Peter, p. 18.) But it is extremely unlikely that Pilate should thus have degraded his seat of justice, and much more natural to suppose that ἐκάθισεν is used intransitively, as in xii. 14, etc. (Joseph., Bell. Jud., ii. 9, 3, ὁ Πιλάτος καθίσας ἐπὶ βήματος), and that Pilate's taking his seat is mentioned to indicate that his mind was now made up and that he was now to pronounce his final judgment. The βῆμα was the suggestum or tribunal, the raised platform (Livy, xxxi. 29; Tac., Hist., iv. 25) or seat (Suet., Aug., 44) on which the magistrate sat to administer justice. See 2 Macc. xiii. 26.—εἰς τόπον λεγόμενον Λιθόστρωτον, "at a place called Lithostroton," i.e., lit. Stone pavement, or Tessellated pavement (of which see reproductions in Rich's Antiq.). Cf. 2 Chron. vii. 3, Joseph., Bell. Jud., vi. 1, 1. Pliny (xxxvi. 15) defines Lithostrota as mosaics, "parvulis certe crustis," and says they were a luxury introduced in the time of Sulla and found in the provinces rather than in Rome (see Krebs in loc.). The space in front of the praetorium where the βῆμα stood was thus paved and therefore currently known as "Lithostroton": Ἑβραϊστὶ δὲ Γαββαθᾶ, "but in Hebrew," i.e., in the popular Aramaic, "Gabbatha," which is not a translation of Lithostroton, but a name given to the same place from its being raised, from גב, a ridge or elevation. The tribunal was raised as a symbol of authority and in order that the judge might see and be seen (see Lücke).—Ver. 14. ἦν δὲ παρασκευὴ τοῦ πάσχα, "now it was the preparation of the Passover". παρασκευὴ was the usual appellation of Friday, the day of preparation for the weekly Sabbath. Here the addition τοῦ πάσχα shows that it is used of the day preceding the Passover. This day was, as it happened, a Friday, but it is the relation to the feast, not to the ordinary Sabbath, that is here indicated. Cf. ver. 42. ὧρα δὲ ὡσεὶ ἕκτη. "It was about the sixth hour," i.e., about 12 o'clock. But Mark

- I. 29, etc. Ἰουδαίοις, “<sup>1</sup> Ἴδε ὁ βασιλεὺς ὑμῶν.” 15. Οἱ δὲ ἐκραύγασαν, “Ἄρον, ἄρον, σταύρωσον αὐτόν.” Λέγει αὐτοῖς ὁ Πιλάτος, “Τὸν βασιλέα ὑμῶν σταυρώσω;” Ἀπεκρίθησαν οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς, “Οὐκ ἔχομεν βασιλέα εἰ μὴ Καίσαρα.” 16. Τότε οὖν παρέδωκεν αὐτὸν αὐτοῖς, ἵνα σταυρωθῇ.
- ▼ 2 Kings xviii. 14. Mt. iii. 11. Mk. xiv. 13. Acts xv. 10. Dan. xii. 5. Rev. xxii. 2.
- Παρέλαβον δὲ τὸν Ἰησοῦν καὶ ἀπήγαγον<sup>1</sup>. 17. καὶ ἑβαστάζων τὸν σταυρὸν αὐτοῦ<sup>2</sup> ἐξῆλθεν εἰς τὸν λεγόμενον Κρανίου τόπον, ὃς λέγεται Ἑβραϊστὶ Γολγοθᾶ. 18. ὅπου αὐτὸν ἐσταύρωσαν, καὶ μετ’ αὐτοῦ ἄλλους δύο ἔντευθεν καὶ ἐντευθεν, μέσον δὲ τὸν Ἰησοῦν.

<sup>1</sup> Tr. Ti. V. H. R. omit καὶ ἀπήγαγον following BLX 33.

<sup>2</sup> Instead of the genitive ἑαυτοῦ read εαυτω, BX 33 αὐτω.

(xv. 25) says: “It was the third hour and they crucified Him”. The various methods of reconciling the statements are given in Andrew’s Life of Our Lord, p. 545 ff. Meyer leaves it unsolved “and the preference must be given to the disciple who stood under the cross”. But if the crucifixion took place midway between nine and twelve o’clock, it was quite natural that one observer should refer it to the former, while another referred it to the latter hour. The height of the sun in the sky was the index of the time of day; and while it was easy to know whether it was before or after midday, or whether the sun was more or less than half-way between the zenith and the horizon, finer distinctions of time were not recognisable without consulting the sun-dials, which were not everywhere at hand. Cf. the interesting passages from rabbinical literature in Wetstein, and Professor Ramsay’s article in the Expositor, 1893, vol. vii., p. 216. The latter writer found the same conditions in Turkish villages, and “cannot feel anything serious” in the discrepancy between John and Mark. “The Apostles had no means of avoiding the difficulty as to whether it was the third or the sixth hour when the sun was near mid-heaven, and they cared very little about the point.” καὶ λέγει . . . ὑμῶν, “and he says to the Jews: Behold your king!” words uttered apparently in sarcasm and rage. If he still wished to free Jesus, his bitterness was impolitic.—Ver. 15. They at once shouted, Ἄρον, ἄρον, σταύρωσον αὐτόν. To this Pilate could offer only the feeble opposition of more sarcasm, Τὸν βασιλέα ὑμῶν σταυρώσω; where, of course, the emphasis is on the first words, John with his artistic perception exhibits their final rejection of Christ in the form in which it appeared as a reckless renunciation of all their national liberties and hopes: Οὐκ ἔχομεν βασιλέα εἰ μὴ Καίσαρα. Even yet Pilate will take no active part, but hands Jesus over to the Sanhedrists with the requisite authorisation; παρέδωκεν, used in a semi-technical sense, cf. Plut., Dem., xiv. 4, and the passages cited in Holden’s note. Vv. 17-30. The crucifixion.—Ver. 17. The Jewish authorities on their part “received” Jesus, καὶ ἀπήγαγον. καὶ βαστάζων . . . Γολγοθᾶ. “And carrying the cross for Himself, He went out to the place called Kranion (of a skull), which in Hebrew is called Golgotha.” The condemned man carried at least part of the cross, and sometimes the whole. ὁ μέλλον σταυρῶ προσηλοῦσθαι πρότερον αὐτὸν βαστάζει, Artemid., Oneir., ii. 56. Other passages in Keim, vi. 124. Since Tertullian (adv. Jud., 10) a type of this has been found in Isaac’s carrying the wood for the sacrifice. ἐξῆλθεν, it was usual both in Jewish and Roman communities to execute criminals outside the city. In Athens the gate through which they passed to the place of punishment was called χαρώνεια θύρα. Cf. Bynaeus, De Morte Christi, 220; Pearson, On the Creed (Art. iv.); Heb. xiii. 12; Lev. xxiv. 14. The place of execution at Jerusalem was a small knoll just beyond the northern wall, which, from its bare top and two hollow caves in its face, bears a rough resemblance to a skull, and was therefore called κρανίον, Calvaria, Skull. “Golgotha” is the Aramaic form of Gulgoeth, which is found in 2 Kings ix. 35. It is described in Conder’s Hand-book, p. 355; Henderson’s Palestine, pp. 163, 164.—Ver. 18. ὅπου . . . Ἰησοῦν. All information regarding the cross has been collected by Lipsius in his treatise

19. Ἐγραψε δὲ καὶ τίτλον ὁ Πιλάτος, καὶ ἔθηκεν ἐπὶ τοῦ σταυροῦ ἦν δὲ γεγραμμένον, “Ἰησοῦς ὁ Ναζωραῖος ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων.”
20. Τοῦτον οὖν τὸν τίτλον πολλοὶ ἀνέγνωσαν τῶν Ἰουδαίων, ὅτι ἔγγυς ἦν τῆς πόλεως ὁ τόπος, ὅπου ἐσταυρώθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς· καὶ <sup>x vi. 19 reff.</sup> ἦν γεγραμμένον Ἑβραϊστὶ, Ἑλληνιστὶ, Ῥωμαῖστὶ. 21. ἔλεγον οὖν τῷ Πιλάτῳ οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς τῶν Ἰουδαίων, “Μὴ γράφῃ, Ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων· ἀλλ’ ὅτι ἐκεῖνος εἶπε, Βασιλεὺς εἰμι τῶν Ἰουδαίων.”
22. Ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Πιλάτος, “<sup>z</sup> Ὁ γέγραφα, γέγραφα.” 23. Οἱ οὖν <sup>y</sup> στρατιῶται, ὅτε ἐσταύρωσαν τὸν Ἰησοῦν, ἔλαβον τὰ ἱμάτια αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἐποίησαν τέσσαρα μέρη, ἐκάστῳ στρατιῶτῃ μέρος, καὶ τὸν <sup>a</sup> χιτῶνα. ἦν δὲ ὁ χιτῶν ἄρραφος, ἐκ τῶν <sup>b</sup> ἄνωθεν ἄφαντος δι’ ὄλου. <sup>z Mk. xv. 38. Exod. xxviii. 28. xxii. 11. Is. xxxvii. 1. Lk. v. 36. Mk. xv. 38.</sup>
24. εἶπον οὖν πρὸς ἀλλήλους, “Μὴ <sup>c</sup> σχίσωμεν αὐτὸν, ἀλλὰ <sup>d</sup> λάχωμεν <sup>e</sup> περὶ αὐτοῦ, τίνος ἔσται.” ἵνα <sup>f</sup> ἡ γραφὴ πληρωθῇ ἣ λέγουσα, ‘Διμερίσαντο τὰ ἱμάτιά μου ἑαυτοῖς, καὶ ἐπὶ τὸν ἱματισμόν μου ἔβαλον κλῆρον.’ <sup>c Here only in this sense, see Thayer. d Ps. xxii. 18.</sup>
- Οἱ μὲν οὖν στρατιῶται ταῦτα ἐποίησαν· 25. εἰστήκεισαν δὲ παρὰ τῷ σταυρῷ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ ἡ μήτηρ αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἡ ἀδελφὴ τῆς μητρὸς

De Cruce, Antwerp, 1595; Amstel., 1670; and in vol. ii. of his collected works, published at Lugduni, 1613. With Jesus were crucified “other two,” in Mt. xxvii. 38, called “robbers,” probably of the same class as Barabbas. Jesus was crucified between them; possibly, to identify Him with the worst criminals. “The whole of humanity was represented there: the sinless Saviour, the saved penitent, the condemned impenitent.” Plummer.—Ver. 19. Ἐγραψε δὲ καὶ τίτλον ὁ Πιλάτος. “And Pilate wrote a ‘title,’ also, and set it on the cross.” The “title,” αἰτία, was a board whitened with gypsum (σανίς, λεύκωμα) such as were commonly used for public notices. Pilate himself, meaning to insult the Jews, ordered the precise terms of the inscription. καὶ τίτλον, “a title also,” in addition to all the other insults he had heaped on them during the trial.—Ver. 20. This title was read by “many of the Jews,” because the place of crucifixion was close to the city, and lay in the road of any coming in from the north; also it was written in three languages so that every one could read it, whether Jew or Gentile.—Ver. 21. Naturally the chief priests remonstrated and begged Pilate so to alter the inscription as to remove the impression that the claim of Jesus was admitted.—Ver. 22. But Pilate, “by nature obstinate and stubborn” (Philo, ii. 589), peremptorily refused to make any alteration. ὁ γέγραφα γέγραφα.—Ver. 23. “The soldiers, then, when they had crucified Jesus, took His garments”—the executioner’s perquisite (Apuleius has the comparison “naked as a new-born babe or as the crucified”)—and as there were four soldiers, τετράδιον, Acts xii. 4, they divided the clothes into four parts. This was the more easily done because the usual dress of a Jew consisted of five parts, the head-dress, the shoes, the chiton, the outer garment, and the girdle. The χιτῶν remained after the four other articles were distributed. They could not divide it into four without spoiling it, and so they cast lots for it. It was seamless, ἄρραφος, unsewed, and woven in one piece from top to bottom.—Ver. 24. The soldiers therefore said, Μὴ σχίσωμεν αὐτόν ἀλλὰ λάχωμεν, “let us not rend it but cast lots”. λαχάνειν is, properly, not “to cast lots,” but “to obtain by lot”. See Field, Otium Norv., 72. In this John sees a fulfilment of Ps. xxii. 18, the LXX. version of which is here quoted verbatim.—Ver. 25. This part of the scene is closed (that another may be introduced) with the common formula, οἱ μὲν οὖν στρατιῶται ταῦτα ἐποίησαν. (“Graeci . . . saepissime hujusmodi conclusiunculis utuntur.” Raphael in loc.) οἱ μὲν . . . εἰστήκεισαν δὲ . . . The soldiers for their part acted as has been related, but there were others beside the cross who were very differently αὐτοῦ, Μαρία ἢ τοῦ Κλωπᾶ, καὶ Μαρία ἢ Μαγδαληνῆ. 26. Ἰησοῦς οὖν ἰδὼν τὴν μητέρα, καὶ τὸν μαθητὴν παρεστῶτα ὄν ἡγάπα, λέγει τῇ μητρὶ αὐτοῦ, "Γόνοι, ἰδοὺ ὁ υἱός σου." 27. Εἶτα λέγει τῷ μαθητῇ. "Ἴδοὺ ἡ μήτηρ σου." Καὶ ὁ ἀπ' ἐκείνης τῆς ὥρας ἔλαβεν αὐτὴν ὁ μαθητὴς εἰς τὰ ἴδια. 28. Μετὰ τοῦτο εἰδὼς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, ὅτι πάντα ἤδη τετελεσται, ἵνα τελειωθῇ ἡ γραφή, λέγει, "Διψῶ." 29. Σκευὸς οὖν ἔκειτο ὁ ὄξους μεστόν· οἱ δὲ, πλήσαντες σπόγγον ὁ ὄξους, καὶ ὑσώπῳ περιέντες, προσήνεγκαν αὐτοῦ τῷ στόματι.

affected. ἡ μήτηρ . . . Μαγδαληνῆ. It is doubtful whether it is meant that three or that four women were standing by the cross; for Μαρία ἢ τοῦ Κλωπᾶ may either be a further designation of ἡ ἀδελφὴ τῆς μητρὸς αὐτοῦ, or it may name the first member of a second pair of women. That four women are intended may be argued from the extreme improbability that in one family two sisters should bear the same name, Mary. The Synoptists do not name the mother of Jesus among those who were present, but Matthew (xxvii. 56) and Mark (xv. 40) name Mary Magdalene, Mary the mother of James, and Salome the mother of John. Two of these three are mentioned by John here, and it is natural to infer that the unnamed woman (ἡ ἀδελφὴ κ. τ. λ.) is the third, Salome; unnamed possibly because of this writer's shyness in naming himself or those connected with him. But the fact that Luke (xxiv. 10) names Joanna as the third woman reflects some uncertainty on this argument. If Salome was Mary's sister, then Jesus and John were cousins, and the commendation of Mary to John's care is in part explained. ἡ τοῦ Κλωπᾶ may mean the mother, daughter, sister, or wife of Klopas; probably the last. According to Mt. xxvii. 56, Mk. xv. 40, Lk. xxiv. 10, the Mary here mentioned was the mother of James and Joses. But in Mt. x. 3 we learn that James was the son of Alphaeus. Hence it is inferred that Klopas and Alphaeus are two slightly varying forms of the same name  $\kappa\lambda\omicron\pi\alpha$ .—Ver. 26. John's interest in naming the women is not obvious except in the case of the first. Ἰησοῦς . . . ἡ μήτηρ σου. Jesus when He saw His mother, and the disciple whom He loved standing beside her (the relevancy of the designation, τὸν μαθητὴν ὄν ἡγάπα, is here obvious, and the most convincing proof of its truth and significance is now given), says to His mother, "Woman, behold thy son"; i.e., turning His eyes towards John, There is your son. Me you are losing, so far as the filial relation goes, but John will in this respect take my place.—Ver. 27. And this trust He commits to John in the simple words, Ἴδοὺ ἡ μήτηρ σου, although his natural mother, Salome, was also standing there. [Cf. the bequest of Eudamidas: "I leave to Aretaeus the care of nourishing and providing for my mother in her old age". Lucian's Toxaris.] John at once accepted the charge, "from that hour (which cannot be taken so stringently as to imply that they did not wait at the cross to see the end) the disciple took her to his own home"; εἰς τὰ ἴδια, see i. 11, xvi. 32. The circumstances of the Nazareth home which made this a possible and desirable arrangement are not known. That Mary should find a home with her sister and her son is in itself intelligible, and this close intimacy of the two persons whose hearts had been most truly the home of Jesus must have helped to cherish and vivify all reminiscences of His character and words.—Ver. 28. Μετὰ τοῦτο . . . Διψῶ. "After this, Jesus knowing that all things are now finished, that the scripture might be completely fulfilled, saith, I thirst." Jesus did not feel thirsty and proclaim it with the intention of fulfilling scripture—which would be a spurious fulfilment—but in His complaint and the response to it, John sees a fulfilment of Ps. lxxix. 22, εἰς τὴν δίψαν μου ἐπότισάν με ὄξους. Only when all else had been attended to (εἰδὼς κ. τ. λ.) was He free to attend to His own physical sensations.—Ver. 29. Σκευὸς . . . μεστόν—"There was set a vessel full of vinegar"; the mention of the vessel betrays the eye-witness. "The Synoptists do not mention the σκευὸς, but John had stood beside it." Plummer. ὄξους, the vinegar used by soldiers. [Ulpian says: "vinum atque acetum milites nostri solent percipere, uno die vinum, alio die acetum". Keim, vi. 162.] Here it seems to have been provided for the crucified, for as Weiss and Plummer

30. ὅτε οὖν ἔλαβε τὸ ὄξος ὁ Ἰησοῦς, εἶπε, “Τετέλεσται.” καὶ κλίνας τὴν κεφαλὴν, παρέδωκε τὸ πνεῦμα.

31. Οἱ οὖν Ἰουδαῖοι, ἵνα μὴ μείνη ἐπὶ τοῦ σταυροῦ τὰ σώματα ἐν τῷ σαββάτῳ, ἐπεὶ παρασκευὴ ἦν· ἦν γὰρ ἡ μεγάλη ἡ ἡμέρα ἐκείνου <sup>vii. 37. Is</sup> τοῦ σαββάτου· ἠρώτησαν τὸν Πιλάτον, ἵνα <sup>i. 13.</sup> κατεαγῶσιν αὐτῶν τὰ <sup>k Jer. xxxi.</sup> σκέλη, καὶ ἀρθώσιν. 32. ἦλθον οὖν οἱ στρατιῶται, καὶ τοῦ μὲν πρώτου κατέαξαν τὰ σκέλη καὶ τοῦ ἄλλου τοῦ συσταυρωθέντος αὐτῷ· 33. ἐπὶ δὲ τὸν Ἰησοῦν ἐλθόντες, ὡς εἶδον αὐτὸν ἤδη τεθνηκότα, οὐ κατέαξαν αὐτοῦ τὰ σκέλη· 34. ἀλλ’ εἰς τῶν στρατιωτῶν λόγχῃ observe, there were a sponge and a hyssop-reed also at hand. οἱ δὲ, i.e., the soldiers, but cf. Mk. xv. 36; πλήσαντες . . . They filled a sponge, because a cup was impracticable, and put it round a stalk of hyssop, and thus applied the restorative to His mouth. The plant called “hyssop” has not been identified. All that was requisite was a reed (cf. περιθεις καλάμω, Mt. xxvii. 48, Mk. xv. 36) of two or three feet long, as the crucified was only slightly elevated.—Ver. 30. ὅτε οὖν . . . πνεῦμα. The cry, τετέλεσται, “it is finished,” was not the gasp of a worn-out life, but the deliberate utterance of a clear consciousness that His work was finished, and all God’s purpose accomplished (xvii. 4), that all had now been done that could be done to make God known to men, and to identify Him with men. παρέδωκε τὸ πνεῦμα, “gave up His spirit,” according to Luke xxiii. 46, with an audible commendation of His spirit to the Father. ἀφῆκε πνεῦμα in Eurip., Hecuba, 569; ἀφῆκε τὴν ψυχὴν Plut., Dem., xxix. 5.

Vv. 31-37. The piercing of Jesus’ side.—Ver. 31. “The Jews, therefore, since it was the preparation,” i.e., Friday, the day before the Sabbath, “and as the day of that Sabbath was great,” being not only an ordinary Sabbath but the Passover, “that the bodies might not hang on the cross on the Sabbath” and so defile it, “they asked Pilate that their legs might be broken, and that they might be removed”. The law of Deut. xxi. 23 was that the body of a criminal should “not remain all night upon the tree”. This law seems not to have been in view; but rather the fear of polluting their great feast. The Roman custom was to leave the body to birds and beasts of prey. To secure speedy death the crurifragium, breaking of the legs with a heavy mallet or bar, was sometimes resorted to: as without such means the crucified might in some cases linger for thirty-six hours. Neander

(Life of Christ, p. 473) has an interesting note on crurifragium; and cf. the Gospel according to Peter on σκελοκοπία, with the note by the Author of Supernat. Religion.—Ver. 32. The two robbers were thus despatched. ἐπὶ δὲ τὸν Ἰησοῦν ἐλθόντες, but when the soldiers who were carrying out Pilate’s orders came to Jesus and saw that He was already dead, they refrained from breaking His legs.—Ver. 34. But one of the soldiers λόγχῃ αὐτοῦ τὴν πλευρὰν ἐνυξε, “pierced His side with a spear”. But Field prefers “pricked His side” to keep up the distinction between ἐνυξε (the milder word) and ἐξεκέντησε (ver. 37). He favours the idea of Loesner that the soldier’s intention was to ascertain whether Jesus was really dead, and he cites a very apt parallel from Plutarch’s Cleomenes, 37. But ἐγχεῖ νύξε occurs in Homer (Il., v. 579), where death followed, and as the wound inflicted by this spear thrust seems to have been a hand-breadth wide (xx. 25) it may be presumed the soldier meant to make sure that Jesus was dead by giving Him a thrust which itself would have been fatal. The weapon with which the blow was inflicted was a λόγχῃ, the ordinary Roman hasta, which had an iron head, egg-shaped, and about a hand-breadth at the broadest part. Following upon the blow εὐθὺς ἐξῆλθεν αἷμα καὶ ὕδωρ. Dr. Stroud (Physical Cause of the Death of Christ) advocates the view that our Lord died from rupture of the heart, and thus accounts both for the speedy cessation of life and for the effusion of blood and water. Previous literature on the subject will be found in the Critici Sacri and select passages in Burton’s Bampton Lec., 468-9. Without physiological knowledge John records simply what he saw, and if he had an eye to the Docetae, as Waterland (v. 190) supposes, yet his main purpose was to certify the real death of Jesus. The symbolic signifi-

1 Rev. xiv. αὐτοῦ τὴν πλευρὰν ἔνυξε, καὶ εὐθὺς ἔξῃλθεν αἶμα καὶ ὕδωρ. 35.
 20. 1 Jo.
 v. 6. καὶ ὁ ἑωρακὼς μεμαρτύρηκε, καὶ ἡ ἀληθινὴ αὐτοῦ ἐστὶν ἡ μαρτυρία, 11 iv. 57. καὶ κεῖνος οἶδεν ὅτι ἀληθῆ λέγει, ἵνα ὑμεῖς πιστεύσητε. 36. ἐγένετο
 12 Exod. xii. γὰρ ταῦτα, ἵνα ἡ γραφὴ πληρωθῇ, ἡ ὅσπου οὐ συντριβήσεται
 49. Ps. xxxiv. 20. αὐτοῦ.' 37. Καὶ πάλιν ἑτέρα γραφὴ λέγει, ὅσπου οὐ συντριβήσεται
 13 Zech. xii. αὐτοῦ.' 37. Καὶ πάλιν ἑτέρα γραφὴ λέγει, ὅσπου οὐ συντριβήσεται
 10. ἐξεκέντησαν.'

p Here only. 38. META δὲ ταῦτα ἠρώτησε τὸν Πιλάτον ὁ Ἰωσήφ ὁ ἀπὸ Ἀριμαq 1 Kings θαίας, ὢν μαθητὴς τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, ῥ κεκρυμμένος δὲ διὰ τὸν φόβον τῶν 13. 29. θουδαίων, ἵνα ἄρῃ τὸ σῶμα τοῦ Ἰησοῦ· καὶ ἐπέτρεψεν ὁ Πιλάτος.
 r x. 10; xii. 16 ἦλθεν οὖν καὶ ἤρε τὸ σῶμα τοῦ Ἰησοῦ. 39. ἦλθε δὲ καὶ Νικόδημος
 s Here only in N.T. Ecclus. xxxviii. 8. ὁ ἐλθὼν πρὸς τὸν Ἰησοῦν νεκτὸς τὸ πρῶτον, φέρων ἑμίγμα σμύρνης cance of the blood and water so abundantly insisted on by the Fathers (see Burton, B. L., 167-72, and Westcott's additional note) is not within John's horizon.—Ver. 35. When he goes out to testify, ὁ ἑωρακὼς . . . it is not the phenomenon of the blood and water he so emphatically certifies, but the veritable death of Christ. To one who was about to relate a resurrection it was a necessary preliminary to establish the bona-fide death. That John here speaks of himself in the third person is quite in his manner. Here, as in chap. xx., he shows that he understood the value of an eye-witness's testimony. It is that which constitutes his μαρτυρία ἀληθινή, it is adequate. Besides being adequate, its contents are true, ἀληθῆ. "Testimony may be sufficient (e.g., of a competent eye-witness) but false; or it may be insufficient (e.g., of half-witted child) but true. St. John declares that his testimony is both sufficient and true." Plummer. The reason of his utterance, or record of these facts, is ἵνα ὑμεῖς πιστεύσητε, "that ye might believe," first, this record, and through it in Jesus and His revelation.—Ver. 36. ἐγένετο γὰρ ταῦτα. He records these things, contained in this short paragraph, because they further identify Jesus as the promised Messiah. Ὅσπου οὐ συντριβήσεται αὐτοῦ. The law regarding the Paschal lamb ran thus (Exod. xii. 46): ὅσπου οὐ συντριβήσεται ἀπ' αὐτοῦ, cf. Ps. xxxiv. 20. Evidently John identified Jesus as the Paschal Lamb, cf. 1 Cor. v. 7. καὶ πάλιν . . . ἐξεκέντησαν. Another Scripture also here found its fulfilment, Zech. xii. 10. The original is: "They shall look upon me whom they pierced". The Sept. renders: ἐπιβλέψονται πρὸς με ἄνθ' ὧν κατωρχήσαντο: "They shall look towards me because they insulted me".

John gives a more accurate translation: Ὅσπου οὐ συντριβήσεται: "They shall look on Him whom (ἐκεῖνον ὃν) they pierced". The same rendering is adopted in the Greek versions of Aquila, Theodotion and Symmachus, and is also found in Ignatius, Ep. Trall., 10; Justin, I. Apol., i. 77; and cf. Rev. i. 7, and Barnabas, Ep., 7. In the lance thrust John sees a suggestive connection with the martyr-hero of Zechariah's prophecy.

Vv. 38-42. The entombment.—Ver. 38. Μετὰ δὲ ταῦτα, "But after these things". In ver. 31 the Jews asked that the bodies might be removed. Had this request been fulfilled by the soldiers, they would have cast the three bodies together into some pit of refuse, cf. Josh. viii. 29; but before this was done Joseph of Arimathea—a place not yet certainly identified—who was a rich man (cf. Is. liii. 9) and a member of the Sanhedrim (Mt. xxvii. 57; Mk. xv. 43; Lk. xxiii. 50), but also "a disciple of Jesus," though "a hidden one, κεκρυμμένος, through fear of the Jews, asked Pilate that he might remove the body of Jesus". This required some courage on Joseph's part, and Mark therefore uses the word τολμήσας. Reynolds says that ἠρώτησεν "implies something of claim and confidence on his part. The Synoptists all three use ἤτήσατο, which rather denotes the position of a supplicant for a favour." The reason, however, why ἤτήσατο is used in the Synoptists is that it is followed by an accusative of the object asked for; while ἠρώτησε is used in John because it introduces a request that something may be done. With Joseph's request Pilate complied. ἦλθεν . . . Ἰησοῦ. For ἤρε τὸ σῶμα, cf. 1 Kings xiii. 29. Another member of Sanhedrim countenanced and aided Joseph.—Ver. 39. ἦλθε δὲ καὶ Νικόκαὶ ἄλλοις ὡσεὶ λίτρας ἑκατόν. 40. ἔλαβον οὖν τὸ σῶμα τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, καὶ ἔδησαν αὐτὸ ὀθονίοις μετὰ τῶν ἄρωμάτων, καθὼς ἔθος ἐστὶ τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις ἐνταφιάζειν. 41. ἦν δὲ τῷ τόπῳ, ὅπου ἐσταυρώθη, κήπος, καὶ ἐν τῷ κήπῳ μνημεῖον καινόν, ἐν ᾧ οὐδέπω οὐδεὶς ἐτέθη. 42. ἐκεῖ οὖν διὰ τὴν παρασκευὴν τῶν Ἰουδαίων, οἳ ἐγγὺς ἦν τὸ μνημεῖον, ἔθηκαν τὸν Ἰησοῦν.

XX. 1. Τῆς δὲ μιᾶς τῶν σαββάτων Μαρία ἡ Μαγδαληνὴ ἔρχεται πρῶτ, σκοτίας ἔτι οὔσης, εἰς τὸ μνημεῖον· καὶ βλέπει τὸν λίθον ἡρμένον ἐκ τοῦ μνημείου. 2. τρέχει οὖν καὶ ἔρχεται πρὸς Σίμωνα Πέτρον καὶ πρὸς τὸν ἄλλον μαθητὴν ὃν ἐφίλει ὁ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς, ἡρᾶν τὸν κύριον ἐκ τοῦ μνημείου, καὶ οὐκ οἶδαμεν ποῦ ἔθηκαν αὐτόν." 3. Ἐξῆλθεν οὖν ὁ Πέτρος καὶ ὁ ἄλλος μαθητῆς, δημος. "Thus Jesus by being lifted up is already drawing men unto Him. These Jewish aristocrats first confess Him in the hour of His deepest degradation." Plummer. Nicodemus is identified as ὁ ἑλθὼν . . . τὸ πρῶτον, "he who came to Jesus by night at the first"; iii. 1, in contrast to the boldness of his coming now. φέρων μίγμα . . . ἑκατόν. μίγμα, a "confection" or "compound," cf. Ecclus. xxxviii. 8. σμύρνης καὶ ἀλόης, "of myrrh and aloes". Myrrh was similarly used by the Egyptians, see Herod., ii. 83. Cf. Ps. xiv. 9. ὡσεὶ λίτρας ἑκατόν. The λίτρα (libra) was rather over eleven ounces avoirdupois. The enormous quantity has been accounted for as a rich man's expression of devotion, or as required if the entire body and all the wrappings were to be smeared with it, and if the grave itself was to be filled with unguents as in 2 Chron. xvi. 14.—Ver. 40. ἔλαβον . . . ἐνταφιάζειν. They wrapped the body in strips of linen along with the aromatic preparations (2 Chron. xvi. 14, ἄρωμάτων), as is the custom (ὡς ἔθος ἐστὶ, 1 Macc. x. 89) with the Jews (other peoples having other customs) to prepare for burial.—Ver. 41. ἐνταφιάζειν, see Gen. i. 1-3. ἦν ἐν τῷ τόπῳ, "There was in the place," i.e., in that neighbourhood, κήπος, a garden, which, according to Mt. xxvii. 60, must have belonged to Joseph. μνημεῖον καινόν, a tomb, rock-hewn according to Synoptists, which had hitherto been unused, and which was therefore fresh and clean.—Ver. 42. "There, accordingly, on account of the preparation of the Jews, because the tomb was at hand, they laid Jesus." The Friday was so nearly at an end that they had not time to go to any distance, and therefore availed themselves of the neighbouring tomb as a provisional, if not permanent, resting-place.

CHAPTER XX.—The resurrection and subsequent manifestations.—Vv. 1-10. The empty tomb.—Ver. 1. Τῆς δὲ μιᾶς τῶν σαββάτων: "And on the first day of the week". Mk. (xvi. 2) and Lk. (xxiv. 1) have the same expression. Mt. (xxviii. 1) has ὁψὲ δὲ σαββάτων, τῇ ἐπιφωσκούσῃ εἰς μίαν σαββάταν. [In the suspected ninth verse of Mk. xvi. πρώτη appears instead of μιᾶ.—Μαρία ἡ Μαγδαληνὴ ἔρχεται, Mary of Magdala, now Mejdal, a fishing village north of Tiberias; she is further described in Mk. xvi. 9 as παρ' ἧς ἐκβεβλήκει ἐπὶ τὰ δαιμόνια (cf. Lk. viii. 2), which lends significance both to her being at the tomb and to her being the first to see the Lord. She alone of the three women present is here named, because she alone is required in John's account. The time is more exactly described as πρῶτ, σκοτίας ἔτι οὔσης. Mk. (xvi. 2) has λίαν πρῶτ, but adds ἀνατείλαντος τοῦ ἡλίου, apparently having chiefly in view, not the first arrival of the women, but the appearance of Jesus to Mary. Luke's ὄρθρου βαθύς agrees with John's expression. Phrynichus defines ὄρθρος as the time before the day began while a lamp was still needed. [Cf. Plato's Crito at the beginning, and Roger's note on Aristoph., Wasps, 215.] The darkness is noticed by John to account for her seeing nothing of what Peter and John afterwards saw. She could not, however, fail to see τὸν λίθον ἡρμένον ἐκ τοῦ μνημείου; the slab closing the sepulchre had been removed. Seeing this she naturally concluded that the tomb had been violated, possibly that

t Here only u xii. 3.
v xx. 5, 6, 7.
w Mk. xvi.
1, etc.
x 1 Macc. x.
89. 2
Chron.
xvi. 14.
y Mat. xxvi.
12.
z 2 Kings
xxi. 26.
a ver. 14.
a Acts xx. 7.
b Mk. xvi. 2.
b Gen. i. 5.
c Mk. i. 35.
c Cp. Mk.
xiv. 46.
d ver. 1;
xix. 38.

εἰν. 36; xxi. καὶ ἤρχοντο εἰς τὸ μνημεῖον. 4. ἔτρεχον δὲ οἱ δύο ὁμοῦ καὶ ὁ ἄλλος μαθητῆς προέδραμε τάχιον τοῦ Πέτρου, καὶ ἦλθε πρῶτος εἰς τὸ μνημεῖον, 5. καὶ παρακύψας βλέπει κείμενα τὰ ὀθόνια, οὐ μέντοι εἰσῆλθεν. 6. ἔρχεται οὖν Σίμων Πέτρος ἀκολουθῶν αὐτῷ, καὶ εἰσῆλθεν εἰς τὸ μνημεῖον, καὶ θεωρεῖ τὰ ὀθόνια κείμενα, 7. καὶ τὸ σουδάριον ὃ ἦν ἐπὶ τῆς κεφαλῆς αὐτοῦ, οὐ μετὰ τῶν ὀθονίων κείμενον, ἡ Adv. here only. ἀλλὰ χωρὶς ἐντετυλιγμένον εἰς ἓνα τόπον. 8. τότε οὖν εἰσῆλθε καὶ ὁ ἄλλος μαθητῆς ὁ ἑλθὼν πρῶτος εἰς τὸ μνημεῖον, καὶ εἶδε, καὶ i Lk. xxiv. 7. ἐπίστευσεν. 9. οὐδέπω γὰρ ᾔδεισαν τὴν γραφὴν, ὅτι δεῖ αὐτὸν ἐκ

the authorities for purposes of their own had removed the body.—Ver. 2. τρέχει οὖν . . . αὐτόν. She therefore runs, disregarding unseemliness, and comes to those who would be most interested, and without preface, breathless and anxious, exclaims: ἦραν . . . “they have removed the Lord from the tomb, and we know not where they have laid Him”. Evidently she had no idea that a resurrection had taken place. The plural οἶδαμεν may naturally be accepted as confirming Mark’s account that she was not alone.—Ver. 3. At once the two men ἔξηλθεν . . . καὶ ἤρχοντο, singular and plural as frequently, aorist and imperfect, the one referring to the passing beyond the city wall, the other to the whole course from the house to the tomb.—Ver. 4. ἔτρεχον δὲ οἱ δύο ὁμοῦ, “and the two ran together”: equally eager; but ὁ ἄλλος μαθητῆς προέδραμε τάχιον τοῦ Πέτρου, “the other disciple ran on before more quickly than Peter”; probably John was the younger man. [Lampe suggests two other reasons: either Peter’s steps were slower “ob conscientiam culpae,” or “forte via Joanni magis nota erat.”] Consequently John ἦλθε πρῶτος . . . “came first to the tomb”.—Ver. 5. καὶ παρακύψας . . . The R.V. renders παρακύψας by “stooping and looking in,” A.V. has merely “stooping down”; the Vulgate “cum se inclinasset,” Weizsäcker “beugte sich vor”. Field (Otium Norvic. on Luke xxiv. 12) prefers “looking in,” although, he says, “peep in” would more accurately define the word παρακύπτειν. He quotes Casaubon’s opinion that the word implies “pro-tensionem colli cum modica corporis incurvatione”. See also Kypke on Luke xxiv. 12, and Lid. and Scott Lex. ὀθόνια are the strips of linen used for swathing the dead; the cerecloths. ὀθόνη is frequent in Homer (Il., 3, 141; 18, 595) to denote the fine material of women’s dress; in Lucian and Herodian of sails; in Acts x. 11 of a sheet. σινδῶν is the word used by Luke (xxiii. 53); so Herodotus, ii. 86. οὐ μέντοι εἰσῆλθεν, “he did not however enter,” withheld by dread of pollution, according to Wetstein; by terror, according to Meyer. It is enough to suppose that it did not occur to John to enter the tomb, or that he was withheld by a feeling of reverence or delicacy.—Ver. 6. Peter is not so withheld. He enters καὶ θεωρεῖ τὰ ὀθόνια . . . τόπον, θεωρεῖ is probably used here in its stricter sense of seeing so as to draw conclusions.—Ver. 7. What he saw was significant; the linen wrappings lying, and the napkin which had been on His head not lying with the linen cloths, but separately folded up in a place by itself. The first circumstance was evidence that the body had not been hastily snatched away for burial elsewhere. Had the authorities or any one else taken the body, they would have taken it as it was. The second circumstance gave them even stronger proof that there had been no hurry. The napkin was neatly folded and laid “into one place,” the linens being in another. They felt in the tomb as if they were in chamber where one had divested himself of one set of garments to assume another. [Euthymius is here interesting and realistic.] σουδάριον, sudarium, from sudo, I sweat.—Ver. 8. On Peter reporting what he saw τότε οὖν . . . ἐπίστευσεν, “then entered accordingly the other disciple also, who had first arrived at the tomb, and he saw and believed”. Standing and gazing at the folded napkin, John saw the truth. Jesus has Himself risen, and disencumbered Himself of these wrappings. Cf. xi. 44. It was enough for John; ἐπίστευσεν. He visited no other tomb; he questioned no one.—Ver. 9. The emptied and orderly grave convinced him, οὐδέπω γὰρ ᾔδεισαν . . . ἀναστήναι; it was not an expectation founded on νεκρῶν ἀναστήναι. 10. ἀπῆλθον οὖν πάλιν<sup>1</sup> πρὸς ἑαυτοὺς οἱ μαθηταί.<sup>j</sup> 11. Μαρία δὲ εἰστήκει πρὸς τὸ μνημεῖον κλαίουσα ἔξω. ὡς οὖν ἔκλαιε, κ<sup>κ</sup> παρέκυψεν εἰς τὸ μνημεῖον, 12. καὶ θεωρεῖ δύο ἀγγέλους ἐν<sup>l</sup> λευκοῖς καθεζομένους, ἓνα πρὸς τῇ κεφαλῇ, καὶ ἓνα πρὸς τοῖς ποσίν, ὅπου ἔκειτο τὸ σῶμα τοῦ Ἰησοῦ. 13. καὶ λέγουσιν αὐτῇ ἐκεῖνοι, "Γύναι, τί κλαίεις;" λέγει αὐτοῖς, "Ὅτι<sup>m</sup> ᾔβραυνον τὸν κύριόν μου, καὶ οὐκ οἶδα ποῦ<sup>n</sup> ἔβηκαν αὐτόν." 14. Καὶ ταῦτα εἰπούσα ἐστράφη<sup>o</sup> εἰς τὰ ὀπίσω, καὶ θεωρεῖ τὸν Ἰησοῦν ἐστῶτα· καὶ οὐκ ᾔδει ὅτι ὁ<sup>p</sup> Ἰησοῦς<sup>q</sup> ἔστι. 15. λέγει αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Γύναι, τί κλαίεις; τίνα ζητεῖς;" Ἐκεῖνη δοκοῦσα ὅτι ὁ<sup>r</sup> κηπουρός ἔστι, λέγει αὐτῷ, "Κύριε, εἰ σὺ<sup>s</sup> ἔβάστασας αὐτόν, εἰπέ μοι ποῦ αὐτόν<sup>t</sup> ἔβηκας· ἀγὼ αὐτόν<sup>u</sup> ἄρῶ." 16. λέγει αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Μαρία." Στρα-<sup>v</sup>φείσα ἐκεῖνη λέγει αὐτῷ,<sup>1</sup> "Ῥαββουνί." ὁ λέγεται, διδάσκαλε.

i Sam. xxvi. 11. Num. xxiv. 25. Lk. xxiv. 5. k ver. 5. l Pl. Exod. xxxiii. 4. m xix. 38; and ver. 2. n xix. 41. o xviii. 6. p i. 40. q Gen. xxxvii. 15. cp. xviii. 7. r Here only. s Cp. xii. 6. t ver. 13. u Mk. x. 51. only.

<sup>1</sup> Insert Εβραϊστί with BDLOX 33 Syrr. Aegypt. Arm. Aeth., omitted in AEGK vulg. Cyr.-Alex.

scripture which prompted belief in the resurrection; but only those matter-of-fact observations, the empty grave and the folded napkin.—Ver. 10. Satisfied in their own minds ἀπῆλθον οὖν . . . οἱ μαθηταί. πρὸς ἑαυτοὺς or αὐτούς or αὐτοὺς = home; "chez eux," Segond's French version; εἰς τὰ ἴδια, modern Greek. Kypke gives examples of a phrase which he says is "trita profanis".

Vv. 11-18.—Jesus reveals Himself to Mary.—Ver. 11. Μαρία δὲ εἰστήκει . . . ἔξω. Hitherto John has told us simply what he himself saw: now he reports what Mary told him, see ver. 18. She had come to the tomb after the men, but could not share in their belief. She remained outside the tomb helplessly and hopelessly weeping. She herself had told the disciples that the tomb was empty, and she had seen them come out of it; but again παρέκυψεν εἰς τὸ μνημεῖον "she peered into the tomb"; an imimitably natural touch. She could not believe her Lord was gone. καὶ θεωρεῖ . . . Ἰησοῦ. This, says Holtzmann, is a mere reminiscence of Luke xxiv. 4. But even the description of the angels differs. They were "seated one at the head and one at the feet where the body of Jesus lay"; sitting, says Bengel, "quasi opera quapiam perfunctos, et expectantes aliquem, quem docerent". Lampe has little help to give here; and Lücke is justified in saying that neither the believing nor the critical inquirer can lift the veil that hangs over this appearance of angels. In Mary's case it was wholly without result; for no sooner does she answer the angels' question than she turns away, probably hearing a footstep behind her.—Ver. 14. ἐστράφη εἰς τὰ ὀπίσω . . . "And she sees Jesus standing and did not know that it was Jesus"; not merely because her eyes were dim with tears, but because He was altered in appearance; as Mark (xvi. 12) says, ἐν ἑτέρῳ μορφῇ. So little was her ultimate recognition of Jesus the result of her expectation or her own fancy embodied.—Ver. 15. λέγει . . . ζητεῖς; That she was searching for some one she had lost was obvious from her tears and demeanour. But not even the voice of Jesus sounds familiar. Ἐκεῖνη . . . ἄρῶ. She supposed Him to be the gardener (or garden-keeper) not because He had on the gardener's clothes—for probably He wore merely the short drawers in which He had been crucified (see Hug and Lücke)—nor because He held the spade as represented in some pictures, but because no one else was likely to be there at that early hour and to question her as to her reason for being there. Her answer shows that she thought it possible that it had been found inconvenient to have the body of Jesus in that tomb and that it had been removed to some other place of sepulture. In this case she will gladly relieve them of the encumbrance. It is none to her.—Ver. 16. λέγει . . . Διδάσκαλε. His uttering her name, Μαρία, revealed that He was a friend who knew her; and there was also that in the tone which made her instantly turn fully round to search Him with her gaze. Surprise, recognition, viii 13, vi 17. λέγει αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Μὴ μου ἄπτου, οὕτω γὰρ ἄναβέβηκα πρὸς τὸν πατέρα μου· πορεύου δὲ πρὸς τοὺς ἀδελφούς μου, καὶ εἰπὲ αὐτοῖς, Ἵναβαίνω πρὸς τὸν πατέρα μου καὶ πατέρα ὑμῶν, καὶ Θεὸν μου καὶ Θεὸν ὑμῶν.” 18. Ἔρχεται Μαρία ἡ Μαγδαληνὴ ἀπαγγέλλουσα τοῖς μαθηταῖς, ὅτι ἑώρακε τὸν κύριον, καὶ ταῦτα εἶπεν αὐτῇ.

v ver. 7.
x xviii 2.
Esth. ix.
15.
y ver. 26.
z Jud. vi. 23.
Dan. x. 19.
a xix. 34.
b Esth. ix.
15.

19. Οὐσης οὖν ὀψίας, τῇ ἡμέρᾳ ἐκείνῃ τῇ ἡμῆ τῶν σαββάτων, καὶ τῶν θυρῶν κεκλεισμένων, ὅπου ἦσαν οἱ μαθηταὶ συναγμένοι, διὰ τὸν φόβον τῶν Ἰουδαίων, ἦλθεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ ἔσθη εἰς τὸ μέσον, καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς, “Ἐιρήνη ὑμῖν.” 20. Καὶ τοῦτο εἰπὼν ἔδειξεν αὐτοῖς τὰς χεῖρας καὶ τὴν πλευρὰν αὐτοῦ. Ἐχάρησαν οὖν οἱ relief, joy, utter themselves in her exclamation, “Ραββουνί,” which Buxtorf renders “Domine mi”; but probably the pronominal suffix had ceased to have significance, as in “Monsieur,” etc. Lampe quotes the saying; “Majus est Rabbi quam Rabbi, et majus est Rabban quam Rabbi,” cf. Mk. x. 51. With the exclamation Mary made a forward movement as if to embrace Him. But this is forbidden.—Ver. 17. Μὴ μου ἄπτου, “noli me tangere,” not because it was indecorous (Lk. vii. 38); nor because she wished to assure herself by touch that the appearance was real, a test which He did not prevent His disciples from applying; nor because her embrace would disturb the process of glorification through which His body was passing; nor, following Kypke’s note, can we suppose that Jesus forbids Mary to worship Him [although K. proves that ἄπτεσθαι is used of that clinging to the knees or feet which was adopted by suppliants], because He accepts Thomas’ worship even before His ascension; but, as He Himself says, οὕτω γὰρ ἀναβέβηκα πρὸς τὸν πατέρα μου, “for I have not yet ascended to my Father,” implying that this was not His permanent return to visible fellowship with His disciples. Mary, by her eagerness to seize and hold Him, showed that she considered that the μικρόν, the “little time,” of xvi. 16, was past, and that now He had returned to be for ever with them. Jesus checks her with the assurance that much had yet to happen before that. His disciples must at once be disabused of that misapprehension. Therefore, πορεύου . . . ὑμῶν, “Go to my brothers [ἀδελφούς μου, here for the first time; in anticipation of the latter part of the sentence, cf. Mk. iii. 35] and tell them, I ascend to my Father and your Father, and my God and your God.” He thus forms a relationship which bound Him to them more closely than His bodily presence. His place by right is with God. But His love binds Him as certainly to His people on earth as His rights carry Him to God. The form of the expression is dictated by His desire to give them assurance. They had no doubt God was His God and Father. He teaches them that, if so, He is their God and Father. ἔρχεται . . . αὐτῇ, Mary carries forthwith the Lord’s message to the disciples, cf. Mk. xvi. 10; Mt. xxviii. 10; Lk. xxiv. 10.

Vv. 19-29. Manifestations of the risen Lord to the disciples, first without Thomas, then with Thomas.—Ver. 19. The time of the manifestation is defined, it was τῇ ἡμέρᾳ . . . σαββάτων “on that day, the first of the week,” and during the evening, οὐσης οὖν ὀψίας, which agrees with Luke’s account, from which we learn that when Jesus and the two disciples reached Emmaus, two hours from Jerusalem, the day was declining. The evening was chosen, probably because then the disciples could be found together. The circumstance that the doors were shut seemed to John significant regarding the properties of the risen body of Jesus. τῶν θυρῶν κεκλε μένων, “the doors having been shut,” i.e., securely fastened so that no one could enter, because the precaution was taken διὰ τὸν φόβον τῶν Ἰουδαίων. So soon had the disciples begun to experience the risks they ran by being associated with Jesus. Calvin supposes Jesus opened the doors miraculously; but that is suggested in the words. Rather it is indicated that His glorified body was not subject to the conditions of the natural, earthly body, but passed where it would. Suddenly ἔσθη εἰς τὸ μέσον (cf. Lk. xxiv. 36). “Phrasis notat se in publico omnium conspectu sistere.” Kypke. Not only as the ordinary salutation, but to calm their perturbation at this sudden μαθηταὶ ἰδόντες τὸν κύριον. 21. εἶπεν οὖν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς πάλιν,

“Ἐιρήνῃ ὑμῖν· καθὼς ἀπέσταλκέ με ὁ πατήρ, καὶ γὰρ πέμπω ὑμᾶς.” <sup>z</sup> Jud. vi. 23
Dan. x. 19

22. Καὶ τοῦτο εἰπὼν ἑνεφύσησε καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς, “<sup>d</sup> Λάβετε Πνεῦμα <sup>c</sup> Here only
in N.T.

Ἅγιον. 23. ἂν τινων ἀφήτε τὰς ἁμαρτίας, ἀφίενται <sup>1</sup> αὐτοῖς· ἂν <sup>d</sup> Gen. ii. 7.
τινων κρατῆτε, κεκράτηνται.” 24. Θωμᾶς δὲ, εἰς ἓκ τῶν δώδεκα ὁ <sup>d</sup> vii. 39.

λεγόμενος Ἐπίδυμος, οὐκ ἦν μετ’ αὐτῶν ὅτε ἦλθεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς. 25. e xi. 16.

ἔλεγον οὖν αὐτῷ οἱ ἄλλοι μαθηταί, “Ἐωράκαμεν τὸν κύριον.” Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “Ἐὰν μὴ ἴδω ἐν ταῖς χερσίν αὐτοῦ τὸν τύπον <sup>2</sup> τῶν ἤλων, καὶ βάλω τὸν δάκτυλόν μου εἰς τὸν τύπον <sup>2</sup> τῶν ἤλων, καὶ βάλω τὴν χεῖρά μου εἰς τὴν πλευρὰν αὐτοῦ, οὐ μὴ πιστεύσω.”

26. Καὶ μεθ’ ἡμέρας ὀκτώ πάλιν ἦσαν ἔσω οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ, καὶ <sup>f</sup> Ezek. ix. 6.
<sup>g</sup> Acts v. 23.

Θωμᾶς μετ’ αὐτῶν. ἔρχεται ὁ Ἰησοῦς, τῶν θυρῶν κεκλεισμένων, καὶ

<sup>1</sup> ἀφένται with  $\aleph^c$ ADL.

<sup>2</sup> τυπον in its first occurrence in this verse is rendered in the Vulgate by “fixuram,” which may mean “the spot where the nail was fixed”; “figuram,” “fissuram,” and “locum” are also read. See Wordsworth and White in loc.  $\tau\omicron\pi\omicron\nu$  is read by Tisch. instead of  $\tau\upsilon\pi\omicron\nu$  in its second occurrence on the authority of A only, some old Lat. and Syr. versions.

apparition (cf. Lk. xxiv. 37), He greets them with Εἰρήνῃ ὑμῖν, and to assure them of His identity ἔδειξεν . . . αὐτοῦ.—Ver. 20. His body, therefore, however changed in its substance, retained its characteristic marks. The fear of the disciples was replaced by joy, ἐχάρησαν . . . Κύριον. In this joy the promise of xvi. 22 is fulfilled (Weiss).—Ver. 21. When they recognised Him and composed themselves, He naturally repeated His greeting, εἰρήνῃ ὑμῖν, but now adds, καθὼς . . . ὑμᾶς. “As the Father hath sent me, so send I you.” In these words (cf. xvii. 18) He gives them their commission as His representatives. And in confirmation of it, (ver. 22) τοῦτο εἰπὼν . . . Ἅγιον. “He breathed on them,” ἐνεφύσησε; the same word is used in Gen. ii. 7 to describe the distinction between Adam’s “living soul,” breathed into him by God, and the life principle of the other animals. The breathing upon them was meant to convey the impression that His own very Spirit was imparted to them.—Ver. 23. The authorisation of the Apostles is completed in the words: ἂν τινων . . . κεκράτηνται. “Whosoever sins ye forgive, they are forgiven to them; whosoever ye retain, they are retained.” The meaning of κεκράτηνται is determined by the opposed ἀφένται [the better reading]. The announcement is unexpected. Yet if they were to represent Him, they must be empowered to continue a function which He constantly exercised and set in the forefront of His ministry. They must be able in His name to pronounce forgiveness, and to threaten doom. This indeed formed the main substance of their ministry, and it was by receiving His Spirit they were fitted for it. The burden was laid upon them of determining who should be forgiven, and who held by their sin. Cf. Acts iii. 26, v. 4.—Ver. 24. Θωμᾶς δὲ . . . Ἰησοῦς. Θωμᾶς [ $\theta\omicron\iota\mu\acute{\alpha}\varsigma$  or  $\theta\omicron\iota\mu\alpha$ a twin, from  $\theta\omicron\iota\mu\alpha$  to be double; of which Ἐπίδυμος from δύο is the Greek equivalent]. εἰς ἓκ τῶν δώδεκα “one of the twelve,” the familiar designation still used of the eleven, οὐκ ἦν . . . “was not with them when Jesus came,” why, we do not know.—Ver. 25. The rest accordingly, when first they met him, possibly the same evening, said, Ἐωράκαμεν τὸν Κύριον; which he heard with incredulity, not because he could mistrust them, but because he concluded they had been the victims of some hallucination. Nothing would satisfy him but the testimony of his own senses: Ἐὰν μὴ ἴδω . . . πιστεύσω. The test proposed by Thomas shows that he had witnessed the crucifixion and that the death and its circumstances had deeply impressed him. To him resurrection seemed a dream. But he still associated with those who believed in it.—Ver. 26. Καὶ μεθ’ ἡμέρας . . . αὐτῶν. μεθ’ ἡμέρας ὀκτώ πάλιν. Probably he had been with

- g ver. 19. ἔστη εἰς τὸ μέσον, καὶ εἶπεν, “Ἐιρήνη ὑμῖν.” 27. Εἶτα λέγει τῷ
h ver. 21. Θωμᾷ, “Φέρε τὸν δάκτυλόν σου ὧδε, καὶ ἴδε τὰς χεῖράς μου καὶ φέρει τὴν χεῖρά σου, καὶ βάλε εἰς τὴν πλευράν μου· καὶ μὴ γίνου
i Gal. iii. 9. ἄπιστος, ἀλλὰ ἰπιστός.” 28. Καὶ ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Θωμᾶς, καὶ εἶπεν Acts xvi. αὐτῷ, “Ὁ κύριός μου καὶ ὁ Θεός μου.” 29. Λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, 1, etc.; see Thayer. “Ὅτι ἐώρακάς με, Θωμᾷ, πεπίστευκας μακάριοι οἱ μὴ ἰδόντες, καὶ πιστεύσαντες.”
j xii. 37; 30. Ὅτι πολλὰ μὲν οὖν καὶ ἄλλα σημεῖα ἐποίησεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἑνώπιον xvi. 25. τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ,<sup>1</sup> ἃ οὐκ ἔστι γεγραμμένα ἐν τῷ βιβλίῳ τούτῳ.
k i. 34; ii. 31. ταῦτα δὲ γέγραπται, ἵνα πιστεῦσητε<sup>2</sup> ὅτι ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐστίν ὁ 23, vi. 69. Χριστὸς ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ ἵνα πιστεύοντες ζῶν ἔχητε ἑν τῷ l Acts iii. 6; iv. 10. ἰ ὄνόματι αὐτοῦ.
Cor. vi. 11.

<sup>1</sup> αὐτου deleted in  $\aleph B$ .<sup>2</sup> πιστευητε in  $\aleph^* B$ .

them every day during the interval, but as Bengel remarks, “interjectis diebus nulla fuerat apparitio”. On the first day of the second week the disciples were “again,” as on the previous Sunday, “within,” in the same convenient place of meeting, and now Thomas is with them. As on the previous occasion (ver. 19), the doors were shut and Jesus suddenly appeared among them and greeted them with the customary salutation.—Ver. 27. Εἶτα λέγει . . . πιστός. He does not need to be informed of Thomas' incredulity; although it is quite possible that, as Lücke supposes, the others had mentioned it to Him. Still, this is not in the text. Cf. Weiss, who also quotes Bengel's characteristic note: “Si Pharisaeus ita dixisset, Nisi videro, etc., nil impetrasset; sed discipulo pridem probato nil non datur”. Weiss supposes the hands were seen (ἴδε), the side only touched under the clothes. Some suppose that as the feet are not mentioned in this passage, they had not been nailed but only bound to the cross. See Lücke's interesting note. καὶ μὴ γίνου ἄπιστος ἀλλὰ πιστός, “Incredulitas aliquid habet de voluntario”.—Ver. 28. Grotius, following Tertullian, Ambrose, Cyril and others, is of opinion that Thomas availed himself of the offered test: surely it is psychologically more probable that the test he had insisted on as alone sufficient is now repudiated, and that he at once exclaims, Ὁ Κύριός μου καὶ ὁ θεός μου. His faith returns with a rebound and utters itself in a confession in which the gospel culminates. The words are not a mere exclamation of surprise. That is for-bidden by εἶπεν αὐτῷ; they mean “Thou art my Lord and my God”. The repeated pronoun lends emphasis. In Pliny's letter to Trajan (112 A.D.) he describes the Christians as singing hymns to Christ as God. Our Lord does not reject Thomas' confession; but (ver. 29) reminds him that there is a higher faith than that which springs from visual evidence: Ὅτι ἐώρακάς με . . . καὶ πιστεύσαντες. Jesus would have been better pleased with a faith which did not require the evidence of sense: a faith founded on the perception that God was in Christ, and therefore He could not die; a faith in His Messiahship which argued that He must live to carry on the work of His Kingdom. The saying is cited as another instance of the care with which the various origins and kinds of faith are distinguished in this gospel.

Vv. 30-31. First conclusion of the gospel—Ver. 30. πολλὰ μὲν οὖν . . . τούτῳ. That this was the original or intended conclusion of the gospel is shown by the use of the words “in this book,” which indicate that the writer was now looking back on it as a whole (Holtzmann). Perhaps τούτῳ is emphatic, contrasted with the Synoptic gospels in which so many other signs were recorded. The expression πολλὰ μὲν οὖν καὶ ἄλλα is necessarily of frequent occurrence and is illustrated by Kypke. Beza says these particles in the usage of John “proprie conclusionibus adhibentur”. “Many other signs therefore” (R.V.) is not an improvement on A.V. “And many other signs truly.” “Many other signs indeed did Jesus” is sufficient. Why ἐνώπιον τῶν μαθητῶν?

XXI. 1. ΜΕΤΑ ταῦτα * ἐφάνερωσεν ἑαυτὸν πάλιν ὁ Ἰησοῦς τοῖς α. i. 31. ii. 11. μαθηταῖς ἐπὶ τῆς θαλάσσης τῆς ὁ Βιβεριάδος. * ἐφάνερωσε δὲ οὕτως. b vi. 1. 2 ἦσαν ὁμοῦ Σίμων Πέτρος, καὶ Θωμᾶς ὁ λεγόμενος Δίδυμος, καὶ c xx. 4. reff. Ναθαναὴλ ὁ ἀπὸ Κανᾶ τῆς Γαλιλαίας, καὶ οἱ τοῦ Ζεβεδαίου, καὶ d xx. 24. ἄλλοι ἐκ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ δύο. 3. λέγει αὐτοῖς Σίμων Πέτρος, f Once only in LXX., “Υπάγω ἄλιεύειν.” Λέγουσιν αὐτῷ, “Ἐρχόμεθα καὶ ἡμεῖς σὺν Jer. xvi. σοί.” Ἐξῆλθον καὶ ἀνέβησαν εἰς τὸ πλοῖον εὐθύς,<sup>1</sup> καὶ ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ 16. νυκτὶ ἔπιασαν οὐδέν. 4. πρώτας δὲ ἦδη γενομένης<sup>2</sup> ἔστη ὁ Ἰησοῦς g ver. 10. Rev. xix. ἔστῃ. h xx. 19, 26. 20. ἔστῃ. h xx. 19, 26. 5. λέγει οὖν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Παιδιά, μὴ τι ἰ προσφάγιον ἔχετε;” j Here only. 1. 40.

<sup>1</sup> ευθως omitted in NBC*DL 1, 33.

<sup>2</sup> γενομένης is read by Tr. Ti. W. H. R. following ABC*EL; γενομ. in NC<sup>2</sup>DXΔ, it. vulg. “mane autem facta”.

Probably because they are viewed as the cause of faith. ταῦτα δὲ γέγραπται, “but these have been written,” these, viz., which have been included in this book, ἴνα . . . αὐτοῦ, with an object, and this object has determined their selection: “that ye may believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God”. The use of the 2nd pers. suggests that the writer had in view some special class. But his object was of universal significance. See the Introduction.

CHAPTER XXI.—Supplementary chapter in which Jesus again manifests Himself after the resurrection.

[There is no reason why this chapter should be ascribed to a different hand. The style is the same as that of the gospel, and although the gospel closed at the end of chap. xx., this supplementary chapter must have become an integral part of the gospel at a very early period. No trace exists of a gospel without it. It is by no means so certain that ver. 25 is Johannine. It seems an inflated version of xx. 30. The twenty-fourth verse is also rejected by several critics on the ground of οἶδαμεν. This may be valid as an objection; but it is in the manner of the Apostle to testify to his own truthfulness, xix. 35; and the use of the plural instead of the singular is not decisive.]

Ver. 1. Μετὰ ταῦτα, John's usual indefinite note of time, ἐφάνερωσεν ἑαυτὸν, cf. vii. 4, xiii. 4; Mark xvi. 12; πάλιν, over and above the manifestations in Jerusalem, at the Sea of Tiberias; see vi. 1.—Ver. 2. ἦσαν ὁμοῦ, seven of the disciples had kept together, Simon Peter, Thomas, Nathanael, further designated as ὁ ἀπὸ Κανᾶ τῆς Γαλιλαίας, not to remind us of the miracles wrought there

(Reynolds), nor “without any special design” (Meyer), but to emphasise the ὁμοῦ by showing that even though not belonging to the lake-side Nathanael remained with the rest. John indicates his own presence with his usual reserve, οἱ τοῦ Ζεβεδαίου.—Ver. 3. As the disciples stand together and see boat after boat put off, Simon Peter can stand it no longer but suddenly exclaims, “Υπάγω ἄλιεύειν,” “I am off to fish”. This is a relief to all and finds a ready response, “Ἐρχόμεθα καὶ ἡμεῖς σὺν σοί.” At once they embark, and as we watch that boat's crew putting off with their whole soul in their fishing, we see in how precarious a position the future of Christianity hung. They were only sure of one thing—that they must live. But ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ νυκτὶ ἔπιασαν οὐδέν, “during that night they took nothing”. Ἀλισκονται δὲ μάλιστα οἱ ἰχθύες πρὸ ἡλίου ανατολῆς καὶ μετὰ τὴν δύσιν—Aristotle, Hist. Animal., viii. 19, quoted by Lampe. [On ἔπιασαν, see vii. 30 and Rev. xix. 20.] —Ver. 4. πρώτας δὲ ἦδη γενομένης, “but early morning having now arrived,” i. e., when all hope of catching fish was past, ἔστη ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἰς [or ἐπὶ] τὸν αἰγιαλόν, “Jesus stood upon the beach”; for ἔστη, cf. xx. 19, 26. It seems to indicate the suddenness of the appearance. οὐ μέντοι . . . ἔστῃ, “the disciples, however, were not aware that it was Jesus”. —Ver. 5. λέγει οὖν . . . ἔχετε; The οὖν is not merely continuative, but indicates that what Jesus said was in some respect prompted by their ignorance of His identity. This is neglected by Lücke when he says that παιδία is not Johannine, and that τεκνία is the regular term used by Jesus in addressing the

- k Mk. i. 16. Ἀπεκρίθησαν αὐτῷ, “Οὐ.” 6. Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς, “<sup>k</sup> Βάλετε εἰς τὰ δεξιὰ μέρη τοῦ πλοίου τὸ δίκτυον, καὶ εὐρήσετε.” <sup>k</sup> Ἔβαλον
- l Hab. i. 15. οὖν, καὶ οὐκ ἔτι αὐτὸ <sup>l</sup> ἔλκυσαι <sup>m</sup> ἰσχυσαν <sup>l</sup> ἀπὸ τοῦ πλήθους τῶν
- m Mk. v. 4. ἰχθύων. 7. λέγει οὖν ὁ μαθητῆς ἐκεῖνος “ὃν ἠγάπα ὁ Ἰησοῦς τῷ
- n Mt. 23; xx. 2. Πέτρῳ, “Ὁ κύριός ἐστι.” Σίμων οὖν Πέτρος ἀκούσας ὅτι ὁ κύριός
- o 1 Sam. xviii. 4. ἐστι, τὸν ἑπενδύτην <sup>o</sup> διεξώσατο· ἦν γὰρ γυμνός· καὶ ἔβαλεν
- p Cr. xiii. 4. ἑαυτὸν εἰς τὴν θάλασσαν. 8. οἱ δὲ ἄλλοι μαθηταὶ τῷ πλοιαρίῳ
- q xi 18. ἦλθον· οὐ γὰρ ἦσαν μακρὰν ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς, ἀλλ’ ὡς <sup>q</sup> ἀπὸ πηχῶν disciples. Yes, when He openly addresses them; but here He uses the word any stranger might use, and the rendering “children” retained even in R.V. is wrong. It should be “lads”; παιδίον being the common term of address to men at work, see Aristophanes, Clouds, 137, Frogs, 33; Euthymius, ἔθος γὰρ τοὺς ἐργατικούς οὕτως ὀνομάζειν. Jesus appeared as an intending purchaser and cries, μή τι προσφάγιον ἔχετε; “Have you taken any fish?” (R.V.: “have ye anything to eat?”) misapprehends both the words and the situation). προσφάγιον, as its composition shows, means anything eaten as seasoning or “kitchen” to bread; being the Hellenistic word used instead of the Attic ἄψον or προσσίφημα. Athenaeus and Plutarch both tell us that fish was so commonly used in this way that προσφάγιον came to mean “fish”. ἔχετε has its quasi-technical sense, “have ye caught?” For this sense, see Aristophanes, Clouds, 705 (723, 731), where Socrates asks Strepsiades under the blanket, ἔχεις τι; on which the Scholiast remarks, χαριέντως τὸ ἔχεις τι, τῇ τῶν ἀγρευτῶν λέξει χρώμενος· τοῖς γὰρ ἀλιεύσιν ἡ ὀρνιθαγρευταῖς οὕτω φασίν, ἔχεις τι. So that the words of Jesus are: “Lads, have ye caught no fish?” ἀπεκρίθησαν αὐτῷ, “Οὐ”. “They answered Him, ‘No,’” without any Κύριε or Διδάσκαλε.—Ver. 6. Ὁ δὲ εἶπεν . . . καὶ εὐρήσετε. “Cast your net on the right side of the boat, and you will find.” They supposed the stranger had been making observations from the shore, had seen a shoal or some sign of fish, and unwilling to come in empty, ἔβαλον οὖν . . . ἰχθύων. “They cast therefore, and were no longer (as they had been before) able to draw it [ἔλκυσαι, not ἔλκυσαι, see Veitch’s Irrreg. Verbs, seems here to be used as we use ‘draw’ in connection with a net, meaning to draw over the side of the boat so as to secure the fish. Contrast σύροντες in ver. 8] for the multitude of fishes”; ἀπὸ often means “on account of” in Dionysius Hal., Plutarch, and even in Thucydides and Sophocles as shown by Kypke.—Ver. 7. This sudden change of fortune John at once traced to its only possible source, Ὁ Κύριός ἐστι. “Vita quieta citius observat res divinas quam activa.” Bengel. Σίμων οὖν . . . θάλασσαν. The different temperaments of the two Apostles as here exhibited have constantly been remarked upon; as by Euthymius, “John had the keener insight; Peter the greater ardour”. Peter τὸν ἐπενδύτην διεξώσατο. Some writers identify the ἐπενδύτης with the inner garment or χίτων, others suppose it was the outer garment or ἱμάτιον. And the reason assigned, ἦν γὰρ γυμνός, they say, is that he had only the χίτων. That one who was thus half-dressed might be called γυμνός is well known (see Aristoph., Clouds, 480); but it was not the outer garment round which the belt was girt, but the inner. And besides, Peter must often have appeared before Jesus in their boat expeditions without his upper garment. And to put on his Tallith when about to plunge into the sea was out of the question. He was rowing, then, with as little on as possible, probably only a subligaculum or loin-cloth, and now picks up his ἐπενδύτης, a garment worn by fishers (Theophylact), and girds it on, and casts himself into the sea.—Ver. 8. The rest came in the little boat, οὐ γὰρ ἦσαν . . . ἰχθύων. Bengel correctly explains the γὰρ, “Celeriter hi quoque venire poterant”. They were not far from the land, ἀλλ’ ὡς ἀπὸ πηχῶν διακοσίων, “about one hundred yards”. πηχῶν, says Phrynichus, is δενῶς ἀνάτικον; we must use the form πηχέων. Observe the unconscious exactness of the eye-witness. For the Hellenistic construction with ἀπό, cf. xi. 18. The others came σύροντες . . . ἰχθύων, “hauling the net of the fishes,” or “netful of the fishes”; genitive of contents, like δέπας οἴνου, a cup of wine. It is needless, with Lücke, to complete the construction with μεστόν, cf. ver. 11.—Ver. 9. Ὡς οὖν . . . ἄρτον. “When, then, they got out upon the land, they see a fire (or heap) of coals laid and fish laid thereon, and bread”; or, possibly, “a fish” and “a loaf,” but see ver. 13. For ἀνθρακία, see xviii. 18. The disciples were evidently surprised at this preparation.—Ver. 10. But miracle is not gratuitously wrought; indeed, Weiss maintains there is neither miracle nor the appearance of one in this preparation. Accordingly Jesus says, Ἐνέγκατε . . . νῦν. And in compliance ἀνέβη . . . δίκτυον. “Simon Peter went on board and drew the net on shore full of large fishes, 153, and though there were so many the net was not torn.” Mysteries have been found in this number. In Hebrew characters Simon Iona is equivalent to 118 + 35, i.e., 153. Some of the Fathers understood that 100 meant the Gentiles, 50 the Jews, 3 the Trinity. Jerome cites the authority of naturalists to prove that there were exactly 153 species of fish, and he concludes that the universality of the Gospel take was thus indicated. Calvin, with his usual robust sense, says: “quantum ad piscium numerum spectat, non est sublimē aliquid in eo quaerendum mysterium”. Peter never landed a haul of fish without counting them, and John, fisherman as he was, could never forget the number of his largest takes. The number is given, because it was large, and because they were all surprised that the net stood the strain. The only significance our Lord recognises in the fish is that they were food for hungry men.—Ver. 12. λέγει . . . ἀριστήσατε, Jesus takes the place of host and says, “Come, breakfast,” make your morning meal. οὐδεὶς . . . Κύριός ἐστιν, not one of the disciples ventured to interrogate Him; ἐξετάσαι is “to examine by questioning”. Each man felt convinced it was the Lord, and a new reverence prevented them from questioning Him.—Ver. 13. When they had gathered round the fire, ἔρχεται . . . ὁμοίως. “Jesus approaches and takes the bread and gives to them, and the fish” (used here collectively) “in like manner.” Evidently there was something solemn and significant in His manner, indicating that they were to consider Him as the Person who supplied all their wants. If they were to be free from care as His Apostles, they must trust Him to make provision for them, as He had this morning done.—Ver. 14. A note is added, perhaps indicating no more than John’s orderliness of mind, explaining that this was the third manifestation given by Jesus to His disciples after rising from the dead. For the form of expression, τοῦτο ἦδη τρίτον, see 2 Cor. xiii. 1.

<sup>l</sup> ἰσχυον in  $\aleph$ BCDL.

διακοσίων, ἵσύροντες τὸ δίκτυον τῶν ἰχθύων. 9. Ὡς οὖν ἀπέβησαν <sup>2 Sam. xvii. 13.</sup> εἰς τὴν γῆν, βλέπουσιν ἄνθρακιὰν ἠκειμένην καὶ ὀψάριον ἐπικείμενον, <sup>Acts viii 3.</sup> καὶ ἄρτον. 10. λέγει αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Ἐνέγκατε ἀπὸ τῶν <sup>s xviii. 18.</sup> ὀψαρίων ὧν ἑπιάσατε νῦν.” 11. Ἀνέβη Σίμων Πέτρος, καὶ ἔϊλκυσε <sup>t xix. 28.</sup> τὸ δίκτυον ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, <sup>u ver. 3.</sup> <sup>v ver. 6.</sup> μεστὸν ἰχθύων μεγάλων ἑκατὸν πεντηκονταγριῶν· καὶ τοσοῦτων ὄντων, οὐκ ἔσχίσθη τὸ δίκτυον. <sup>w xix. 24.</sup>

12. Λέγει αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς, Δεῦτε ἀριστήσατε. οὐδεὶς δὲ ἐτόλμα τῶν μαθητῶν ἐξετάσαι αὐτὸν, “Σὺ τίς εἶ;” εἰδότες ὅτι ὁ κύριός <sup>x i. 40.</sup> ἔστιν. 13. ἔρχεται οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ λαμβάνει τὸν ἄρτον καὶ <sup>y 2 Cor. xii. 14; xiii. 1.</sup> δίδωσιν αὐτοῖς, καὶ τὸ ὀψάριον ὁμοίως. 14. τοῦτο ἦδη <sup>3.</sup> τρίτον <sup>4.</sup> ἐφανέρωθι ὁ Ἰησοῦς τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ, ἐγερθεὶς ἐκ νεκρῶν.

<sup>1</sup> εἰς τὴν γῆν in ABCL.

Vv. 15-18. Jesus evokes from Peter a confession of love, and commissions him as shepherd of His sheep.—Ver. 15. Ὅτε οὖν ἤρισθησαν, “when, then, they had broken their fast,” a note of time essential to the conversation following. Peter had manifested the most ardent affection, by abandoning on the instant the net of fish for which he had been toiling all night, and by springing into the sea to greet his Lord. But was not that a mere impulsive demonstration,

15. Ὅτε οὖν ἠρίστησαν, λέγει τῷ Σίμωνι Πέτρῳ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, εἰ. 42. “Σίμων Ἰωῶνᾶ,<sup>1</sup> ἀγαπᾷς με πλείον τούτων;” λέγει αὐτῷ, “Ναὶ
 α x. 1-5. κύριε· σὺ οἶδας ὅτι φιλῶ σε.” λέγει αὐτῷ, “Βόσκει τὰ ἀρνία Rev. v. 6. μου.” 16. λέγει αὐτῷ πάλιν δεύτερον, “Σίμων Ἰωῶνᾶ, ἀγαπᾷς με;”
 λέγει αὐτῷ, “Ναὶ κύριε· σὺ οἶδας ὅτι φιλῶ σε.” λέγει αὐτῷ, b Is. xl. 11. Song i. 8. “Ἰοίμαινε τὰ πρόβατά μου.” 17. λέγει αὐτῷ τό τρίτον, “Σίμων

<sup>1</sup> Better Ἰωανου with  $\aleph$ BC\*DL. So in 16, 17.

<sup>2</sup> προβατια in BC; προβατα in  $\aleph$ AD. Some have thought there was a climax, αρνια, προβατια, προβατα. “Pasce agniculos meos, pasce agnos meos, pasce oviculas meas.”

“the wholesome madness of an hour”? Therefore He lets Peter settle down, He lets him breakfast and then takes him at the coolest hour of the day, and, at last breaking silence, says, Σίμων Ἰωῶνᾶ [better, Ἰωῶνᾶ] ἀγαπᾷς με πλείον [better, πλείον] τούτων; “Simon, son of John, lovest thou me more than these?” So far as grammar goes, this may either mean “Lovest thou me more than the other disciples love me?” or “Lovest thou me more than this boat and net and your old life?” It may either refer to Peter’s saying, “Though all should forsake Thee, yet will not I,” or to his sudden abandonment of the boat and fishing gear. If the former were intended, the second personal pronoun would almost necessarily be expressed; but, as the words stand, the contrast is not between “you” and “these,” but between “me” and “these”. Besides, would the characteristic tact and delicacy of Jesus have allowed Him to put a question involving a comparison of Peter with his fellow-disciples? The latter interpretation, although branded by Lücke as “eine geistlose lächerliche Frage,” commends itself. Difference of opinion also exists about the use of ἀγαπᾷς and φιλῶ, most interpreters believing that by the former a love based on esteem or judgment is indicated, by the latter the affection of the heart. The Vulgate distinguishes by using “diligis” and “amo”. Trench (Synonymes, 38) uses this distinction for the interpretation of this passage, and maintains that Peter in his reply intentionally changes the colder ἀγαπᾷς into the warmer φιλῶ. It is very doubtful whether this is justifiable. The two words are used interchangeably to express the love of Jesus for John, see xiii. 23, and xx. 2; also for His love for Lazarus, xi. 3, 5, 36. And that the distinction cannot be maintained at any rate in this conversation is obvious from ver. 17; for if the words differed in meaning, it could not be said that “Peter was grieved because Jesus a third time said, φιλεῖς με”; because Jesus had not used these words three times. The words seem interchanged for euphony, as in Aelian, Var. Hist., ix. 1, where Hiero is said to have lived with his three brothers, πάντῳ σφόδρα ἀγαπήσας αὐτοὺς καὶ ὑπ’ αὐτῶν φιληθεῖς ἐν τῷ μέρει. In Peter’s answer there is no sense of any discrepancy between the kind of love demanded and the love felt. It comes with a ναί, Κύριε. Why need He ask? σὺ οἶδας. . . . In this appeal to Christ’s own knowledge there is probably, as Weiss suggests, a consciousness of his own liability to be deceived, as shown in his recent experience.—Ver. 16. To this confession, the Lord responds, Βόσκει τὰ ἀρνία μου, “Feed my lambs,” showing that Jesus could again trust him and could leave in his hands those whom He loved. “Lambs” is used instead of “sheep” to bring out more strongly the appeal to care, and the consequent complete confidence shown in Peter. λέγει . . . μου. The second inquiry is intended to drive Peter back from mere customary or lip-profession to the deep-lying affections of his spirit. But now no comparison is introduced into the question, which might be paraphrased: “Are you sure that love and nothing but love is the bond between you and me?” This test Peter stands. He replies as before; and again is entrusted with the work in which his Lord is chiefly interested, Ποίμαινε τὰ πρόβατά μου. No different function is intended by ποίμαινε: it repeats in another form the commission already given.—Ver. 17. But to him who had uttered a threefold denial, opportunity is given of a threefold confession, although Peter at first resented the Ἰωᾶ, φιλεῖς με ;” Ἐλυπήθη ὁ Πέτρος, ὅτι εἶπεν αὐτῷ ὁ τῷ τρίτον, c ver. 14.

 “φιλεῖς με ;” καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, “Κύριε, σὺ πάντα οἶδας· σὺ γινώσκεις ὅτι φιλῶ σε.” Λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Βόσκει τὰ πρόβατα
 μου. 18. Ἄμην ἄμην λέγω σοι, ὅτε ἦς νεώτερος, <sup>d</sup> ἐξώνυμες σεαυτὸν, d ver. 7.
 καὶ περιεπάτεις ὅπου ἤθελες· ὅταν δὲ γηράσῃς, <sup>e</sup> ἐκτενεῖς τὰς χεῖράς e Ecclus.
 σου, καὶ ἄλλος σε ζώσει, καὶ οἶσει ὅπου οὐ θέλεις.” 19. Τοῦτο δὲ εἶπε, σημαίνων ποῖω θανάτῳ δοξάσει τὸν Θεόν. καὶ τοῦτο εἰπὼν λέγει αὐτῷ, “Ἀκολουθεῖ μοι.” 20. Ἐπιστραφεῖς δὲ <sup>1</sup> ὁ Πέτρος βλέπει τὸν μαθητὴν, ὃν ἠγάπα ὁ Ἰησοῦς, ἀκολουθοῦντα, ὃς καὶ ἀνέπεσεν ἐν τῷ δεῖπνῳ ἐπὶ τὸ στήθος αὐτοῦ καὶ εἶπε, “Κύριε, τις f xiii. 12 reff.
 ἐστὶν ὁ παραδιδούς σε ;” 21. Τοῦτον ἰδὼν ὁ Πέτρος λέγει τῷ Ἰησοῦ, g 1 Tim. iv.
 “Κύριε, οὗτος δὲ τί ;” 22. Λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, “Ἐὰν αὐτὸν θέλω μένειν ἕως ἔρχομαι, <sup>h</sup> τί <sup>h</sup> πρὸς σε ; σὺ ἀκολουθεῖ μοι.” <sup>h</sup> Mt. xxvii.
 4.

<sup>1</sup> δε omitted in ABC 33 ; inserted in NDX.

reiterated inquiry : Ἐλυπήθη . . . He was grieved because doubt was implied, and he knew he had given cause for doubt. His reply is therefore more earnest than before, Κύριε . . . φιλῶ σε. He is so conscious of deep and abiding love that he can appeal to the Lord's omniscience. The σὺ πάντα οἶδας [or πάντα σὺ οἶδας with recent editors] reflects a strong light on the belief which had sprung up in the disciples from their observation of our Lord. And again he is commissioned, or commanded to manifest his love in the feeding of Christ's sheep. The one qualification for this is love to Christ. It is not for want of time no other questions are asked. There was time to put this one question three times over ; and it was put because love is the one essential for the ministry to which Peter and the rest are called.—Ver. 18. To this command our Lord unexpectedly adds a reflection and warning emphasised by the usual ἄμην ἄμην λέγω σοι. It had been with a touch of pity Jesus had seen the impulsive, self-willed Peter gird his coat round him and plunge into the sea. It suggested to Him the severe trials by which this love must be tested, and what it would bring him to : ὅτε ἦς νεώτερος, “when thou wert younger” (the comparative used not in relation to the present, but to the γηράσεως following) “thou girdedst thyself and walkedst whither thou wouldest,” i.e., your own will was your law, and you felt power to carry it out. The “girding,” though suggested by the scene, ver. 7, symbolises all vigorous preparation for arduous work. ὅταν δὲ γηράσεως . . . θέλεις. The interpretation of these words must be governed by the succeeding clause, which informs us that by them Jesus hinted at the nature of Peter's death. But this does not prevent us from finding in them, primarily, an intimation of the helplessness of age, and its passiveness in the hands of others, in contrast to the self-regulating activity and confidence of youth. The language is dictated by the contrasted clause, and to find in each particular a detail of crucifixion, is to force a meaning into the words. ἐκτενεῖς τὰς χεῖρας σου is not the stretching out of the hands on the cross, but the helpless lifting up of the old man's hands to let another gird him. δοξάσει τὸν θεόν. “Magnificus martyrii titulus.” Grotius. “Die conventionelle Sprache der Märtyrerkirche klingt an in δοξ. τὸν θεόν : weil der Zeugentod zu Ehren Gottes erlitten wird.” Holtzmann. The expression has its root in xii. 23, 28. καὶ τοῦτο . . . μοι. It is very tempting to refer this to xiii. 36, ἀκολουθήσεις δὲ ἕστερον, and probably there is a latent reference to this, but in the first instance it is a summons to Peter to accompany Jesus as He retires from the rest. This is clear from what follows.—Ver. 20. Ἐπιστραφεῖς . . . σε. Peter had already followed Jesus some distance, but hearing steps behind him he turns and sees John following. The elaborate description of John in this verse is, perhaps almost unconsciously, introduced to justify his following without invitation. On the word ἀνέπεσεν, see Origen, in Joann., ii. 191 (Brooke's edition).—Ver. 21. Peter, however, seeks an explanation, Κύριε

- i Dan. ii. 13. 23. Ἐξῆλθεν οὖν ὁ λόγος οὗτος εἰς τοὺς ἰδελφούς, “Ὅτι ὁ μαθητὴς Mt. ix. 20. ἐκεῖνος οὐκ ἀποθνήσκει.” καὶ οὐκ εἶπεν αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς, ὅτι οὐκ j Here only in Gosp. freq. in Ep. and Acts. ἀποθνήσκει· ἀλλ’, “Ἐὰν αὐτὸν θέλω μένειν ἕως ἔρχομαι, τί πρὸς k xx. 30. σε;”
24. ΟΥΤΟΣ ἐστὶν ὁ μαθητὴς ὁ μαρτυρῶν περὶ τούτων, καὶ γράψας
l i Cor. xiv. ταῦτα· καὶ οἶδαμεν ὅτι ἀληθὴς ἐστὶν ἡ μαρτυρία αὐτοῦ. 25. ἐστὶ
xxi. 19. δὲ καὶ <sup>k</sup> ἄλλα πολλὰ ὅσα ἐποίησεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, ἅτινα ἐὰν γράφηται
Eph. v. 33. ἢ καθ’ ἓν, οὐδὲ αὐτὸν οἶμαι τὸν κόσμον <sup>m</sup> χωρῆσαι τὰ γραφόμενα
m ii. 6. Gen. xiii. <sup>1</sup> καθ’ ἓν, οὐδὲ αὐτὸν οἶμαι τὸν κόσμον <sup>m</sup> χωρῆσαι τὰ γραφόμενα
6. <sup>2</sup> Chron. iv. βιβλία. Ἀμήν.<sup>1</sup>
5.

<sup>1</sup> Tisch. omits this verse with  $\aleph^*$ . For  $\sigma\sigma\alpha$  of AC<sup>2</sup>D  $\alpha$  is read in  $\aleph$ BC\* $\chi$ . For  $\chi\omega\rho\eta\sigma\alpha\iota$  of AC<sup>2</sup>D  $\chi\omega\rho\eta\sigma\epsilon\iota\upsilon$  is found in  $\aleph$ BC\*.  $\text{Ἀμην}$  is omitted in  $\aleph$ ABCD  $\tau$ , 33

. . . τί; “Lord, and this man, what of him?”—Ver. 22. To which Jesus replies with a shade of rebuke, Ἐὰν . . . μοι. Peter, in seeking even to know the future of another disciple, was stepping beyond his province, τί πρὸς σε; σὺ ἀκολουθεῖ μοι. Your business is to follow me, not to intermeddle with others. Cf. A Kempis’ description of the man who “neglects his duty, musing on all that other men are bound to do”. De Imit. Christi, ii. 3. Over-anxiety about any part of Christ’s Church is to forget that there is a chief Shepherd who arranges for all. This part of the conversation might not have been recorded, but for a misunderstanding which arose out of it.—Ver. 23. Ἐξῆλθεν . . . πρὸς σε; “There went forth this saying among the brethren, that that disciple should not die”. John himself, however, has no such belief, because he remembers with exactness the hypothetical form of the Lord’s words, Ἐὰν αὐτὸν θέλω μένειν . . . Another instance of the precision with which John recalled some, at least, of the words of Jesus.

In ver. 24, the writer of the gospel is identified with the disciple whom Jesus loved, and a certificate of his truth is added. The whole verse has a strong resemblance to xix. 35, and it seems impossible to say with certainty whether they were or were not written by the evangelist himself. The οἶδαμεν might seem to imply that several united in this certificate. But who in John’s old age were there, who could so certify the truth of the gospel? They could have no personal, direct knowledge of the facts; and could merely affirm the habitual truthfulness of John. Cf. too the οἶμαι of ver. 25 where a return to the singular is made; but this may be because in the former clause the writer speaks in the name of several others, while in the latter he speaks in his own name. Who these others were, disciples, Ephesian presbyters, friends, Apostles, it is vain to conjecture. τούτων and ταῦτα refer to the whole gospel, including chap. xxi. Besides the things narrated ἐστὶ δὲ . . . Ἀμήν. The verse re-affirms the statement of xx. 30, adding a hyperbolic estimate of the space required to recount all that Jesus did, if each detail were separately told, ἐὰν γράφηται καθ’ ἓν.

AUG 17 2005

